Survivor recalls bridge disaster

By MATT BOKOR

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Making his regular drive to work across the Sunshine Skyway Bridge on Friday morning, Wesley McIntire noticed the bridge was swaying in the wind and rain.

Then his pickup truck was hurtling into empty space, 140 feet above Tampa Bay. The truck bounced off a phosphate ship and sank in the choppy water.

"I figured it was all over," the 56-year-old meat company dispatcher said from his hospital bed. But somehow he survived.

A 609-foot ship had rammed the twin span bridge during a morning storm, tearing out a 1,364-foot section of the southbound span where it climbs to 140 feet above the shipping channel. The Coast Guard said 32 persons were killed as a Greyhound bus, three cars and the truck plunged into the water.

Eighteen bodies, including that of a baby, were recovered before divers called off their search until today because of foul weather.

All 23 people aboard the Miami-bound bus were killed when it sank in 20 feet of water and tangled in the twisted steel from the mangled bridge, said Coast Guard Capt. Marshall Gilbert.

"The toll could go higher, much higher," said Gilbert.

McIntire, a 56-year-old resident of nearby Gulfport, Fla., said when he started out for work Friday morning, it was raining hard and visibility was poor.

"I almost decided not to go over," he said. As he drove across, the big steel structure began to move.

"The bridge was swaying," McIntire said. "I saw the ship and I figured it was all over when I couldn't stop. I hit

"The next thing I remember I was in the water and I managed to get the door open. I started swimming to the surface and I finally made it up."

He said he wasn't sure exactly how he escaped the sinking truck. "I remember opening the door and I forced my way out of there," he said.

McIntire popped to the surface and looked up to see an eerie sight: beams of auto headlights shining out through the gap in the bridge.

On the deck of the ship, the "Summit Venture," a crewman heard his frantic shouting and looked down to see McIntire in the water, blood streaming from a cut on his forehead. The seaman tossed down a rope ladder.

McIntire said he was too weak to climb up the ladder, so he just hung on until the crew helped him.

"They helped me up over the side and took me into a cabin," he said. "They were very good to me."

A two-inch square bandage covered a gash over McIntire's right eye. Dr. Edgar Buren said McIntire was in satisfactory condition.

No injuries were reported aboard the ship, although chunks of the bridge wreckage landed on its bow.

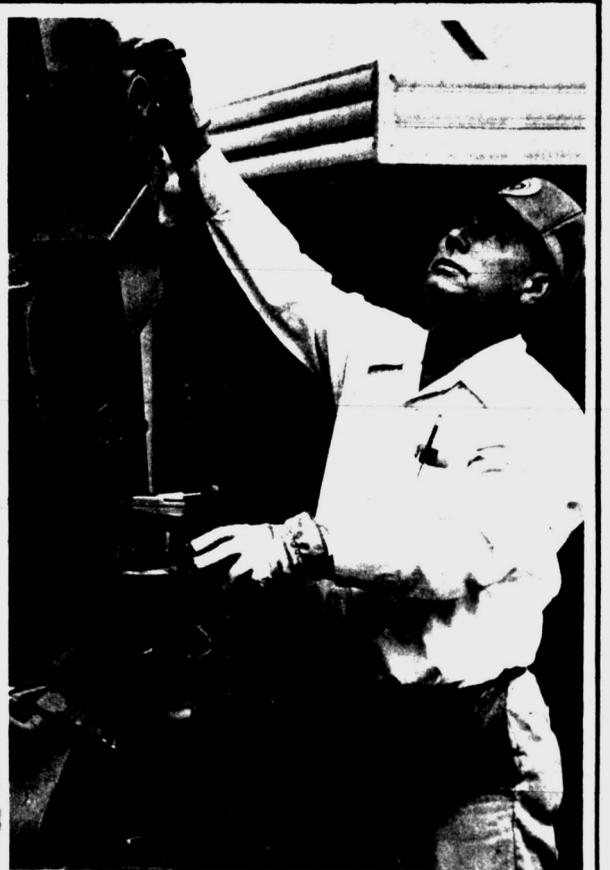

The only known survivor was McIntire.

"I felt it, I saw the superstructure falling," said Jay Hirsh, an ambulance attendant who witnessed the incident. "The first thing I did was look for heads bobbing in the water. There were none."

During a thunderstorm with winds gusting to hurricane force about 7:30 a.m., the 609-foot Summit Venture, a 33,912-ton cargo ship of Liberian registry heading from Houston to Tampa to pick up a load of phosphate for delivery to Korea, rammed into one of the bridge's twin spans across the shipping channel between St. Petersburg and Bradenton.

Hoisting a quarter-ton air conditioning unit several stories proves to be "a little unusual" for crane operator Gerald Hyde, 1804 Idlewild St., because "of the closeness of the building to electric wires. I've done some tighter, though," he commented Friday during the maneuver which would result in cooling a section of the old Gibraltar Savings building at 201 W. Wall St. Of his two helpers, upper left photo, Hyde quipped, "If they weren't so lazy they would carry it up the ladder." (Staff Photos by Edward McCain)

NEWS IN BRIEF Order observed

CHICAGO (AP) — The threat of a shutdown of the Chicago & North Western railroad's freight and commuter service waned Friday night as union officials said workers would obey a federal judge's order forbidding a scheduled strike.

Moments after Senior U.S. District Judge Joseph Sam Perry signed the temporary restraining order, officers and attorneys for the United Transportation Union said union members would not walk off the job at 9 p.m. as threatened.

Lawyers for the Chicago and North Western Transportation Co. sought the court order shortly after talks between the union and the company broke down. The primary issue in the negotiations was meal privileges for train crews.

Two killed

NORCO, Calif. (AP) — Bandits armed with automatic weapons held up a bank Friday, killed two policemen and fled into the rugged San Gabriel Mountains where they fought a gun battle with police late into the night.

One of the six robbers was shot dead at the scene of the holdup in this small farming community 60 miles east of Los Angeles.

A Riverside County sheriff's deputy was killed and two other deputies and three bystanders were injured.

Freighter sinking

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Eight crewmen abandoned ship late Friday night when a 125-foot freighter began sinking in the Gulf of Mexico, the Coast Guard said.

Officials said the freighter, whose name sounded like the "Ottoman," reported water had poured over its decks about 100 miles west of Fort Myers.

A faint mayday from the freighter said the crew was abandoning ship. The Coast Guard said further attempts to contact the vessel were unsuccessful.

A Coast Guard helicopter, a HC-131 search plane and several tugs were dispatched to the area, but the aircraft had not located the freighter late Friday night, the Coast Guard said.

Further details were not immediately available.

Iranian voters cast crucial runoff ballots

By The Associated Press

Iranians voted Friday in the crucial runoff round of elections for a new Parliament that next month may decide the fate of the 53 American hostages in Iran. A leader of the Muslim militants holding the hostages was quoted as saying the Parliament can make only one decision — to put the Americans on trial.

The hostages should be held indefinitely as "instruments" to guarantee continued revolutionary fervor in Iran, the militant leader, Habibollah Peyman, was quoted as saying in an interview with an Italian newspaper.

Iran's Pars news agency said Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh and Swiss Foreign Minister Pierre Aubert flew to Zurich on their way home from the Belgrade funeral of Yugoslav President Tito and discussed the U.S.-Iran crisis. The Swiss have been representing the United States diplomatically since President Carter broke relations with Iran last month.

Pars said Ghotbzadeh accused the United States of creating problems for Iranians living in America and asked the Swiss to do something about it.

The agency also said Ghotbzadeh had met with Yugoslav Foreign Ministry officials in Belgrade and they urged him to resolve the hostage issue.

Pars said the Yugoslavs told Ghotbzadeh they had met with representatives of third world countries in Belgrade for the funeral and while they support Iran's Islamic revolution, "they nevertheless stated that so long as Iran does not agree to release the American hostages, third world countries cannot fully defend Iran's anti-imperialist policies and its struggle against superpowers."

It reported Ghotbzadeh told the Yugoslavs the "hostage-taking was the will of a nation that was plundered" by America for 25 years and it "should not weaken the attitude of third-world countries to Iran."

The hostages also were the main topic of a meeting in Belgrade Thursday between Ghotbzadeh and U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim. Tehran Radio said they discussed the U.N. investigative commission on Iran that was formed to try and mediate the U.S.-Iranian crisis. The commission has been dormant since early March.

At U.N. headquarters in New York, Waldheim's spokesman said Friday the secretary general was "satisfied" with the meeting.

In another development, the Swiss ambassador in Tehran, Eric Lang, confirmed that an American woman arrested as an alleged CIA agent in the Iranian capital is Cynthia Dwyer, a free-lance writer from the Buffalo, N.Y., suburb of Amherst. Lang said his embassy was trying to get a lawyer for her.

The specific allegations against the woman have not been reported in Tehran.

Friday's balloting was the second round of the elections for Iran's 270-seat Majlis, or parliament. In the first round March 14, voters elected 98 legislators with clear majorities in their districts. In the runoff round they were voting for 149 seats for which no one received a majority.

