Surprises scored by Kennedy, Bush

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Edward Kennedy shocked President Carter with twin upsets Tuesday in New York and Connecticut primary elections, while George Bush beat Ronald Reagan in the Connecticut Republican race.

Despite the setback, Reagan won a greater share of Tuesday's GOP delegates as his supporters swept to victory in New York delegate contests.

Kennedy was expected to lose in both primaries, according to pre-primary polling. But he took New York by 18 percentage points and Connecticut by 6 points.

Kennedy captured 164 delegates in New York and 29 in Connecticut. Carter took 118 in New York and 25 in Connecticut. For the year, Carter leads with 716 delegates to Kennedy's 385. It will take 1,666 delegate votes to win the Democratic nomination.

At the White House, Press Secretary Jody Powell said Tuesday's losses would not lead Carter to forego his stay at home campaign tactics. He said Kennedy will have to win 63 percent of all the Democratic delegates still to be selected in order to catch Carter.

Nonetheless, one interested observer, Republican Reagan, said his victories are certainly enough to quiet those people who are telling Kennedy he ought to get out of the race.

Connecticut served the same purpose for Bush.

Bush, in Milwaukee, told reporters, "It looks to me like I was getting my point across. If it made a difference there, it will make a difference here."

Reagan said he never expected to win in the state that bush's father represented in the U.S. Senate, and he added, "There are a lot of primaries to go and I'm sure there will be wins and losses."

Reagan claimed 87 delegates Tuesday, including 73 from New York and 14 from Connecticut. Bush counted 15 Connecticut delegates and 6 from New York Rep. John B. Anderson won 6 delegates in Connecticut. For the year, Reagan has 293 delegates to 68 for Bush and 45 for Anderson. It takes 998 votes to clinch the GOP nomination.

Reagan, Bush and California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. all were in Wisconsin this morning, campaigning in advance of next week's primary. Anderson headed for Kansas, which also holds primary elections next Tuesday.

Democrat Brown sat out Tuesday's Northeastern primaries, winning just 3 percent of the Connecticut vote. He was not on the New York ballot.

Anderson, who has been pouring his energies into Wisconsin, was asked if he might consider a third party campaign if he fails to win the GOP nomination. He said he "wouldn't rule it out" and wouldn't rule it in. The Illinois congressman captured 22 percent of the Connecticut GOP vote, he did not contest in New York.

Carter campaign chairman Robert Strauss said the Tuesday defeats were "only a dip in the road" for Carter's renomination efforts.

With almost all of New York's vote counted, the Democratic results read:

Kennedy 574,566 or 59 percent, for 164 delegates

Carter 399,862 or 41 percent, for 118 delegates

Kennedy's New York victory was fashioned state-wide. His biggest margin was in the city, but he also won handily upstate where Carter was expected to do best.

In Connecticut, with all the votes counted, it was:

Democrats

Kennedy 98,571 votes or 47 percent

Carter 87,108 votes or 41 percent

Brown had 3 percent, as did minor candidate Lyndon LaRouche. Six percent of the ballots were uncommitted.

Republicans

Bush 70,079 or 39 percent

Reagan 61,333 or 31 percent

Anderson 40,481 or 22 percent

Rep. Philip M. Crane of Illinois got 1 percent, the balance went to a minor candidate and three entries who all ready have withdrawn from the campaign, with 2 percent uncommitted.

Debate ended by call for annexation ordinance

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Midland City Council put the debate to rest by voting unanimously Tuesday to have an ordinance prepared for annexing land north of the current city limits.

Residents from the area proposed for annexation — which ranges from Holiday Hill Road on the west to Lamesa Highway on the east — packed into the Council Chambers at City Hall for the 4 p.m. public hearing. Despite the objections and protests over the proposed move, the council cited a need for orderly development of Midland's future growth, which only annexation could give.

Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. was out of town and missed the meeting.

THE PRESENT MOVE for annexation was brought before the council in October 1979. Protests from residents that they would have to give up their lifestyles if annexed prompted the council to have the animal and fowl ordinance studied and changed to fit the landowners' desires.

Those changes were outlined Tuesday by Richard Hennessy, director of planning and community development, with the council setting a public hearing on the item for April 22.

Guidelines include requiring a five-acre tract to be able to have animals. Square footages for horses and cows were set. A specific use permit will allow a resident to have exceptions to the rule. And a grandfather clause will allow all existing conditions to continue, said Hennessy.

The costs of purchasing rights of way for Midland's "North Loop" creating difficulties.

Midland's growth since 1974 is one primary reason behind the move for annexation, explained Hennessy. In 1974, Midland's population was estimated at 61,500. Today, it's put at 75,000 while some optimistic people put that figure to 80,000.

In 1974, the city was developing slowly. Today, that picture has changed with Loop 250 about to go under construction. In addition, said Hennessy, Midland Park Mall and Midkiff Plaza are being constructed on the north edge of town, and the general growth of the city is north of Loop 250.

ANNEXATION FIRST was proposed in 1976, but the Planning and Zoning Commission, as well as the City Council, turned it down. Doris Howbert, mayor pro-tem, said she and three other councilmen were on the planning commission when annexation was proposed.

She said there wasn't enough growth in that north part of the city to substantiate annexation, and there was no animal-fowl ordinance to allow keeping livestock within city limits. City staff was instructed to design an ordinance before pursuing annexation any further, she said.

The planning department had drawn a line showing the minimum area that could be annexed "and is critical now," said Hennessy. A maximum includes 6.5 square miles and goes north to Green Tree Country Club Estates, east to North A Street where it drops down to Mockingbird Lane. It continues east on that street to Lamesa Highway.

Three reasons for annexation, according to Hennessy, are to ensure adequate area for future city growth, provide normal city services and provide for needed review and control of development.

"There is a trend toward urbanization in this area, and its effects can

Mayor urges Midland residents to cooperate, answer Census

By BILL MODISSETT
Staff Writer

Noting that Census Day 1980 is rapidly approaching, Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. this morning urged all Midland residents to complete and return census questionnaires. He also issued a plea for help from the city's residents in this year's decennial enumeration.

During a news conference in the Chamber of Commerce office, the mayor appealed to residents for help in this year's census because of their civic responsibility. Even those residents who do not need the work should participate in this year's enumeration, he said, because of the importance in getting an accurate count.

According to Jerry Butler of Lubbock field operations, assistant for employment of the Lubbock regional census office, only about 25 census workers from the Midland/Odessa area have been found. About 52 workers will be needed for the census in Midland, she said.

Ms. Butler said she needs a pool of 200 census workers for the Midland/Odessa area. But with the census follow-up beginning in about two weeks, she will be satisfied with about 100 workers.

The turnover rate is unbelievable, Ms. Butler said, and noted that a census worker's job often is mentally frustrating.

She blamed Midland's low unemployment rate for the difficulty in finding census workers here.

Ms. Butler particularly urged housewives in Midland to take the required test for becoming a census worker and to help with this year's enumeration.

Women's organizations also might want to get involved in the census as a group project, she added.

According to Ms. Butler, a similar problem was encountered in Midland during the 1970 census.

Training for census workers is scheduled to get under way here April 6 and the workers will begin on April 11 to contact households that have not returned their census forms.

Census forms will be mailed Friday to Midland residents. The questionnaires will include postage-paid envelopes so they may be returned. The basic questionnaire will include 19 questions dealing with items such as age, sex, number in family and education.

About one in five randomly selected households will receive a longer census version containing about 65 ques-

School board candidates dispute 'discipline problem'

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a two-part series examining the views of four candidates campaigning for Places 1 and 2 on the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees.

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Staff Writer

Is there a discipline problem in Midland schools?

That question may become the battleground for James Ramsoure and Ronald Britton in the April 5 election for Place 1 on the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees.

"I think we have a very strong discipline problem in the school district," said Britton, "which directly affects teaching."

However, Ramsoure, the incumbent, has said he thinks "that may be blowing it (the discipline issue) a little bit out of proportion."

"This is not saying we don't have disciplinary problems," said Ramsoure. "Most of them are minor problems."

"IN THE 20 years I have been with the school district," he continued, "we have not had an incident of students attacking teachers or the use of foul language in our classrooms."

However, Britton claims that last year there were 20 incidents in which students vandalized property belonging to teachers and administrators, resulting from disciplinary actions taken against the students.

Those incidents were never reported to the public, Britton claimed, adding that "the school board buried it."

"Now if that isn't a discipline problem," the challenger charged, "I don't what is."

Ramsoure contends that if there is a discipline problem, it is not the responsibility of the school — but of the home.

"If the youngsters are not taught self-restraint at home," he said, "then when they come to school, we can't expect them to exhibit desirable behavior."

"THE BUSINESS of the school district is to provide opportunities for education," the incumbent explained. "We are not a law enforcement agency."

"It's very funny to me," Britton said of the Objectives for Midland retreat in San Antonio, "that the number one priority is discipline of the students."

"That is what 100 of our top leaders have said, and the problem needs to be addressed," he added.

Regarding teacher salaries, Ramsoure said he does not propose to go below what the school district presently pays — about 25 percent above the state average.

But, the district has only so much money and they (board members) must operate within the limits of the budget, he explained.

If the money could be found in the budget for higher teacher salaries, he said he would support the salary increase.

BRITTON SAID he supports salary increases for instructors despite claims in the past that he voted against such proposals.

During the May 24, 1978, school board meeting, Britton said he appeared before the board to discuss property revaluation and tax increases.

It so happened that teacher pay raises also were on the agenda, he recalled.

A motion by Trustee Ed Runyan suggested that the district raise the

Amid cheers, India extends diplomatic relations to PLO

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — India extended full diplomatic recognition today to the Palestine Liberation Organization, External Affairs Minister P.V.N. Rao told members of Parliament, who reacted with cheers.

He also said PLO leader Yasser Arafat would arrive in India on Friday for a two-day visit at the invitation of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

The PLO representative office in New Delhi, established four years ago, will now be officially considered an embassy-level mission, a government spokesman told The Associated Press.

Rao said that since India had long supported the Palestinian cause at the United Nations and elsewhere, granting full diplomatic status to the PLO was "but another logical step."

Over the years, the Indian people have demonstrated their "sympathy, affection and brotherly feelings" for the Palestinians, he told Parliament. India, which imports its oil, has sought close ties with the Arab oil-exporting countries to secure stable energy supplies and to minimize the Moslem world's support for its traditional rival, Pakistan.

The Indian government does not recognize Israel but has permitted the Jewish state to maintain a consular office in Bombay. There is no official Indian representation in Israel.

Council still wants to try U.S. hostages, official says

By The Associated Press

The majority of Iran's ruling Revolutionary Council wants to put the American hostages on trial if the shah and his fortune are not returned to Iran, the council's first secretary, Ayatollah Mohammad Beheshti, said today.

Famed Texas surgeon Dr. Michael DeBaKey was on his way to Egypt, meanwhile, apparently to operate on the exiled and ailing Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. Cairo newspapers said the shah's doctors have confirmed he has cancer of the spleen.

Beheshti, who also is Iran's justice minister, told reporters at his weekly news conference in Tehran that he advocates breaking diplomatic relations with the United States.

The ayatollah said trying the hostages is "the general idea in Iran" and most members of the Revolutionary Council are behind it if the shah is not brought back to stand trial for his alleged crimes. Pahlavi avoided extradition proceedings in Panama and flew to Cairo Monday.

Beheshti was the second major leader of the revolutionary regime this week to advocate hostage trials in the wake of the shah's departure from Panama.

The threat of such trials was raised often after young militants seized the U.S. Embassy last Nov. 4 but had not been made for many weeks.

Fed sabotaging inflation measures?

WASHINGTON (AP) — A longtime supporter of tighter credit controls says the Federal Reserve Board appears to be intentionally sabotaging the president's inflation-fighting plan by tightening credit unfairly.

Those recently imposed controls are beginning to stir up what could become a storm on Capitol Hill and one House subcommittee today was beginning hearings on the Federal Reserve actions. Two other House panels reportedly are considering similar inquiries.

The House Banking subcommittee on consumer affairs was scheduled to hear from Nancy Teeters, the Federal Reserve Board governor responsible for consumer credit.

The subcommittee chairman, Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., is upset because the Fed's new controls reportedly will mean consumers will be charged higher interest rates not only for future credit card purchases but also for purchases already made.

This means that people whose budgets take into account present payments could find themselves paying out more than had been expected and being charged higher-than-anticipated interest rates.

"The Fed never wanted credit controls and it is doing everything possible to mess up the president's program," Annunzio said. "I don't know if this is being done on purpose, but the Fed's actions certainly make it look that way."

Curtis Prins, the subcommittee staff director, noted that Annunzio has long favored tighter credit but objected to the Fed's rules allowing the tighter credit to be retroactive.

"That's what bothers us," he said. "If the Fed said as of April 1, there will be no more borrowing, we could go along with that."

"We're trying to unload the gun the Federal Reserve is putting at the head of consumers," he added.

Prins said the subcommittee already has received numerous calls from people concerned that $30 a month payments on credit card purchases could suddenly become $90 a month or more.

He said the subcommittee was concerned that consumers and businesses would become so angry at the new controls that Carter would have no choice but to remove them.

Annunzio is upset not only at the retroactive provisions in the new credit controls but also at what he considers a lack of planning by the board on how the new controls should be administered.

"When lenders asked for guidance in putting the controls into effect, the Fed declined to give specific answers and told lenders that in dealing with borrowers they could do 'whatever turns you on,'" the congressman said.

Dow Jones near lowest level in two years

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market's $150 billion drop over the past month and a half has stirred unpleasant memories on Wall Street of the bear markets and recession of the mid-1970s.

The Dow Jones industrial average has fallen to its lowest level in nearly two years. From Feb. 13, when it stood at 903.84, to Tuesday's close at 767.83, the average has dropped 136 points, or about 15 percent. The decline has wiped out an estimated $150 billion in the market.

An analysis

Some of the slide has been blamed on disappointment with President Carter's new anti-inflation plan, announced 12 days ago. New complications in the Iranian crisis over the past weekend also apparently took their toll.

But most analysts agree that the message in the slump has been that the economy is headed for some tough times in the months ahead.

"It looks as though there's definitely going to be a recession," said Robert Stovall, an analyst at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc.

His brokerage firm still looks for only a gradual decline in business activity, he said. "But some people are now fearful of a more abrupt one, of the economy running up against a stone wall."

Among the anti-inflation measures prescribed by the government in mid-March, restraints on consumer credit have had the most noticeable impact on Americans' daily affairs.

But in the near-unanimous view of Wall Streeters, tightening of credit by the Federal Reserve at higher levels of the banking system is likely to prove much more important in the long run. The Fed's efforts to reduce the growth of money in circulation have already sent the housing industry into a severe slump and put interest rates at record levels.

The rates on loans for companies start at 19 percent, and all but the biggest blue-chip businesses have to pay well over 20 percent.

Since the Fed started to tighten credit last October, inflation rates have gotten worse than ever — close to 18 percent on an annual basis — and economic activity, except in the housing and auto industries, has remained relatively strong.

But many observers believe the Fed's moves are now beginning to take hold, with results that will begin to show up soon in rising unemployment and declining corporate profits.

"In our opinion, the threshold of pain from Federal Reserve policy is just now being encountered," said Raymond F. DeVoe Jr. of the brokerage firm of Bruns, Nordeman, Rea & Co.

As long as inflation was the biggest economic worry, investments like gold and silver kept rising sharply on their appeal as inflation hedges.

But in the past couple of months gold has fallen from $875 an ounce to around $540, and silver from above $50 an ounce to just above $20.

Such a decline in commodity prices is another portent of a slowing economy, analysts say — and quite possibly a period when other economic troubles replace inflation in the news headlines.

"The Federal Reserve has set the economy firmly on the road to a recession," Chappaqua, N.Y., business analyst S. Jay Levy said in the current issue of his advisory letter, "Industry Forecast."

"The recession, like a bath in the cold surf, is supposed to be good for us. It is the cure that Washington has prescribed for inflation."

Buying power shrinking rapidly, report warns

WASHINGTON (AP) — The buying power of American wage earners is shrinking at the fastest rate in at least 16 years because of the high inflation that has gripped the economy, the government reports.

The Labor Department said Tuesday that real spendable earnings in private industry fell 7.3 percent between February 1979 and last month because consumer prices have risen faster than wages.

The decline is the largest recorded by the department since it began collecting monthly information on workers' buying power in 1964. The previous record decline for a 12-month period was posted in January, when worker purchasing power fell 6.7 percent from a year earlier.

The decline in spendable earnings stems from an accelerating inflation rate for the first two months of 1980.

The government said in a separate report Tuesday that consumer prices in February jumped 1.4 percent for the second straight month — a new sign inflation may be settling in at an 18 percent annual rate.

For all of last year, consumer prices rose 13.3 percent and worker spending power declined 5.1 percent because wages did not increase enough to keep pace with the higher prices.

The government's measure of buying power — or "real spendable earnings" — reflects how much money a married worker with three dependents has to spend after deducting taxes and taking inflation into account.

According to department figures, buying power declined by 1.4 percent in February alone, after falling 1.3 percent in January. While consumer prices increased 1.4 percent in each of those months, average weekly earnings showed almost no increase.

The department estimated that average after tax weekly earnings of a worker with three dependents stood at a seasonally adjusted figure of $201.26 last month. But that amounted to only $84.85 in terms of what a worker could buy in 1967.

One year ago, workers' average after-tax earnings stood at $190.38 a week, but that was worth $91.66 in 1967 dollars, the government said.

In the same report, the department noted that over the last 13 years, workers' average hourly earnings have stayed ahead of inflation by only a razor thin margin. Hourly earnings before adjusting for inflation increased 142.2 percent since 1967. But with inflation taken into account, earnings have risen only 2.4 percent.

Meanwhile, R. Robert Russell, director of the inflation-monitoring Council on Wage and Price Stability, said Tuesday that consumer prices will keep rising at about February's pace for several months as hikes in interest rates and wholesale energy prices show up at the consumer level.

But Russell told the Joint Economic Committee of Congress he believed inflation had peaked and would begin declining later this year. He based his forecast on an assumption that surging increases in gasoline prices would moderate and interest rates would fall from their record levels.

"I think we won't see in the future any further acceleration in the overall inflation rate," he said, predicting that inflation should slow to 10 percent or 12 percent a year by the end of 1980.

Although food prices should begin increasing in the coming months, Russell said the biggest jumps in energy prices likely are past, and prices should be "relatively well behaved" later in the year.

He also observed that the rise in the price of new houses last month was the smallest in almost 18 months, an indication the housing speculation bubble "appears to have burst."

Partial freeze possible on Social Security taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Budget Committee, backed by a Senate directive to end budget deficits, is drafting a 1981 federal spending plan that may allow a partial freeze on Social Security taxes.

Preparing for the start of the panel's work today, the Senate served notice Tuesday that there is a limit to how deeply it will slash spending to battle inflation, turning back a Republican plan to the federal spending to the Gross National Product.

By a 56-41 margin Tuesday, senators approved a Democratic resolution directing the committee to balance the budget for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, chairman of the Budget Committee and sponsor of the Democratic plan, said the panel will aim for a spending limit of about $613 billion, which would require cuts of about $16 billion from the budget submitted in January by President Carter.

That also would put the panel close to Carter's revised spending plan and to the $611.8 billion figure approved by the House Budget Committee.

The resolution approved by the Senate earmarks any surplus for tax cuts, with half the money to be used to partially offset the Social Security tax increase due to take effect next Jan. 1, and the other half for business tax reductions.

Muskie's proposal was offered to dilute support for a resolution by Sen. William Roth, R-Del., that would have required an additional cut of $29 billion. But such cuts, Democrats contended, would hurt the poor or damage national defense.

Adoption of the Muskie substitute blocked a yes vote on the Roth plan. And to show their anger, 37 GOP senators voted against the final resolution, even though most favor a balanced budget. Only three Republicans voted with Muskie.

Roth's resolution sought to limit fiscal 1981 spending to 21 percent of the Gross National Product, the total value of the nation's goods and services. By doing that, Roth claimed, the government would send a clear signal that it plans to limit spending even beyond 1981.

Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd said the plan adopted by the Senate "is not soft on inflation — it's bitter medicine. But it does not make promises that cannot be kept."

Byrd said the GOP plan was "straight out of the school of Herbert Hoover — with its promise of a chicken in every pot."

Muskie called Roth's proposal "the stuff of which headlines are made."

"But think about the prospect of cutting that $45 billion from the budget," he said. "Think about what that would mean to elderly Americans — many of whom are already ill fed, ill housed and ill clothed."

Meanwhile, the congressional black caucus announced it will fight the spending cuts proposed by the House Budget Committee last week in arriving at a balanced budget.

"We are resolved to take this disgraceful budget to the people," said Rep. Cardiss Collins, D-Ill., who heads the group.

Sears announces higher monthly credit payment

CHICAGO (AP) — Charge account customers of Sears, Roebuck and Co. will face higher monthly minimum payments soon, the world's largest retailer says.

Sears announced Tuesday that it will increase minimum monthly payments on charge accounts to $10 from $8 in an effort to comply with the government's anti-inflation program.

The company said its 26 million charge account customers will retain the option of avoiding interest charges by paying their account balance in full each month.

Customers whose outstanding balances require payment of more than the minimum monthly amount will also see their payments rise, although the amount of increase has not been determined, the company said.

"The changes will not go into effect until we have given customers exact details and more information on how the changes will affect each person's account," said Edward Telling, Sears' chief executive officer.

Sears also said it would continue to issue new charge cards and will not place new limits on the amount customers can charge.

Economists say recession due, impact not as big as forecast

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Nobel Prize-winning economist Milton Friedman and Paul Samuelson warn that the U.S. economy is on a collision course with a recession, but they say the impact will not be as great as government officials project.

In a rare joint appearance Tuesday, the economists played down the size of the expected recession and took exception with government projections of an 18 percent inflation rate.

"Regardless of what the government does, the inflation rate will lower this year. What distresses me is that the Carter administration will be getting credit for this when it is in spite of and not because of their efforts," said Friedman.

"The core rate of inflation is 10 percent, not the 18 percent currently reported," said Samuelson.

Friedman said the rate was somewhere between 10 and 13 percent, calling the 18 percent figure "fakes."

Samuelson and Friedman, two of this country's most highly regarded economists, represent widely differing viewpoints.

Samuelson, a Keynesian economist, advocates government involvement in economics while Friedman is a critic of what he calls "government manipulation" of the marketplace.

Both economists said American consumers will have to cut back, but not drastically, to lower inflation and ease the current economic crunch.

"If we make progress toward price stability, my view is that it will require two to four years of sub-normal economy and lower employment," Samuelson said.

Friedman said tax cuts, not wage and price controls would balance the national budget.

"The changes will not go into effect until we have given customers exact details and more information on how the changes will affect each person's account," said Edward Telling, Sears' chief executive officer.

Sears also said it would continue to issue new charge cards and will not place new limits on the amount customers can charge.

There was no room to spare in this boat packed with 98 Haitian refugees when it landed Monday at Miami's Haulover marina. March has been a record month for Haitian refugees, with an estimated 1,250 of them landing on South Florida beaches (374 in the last two days). (AP Laserphoto)

Haitian refugees converge on South Florida beaches

MIAMI (AP) — Haitian refugees, fleeing across shark-infested waters in an exodus from poverty, are scrambling ashore in Florida in record numbers, beaching their rickety boats along the wealthy Gold Coast from Key Biscayne to Hollywood. The Immigration and Naturalization Service said three more boats arrived Tuesday with at least 140 men, women and children, some guided in by suspected smugglers. The new arrivals brought the total to an estimated 1,250 Haitians known to have landed here this month, said William Metcalf, assistant INS district director for investigations. The previous high was 637 in October 1979. Authorities weren't sure what has caused the sudden influx. "It's spring," Metcalf speculated. "The waters are calm." An estimated 12,000 Haitians are now believed to be in South Florida, brought by makeshift vessels barely able to make it across the Florida Straits. On Monday, 98 Haitians arrived at Miami Beach, jammed elbow-to-elbow, in a boat so crowded many were hanging partially overboard. A Norwegian tanker picked up 13 Haitians adrift in a disabled 24-foot pleasure craft about 70 miles east of Cape Canaveral, Tuesday, the Coast Guard said. No one knows how many Haitians have died in the attempt to reach Florida. However, five children and a young mother drowned 450 yards off West Palm Beach last August, and several others drowned this winter off Fort Lauderdale on a trip from the Bahamas to Florida. Many Haitians apparently make their way first to the Bahamas, where the government has moved to discourage makeshift refugee colonies. Often they work their way to a jumping-off point such as Bimini, then make a deal with a smuggler for an average fee of $500 each, Metcalf said. Though many of the Haitians attempt to claim political asylum, federal agents suspect they simply are fleeing the anguished poverty of their Caribbean island homeland. The average Haitian earned $212 in 1978. Haiti, 700 miles southeast of Miami, is the size of New Hampshire and Vermont with five times as many people and a fifth of the arable land. Efforts to expel them have been stalled, however, by suits claiming the government is failing to give the refugees due process before forcing them to leave. In a federal suit to block deportation, a witness identified as a former member of the Haitian secret police said refugees face severe punishment when they return home.

President Jean-Claude Duvalier, whose father allegedly cracked down hard on dissenters during his rule, told The Miami News last year he would welcome refugees home with "all possible guarantees" against reprisal.

"In the meantime we're stymied," Metcalf said. "These people just keep coming in."

"There is poverty over there; they are hungry, they don't have work — we understand that," he said. "but the problems of Haiti have to be solved in Haiti, not here."

