Hostage debate may begin soon

By The Associated Press

The speaker of the Iranian Parliament says debate on the U.S. hostages will begin Tuesday, the 318th day in captivity for the 52 Americans. But two influential Iranian religious leaders said today the regime has not dropped its demand for an apology from the U.S. government.

Iran's official Pars news agency said Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani also received a letter from the hostages' families saying they are "ready to do what you and your colleagues order."

It said the families said they wanted to meet with him "to solve our problem in a human atmosphere. We wish to be a bridge that the hostages cross to reach their homes... we hope to find a solution to put an end to the current separation of the Iranian and American nations."

Pars said the letter was delivered by the Algerian ambassador in Tehran. It did not further identify the senders, and there was no immediate comment from anyone representing the hostages' relatives in the United States.

Tehran Radio said Rafsanjani told the Swiss charge d'affaires in Tehran Sunday:

"A decision was made in the Majlis (Parliament) today regarding a reply to the letter by the U.S. Congress, and substantial discussion on the hostages will begin on Tuesday and the Majlis will make a decision."

"Since the U.S. Congress letter was read out in the Majlis and was also covered by the press, we expect the U.S. government to publish the text of the Majlis letter of reply for the American public. If it fails to do this, it will have shown its lack of good will, and this will have an adverse effect on our talks."

The "U.S. Congress letter" was sent the Majlis in July by 187 congressmen who urged the release of the Americans taken hostage last Nov. 4 when young Islamic militants seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. The broadcast said the Swiss charge d'affaires delivered a "follow-up letter" from some of the U.S. congressmen on Sunday.

The Majlis Foreign Affairs Committee submitted a draft of a reply to the U.S. letter for the second time on Sunday. Its language was as vituperative as any used against the United States, saying:

"The world-devouring America, as the great Satan and a symbol of world tyranny, is the biggest enemy of our independence and greatness and a foe to the world's deprived peoples."

"Seizure of the spy-nest (the U.S. Embassy), that was in fact the main center for running Iran and a base for U.S. invasion in the region, should be considered in such a context."

Tehran Radio said the Majlis asked the Foreign Affairs Committee to revise the draft to insert some of the opinions voiced by the deputies.

On Friday, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the leader of the Iranian revolution, listed four conditions for the release of the hostages. They did not include the previous demand for an apology from the United States, a condition the Carter administration rejected, and U.S. observers interpreted this as a hopeful sign.

But Hojatoleslam Mousavi Khomeini, a member of the Majlis and the spiritual leader of the militants holding the hostages, told the English-language newspaper Tehran Times that a U.S. apology is a basic condition for the release of the Americans. He said Khomeini "listed some of the conditions for the release of the hostages but not all of them."

Iran threatens OPEC joint hike

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Iran tangled with Saudi Arabia today and threatened to block OPEC's first joint plan for raising oil prices and controlling production. The 13-nation cartel opened debate on the long-term proposal at its 20th anniversary meeting here.

OPEC General-Secretary Rene Ortiz confirmed that oil pricing had been discussed in the first session.

Iran's chief delegate, Ali Akbar Moinefar, threatened to block action on the plan unless the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries conference also discussed production.

man. Iraq was originally scheduled to preside over the meeting and also hold the rotating presidency until an OPEC summit in Baghdad starting Nov. 4.

Algerian Foreign Minister Mohammed S. Benyahia was named chairman and Iraqi Oil Minister Tayah Abdul Karim was named alternate chairman. The OPEC secretary-general said Iraq will preside at the Baghdad conference as originally planned.

Iran blocked Iraq from chairing the conference, apparently because of the two countries' recent border fighting, conference sources said. Iran threatened to demand a reversal of the agenda if Iraq took the chair, forcing a discussion of current oil prices and production disputes before taking up the long-term strategy — the official subject of the meeting.

Algeria, which has held the presidency since the June meeting in Algiers, was chosen to serve as chair-

"If we do not have a short-term decision on production, then it's a joke to have a long-term strategy," said Iran's chief delegate. He called for a Saudi production cut to drain off the current world oil glut and keep prices up.

"That's not right," Saudi Oil Minister Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, a proponent of the long-term plan, told reporters when asked about Moinefar's contention. He said Saudi Arabia still had made no decision about its fourth-quarter production.