Libyan leader threatens to cut off oil

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy, raising the stakes in a diplomatic feud with the United States and Britain, threatened Friday to cut off oil supplies to the two countries and withdraw all Libyan assets from them.

The threat came hours before the State Department announced that a settlement had been reached on its demand that four Libyans, accused of intimidating Libyan dissidents in the United States, leave the country. A deadline of 4:30 p.m. EST had been set for the Libyans to comply with the expulsion order, and police and FBI men were stationed around the Libyan mission when the settlement was reported.

A joint statement released at the State Department said Libya had agreed to recall the four and they would leave Sunday.

The four claimed they were students, not diplomats, and they could be kicked out of the country only through legal deportation proceedings and not by an expulsion order.

Under the settlement, the Libyans also "confirmed their interest in concluding satisfactory arrangements regarding the documentation of their remaining personnel" at the mission. Libya has replaced its traditional embassies with "People's Bureaus," but the State Department insisted the Libyans at the Washington mission register as diplomats.

In London, British government officials were reported preparing to order several members of the Libyan mission there expelled for allegedly improper activities.

In the past two months, five Khadafy opponents have been assassinated in London, Rome and Beirut. Two weeks ago Khadafy declared that Libyan exiles must return to their homeland or otherwise be "doomed wherever they might be."

Italian and British police are investigating whether Khadafy supporters are systematically killing his critics overseas. In the United States, the FBI reportedly discovered a "hit list" of two dozen Libyan students whom the Libyan government was trying to force to return home.

The official Libyan news agency JANA quoted Khadafy as saying he was "seriously thinking" of halting oil shipments to the United States, which obtains 35 percent of its oil from Libya, and to Britain, which depends on Libya for less than one percent of its oil.

He also was considering withdrawing Libyan assets from the two countries, JANA said. The value of those assets could not be immediately determined.

Khadafy has threatened to halt oil shipments to the United States in the past. This time, however, his statement coincided with a reported purge of officials at home as well as the warnings to exiled dissidents, steps that one knowledgeable oil executive said could indicate the new threat should be taken seriously.

"The crackdown at home is the heaviest ever," said this European oil company official, who was recently in Libya. "On the other hand Khadafy has always bluffed in the past."

Khadafy has rounded up many top officials on charges of corruption, say Arab sources in London.

This north African nation relies heavily on income from its oil sales. The United States is its principal customer, buying 44 percent of Libya's production of 2.1 million barrels.

"Libya is completely dependent on its oil industry," noted the European executive, who asked not to be identified. "It isn't something you can turn on and off overnight."

A British Energy Department spokesman said neither the United States nor Britain, whose North Sea oil fields are bringing it close to self-sufficiency, would "grind to a halt" with a Libyan embargo. Not only do both have relatively low dependence on Libyan oil, but also their oil inventories currently are high.

The JANA dispatch also quoted Khadafy as saying Libya will ask for "thousands of millions of dollars" from Britain, West Germany and Italy "as compensation for huge losses and damages incurred on Libya" during World War II.

Phase I disco seeks private club license; Letter of protest filed

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Rejected twice by Midland City Council in an effort to obtain a specific-use permit to sell alcoholic beverages, Phase I disco at 500 E. Nobles Ave. has filed an application with the Alcoholic Beverage Commission to become a private club.

Billy Flynn, district supervisor with the ABC Odessa office, said the application is dated April 10.

He added the Odessa office will send the application to Austin with no objections to it. However, the application is being protested by the same group of residents who opposed the earlier requests for a specific-use permit.

Phase I disco has been in operation for several months, but can't sell alcoholic beverages because it has no specific-use permit. Instead, customers bring their own liquor.

Phase I has been a source of controversy in the eastside neighborhood where it is located since the disco's owners applied with the city last fall to sell alcoholic beverages. In November, and again in March, the city council unanimously denied those applications on the basis that nearby residents opposed the permits.

It is these same people, said Wilburn Buttery, principal at Crockett Elementary School, who have submitted a written protest to the ABC.

PRIMARY POINT mentioned in the previous protests was the immediate proximity of the disco to Crockett Elementary, churches and residences.

However, Flynn said the disco legally is outside the required 300-foot distance from schools and churches.

According to the ABC supervisor, private clubs are allowed in that section of Midland under the city ordinance. "The zoning doesn't prohibit a private club in that neighborhood," said Flynn.

Richard Hennessy, director of planning and community development for the city, agreed, but he clarified what the city means by "private club."

"The city zoning ordinance does permit a private club in an area such as that," he said, adding that the area is zoned Planned District. "However, you must understand in what sense of the word the zoning ordinance means by private club."

Under the city code, private clubs, lodges, sororities and fraternities are allowed in multiple family areas, such as the neighborhood surrounding Phase I. By private club, the code is interpreted to mean an organization that has a regular membership of at least 50 persons, regular meetings and a set of by-laws.

HENNESSY SAID THE city hasn't been furnished with a description of how the disco proposes to operate. And if alcoholic beverages are sold, a specific-use permit still would be required.

"As I understand it, in a private club there is no sale of alcoholic beverages," said Hennessy. "They can provide a service of mixing and serving liquor but not selling it."

If Phase I doesn't operate within

Democrats to choose state delegates

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Democrats go through the second phase today of selecting 152 delegates to the National Democratic Convention where the party's presidential nominee will be named.

The first phase of delegate selection began on May 3 at precinct conventions held after the primary voting. The precinct convention selected delegates to the county conventions on the basis on presidential preference of those attending the precinct conventions.

Today, the county conventions select delegates to the June 20-21 convention in San Antonio, again on the presidential preference of those attending.

The third and final phase comes at the state convention when national convention delegates will be allocated on the basis of presidential preference shown by delegates as they sign in at the 31 state senatorial district caucuses.

The presidential popularity poll on the May 3 ballot, which was won by President Jimmy Carter, had no direct effect on selection of national convention delegates. Carter got 56 percent of the popular vote to 22 percent for Sen. Edward Kennedy, 3 percent for Gov. Edmund Brown, and 19 percent uncommitted.

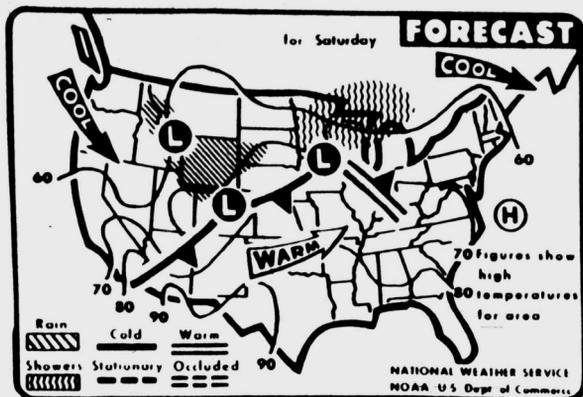

Officials at State Democratic headquarters say they have been unable to get definitive results from the precinct conventions.

State Democratic Chairman Billy Goldberg, also has said he plans to make no effort to gather county convention results on Saturday. He said he might make a comment on Monday or Tuesday.

In the May 3 Republican primary Ronald Reagan won the presidential preference primary, which had a direct effect on selecting national convention delegates, with 51 percent of the vote. George Bush got 47 percent, with 2 percent uncommitted.

State GOP Headquarters said that on the basis of the popular vote, Reagan got 61 of Texas' 80 delegates while Bush got 19 delegates.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Showers are due today over the western Great Lakes, according to the National Weather Service. Rain is forecast from parts of Idaho and Montana east into South Dakota and Nebraska. It will be generally cool in the Northwest and warm elsewhere. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Carter says he favors detente

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — President Carter, making his first speech outside Washington in more than six months, declared Friday that detente with the Soviet Union remains his goal, but said it must be "built on a firm foundation of deterrence."

"The Soviets must understand that they cannot recklessly threaten world peace — they cannot commit aggression — and still enjoy the benefits of cooperation with the West," the president said.

Hance announces opposition to Carter's oil import fee

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Rep. Kent Hance today announced his strong opposition to the new oil import fee imposed by President Carter.

"The new tax on foreign oil would do nothing to help with the present energy crisis, Hance claimed. "The only thing to be accomplished by these two pieces of legislation will be higher fuel bills," Hance said. "Neither will solve the energy crisis even though they are being promoted as major parts of the energy plan. They are simply revenue producers for an already over-spending federal government."

Warm afternoons, mild evenings add up to near-perfect forecast

A near-perfect weekend is in store for the Permian Basin beginning today, if the forecast can be believed.

"We may see changes in Congress this year which could play a significant role. Also, I will be looking for the first opportunity to legislatively abolish both the import fee and the windfall tax."

Warm afternoons, mild evenings add up to near-perfect forecast

A near-perfect weekend is in store for the Permian Basin beginning today, if the forecast can be believed.

Friday's high was 82 degrees, very pleasant when compared to the 101 record for the date set in 1967. The overnight low of 53 was closer to the record low of 43 set in 1938.

Area weather watchers were reporting the same clear skies and cool temperatures Midlanders enjoyed late Friday.