Man rescued after three weeks adrift

By ROCKY SCOTT

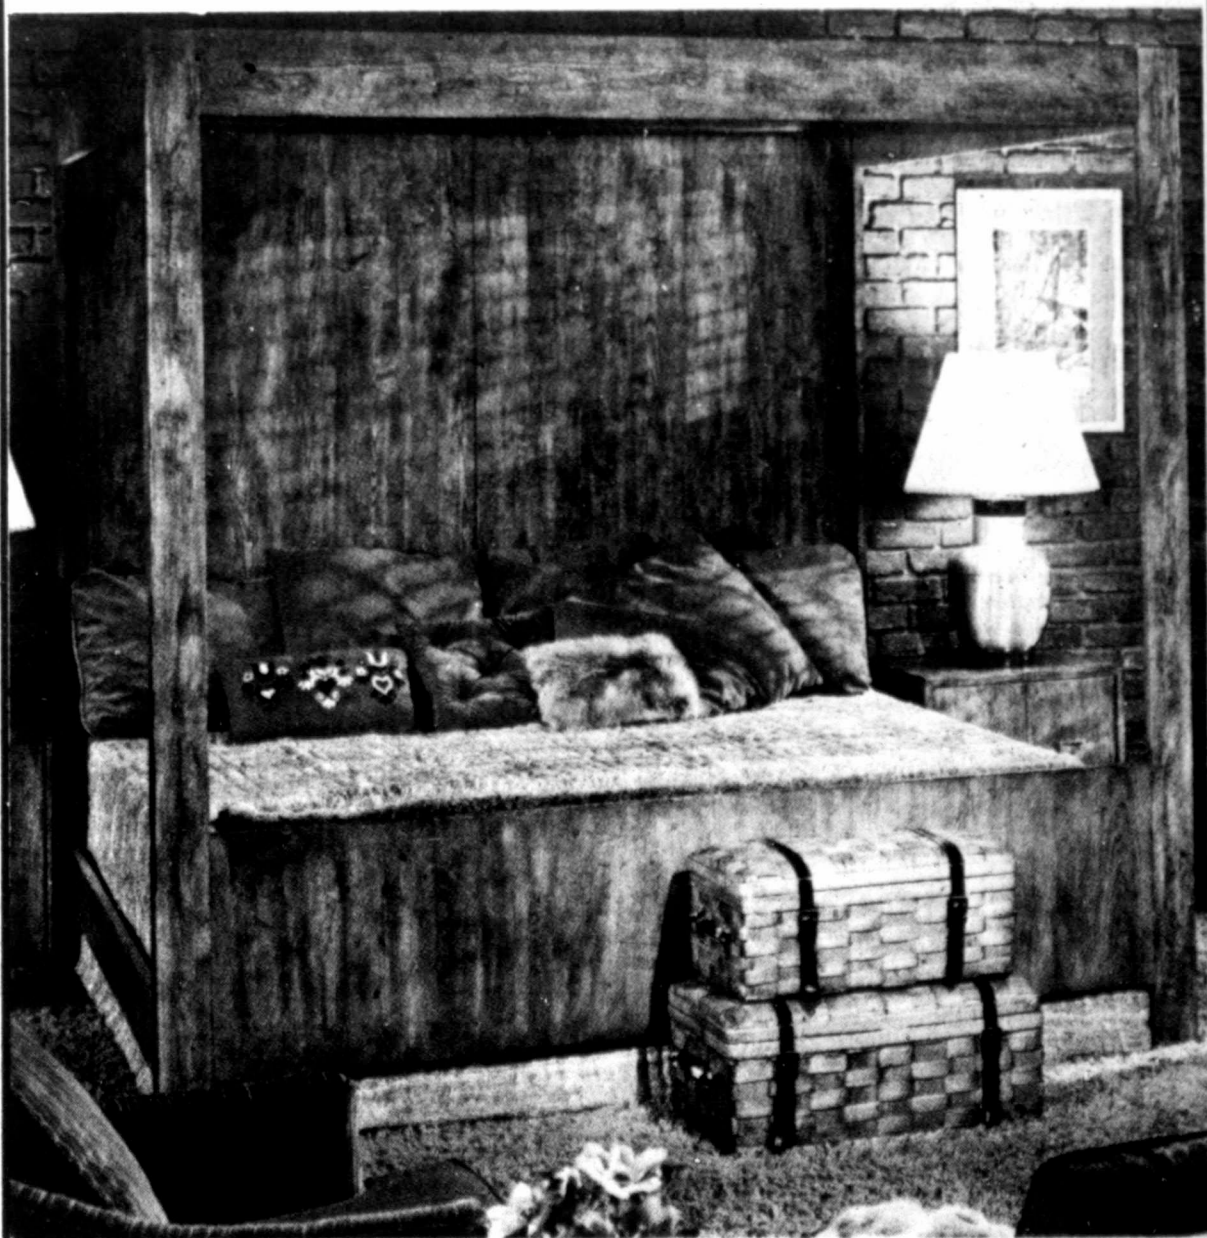

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — For 21 days and nights after he abandoned a sinking ship, Kenneth Enoe sat alone in a 12-man lifeboat, ate C-rations, drank canned water and drifted aimlessly in the Gulf of Mexico. On the 22nd day, the crew of the Cova Navigator fished Enoe, who was in surprisingly good condition, out of the water about 200 miles southwest of New Orleans and gave him a hodge-podge wardrobe. On the 23rd day, Tuesday, Enoe stepped from a U.S. Coast Guard launch onto a pier and, asked what he felt when he saw land again, replied: "I couldn't believe it." "I'm very tired," the native of Grenada, a small island in the Caribbean near Venezuela, told waiting reporters as he was helped onto the pier. Enoe look dazed and bewildered as he moved slowly along the dock, supported on each side by employees of a local shipping firm. Asked if he always thought he would be rescued, the bearded seaman whispered, "Yeah."

Enoe, clad in red-checked slacks, a white sweater and blue house shoes given to him by the Cova Navigator's crew, was taken to a Galveston hospital after a brief medical examination at the Coast Guard base. He remained in the hospital Tuesday night. "He is in good shape," said the doctor who examined Enoe at the Coast Guard station. The doctor, who asked not to be identified, described Enoe as partially dehydrated but mentally alert. Enoe's ordeal began shortly after 1 a.m. on March 3 when the Panamanian ship Marvina radioed that it was sinking about 300 miles southwest of New Orleans in the Gulf of Mexico. He told Cova Navigator crewmen he was trying to lower a lifeboat when he fell overboard, but he managed to find the lifeboat. It was stocked with C-rations, canned water and other survival equipment. Enoe's fellow crew members were plucked from the gulf the same night by the Breehoek, a Dutch ship that towed the Marvina to within 11 miles of the mouth of the Mississippi River before the crippled vessel sank. Bob Ford, a Galveston shipping company spokesman who met Enoe at the dock, said the seaman was "soaking wet" when he was picked up Monday but seemed in good condition otherwise. Coast Guard officials said the amount of food on the lifeboat would have lasted one man about 21 days, meaning he would have run out of food the day before he was rescued.

Thunderstorms in forecast

Midlanders can look forward to increasing cloudiness tonight and Thursday with a chance of possible thunderstorms.

Tonight's low should be in the upper 40s. Southeasterly winds at 10-15 mph will prevail through tonight.

'Answer the Census' plea issued

The census-taking process is helpful in realizing the need for Midlanders to answer the census and to become census workers.

This is the first time the bureau has used the mail-out questionnaire. "With a shortage of census workers in Midland, it is most important that people fill out and return the questionnaire to avoid requiring an enumerator visit the residence in person," Angelo said.

Annexation ordinance requested

Later, Councilman Tom Sloan said he objected to the charge the city is trying to confiscate the land.

"THERE IS A problem with areas developing before they come into the city. The earlier we can include these areas in our planning efforts, the easier it will be for planning," he said.

Taking the proposed area by sections, the council started with Green Tree Country Club, which is at the far left on the city map.

Jerry Mobley, general manager, objected to Green Tree being annexed while the other two country clubs are not.

"There already is orderly development of these areas. You can't help us; only cost us money," he said.

The way it can be confiscated, he said, is by simply raising the valuation on the land so high the people—who couldn't afford the tax—would have to sell.

Later, Councilman Tom Sloan said he objected to the charge the city is trying to confiscate the land.

THE ANNEXED LAND would come into the city under Agriculture-Estates zoning, which isn't considered as valuable as other zoning, said Councilman Carroll Thomas.

And the zoning would give those residents protection from a developer coming in and trying to put in a commercial or apartment development, said Mrs. Howbert.

Roy Kimsey, who lives on Route 5, lodged his protests over annexation, but found himself questioned as to why he had not paid a pro-rata bill for city services.

Harrell Feldt, attorney for Saddle Club North and residents along Solomon Lane, told the City Council that until they can provide all the services and protection they boast of, they shouldn't annex any part of the northern segment.

Baker, director of public works, said residents wouldn't have to tie into water and sewer lines if they didn't want to.

"And the city staff is being taxed to the ultimate to put in city services. Because of this boom, they haven't been able to keep their heads above water."

IN FELDT'S VIEW, the city shouldn't annex land until there is indication of a development planned north of the proposed annexation area.

Overall, the residents charged they already have streets, orderly growth, water and sewer services, fire and law enforcement protection.

Fred Baker, director of public works, said residents wouldn't have to tie into water and sewer lines if they didn't want to.

Drainage will become a major problem in that area as it develops, claimed Baker. Mustang Draw meanders through the area, and the city needs to obtain rights of way to develop a drainage plan.

Right of way costs threaten loop

By LANA CUNNINGHAM Staff Writer

Skyrocketing costs of purchasing rights of way for Loop 250 have been plaguing Midland City Council for months.

But on Tuesday, during the council's regular session in City Hall Council Chambers, Councilman Tom Sloan said those costs are threatening the future of the road.

Listed as an item on the consent agenda was a $500,000 appropriation from a general fund to purchase more rights of way.

Before it was approved unanimously, Sloan commented, "I wonder if it's economically feasible to continue this project. It's costing too much for rights of way, and I think the council should consider abandoning the project."

Another councilman, Gordon Mar MOVE murder charges could be dismissed

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Judge Edwin Malmel of Common Pleas Court has taken under advisement motions to dismiss murder and other charges against nine MOVE members accused of killing a policeman.

Court-appointed defense attorneys representing the self-styled revolutionary group filed demurrer motions Tuesday when the state rested its case after presenting 80 witnesses in 14 weeks of trial.

Wilhelm Knauer, the chief prosecutor, said he expected the judge to have the defendants brought in after he rules on all the motions to dismiss the charges, possibly today.

High prices for the land being demanded by the owners has "almost made it impossible for the city to purchase the property. If the people along the rights of way keep doing this (raising their prices), we (the council) won't have any alternative but to drop the Loop Road or to have a bond issue to pay for the land."

Afterward, Sloan explained the city has hired an appraiser. But the landowners have upped their prices, and even when a board of appeals agrees with the appraiser's prices, the landowners won't accept what the city offers.

The City Council, which could have concluded its session by early afternoon if it had not been for the annexation hearing, decided not to remove parking in front of Matlock Furniture on South Big Spring Street.

The State Department of Highways and Public Transportation has requested that block be included with the rest of South Big Spring Street in removing on-street parking. This will allow the state agency to stripe the street to include a left turn lane, thus eliminating some accidents at an intersection next to the store, said Fred Baker, director of public works. But Pat Baskin, attorney for the owners, described the store as being locked in with no place to obtain additional land for off-street parking.

A request by The First National Bank for a passenger loading zone on Colorado Street at Wall Avenue evolved into a decision by the council to conduct a traffic study of that area, including the bank's parking garage.

A contract was approved for Jimmie Leath, an architect, to relocate the Pliska Airplane, conduct a study and resolve the roof problem of the terminal building and expand the restaurant at Midland Regional Airport.

The council also approved a lease agreement for a word processor machine for the Police Department, an agreement with Yarger & Associates to update the personnel classification and pay plan and a request from Trinity School to hold a fair and carnival May 9-10.

A preliminary plat of Permian Estates was approved.

School board candidates differ on 'discipline problem' education programs for students who are not interested in going to college, but want to be prepared for work after graduation.

Ramsoure indicated that 50 percent of the students don't go to college after graduation. Instead, they find jobs and become part of the working force, he said.

Presently the school district has various vocational technical programs with Midland College, Ramsoure explained, which help train these students.

ANOTHER REASON for instituting training programs is the community has a need for particular skills these programs can provide, he added.

Both candidates say they support the $3 million repair and maintenance bond issue. But, Britton said, past school boards have created this problem by not providing enough money for the district's maintenance and repair items.

And the taxpayer really has no other choice except to vote for the bonds which will increase school taxes by two or three cents, he said.

Ramsoure noted the $3 million bond issue is needed now because it will cost the school district more in the future for repairs to the schools.

Connally support bouys Reagan

By SHARON HERBAUGH

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — Buoyed by new-found support from former nemesis John Connally, Republican presidential hopeful Ronald Reagan concluded a whirlwind tour of Northeast Texas by pooh-poohing his defeat in the Connecticut primary.

Reagan was edged in Connecticut by Texan George Bush, who spent his boyhood years in that Northeastern state. Reagan said he hadn't expected to win in Connecticut anyway, calling it "George Bush's state."

Reagan said Tuesday night he was pleased with the outcome and added he was happy with returns from New York, where he soundly defeated Bush and Republican John Anderson.

ly, who then announced he was throwing his support to the former California governor, "the second best man I can think of."

The silver-haired Connally, who served three terms as Democratic governor of Texas before switching parties, towered over 69-year-old Reagan, as the two stood arm in arm, posing for photographers.

"This country desperately needs a change," Connally said amid accolades for his former opponent. "I want to be part of the effort that set the course of this change."

At a Longview Chamber of Commerce banquet later Tuesday, he continued to praise Reagan.

"I've always believed if you can't whip 'em, join 'em," he told a cheering crowd of 1,700. "He (Reagan) penetrated the very roots, the very core of the feeling of the American people. I saw it tested in Florida ... New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Vermont. But I said wait until South Carolina and South Carolina came and it went and they spoke and it was still Reagan."

paign debts, Connally bailed out of the Republican race March 9, still stinging from a sound whipping in South Carolina.

Connally reiterated that he is not interested in a vice presidential slot or a position in Reagan's administration, should Reagan be elected.

"I have stated repeatedly that I do not want to be vice president," Connally said. "The idea of being vice president does not appeal to me. I don't want anything. I don't want an appointment."

Before departing for Wisconsin, Reagan was greeted by thunderous applause at the Chamber of Commerce dinner, where his strong criticism of Democratic policies won him two standing ovations.

"It is time for the government to get out of the energy industry and turn it loose in the free market," he said. "It is also a time to begin a moral and military re-arming for the decade ahead."

"The president says if we don't approve the SALT treaty, no one will like us. I think it's time for the American people to say, 'We don't care if they like us. We want to be respected.'"

Carter's foreign policy borders on "appeasement," Reagan said, adding "it is time for the men and women of the business community to come to the rescue of the country."

Turning to inflation, Reagan said the blame should not rest with consumers and business, but with government.

IRA gunman frees mom, infant girl

DUNDALK, Ireland (AP) — A suspected IRA guerrilla freed a mother and her infant daughter today after an appeal by a Roman Catholic priest, but kept the father captive.

The gunman, identified by police as Bernard McGinn, 21, took the family hostage Tuesday. Armed with guns and hand grenades, McGinn is fleeing a 10-year prison sentence imposed by a Dublin anti-terrorist court for possession of explosives.

McGinn was convicted last November, but jumped bail on the last day of his trial and has been a fugitive since. The siege began when police responded to a report that he was staying at the O'Reilly's house on the outskirts of Dundalk, a stronghold of the outlawed "Provisional" wing of the mainly Catholic Irish Republican Army.

According to some reports, Mrs. O'Reilly is McGinn's cousin.

Shortly after army troops and police marksmen ringed the house, McGinn appeared holding a grenade in one hand and grasping the father, Gus O'Reilly, with the other. "Clear off or I'll blow everyone up," he yelled.

The Rev. Sean McCartam visited the house and convinced McGinn to allow him to leave with hostage Lilly O'Reilly and her 2-year-old daughter Brona.

A second Roman Catholic priest, from McGinn's hometown of Castleblaney, entered the house to try to talk the gunman into surrendering.

McGinn asked to see his elderly mother, who was reported on her way to the house.

Kennedy's back on track

By DAVID ESPO

NEW YORK (AP) — Finally, it was the way it was supposed to be all along for the heir to Camelot.

After weeks of defeat, something other than Kennedy almost never knew in politics, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy was a big winner.

The Kennedy family was there. The Kennedy smile was there.

The Kennedy crowds were there — as they were all week during a grueling week of campaigning as he drove toward his upsets.

"I love New York. And Connecticut, too," Kennedy laughed Tuesday night after scoring upset primary wins in the two states that could revive his faltering bid for the White House.

"We haven't had too many of these evenings," said the man who had already lost 19 of 21 contests to the president. "But I tell you, we're going to have a lot more."

Asked what his victories meant for Carter's chance for renomination, he smiled his big smile and laughed again.

"I think we've got another candidate that's going to get the nomination," he said.

And now, claiming that Kennedy is back on track, the Massachusetts senator's inner circle says it's the president who has to turn his campaign around.

Kennedy himself said his win showed the voters "were sending a very clear and powerful message...that they no longer can afford an inflation rate of 18 percent and interest rates that match."

His aides said the double triumphs showed the American public finally losing patience with the president, and that the concern about Chappaquiddick had been eclipsed by concerns about such things as economics and foreign policy.

"We took some very very tough licks in the beginning of this campaign, and we survived it and we won here..." said his press secretary, Tom Southwick.

"The important thing is that the burden is now on Carter's back to turn this thing around and it's late for him to try to do this," Southwick said.

"I think he's living in a house of cards, and he hoped Kennedy could be defeated," Kennedy adviser Richard Drayne said of Carter.

"Kennedy was not defeated and the house is collapsing."

But at the White House, press secretary Jody Powell said Kennedy still would have to win 63 percent of all the delegates yet to be chosen in order to catch Carter.

Even in defeat Tuesday night, the president picked up 143 delegates, running his total to 746 — or roughly 45 percent of the delegate votes needed for nomination. Kennedy increased his delegate total to 385.

Kennedy aides said the victories would provide a big psychological boost and mean more money for their cash-short campaign.

But at the same time, they virtually conceded the president would win two primaries next week in Wisconsin and Kansas, while Kennedy emphasizes the Pennsylvania primary on April 22.

Kennedy has dropped plans to campaign in Wisconsin, and has no personal campaigning scheduled in Kansas, either.

Instead, he probably will begin his drive in Pennsylvania on Friday. Aides said his campaign there will be virtually a carbon copy of the one he ran successfully in New York.

He campaigned the last eight days there, constantly criticizing the president's handling of the economy and the United States' mistaken vote at the United Nations in favor of an anti-Israel resolution.

Aides said they didn't expect him to raise any new issues in Pennsylvania. "Why should we?" said one.

Short of the cash he needed to air his own television commercials, Kennedy relied on his ability to draw coverage from both local stations and the national networks.

The day before election, for example, he was in public at a subway station; a hospital in danger of being closed; an indoor market place in Spanish Harlem and a restaurant in Little Italy. Cameras followed him everywhere.

Rock Island purchase OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department says it has no objection to the Southern Pacific Railroad System's proposal to buy a Rock Island Railroad line that runs through the Texas Panhandle.

The line known as the Golden Star Route runs from Santa Rosa, N.M., to St. Louis through the northern Panhandle towns of Dalhart, Stratford and Texhoma.

This race sky eyed

NEW YORK (AP) — An "eye" in the sky will keep watch over 110 yachts as they race across the Atlantic from Plymouth, England, to Newport, R.I., beginning June 7.

Each vessel competing in the 1980 Observer Singlehanded Trans-Atlantic Race will be fitted with the Argos satellite navigation system so that the exact location of each boat is known.

In a brief filed Tuesday with the Interstate Commerce Commission, the department's antitrust division said the proposed acquisition would not diminish competition.

The proposal would produce a single-line freight rail route between California and the Midwest, because it would make possible connections between Santa Rosa and a Rock Island line to California.

Competing railroads have urged the ICC to reject Southern Pacific's plan. But the Justice Department said those competing railroads have offered proposals that are anti-competitive and offer no public benefits.

A representative of the Dalhart business community testified earlier this year that before the ICC in support of the Southern Pacific bid. The Rock Island track is the town's only east-west rail route.

The ICC is expected to decide by the summer.

Murders, rapes climb in Texas

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Department of Public Safety says there were 373 more murders and 1,101 more rapes in the state last year than in 1978.

The DPS said Tuesday law officers cleared 73 percent of the 2,226 murders by an arrest and 52 percent of the 6,028 rapes in 1979.

Col. Jim Adams, DPS Director, said the number of major criminal offenses committed in Texas last year rose by 68,140 to 791,304 — or by 9.42 percent.

Only 21 percent of the crimes were cleared by an arrest, Adams said.

Texas' annual crime rate rose 6.4 percent in 1979, with the largest increase in rape and motor vehicle theft, he said. The crime rate is based on the number of crimes per 100,000 population.

Adams said there were an estimated 72,687 motor vehicle thefts, a 22.2 percent increase, and a 19 percent increase in rapes from 1978. He said murders were up 16.9 percent over the previous year.

Property valued at over $610 million was stolen in 1979, and only $216 million worth of property was recovered, Adams said.

He placed the number of drug arrests at 47,879, down 19 percent from the previous year. The reason for the lower number of arrests, he said, was that the DPS concentrated on major narcotics cases.

However, Adams said, all criminal arrests — not including traffic cases — totaled 763,541, up 2 percent.

Partial reports on arson reflect 5,347 cases in 1979, with property damage totaling more than $78 million. These figures, mandated by Congress in early 1979, came from reports covering approximately 64 percent of the state's population.

Adams said 10 police were killed in the line of duty by criminals last year, two more than the previous year. Three other officers died in duty-related mishaps. A total of 3,256 assaults against police officers were reported for 1979.

The DPS figures were compiled from data submitted by 709 Texas sheriffs and chiefs of police whose jurisdictions represent 99.3 percent of the state's total population.

Judge urged to disqualify self in illegal alien trial

HOUSTON (AP) — The Mexican American Legislative Caucus of the Texas House of Representatives says U.S. Dist. Judge Woodrow Seals should disqualify himself from a suit challenging a Texas law that excludes illegal aliens from free public education.

The suit, in which the U.S. Justice Department joined a group of illegal aliens, is scheduled for final arguments Thursday after testimony ended Tuesday.

The Caucus, in a statement issued from Austin, said Seals should have disqualified himself from the case "before it was begun — or at least when his bias became apparent to him. It is not too late now."

The Caucus charged that Seals had stated the Spanish language is not worthy of being taught in Texas schools.

"The judge's comments cast doubt on his integrity and the integrity of the process he is supervising," the statement said. "Furthermore, considering the importance of the Spanish language and Spanish speakers to the political and economic life of the state of Texas, the judge's comments are dangerously ignorant."

A California educator who said he came to this country as an illegal alien at age 13, was among the final witnesses to testify Tuesday.

Melton Lopez, 46, assistant superintendent of the Chula Vista City, Calif. school district, said California schools are not allowed to check the immigration status of students.

"We have no right to question any child's birth place," Lopez said. "If they live in the geographic limits of the district and can verify a birth date, that's all we need."

Lopez said he was able to continue his education in the U.S. as an illegal alien.

"At 13, I came here as a wetback from Mexico," Lopez testified. "I had finished my education in Mexico. Then we came across. Somehow or other I went to school and somehow or other, here I am."

Lopez said his family later obtained permanent resident status and he became a citizen in 1960 while serving in the U.S. Army.

Lopez said the admission of illegal aliens in his district did not harm the quality of education for citizen children. He also said there is no problem in finding bilingual teachers for the alien children.

Maurine Keefe gets Golden Deeds Award

By KAY HORD-CRITES

Maurine Igou Keefe, "a doer — not one who seeks the headlines," was awarded the Midland Exchange Club's Golden Deeds Award Tuesday night.

The 27th annual award presentation was made by John J. Redfern Jr. during a banquet at Midland Country Club.

The Exchange Club is a service organization dedicated to community betterment, and each year presents its Golden Deeds Award to someone who has worked to better the community while shunning the headlines.

"When you see Maurine coming toward you with that look in her eye — give up," Redfern told approximately 75 people attending the banquet.

Mrs. Keefe was chosen by the Exchange Club as this year's recipient because "she searches out the needs of the community and then she proceeds to try to fill them," said Redfern.

Shortly after she got here (in January 1951), she recognized the need for day care nurseries for the Latin American population. And she helped found the Florencia Day Nursery.

"After that, she became involved in the Guadalupe Youth Center and served on that board. One of the most important things in her long career of good deeds is her work with the Girl Scouts. She took on the troops in the Latin American section where there weren't too many people who had the time or ability to be the leader of a troop.

"She'd have different age groups at different times of the day.

"And she recognized another thing about these girls," Redfern added. "They had more limited backgrounds than the affluent parts of society. She began to organize day camps. These were opportunities for them to get out of town and function in groups of their own.

"These things didn't appear in the newspaper," according to Redfern. "They weren't intended to be in the newspaper."

Mrs. Keefe is also a charter member of the Friends of the Library, was president of the Ladies' Association and active in the Lawyers' Wives.

"And, you might say, she single-handedly organized Las Manos. That was in the early days of the Museum (of the Southwest). It was not too well known and was struggling. She was the first president (of Las Manos) and then she chaired the shop and made sure it was perking.

"She was a great person in the organization of that museum," ended Redfern.

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A court appearance is scheduled for next week for a Massachusetts teen-ager accused of attempting to hijack an airliner here Nov. 24.

Gerald James "Skipper" Hill, 18, received a psychiatric evaluation during the past three months.

Hill, of Chester, Mass., was overpowered by FBI agents at El Paso International Airport after an American Airlines jetliner was commandeered.