Presidential hopefuls zero in on Texas voters

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Courting the pivotal Mexican-American vote in a state considered crucial to both candidates, President Carter opens a swing through Texas today with a town meeting in Corpus Christi, one day before GOP opponent Ronald Reagan kicks off a trip through South Texas.

Both candidates will be joined by political heavyweights as they attempt to beef up support and campaign coffers during their sojourns.

Carter plans to zip through Corpus, then fly to Houston for a party fundraising luncheon, then travel to Roswell, Ga.

After a late-night arrival in San Antonio for meetings with local party workers tonight, Reagan will tour Harlingen and Corpus Christi, then attend a fund-raising dinner in Houston projected to fatten his campaign by $2 million.

Klan leader is arrested

SCOTLAND, Conn. (AP) — Twelve people were arrested, including an Imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, in two days of rallies and cross-burnings that marked the Klan's public re-emergence in Connecticut after a 70-year absence.

At least eight people were injured in the weekend Klan activity. Hundreds of troopers formed human circles each night around Klan members and onlookers gathered for speeches and cross-burnings.

At the Saturday rally, 26-year-old Gary Piscottano of New Britain, named Connecticut grand dragon, told the crowd: "Connecticut has always been a liberal state and we're trying real hard to change that."

The area was under tight security after scattered violence Saturday. State police searched vehicles and individuals under a Superior Court order banning the carrying of firearms in the town of Scotland on Saturday and Sunday.

Bill Wilkinson, 37, the imperial wizard of the Louisiana-based Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, was appearing in Superior Court today to face a charge of carrying a dangerous weapon in a motor vehicle.

Today's town meeting marks the first presidential visit to this coastal resort city since 1943.

After the meeting here, Carter will jet to Houston for a $5,000-a-plate fund-raiser at the Hyatt Regency Hotel downtown. Proceeds from the luncheon will go to the Democratic National Committee.

After the luncheon, Carter plans to meet with Texas Democrats for about 20 minutes in the hotel's Imperial Ballroom, then board Air Force One and head to Georgia for a school dedication and fundraisers.

Part two: He never lived down Senate 'landslide'

By Merle Miller

Of all the controversies that swirled around Lyndon Baines Johnson during his long public life, none was as fogged in confusion and suspicion as his successful race for the U.S. Senate in 1948.

It left him a nickname, "Landslide Lyndon," that he never lived down. The tangled roots of the "landslide" go back to 1947, when Congressman Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex.) began showing signs that he was ready and eager to move on to higher things.

That readiness was nothing new. He always had seemed to move faster, more visibly, more vocally, since his youngest days at the farmhouse by the Pedernales in the Texas hill country where he was born, as his mother Rebekah recorded later, at the auspicious hour of daybreak on August 27, 1908. There is no doubt that the pivot of Rebekah's life was her eldest child.

Rebekah (much later, on hearing rumors that her son might become president): "I'm not surprised. 'course it's a mother talking, but from the first time I looked into his eyes, none of his accomplishments surprised me."

LYNDON'S FIRST RUN FOR public office came in 1937 after Rep. James Buchanan, age 70, died of a heart attack in Washington.

Mary Rather, a longtime friend: "The very moment that Congressman Buchanan died, Senator Alvin Wirtz (an early Johnson mentor) was saying, 'Get Lyndon for me.' And he immediately went into a huddle with him and said, 'You must run for this office.'"

The 28-year-old Johnson quit his job as state director of the National Youth Administration and entered active, competitive politics.

His election victory made the front page of the New York Times, which noted that he had "shouted his advocacy of President Roosevelt's (supreme) Court reorganization all over the Tenth Texas District."

By happy coincidence, Roosevelt was about to begin a fishing trip in the Gulf of Mexico. Johnson was invited to meet him in Galveston, where the president expressed his gratitude and gave his blessing to the young Lochinvar. He also gave him the phone number of Thomas G. (Tommy the Cork) Corcoran, his friend and advisor and one of the most powerful men in Washington, telling Lyndon that Tommy would take care of him once he got to Washington.