Balloonists survive big storms

By The Associated Press

Father and son balloonists Maxie and Kris Anderson survived thunderstorms and snowstorms Friday over Wyoming's Big Horn Mountains in the second day of their bid to make the first balloon flight across the United States.

The Andersons' ground crew said their 20-story-tall, helium-filled balloon, the Kitty Hawk, was heading north-northeast at about 26 mph and was located about 52 miles northwest of Casper, Wyo., at about 6 p.m. MDT.

That would put them at or near the crest of the Rockies and en route to the Bear Lodge Mountains and Devil's Tower National Monument in northeastern Wyoming before floating over the Dakotas.

Earlier Friday, the balloon it had crossed the Sierra Nevada and northern Utah in the second day of the planned 2,500-mile flight.

The Kitty Hawk had picked up speed during the late afternoon, with the 26 mph reported a good 16 mph faster than at midday.

"They indicated (by radio) they'd been jousting with thunderstorms all day and even a brief snowstorm, but came through in excellent shape and will continue through the night," said flight spokesman Auburn Mitchell.

"We had been concerned about their northerly direction but now it indicates they are on an easterly trend," he added. "We're fairly optimistic (about a successful transcontinental flight) once they get past the Rockies and out on the Plains."

Cold temperatures early Friday forced the Andersons to wear their warmest clothing as they floated over Utah. Doc Wiley, the flight engineer, said they reported by radio that temperatures had fallen close to zero degrees Fahrenheit.

DEATHS O.L. Rush

BIG SPRING — O.L. Rush, 78, of Big Spring, a retired engineer for the Texas & Pacific Railroad Co., died Thursday in a Big Spring nursing home following an illness.

Services will be at 2 p.m. today in the Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home Rosewood Chapel. Burial will be in Trinity Memorial Park.

Rush was born Aug. 2, 1901, in Amity, Ark. He was married to Mary Opal Bain on Nov. 15, 1920, in Durant, Okla. She died on July 2, 1971.

Rush, who had lived in Big Spring since 1924, worked for the Texas & Pacific Railroad for 36 years. He retired in 1963.

He was member of Temple Baptist Church.

Survivors include three sons, Eugene Rush of Big Spring, Wayne Rush of New Orleans, La., and Thomas Rush of Midland; a daughter, Loretta Faye Yater of Big Spring; two brothers, H.H. Rush of Randolph and Horace Rush of Whitewright; three sisters, Ruth Rainwater of Seymour, Beatrice Platt of Ada, Okla., and Era Hill of Sherman; seven grandchildren and a great-grandson.

speech since his Jan. 23 State of the Union address, Carter said the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan "has had a profound adverse effect on American public attitudes."

While that statement drew applause, the president's speech generally received a polite, but less than enthusiastic response from the World Affairs Council here.

"There can be no business as usual in the face of aggression," he said.

The president said a failure to respond "convincingly" to the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan "would only invite its repetition" elsewhere, and stated:

"Soviet success there, even at the high cost in blood and respectability which Moscow is now paying, could turn Afghanistan from a roadblock against aggression into a launching pad for further incursions," threatening Pakistan, Iran, and other nations.

"Soviet aggression in Afghanistan — unless checked — confronts all the world with the most serious long-term strategic challenge since the Cold War began," Carter said.

"To underestimate the magnitude of that challenge would constitute an historic error — an error with probably historic consequences."

His speech to the foreign policy group surveyed the "compass points" guiding his administration's international policy, which political challengers say has wavered unpredictably.

He promised that in seeking future peace, "we will stay on the steady course to which we have been committed over the last three-and-one-half years."

Later, at a "town hall meeting" at Temple University, Carter assured a questioner that U.S. foreign policy would not change under his new secretary of state, Edmund S. Muskie.

Muskie was sworn in Thursday to replace Cyrus Vance, who resigned because he could not support Carter's decision to attempt a rescue of the 53 Americans being held hostage in Iran.

The president said he believed Muskie would be a "much more statesmanlike figure" who would not get "so bogged down" in protocol or running the State Department.

vice that is adequate for guests. That food doesn't mean a full course, said Flynn, "but could be sandwiches or pickled pigs feet."

The law, according to the supervisor who has been working with the ABC for 24 years, is "pretty liberal. It's been getting more liberal with each State Legislature."

WHILE IT WAS the owners of the Phase I building — Charles Washington and Donald Allen — who had filed for the city's specific-use permit, it must be the club members who apply for the private club status, Flynn explained.

Although Washington and Allen own the premises, all they can do is get the people together to organize a club. These people in turn elect officers and choose someone to operate the building.

"Flynn said the person they 'hire to operate the club invariably is the one who owns the building. They (members) pay a percentage to the person who provides the building."

"In the final analysis, we don't deal with the people who own the building unless they are elected as officers," said Flynn. "The members can take their permit and move out of the building; the permit belongs to the members, not the people who own the building."

Having a permit for a private club doesn't necessarily eliminate the general public, Flynn said that under state law the club can issue temporary memberships for $2 a person that are good for 72 hours. There is no limit on renewing these temporary memberships.

"IT IS CONCEIVABLE that some night you may go into a private club that has 500 people. There may be only 100 who are regular members, but the rest have temporary memberships," said the district supervisor.

Granting Phase I the private club permit in actuality won't increase the ABC's control over the club. Flynn said the ABC already has control over public drinking spots whether or not that facility has a specific-use permit.

"If they (nightclubs) are open after hours and people are drinking, it is illegal."

He explained Midland's code states it is illegal to drink in any public place past 2:15 a.m. If the facility has a permit, then the owners are charged with the violation. But if there isn't a permit — such as in the case of Phase I's current status — the ABC can only charge the person drinking with being a public nuisance.

In essence, a place may stay open 24 hours a day, but no one can drink past 2:15 a.m., he added.

The application for the permit is the first step in a lengthy process. The state agency will have to set a date for a public hearing, and the ABC's legal division could come to Midland to take depositions.

But in objecting to that application, Flynn said, people "must have grounds for protest."

Air control panel taking topping unit comments

Midlanders may be getting a little more gray mixed with their blue skies in the future, but the smudging may be too slight to notice.

The Texas Air Control Board is taking written public comment through June 2 on an application from Texas Refining Co. to build a topping unit in Midland County.

The proposed 60-foot cracking tower and four storage tanks at full production would emit about 17 tons of nitrogen oxide and other matter into the air every year.

That may sound like a lot but, according to John Haagensen, environmental quality specialist for the Texas Air Control Board, anything less than 25 tons of emissions a year is "insignificant."

By comparison, most of West Texas' large gas plants turn out "hundreds of tons of emissions per year" into the air, he said. He said emissions from the proposed unit would be similar to those from a medium-sized tank battery in the oil fields.

The unit planned five miles northeast of Midland on land leased to Texas Refining by Basin, Inc., will be the first of its kind in Midland County.

According to John Holman, a partner in Texas Refining, the small, skid-mounted unit will use fairly new technology and will produce "virtually no smoke."

The company will truck in sweet crude oil, use natural gas to heat a fluid to about 600 degrees which will in turn heat the crude, condensing out crude oil to one storage tank, naphtha to another, diesel to a third and residual oil to the fourth.

The natural gas-fueled heater is the source of most of the expected 10 tons annually of nitrogen oxide emissions, Haagensen said.

"Very basically, the unit applies minimal heat to break out the three easiest things," Holman explained.

The tower will be topped with a pilotless flare that will burn "only in case of upsets" in the process, Haagensen said.

While a single one-man topping unit could hardly be considered "heavy industry," the Midland Chamber of Commerce, which helps recruit new industry to Midland County, has no official position on the kinds of expansion it attempts to attract.

"We strive to make it all the most attractive industry," Grant Billingsley, the chamber's director of economic development, said. "But we don't limit our prospecting to only those industries thought of as 'non-polluters.'"

Billingsley pointed to the Michelin Tire and Rubber plant being planned here as an example of an industry which "sounds like a polluter, but certainly will not be."

Judge says Houston station must air controversial film

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge ruled Friday that a Houston public television station cannot cancel a showing of the controversial film "Death of a Princess" and that it must be broadcast Monday night at the same time it is shown by other stations across the nation.

The University of Houston, holder of the license for KUHT-TV, Channel 8, had first scheduled, then junked plans to air the drama that drew strong protests from Saudi Arabia after its viewing in Great Britain.

"This is not a private-owned television station," U.S. District Judge Gabrielle McDonald ruled after hearing a full day of testimony. "It is public. When the state government becomes involved in television it has to make sure decisions are not based on politics. Decisions on programs to be seen cannot be based on politics."

Greg Wilson, an assistant state attorney general representing the university, said he would appeal the ruling, although time is short.

Only six other public television stations have refused to air the show. Five of them are in South Carolina and one is in Los Angeles.