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — "They've taken enough from me. They'll take my life anyway," said Julie Van Orden, now charged with murder in connection with the slaying of former Mayor Russell Lloyd.

An April 7 arraignment date was set for the 35-year-old commercial artist by Vanderburgh Circuit Court Judge William Miller. In a brief but emotional court proceeding Tuesday, Judge William H. Miller also appointed a lawyer for Ms. Van Orden.

In a nearly inaudible whisper, she told Miller she couldn't afford to hire a lawyer. But minutes later, when he asked about her house and property, valued at $15,000, she raised her voice in anger.

"They've taken enough from me. They'll take my life anyway," she said. "Leave my house alone. Let my mom have that."

Miller appointed Charles Berger to serve as Ms. Van Orden's lawyer. Whether the court will attach her property to pay the legal fees "is a question for the county attorney to decide," Miller said.

Prior to Tuesday's court proceeding, Vanderburgh County Prosecutor Jeffrey Lantz revised the charge against Ms. Van Orden from attempted murder to murder.

He said there was "no way" he could seek the death penalty in the case, adding that "if I could I would, because I think that's how the public feels."

But under Indiana law, he said, prosecutors must prove existence of one of nine aggravating circumstances before the death penalty can be sought. In this case, none of the circumstances applies, Lantz said.

"I cannot seek the death sentence if it does not comply with the statute. But I personally do not agree with the law," he said.

He said the maximum penalty the state can seek in the case is 60 years imprisonment.

Federal crime coverage opposed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A state insurance regulator says the State Insurance Board's integrity has been unfairly questioned by suggestions that Texas needs federal crime insurance.

Bill Harding, the board's deputy assistant administrator, said in a bluntly worded letter to Federal Insurance Administrator Gloria Jimenez that Texans already can get burglary and theft coverage at rates justified by experience.

Harding concluded that "the federal crime (insurance) program is not needed in Texas at this time."

Ms. Jimenez has the power to offer the tax-subsidized coverage to homeowners and businesses in what she deems to be "high crime areas" of Texas.

She sought comments from state officials before taking action and said in a letter that mayors of Dallas, Port Arthur and San Antonio had requested the coverage for their cities.

The Houston City Council recently endorsed the federal coverage in a resolution saying Houstonians cannot get burglary and theft coverage at "reasonable rates."

Harding told Ms. Jimenez burglary and theft coverage is available through homeowners and multi-peril business packages as well as in separate policies.

"The homeowners and multi-peril policies are uniform policies prescribed by the State Board of Insurance, and rates are set by the board only after a public hearing at which the experience of Texas — and Texas alone — is considered," Harding said.

"Implications that those policies and rates are not affordable are an affront to the integrity and to the professional capabilities of the three board members," he added.

Harding asserted the board's staff had contacted Texans whom Ms. Jimenez said had complained they could not obtain burglary and theft coverage.

"The lack of response would seem to indicate there is little evidence of their inability to secure the desired insurance," Harding said.

He also questioned the hiring of a public relations firm to promote federal crime insurance if there was a legitimate demand for it.

Inflation, shrinking funds hurting junior colleges

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Several junior college presidents from across the state, including Dr. Al G. Langford of Midland College, Tuesday told the Select Committee on Junior College Funding that inflation and shrinking state funds are hurting their institutions.

Langford, a member of the committee, said appropriations from the last legislative sessions have caused junior colleges to lose ground to inflation.

Langford said he sees nothing but a downhill course for junior colleges if actual inflation rates are not taken into account in the state's funding formulas.

Marvin Baker, president of South Plains Junior College and a committee member, said rising utility, maintenance, repair and other costs have hurt junior colleges' ability to use local funds for teacher salaries and new programs.

Langford, Baker and Jerome Wayland, president of the colleges in the San Antonio Community College District, requested that representatives of junior college administrations and faculty and the college coordinating board be asked to testify before the committee.

State Rep. Jerry "Nub" Donaldson,

Gatesville, said the junior colleges may not receive the increased funding they want because of the cut in surplus state funds.

"This study has to be looked at in the concept of realities the Legislature has to look at during the next session," Donaldson said. "They (the Legislature) aren't going to have a $3 billion surplus in January."

The legislators not only will be looking at funding but at programs, Donaldson said.

"We have to re-define the role of junior colleges just as we must re-define the role of senior colleges and universities," he said.

The Legislature will be looking to eliminate duplication of programs, Donaldson said.

Langford, however, said the Texas Education Agency has done a good job in the past of preventing duplication of vocational programs in junior colleges.

Rep. Ron Wilson of Houston, committee chairman, said Higher Education Commissioner Kenneth Ashworth would testify at the next hearing on the coordinating board's recommending funding formulas for the next biennium.

The committee may hold at least two future meetings on junior college campuses in Houston and other areas.

Petroleum Museum visits hurt last summer by fuel crunch

Homer Fort, director of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, told members of the Downtown Kiwanis Club at their regular Monday meeting of the effect of the fuel crunch on museum operations and visits. He also described plans for the new $1.3 million expansion of the museum, due to open in about a year.

Fort said that the museum had experienced a severe drop in visits during the past summer, as compared with previous years. This prompted the museum to remain open on Mondays which, according to Fort, resulted in a slight increase in total visits.

During the months of January and February of this year, visits were up 3.5 percent over 1979. Of the total of 48,000 visits per year, about 40 percent come from more than 100 miles away, he said.

The museum is hoping to be able to persuade more tour buses to include the museum on their cross-country tours, he added.

After showing slides of the architect's sketches of the new museum wing, Fort reminded the Kiwanians that May 18 is Museum Day, at which time free rides will be given on a restored antique truck now owned by the museum.

Kennedy finally gets voting on the issues

NEW YORK (AP) — Week after week, Democratic primary voters have agreed with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy on the issues, but voted for President Carter.

On Tuesday in New York and Connecticut, that paradox ended and Kennedy cashed in, Associated Press-NBC News polls of Democratic voters say.

In both states, voters said they agreed with Kennedy's policies, not with Carter's. And they said they trusted Kennedy enough to believe he would do what he says — and thus they voted for him.

Thus, in one sense, Kennedy finally got the test he had asked for repeatedly in the past weeks — a vote on the issues.

On the Republican side in Connecticut, George Bush won his third primary by hitting Ronald Reagan where he was not thought vulnerable. Bush split both the conservative voters and the rock-solid GOP rank-and-file with the former California governor.

Throughout the primary season, Democratic voters have said they agreed with Kennedy, not Carter, on key issues. Nonetheless, they provided Carter with a long string of primary victories.

Tuesday that changed and Kennedy broke the string.

In New York, Democratic voters favored wage and price controls by a 56-24 margin, the AP-NBC News poll of 2,189 Democratic voters showed. And among those who favored controls, Kennedy won votes by a 66-32 edge over Carter. Those who opposed controls split their vote.

In Connecticut, where voters backed a moratorium on nuclear power plant construction 55-32, Kennedy, who has said he favors an end to nuclear power plant construction, won the backers of a building halt by 51-40 and again split the opponents with the president, according to the AP-NBC News poll of 1,497 Democratic voters in that state.

Another key to the Kennedy victory in New York was the overwhelming backing of Jewish Democrats. Kennedy took the Jewish vote, which was 38 percent of the Democrats, by a 79 to 19 margin.

This can be traced in large part to displeasure over the Carter administration's Middle East policy, particularly its recent vote in the United Nations against Israeli settlements on the West Bank and its subsequent repudiation of the vote.

About 41 percent of the Democratic voters gave the Carter administration good marks for its Middle East policy, while 55 percent gave it low marks. The rest were undecided. Jewish voters in particular were unhappy with the policies, with 37 percent giving it high ratings and 62 percent low marks.

The reason voters pulled the lever for Kennedy was that — this time — the Massachusetts senator, not the president, was the candidate they trusted.

In Connecticut, 45 percent said they trusted Kennedy a lot while only 37 percent said the same about Carter.

In New York, the high trust figure for Kennedy was 41 percent, versus 30 percent for the president.

And those who trusted Kennedy voted for him overwhelmingly.

By contrast, in last week's Illinois primary, only 32 percent of the Democratic voters said they trusted Kennedy a lot, while 56 percent had a lot of faith in Carter.

On the Republican side in Connecticut, Bush defeated Reagan by attacking what has been the tempered steel of his support — the GOP rank-and-file. Among the voters in the GOP primary who said they were Republicans, Bush got 41 percent to Reagan's 39 percent.

Bush did almost as well among conservative voters. Reagan took 45 percent of the vote of those who said they are conservatives, but Bush got 40 percent.

That was Reagan's worst showing in six primaries this year, except for Massachusetts where he finished third.

The AP-NBC News poll results can vary from the opinions of all voters in these states because of chance variations in the sample.

For polls based on more than 2,000 interviews, the results should vary no more than 3 percentage points either way simply because of sampling error. That is, if one could have talked to all those who voted in the New York Democratic primary, there is only one chance in 20 that they would vary from the findings of this poll by more than 3 percentage points.

For polls based on more than 1,400 interviews, like the two Connecticut polls, the figure is 4 percentage points. Of course, the result could differ from other polls for a number of other reasons. Differences in the exact wording of questions, the timing of the interviews and how the interviews were conducted could also cause variations.

AP-NBC poll taken outside precincts

NEW YORK (AP) — Interviews with more than 5,000 voters in Connecticut and New York were the basis for the Associated Press-NBC News poll on the states' presidential primaries.

The interviews were conducted in person Tuesday outside 100 precincts across Connecticut and 75 precincts in New York.

The precincts were chosen in a random manner that assured each voter in each state a roughly equal chance of being selected. A pre-set pattern of interviewing was followed in each precinct to minimize interview bias.

The Connecticut results are based on interviews with 1,497 Democratic voters and 1,449 Republican voters. The New York results are based on interviews with 2,189 Democratic voters.

As with all sample surveys, the results of the AP-NBC News polls can vary from the opinions of all those who voted on Tuesday because of chance variations in the sample.

For polls with more than 2,100 interviews, the results should vary no more than 3 percentage points either way because of sampling error. That is, if one could have talked to all the Democratic voters in New York on Tuesday, there is only one chance in 20 that the results would vary from the findings of this poll by more than 3 percentage points.

The figure for the Connecticut polls is 4 percentage points. Of course, the results could differ from other polls for a number of other reasons. Differences in the exact wording of the questions, the timing of the interviews and how the interviews were conducted could also cause variations.

Here are some of the questions asked on the AP-NBC News poll on Tuesday:

1. Do you favor or oppose mandatory wage and price controls?
2. How would you rate the job the United States government has done in the Middle East peace negotiations?
3. How much of the time do you think you can trust Jimmy Carter to do what is right?
4. How much of the time do you think you can trust Edward M. Kennedy to do what is right?
5. Do you agree or disagree with the following statement: "No more nuclear power plants should be built in this country until questions about safety are resolved, even though some say this will mean energy shortages within 10 years?"
6. As of today in politics, do you consider yourself a strong Republican, a weak Republican, an independent or a Democrat?
7. As of today in politics, do you consider yourself very liberal, somewhat liberal, moderate, somewhat conservative or very conservative?

Defeats catch Carter campaign by surprise

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's primary election defeats in New York and Connecticut caught the White House by surprise but were dismissed by Carter's campaign chief as "only a dip in the road" toward the Democratic Party nomination.

Robert Strauss, chairman of the Carter-Mondale Presidential Committee, predicted Carter will win next Tuesday's primaries in Wisconsin and Kansas.

"Put a smile on your faces," Strauss exhorted the president's glum supporters in New York. "When you lose, lose with class."

Speaking from the president at the White House, press secretary Jody Powell publicly congratulated Kennedy.

Powell said the electoral losses were unlikely to change Carter's stay-at-home campaign policy while U.S. hostages are being held in Iran. "The president's decision does not change," the spokesman said flatly. While the victories fueled Ken-neddy's sagging campaign and sparked his determination to remain in the race, Powell insisted the Massachusetts Democrat still faces an uphill journey to wrest the nomination from the incumbent.

Powell attributed Carter's losses partially to his program to balance the budget and to the errant U.N. vote condemning Israeli settlements in occupied Arab lands.

And he attributed the losses in part to bad luck, noting the voter turnout was light and that "everything that could, went wrong and it went wrong probably twice."

Kennedy defeated Carter by a 59 percent to 41 percent margin in New York and by a 47 percent to 41 percent margin in Connecticut.

The president had scheduled no public activities Tuesday, but held an evening economic briefing for several members of Congress. Afterwards, he telephoned his campaign coordinators in New York and Connecticut and then went to bed.

Strategy worked, says Bush

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — George Bush says that his newly acquired strategy of focusing only on issues brought him victory in Connecticut and "if it made a difference there, it will make a difference here" in Wisconsin.

But his campaign manager, Jim Baker, was not nearly as confident after Bush's primary victory over Ronald Reagan on Tuesday in Connecticut, one of the three states Bush calls home.

Baker gave reporters a list of states in which he expects Bush to have reasonably good prospects and Wisconsin was not among them.

But Baker hastened to add: "Wisconsin is looking better tonight than it did yesterday."

Bush will concentrate heavily on campaigning for Wisconsin's primary next Tuesday, just as he did in Connecticut. On his schedule today were receptions in Kenosha and Racine, a speech in Waukesha and walking tour of a restoration area in Milwaukee.

In a Milwaukee Journal poll last Sunday, Bush came in third among all Republicans and all voters asked to name who they'd most like to see as the GOP nominee. In both cases former President Gerald Ford was first and Reagan was second.

On Tuesday, Bush defeated Reagan in the Connecticut primary 39 percent to 34 percent, with Rep. John Anderson of Illinois getting 22 percent. But he lost to Reagan in New York in a primary in which there were delegate races but no popular vote. Reagan won 73 delegates and Bush six. Thirty-eight were uncommitted. Bush glossed over New York when he was asked about his showing in the two states Tuesday, but Baker said that with so many uncommitted delegates in the state, he expected many to swing to the Bush camp as the candidate gained future victories.

Bush had called Connecticut home because he was raised there. Earlier he'd pictured himself as a native of Massachusetts, where he was born. He lost there.

Bush has worked in Texas and twice was elected from there to Congress. Texas holds its primary May 3.

Baker listed Texas, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Michigan, Ohio and New Jersey — five of the biggest delegate states — as being good hunting grounds for Bush. For the last two weeks, Bush has made it a practice not to talk campaign strategy and his own "momentum."

He told reporters Tuesday night that he is pleased about the results but that Baker would have to speak for him in terms of what it means. "I'm really not good enough to figure that out," he said when reporters pressed him for an assessment for his campaign. "I'm pleased that it worked out this way."

The candidate obviously was so overjoyed that at first he appeared not to know that he was in Wisconsin.

"What this does, as I see it," he said of his victory, "is to give me an opportunity to come into Illinois to keep focusing ..."

Bush caught himself in the reference to last week's Illinois primary, changed the state to Wisconsin, and said: "You can tell I'm a little bit groggy after this one."

Reagan dismisses loss to Bush in Connecticut

WAUSAU, Wis. (AP) — Ronald Reagan, ready to tackle Wisconsin today, is bragging of victory in one primary and dismissing defeat in another.

"I'm delighted," Reagan said of his success in New York's Republican presidential primary Tuesday.

But he added, on his loss to George Bush in the former U.N. ambassador's boyhood hometown of Connecticut:

"Victory was not something we exactly lusted for or thought was in the cards, it being George's territory."

The former California governor flew to Wisconsin late Tuesday to concentrate on the primary there next week. Today he is traveling by chartered bus across the state whose Republicans will choose 34 national convention delegates in next Tuesday's primary.

After picking up an endorsement from former rival John Connally in Longview, Texas, Reagan boarded a chartered jet that cabin attendants had decorated with red, white, blue and orange crepe streamers and balloons and party hats.

When the candidate first saw the party decorations, he exclaimed, "Who's celebrating what?"

But he was more certain of what he wanted to celebrate as he arrived in Mosinee, near Wausau, shortly before midnight CST Tuesday.

He referred to the 73 delegates he'd won in New York as "a big win for a candidate from far out there in the West" and said the 14 he gained in Connecticut "are gravy."

Reagan lost to Bush in Connecticut by a margin of 39 percent to 34 percent. That gave Bush 15 Connecticut delegates and he won six in New York, where the voting was for would-be delegates only — not identified with presidential hopefuls — meaning there was no popular vote count. Thirty-eight delegates were uncommitted.

At his airport news conference, Reagan pointed out that he won delegates in Bridgeport, Conn., a blue-collar community, and said, "That's significant."

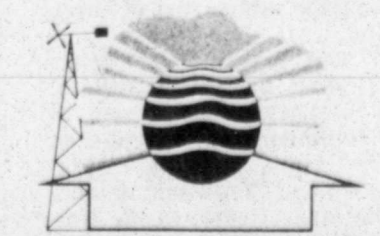

Asked how he expected to do in Wisconsin, he said: "I don't know. Maybe I'll know more tomorrow."

Reagan refused to claim ultimate victory in the Republican race, stating "I'm not going to say the nomination's sewed up."

But in introducing Reagan at a meeting of Texas Republicans earlier in the day, Connally was less reticent. "Governor Reagan is going to be the nominee without any doubt," he said.

Anderson looks to Wisconsin vote

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Rep. John Anderson is refusing to dwell on his third-place finish in Connecticut's, choosing instead to emphasize the approaching Republican presidential primary in Wisconsin.

"I think to get almost a quarter of the votes when you really expended minimal, minimal resources is a tribute to the effectiveness" of supporters in the state," Anderson told news reporters here late Tuesday.

The veteran Illinois congressman is concentrating most of his energy on Wisconsin, where he is dueling California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. for independent and crossover Democratic votes in next Tuesday's primary.

Anderson spoke at a rally as returns were being tabulated in New York and Connecticut. At a news conference, he was asked if he were disappointed at having trailed both George Bush and Ronald Reagan in the GOP balloting.

"Not at all," the congressman retorted. "We spent virtually only two days (in Connecticut); we spent only one-fifth (of the time) of the winner, and we came to this state of Wisconsin almost immediately after the Illinois primary."

Anderson garnered approximately 22 percent of the popular vote in Connecticut, picking up six delegates along the way.

While attacking Carter administration domestic and foreign policies during his Wisconsin campaign blitz, Anderson has aimed much of his fire at Brown on the theory that he and Brown are competing for moderate and liberal voters in the dairy-producing state.

In Wisconsin's open primary, a voter is allowed to vote for either party's candidates regardless of that person's party registration.

Brown, equally aware of the competition for crossover votes, had said Monday that a vote for Anderson is wasted because he is entered in too few GOP primaries to be able to win the GOP nomination.

Anderson replied Tuesday: "Does anyone really believe that Jerry Brown is a serious contender to win the Democratic nomination?"

Budgetary flim-flam

The Democratic leadership in Congress is now so eager to balance the budget that it announced proposed spending cuts without waiting for President Carter to propose his own.

Yet many economists worried about inflation and high interest rates are not as thrilled as one might expect. Why aren't they, when putting an end to deficit spending in Washington has been cited as priority No. 1 for relieving our economic crisis?

The answer lies in the size of the budget that the President and Congress are proposing to balance, the way it is likely to be balanced, and federal fiscal policies not connected with a balanced budget which no one in the government is proposing to change.

In announcing his new anti-inflation plan March 14, Mr. Carter said he did not recommend a balanced budget in January because inflation and high interest rates did not look so scary then. What he didn't point out is that the government's own estimates of revenue and spending for 1980 and 1981 fiscal years also changed between January and March. Inflation is making a balanced budget a more achievable goal.

In January the administration was looking at a 1981 budget of $616 billion with only $600 billion in prospective revenue to cover it. But inflation, for all its evils, is sweet music to the Internal Revenue Service. It puffs up tax collections faster than various spending programs put new demands on the federal budget.

The March budget revisions show revenue reaching $615 billion in 1981 while outlays would reach $626 billion. So what the President and Congress are talking about is balancing a budget that had already been revised upward by some $600 billion. The cuts would leave federal spending at approximately the same level the President proposed in January.

This gives a tone of budgetary flim-flam to what is going on in Washington. Even if Congress succeeds in balancing the budget for 1981, it will be increasing federal spending by the same amount Mr. Carter envisioned before he decided that economic conditions demanded "sacrifice" and "discipline" by the government.

So what is being achieved? Even if the government does not have to borrow money to finance a budget deficit, it will be the author of a $60.7 billion demand for new credit in 1981. That is the amount in off-budget loan commitments and loan guarantees to be undertaken by various federal agencies offering "credit assistance" to farmers, builders and the like. Neither the President nor Congress has proposed cutbacks in these programs which are working against the Federal Reserve policy to restrain money growth with high interest rates.

The reason that economists are not applauding the President and Congress with more enthusiasm is that a commitment to balancing a budget of some $615 billion — a $47 billion increase over spending this year — is not a commitment to a new fiscal policy. A new fiscal policy would entail revisions in government entitlement programs to slow the momentum for growth in federal spending. It would permit tax cuts to stimulate savings and investment. It would cut back on off-budget credit programs to put the government in harness with the anti-inflationary monetary policies of the Federal Reserve.

Indeed, that would amount to an anti-inflation program worthy of the rhetoric we heard from Mr. Carter on March 14.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, March 26, the 86th day of 1980. There are 280 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On March 26, 1953, Dr. Jonas Salk announced discovery of a new vaccine for polio.

On this date: In 1847, Beethoven died. In 1913, more than 1,400 people died in floods in Ohio, Indiana and Texas. In 1975, the South Vietnamese government announced the arrest of several people for plotting to overthrow President Nguyen Van Thieu.

In 1976, the U.S. and Turkey agreed on a four-year accord under which American military installations would reopen in Turkey in exchange for economic aid.

Ten years ago, American air attaché Donald Crowley was released in the Dominican Republic two days after he was kidnapped.

Five years ago, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger warned of a great danger in the Middle East because of his failure to achieve an Egyptian-Israeli peace agreement.

Are college campuses really as quiet as they seem?

JACKSON, Mich. — To hear college editors tell it, campuses aren't as quiet these days as proclaimed by pundits and other psyche probers. But neither are they alive with demonstrations nor suffering the violence which often raged across academic greenways in the Sixties.

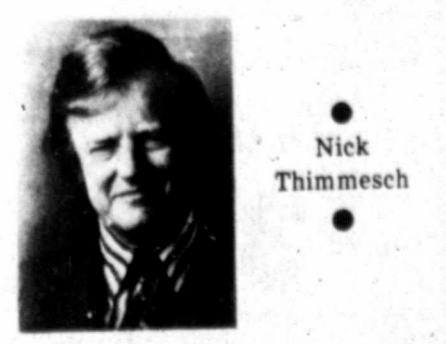

Instead of the great numbers of students gone wild over the Vietnam War, and any symbol of authority (sometimes because of peer pressure), today there are small knots of True Believers, activists against nuclear power or the draft, or on behalf of feminism and gay rights.

The only issue on which virtually all students here will muster — and agree on — is the new state law forbidding sale or serving of alcoholic beverages to anyone under 21.

Evidently, like the Prohibition law of 50 years ago, Michigan's effort to thwart drinking by the under-21 set is a failure on campuses. My best spies disclose that any college student can get what beer, wine or otherwise he or she wants, and besides, if we're old enough to fight and die, why can't we drink?

Which brings up the draft. "When it was in the news," says Mike Quinn of the University of Michigan at Flint, "people got worked up about it. Now, nobody takes it seriously." Feminism, liberal politics, environmentalism, even anti-nuke protesting, well, their dedicated organizers lament that they can't get the people out.

"It's so frustrating that we can only get small elements interested, like six people for Kennedy," says Ms. Pat Bridges of William James College. A precocious activist in the Sixties, she sees all manner of hot issues today, but not enough troops to push them. "Too many students are self-centered and career-oriented," she complains.

Still, as Janice Baron of Ferris State College observed, anti-nuke is the No. 1 issue on campuses and has the potential to attract a considerable student force.

Mindful of this, and also genuinely interested in what students are thinking, Consumers Power Co. held its annual campus media seminar here last week for Michigan's college editors. Now this utility is a pariah to some activists because it favors nuclear power plants in the energy mix, is large and supplies gas and electricity to much of Michigan — all mortal sins.

But the enlightened management is convinced that it is best to invite these young editors to hear its side of the story on energy supply, supplementary sources (solar, wind, tidal, wood), nuclear, and what rates and regulations are about. The seminar is capped by a press conference in which the editors have at Consumers' president, J.D. Selby, an executive seasoned enough to withstand such earnest, spirited probing.

The utility's executives are kept advised through memos and clippings about what's happening on Michigan's many campuses. College papers are eagerly anticipating the anti-Big Business Day, Ralph Nader, Barry Commoner & Co. will stage next month and will also relish commemorating the anniversary of Three Mile Island.

"Nuke" and Big Business issues are not ignored by college editors. There is an unrelenting stream of negative comment and coverage on the "nuke" issue, and the Fonda-Hayden gospel of "economic democracy" gets lavish praise in the University of Michigan Daily.

But that guru for the druggies, Timothy Leary, got raked over pretty good in the Michigan State University News. Mary Kinney wrote that Leary's recent appearance there, "with its naive rambling mutterings," proved "that our love affair with the Sixties is merely infatuation — a desperate, sorry identification with lives that were purposeful and altruistic."

Leary's show, she wrote, consisted of "incoherent ranting about the evils of the establishment." When Leary derided religion as "a crutch," someone in the audience cried out, "like drugs." Later, another voice shouted, "Timothy Leary's dead," and Kinney concluded, "It was the most significant thing said all evening."

However satisfying this news, the executives must still ponder what the next generation's notions on our economy and energy are. In a lengthy Q&A session I was privileged to conduct, students didn't ask about either, but about the media and politics.