Corcoran: "When Roosevelt got back from that trip to Texas, he told me to take care of this boy and out him on the Naval Affairs Committee. There were others who'd been around for a while and were in line, but naturally Lyndon got the appointment."

LATE IN LIFE LYNDON used to say that he couldn't decide whether he preferred Washington in the days when he was a freshman congressman when anything seemed possible and often was, or those later years when he was the most powerful man in town. Both were intoxicating.

Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas died on April 4, 1941; he was 65 years old. On April 19 Gov. Wilbert L. (Pappy) O'Daniel announced that a special election would be held on June 23 to choose a successor. Pappy assured Lyndon that he was not even considering running for the seat; Lyndon believed him. Lyndon went to the White House and showed President Roosevelt the draft of a statement he had written announcing his own candidacy for the Senate. The president suggested that Lyndon read it on the White House steps, and a few minutes later, he did.

Eventually 29 candidates entered the race, including Pappy O'Daniel — who won. It was the first and only election Lyndon B. Johnson ever lost.

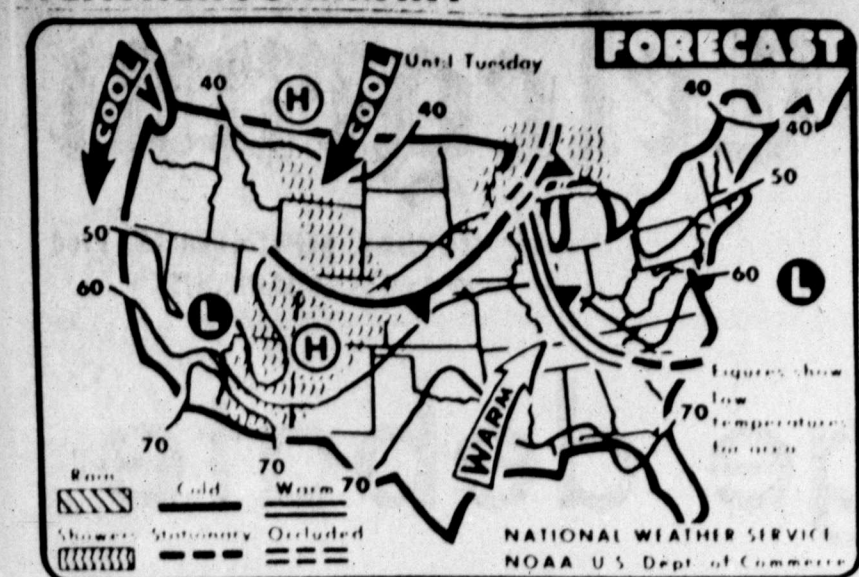

Johnson stayed in the House of Representatives, but by 1947 he was ready to try for the Senate again.

LYNDON ANNOUNCED HIS candidacy on May 12 in the penthouse of the Driskill Hotel in Austin. He made his first speech 10 days later before a small crowd that included a young man who was to become attorney gen-

Claim recession's over produces no loud cheers

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The deep but brief recession ended in July, said the Commerce Department's chief economist, but no cheering could be heard from those who have had an involuntary summer-long vacation.

Nor were borrowers or investors or homemakers particularly excited about the news because, as their own economic indicators told them, the cleanup hadn't even begun and here we are with everything rising again.

The things we had hoped would die with the recession, mainly interest rates and high prices, are rising again. What we had wanted to flourish, such as productivity, waned instead. The problems remain.

Evidence of this is the apparent abandonment of congressional and presidential promises of fiscal discipline, indications of continued high unemployment, and the difficulty of companies to raise capital.

The recovery is likely to go unnoticed by millions of Americans for the obvious reason that it won't mean a nickel of improvement in their finances, it won't help them get a job, it won't help buy a house.

And if they dwell on the long-term ramifications of the economic mess it won't improve their confidence either, because very little has been done to avert the next fully predictable inflation-recession cycle.

Even as they pronounce the end of a recession, most economists know they are playing games. They concede it privately, and some do so publicly, that the end of one recession is the base for another.

They know the problems aren't being faced. They recognize that sound economics has been prostituted by politics. They know the futility of grasping after the straws of monthly statistical improvements.

Some speak out about the continued inflation, about the government's deficit spending that crowds the private sector out of the capital markets, about the deteriorated condition of plant and equipment.