The production resulted from a British journalist's five-month investigation of the public execution of 19-year-old Princess Misha, who had

Student winners named in Alamo crafts fair

Ribbons were awarded Friday in 10 divisions in the Alamo Junior High School student council-sponsored crafts fair. Stacy Hawkins took the grand prize for her macrame owl. First place winners were Danny Ramirez, Loren Schellabarger, Penny Hood, Carrie Marchant, Michelle Boone, Darcy Cano, Stacy Hawkins, and David Butcher. Second-place ribbons were awarded to William Willmon, Robin Hood, Rick Holman, Tommy Flores, Mike Elliott, Deirdre Howard, Sonya Bostwick, Elicia Dunn, Darrell Cleere and Janet Garner. Students entered items in 10 divisions, including four model categories, two cooking categories, sewing, art work, assorted crafts and teachers' crafts. Students viewed the exhibits in the library before and after school and during lunch periods. Robin Hood was chairman of the crafts fair committee. Student council sponsor is Jill Williams.

April prices register smaller rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inflation at the wholesale level slowed down considerably in April, as prices rose 0.5 percent, the smallest amount in 11 months and far less than March's 1.4 percent surge, the government said Friday. Until April, wholesale prices were accelerating at an 18 percent annual rate. If last month's pace continued, prices would rise only 6.2 percent a year, although a continuation of this trend was viewed as unlikely. Referring to the April price report, the president's chief inflation adviser, Alfred Kahn, said, "I find it difficult to say anything very optimistic about it."

which are products only semi-processed. It was the smallest increase since July 1977. — A 3.5 percent decline in crude goods prices, the third lallof in the last four months. The Labor Department measures wholesale, or producer, prices at three stages: finished goods, ready for retail; intermediate products; and crude, or unprocessed items. Wholesale price trends often show up at retail outlets within a short period. Consumer prices are currently accelerating at an 18.2 percent rate. April's consumer price figures, due later this month, also should show some price moderation, economists predict. Not all of April's wholesale figures were on the downtrend. The price for capital equipment, which is used to manufacture other goods, climbed 1.9 percent, the Labor Department said. That is more than twice as much as in February or March. The price of all finished goods, except energy and food, rose 0.6 percent, more than in March, but less than in January and February, the department said. A 9.8 percent decline in gold jewelry prices and a 27.7 percent drop in household flatware prices were more than offset by increases for cars, cosmetics, pharmacy items, nonalcoholic beverages, household furniture and mobile homes, the department said. At the same time, few economists expect another food price dip as sharp as April's. "This clearly can't continue," said Courtenay Slater, the Commerce Department's chief economist. "They must go back up some if we want farmers to produce," she added. Many farmers are being pinched between rising costs and softening food prices.

'Tired taxpayer' has his day

By GARTH JONES AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The turkey let go a couple of ear-splitting gobbles and a frenzied beating of wings, but the tired Texas taxpayer had his day Friday on the front steps of the Capitol. "This turkey is in no worse shape than I am. I've had my tailfeathers plucked too," said former Dallas state Rep. Ben (Jumbo) Atwell, playing the part of the "tired Texas taxpayer." A beat-up top hat and a faded Cowboys T-shirt made his attire noticeable, to say the least. Waggoner Carr, head of Texas 13 Inc., a statewide organization supporting balanced government budgets and tax cuts, stepped carefully around the big white turkey to give Atwell a certificate. "I'd like to have the frame back," he said. "With taxes the way they are, we can't afford a new frame every year for the Turkey Award." Carr, a former state attorney general who is now an Austin lawyer, explained the ceremony was in honor of Tax Freedom Day, which falls on Sunday. Normally, Texas 13 gives the Turkey Award to a government agency or official for outstanding excessive, wasteful spending. This year it decided to honor the man who pays the taxes. "May 11 is both a day of mourning and a day of joy for every American taxpayer," Carr said, above the gobbles. "It is sad to realize that the average Texas taxpayer has had to work from Jan. 1 to May 11 just to pay our yearly share of taxes to all levels of government, federal, state and local. "May 11 will be joyful because then we can start working for ourselves and pay some of our own debts." Carr estimated that by 1988 the average taxpayer will be keeping only 37 cents of every dollar earned.

with the tax collectors taking 63 cents. "We had Tax Freedom day on May 6 in 1978 and on May 8," Carr said. "I don't know when it will be in 1981. Depends on when we get our taxes paid." He shook hands with George Behrens, a youthful turkey raiser of Round Rock, and wished him good luck, minus taxes, when he sold the turkey.

Drought, war drive many to refugee camps

By BOB DIETZ

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — Drought and war have forced millions of starving people into refugee camps in Uganda, Ethiopia and Somalia and hundreds of thousands face famine, relief officials said Friday. Thousands have already died.

Crops maturing in the fields offer hope that the shortages in Uganda will ease by July. But meanwhile food reserves are vanishing.

"The situation is growing more critical every day. Only the relief distribution programs have kept it from getting out of hand," John Woodland of Oxfam, the British aid group, said Friday.

The World Food Program, another relief agency, estimates 500,000 face famine in Uganda.

Corruption, inefficiency, indifference and low morale have embittered many aid experts here, officials said in interviews. Most agencies have sidestepped the government in distributing food, they said.

"I wouldn't dream of using the government to distribute what we bring in. Too much of it would simply disappear," an aid official said.

Black market food prices exacerbate the situation, officials say. Half-liter containers of milk, officially pegged at about 35 cents, are sold illegally on Uganda street corners for about $3.50.

In war-torn Ethiopia, officials this week turned to the West with a desperate appeal for drought relief. Relief officials estimate 1.5 million people are in refugee camps.

Ethiopia's rulers, who apparently suppressed news of the disaster earlier, took Western diplomats and relief agency representatives on an official tour.

Ethiopian officials said that in the Ogaden region alone more than a million of the region's 3 million people are starving.

Relief officials fear the crisis in Ethiopia might reach the proportions of the Wollo province famine of 1973 which claimed the lives of 200,000 people.

Ethiopia is fighting a hit-and-run war against ethnic Somalis trying to separate the Ogaden from Ethiopia and annex it to Somalia. Ethiopia also is fighting secessionists in its northeastern province of Eritrea, which provides the country's only outlet to the sea.

The Soviet Union sends military support to Ethiopia but apparently has given very little aid for drought victims. Lisbeth Hellberg, a Swedish journalist who visited the stricken area recently, said she only saw one Soviet helicopter delivering food.

Ms. Hellberg said one Ethiopian official told her: "We've got friends who help us with the military hardware but when we need other assistance we have to turn to the West."

Nearly 1,000 people a day are flooding into refugee camps in Somalia from Ethiopia, its hostile Marxist-ruled neighbor, officials for World Vision International in London said Friday.

World Vision, a California-based agency, announced a 420,000 pound — $496,000 — relief program starting next week. The group estimates there are 1.5 million refugees in Somalia, which has a total population of less than 4 million. The group said Somalia has "the largest refugee problem in the world."

Melissa Wells, head of the United Nations Development Program in Uganda, said after a tour of the Karamoja region that five children were being buried each day at one Roman Catholic mission at Namalu.

Some 4 million Ugandans, nearly a third of the population, are affected by drought in the northern half of the country, aid donors say.

Western aid officials estimate that more than 15,000 tons of food have been delivered or earmarked for Uganda since March 1, when President Godfrey Binaisa appealed for help. Officials say much more food is needed but add that distributing it in Uganda is difficult.

"Up in the drought areas, people cooperate. They have to. Down here is the problem. If it fell to the government, it would take years to distribute what we've sent," an aid official said.

Pope, Runcie hold joyful meeting

ACCRA, Ghana (AP) — Pope John Paul II and the new Archbishop of Canterbury, Robert Runcie, held a "joyful and moving" meeting Friday in another step toward closer relations between their churches after four centuries of division.

"The time is too short and the need too pressing to waste Christian energy pursuing old rivalries," the two religious leaders said in a joint statement after their meeting.

They described the 50-minute meeting as a "joyful and moving occasion," adding that the "talents and resources of all the churches must be shared if Christ is to be seen and heard effectively."

The pope, in the fourth stop on a tour of six African nations, and the archbishop, in Africa to inaugurate a new diocese in Zaire, arranged the meeting, their first, when they learned their paths would cross here.

Runcie called on John Paul at the residence of the Roman Catholic archbishop of Accra.

Later, Runcie declined to reveal the content of their private conversation, but called the meeting a chance for the Catholic and Anglican churches to work together to promote the "freedom and fullness of life that is the birthright of every person born into this world."

"It seems providential," he said, "that our first meeting was not in Rome, not in the spotlight with all the protocol but as two people visiting Christian congregations in a pastoral way."

The pope is spiritual leader of 720 million Roman Catholics worldwide, including 1 million in Ghana. Runcie is spiritual leader of 65 million Anglicans, which include the U.S. Episcopalians. Of Ghana's 10 million people, half are Christians. The non-Christians include a million Moslems. In 1534, King Henry VII of England broke with the Roman Catholic church over its refusal to grant him permission to divorce his wife Katharine and he became head of the Church of England.

After their meeting, Runcie left for Zaire and John Paul flew in the presidential jet to Kumasi, 180 miles northwest of Accra, where he received one of the most tumultuous welcomes since he began his African trip May 2 in Zaire.