They wondered if absentee group owners dictated editorial policy to local editors, and if corporations tell editors what to print (rarely, if ever, nowadays, I replied). They asked if the press wasn't too influential in primary elections and whether it made or broke candidates (to some degree, I said, waffling).

The student editors asked — just as their parents do — how Carter manages to hold his support, why his inconsistencies aren't spotlighted (they are), and what will it take to get Gerry Ford to run (the nomination handed to him). Is there any hope for the republic? Yes. Why do people stay in newspapering? Because it's better than selling shoes, and though we don't live so long, we have more fun. And one more word, Endit.

China now has ICBM that can reach U.S.

WASHINGTON — Red China has finally developed an intercontinental ballistic missile capable of hitting targets in the United States.

This alarming news means that a second communist power now has the ability to threaten America with nuclear devastation. Until now, U.S. defense policy has been based on the assumption that only the Soviet Union posed such a clear and present danger to the United States.

The reason this has not been reported before is that "official government sources" have consistently played down any suggestion that the mainland Chinese were a direct nuclear threat to this country. They have emphasized instead the bitter rivalry between the two communist superpowers, and cite our supposedly firm "friendship" with Red China.

But Asian experts in and out of the government caution that this friendly relationship is a tenuous thing at best, likely to evaporate at any time over issues like Korea or Taiwan, or simply because of the ideological differences that separate our two countries. They note that our strongest bond is mutual hostility toward the Soviets, and warn that the Red Chinese still regard the United States as their chief antagonist after the Russians.

From top-secret documents and other intelligence sources, my associate Dale Van Atta has pieced together the story of Red China's arrival at a position from which it can back up any future change of policy with nuclear ICBMs.

The huge Chinese missile is designated the CSS-X-4, and it has a range of 7,800 miles — more than enough to devastate U.S. population centers from bases on the mainland of China. The only other long-range missile the Chinese were known to have was the CSS-X-3, with a range of 3,600 miles — enough to hit Moscow, but nowhere near enough to make it to the U.S. mainland.

When Defense Secretary Harold Brown went to China last January, the "friendly" Chinese government didn't let him see the CSS-X-4. But he knew about it — and almost revealed that knowledge to reporters who accompanied him on the trip.

Asked if Red China was "anywhere near acquiring" an ICBM, Brown replied: "China's been developing ballistic missiles of increasing range, and I am sure they are working on intercontinental ones. In fact, I know they are. I don't want to say precisely how far they've gotten."

I can say how far they've gotten. The Chinese have been working on the CSS-X-4 for more than a decade. Its potential as an ICBM has been partly obscured by its dual role as a booster for space satellites.

In July 1975, when the Chinese successfully launched a satellite into orbit, a CIA "Top Secret Umbra" report called the shot "a significant step forward for the Chinese missile and space program," and added:

"The success with the CSS-X-4 suggests the Chinese have corrected major problems they have been having with this missile... The CSS-X-4, a large, two-stage missile, is China's only missile with true intercontinental range, and it is clearly the key to a Chinese ICBM force. It is not, howev-

ART BUCHWALD

Boys on second team ordered home by train

WASHINGTON — The boys on the bus is the title given to newspaper people who travel with presidential candidates. The phrase was made famous by Tim Crouse in his excellent book about the McGovern-Nixon campaign.

At the beginning of this year's presidential race, there were quite a few buses to choose from. The top political writers and TV commentators had first choice of which bus they wanted to take. Everyone wanted to get on John Connally's bus because it looked as if he had the best chance of beating Reagan for the Republican nomination. George Bush's bus was half-empty before Iowa, as was Howard Baker's. Bob Dole had a mini-bus, and if you wanted to follow John Anderson around, you could always get a ride with him in his Volkswagen.

On the Democratic side, there was a serious bus problem when Teddy Kennedy got into the race. The pundits had predicted that as soon as he challenged Carter, the nomination would be his for the asking. So all the media stars fought to get on Teddy's bus.

Before Iran, President Carter was supposed to campaign, and because he was President, as well as a candidate, two buses had been set aside for his press entourage. Then he decided to stay in the White House and send surrogates to campaign for him instead. Nobody fought to get on Fritz Mondale's bus so there were always plenty of seats.

Well, after Iowa, some of the newspapermen started to doubt that they were on the right bus. George Bush's win had given him "momentum." Connally didn't show any, so the big-shot scribes asked their editors for a transfer.

The second team reporters who had been assigned to Bush, because no one thought he had a chance, were angered that they were being kicked off the bus just when the Bush campaign was rolling.

But that's life, they were told, and they could either climb on Reagan's bus or get off the campaign trail.

While this was going on, Teddy stumbled in Iowa. But no one wanted to get off his bus because it was still a good story as to how badly he was doing. Besides, if they did get off, there was no other bus to get on except Jerry Brown's, and you never knew if you'd be sharing it with a rock band.

So everyone took their buses to New Hampshire. The people on Bush's bus were filled with optimism — mostly fed by George Bush. The ones who rode behind Reagan thought it was a hopeless cause.

Teddy's bus had standing room only because the big question in New Hampshire was, could a Kennedy win a primary in his own back yard?

A few more souls rode along with John Anderson, so he had to replace his Volkswagen with a van.

Well, much to everyone's surprise, Reagan clobbered Bush in New Hampshire, and every by-line reporter piled out of Bush's bus, and demanded a seat on Reagan's.

Once again the second team reporters protested, but to no avail. They were told to get on Anderson's bus. Since Anderson didn't have a bus they had to hire their own to follow him.

But after Massachusetts, John Anderson suddenly started catching on with the public. Immediately, many of the top correspondents on Teddy's bus said they wanted to get off and ride with the congressman.

Once again the second team reporters were told that the story was too big for them and they should take another bus. With bitterness some hailed Howard Baker's bus, and a few thought maybe Connally's bus might be worth a ride in South Carolina.

But it was too late. Both Connally and Baker had run out of gas. So now for all intents and purposes there are three buses worth buying a ticket on — Ronald Reagan's, John Anderson's, and Carter's, if he ever takes it out of the White House garage.

You may be wondering what happened to all the second team reporters who kept being shunted from bus to bus, as the primary picture evolved. They have just been ordered by their editors to come home — by train.

Mark Russell says

Then there was that man in Texas, William James Rummel, who received a life sentence for charging $120.75 for fixing an air conditioner which he didn't fix. In that case, my plumber ought to get the chair.

The sentence was so heavy because the man had two previous convictions for bad checks amounting to $108.36. With such measly amounts, the charge should have been "conduct unbecoming a Texan."

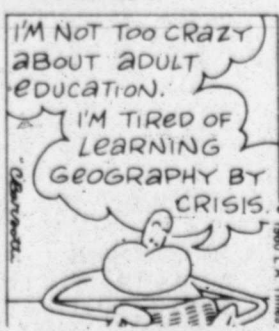

Rummel should have been given one of those alternate sentences such as hard labor in Washington so he could learn fraud at the federal level.

Rummel's total theft came to $328.11. In the government, the public is soaked for that amount every 30 seconds — for paper clips alone.

The Supreme Court upheld the life sentence. They ruled that until Rummel learns to fix an air conditioner, nobody in Texas would be safe on the streets.

A LETTER TO ALL MIDLANDERS

ERNEST ANGELO, JR.
Baltimore Posters
410 NORTH MAIN
MIDLAND, TEXAS 79701
(915) 684-4449

Dear Midland Resident:

On April 5, as the voters of Midland, you will choose between candidates for a number of important positions. One of these is the office of Mayor. I have known and worked with two of the candidates who are seeking the office, Thane Akins and Martin Allday.

After weeks of consideration I have concluded that, as your Mayor for the past eight years, and as a concerned citizen, I have an obligation to state my views on the matter.

Both men are honorable, dedicated and capable. However, differences exist that compel me to have a preference.

Thane has a great deal of experience in City government, beginning with his service on the Planning and Zoning Commission, where he was chairman. He is currently completing his second term on the City Council and has served as Mayor Pro Tem. He has been an excellent member, consistently well informed, open-minded and willing to make the tough decisions that are often necessary. By contrast, Martin's principal experience with City government has been in his capacity as a lawyer representing clients.

I believe it is critical for Midland to have as its chief elected official an individual who is by training and experience an authority on the oil and gas industry. It has been my personal experience that much can be gained for this industry, so vital to our community, through knowledgeable advocacy, particularly at State and National municipal meetings. Thane Akins is a petroleum engineer with many years experience. Martin Allday is a lawyer.

It is important that your mayor have an understanding of and be representative of the community as a whole. Thane's background, his business experience and his civic involvement have given him the ability to communicate with you regarding your needs and your desires for Midland in a way that I do not believe his opponent can match.

A study of the record, stands taken and votes cast, will demonstrate that Thane Akins is in the mainstream of Midland's thoughts. Thane is out front on the leading issues facing our City. He supports low taxes, responsible spending, industrial development, independence from Federal control and planned growth of the City. He has the leadership ability and the courage to represent your views for a better Midland.

I believe that Thane Akins is the man for Midland's future and I recommend him for your vote and support.

Boeing named missile contractor

SEATTLE (AP) — After eight years of development and three years of head-on competition, the Boeing Aerospace Co. has been named prime contractor for the air-launched cruise missile. The new weapons contract could be worth $2 billion for the area's economy.

"Everyone was very tense this morning," project manager Ray Utterstrom said after announcement of the award to the company that a decade ago slumped so badly a billboard asked, "Will the last one leaving Seattle please turn out the lights?"

The Air Force announced Tuesday that Boeing had defeated General Dynamics of St. Louis in the battle for the contract, worth $1 billion to $2 billion depending on how many missiles are built.

Air Force plans call for 3,400 of the computer-guided missiles, designed to be launched from B-52 bombers and to carry nuclear warheads as far as 1,500 miles at low altitudes to avoid radar.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson said the missile would be "a key element of our national defense posture."

In sending her congratulations, Gov. Dixy Lee Ray said 900 Boeing employees had been assigned to the project and that the company planned to add 600 for the project over the next year.

"That bodes well for this state's economy, not only from the standpoint of wages, but also in the indirect benefits that normally accrue in a major contract of this kind," she said.

Boeing's profit was set at 9 percent, but company officials said they couldn't determine the full economic impact without knowing how many of the $500,000 missiles Boeing would build. Air Force Secretary Hans Mark left open the possibility that other bids might be solicited for further production of the Boeing-designed weapon.

Utterstrom said the initial $141 million contract, to be signed in about three weeks, calls for Boeing to build 225 missiles this year, with an option for 480 in 1981 if Congress approves funding. Nearly 30 subcontractors are expected to participate.

The first missiles are to be ready by December 1982. Mark and Boeing officials said production would begin "almost immediately" in Seattle and later in a factory to be built in nearby Kent.

The initial $141 million represents Boeing's biggest defense contract since the 1970 award of a $170 million pact for the airborne warning and control system.

Even before the announcement, Boeing said soaring sales of commercial passenger jets would bring a 5,000-job increase this year in the Seattle area, where the company is the dominant employer with 78,000 persons on the payroll out of a population of 1.5 million.

MX missile program 'rushed,' Nevada's governor says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nevada Gov. Bob List told Congress today the proposed MX missile program is being rushed without either proper concern for the environment or full consideration of alternative defense systems.

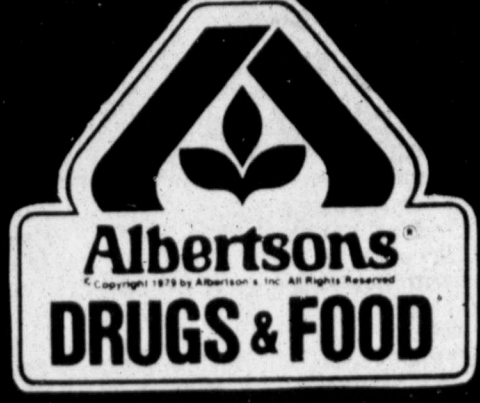

"The more I learn about MX, the more I wish the Pentagon would develop a better method to protect the nation," List said in remarks prepared for a House Appropriations subcommittee on military construction.

Air Force Undersecretary Antonia Chayse told the panel Tuesday that the most probable MX launch sites are in Nevada and Utah, which Defense Secretary Harold Brown characterized as "the best I've seen."

List said Utah Gov. Scott Matheson agreed with him that major decisions on the project should be delayed until "Congress has given careful, rational consideration to all reasonable alternatives."

The MX system is eyed dubiously by residents of Utah and Nevada, who note the project will require about 25,000 construction workers and could mean a permanent population gain of 13,000 people.

Threat of volcanic eruption won't move him

COUGAR, Wash. (AP) — While little earthquakes that may portend a volcano continue to roll in an almost-endless beat beneath Mount St. Helens, 83-year-old Harry Truman says he won't leave his mountain home of 54 years.

"I don't have any idea whether it will blow," said Truman. "But I don't believe it to the point that I'm going to pack up."

The U.S. Forest Service on Tuesday closed the mountain above the tree line and advised residents who live on and near the mountain to leave because of avalanches. Forest Service employees also evacuated.

But Truman, who lives on the mountain just below the timberline, said, "I've felt earthquakes in the past, but nothing lately."

The small but lively tremors have kept seismographs at the University of Washington in Seattle shaking for several days, and the intensity picked up Tuesday afternoon and through the night.

"They're happening so fast that we can't even count them," said Dave Endicott, a University of Washington spokesman.

Scientists have said the quakes may signal a volcanic eruption, which would be the first in the lower 48 states since one in California in 1914.

Most of the quakes Tuesday afternoon were about 3.0 on the Richter scale, with the largest at 4.5, said Endicott. The quakes are in a 5-mile radius of the 9,877-foot mountain.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. A quake of 3.5 on the Richter scale can cause slight damage, 4 moderate damage and 5 considerable damage, but there have been no reports of injuries or damage in the sparsely populated forestland below the dormant volcano.

Jim Unterwagner, a Gifford Pinchot National Forest spokesman, said the Forest Service asked "a few" persons to evacuate Monday night because the quakes have been triggering avalanches.

The evacuation request did not include the closest town to the mountain, Cougar, which is 12 miles to the southwest. The peak is in southwest Washington, 50 miles north-northeast of Portland, Ore.

Don Mullineaux of the U.S. Geologic Survey in Denver said residents in the mountain area reported the quakes seemed to be stronger on Tuesday.

"There is no evidence on the surface that this is volcanic," said Mullineaux. "The best guess is that it (an eruption) would not happen without some warning, such as venting."

A U.S. Forest Service plane that flew around the mountain Monday found no evidence of venting or lava flows.

The mountain, symmetrical and snow-capped, is often compared in beauty to Fujiyama in Japan. Layers of pumice from eruptions 3,500 and 450 years ago have been found 50 miles to the east.

U.S., church officials say Cuban exile may have assassinated archbishop

A large crowd congregates in front of the Church of the Sacred Heart in San Salvador, Tuesday, to see the body of Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero who was assassinated Monday as he celebrated Mass in a hospital chapel with approximately twenty guns in attendance. (AP Laserphoto)

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — U.S. and church officials say a right-wing Cuban exile may have been the assassin of the Roman Catholic archbishop of San Salvador, Oscar Arnulfo Romero.

They said the assassin had to be a sharpshooter because he fired a single shot from about 100 feet away through the open door of the hospital chapel where the archbishop was preparing the sacraments on the altar for a Mass Monday night.

"It was no amateur who did this," said U.S. Ambassador Robert White. "Our conclusion is that it was someone who was an expert marksman."

"It was not done by our local murderers because they use 25 or 30-bullets from machine guns to kill their victims," said a church source.

White also told reporters that a government source informed him a week ago that "right-wing Cuban terrorists" were operating in El Salvador. He said the source told him "some of the bombings here have been accomplished with a degree of expertise that was not the kind of expertise found here. The source speculated and believed the evidence points to Cuban exiles."

First reports said that four gunmen entered the chapel and opened fire on the prelate. But church officials said Tuesday that the killer apparently got out of a car opposite the doors to the chapel, fired one shot and then was driven away before anyone got a close look at him. The officials said it was believed three other men were also in the car.

El Salvador's military-civilian junta put the armed forces on full alert Tuesday after a rash of pre-dawn bombings the morning after the slaying. No casualties were reported, and no further violence was reported during the day.

The country was in shock because of the murder of the 62-year-old archbishop, who had been an outspoken advocate of social reform and a critic of government repression and the violence by the left and right that has turned the tiny Central American country into a battleground.

Romero's body lay in a closed casket before the main altar of the Basilica of the Sacred Heart. About 3,000 persons jammed the cathedral for a memorial Mass, many weeping. At least 1,000 more stood outside because they couldn't get in.

The government, the armed forces and the Christian Democratic Party all placed full-page ads in local newspapers condemning the murder and expressing their "deep condolences" to the church. President Carter and Pope John Paul II were among the world leaders who condemned the killing.

Spokesmen for both left-wing and right-wing terrorist groups denied having any part in the killing.

There was no immediate indication how the assassination would affect the future of the beleaguered junta: It has been under fire from rightists who say its land redistribution and bank nationalization programs will lead to communism, and from leftists who say the reforms do not go far enough.

In his Sunday sermons, Archbishop Romero repeatedly had criticized the political violence that has killed more than 700 persons so far this year and often spoke out against military repression of the peasants and workers.

One informed source discounted any possibility that the archbishop was killed by the security forces, the traditional allies of the conservative landed oligarchy. But he conceded that the government, although led by two colonels who overthrew an ultra-right military regime last October, is not in full control of the military.

In Washington, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance called the murder "saddening and tragic" but said U.S. military and economic aid to El Salvador would continue.

Carter administration says Cuba aiding rebels

WASHINGTON (AP) — Carter administration officials say Cuba is helping supply men and weapons to communists and leftists trying to topple El Salvador's government.

"The Hondurans believe, and our intelligence agrees, that their territory is being used as a conduit for men and weapons into El Salvador by insurgents with Cuban support," Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense Franklin D. Kramer told a House subcommittee Tuesday.

"The Cubans are using the Honduran Communist Party to assist them in infiltration of men and materiel into El Salvador," his office said later when asked for elaboration.

Kramer said the arms and insurgents are being delivered across the north coast of Honduras and through mountains into El Salvador. He said there are reports of planes unloading men and weapons at haciendas in Honduras.

In public testimony before the House foreign operations appropriations subcommittee, Kramer and Deputy Assistant Secretary of State John A. Bushnell refused to give specifics on the Cuban support or the evidence of it.

Bushnell said U.S. officials don't know how much of the leftists' and communists' arms and men are being supplied with Cuba's help.

"The leftist groups in El Salvador run arms on the open market, some from the black market and I'm sure some from Cuba," Bushnell said in a brief interview. "To know the degree of (Cuban) support is very hard."

But he estimated that hundreds of leftists from Central American groups have been trained in Cuba.

The testimony in Washington on Cuban support for leftists came at the same time a U.S. official in San Salvador raised the possibility that a rightist Cuban exile might have assassinated Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero on Monday.

U.S. Ambassador Robert White told a news conference the archbishop was assassinated by an expert marksman. He said Salvadoran officials informed him several weeks ago that rightist Cuban exile terrorists were operating in the country.

And in Washington, Bushnell told the House subcommittee the current violence in El Salvador is being caused by both leftist and rightist groups.

Bushnell said the rightist groups often use assassination. The leftist groups, he said, generally provoke violent confrontations with officials.

"The assumption is that the assassins are hired by the rich, the property owners," he said in the interview.

He said a smaller amount of violence is caused by "people who are part of the government." He did not elaborate.

Kramer said Cuban President Fidel Castro has personally "been in touch" with some of the leftist groups trying to overthrow governments in Central America, but did not specify the countries.

"The Hondurans are concerned that should El Salvador fall to the leftist forces, the Hondurans will be one of the next targets," he said.

Hopes increasing for release of remaining 29 hostages

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — With more negotiations scheduled today and three more hostages freed, there were increasing hopes of improved prospects for the release of the remaining 29 captives in the Dominican Republic's Embassy. But a Foreign Ministry official said the end of the siege was not yet in sight.

The feeling of optimism was enhanced by the smiles and handshakes that followed the last negotiating session Monday between representatives of the government and the guerrillas who took over the embassy four weeks ago. That atmosphere was in marked contrast to the apparent hostility after earlier meetings.

The guerrillas waited nearly 24 hours and released three Colombians, none of them diplomats or officials, Tuesday afternoon. The 29 hostages still held include U.S. Ambassador Diego Asencio and 18 other foreign diplomats.

The three freed men, smiling but looking tired, had been guests at the reception that was under way when the terrorists of the M-19 organization invaded the embassy on Feb. 27.

The guerrillas have now released a total of 26 hostages.

The Foreign Ministry source said the masked woman who represents the guerrillas in the negotiations agreed Monday for the first time to consider the government's offer of safe passage for the guerrillas to Cuba or Panama in exchange for the hostages' freedom. But he said she repeated the key guerrilla demand that 28 imprisoned leftists be freed.

The government did not budge from its position that there are no political prisoners in Colombia and that releasing any prisoners would be unconstitutional, the source said.

Eight Afghan soccer players defect, say they hate Soviets

LONDON (AP) — Most of Afghanistan's national soccer team defected to West Germany, citing hatred of the Soviet occupation army in their homeland, British newspaper and radio reports said today.

Seven of the team are at a Frankfurt hotel after fleeing their country by dressing as tribesmen and crossing the border into Pakistan, the British Broadcasting Corp. reported.

An eighth defector is still in Pakistan, the report said. The London Guardian newspaper reported that the team members are seeking political asylum in West Germany.

A spokesman for the West German Interior Ministry in Bonn said three members of the team arrived in the country about a week ago but have not yet formally asked for political asylum.

The British reports said the team arrived in West Germany March 19 and is being accommodated at the expense of German welfare authorities.

Team members, including Captain Mohammad Saber Rohparwar, were quoted as saying they left because, like 99 percent of the Afghan population, they dislike the Russians.

They planned the defection after being invited to play a series of "friendly" games in the Soviet Union, they said.

'Give a day to elderly'

Christmas in April volunteers to meet

By PATSY GORDON
Staff Writer

The dream of most Americans is home ownership.

Two Midland women who live on the south side of the oil-rich Tall City own their homes, but they're not exactly what most people would call dream homes.

Ineare Neal, 402 S. Stonewall St., lives in a five-room house made of tin except for the patched holes in the walls and roof. Her brother patched the holes with wooden boards to make the home a bit more livable for his elderly sister after she moved in a year ago.

Previously, she had lived on the north side of the city in a comfortable home maintained by her daughter before her death. The daughter lived in Tucson, Ariz., but wanted her mother to live in the house to keep vandals away.

BUT MRS. NEAL couldn't keep up the rent payments after her daughter died, so she took what money she had and bought the house on Stonewall.

She suffers from diabetes, which required eye surgery a year ago, but does not complain. "I'm not in darkness. I can see daylight."

Her home has central heating, but she prefers gas "because it's cheaper." She has a space heater in the front room.

Thelma Hubbard, 802 S. Atlanta St., paid hard-earned money for a four-room house that is so full of air holes she can only live in the front room without being cold. She couldn't even do this until the Christmas in April surveyors recently did emergency work on the house after they found her wrapped up in a cardboard box outside her home, shivering in chilly winds in search of warmth from the sun.

THE 70-YEAR-OLD woman, recovering from recent surgery, lives day to day without running water, electricity or bathroom facilities. Her only light is a small kerosene lamp that sits on a table in the front room and she cooks all of her meals, except the one hot meal she gets five days a week from Casa de Amigos, on a small gas heater.

But the spry woman doesn't give in. She is enrolled in an arts and crafts class at Midland High School, and adds to her $119 social security check by collecting aluminum cans for recycling. Before her retirement, she worked for a Tall City junk yard.

Volunteer workers from Alamo Heights Baptist Church recently began their Christmas in April projects with Mrs. Neal's home.

According to Bobby Trimble, coordinator of CIA, workers will, over about a two-month period, "re-deck and completely re-roof the house, either replace or repair all windows, replace outside doors and door frames and put in screen doors, build a porch on the front and back and paint the outside."

ON THE INTERIOR, the workers will "tear out all the sheetrock, insulate and re-sheetrock, repair all plumbing, paint all walls and put covering on all floors," said Trimble.

The church's budget allows $9,000 for its eight Christmas in April projects undertaken this year.

Christmas in April is an all-volunteer program of Midlanders getting together to repair homes of the elderly or handicapped citizens where health is threatened or discomforts exist.

Mostly, basics such as repairing roofs, windows, doors to keep citizens warm and dry are undertaken. Sometimes installation of new plumbing or electrical systems is necessary.

The Human Relations Council, under the direction of Kimberly Modisett, helps coordinate the Christmas in April project, but no money contributed to the HRC by the city, college, schools, churches or private individuals, is used for CIA, whose overhead

Ineare Neal sits in a rocking chair outside her home at 402 S. Stonewall St. in anticipation of a new porch Christmas in April volunteer workers plan to costs amount to less than one percent.

A MEETING OF all volunteer workers in the city will be held Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Midland Room of The Midland National Bank. Mrs. Hubbard's home will be among the 75 homes listed for possible CIA help.

The Hubbard home will require a complete overhaul, including new roof, new windows or repairing of old ones, door frames, inside and outside painting, floor coverings, plumbing to bring water into the kitchen and bath and screen doors.

Trimble stresses that all interested persons not receiving prior notices are welcome to attend the Thursday meeting. "I would like to encourage all the people of Midland to get involved. Persons not physically able to work can donate money for food for the workers on their work day Saturday, April 26.

"Even though we've worked on over 300 homes in the past seven years, the needs are still there and will be as long as we have this type of housing for elderly people.

"Most of the elderly people prefer to live in their own home, in their own neighborhoods close their their church. If we can fix up these homes, they can live in this atmosphere," he added.

WHETHER OR NOT all 75 homes will be worked on depends on money collected and the number of Midlanders who volunteer their services.