They warn about the attitude that people, whether through their local, state or federal governments or by themselves, can continue to consume while failing to replenish the reservoirs that feed consumption.

Those that speak out, however, seem not to have much of an audience, and one of the reasons they don't is that their message seems tired and repetitious. The long-term worriers are easily drowned out by the short-term practitioners with their quick forecasts and monthly statistics.

But the worry warts do have some experience in practical economics. One of them stated earlier this year that "what is happening to the United States in 1980 is similar to what happened to New York City in 1975, namely a slide towards bankruptcy."

Felix Rohatyn has a base from which to view the U.S. economy. He is a senior partner in the investment banking firm of Lazard Freres and Co. More important, he has been in charge of the Municipal Assistance Corp., which has the formidable job of trying to restore New York City.

Another worry wart is Roger Starr, who thinks the federal government and New York's financial woes have similarities. He knows the subject. He headed the N.Y. City Housing and Development Administration during the years when the city began its ascent into financial chaos.

Neither has been heard cheering the announcement that the statistical recession has ended, and they can't be blamed for it. Why cheer when the recession came and went and didn't solve any long-range problems?

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Teen-age pregnancy widespread problem

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have read a number of editorials and heard a number of lectures on the dangers of teen-age pregnancy. Is the problem as widespread as the news media would have us believe? — Albert

Dear Albert: The problem is not only widespread; it carries a significant risk for both the teen-age mother and her child. According to the Department of Health and Human Services (formerly Health, Education and Welfare), one-fourth of teen-age girls in the United States have had at least one pregnancy by the time they are 19 years of age. Of the one million girls under 19 who become pregnant each year, about 300,000 are less than 15 years old. Two-thirds of these teen-age girls are not married.

Aside from the social consequences of teen-age pregnancies — for example, disruption of their education and the need to depend on public welfare — these young mothers are at greater risk of having low-birth-weight infants. This, in turn, increases the possibility of developmental problems in the children and, in extreme cases, even death.

It is estimated that birth control methods prevent an estimated 750,000 pregnancies each year. If all sexually active young people who did not want to become pregnant were to use an effective form of contraceptive, premarital pregnancies would drop by over 300,000 a year.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I read with amazement about the different kinds of transplants that are possible these days. It almost seems that a bionic man or woman really is a possibility. But while I've heard of eye banks that provide corneas so that people can see, I don't recall reading about similar operations that will help deaf people hear. Is anything being done in this regard? — Phyllis

Dear Phyllis: An implant consisting of eight electrodes that restored hearing to a previously deaf person has been reported by Dr. Robin P. Michelson, clinical professor of otolaryngology at the University of California, San Francisco. Other implants designed by physicians had been mostly of a single-electrode type.

Although Dr. Michelson's results

look promising, he notes that he has tried the procedure in only one patient, and cautions that it is too soon to draw general conclusions.

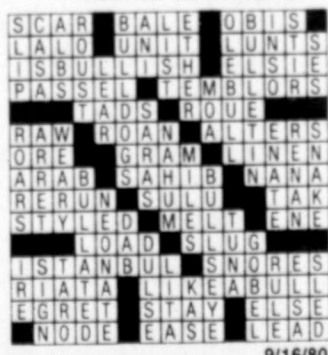

Dear Dr. Solomon: I read your response to a reader regarding recovery of speech and language abilities following a stroke. You neglected to mention referral to a speech pathologist for evaluation and possible treatment.

A speech pathologist is a person with graduate training in the areas of speech and language. Many patients suffering from speech problems resulting from stroke can be helped by a speech pathologist.

Coup stems political bloodbath

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — The political bloodbath between left-wing and right-wing extremists that took as many as 25 lives a day has been stemmed, at least temporarily, by the coup led by Turkey's military chief three days ago.

Terrorist bullets reportedly have taken only one life since the armed forces seized power on Friday. Informed sources said an army captain died in a gun battle late Saturday while leading his troops against suspected leftists in the south-central city of Adana. Two leftists were wounded and an unspecified number captured, the sources said.