More than 1 million persons lined the motorcade route, and hundreds of police to keep the crowds back from the pontiff.

In a spectacle of pomp and ceremony, the pope and the king of the Ashanti, one of Africa's oldest tribal dynasties, exchanged greetings in a crowded sports stadium in the up-country city of Kumasi.

As tribesmen boomed gongs and beat drums, the king and his entourage walked to the pope carrying gifts of gold and silver boxes and an ivory tusk to pay homage to the leader of the Roman Catholic Church.

The white-robed pontiff descended from a wooden platform set up as an altar to greet the king, Otumfuo Opoku Ware II, 61, who was working as a lawyer in Britain when called back in 1970 to lead the 2-million-strong tribe.

John Paul took the king's hands in his own in a sign of peace and respect. A few minutes later, he walked across the field where the royal entourage was seated under cloth umbrellas, to repeat the gesture.

The meeting with the tribal king, in a stadium filled with 50,000 people, was both a sign of respect for African traditions and ecumenical.

The king is Anglican — baptized at the age of five — as are many of the tribe, which also includes Roman Catholics.

He sat under a crimson umbrella while the pope said Mass. A man-in-waiting fanned the king with an 8-foot palm leaf in the midday tropical heat.

The king, wearing a wool headband studded with golden stars, followed the Mass intently in the royal "box" — a line of 20 huge cloth umbrellas erected on the stadium infield.

On Saturday the pope departs for Ouagadougou, capital of Upper Volta.

Zimbabwe seeks aid

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Robert Mugabe of Zimbabwe, the former British colony of Rhodesia which last month became independent after seven years of guerrilla war, called on Britain Friday to help obtain more international aid for reconstruction. The United States has given about half of a pledge of $50 million in aid, a Zimbabwe official said.

The man who led the Patriotic Front guerrillas with Joshua Nkomo told Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington the Western nations and others had failed to meet pledges made during the Zimbabwean peace negotiations in London last fall.

Following a 50-minute meeting at 10 Downing Street in what British officials called "an excellent atmosphere," Mugabe told reporters Zimbabwe will be seeking financial and technical help from Britain in addition to the three-year aid package of $194 million it already has pledged.

Texas hospitals have high indigent patient care bills

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — An indigent mother ran up an unpaid bill of $265,000 at Austin's Brackenridge hospital for care of her newborn baby.

San Antonio taxpayers and paying patients subsidized medical treatment for 5,236 illegal aliens last year at a cost of $2.6 million.

Those are two of the more dramatic illustrations of the problems Texas public hospitals are having with the cost of medical treatment of indigents.

A report approved by the Texas Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations on Friday outlines the problem and suggestions that have been made for dealing with it.

Most court cases and attorney general's opinions on the subject say counties are obligated to pay for medical services to indigents. But commission staffer Jorge Anchando said a 1930 court decision suggests a county may not have this duty if it does not have a county hospital.

There is no legal definition of indigent, the report says, and no way for one county to force another to pay for treating poor people who cross county lines for medical care.

"The Legislature has rejected several bills in the past that would have authorized provider counties to sue for services rendered and the ensuing court costs," the report noted.

Hospitals are required by law to provide emergency care to anyone, regardless of place of residence or economic condition.

"Ironically, the person who may most need to have medical attention may have the most difficult time receiving it," the report said. "... To much free hospital care also impacts a public hospital's ability to provide quality health care. Some hospital administrators ... have noted their hospitals' inability to attract needed physicians and other hospital personnel because of revenue shortages resulting partly from increasing indigent costs."

Refugee team formed

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — An international team with representatives from the United States, Britain and Costa Rica plans to go to Havana next week to help the Cuban government organize an orderly exodus of the Cuban refugees, a 20-nation conference announced Friday.

A Costa Rican official who asked not to be identified said Cuban President Fidel Castro's administration has agreed in principle to allow the team into Cuba, but it is not clear to what extent that government will cooperate with the effort.

"We have to just wait and see. But I think Cuba, with all the international pressure on it about the people wanting to leave, will have to go along with us," the official said.

The 20 countries also agreed to take in some refugees and pledged a total of $1 million to help with the exodus, the source said.

Costa Rican president Rodrigo Carazo called the meeting to organize an international effort to help the refugees.

New tongue built for Colombian youth proves world's greatest psychotherapy

By DOLORES BARCLAY

NEW YORK (AP) — Three years ago, Jorge Gonzalez was a bizarre, elfin child. He had floppy, oversized ears, a bird-like, pointed chin and a mouth that was tiny at its opening and huge inside. He was 10 years old and looked 6.

Doctors said his strange appearance was due to an unexplained birth defect: Jorge was born without a tongue.

The defect distorted his facial structure. The absence of a tongue made eating a problem and caused malnutrition.

But in 1977, he came from Bogota, Colombia, to New York, where a plastic surgeon created a tongue for Jorge out of tissues and muscles in his neck. Next month, in the latest refinement on the operation, the tongue will be trimmed and sculpted. Doctors say he already looks and feels much better.

"From the first operation on, he's grown tremendously — almost a foot," said Dr. Richard Boies Stark, attending surgeon of the plastic surgical service at St. Luke's Hospital Center.

"When he first came up from Colombia, he was stunted in growth because of malnutrition. Everything he ate he had to push with his finger to a little gullet in the back of his throat. "He also wasn't able to handle liquids very well. He'd choke," Stark said.

In addition, the boy could hardly talk. Today, with his new tongue, Jorge can eat normally. His speech also has improved, said Stark.

The doctor said there were no clues in the family history or in his mother's pregnancy as to why the child was born tongueless. He is an only child, born when his mother was in her 30s.

Jorge was not mentally dull, Stark said, but he was socially retarded.

"Other children were very cruel," Stark said.

Before the operation, the inside of Jorge's mouth was larger than normal and seemed even more cavernous because there was no tongue. There was bone where there should have been muscle, trimming the mouth to a smaller-than-usual opening.

Jorge's operation was a rare procedure, say medical authorities. There is little in medical literature about tongue reconstruction.

The first operation was in July 1977, when Stark reconstructed the tongue and did a bone graft. A year later, a larger bone graft was made. Last year, the tiny opening to his mouth was enlarged to give him a better bite.

A special fund set up by some of Stark's former patients paid for Jorge's anesthesia and stay at St. Luke's. "We did not charge anything," Stark said.

Jorge's tongue was made from the neck's strap muscles, which run from the collar bone to the chin. They account for certain sounds one hears in the voice.

First, his doctors made a slit on each side of the front of his neck. The flesh and muscles were pushed up and out, forming a ridge in the shape of a suitcase handle under his chin.

This ridge eventually became his tongue. It was skinned, partially detached from the neck, then pushed up into the mouth through the jaw, using a tunnel created by snipping into the jawbone and cutting away some other, useless bone that had grown into Jorge's mouth where a tongue should have been.

The strap muscles are "in front of the voice box and not terribly important," Stark said. "We can do without them, and I think this was probably a better use."

Skin from Jorge's buttocks was grafted onto his neck to cover the raw space left by the shifted muscles. A small piece of bone from the pelvis replaced the T-shaped bone that had been cut from the jaw.

"Jorge can now feel but he can't taste," Stark said. "The sense of taste is very crude. We taste sweet, sour and salt. Everything else is what you breathe."

Stark also performed cosmetic surgery on Jorge's ears to reduce their size, and when the boy returns to New York for final work on the tongue, Stark will also work on Jorge's misshapen nose. The boy's teeth are also badly placed, so he will see an orthodontist.

"When a person who has had an outstanding deformity starts getting improvement, it's the greatest psychotherapy in the world. Most shed phobias," Stark said.

"Fortunately, Jorge is just about the right age. He's going through adolescence now and I want to make him a good-looking boy."

Vice-presidential library contains just 120 books

By MIKE FEINSILBER

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Nance Garner said being vice president wasn't worth a bucket of spit, but others have said other things about the office and now they've collected a library of books by and about vice presidents.

Not a big library — only 120 volumes — but there's something in it about each of the nation's 42 No. 2 men — even vice presidents Elbridge Gerry, Daniel Tompkins, Schuyler Colfax and Levi Morton.

The library, four shelves-worth, is in the official vice-presidential residence for the rumination of Walter Mondale and his successors.

While Mondale was flying home from Josip Tito's funeral, it was dedicated Thursday night by second lady Joan Mondale at a party for the books' authors, collectors and donors.

Mrs. Mondale said the vice presidency has been held in low esteem. She ticked off some words that appeared in the titles of the books: "shadow," "eclipse," "unchosen," "second choice," "near great" and "not exactly a crime."

Michael V. DiSalle, a former Ohio governor and Washington lawyer said to have once sheltered vice-presidential ambitions himself, was there as co-author of "Second Choice," a 1966 book about the eight vice presidents who succeeded to the top when their bosses died in office.

"They did pretty well," said DiSalle. "John Tyler thought so little of the office that he didn't hang around Washington for the inauguration. When President William Henry Harrison died, they had to search for two months to find Tyler and swear him in."