All carpenters and plumbers are urged to either join a group or come to the meeting and "give a day to the elderly," said Trimble.

Just about anyone can do roofing or plumbing if they have a supervisor showing them what to do. Trimble pointed out: "This includes teachers, secretaries, doctors, lawyers, merchants, housewives, engineers, truck drivers, pipe draftsmen, electrical draftsmen, mechanics," and the list could go on.

More groups also are urged to get involved, but you don't have to belong to a church or civic organization to take a house, explained Trimble. "Two or three individuals can get together, or one individual can take part."

Tax preparation for singles to be discussed at PWP meet

Parents Without Partners, Tall City Chapter 32, will meet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday for a general meeting in the Community Room of Commercial Bank and Trust Co.

Mary Kay Cotton from the local Internal Revenue Service will present a program on tax preparation for single heads of household. The public is invited.

All races are urged to take part in the volunteer work, said Trimble.

Gulf Oil and Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. have taken houses to repair, said Trimble. Some office employees and City Council members will be working April 26.

He also stressed that all the money is raised locally. "No state, federal or United Way funds are used."

Trimble, an oil and gas scout with Northern Natural Gas Co., is an unpaid volunteer with Christmas in April, which began in 1973 at Park Center YMCA. At that time, 15 homes were repaired, with $3,500 as the budget. The 1980 budget is $30,000, but $9,000 will be set aside for interim jobs during the year.

For more information on Christmas in April or to contribute money call 684-5886 or write P.O. Box 2145, Midland, 79701.

DQs, Texas Shriners to help burned children

"Have a Treat! Help a Child!" will be the theme when nearly 500 Dairy Queen restaurants across Texas dedicate Saturday to helping severely burned children. Among the DQs participating will be five Chapman Fast Foods Dairy Queens in Midland.

This day is the one Gov. William P. Clements Jr. has proclaimed "Shriners Hospitals for Crippled Children Benefit Day" for 1980. More than 60,000 Shriners from the 13 Shrine Temples in Texas will be involved in the day's activities, an annual event for raising funds on behalf of the state's three Shriners Hospitals for Crippled Children.

To assist the Shriners in the fund-raising efforts Saturday, the local Dairy Queens and all other participating members of the Texas Dairy Queen Trade Association will donate their entire day's net profits to the benefit of the youngsters who receive free treatment at the Burns Institute of the Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children in Galveston.

The other two hospitals for crippled children include two orthopedic units in Houston and Dallas.

The Burns Institute was founded in 1963 and was established in its own permanent hospital building in 1966 in Galveston. This hospital was the first of three such Shriners hospitals in the United States. The other two Burns Institutes are in Boston, Mass., and Cincinnati, Ohio.

Since its inception, the Institute has treated more than 8,000 severely burned youngsters. In 1979 alone, the Institute treated approximately 400 severely burned children (with only one fatality).

The Shriners Burns Institute gives its treatment and care to all burned children of all races and creeds with absolutely no cost to patient or parent. The Burns Institute in Galveston is one of America's 21 Shriners Hospitals for Crippled Children. Eighteen of these are orthopedic units.

The Chapman Fast Foods organization has 46 Dairy Queens participating in the Saturday project, more than any other TDQTA member. Also, the project was originated and adopted when James L. Utley of Clyde, formerly of Midland, executive vice president and chief operating officer of two of the three Chapman Fast Foods Dairy Queen corporations, Dairy Queen of West Texas, Inc., and Dairy Queen of Taylor County, Inc., was president of the TDQTA during 1979-80.

He's a young college grad

WARREN, Mich. (AP) — At 17, Christ Xiromeritis is probably the youngest graduate they've ever had, say Macomb County Community College officials.

Xiromeritis, a high-school senior, holds a general business degree. He is not the youngest student in the college's history, however. His brother, Nick, 13, has been a student there since last year, when he was 12. Another brother, John, 14, is also a student.

Karl Wagner, dean of student services at the college's South Campus, says, "We don't recruit under-age students because we try not to compete against the local high schools. But they come to us (for admission) and as long as their schools don't object, we let them register for courses."

DEAR ABBY

Ruined mattress leaves Mom steamed

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Here's the situation: Last weekend my 12-year-old son, Danny, asked if he could invite his 13-year-old friend, Steve, to sleep over. Steve had just moved into the neighborhood and Danny was the only friend he had. I said yes.

When I went to make up the beds the next morning I found that Steve had wet the bed! I was really steamed because the mattress was ruined.

I told Danny about it, and he said that Steve never told him that he had a bed-wetting problem before he slept over, but the next morning when he discovered he had had an "accident," he begged Danny not to tell me or his mother about it.

What can I do, Abby? Should I tell Steve's mother (whom I haven't met) and hope she offers to buy me a new mattress?—STEAMED DOWN SOUTH.

DEAR STEAMED: I wouldn't. The poor kid probably has suffered enough humiliation as it is. But do tell Danny to tell Steve that since such an "accident" can happen, if he plans to sleep over anywhere, he should bring his own bedding, plus a rubber sheet.

DEAR ABBY: What is this world coming to? Yesterday I received a birth announcement, proudly announcing the birth of a baby girl. The mother is 21, the father is 40. He is married, but is separated from his wife of nearly 20 years! This man's wife and legitimate children live in the city and are well-known. To top it off, the proud parents signed themselves, "Gator Guy" and "Woolly Woman"—some clan, sect or gang name. We were really stunned. My question: Is a gift in order for an illegitimate child?—TOO OLD TO COPE.

DEAR T.O.T.C.: There are no "illegitimate children"—just illegitimate parents. Don't penalize an innocent child because of the circumstances of his birth.

DEAR ABBY: For quite some time I have wanted to ask your opinion regarding the practice of some people who turn their left hand backward in a so-called "friendly" handshake, rather than extend their right hand in the conventional manner.

I vaguely recall having read somewhere that this is a "token" handshake which says, "I don't care for you, but nevertheless here's my left hand to indicate that folks nearby that we know each other." (It's

I would prefer to be ignored rather than accept this fishy left-hand handshake. How do you feel about it?—RIGHT HAND, PLEASE.

DEAR RIGHT: On occasion I've been offered a left hand to shake and I shook it; I'm sure there were times when I have offered MY left hand, too. Why look for some hidden meaning? It simply could indicate that one's right hand is otherwise occupied, that the left hand is handier or the right hand is wearing a large ring which invariably cuts into the flesh when grasped too tightly. Or some reason other than a putdown.

Are there questions you can't ask your parents? Get Abby's new booklet: WHAT TEENAGERS OUGHT TO KNOW. Drugs, sex and alcohol are plainly discussed. Send $2 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby in care of this newspaper.

SORORITY NEWS

THETA DELTA OMEGA CHAPTER, ALPHA KAPPA ALPHA SORORITY

Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority will sponsor a free blood pressure clinic today from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Blackshear Junior High School in Odessa.

The public is invited to drop by for a free blood pressure check. Qualified nurses will be on hand to check blood pressure and to issue literature printed by the American Heart Association.

PRECEPTOR ALPHA OMEGA CHAPTER, BETA SIGMA PHI SORORITY

Lois Heath presented a cultural program from the book, "Reflections of Our Lives," at a meeting of the Preceptor Alpha Omega chapter, Beta Sigma Phi sorority.

The group met in the home of Birdie Lamkin. The fiftieth anniversary of the national sorority will be celebrated between April 27, 1980 and April 27, 1981. The international organization, whose headquarters are in Kansas City, Mo., has made plans to expand the recognition of the sorority throughout this time, beginning with "Beta Sigma Phi Sunday" to be observed April 27.

Jean Wilson has been selected as the coordinator between the chapter and the international office for the year.

Plans were finalized to entertain Xi Phi Kappa Chapter with a dinner and card party Thursday in the Flame Room of Pioneer Natural Gas Co. Jo Beverley, Marry Carrens, Wanda Cunningham and Lois Heath were appointed by Myrtle Russell, president, to serve as a committee for preparation of Founders' Day.

BETA DELTA CHAPTER, BSP

Beta Delta chapter of Beta Sigma Phi sorority met in the home of Gail Jones for a business meeting and election of officers.

New officers are JoAnn Cambron, president; Dove St. Peters, first vice president;

Rhonda Hunter, second vice president; Pat Cartmell, recording secretary; Betty Ruth McAnally, corresponding secretary; Geneen Lannom, treasurer, and Susan Farris, extension officer.

Girl of the Year, Friendliest and Pledge of the Year titles were also voted on and will be announced at Founder's Day April 26.

The social committee announced that a brunch will be held Saturday at the home of Susan Farris. The annual children's Easter Egg Hunt will be Sunday at Lancaster Park.

Anyone wishing to purchase tickets to the Country Western dance, sponsored by Beta Delta May 3 may contact any member of Beta Delta chapter or call Pat Cartmell at 694-1643.

This dance is a benefit for the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children.

Cathy Cartmell presented a program on "The Home." Birdie Lamkin won the hostess gift. The next meeting is April 1 in the home of JoAnn Cambron.

PHI MU FRATERNITY ALUMNAE

Salad luncheon and monthly meeting of Phi Mu Alumnae Association was held in the home of Mrs. John Smart, 3307 Ward.

The group participated in a brief ceremony honoring the 127th anniversary of the founding of Phi Mu fraternity. The organization began March 4, 1852.

Plans were made for an annual garage sale to be in May. Delegates were also elected for the national convention to be held in Indianapolis, Ind., in June.

Elected as new officers were Mrs. Steve Peterson, president; Diana McBride, vice president; Mrs. Jack Beshears, secretary; Cindy Fuller treasurer; Mrs. Charles Moore and Mrs. Tom Sorrells, publicity; Mrs. John Smart, social service; Mrs. Harve Mayfield, telephone; and Mrs. Joe Davis, Panhellenic representative.

Named as a new member was Mrs. Bud Blake who recently moved to Midland from Montgomery, Ala.

Next meeting is April 19 in the home of Mrs. Thomas Ingram. Phi Mu members new to the area can contact Mrs. Ingram at 694-5644 or Mrs. Steve Peterson at 683-8143.

Lively look for kitchen

Copley News Service

Q: If we put a floral patterned vinyl on the floor of the kitchen, does that pretty much eliminate putting a print wallpaper on the walls?

We're remodeling our kitchen and making plans on how we want to finish it. We like a rather traditional, old-world look but we don't want to create too busy a look.—T.P.

A: You can use a patterned floor and another pattern on the walls without an overwhelmingly busy look. It depends on the patterns you choose and whether they complement each other in color and basic design.

For example, you could put a provincial tile print in vinyl on the floor and use a medium check pattern on the walls with good results. Repeat basic colors that are in the floor on the wallpaper.

Usually kitchens are dominated by the amount of cupboards and cabinets in them, so small touches of wallpaper are lively and attractive.

Study examines lives of working mothers

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Young mothers in Eastern Europe enjoy better employment prospects than their counterparts in the West, but on the whole there is little effort by governments to enable women to carry out dual responsibilities at home and at work, says a report published by the International Labor Organization. Quoting from recent ILO studies, the report says women can work up to between 70 and 80 hours a week once they have completed their job and finished the so-called "second shift" of looking after the family. This amount of time, the report says, can bring about "a cumulative fatigue which can adversely affect their health and work performance." Although the ILO has adopted a series of conventions on women workers, including equal pay, the report says none of these will be of use "if large numbers of women have to give up their jobs or forego promotion because of their family responsibilities." The report adds that although child-care services have increased in most countries over the past 15 years, supply is still far short of demand. In some cases, it says, working mothers are forced to quit their jobs at the beginning of the school summer holidays and look for another in the fall. "As yet, few countries have made any systematic attempt to tackle this problem," it adds. Sometimes problems arise in the case of illness, the report states, with the child's being sent to the hospital when the mother is working, even though it might not really warrant hospital treatment. The report suggests that long-term leave to raise a child might be one way in which "a relaxation in the rigid arrangements of working life" can benefit workers with family responsibilities. This should apply to both sets of parents, says the report. The solution of part-time work, as practiced by some countries including Sweden, is not so attractive as it first seems, says the report. "Part-time work may pall in the face of losing social security benefits, particularly when weekly hours of work are reduced below the minimum prescribed for social security coverage," it says. The report notes that women with family responsibilities are particularly vulnerable to unemployment. ILO statistics, it adds, show that in Western industrialized states particularly, unemployment is high among women under 25 seeking their first job and those over 40 wishing to re-enter employment. In Eastern Europe, however, "women in all age brackets are apparently better off," says the report, adding that in developing states the chances of women to find or return to work are "extremely slim." Young mothers often have "only a vague notion of job requirements and possibilities," says the report, "not to mention training and their own qualifications."

Frederick's appeals to middle America

By STEPHANIE MANSFIELD
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — She is married with at least one child and has an income of about $20,000. She is in her 30s, rarely goes to the movies, watches more than eight hours of television a week, carries at least one major credit card and is politically conservative. There are thousands like her in the Maryland suburbs.

She is a Frederick's of Hollywood woman. "They giggle first, then they buy," said Frederick Mellinger, the purveyor of "passion fashions," the seller of soft-core seductiveness to suburban housewives who recently opened his fourth retail outlet in Maryland.

The company, which earned $25 million last year selling peek-a-boo undies, see-through peignoir and push-up bras, decided to take a survey of the average customers. What the survey revealed would surprise those who thought Frederick's of Hollywood was an X-rated mail order catalogue in a plain brown wrapper.

"We appeal to middle America," said Tricia McBride, supervisor of the Frederick's store in Landover, Md.

OF THE 120 FREDERICK'S of Hollywood outlets across the country, all but three are located in suburban shopping centers. The appeal is so strong in the suburbs of Washington that the firm is opening one in Forestville, Md., just down the road from Andrews Air Force Base.

"Maybe it's because there are more women than men in the Washington area," he said. "Certainly, we have a lot of customers in Maryland."

Frederick's opened its first Maryland outlet eight years ago in Columbia. In 1973, it branched out to the Landover Mall, then to Rosedale (on the outskirts of Baltimore) and now to Forestville. It is currently looking for the right spot in Northern Virginia.

"We have a lot of angry Virginians who have to drive over here," said McBride.

Take Mary Dallas, for example. She drove from Falls Church, Va., to Landover recently to plunk down $50 in cash for a slinky red disco dress and a black "push-up" bra. Wearing a fluffy brown wig, spidery eyelashes and a denim jacket with rhinestones spelling D-A-L-L-A-S, the 37-year-old said she stops at Frederick's because, "They got sexy clothes."

The average Frederick's customer, spends $45 at a time, the survey showed, and most likely will purchase a laced, padded push-up bra ($15) or a padded

"Fanny Former" girdle ($9.50) or nylon "Baby Doll" lingerie ($15). The "gag items," like Playboy Bunny costumes or heart-shaped G-strings, glittery pasties or "Frederick's Kissable Bust and Body Balm," are big sellers for holidays, like Valentine's Day, Christmas and Mother's Day.

"It's clean sexy," said saleswoman Barbara Wall. "It's not blatant. It's titillating, but not pornographic."

AT THE COLUMBIA MALL store, manager Diane Spano said housewives from Pennsylvania and West Virginia drive to the shop twice a year to stock up on items.

"It's more openly accepted now," she said. "People aren't embarrassed to buy something sexy like they were years ago. The image has changed. I think the demand is here for it."

She remembers the day a group of senior citizens wandered into the store. "One little white-haired old lady — she must have been in her 70s — said she had heard that if you don't have anything in the back, Frederick's will put it there," Spano said.

With her friends giggling, the woman tried on a padded girdle. "She loved it," Spano said. "She came out of the dressing room and said how one of the men at the senior citizen home would fall in love with her because she had a tush on her. The rest of the customers applauded."

Frederick's customers also include husbands, many of whom say the department store lingerie counters are too tame.

"I suppose it's that 'Total Woman' thing or something," said McBride. "They want their wives to be seductive."

SALESWOMAN HELEN MILLER recalled a middle-aged woman who frantically rushed into Frederick's one day, saying her marriage was on the rocks. "She bought all kinds of things," Miller said. "Pasties, a G-string, you name it, she bought it."

It may have worked, Miller said. The woman never came back.

"Oh God, we've received thousands of letters telling us how we've saved marriages," Frederick Mellinger said. "We feel we're performing a necessity, keeping the homes together."

Frederick's of Hollywood began in 1946 as Freddy's Fifth Avenue in New York, selling black lace underwear. Mellinger then moved to Los Angeles and went into the mail order business. By the early 1950s he had opened a few stores in the Hollywood area, selling mostly to entertainers and budding starlets. He became famous for lines like,

Schatzie Heeres examines a filmy undergarment at Frederick's of Hollywood in Landover, Md. All but three of Frederick's 120 outlets are in suburban shopping centers, and it's an especially big hit in Washington D.C. suburbs. (Washington Post Photo)

Orientation meeting set

Big Brothers-Big Sisters of Midland is conducting an orientation meeting to acquaint single parents of children between the ages of 6 and 14 with the benefits of having a big brother or big sister.

The meeting, to be held at 5:30 p.m. Thursday at 2101 W. Wall Ave., is also open to all persons interested in becoming volunteers.

For more information, call Julie Wolfe, executive director, at 683-4241.

They would also have contacts with little-known but viable sources of home financing funds.

The idea, of course, is to offer home buyers and sellers another professional service that will be genuinely helpful, and at the same time build business volume for the franchise membership.

Inquiries are invited, and may be answered in this column. Write: J.M. Woodard, Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper.

Q. What is a home buyers' Financial Counseling Center?

A. This is a new concept for helping families finance the purchase of a home, now being developed by several national real estate franchise organizations. The centers, located at strategic points throughout the country, would be staffed by persons with special knowledge and expertise in home financing. These loan offers before being carried away by the vision of "instant cash."

secured by a trust deed or mortgage on your property, you could conceivably lose your home if the loan is not repaid as stipulated in the contract.

ON THE POSITIVE SIDE, sometimes the need for money is urgent enough to justify these costs and risks. In such cases, it makes sense to use the equity in your home to make a loan possible.

The key point here is to learn and understand just what is involved in station for 67 years, disappeared six months ago.

When an article about the eagle appeared in a newspaper recently, however, the police department received a call from a man. The man said the eagle had apparently been blown off the pedestal. He found it in the street, he said, and picked it up and took it home.

The eagle, made of wood and coated with tin, is believed to be worth $5,000.

Temptation of instant money can be dangerous

By JAMES M. WOODARD
Copley News Service

I received a very official looking piece of mail the other day. It included what appeared at first glance to be a check, with the familiar "GE" (General Electric) seal in the upper-left corner.

It turned out to be a pitch to loan me money — up to $50,000 — with the equity in my home being used as security.

"By using the equity in your home you can help catch up with your bills," the attached circular stated. "You may borrow from $10,000 to $50,000 to use any way you want."

The offer (and mailing) was from General Electric Credit Corp. Financial Services.

AN INCREASING NUMBER of such offers are focusing on that beautiful and growing equity now held by America's home owners. Using the equity to generate "instant money" is a temptation many home owners can't resist — especially when bombarded by appealing ad offers.

Another example is an offer by a chain of real estate brokerage offices: "List your home with us and we'll give you a 'credit card' good for up to $50,000 in instant cash."

After the initial vision of easy dollars flowing into your pockets, you should think about the substantial costs and interest charges for these "instant money" loans. And it is usually secured by a second trust deed (or mortgage) on your home.

IN THE CASE OF THE GE offer, we discovered the escrow, title and appraisal fees added up to about $350. The interest charge is 16.25 percent.

In the case of the real estate broker's "credit card," there are also placement costs and a lesser interest rate. But the wrinkle here is that you must not only have listed your home with the broker, but also agree to buy your next home through the broker.

As with many other offers that appear to be "too good to be true" there are negative factors that should be borne in mind before signing on the dotted line.

With these types of loans, there are costs to be paid before you ever see the loan money. And often there are "points" to pay — percentage points of the loan amount that are subtracted from the total before you receive the loan dollars.

In some cases, accepting such an offer may lock you in to purchasing your next home through one particular broker.

And, since the loan is secured by a trust deed or mortgage on your property, you could conceivably lose your home if the loan is not repaid as stipulated in the contract.

The eagle, which had perched on a pedestal above the door of a fire station for 67 years, disappeared six months ago.

When an article about the eagle appeared in a newspaper recently, however, the police department received a call from a man. The man said the eagle had apparently been blown off the pedestal. He found it in the street, he said, and picked it up and took it home.

The eagle, made of wood and coated with tin, is believed to be worth $5,000.

Wood burning car makes journey

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ben Russell drove from Florida to Los Angeles in a car powered by burning wood.

"And that wasn't all we used," said Russell, president of the company that devised the method. "We burned vines, old shoes, even a dead squirrel. When we were finished with lunch at hamburger stands, we would throw in the wrappers."

What he created, he says, is a steel reactor which rolls on one wheel behind a station wagon. Through a heat process it breaks down the wood or whatever into charcoal, then pulls off the gas into the car engine.

Before embarking on the 2,700-mile journey with three workers from his Alabama company, Russell removed the auto's gas tank to provide storage space for 300 pounds of wood.

But whatever energy was saved in the experiment, he said, was more than offset by a pickup truck that accompanied them for the eight days to scout for additional lumber.

How will Americans communicate in decades to come?

By NORMAN BLACK

WASHINGTON (AP) — The question is how Americans will communicate with each other for decades to come.

The issues behind the question are so complex a congressman recently observed there aren't "eight people outside the telephone industry" who understand them.

That problem of comprehension has now defied four years of congressional work. The latest bill to be drafted has, like its predecessors, become mired in controversy.

The bill seeks to broaden and place in law recent decisions by the Federal Communications Commission allowing other firms to compete with the world's largest company, American Telephone & Telegraph.

And AT&T, better known as the Bell System, actually is worried about the latest failure to produce legislation.

"The Bell System is fighting for the bill, really lobbying, although they don't want to talk about it," observes one federal official who must follow the action.

Why would AT&T want to support efforts to change rules that have allowed it to dominate a $50 billion-a-year industry?

"It's a matter of self-preservation," says a top FCC official, referring to the trial this fall of a Justice Department suit aimed at breaking up the Bell System. "AT&T wants to tell the judge that everything's been taken care of by Congress."

AT&T officials deny harboring any hope a bill will help them in their court battle. One official, requesting anonymity, agrees that Bell is lobbying Congress, but only "for something we can live with. We all realize the law is 45 years old and just won't work the way technology is advancing."

Technology, for example, has blurred the line between communications and data processing. Bell would like to get into data processing but has been blocked by a 1956 consent decree that prohibits its entry into unregulated markets.

Congress, in the name of competition, would unshackle AT&T from the consent decree while still requiring it to offer basic telephone service at affordable rates.

On the other side, specialized firms wishing to provide long-distance service between particular cities could compete directly with AT&T. They would have guaranteed access to local Bell exchanges with a modicum of FCC regulation.

The manufacture and sale of telephone receivers and other terminal equipment would be completely deregulated by law, and the telecommunications field would be open to much freer entry by computer companies such as IBM.

It would appear there's something for everyone. With its antitrust case scheduled for trial in September, however, the Justice Department is understandably concerned. And many consumer groups and independent communications firms point to these problems:

—Cross-subsidization. Bell is so large, they argue, it can use revenue from its domination of the basic long-distance network to unfairly subsidize those areas where it's competing with other firms.

—Information flow. The bill would allow AT&T to retain its existing corporate structure, including the Bell Labs and Western Electric.

To avoid cross-subsidization, it would require creation of new subsidiaries — with separate directors and bookkeeping — if Bell wanted to offer a competitive service or product. Thus the question of information flow: to what extent can Bell's existing and new subsidiaries communicate and work with each other?

"If AT&T's fully separated subsidiary is permitted to have preferred access to information about the (telephone) network, there will be no effective competition," says Charles P. Johnson of the Independent Data Communications Manufacturers Association.

Bell claims the latest proposal governing information flow, written by Rep. Tim Wirth, D-Colo., would keep employees of the parent firm and the competitive subsidiary from even sitting down to lunch together.

RINGING THE BELL

Looking at black college experience

With BOB TIEUEL

A few days ago we spent a few hours back at the college where it was ours to roam several years back. It was good to meet old friends and to greet new ones, some who had made good and some who had not. It was indeed a heart-warming experience, and our only regret was that we were not able to spend more time on the campus of Texas College in the city of the roses, Tyler, Texas.

There can be no doubt that the energy crunch kept many away from this Leap Year reunion and 86th anniversary exercises of the founding of this black-oriented church-related institution of higher learning in 1894. Plaques and engraved certificates were awarded some 16 people at the Alumni Awards Dinner with some 500 attending to witness the presentations made by Billye Suter Aaron, wife of Hank Aaron.

Especially honored with doctorates were the Hon. Julian Bond and Dr. Mildred Faye Jerrerson. Julian Bond was served as a member of the Georgia House of Representatives, on a number of national organizations, as a newspaper editor and presently does a syndicated column for a group of newspapers.

Mildred Faye Jefferson, M.D., is on the staff of Boston University Medical Center, a graduate of Texas College and Harvard Medical School. She is co-founder of National Right to Life, Inc., and has served as its president for three years.

DR. ARTHUR WASHINGTON of Prairie View University and a graduate of TC also, told a panel group that Prairie View has been dubbed by HEW as one of the worst colleges in the state. But by whose standards? he asked. He challenged students to work hard so they could succeed.

It is reported that the HEW Title II program has proposed legislation that will increase the level for this program from $120 million to $200 million. With the cry on balancing the budget, however, many black college leaders are worried and think their budgets will be seriously affected. There is a wait-and-see attitude. There are some 41 black colleges in the U.S. who are members of the United Negro College Fund.

DR. JESSE W. JONES, a graduate of TC and chairman of the Department of Natural Sciences at Bishop College, said that "today black colleges serve as our ark. They have come a long way, peaking in 1940. My prognosis is somewhat glowing. Prairie View is just a stroke away from the governor's pen of being wiped out. Integration has done much to cause the downfall of black colleges, he said, and our struggle is to hang on to what has been handed to us — to lose this we lose it all."