Troops fanned out Sunday in house-to-house searches for terrorists in Ankara and suburban Istanbul and witnesses reported a number of suspects rounded up. It was not known how many persons were detained, but the military government reported the arrest of 182 terrorists in the eastern province of Elazig.

Also on Sunday, Alpaslan Turkes, the fugitive leader of the ultra-rightist National Action Party, turned himself in to authorities only hours before a deadline set by the ruling National Security Council for his surrender, the state radio said.

Turkes, a former colonel, was the only major political leader to escape arrest and detention in the roundup that followed the coup. Radio Ankara said he was flown to a military post on an island in the Aegean Sea where the chairman of the fundamentalist Moslem National Salvation Party, Necmettin Erbakan, was being held.

Violence between ultra-nationalists, such as Turkes' followers, and leftist factions has taken an estimated 5,000 lives in the past five years, including 2,000 so far this year. It was this factional bloodshed and the civilian government's inability to quell it that prompted Gen. Kenan Evren, the 62-year-old chief of staff, to stage Turkey's third military coup in 20 years.

Evren also disbanded Parliament, abolished the constitution and banned all political parties.

Disillusioned refugees try to get back home

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — Reinaldo Ibanez spends his days at the marina or bobbing in a wooden rowboat, gazing across the Florida Straits and longing for home.

"I sit here every day because it is the closest I can get to Cuba," he says. "This way I can imagine that we are seeing the lights of Cuba."

Officials say Ibanez is one of a growing number of Cuban refugees unhappy with the life they found here after leaving their homeland in the ragtag "Freedom Flotilla." Since April, the boatlift brought 123,000 Cubans to the United States.

A score of unhappy refugees have commandeered passenger planes to Havana in an effort to return, and Ibanez is one of several who was stopped trying a reverse flotilla. The Coast Guard and Navy ships that try to stop boats from making refugee runs to Cuba's Mariel harbor have an added duty these days: stopping disenchanted refugees who set sail for home.

Coast Guard Petty Officer Johnnie Long said Sunday that exact figures on the number of refugee boats stopped — or on successful blockade runners — aren't available. However, he said he knew of 27 refugees aboard three boats stopped while attempting to return to Cuba since August.

Ibanez spent three jobless months in the Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa., refugee camp and on the streets in New Jersey and Miami before coming back here to try to get home.

He and 10 other refugees tried to run the blockade last week. They were within 12 miles of the Cuban coast when the Coast Guard cutter Cherokee stopped them. They weren't charged with a crime but their small boat was seized.

"It was dusk and we even saw the night lights of Cuba reflected on the ocean," said Ibanez. When the cutter appeared, "The wings fell from my soul," he said.

Since Aug. 10, seven of nine hijackings have been blamed on Cuban refugees. Four other attempts were foiled, resulting in the arrests of seven refugees. The latest successful skyjacking was Saturday when a Delta Air Lines jet heading for Atlanta from New Orleans was diverted to Cuba.

Signup procedures set for free Polish unions

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's Communist government announced registration procedures for the free trade unions won by the strikers, and Roman Catholic church officials reported that the state radio will begin broadcasting Sunday Masses next week.

The official PAP news agency said Sunday that union organizers have to register with city courts. It said they must submit a list of their "activists" and their addresses, the "framework of the union's activities" and other details.

PAP said the courts can reject applications by groups it considers "hostile to socialist Poland and the constitution," or if the proposed organization appears "inconsistent with the law."

The agency also said until new labor laws are adopted by Parliament in December, present procedures for the official union organization — the Central Council of Trade Unions — will remain in effect.

Some union organizers had said they were awaiting clarification of registration procedures before completing work on such details as the structure, membership and bylaws of their organizations.

Free trade unions and greater access to the media by the church were among the concessions won by the strikers who paralyzed much of Poland last month with mass walkouts beginning in the Baltic port of Gdansk.

The strikers said they wanted new union structures free of government and party control, and that the Central Council of Trade Unions controlled by the Communist Party looked after the interests of the government, not of the workers.

Dissidents said since the Gdansk settlement was reached, workers in 75 enterprises in Nowa Huta and 29 in Bielsko-Biala have formed regional federations of free unions. Nowa Huta, a steel-making center regarded as a model of socialist technology, and Bielsko-Biala are in southern Poland.