Historian Marvin Kranz of the Library of Congress said it took a committee nearly a year to track down the books.

Garner is represented by two biographies. It was after serving two terms as vice president to Franklin D. Roosevelt and then going home to Texas that he made the comparison between his expectations and his expectations.

Two vice presidents — William R. King, who served under Franklin Pierce and died a year into office, and James S. Sherman, who served under William Howard Taft — are represented only by collections of funeral orations delivered in the Senate after they died.

On the other hand, some vice presidents were so prolific — Teddy Roosevelt wrote 25 books, all told — the collectors had to limit themselves to books in which the vice presidents had said something about holding the vice presidency.

Only one vice president, Thomas Jefferson, wrote a book while in that office. Jefferson wrote "A Manual of Parliamentary Practice: Composed Originally for the Use of the Senate of the United States" in 1801. It's in the library.

Mondale has two books about him and Spiro Agnew, whose autobiography is to be published next week, is represented by three.

Confessed historian Kranz: "I didn't dare, but I would have loved to sneak in a book I have in my office. It's called 'The Wit and Wisdom of Spiro Agnew' and it's all blank pages."

Black vets battled enemy, racism

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — During World War II, America's Lonely Eagle air squadrons flew 1,578 missions and destroyed 409 enemy planes. But today, former members of the all-black units are proudest of how they shot down racist Army policies that included segregated bases and hand-me-down planes.

Four of the veterans recounted their victories at a recent luncheon sponsored by a church in this central California city.

About 100 persons were on hand to honor Joseph Dixon Jr., a Fresno Housing Authority manager; Jesse Henry Simpson Jr., a retired sheriff's sergeant; Rueben Bilbo, a retired San Francisco postal worker; and Herman "Ace" Lawson, a former Sacramento city councilman.

"We went through some really rough and tough ordeals, the kinds I like to forget and put behind me," says Dixon. "At times you often wonder why you had on Uncle Sam's uniform because of the treatment we received."

"There were these black units fighting for the freedom of our country and here we were being oppressed by our own country. We were fighting to make the country a better place," he says.

The examples of racism he notes include segregated mess halls, mistreatment by white soldiers and even being jailed in a southern town where police wouldn't believe there were any black pilots.

It took the Army to get the Eagles out.

"We knew the Army was segregated, per se, but we didn't know we'd run into the sort of humiliation we ran into," says Dixon.

"For example, if the base was near a USO station where we could go for a meal, we couldn't go into the restaurant. We'd have to be served through the back door," he recalls.

Lawson flew 133 missions and won the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal of Honor before retiring as a major. But the color of his skin almost kept him out of the Army Air Corps.

When he tried to join, the enlistment officer told him: "Uncle Sam's not taking any night fighters."

He appealed to President Franklin D. Roosevelt and finally was allowed to train with the Lonely Eagles.

"We wanted to fight because we knew if this experimental business (black pilots) didn't work, there would be no blacks in the Air Force and no mixing of the armed forces,"

Lawson explains.

His recounting of the Lonely Eagles' accomplishments reflects a sense of pride common to many former members:

"We were the only outfit to sink a German destroyer with fighter planes. We blew that rascal out of the Mediterranean Sea. We were the only pilots to fly four different kinds of planes during the war.

"We were the only outfit in Europe which escorted bombers and never lost one to the Germans. And we shot down the last Germans of World War II."

Additionally, the Lonely Eagles helped win another battle. It was during World War II that the Army ordered an end to segregation on military installations.

Human ash repository

SEASIDE, Ore. (AP) — A group of investors that bought a 100-year-old, defunct lighthouse perched on a rock off the wave-lashed Oregon coast says the guano-covered structure will become a repository for human ashes.

Mimi Morissette, one of the owners of the Tillamook Rock Lighthouse, said the group originally considered selling it to some California investors who wanted to ship it to Los Angeles in pieces to build a restaurant.

"That didn't appeal to us much, and we started looking for other uses," she said.

She and others have formed Eternity Of The Sea Columbarium, which will operate the offshore tomb. She says they will soon be asking for ashes.

Snakes chase nuns away from convent

ST. STEPHENS, Wyo. (AP) — A plague of water snakes has mysteriously slithered into the St. Stephens Convent this spring, forcing the nuns to put the building in mothballs and decamp.

Dozens of the snakes, some a foot long, began appearing in the convent's basement, its kitchen, dining hall, bedrooms and even the chapel, when the weather turned warm.

And although the nuns were sure the creatures were slithering in through the basement, they couldn't find any cracks in the foundation.

So they moved into two empty houses at the Catholic mission in town on the Wind River Indian Reservation and called in an engineer to figure out what was wrong.

But he couldn't find any problem with the 100-year-old building, and he couldn't find any snakes either. The nuns say he concluded the serpents left the same mysterious way they came in.

The engineer advised them to sprinkle a liberal amount of moth cakes in the building to chase out any snakes still in hiding.

A trench also is being dug around the convent so the foundation can be resealed, the nuns say.

The building has been sealed up and in mothballs for two weeks now, and the nuns say they plan to move back in when the convent has been properly aired.

Fatal crash began with climbs, dives

PECOS, Texas (AP) — A plane that crashed and killed four young men was circling the city and making dives and climbs during stormy weather just before the fatal plunge, according to the Federal Aviation Administration.

"According to eyewitnesses, the aircraft climbed steeply, almost vertically, and then nosed down" and struck the ground, FAA inspector Al Pospisil said Friday. "It was similar to a hammerhead stall," in which a plane's nose drops abruptly from a steep climb to a steep dive, he said.

"The eyewitnesses said there was thunder, lightning, strong winds and dark clouds at the time — but not hard rain. The aircraft had taken off and was apparently making a sightseeing tour of the city, but this is not proven," Pospisil said.

"It was circling the city, making dives and climbs — zooming. The background of the pilot is that of a crop duster, which uses a similar maneuver to make turn-arounds at the end of a crop run," he said.

The FAA sent one investigator, and the National Transportation Safety Board sent another to the crash site, about a mile north of this West Texas city. Pospisil said investigators had drawn no conclusions yet as to the cause of the crash.

Memorial services were held Friday morning at Pecos High School for the four victims — Robert W. Lukins, 26, Donald Craig Woods, 21, James Barry Meacham, 19, and Robert Gary Harris, 18, all of Pecos. Separate funeral arrangements were pending.

Scenes from Texas history are depicted on the cover of Southwestern Bell's 1980 telephone books.

Distribution of books to residential customers will begin Wednesday.

Bell plans to distribute directories

Tips for consumers and a glance at Texas history are offered in the 1980 Midland telephone directory, which will be distributed beginning Wednesday.

Clay Styles, district manager for Southwestern Bell, said the new directory has 137 white pages. "The cover bears a striking painting of key figures from Texas history, selected with the help of the Texas Historical Commission," Styles said. An explanation of the painting appears on Page 1 of the Call-Guide pages.

Styles said one copy of the directory will be delivered to each residential phone customer. Additional copies may be obtained from any Southwestern Bell business office or Phone-Center Store after early June.

The district manager said 114,650 books are being printed with 67,727 of those being delivered to area residents by mid-May.

"The extra books are for new customers moving to Midland throughout the year. Also, businesses and customers sometimes wear out their books and need replacements," Styles said.

TMI operator to stay in business

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — The operator of the crippled Three Mile Island nuclear plant can stay in business and raise customer rates, the state Public Utility Commission ruled Friday.

But the preliminary order, scheduled for final adoption May 23, also says Metropolitan Edison Co. must stop charging customers for Three Mile Island's idle but undamaged Unit 1 reactor.

"The basic conclusion of the commission ... is that Met Ed should continue to operate as a public utility," the PUC order said.

"The commission will provide Met Ed the means of financial rehabilitation. However, we will write no blank checks on its ratepayers."

The rate increases will help Met Ed and its sister company, Pennsylvania Electric Co., replace generating power lost because of the March 28, 1979, accident in which radiation leaked from the site.

The net effect of the order will be to add about $3.70 to the monthly bills of average Met Ed residential customers and 75 cents to Penelec customers.

Met Ed customers are already paying an extra $3.45 a month, added on March 1 when the PUC conditionally approved a $55 million rate increase to cope with the costs of replacement power.

The chairman of General Public Utilities, parent company of Met Ed, Penelec, and the third TMI owner, Jersey Central Power & Light, said he could not discuss specifics before a final decision is approved.

"I am not going to react in terms of disappointment or gratification," said chairman William Kuhns. "We really have to study it. We have to meet with the bankers. They are our only source of money at this point."

Kuhns said Citibank, Chemical Bank — both based in New York — and other major GPU creditors will meet Wednesday to discuss the order. He said GPU and the banks will file responses to the PUC order by a May 16 deadline.

The PUC's final order in the case, which took five months to complete and produced a transcript of more than 4,000 pages, is not expected to differ substantially from this initial recommendation.

The commission found that the undamaged Unit 1 reactor, shut down since the accident pending federal safety hearings, is useless because of the plant shutdown and should be removed from utility rates for a six-month period starting June 2.