Speaking to the hundreds of ex-students and graduates of Texas College, Dr. Wallace M Chaney, retired deputy superintendent of schools at Redwood, Calif., and presently an aide to a California congressman who is investigating the 891 blacks killed in Jonestown, said: "Too often we fall too short of being involved. Most of you do not vote. How can we have an impact if we are not willing to do our part?"

THE SMALL TOWN of Troup was stunned and saddened after learning that their local sports hero, Bryon Peyton, was one of 22 members of the American boxing team killed in the recent plane crash near Warsaw, Poland. The 16-year-old black Troup slugger, who won two National Junior Olympics championships, claimed the Texas State Golden Gloves middleweight crown recently in Fort Worth. He was waiting for a trip to the nationals in Shreveport, La., later this month and was the only Texan killed in the crash.

Abandoned mine tunnels used for cold storage

By BRIAN TUCKER

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Bulldozers and fork lifts have replaced the mules. Tunnels are lined with cases of exotic seafood instead of mine cars.

But things are just as busy as they were earlier in the century when men and mules hauled gypsum out of the Alabastine Mine in Grand Rapids.

Workers make their way through the 6-mile network of tunnels, but they're either clearing more tunnel space or shuffling some of the thousands of cases of food stored at Michigan Natural Storage Co.

Modern technology never made it down the 85 feet to the tunnels of the Alabastine. The mine owners simply could not continue to use mules and hand labor and compete with other mines, so the Alabastine closed in 1943.

Bert Kragt bought the property in 1946 to use the buildings for warehouses. It wasn't until several years later that Kragt decided to use the tunnels for cold storage.

"It was a natural," said his son, Paul, a vice president of the company. "The steady temperature is 50 degrees and in the areas we refrigerate, we only need to run the units once a week to maintain the temperature."

An open elevator takes workers and thousands of touring school children down to the tunnels every year. Paul Kragt leads them through the tunnels, marked with the tubular impressions of drill bits and the cracks opened by dynamite blasts.

Lines of light bulbs extend hundreds of feet down some of the tunnels that have not been cleared and paved. The company only uses 5 percent of the mine space.

"We only clear tunnel down here during the light times after the holidays," the younger Kragt said. "And we only clear and lay cement on as much area as we can use."

The tunnels tell their tales. A discarded mine cart sits lame in one entranceway that has not been cleared of dirt and shale. In another corner, a rusted old drill lies half-buried.

Inmates release guards after thirteen-hour siege

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Five Essex County Jail guards were released today after being held hostage for more than 13 hours by inmates who took over two floors of the facility and threatened to throw hostages out of a 10th floor window.

One guard was taken from the jail on a stretcher. A sixth hostage, who authorities said was severely beaten, was released Tuesday night.

Another guard was dangled from the window during the incident, which involved about 60 inmates.

The siege started at 2:40 p.m. Tuesday after corrections officer James Dubose was shot with a handgun smuggled into the 12-story jail. Officials would not disclose the type of gun. Guards do not routinely carry guns in the jail.

Another corrections officer, John Belcher, was arrested on charges he smuggled the gun into the jail, said Essex County Prosecutor Donald Coburn.

The captured guards were released as the inmates were transferred to detention cells under a settlement reached by a team of negotiators, including two New York television newsmen.

"At approximately 6:10 a.m. we finally ended the negotiations and had the last of the hostages brought down," Coburn said.

Inmates were escorted in groups of four from the scene of the takeover to the women's floor. The hostages followed with one remaining inmate who carried the gun, Coburn said.

"The last man to come down handed the gun to a guard," he added.

Coburn said authorities agreed not to prosecute inmates for taking hostages or damaging jail property, but refused to agree that inmates would not be charged in the shooting of the guard.

The county said it would investigate to determine which prisoners were responsible for assaults on jail personnel during the takeover and would prosecute them.

It agreed to set up grievance committees and not to restrict visitation rights of those involved in the siege, Coburn said.

Coburn said about 60 inmates were involved in the disturbance, which was limited to the 10th and 11th floors, where 110 inmates charged with murder, armed robbery or violent crimes were housed.

County jails, such as the Essex facility, are used to house suspects awaiting trial or sentencing.

Guards said tension in the 600-inmate jail had been brewing for some time.

"They're the majority. They rule," said one guard, asking not to be identified. "It was bound to happen."

Wearing white towels around their heads, inmates shouted obscenities through broken windows, taunting troopers and police who surrounded the jail and threatening to throw hostages out 10th floor windows.

At one point, the inmates hung a hostage, identified as Al DeRogatis, out a window. The guard dangled for about 10 seconds, then was hauled back inside.

Inmates initially demanded guns, ammunition and other weapons, said Sheriff Charles A. Cummings. But they later modified their demands, seeking increased visitation, better food and amnesty, he said.

Corrections officer James Dubose was in fair condition early today after he was shot with a gun smuggled into the jail. He escaped by elevator shortly after the incident began.

Another guard, Carmine Biasi, was released by the hostages about six hours later. Authorities said he had been beaten severely, but his condition could not be determined immediately.

A third guard who became ill while working in the jail was taken from the facility in an ambulance. Authorities would not identify him or be specific about his illness, but said it was not directly related to the siege.

The negotiating team included Essex County authorities and New York City reporters John Johnson of WABC-TV and Felipe Luciano of WNBC-TV. The inmates had asked to speak to black newsmen, said Essex County Assistant Prosecutor Jack Gottschalk. Johnson is black.

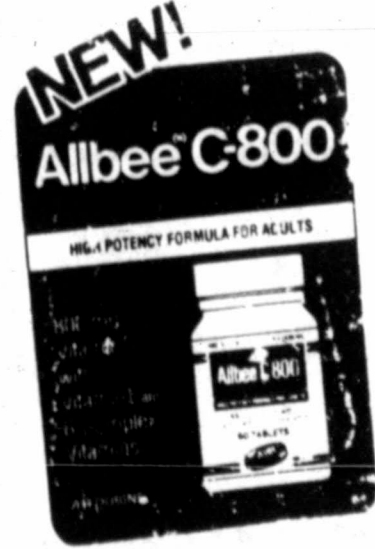

An unidentified Essex County Jail Corrections Officer who was held hostage for more than thirteen hours is put into an ambulance early Wednesday morning. Six guards were held hostage at the Newark, N.J., jail. One guard who was not held hostage is being charged with smuggling a gun into the institution. (AP Laserphoto)

Alan Koonce, junior righthander, delivers ball during big 5-4 victory for the Midland Lee Rebels over Abilene Cooper Tuesday at the Lee diamond. Koonce threw seven shutout innings after giving up three runs to the Cougars in the third inning and two of those were unearned. Lee is now in first place with a 3-0 reading in District 5-4A play. (Staff Photos by Bruce Partain).

Rebs win in 10th, 5-4

By RICHARD VINCENT
Sports Writer

One game does not a season make, nor does a victory in the third game of the District 5-4A baseball campaign insure a championship.

But Tuesday afternoon at the Midland Lee diamond, the Rebels of coach Ernie Johnson took one small step that could eventually lead to a giant leap to a 5-4 title with an exciting 5-4 victory in 10-innings over defending loop kingpin Abilene Cooper.

"This was a real important game this half," explained Johnson, "because I honestly feel us and Cooper are going to be the prime contenders. We had to beat them here because it's hard to win down there."

It didn't come easy for the Rebels, though, and it wasn't until the tenth inning that Tom Morrison's sizzling single past Cooper third baseman Jeff Welch brought home pinch-runner Ron Smedley with the winning run.

The hit was Morrison's third of the game and the RBI was his second. Also chipping in on a 12-hit attack were Wade Cartwright, Barry Corley and Jeff Hicks with two safeties apiece.

Although outitting the powerful Cougars (Cooper came into the game with 29 hits in its two previous district games) 12-10, the Rebels caused themselves a migraine or two with some foul-ups on the basepaths.

In fact, according to Johnson, the Rebels had their signals crossed in the first inning when they scored their first run. Cartwright, who doubled earlier, was on third with designated-hitter Hicks at the plate. Cartwright broke for home with the pitch, but Hicks remained in the box and took a ball low and away. Fortunately, Cartwright slid in safely. "He (Hicks) didn't know the steal was on," sighed Johnson.

That one, however, turned out better than some of the other boo-boos. In the fourth with nobody out, winning pitcher Alan Koonce, who had earlier doubled, was thrown out at third trying to advance on a hit when he should've stayed put. In the same frame, Scott Collins, who should've scored when Morrison doubled, was left standing on third. Then in the tenth, Hicks, who had a leadoff single, was picked-off first by a throw from Cougars' catcher Scott Harris. According to Johnson, the first base coach was at fault on the play.

There were, however, some bright spots. One was the pitching of angular righthander Koonce, who calmly went the distance to improve his record to 4-1. The silky-smooth junior was near-perfect over the last seven innings, checking the Cougars on a measly two hits. Koonce whiffed five batters and walked none.

"Alan did a great job," praised Johnson, who said Koonce seemed to really begin rolling when "he started getting his curve over."

And there were some defensive gems turned in by the Rebels. Shortstop Randy Velarde, atoning for an earlier two-run error, made a diving stab of a nasty liner from the bat of Claude Brown in the eighth which resulted in the Cougars leaving two men on base. And centerfielder Corley and third baseman Cartwright also showed mastery with their mitts.

But in the third inning, things weren't going quite so smoothly in the field for Lee. "I think we botched that one inning real bad," said Johnson. Cooper shortstop Kirk Russell, who ended up as the losing pitcher in relief, singled to left to start the frame. He moved to third on back-to-back bunts from Jay Zumwalt and Art Martin. Kyle Stuard then hit a routine ground-er to Velarde, which the shortstop muffed, allowing Russell and Zumwalt to tally. Later, Martin came in on a fielder's choice.

Koonce then became real stingy and in the meantime, the Rebels found their gloves and bats.

In the fourth, Lee got two of the runs back. Velarde opened with an infield hit then went to third on Hicks' double down the first-base line. Koonce followed with a mammoth double off the centerfield fence, scoring Velarde and Hicks.

Then in the sixth, with time running out, the Rebels chalked up the tying run. Koonce walked to initiate the uprising, went to third on Harris' throwing error on a play at first, then pranced home on Morrison's sacrifice fly to center.

The Rebels now enjoy a precious one-game bulge (3-0 to 2-1) over the Cougars in the district chase. Lee, 6-7 overall, travels to Lubbock today for a clash with the high-flying Monterey Plainsmen. Then on Saturday, the Rebels return to district warfare with a home assignment against Big Spring.

Baltimore's Flanagan searches for new goals

By GORDON BEARD
MIAMI (AP) — Mike Flanagan will have to invent some new goals to provide incentive for the 1980 baseball season.

"I used to dream of winning the Cy Young Award, being picked on the All-Star team and playing in the World Series," the Baltimore Orioles' left-hander said today. "All that's happened, and I'm not ready for my pension yet."

Flanagan, 28, became the American League Cy Young winner after posting a 23-9 record last season. He also pitched a playoff victory over California and was 1-1 in the World Series won by the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"I used to come to training camp worried about making the club, doing better than the other guy, or trying to become a starter," Flanagan said. "Now," he said, "it's almost as though I'm not concerned with the results here as I gear for opening day and it's difficult because I'm not used to it. I'm not all pumped up yet ... I hope it comes."

"I've got to be in command of myself," he said, "so I can keep doing it. This makes me appreciate a guy like Jim Palmer, who has been so consistent for so long."

Flanagan has won 57 games in three full seasons with the Orioles, second only to the 59 of New York's Ron Guidry over that period.

Last season, Flanagan tied for the league lead with five shutouts, was second with 38 starts, third with 190 strikeouts and 266 innings, and fourth with a 3.08 earned run average.

Although he was 10-6 through July 7, Flanagan had completed only six of 20 starts and his ERA was 4.05. After that, he was 13-3 with a 2.22 ERA and completed 10 of his last 18 starts.

Much of his success over the second half of the season was attributed to a change-up delivery he learned from teammate Scott McGregor as the two played catch in the outfield.

"Scotty has nothing else to teach me," Flanagan cracked. "I've used up all of him. Now, other guys are asking me to teach his change."

Bobcats, Panthers post wins

Odessa Permian remained in the thick of the District 5-4A baseball race by defeating Big Spring 6-2 at Big Spring Tuesday to raise its league record to 2-1 and overall mark to 8-5. The Steers are 0-3 and 3-10.

Mike McCoy pitched the win and Moe Rubin was the loser.

San Angelo was 1-2 after beating Odessa High, 7-2, at Odessa. The Bobcats, now 4-11 for the season, were paced by Kel Crain hit two doubles and a single in four trips. The Bronchos are 0-3 and 5-6.

Bulldogs pound Abilene, 14-0, in 5-4A

ABILENE — Look out for the Midland Bulldogs!

Coach Tim Whalen's crew blasted the Abilene High, 14-0, here Tuesday, to knock the Eagles out of a first place tie with Midland Lee and Abilene Cooper.

"We really hit the ball and Paul Cox threw a three-hitter for us," said an elated Whalen afterwards. "We really came to play and I am really proud of the whole group. This may give us the confidence we need the rest of the way."

While Midland was polishing off Abilene, Lee was beating Cooper 5-4 in 10 innings, so the Bulldogs now are one game behind the Rebels and share second place with Abilene, Cooper and Odessa Permian with the big victory.

Midland rapped out 11 hits with centerfielder Tracy Gann powering a grand-slam homer to highlight the District 5-4A win.

Second baseman David Zarate had a perfect afternoon at the plate, going three-for-three while Jerry Zachery and Gann had a pair of hits each.

Cox scattered three hits in going the route for Midland which is now 5-6 one year and 2-1 in league play. Abilene, meanwhile, is now 6-4 and 2-1.

The Bulldogs scored five runs in the top of the first inning of starter Eddie Locke with Gann's blast the big blow.

Midland came back with eight more runs in the third and a single tally in the fourth and after the dust had cleared, the two coaches agreed to end the runaway with the 10-run rule.

Zarate had two hits in the big third inning when the Bulldogs sent 11 batters to the plate

Midland travels to San Angelo Saturday for a date with Central's Bobcats while Abilene takes on Odessa High in 5-4A action.

Baseball talks resumed

By CHUCK MELVIN
SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Negotiations on a basic agreement between major league baseball owners and players were to reopen here today, with owners guardedly optimistic and players' representatives flatly pessimistic about avoiding a strike at the start of the season.

Major league executives met Tuesday with their chief negotiator, Ray Grebey, who said no modifications were made in the owners' latest offer.

"No votes were taken or policy-decisions made today," Grebey said following a 90-minute meeting with the owners' negotiating committee.

The committee is composed of Grebey, the presidents of the American and National leagues, and six team executives: Daniel Galbreath of Pittsburgh, Bob Howsam of Cincinnati, John McHale of Montreal, Joseph Burke of Kansas City, Ed Fitzgerald of Milwaukee and Clark Griffith II of Minnesota.

The executive director of the Players' Association, Marvin Miller, was dismayed by the news that the owners made no policy moves Tuesday.

"Since the Players Association finds that the owners' demands are unacceptable and the owners apparently are unwilling to change their position," Miller said he could see no reason for any of the optimism expressed by the owners.

"As long as we have bargaining sessions left, there's hope of avoiding a strike," Grebey said.

Negotiating talks were planned daily through Friday, and Miller is also scheduled to meet with players from seven more teams this week to discuss the negotiations and the possibility of a strike.

Players from 19 teams have already authorized a strike on or after April 1 if a new four-year basic agreement is not hammered out by then.

"We see no reason for the strike talk," Grebey said. "Major league baseball's objective is the same as it has been — to attempt a negotiated settlement."

The success of the talks apparently hinges on several key issues left unresolved at the last session on March 18, including particularly an owners' proposal to have a player, rather than an amateur draft choice, as compensation in certain cases when a team loses a player to free agency.

Players argue that such a rule would kill the free agent system, since few teams would be willing to part with a player from their roster in order to sign a free agent.

Other important issues yet to be settled include an owners' proposal to restrict to one-year contracts any player with four years service or less, and another that would force an arbitrator to give extra weight to a player's time in service, rather than performance, when ruling on a salary dispute.

Miller planned to meet in Phoenix with members of the San Francisco Giants and Cleveland Indians before this afternoon's negotiations.

At last, Pat Culpepper's agonizing nightmare comes to end

Now that it's over maybe Pat Culpepper can get a decent night's sleep.

Unless you were there, you can't imagine the agony he endured during those long, weeks of anguished anxiety. It was enough to drive a church-going man to drink, and if he was a drinking man, to church.

But it's past history now and the tense, suspenseful wait for the other shoe to drop is over.

In fact, now that he can look back on it and laugh—just don't say "boo" while he's laughing—maybe he'll write a book about the experience. And, who knows, it might be bought by the movies.

You've heard of the Amityville Horror. This was worse. It wasn't a figment of someone's imagination. It was for real. It made that other business, the accusations of UIL rules violations, seem like a welcome relief...well, maybe that's stretching a point, but at least the UIL wouldn't come in the middle of the night and clutch its victim out of his cot and whisk him off to the graveyard.

It all came to light, pardon the pun, one night when a sportswriter passed the Memorial Stadium Fieldhouse around 1 a.m. and noticed that it was lit up like downtown Las Vegas. The immediate reaction was, "Geez, don't these people know there's an energy crisis, going off and leaving all those lights on."

What the writer didn't know was that for Midland High's new football coach, it was serving as a temporary home. "The wife and children are back in Galesburg, Ill., selling the old house and I'm living here (in the fieldhouse) while looking for a new house," Pat explained.

He added in a whisper, "It's scary. I didn't know a place could have so many noises at night."

Pat heard so many strange sounds in the night, he might have suspected they were the ghosts of Wahoo, Johnny Branson, Bill Worley, Tom Branev, Steve Aycock, Knox Nunnally, Larry Cooper, Ross Montgomery, Mark Lyons, Phillip Ward, James Zachery, and other long gone Bulldogs of the past...except ain't none of them could qualify for their ghost-manship yet, since they are still amongst the rest of us mortals.

"They didn't tell me about all the noises," Pat related with a noticeable shiver. "They told me that all the fans in the building were shut off for the winter. So how come, huh, that they all went on at once in the middle of the night?"

Luckily, the track was handy and midnight isn't a bad time to do your jogging, if you are wide awake.

"And then there's Doc Dodson's ice machine. Every so often, when it's absolutely still and dark, it drops a load. It sounds like a body falling."

Louisville, DePaul to play Fame game

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Louisville's national college basketball champions will be going to Springfield, Mass., this fall to open the 1980-81 season against DePaul.

It was announced following the Cardinals' 59-54 victory over UCLA Monday night that the Cardinals had been selected to face DePaul in the Basketball Hall of Fame Tip-Off Classic at the Springfield Civic Center on Nov. 22.

Although the Cardinals will lose the services of senior guard Darrell Griffith, they apparently can count on a returning front line of Derek Smith, Wiley Brown and Rodney McCray.

But it's over now. The Culpeppers have been reunited in Midland and Pat can think about writing that book on lonely winter nights. Just one thing, it's a good bet he's gonna do it in the living room...tv on and the family watching...and maybe some company over to bury those sounds in the night.

Patience pays off

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Patience has paid for a 43-year old Norwegian bachelor fisherman, Willy Moe of Rotsundely in northern Norway.

For four years he spent $1 every week in the Norwegian soccer pools, filling in 10 rows with exactly the same forecast of the 12 listed English or Norwegian matches. He never made any changes in his forecast, regardless of which teams were playing each other.

And he never won — until last Saturday.

Then he hit the jackpot, winning $211,000, the second-highest prize so far in the pools here, by forecasting the correct outcome of 12 English League matches. The record, set in 1978, is $231,400.

Estes new track coach

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Gene "Red" Estes has been promoted to head track coach at Fresno State University effective June 1 to succeed pole vault star Dutch Warmerdam, retiring after this season.

Estes, a graduate of the University of Oregon, has served as assistant track coach since 1965 and doubles as cross country coach. Warmerdam held the world pole vault record in the 1940s and 1950s before fiberglass poles replaced bamboo.

Ooeyville-lay is-yay Umber-Nay Un-way

By MIKE CLARK
LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — "Ooeyville-lay is-yay Umber-Nay Un-way" is the proud boast of a guy who leaves his thumb on the dinner table.

Translated into English, the words say: "Louisville is Number One." Forward Wiley Brown, the so-called "Bionic Thumb," had earned the right to shout it from the rooftops after Louisville's 59-54 win over UCLA in the championship game of the NCAA basketball tournament.

Louisville's victory provided a spectacular climax to a 33-3 season that will undoubtedly become the makings of local legend. After all, it is the first title ever for this town, and everybody says the first time is always the best.

IN MANY ways, Wiley Brown typifies the unusual makeup of this cast of characters. A 6-foot-8 block of granite from Sylvestor, Ga., the sophomore center lost part of his right thumb at age 2 in an accident with a knife.

Brown taught himself to play basketball lefthanded. This year, he was fitted with an artificial thumb that earned him the nickname "Bionic Thumb."

Brown rushed off to a team meeting Monday without the thumb. A frenzied student manager was forced to search through bags of garbage to retrieve it.

On the court, Brown communicates in pig-Latin with teammate Derek Smith. The two use the code language to set up plays without tipping their hand to the opposition.

CONSIDER some of these other heroes in Red and Black:

—Rodney McCray, the only player signed in last year's lean recruiting campaign, was forced into the breach when his older brother, Scooter, was lost for the season with a knee injury. Rodney, 6-7, responded by leading the team in rebounding.

"We wouldn't be here without him," Coach Denny Crum said.

—Tony Branch, a little-used senior guard who sprang off the bench to save Louisville in the NCAA opener. His off-balance shot beat Kansas State 67-66 in overtime. When he's not playing, which is often, he's providing music, which is always loud.

Crum tried to loosen up his troops before Saturday's 90-72 semifinal win over Iowa with his version of a disco step. The players got loose, all right. They roared.

—Poncho Wright, a 6-5 Indianapolis native, gave Louisville a slogan. The finals were played in Wright's hometown, which he calls "Naptown."

Chanted Wright throughout the play-offs: "The 'Ville to Naptown!"

—Roger Burkman, a whirling dervish native of Indianapolis who festered on the bench for three years before emerging this year as "Instant Defense." All knees, elbows and floppy blond hair, Burkman came to personify the major change in this year's team — a scratching, clawing, tenacious fullcourt defense. "We get in the other guy's shirt," explained guard Jerry Eaves.

—Darrell Griffith, All-American guard, nicknamed "Dr. Dunkenstein" for his slam dunks. This year, Griffith became the complete player. This month, he became a man possessed. He dedicated the winning of the national title to a school chum who is battling cancer.

WITH FOUR seconds to go and the title in hand, Griffith leaped and waved an index finger at the roaring Louisville partisans crammed into Market Square Arena. Some 125 miles south, the ailing Jerry Stringer lay in bed smiling at the scene. His buddy Darrell had proven as good as his word.

Iowa State hires Orr; Louisville makes history

Iowa State hired Johnny Orr, Michigan, as basketball coach, replacing Lynn Nance, who resigned with a month left in the season. "It's the toughest decision I've ever made," Orr said. "I love Ann Arbor and I love Michigan and I hate to leave. But I feel this is a new challenge and it's a great opportunity. I want to see if I can build this (Iowa State's) program."

Orr, after 12 years at Michigan, received a six-year contract at a $45,000 a year starting salary, an increase of $12,000 over his Michigan pay...

Atlanta Braves Manager Bobby Cox says "It's comforting to look over at first base and see Chris (Chambless) there, we made the trade with the Yankees because we wanted the best lefthanded hitter possible, but we also wanted someone to set a championship example. Second baseman Jerry Royster said Chambless makes the Braves "legitimate in everyone's eyes."

The 6-foot-1, 215-pound Chambless has a .282 lifetime batting average with Cleveland and the Yankees and won a Gold Glove for his defense with a .997 fielding average in 1978. He also has the experience of playing in three World Series. "Chambless was one of the best players I have ever had on any team I managed," said former Yankee Manager Billy Martin. "I don't know why the Yankees traded him. I would have been against it 100 percent. He was the most reliable guy on the club when it came to clutch hitting. He is just one of those guys who grinds it out every day..."

Donnie Walsh will return as coach of the NBA Denver Nuggets, Walsh took over late last season when Larry Brown left...

Mark Spitz, winner of more gold medals during a single Olympiad than any athlete in history, feels strongly that the U.S. should not boycott the 1980 Summer Games in Moscow. "I think if we do not go to the Olympics this time, we would be subject to a boycott in subsequent Games. I feel the concept of a boycott is a meaningful thing, but only if the impact of the boycott is heard is it meaningful. I think a boycott will have the most impact on our youth... (and if the United States doesn't participate in this year's Games) there will be a loss of enthusiasm among our youth and a lot of our (sports) programs will fall off..."

The British Olympic Association announced its decision to accept its invitation to send a team to the Moscow Olympics in conflict with the British government...

Beaten Bruins look to promising future

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When UCLA's basketball team arrived home from the NCAA finals in Indianapolis, the Bruins spent little time looking back. They instead spoke of the future.

"We're definitely going to put it together a lot earlier next season," said freshman Darren Daye as the Bruins returned Tuesday from their 59-54 NCAA championship game loss to Louisville the previous evening.

"With one or two big freshmen and working on Coach (Larry) Brown's system some more, we should be better next year," said Daye, who played his best games of the year as the surprising Bruins downed top-ranked De Paul, No. 10-ranked Ohio State and semifinalist Purdue in the NCAA tournament.

Larry Farmer, a Bruins' assistant coach who played on three NCAA championship teams at UCLA under former Coach John Wooden, said the coaching staff has already begun working on recruiting one or two big, mobile centers — which UCLA squads have lacked in recent years. "We're going to get what Al McGuire calls an 'aircraft carrier,'" said Farmer, referring to a term used by NBC commentator and former Marquette coach McGuire to describe a dominant basketball center.

The Bruins were greeted by a devoted group of about 80 supporters when their flight from Indianapolis arrived at Los Angeles International Airport Tuesday afternoon.

"On to Philly," read the T-shirt of one of the airport greeters, UCLA freshman David Darling. Darling's message referred to the 1981 NCAA tournament finals, which will be played in Philadelphia.

Kiki Vandeweghe, the 6-foot-9 senior forward who scored 16 points and had 14 rebounds against Louisville, agreed that the Bruins' future looks bright. He also took pride in the 1979-80 season.

"We accomplished a lot, we have a lot to be proud of," said Vandeweghe, one of the two graduating seniors in the Bruins regular lineup filled with freshman and sophomores.

Knicks end skid, snap Cavaliers win streak

By The Associated Press
Coach Red Holzman of the New York Knicks isn't glib or loquacious or particularly quotable or the king of one-liners or given to exaggeration. He is, rather, a master of understatement.

Item: The Knicks ended a three-game skid and snapped Cleveland's eight-game winning streak Tuesday night with an impressive 128-115 victory that boosted their playoff hopes and eliminated the Cavaliers.

Holzman: "We played well and we shot well."

Item: Mike Glenn came off the bench and scored 19 points in 19 minutes on 8-for-8 shooting from the floor — including a three-point basket — and 3-for-2 from the line.

Holzman: "Mike Glenn had an incredible night."

Spurs 126, Rockets 107—George Gervin scored 24 points and Mike Gale led a key second-quarter outburst that helped San Antonio defeat Houston. It was the Spurs' seventh victory in nine games and left them 1 1/2 games ahead of the Knicks in the race for the fourth Eastern Conference playoff spot.

Celtics 96, Bulls 85—The Pistol outshot the Bulls. Pistol Pete Maravich scored all his 19 points in the final period, including a three-pointer with 51 seconds remaining, to give Boston the triumph. The Celtics' triumph put them 2 1/2 games in front of second-place Philadelphia in the Atlantic Division with just three to play.

Bucks 122, Bulls 111—Milwaukee needed last-quarter heroics by Marques Johnson, who came off the bench after the Bucks had nearly squandered a 24-point lead and scored 10 of his 18 points. The Bucks were also helped by the steady play of Brian Winters, who had 21 points, and Quinn Buckner.

SuperSonics 104, Suns 95—Dennis Johnson scored 12 of his game-high 26 points as Seattle pulled away in the third quarter. Seattle, which plays in Phoenix tonight, leads the Suns by two games in the battle for second place in the Pacific Division.

Trail Blazers 106, Kings 102—Dave Twardzik and T.R. Dunn each made a pair of free throws in the late going to nail down the triumph for Portland. Twardzik hit one with 18 seconds left to put Portland ahead 104-102 and Jazz 109, Nuggets 91—James Hardy scored a personal season-high 22 points for Utah. He teamed with Ron Boone and Paul Dawkins to spark the Jazz, whose victory was just their 24th against 55 losses.

Tom Watson Canadian line eyes 50-goal parlay

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — The chances of a player making a successful defense of his title in a PGA tour event are very slim. It is an infrequent occurrence. Going back to 1977, it's been done only five times.

Larouche became the first NHL player to score 50 goals for two teams when he scored twice to help Montreal to an 8-4 victory over the Chicago Black Hawks Wednesday night. Larouche, who collected 53 for the Pittsburgh Penguins in 1975-76, reached the plateau again with 25 seconds left in the game.

By that time, the Black Hawks had returned goalie Tony Esposito to the cage. The 24-year-old center, who spent last summer wondering if he'd even make the Canadiens this season, was just as happy to see Esposito.

He's done it three of those five times. And he's a solid favorite to do it again this week in the prestigious, $300,000 Heritage Classic, which he won by a runaway five shots last year.

"Certain players play certain courses, certain tournaments better than others," Watson said after a practice round over the par-71 Harbour Town Golf Links, 6,804 yards of quiet, tree-lined southern beauty that is the site of the 72-hole test beginning Thursday.

"Maybe it's the course, or the atmosphere of the tournament. A lot of things go into it," Watson said.

By The Associated Press
The thought seems staggering, but Pierre Larouche, Guy Lafleur and Steve Shutt of the Montreal Canadiens have an excellent chance of becoming the first line in National Hockey League history to have each of its members score 50 goals in a season.

Larouche became the first NHL player to score 50 goals for two teams when he scored twice to help Montreal to an 8-4 victory over the Chicago Black Hawks Wednesday night. Larouche, who collected 53 for the Pittsburgh Penguins in 1975-76, reached the plateau again with 25 seconds left in the game.

By that time, the Black Hawks had returned goalie Tony Esposito to the cage. The 24-year-old center, who spent last summer wondering if he'd even make the Canadiens this season, was just as happy to see Esposito.

"I wouldn't want to tell my children there was nobody in the net when I got my 50th," he said after the Canadiens had extended their unbeaten streak to 16 games.

North Stars 7, Maple Leafs 2—Bobby Smith, in his 135th NHL contest, recorded his first three-goal game to lead Minnesota's 64-shot barrage on two Toronto netminders.

Islanders 5, Flyers 2—Bryan Trottier scored two third-period goals and Anders Kallur added three assists as the Islanders extended the Flyers' winless streak to seven games.

The victory extended the Islanders' unbeaten streak to seven games, causing right wing Bob Nystrom to proclaim: "We're going to be the UCLA of the NHL" in the playoffs.

Sabres 3, Rangers 3—Don Maloney's goal at 2:19 of the third period gave the Rangers the tie with Buffalo. The deadlocked lengthened two streaks, New York's winless string to four and the Sabres' unbeaten skein to eight.

Oilers 5, Flames 4—Wayne Gretzky had four points — two goals and an assist on Don Ashby's game-winner in the third period alone — to rally Edmonton past Atlanta and goalie Jim Craig. The Flames built a 4-1 lead they couldn't hold and Craig, in his fourth game since the Olympics, was something of a disappointment.

Kings 5, Rockies 2—Dionne contributed a goal and two assists in the Kings' victory over the Rockies. The triumph was the fifth in a row for Los Angeles.

Penguins 4, Canucks 2
Power-play goals less than two minutes apart by Pat Hughes and Ron Stachhouse in the first period boosted Pittsburgh past Vancouver.

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) — Here comes Nancy.

Shaking off a sluggish 1980 start, Nancy Lopez Melton is back among the Top 10 money winners on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour.

Melton, the tour's most dominant player for the past two years, is winless in 1980, but her $19,600 second place finish Sunday in the LPGA tournament at Las Vegas boosted her into third place on the money list.

She and 40-year-old JoAnne Carner are co-favorites in the $150,000 LPGA tournament that opens Thursday at Mesa Verde Country Club.

Carner, the defending champion, is enjoying one of the best starts in the LPGA's 30-year history.

JIM MURRAY Olympic athletes forced to turn back that jacket with the zipper

By JIM MURRAY
Los Angeles Times

When I was a little kid, and times were hard, I remember some dotting adult, not directly responsible for my upbringing, bought me this lovely red felt jacket I had always coveted. It was beautiful, it had this gold zipper running up the throat, and a fur collar that came over the ears.

I forget what it cost. Too much, as it turned out. The family was aghast. I was made to feel like Nero. I mean, we had to make tapioca pudding out of condensed milk because real milk cost too much and here I was coming home with this golden fleece that cost, maybe, $10.

A council on family economics was called and, as I remember it, even a visiting relative got in on the act — I never forgave him. The consensus was I had committed the fatal sin of the Depression — extravagance.

Well, the jacket was returned. In its place, I was bought a more modest cloth shirt of the same color — red, but with buttons instead of the gold zipper and no real collar at all.

I carefully hung that "jacket" in the closet, where it hung untouched until the day I left home for good. I never wore it. It was not pique, revenge, or any baser motive. It was just that every time I looked at that lesser (probably a $2.95) substitute, it reminded me of the one that might have been. I couldn't accept that consolation jacket.

THE MORAL of the story is, if you don't get something you wanted all your life, you don't want something somebody else decides is better for you — or for him.

In a strange way, I was reminded of this the other day when the President of the United States told a group of American athletes hopeful of going to the 1980 Olympics that, in effect, hell, no they won't go.

And, then, he said, "However..." His "however" proved to be that he will do it in his power to create a second "alternative" games for the athletes who will not go to Moscow. He's going to buy them a cloth jacket, in other words. He might even be going to buy them medals that would cost more than the Olympic ones, for all I know.

If I were those guys — and gals — I would leave it hanging in the closet. I would not put on any hokey consolation garment bought by the U.S. Department, take part in any show track meet put on by the taxpayers of America somewhere in the world just to make Jimmy Carter a great statesman.

WHY, JUST recently, a bunch of businessmen and concerned local leaders have struggled through shot-and-shell, champagne and barbecues to bring the Olympics to Los Angeles in 1984 went to the White House. The mayor of Los Angeles asked for some help in putting on what is, after all, an American celebration, not just a Los Angeles one.

The Administration's reaction? The Administration told him to go back to Los Angeles and see if he couldn't raise the money himself from private local corporations. A government that goes around leaking money, that funds projects right out of the Marx Brothers, wouldn't put up a few million to bring an international athletic festival to this coun-

Olympic coach Brooks may get LA Kings post

TORONTO (AP) — The Toronto Globe and Mail says Herb Brooks, who coached the United States Olympic hockey team to a gold medal at the Winter Games last month at Lake Placid, N.Y., has been offered the coaching job with Los Angeles Kings for the 1980-81 National Hockey League season.

The newspaper says Brooks met Kings owner Dr. Jerry Buss in Indianapolis on Monday before both attended the National Collegiate Athletic Association basketball championship and Buss agreed to talk contract with Brooks at the conclusion of the current season.

Kid Stapleton, Perez spark Sox

By The Associated Press

It was just another day's work when veteran Tony Perez drilled three straight hits for Boston including a two-run homer Tuesday — but the performance of rookie Dave Stapleton was a "whopping surprise," said Red Sox Manager Don Zimmer.

Stapleton raised his exhibition batting average to .552 with three hits as the Red Sox downed the Chicago White Sox 7-5 for their fifth consecutive victory. Perez, signed as a free agent last fall and getting ready to play for the first time in the American League, raised his spring average to .478.

"You know Perez is going to hit. That's why we got him," said Zimmer. "Stapleton, though, is a whopping surprise. We knew he had a good bat but didn't realize it was this good. He makes contact consistently, just going with the pitch."

The 26-year-old rookie from Alaska, hit .306 for Pawtucket of the International League last year.

PETE ROSE, whose hitting is never a surprise, raised his spring average to .384 after he collected three hits, scored twice and drove in three runs, as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Baltimore Orioles 6-3. The American League champs now are 7-1.

Cincinnati pitcher Frank Pastore said his palms were sweating when he took the mound to shut out the Los Angeles Dodgers 1-0. He was remembered last May 25 at Dodger Stadium, when he was shelled for five home runs and 10 runs in 2-13 innings. This time, he allowed only two hits in six innings.

A bases-loaded home run by the Kansas City Royals connected off Rich Gale in the fourth inning. Gale, who had not yielded a run in three previous pitching starts, was battered for five runs, four of them earned, on five hits.

JACK CLARK hit a three-run homer and Darrell Evans and Jim Wohlford smacked two-run shots to lead the San Francisco Giants to an 8-7 win over the Milwaukee Brewers. Larry Hise, coming back from a shoulder injury that sidelined him nearly all last season, hit his first home run of the spring for the Brewers.

Barry Bonnell drove in two runs with a solo homer and a sacrifice fly and Domingo Ramos rapped three hits to pace the Toronto Blue Jays to a 6-4 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates. Chicago's Mike Vail collected four hits, including a three-run homer, to lead the Cubs to a 10-5 win over the San Diego Padres.

NEWCOMER Mickey Rivers had three hits and Buddy Bell added two to lead the Texas Rangers to a 7-2 victory over the Atlanta Braves. Mike Cubbage got the first of three Minnesota homers as the Twins defeated the Houston Astros 8-3.

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — A search committee attempting to find a new head basketball coach for the University of Oklahoma concluded its scheduled interviews Tuesday with a session with Georgetown's John Thompson.

The 38-year-old Thompson was the last of nine head coaches and assistants asked to interview. Indications were the committee probably would announce its choice Wednesday or Thursday.

Former OU head coach Dave Bliss resigned recently to take the head coaching job at Southern Methodist University. Thompson is thought to be the front-runner to replace Bliss, with Lamar's Billy Tubbs and DePaul assistant Joey Meyer close behind.

Tubbs hasn't said whether he would take the job, but Meyer said Tuesday he will accept if it is offered to him.

One-punch Lefebvre content to close books on 'career'

By MIKE LETTWIN
The Los Angeles Times
CASA GRANDE, Ariz. — Jim (One Punch) Lefebvre says that when he came here he was content to close the book on his brief career as a pugilist. In baseball, controversy is the shortest route to the unemployment line.

Thus the barren desert setting in which the San Francisco Giants trained their new coach perfectly suited them. There would be no one to talk to but lizards and baseball players in this outpost 35 miles from Phoenix and 10 miles from nowhere.

"I wasn't going to say anything until I read in The Sporting News that Lasorda said I had sucker-punched him," Lefebvre was saying the other day.

Instead of saying nothing, Lefebvre decided to tell all, beginning with his version of the Feb. 17 fight with his one-time boss, Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda.

"Tommy said it was a sucker punch," Lefebvre said. "Well, I'll tell you what, it was the sucker who got punched all right."

LEFEBVRE said it happened this way:
Lasorda and Lefebvre were to tape

Contacted in Vero Beach, Fla., where the Dodgers are training, Lasorda said he didn't want to discuss the incident. "Let him say whatever he wants," Lasorda said. "As far as I'm concerned, it's a dead issue."

WHAT happened last year between these men, both members of long standing in the Dodger organization? For that matter, what happened to all the Dodgers last year?

Lefebvre has theories on both counts. But first, he said, he had work to do.

Those who know Lefebvre, even his detractors, concede he is among the hardest workers in baseball — always the first man on the field in the morning and the last off in the afternoon. Batting instructor for the Giants, as he was for the Dodgers last year, he'll talk hitting until even Ted Williams would throw up his hands in despair and beg him to stop.

He also leads the team in exercises and, still well muscled at 37, he can do them long after the last player drops. That's where he was found on this beautiful, cloudless, Arizona morning.

EVEN THERE, sweating and

consecutive shows in local television studio in Burbank — Lasorda at 10 a.m., and Lefebvre, fired at the close of last season, at 11:30. Lasorda waited for Lefebvre to arrive and then confronted him.

Lasorda called him an obscene name and said: "You're disloyal to me, disloyal to the Dodgers. I gave you the opportunity of a lifetime and you blew it."

Lefebvre: "You can't talk to me like that any more. I don't work for you any more and I don't have to take it."

Then, according to Lefebvre, Lasorda took off his watch, placed it in his coat pocket, then took off his coat and cocked back his arm.

"Then I decked him," Lefebvre said. "His lip was bleeding, and it definitely wasn't bleeding Dodger blue. He kept saying: 'Look what you've done to me, look what you've done to me. I'll sue you.' The only regret I had then was that I knew I'd never be able to wear a Dodger uniform again."

straining Giant players have only kind words for him.

His reviews last year from Dodger players, particularly some veterans, were less favorable.

That led, in part, Lefebvre believes, to his downfall.

"I wasn't getting through to some of the players," he said, "so I thought the best thing would be to show them on film what they were doing wrong."

The Dodgers film their games from behind home plate. Lefebvre wanted a camera in center field where a better view of the batter is possible. Lasorda turned down the request, but Lefebvre didn't give up.

He went to vice president Al Campanis, who approved.

"I showed the film to one of our players who was having trouble and it really helped him," Lefebvre said. "He could see for himself what he was doing wrong without me having to tell him."

But, according to Lefebvre, Lasorda was furious, wanting to know why his coach had gone over his head. The filming stopped. From then on, Lefebvre said, Lasorda watched his every move.

"He would watch me during batting practice," Lefebvre said. "Whenever I looked up, there he was. If I talked to a player on another team, he always wanted to know what I had said to him. I was beginning to think I was just paranoid until someone told me, 'Tommy's got it in for you. You better watch your step.'"

That was the first week of the season, one that was to deteriorate. The Dodgers, who had won consecutive National League pennants, slipped to third place and under .500 for the first time in over a decade.

"I could tell from the start things weren't good with the Dodgers," Lefebvre said. "Everybody was by themselves. Nobody hung together. After the first game, when we lost on a wild pitch, everybody was blaming everybody else."

"Nobody bit the bullet. And the more we lost, the worse it got. Tommy would say one thing to the coaches, another to the players and something else to the press." Somewhere along the line, Lasorda told Lefebvre he wasn't coming back.

"That's something I want to clear up," said Lefebvre, who was replaced this season by Manny Mota. "The Dodgers made it sound like I'd just left to go to the Giants. I never wanted to leave the Dodgers."

"But I'm very happy here. Dave Bristol (the Giants' first-year manager) really knows what he's doing. It's all business here, if you know what I mean."

"We're really pleased to get a batting instructor like Jimmy," Bristol said as he watched Lefebvre with two players in the batting cage. "I've never known a harder worker. Having a coach like him makes things so much easier for a manager. We're just delighted with him."

DELIGHT is not Lefebvre's feeling for Lasorda, nor Lasorda's for Lefebvre.

When Lefebvre was let go by the Dodgers, he had some parting words for his manager, words which apparently instigated the altercation between them. He said then, among other things, the Lasorda had no respect for his coaches and would "scream at us in the dugout."

Lasorda angrily denied the charge at the time, and the issue seemed sure to die. Certainly, that was Lefebvre's hope.

WEST TEXAS SPORTS

MC tennis, golf teams on road this week

Midland College gets its toughest Western Junior College Conference test of the season when the Chaparrals host New Mexico Military Institute at 1 p.m. in men's and women's matches.

The MC men are 3-0 in WJCC play, but received their toughest match from NMMI at Roswell, winning 5-4, sweeping the final three doubles matches for the win. MC's women suffered their lone loss in five starts to NMMI.

"With an all-fresh men's squad, only three of whom competed last fall, our players are still learning how to play the tough teams," said Coach Brian Gilley. "Sam Rivera is playing No. 1 and drawing all the best players, but he has been doing well against them. Rudolfo Rico and Russ Houck have been battlers in doubles and Chris Mosso, primarily a clay court player, is adjusting nicely. John Amundrud and Gerald Sellards have been doing well against good players."

The women's team has two sophomores—Leslie Miller and Debbie Smith—and freshmen Teresa Landry, Brenda Burgess and Linda Hankins.

Friday and Saturday, the men will be in Canyon for the West Texas Indoor Tournament with most of the competition coming from four-year colleges.

MC golfers vie at Huntsville

Midland College's men's and women's golf teams will play in the Elkins Invitational Intercollegiate tournament at Huntsville Thursday and Friday.

It will be the last non-conference action for the men. The Sam Houston State sponsored event will have eight junior college teams in the field.

Coach Delnor Poss pick his team on the basis of best qualifying scores from Alan Coe, Denny O'Connor, Jim Julian, Pat Ward, Jeff Lutke, Richard Minnix and Grant Spencer.

Competing for Coach Susan Holland in the women's division will be Wendy Goodwin, Jamie Gossett, Sheryl Guthrie, Maria Haasch, and Debra Kargetta.

Bullpups split with Steers

The Midland High junior varsity baseball team recently split games with Big Spring, both going extra innings.

Midland High won the nightcap, 9-7, in nine innings as Hipilito Zarate knocked in two runs in the ninth for the victory. Peter Galindo got the win.

In the first game, Big Spring won, 6-5, in 10 innings as Jim Gunnels absorbed the loss. Teddy Bartley and Wayne Sims each had three hits in the loss while Roy Sanders had two.

The Bullpups meet Midland Lee JV 4 p.m. today at Simon Field in Hogan Park.

Hollums seeks 4th straight

Bruce Hollums of Midland will meet Luke McCallum in a three-round Full Contact Karate fight at Portales, N.M., April 5. The bout is being promoted by Bill Becker of Albuquerque.

Hollums, who is sponsored by Bernard Lankford, consulting engineer and coowner of the Midland Cubs, has won his last three bouts by kayos and is now 3-1. McCallum will be making his Karate debut. Hollums' lone loss was to Tony Morelli, Canada, ranked No. 2.

Fighting as a light-heavyweight, Hollums will get a rematch with Morelli in December but first hopes to fight for the U.S. title in August. After the Portales fight, he has a tentative fight scheduled in Andrews April 26.

Salesman to walk 430 miles for Opening Day

CINCINNATI (AP) — You say you're worried about having a long walk from the parking lot to the ballpark? Think about Keen Babbage's walk to baseball's traditional major league season opener April 9 in Cincinnati.

Babbage, a 25-year-old Cincinnati advertising salesman, plans to hand-deliver the opening-day ball to Riverfront Stadium — after a 430-mile walk from the Rawlings Sporting Goods offices in St. Louis.

"We wanted someone to walk the ball, but we didn't have a sucker to do it," needed Greg Elfers, a local March of Dimes spokesman. "That's where Keen came in."

Each year the Reds try to find a unique way to bring a ceremonial baseball to the stadium. Last year it arrived on canoe via the Ohio River, which flows past Riverfront.

This year, the Cincinnati Chapter of the March of Dimes decided the walk from St. Louis would be a good way to promote its SuperWalk, an annual fund-raising event planned for late April.

"I've spent the last few weeks building up my stamina," said Babbage, a jogger and self-described physical fitness buff. "There's no question about my walking 30 to 40 miles a day, but doing it for 15 straight days may require some pushing on my part."

Babbage's trek starts Wednesday, when Rawlings president Don Oleson hands him a baseball in St. Louis. A friend in a refreshment-stocked van will follow Babbage on the journey to Cincinnati.

"I figure a normal pace is four miles an hour, and even if I have to slow that down a little I can average 30 to 35 miles a day without a problem," he said.

Still, one wonders what really made Babbage accept the assignment. "I needed a cheap vacation," he said, refusing to get too serious about the rigors of the jaunt.

But his reasons go deeper. He's a native Cincinnati, a lifelong Reds fan — and he's on the March of Dimes' Board of Directors.

By walking to draw attention to those who can't, "It's a chance for one person to make a difference," he said.

Babbage's itinerary calls for him to hit most of the bright lights between St. Louis and Cincinnati. He'll overnight in St. Libroy, Mount Vernon and Merriam, Ill.; Princeton, Jasper and Marengo, Ind.; Louisville, Shelbyville, Frankfort, Ky.

Not everyone in Blue Grass state loves Cards

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Basketball loyalties are deep at the University of Kentucky, so it was no surprise that senior accounting major John Milam wasn't interested in Louisville's NCAA championship victory over UCLA.

"I've never been a fan of (Louisville Coach) Denny Crum and his crums," said Milam. "There's just something about him and his people."

However, nearby at The Library, a tavern where a giant television screen looms in the corner and students watch basketball, some Kentucky fans were cheering for Louisville.

"I'd rather be cheering for UK," acknowledged Hassie Whitt, a sophomore. "But I'm glad to see U-of-L made it. I hope they can do it, because UCLA deserves to lose."

Milam didn't watch the game, though he is from Louisville. His television was tuned to MASH while the Cardinals and Bruins slugged it out on another network.

"I just don't like U-of-L, period!" Milam said. "Plus the fact I don't think they should have been in (the tournament) in the first place. The Metro Conference is like high school players."

About 35 people watching the ballgame on a student center television were outnumbered by those viewing "Dark Star," a science fiction movie in the theater across the hall.

Susan Probus said she wanted to watch the game, but had agreed to work as a ticket-taker. Once the movie started, she decided it wasn't such a bad deal. "I'm enjoying the movie," she said.

Leslie Huff and Cindy Stephens decided to jog in UK's Seton Center sports complex during the game. "It's better than sitting in front of the TV and eating," said Huff. "Besides, UK's not playing."

John Leonard and some friends also were in the Seton Center, having decided to play basketball instead of watch it. "Usually on nights like this, the Seton Center is packed," Leonard said. "I don't like U-of-L or UCLA, so we decided since (the center) would be empty, it would be a good time to get some playing in. I'm a big Kentucky fan and they (Louisville fans) really don't like us, so I'm returning the favor."

At The Library, anti-UCLA sentiment seemed to overcome antagonism against Louisville.

"Who ... wants to see UCLA win for the sixth (actually 11th) time?" said Jesse Wayne Harper of Simpsonville. "Anyway, U-of-L has got more Kentucky people than UCLA."

Graham leads City Men's bowling tourney

Ross Graham averaged 216.22 over a nine-game span to take the lead in the all-important all-events scratch competition of the Midland Bowling Association's annual City Bowling Tournament.

Graham took the lead with a 1,946 pin total. Mike Prince leads the all-events handicap with 2,000.

Prince also leads the singles event with a 733 while Graham teamed with Choya Young to lead the doubles competition with a 1346. City Service owns the team lead with a 3194.

The tournament comes to a close after competition Saturday and Sunday at the Super Bowl and Air Park Lanes. The team event will be held at Air Park Saturday while the singles and doubles competition will be held Sunday at the Super Bowl.

Bears drop Kansas State

WACO, Texas (AP) — The Baylor-Kansas State intersectional football game originally set for Sept. 20 in Manhattan, Kan. has been cancelled. Baylor of the Southwest Conference has scheduled West Texas State, the Missouri Valley Conference champions, for the Sept. 20 date. Kickoff will be at 7:30 p.m. in Baylor Stadium.