The action will cost Met Ed $27 million a year and Penelec $19 million, the PUC said.

CRMWD reports gain in April water deliveries

BIG SPRING — Municipal demands for water continued to gain through April, but industrial and oil company deliveries dropped, according to the monthly production records of the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

The oil-industrial figure was down by 159 million gallons, but 141 million gallons of the loss came from the cutoff of deliveries to Texas Electric Service Company's electric generating plant in Ward County. This disparity will continue through June, the anniversary of the cutoff order to conserve well supplies for municipal use.

For April, the municipal total was 1,247,718,000 gallons, up 5.63 percent. The oil-industrial total was 150,386,000 gallons, down 51.47 percent from April last year.

Through the first four months of this year, cities used 5,819,226,000 gallons of water, a gain of 4.66 percent. Oil-industrial deliveries stood at 601,826,000 gallons, 665,100,000 gallons less than for the first four months of 1979, but 530,000,000 of this were in the TESCO cutoff.

Deliveries to the cities in April included Midland, 367,000,000 gallons, down 3.58 percent; Odessa, 559,643,000 gallons, up 9.87 percent; Big Spring, 216,072,000 gallons, up 6.10 percent; Snyder, 93,490,000 gallons, up 9.66 percent; and Stanton, 10,650,000 gallons, up 25.45 percent.

10-year reunions set

The Midland High School and Lee High School classes of 1970 will have their 10-year reunion June 21.

A family get together and registration from 10 a.m. to noon will be conducted in the Girl Scout Center, 901 W. Dengar Ave.

That evening a dinner, program and dance is scheduled to start at 7 in the Midland Center at Wall and Main Streets.

Cost of the reunion is $30 per couple and $15 per single. Checks should be made to the 1970 MHS reunion and mailed to 3310 Camarie Drive, Midland, 79703. No refunds will be made after June 1.

Also class directories will be available for $2.50, according to Vicki Leaverton, organizer for the reunion.

Mummers auditions scheduled

Tryouts for the 32nd season of the Summer Mummers, opening June 27 for 28 performances, are scheduled for Sunday at 3 p.m. and Monday at 8 p.m. All roles will be double cast.

Everybody is welcome to audition and no prior experience is necessary. All crews will be organized at these two meetings. Also needed are volunteers for all backstage work.

ANNOUNCING THE GREATEST INVENTION SINCE THE DISHWASHER. THE STEAM MACHINE by Waste King. Thermador/Waste King
Waste King introduces the first dishwasher with a steam cycle. Steam goes places water can't. It moistens and loosens most dried-on food. And that makes our wash cycle work even better. Waste King introduces Electronic Delay Start™. Or when electrical demands are low. Pick the hour your dishwasher starts just by pushing a button. Waste King still has a special wash arm for each basket. Waste King still has a completely stainless steel tank. It's quiet (hush-coat surrounds it). It's durable (stainless steel inside it). It's wonderful (the strongest warranty in the business). The steam machine by Thermador Waste King. SSENSATIONAL! All models except #787

Sparks fly when HUD boss Landrieu tangles with Virginia congressman

By JIM LUTHER

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's not unusual for a congressman to use a public hearing to question the motives of a Cabinet member or the actions of his department. But it's rare when the secretary talks back.

Enter Moon Landrieu, secretary of housing and urban development.

Incensed that Rep. Herbert Harris, D-Va., had suggested last week that HUD may have a multibillion-dollar "slush fund," Landrieu told the congressman at a hearing Thursday:

"You have used the media to create the impression in the public mind that a scandal in the federal government has been uncovered.

"These charges are utterly and totally baseless and untrue."

Landrieu's denial was echoed by Rep. Edward Boland, D-Mass., chairman of the House Appropriations subcommittee that passes on the HUD budget, and Jerome H. Stolarow of the General Accounting Office.

Boland said HUD had gotten a bum rap in Harris' allegations. Added Stolarow: "The money (obligated by HUD for assisting low-income housing projects) is not being improperly used in any way."

Yet the GAO, an arm of Congress, faulted a HUD accounting procedure that makes it appear the department has less money on hand at the end of a budget year than is the case.

The GAO recommended that HUD change its accounting method and Landrieu said if the GAO insists, "we shall, of course, revise our procedures accordingly."

The testimony came at a hearing before Harris' House Post Office and Civil Service subcommittee on human resources. The hearing was called as part of Harris' investigation into why some federal departments spend unusually large portions of their budgets in the last few weeks of the fiscal year.

But when Landrieu took the witness stand, the hearing quickly focused on Harris' allegations that HUD "may have created a 'slush fund' of billions of dollars through the improper reporting of year-end obligations."

The congressman and the secretary exchanged words several times during the session.

"There is no slush. There is no fund," said Landrieu. He said Harris' allegations "can only serve to further alienate the public and weaken our political and governmental institutions."

"I've got the notion you want to come up here and fight and not to reveal," said Harris.

Landrieu, interrupted by Harris while reading a statement, said he saw no reason for the congressman to be proud about "being judge, jury and prosecutor."

The central issue in the dispute is how HUD accounts for money tentatively earmarked for assisting low- and moderate-income housing projects but which end up, for one reason or another, not being built.

The gist of Harris' point was that after such a project is canceled, the money HUD had set aside for it becomes available for whatever use the department wants, and the "slush fund... (could) be spent at HUD's discretion, without the knowledge or approval of Congress."

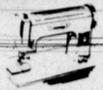

Landrieu said if such an obligation is canceled, the money must be channeled into a similar housing project — not to some other HUD program.

The GAO said HUD should not list such money as obligated until a binding commitment is made for a project. By listing the money as obligated, Stolarow said, if a project is canceled, HUD ends up "with significant amounts of obligational authority (money) in excess of that indicated by its year-end financial reports."

Boland, head of the Appropriations subcommittee on HUD, agreed that a better accounting of such money is needed. But, he added, the issue is one of a very technical accounting problem — one that should not be "exaggerated to the point that it could damage badly needed federal assistance for low- and moderate-income people."

Crews happy with controversial tank

By NORMAN KEMPSTER

FORT KNOX, Ky. — Placing a pinch of tobacco between his cheek and gum, Staff Sgt. Steve Armstrong said no, he does not believe the United States should buy larger numbers of less expensive tanks instead of the Army's new main battle tank — the $1.5-million XM-1.

ARMSTRONG, the commander of a four-man XM-1 crew, explained that the new tank has more safety features and is better designed to protect the crew in combat than are cheaper tanks; better, in fact, than any other tank in the world. Men can walk away from enemy hits that would be almost certain death for occupants of other tanks.

"With these vehicles, you have a chance to use the crew again in another tank," Armstrong said. And, given the increasing effectiveness of modern antitank weapons, "you are going to need to use those same four people again."

THE MEN who operate tanks here at the Army's armor center believe they not only would be better able to survive the battle in XM-1s but also would be able to fight more effectively in XM-1s than in other tanks. Anything less, they say, would be the worst kind of false economy.

Much is riding on the purported superiority of the XM-1. The Soviet Union has about 50,000 tanks; the United States has about 10,000. The Pentagon's plan to buy 110 XM-1s this year and 352 next year will not do much to reduce the Russians' 5-to-1 advantage.

But eventually, the Army hopes to buy 7,058 XM-1s. The General Accounting Office estimates that the program will cost $10.9 billion, an average price per tank of $1.55 million. By contrast, the Army bought 442 M-60 tanks last year for $374.8 million, an average of $847,000 each. The M-60, with considerable modifications, has been the Army's main battle tank since 1959.

PARTLY BECAUSE of the cost of the XM-1 and partly because many of its components — such as its 1,500-horsepower turbine engine — have never been tested in battle, the tank has generated a heated controversy. "The XM-1 tank's reliability is still uncertain," the GAO said earlier this year. The agency, which is the auditing arm of Congress, recommended that Congress limit purchases of the tank to a few a year "until the Army demonstrates conclusively that it has achieved acceptable levels of reliability, maintainability and durability."

But the soldiers who have been operating and repairing XM-1 prototypes for the last year express no such reservations.

"This is 100 percent better than any other tank," Staff Sgt. Steven Gomez of Delano, Calif., said. "It performs at least twice as well as the M-60. You can go 27 miles an hour in reverse in this tank. You could barely do that going forward with an M-60."

Spec. 5 Michael Sherman of Port Malibar, Fla., an XM-1 gunner, said the XM-1's main gun, a 105-mm. cannon, is able to hit small targets at ranges of a mile or more while the tank is moving.

"I have only fired about 40 rounds with this tank but I haven't missed yet," Sherman said. As an M-60 crewman, Sherman said, he could hit the target only about 80 percent of the time.

Pvt. Rod Burges, an XM-1 driver, said, "Driving the M-60 was like moving a house. This is like driving a Cadillac."

SGT. 1ST CLASS Lionel Perez said that in a battlefield engagement with Soviet tanks, the XM-1s, even though outnumbered, could take the offensive because of their speed, the laser-directed main gun and other features.

"We're offensive now," Perez said. "Our whole role has changed. It will require all new procedures. It is hard to break old habits."