BEFORE YOU FILE YOUR TAX RETURN... WAIT!

If you have not yet filed your 1979 Federal Income Tax return, you could be on your way to securing your own retirement as well as deferring until your retirement up to $1500 of your 1979 income tax. How? By opening or adding to your Individual Retirement Account (IRA) at First Savings and Loan in Midland. IRAs permit employees not now covered by a company retirement program to contribute to their own retirement up to 15% of their annual salary not to exceed $1500 each year. The amount you set aside each year can be deferred until age 59½ or until you retire.

But to take advantage of the tax deferral for 1979, you must open or add to your IRA at First Savings before you file your tax return. Don't miss this golden opportunity to benefit from First Savings high interest savings and a deferral of your federal income taxes. See one of the Fiscal Fitness People at either First Savings location soon...at any case before you file for 1979.

If you have already filed for 1979, there is time to start your IRA for 1980.

Old North Bonneville, Wash.: Now it's all washed out

NORTH BONNEVILLE, Wash. (AP) — It's been two years since the ribbon-cutting at North Bonneville's new site, and the brand-new $34 million town is a washout, local officials say.

There's no bank, no restaurant, no cocktail lounge, no doctor, no dentist, no drug store, no gas station, no community center, no barbershop, no motel, no schools and nearly 200 fewer residents in the relocated community.

Some new homes line the newly paved, winding streets, a new fire station houses two new fire engines, City Hall is open for business and a new church holds services.

But the only businesses — a grocery, bait and tackle shop, beauty salon and liquor store — are in temporary quarters whose leases are up in July.

And there's no going back to the old North Bonneville because that is washed out, literally. A U.S. Army Corps of Engineers project to build a new powerhouse for the Bonneville Dam diverts the Columbia River through the old town.

As compensation for the residents, Congress in 1974 ordered the Corps to finance the relocation of North Bonneville two miles downstream. But the old town of 650 went down before the new one went up.

Mayor Ernest Skala and planner Pollard Dickson blame the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers for North Bonneville's problems. They want the Corps to complete the town it promised to build.

Dave Geiger, special assistant to the district engineer for the Corps, blames town officials for not taking enough responsibility.

Skala and Dickson say the Corps took so long to turn over business sites that many merchants dropped plans to relocate, and soaring construction costs made it impossible for others to move in.

"I really personally hold the Corps of Engineers in contempt for their attitude regarding the relocation contract," Dickson said.

"The real question here is, what is the worth of the word of the United States and its contracts? I can tell you categorically that it means nothing," he said.

With $34 million already spent on the town, Corps officials say they won't spend any more. They say it's time for town officials to assume responsibility.

"This is a very perplexing situation to us," Geiger said. "Here you've got a town you've got to move to make way for a government project, and our attitude has been, 'Let's help these people all we can,' but somewhere it has gotten out of hand."

He says the Corps has yet to finish planning the town, which is "very embarrassing to us...but we have had some problems defining ownership of some of the property."

One problem the town doesn't have is revenue. Its financial base is a business and occupation tax expected to yield about $2 million, mainly from contractors at the damsite, by the time the powerhouse is completed in 1982.

"We're solvent now, and we can continue," Skala says, "but how long can we hang on?"

'Funniest' cabbie in New York can't think on wheels

By DAVID L. LANGFORD

NEW YORK (AP) — Fred A. Grewe III, cabbie, can't think and drive at the same time. So New York's "funniest" hack writes his stuff on the hoof.

The Gru, as he calls himself, is closer to the soil than the city. He's from West Virginia — Wheeling, to be exact. Shakespeare is his aim, hacking is his game.

Today he is owner of the Maxi the Taxi Award, up for grabs by New York's 23,000 cab drivers. It's no Oscar or Tony, but Gotham's hacks don't worry a lot about making their passengers smile.

Grewe does. Behind the wheel, he wears a black derby adorned with silver wings and right away starts bouncing jokes off his customers.

"If you don't talk to people, you're just a robot going from street to street," he says.

The Gru, who has a degree in theater from West Virginia University, bounced into the Good Times Restaurant one Monday wearing a red NBC windbreaker, a New York Yankees baseball shirt, loud red and blue plaid trousers and black and white saddle oxfords.

The 27-year-old bachelor was one of 10 cabbies who answered an invitation in the taxi trade journals to compete for the title of the funniest taxi driver in the city. About 50 to 75 lunchtime diners picked the winner with their applause.

"Hi, I'm Reggie Jackson, star right-fielder of the New York Yankees," said Grewe as he went into a spoof commercial for "Blackout," a lotion that turns everyone pale.

"If we're all white," came the punch line, "how are they going to know who to hate?"

Grewe writes his own material, but not while driving.

"I do my best thinking walking," he said.

Next, in what he said was his first gig as a stand-up comic, Grewe presented his version of the pope doing an American Express commercial.

"Without my miter and my big bishop's hat, I'd be just another Polish cardinal. That's why I carry my American Express credit card. Don't leave Rome without it."

Grewe's stiffest competition came from Larry "Lumpy" Goldberg, who is built something like a mayonnaise jar.

"You have to know some Spanish when you're driving a cab in New York," Lumpy said. "You gotta know how to say, 'Don't kill me, here's my money.'"

Puerto Rican jokes. New Jersey jokes. Polish jokes. South Bronx jokes. Italian jokes. That was most of the stuff.

Lumpy talked about a new Italian restaurant that specializes in take-out chicken in Little Italy, where mobsters reputedly hang out.

"It's called Chicken a la Plastic Bag," he said. "They serve it up in the back of your car."

Bob Lennox bombed.

His line about the "obscene phone call" from the IRS — "They called me in for an audit" — drew tumultuous silence.

Henry Romano, decked out in a black fur coat, lime green leisure suit and brown hat, did a commercial for a fictitious sour cream and sang a few bars of "The Impossible Dream" before they cut him off.

Grewe, who has been driving a cab in New York just six months, wants someday to do serious drama.

In the meantime, he has been trying to land a role on NBC's Saturday Night Live, with no success.

Grewe averages about $250 a week driving a cab four days a week from 2 p.m. to 4 a.m. He has been robbed twice and "stuffed" often, but he still thinks New York is "the greatest city in the world."

"And the people here are the funniest in the world," he said. "I get most of my ideas from them."

House subcommittee angered by Badham 'stupidity' remark

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Armed Services Committee may be the first to line up for combat in a new draft, if a recent intramural skirmish is any clue to a yearning for battle.

Census' success in hands of public, director says

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the 20th national head count about to get under way, the Census Bureau reports it is ready and able to do its part.

"Whether it's a good count depends on the American people," Census Director Vincent Barabba said Tuesday. That assessment was based on the fact that the Census Bureau is counting on most Americans to fill out forms — which they are to receive in the mail Friday — and then mail them back to the government by April 1.

The forms are going to 86 million homes and the bureau is hoping 80 percent of them will be returned.

eral days ago as Energy Secretary Charles W. Duncan testified.

The issue in dispute: whether "stupid" was an apt adjective to describe the panel.

Duncan was explaining that President Carter hadn't changed his mind and still opposed reprocessing spent nuclear fuel. He said the plutonium produced from the operation could lead to the proliferation of bomb-suitable nuclear materials.

That didn't sit too well with conservatives on the panel.

"You're begging us to be stupid," said Rep. Robert E. Badham, R-Calif. His point was that other nuclear-capable nations were already processing their spent fuels.

BUT REP. Bob Carr, D-Mich., told Duncan: "You don't need to beg this committee to be stupid. We do it very well by ourselves."

Duncan, a former deputy secretary of defense, settled back in his chair and watched the rockets fly.

Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Calif., who was presiding at the hearing, demanded to know what Carr meant by his "reference to the stupidity of this committee."

Did he mean the whole subcommittee was stupid, or was he just making a statement about individual members, or what?

Carr reiterated that he thought the subcommittee didn't need any help in "making ourselves look stupid."

Redfaced, Wilson demanded the record show Carr was speaking for himself and not on behalf of other panelists.

SEN. BOB DOLE, R-Kan., is back full time in the Senate — but the erstwhile presidential candidate's heart may still be on the campaign trail.

The Senate Finance Committee was discussing the nomination of Abraham Katz to be assistant secretary of commerce. Katz had submitted a detailed, three-page resume.

Said Dole: "The resume looks good. It's better than George Bush's."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. offered what sounded like mixed admiration for President Carter's resolve not to serve alcohol in the White House on "one of the most sacred days of the year."

That of course, was St. Patrick's Day. The event was a reception at the White House that O'Neill had attended.

At a news conference, the Irish-American congressional leader noted the absence of such liquid refreshment at Carter's table. When reporters asked if Carter hadn't served even wine, O'Neill scoffed: "Oh, wine, sure. But you don't call that booze."

Meanwhile, O'Neill's "double," New York actor Ed Steffe, may soon be making a comeback.

STEFFE'S appearance in a GOP television commercial as an O'Neill lookalike whose Lincoln Continental coasts to a stop despite warnings that he's running out of gas "has proven a big hit" around the country, says Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich.

Vander Jagt, chairman of the House Republican Campaign Committee, said "we're trying to raise the money now" to hire Steffe back for a command performance.

But the ad makers may have to get a new set of wheels for Steffe.

Shortly after the GOP ads started appearing, O'Neill got rid of his leased Lincoln.

Hardly. The House speaker, one of the chief congressional backers of the bill to bail out Chrysler Corp., now barrels around in a luxurious blue Chrysler limousine.

Hall of Clifton Park, N.Y. won the Grand National Pair Championship.

Randi Montin of Whittier and Bill Side of Pasadena were fourth, followed by Mike McMahon of Downey and Erik Paulsen of Culver City in fifth.

The Women's Pair Championship went to Midred Boyce and Barbara Norwood, both of Austin, Tex. In second place were Hermine Baron of Los Angeles and Beverly Rosenberg of Sherman Oaks.

Twelfth place in that category was held by Los Angeles players Jan Cohen and Marilyn Abrams.

New Yorkers Peter Weichsel and Neil Silverman claimed victory in the Men's Pair Championship.

The Vanderbilt Cup in the Knockout Team Championship went to Miami residents Bud Reinhold, Robert Levin and Russ Arnold and Jeff Meckstroth of Reynoldsburg, Ohio and Eric Rodwell of Lafayette, Ind.

A team headed by Beverly Hills bridge teacher Mary Jane Farell tied for fifth place.

Earlier in the tournament, Bob Feller of Albany, N.Y. and Jeffrey declined Tuesday to identify the donor.

"Let's hope this settles it," said Mayo, who said he would pay the $8.50 in court costs out of his own pocket.

A deputy marshal assigned to Mayo's court delivered the cash to Mrs. Russell and she handed over the wind-up doll.

"I'm glad it's all over," said Mrs. Russell. "I think the judge was tired of all this."

The little blonde, wind-up doll, Stephanie's seventh birthday present in 1979, was left at Mrs. Russell's day-care business when Mrs. Dressin withdrew her daughter and 6-year-old son last June.

Mrs. Russell said she offered to return the doll in June "but Stephanie's mother refused to pay" the last week's bill under an agreement requiring two weeks' notice.

When Mrs. Russell sued for the money in small claims court, Mrs. Dressin countersued for $750, claiming her daughter's doll had sentimental value and was being held hostage.

Mayo heard the case and awarded a $52 judgment to Mrs. Russell and one for $11.89 as the retail value of the doll to Mrs. Dressin.

A day later, after word was out that Stephanie still couldn't get her doll, Mayo said he discovered a new state law allowed him to decide what is "equitable." He ordered the girl's doll returned, but both women said they planned appeals.

California pair winners of bridge championship

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Mike Schreiber of Thousand Oaks and Oakland resident Paul Lewis are the winners in the four-session Open Pair Championship that closed the 12-day North American Bridge Tournament here.

Second place went Sunday night to Jim Robinson of Los Angeles and Stellos Touchides of Sun Valley.

The Vanderbilt Cup in the Knockout Team Championship went to Miami residents Bud Reinhold, Robert Levin and Russ Arnold and Jeff Meckstroth of Reynoldsburg, Ohio and Eric Rodwell of Lafayette, Ind.

A team headed by Beverly Hills bridge teacher Mary Jane Farell tied for fifth place.

Innovation helps middle class get bargain homes

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — Connie and Rick Nieto, just married and in their 30s, wanted a baby and their own home. They figured one dream would have to wait.

"We figured we couldn't have a baby at 40, but maybe we could have a house later," Mrs. Nieto said. They had resigned themselves to raising a family in an apartment, when an innovative housing program made their second dream come true.

Just as they learned they would be parents, they also found that Palo Alto Housing Corp. had picked them, by lottery, to have a chance to buy a new condominium for $40,000.

Slightly more elaborate models in the development were selling at nearly triple that price on the open market — outside the program.

State officials who push the "bargain home" plan call the concept "inclusionary" because it gets middle-class people into the housing market, people who might otherwise never get the chance.

development for the state Housing Department, says Palo Alto's plan is more effective than those tried elsewhere because it ties the price of a BMR unit to the cost of living, limiting the profit a BMR owner can make when reselling.

"That means 30 years from now, they're going to have affordable housing in Palo Alto," Williamson said.

Oddly enough, despite the demand for BMRs, the city has a low rate for new construction and is not an ideal site for the program. In the last four years, only 50 units have been involved in the program. That rate gives BMR candidates "very little chance to be optimistic" about moving into a bargain home in the near future.

Yet BMR candidate Barbara Ellison said she's willing to wait two or three years to live where "the schools are excellent" and the city is safe and orderly.

"The market rate is established by what the buyer and seller are willing to agree on. ... It has to be as good as the buyer can get elsewhere."

Nicki Prentice lives in the same condominium development as the Nietos. A real estate agent, she says a three-bedroom, two-bath unit that cost $130,000 only 18 months ago could now bring its owner $230,000.

She uses those figures to discredit what Ms. Seman calls the second "myth" attached to inclusionary housing — the notion that market rate owners resent neighbors who paid far less for their houses.

And she calls the $8,000 or so profit that BMR owners can obtain after, say, two years, "not exactly peanuts, either."

Nieto, an elected officer of the development's homeowner association, agreed with his neighbor's reasoning. Besides, he said, the four units of the development that were sold as BMRs don't have all the features of the 34 regularly priced units.

"These units are the smaller ones," Nieto said. "We have a one-car garage, everyone else has two-car garages. We don't have a trash compactor. We have a garage can."

IN THIS wealthy community a short drive south of San Francisco, where the average home costs $150,000, 50 people are on the corporation's bargain list, which has replaced the lottery. About 1,000 more want to get on the list, said Sylvia Seman, director of the corporation.

Under the Palo Alto plan, begun in 1974, builders of developments larger than 20 units must sell 10 percent of the units at below market rate (BMR) prices. The BMR price covers only the builder's construction and financing expenses; it doesn't cover land costs.

To be eligible, a family's income must fall within 80 percent to 120 percent of the median community income.

Dave Williamson, supervisor of community

WILLIAMSON hopes the concept will catch on: "We think it's a useful tool for communities that see the major solution to their housing problems in terms of new construction."

While the concept has been tried in Boulder, Colo., and in Maryland's Montgomery County, officials say the program is doing well only in California. Recently, the planning commission of posh Marin County north of San Francisco approved a law providing for bargain homes.

Williamson thinks the concept can succeed in California because builders "realize only a certain market can afford a $100,000-plus home." They want to build as many units as possible and know plenty of profit is still available, he

Frustrated consumers may get auto repair aid

Consumers frustrated by auto-repair problems may get some relief under a plan worked out by government and industry officials to upgrade existing complaint-handling systems.

According to Esther Peterson, the president's special assistant for consumer affairs, the plan is the result of a two-year study by the Office of Consumer Affairs of the way auto dealers were responding to customer problems.

program. Among the highlights:

—The percentage of consumer representation on each panel will be at least 50 percent.

—Each AutoCAP will be encouraged to ask community members to serve on the panel and will be urged to consider appointing recognized, local consumer representatives to the panel.

—All panel meetings will be open to the public.

—Each AutoCAP will be required to publicize its program.

—Dealers will be bound by the decisions of the mediation panels.

Mrs. Peterson urged individuals to contact local and state dealer associations to find out whether they are participating in the complaint program. "If the association seems reluctant ... write to NADA itself for assistance and advice," Mrs. Peterson said. The address is: National Automobile Dealers Association, 8400 Westpark Drive, McLean, Va., 22102. Letters should be addressed to Frank McCarthy, executive vice president.

The AutoCAP panels involve new car dealers only; they do not cover repair shops or mechanics. Consumers looking for an independent repair facility or garage can minimize problems, however, by taking a few precautions.

Shop around for a mechanic. Get recommendations from friends and check a firm's reputation and record with the Better Business Bureau. Visit any facility you are considering. Does the garage seem to be reasonably clean and well-equipped? Are there parts and tools lying all over the floor? Are employees courteous?

Ask if mechanics are certified and, if so, in what areas. The National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence, set up by auto manufacturers and dealers, tests and certifies mechanics in eight fields: engine repair, automatic transmission, manual transmission-rear axle, front end, brakes, electrical system, heating-air conditioning and engine tune-up.

Try to be as specific as possible when describing your problem. Don't simply say, "The car won't start." Provide a written explanation as well as a verbal one, particularly if you are dealing with a large repair shop where the person you talk to is not necessarily the one who will do the actual work.

THE NEWSPAPER BIBLE

Go on home; Your son is healed

At the end of the two days' stay He went on into Galilee, for as Jesus used to say, "A prophet is honored everywhere except in his own country!"

But the Galileans welcomed Him with open arms, for they had been in Jerusalem at the Passover celebration and had seen some of His miracles.

In the course of His journey through Galilee He arrived at the town of Cana, where He had turned the water into wine. While He was there, a man in the city of Capernaum, a government official, whose son was very sick, heard that Jesus had come from Judea and was traveling in Galilee. This man went over to Cana, found Jesus, and begged Him to come to Capernaum with him and heal his son, who was now at death's door.

Jesus asked, "Won't any of you believe in Me unless I do more and more miracles?"

The official pled, "Sir, please come now before my child dies."

Then Jesus told him, "Go back home. Your son is healed!" And the man believed Jesus and started home.

While he was on his way, some of his servants met him with the news that all was well—his son had recovered!

He asked them when the lad had begun to feel better, and they replied, "Yesterday afternoon at about one o'clock his fever suddenly disappeared!"

Then the father realized it was the same moment that Jesus had told him, "Your son is healed." And the officer and his entire household believed that Jesus was the Messiah.

This was Jesus' second miracle in Galilee after coming from Judea.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Diet always major item in good health

Dear Dr. Solomon: Are there any dietary factors to consider in caring for a patient with fever? — Mrs. G.S.

Dear Mrs. S.: A patient who has fever should be given plenty of fluids to replace the water the body has lost through evaporation. These fluids will also stimulate sweating, which actually helps to cool the body.

It used to be said that one should starve a fever. However, this is no longer considered good advice, since extra calories are burned by a feverish body. A light but nourishing diet, guided in part by the appetite of the patient, is generally the best course to follow.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am trying to become better educated about nutrition. In reviewing the Department of Agriculture Daily Food Guide, I note it includes serving sizes, which I assume are average portions. How should these portions be modified for someone who wants to lose weight? — Ms. G.L.

Dear Ms. L.: The servings recommended by the Daily Food Guide are not average, but minimum. They provide about 1,300 calories and from 80 to 120 percent of the Recommended Dietary Allowances for nutrients, and can therefore serve as a good basis for weight reduction. The Guide may also prove beneficial for sedentary people who do not need a larger caloric intake.

Active individuals, on the other hand, can adjust their diets by having larger servings or by using foods, such as butter or margarine, not specifically mentioned in the Guide. Even gravy and desserts, when used in moderation, may be incorporated in a healthy, active person's diet.

You and your physician may want to alter the Daily Food Guide to take into account your specific dietary needs, but it is certainly a good point from which to start.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My daughter, who is pregnant with her first child, has gained close to 15 pounds during the first three months. Since she has been advised by her doctor to keep her total weight gain during the entire pregnancy to about 25 pounds, she is planning to diet. Is there any reason why this would not be advisable? — Mrs. A.E.

Dear Mrs. E.: Although a total weight gain of 25 pounds during pregnancy is within limits, the gain is supposed to be achieved at an even rate of about a pound a week during the last six months. If your daughter restricts her caloric intake so that she gains only an additional 10 pounds during the last two trimesters of her pregnancy, she may be depriving both herself and her child of vital nutrients.

Pregnant women and mothers who breast-feed their infants have increased nutritional and energy needs. Specifically, they have greater requirements for protein, calcium, phosphorus, iron and folic acid, as well as for other vitamins and minerals.

I would strongly urge your daughter to consult her obstetrician before starting on a diet that may cause lasting harm to herself and her child.

Garwood attorneys try to move court-martial

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Attorneys for Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood, accused of desertion and collaboration with the enemy in Vietnam, say they will try to get Garwood's court-martial moved if they cannot get the charges dismissed.

Civilian attorney Dermot Foley said Tuesday the defense would seek dismissal of the charges by arguing the military is selectively prosecuting Garwood, has interfered with his ability to defend himself and lacks jurisdiction to prosecute.

Garwood could receive a maximum sentence of life in prison if convicted.

Residents wary in quake-prone Peru

By KERNAN TURNER LIMA, Peru (AP) — Tidal wave. The dreaded words passed from house to house recently in Callao, the seaport which serves Lima and other West Coast communities.

City officials said later that many residents had been awakened before dawn by telephone calls warning that Callao would soon be flooded by the wave. One Catholic church rang its bells to sound the alarm.

Hundreds of frightened persons ran from their homes in panic, rushing in the dark toward higher ground.

The rumor turned out to be unfounded, but the reaction revealed the apprehension building up in this South American capital over a U.S. scientist's published theory that a major earthquake, perhaps followed by a tidal wave, could strike southwestern Peru next year.

Concern over the theory is being expressed behind closed doors at the highest levels of government.

Civil Defense, the Red Cross and the National Geophysical Institute have proposed new expenditures on measures aimed at reducing the loss of life and property in a major earthquake.

Brian T. Brady, a physicist and consultant to the Denver (Colo.) Mining Research Center of the U.S. Bureau of Mines, published his theory in 1975 in the scientific journal "Pure and Applied Geophysics."

The article said there was evidence to suggest that an earthquake of at least 8.2 degrees on the Richter scale, a "great" earthquake, could occur in Peru in the second half of 1980. He later revised the date to July of 1981.

Brady estimated one epicenter would be some 31 miles offshore from the fishing village of Pucacana, a popular tourist spot only 37 miles south of Lima.

The Peruvian Civil Defense System reported to the Council of Ministers, the military regime's decree-making cabinet, that Brady's theory "is a probability which has its supporters and its detractors, but there is one thing no one is debating: Peru is located in a very active seismological zone, and sooner or later an earthquake of a potentially very destructive magnitude will occur."

Brady's paper bases his theory on laboratory studies of the physical causes of mine-collapses as applied to seismic readings of the aftershocks following the Lima earthquake of 1974. He said there was evidence that tension was building below the ocean floor off Peru toward the release of an immense amount of energy.

"Caretas," a Peruvian news magazine, interviewed Brady by telephone and quoted him as saying that the earthquake ought to be preceded by a series of lighter earth movements toward the end of this year.

He said if the smaller quakes did not materialize then his theory could be discarded.

Brady, contacted by

The Associated Press in Denver, referred reporters to Alberto Giesecke, in Lima, who is the director of the Regional Seismological Center for Latin America and the Geophysical Institute of Peru.

Giesecke said in an interview that he had called the Peruvian government's attention to the theory several years ago because it was based on a scientific investigation, but it was agreed not to cause undue alarm by publicizing the paper.

Giesecke says Brady believes his prediction is "more likely than not" to come true. Statistically that is more than a 50 percent probability.

Most other scientists, who are familiar with the theory give it probability ratings of from five-tenths of a percent to 20 percent, Giesecke said. He added that what was lacking was field work to support Brady's suppositions. Brady has never been to Peru, Giesecke said.

Giesecke said he had urged the government to invest $1 million to increase the institute's ability to monitor earth-tilting, radiation, magnetism and other precursors of earthquakes.

Earthquakes have nearly destroyed Lima at least 20 times in the last 500 years, Giesecke said. The quake of 1746 killed more than 1,140 persons in Lima. An accompanying tidal wave destroyed Callao and killed 3,800 persons.

Austin postpones sale of housing bond issue

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Austin City Council voted unanimously Monday to postpone indefinitely the sale of $100 million in local housing bonds.

The bonds were offered to bidders Monday but investors bought only about $30 million of the planned issue.

A city financial adviser blamed a deteriorating market and Texas' 10 percent limit on bond interest rates for the slow sale.

Bill Milburn, one of the city's largest builders, said he would begin returning escrow money to about 100 persons who hoped to qualify for homes under the local housing finance program.

The program was designed to provide housing loans to families with an annual income of $30,000 or less. Individual loans would be limited to $70,000.

Explosion death toll reaches four

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Pennzoil officials say two badly burned bodies have been recovered from a gas well rig that exploded and burned in the Gulf of Mexico, bringing the confirmed death toll in the blast to four.

The accident later this week. "The seas are running nine to 10 feet in the area with 25-knot winds today," he said Tuesday. "There's not a heck of a lot we can do right now."

Eight West Texas counties gain locations for wildcats

Wildcat operations have been announced in Andrews, Pecos, Howard, Kent, Dawson, Crockett, Tom Green and Irion counties.

1 Frank Jones is a 12,200-foot wildcat in central Dawson County, five miles west and slightly south of Lamesa.

CROCKETT WILDCAT J. Cleo Thompson of Dallas staked a 9,000-foot gas wildcat 13 miles northeast of Ozona in northeast Crockett County.