The Army last month received the first two XM-1s built on the assembly line at Chrysler Corp.'s tank center in Lima, Ohio. One was sent here and the other to Aberdeen Proving Ground in Maryland. The 108 other vehicles ordered in the first year's contract will be delivered in coming months.

However, Chrysler turned out 11 hand-made prototype tanks before getting clearance to start assembly-line production, and they have been under a test program at Fort Knox for more than a year.

Although the Army is optimistic that the tank has overcome the problems of its early development, the Pentagon is not contractually committed to buy more than the first year's run of 110.

THE DEFENSE Department is scheduled to decide next September whether it will exercise the option to purchase 352 tanks next year.

A decision is expected in July 1981 on the rest of the 7,058-tank program. If the program reaches full-scale production, Chrysler would build 30 tanks a month after 1981.

For the financially beleaguered Chrysler Corp., the XM-1 represents business it can ill afford to lose. Chrysler has been building tanks since World War II and was the primary contractor on the 20-year production run of the M-60 series, and the firm's military profits have helped to offset losses from some other divisions.

The Army began the XM-1 program in 1971 after writing off as an expensive flop the MBT-70 project in which the United States and West Germany attempted to develop an international battle tank for use by all North Atlantic Treaty Organization nations.

IN 1974, the United States and West Germany agreed to conduct parallel tank development of the XM-1 and the German Leopard-2. In effect, each country agreed to buy the other's tank if it proved to be superior. Not surprisingly, however, each nation decided that it liked its own version best.

The history of XM-1 development has been one of controversy and mechanical difficulty. When Chrysler staged a showpiece rollout for a prototype model in February, 1978, for instance, the transmission stuck in reverse.

More troubling during the early stages of testing was the tendency of the turbine engine to choke on dust. The Army says improved air filtering systems have solved the problem but the GAO recommends development of an alternative diesel engine, which would be less susceptible to dust.

THE ARMY IS reluctant to even think about abandoning the turbine engine, however. It gives the XM-1 better acceleration and a higher top speed than any tank in the world, it has 30 percent fewer moving parts to go wrong on a battlefield and, unlike a diesel engine, it does not produce plumes of black smoke that help the enemy locate the tank.

Further, the 750-horsepower diesel engine that powers the M-60 would not be adequate for the XM-1.

The XM-1 can accelerate from a standing start to 40 mph in 25 seconds, a little sluggish for a sports car but a dazzling performance for a 60-ton tank. The vehicle's top speed is listed as 45 mph although the soldiers who operate it say it can do better than that in a pinch.

THE MOST distinctive feature of the XM-1 is the one the Army is most reluctant to discuss in detail. The tank's armor, although it looks like the plating on other tanks, is much tougher. The armor technology, based on a system originally developed by the British, is classified.

The tougher armor is just one of the features that make the tank safer for the crew, according to the Army. High-explosive ammunition is stored in a magazine separated from the crew compartment by a heavy sliding door. The tank is built so that if the skin of the magazine is pierced by an enemy antitank gun, the resulting explosion would vent through special "blast out" panels so the force would not reach the crew.

Automatic fire suppression equipment can put out a fire anywhere in the tank in less than a second.

Nevertheless, some nagging doubts remain about the tank in the world of the 1980s. It is a voracious fuel guzzler, making only 2 miles a gallon under perfect conditions and much less than that if things get rough.

The Army estimates that the tank has an operating range that far without being in danger of running its 492-gallon fuel tank dry. Those figures indicate a maximum fuel consumption of about 1.8 gallons a mile.

IN ADDITION, the tank is so heavy that a giant C-5 aircraft can carry only one at a time. That makes the XM-1 a questionable participant in a crisis in a remote area like the Persian Gulf where the Army could use only equipment that could be airlifted in.

Families, nation's leaders honor eight killed in Iran

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's leaders and the surviving relatives of eight servicemen killed in a futile attempt to rescue American hostages in Iran gathered in a sun-filled cemetery Friday and mourned "those who died in the dark desert night."

President Carter said they died because they valued freedom more than they valued life.

The president arrived at the white marble amphitheater of Arlington National Cemetery a minute early and told 2,000 just attending a service that he had met privately — and with "trepidation" — with the relatives of those who died in the raid.

None was unforgiving, he said. Instead, he said, he was embraced by each and told by each that the servicemen had been honored by the chance to free their countrymen.

To onlookers, Carter appeared moved by the service. During the singing of "God of Our Father," he seemed to wipe a tear from his eye and taken a deep breath.

The amphitheater was encircled by stubby white markers of America's war dead — miles and miles of grave-stones.

To the relatives, Carter said: "Every American feels your loss. Every American shares your rightful pride in the valor and the dedication to duty of those who died in the dark desert night."

Top military leaders, White House aides, members of the Supreme Court, the Senate and the House, and Mrs. Rosalynn Carter attended.

On the way, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy stopped at the graves of his brothers. For Edmund S. Muskie, attending the service was his first official act as secretary of state.

To one side, sat the wives, children and parents of the victims, the women in bright, summery clothing.

At one point, a soldier-attendant in dress uniform gently took a restless child from the lap of a new widow.

Carter said he prays that the hostages in Iran now will be freed without more bloodshed.

The eight commandos — average age 29 — died when a helicopter and a C-130 plane crashed in evacuation from the Iranian salt desert. Their mission, to find and bring away the 53 Americans who have been held for three months, had been called off when three of eight rescue helicopters broke down.

Carter said the raiders had volunteered "not because they cared too little for life to want to live it out to full old age, but because they cared so much more for the lives of our hostages and for the right of our people to enjoy the freedom for which this nation was founded."

Fifteen persons complete ACS Stop-Smoking Clinic

Fifteen cigarette smokers who wished they had never started the smoking habit were awarded certificates Thursday night for attending the eight-session Stop-Smoking Clinic sponsored by the American Cancer Society in Midland.

"Everyone attending the sessions learned something to help them quit smoking now or to help them quit in the future," said Tom Buford, chief volunteer "facilitator" at the clinic.

One of the 15 had already resolved not to smoke, and she attended the sessions for "reinforcement."

Another, who had smoked for decades, had cut down to one cigarette a day. And the only man — confirmed smoker Pat Anderson — to "complete" the clinic had cut down from a pack a day to four cigarettes a day, two in the morning and two in the evening.

The clinic, which lasted from April 11 to Thursday, helped smokers understand why they started the habit in the first place, what motivates them to smoke, why they smoke, the detriments of smoking and the benefits of giving up the habit.

"If somebody wants to smoke and doesn't want to kick the habit, that's their tough luck," said Buford, "but if they want to quit, I'll help them."

Buford encouraged the smokers to adopt the slogan "I do not want to smoke" or "I do not wish to smoke" rather than to be bound by the more rigid "I quit" and perhaps suffer disappointment when they don't stop right away.

Another session will be held in mid-to-late summer. Sessions were held in the Flame Room of the Pioneer Natural Gas Co. building in Midland.

Those wishing to enroll in the free clinic may contact the ACS office at 601 S. Main St., and they will be contacted when the next session is being offered.

Literature which offers suggestions on how to give up the smoking habit may be obtained free at the ACS office.

Condition of injured commando improves, Army doctors announce

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The most gravely injured of five commandos hurt in an aborted attempt to rescue American hostages in Iran has "significantly improved," doctors at Brooke Army Medical Center said Friday. Air Force Staff Sgt. Joseph Beyer, 37, of Charleston, S.C., was removed from the critical list early Friday morning.

He has been transferred from the intensive care unit and is now listed in "serious" condition. Beyer was severely burned in the fiery collision of a helicopter and a transport plane on an Iranian desert two weeks ago. Three other servicemen also were burned and a fifth man sustained a knee injury.

"The attending physicians ... reported that Staff Sgt. Joseph Beyer's medical condition has significantly improved," said Jerry Dubois, a spokesman for the center.

Dubois defined critical condition as life threatening and serious condition as less dangerous to life.

Three hours of credit available in MC's spring interim session

Three hours of college credit may be earned in just ten classroom days through Midland College's spring interim session which opens Monday.

Students attend classes from 8:30 to 11 a.m. and from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Monday through Friday for two weeks in order to obtain the credits.

"The interim session is useful for those who are trying to accelerate their college work, for college transfer students who need a particular course or for those who need some additional credits," said Dr. Ray mond Yell, Midland College dean of instruction and director on interim sessions.

Registration will be conducted Monday at 8:30 a.m. in Room 213, Learning Resource Center.

Courses offered during the spring interim include: Mathematics 1301 (Algebra), English 2301, Masterpieces of the Western World I, Government 2301 and 2302, State and Federal Government, History 2301, U.S. History to 1877 and History 2302, U.S. History from 1877.

Thoroughbred power.

KZ1000 LTD $3699
The KZ1000 LTD is a thoroughbred. It has a world record-holding 1015cc engine, transistorized ignition, all weather drilled disc brakes and cast alloy wheels.
To make it trick we added pullback handlebars, short megaphone pipes, a teardrop tank, stepped seat and a fat rear tire.
Try it, 'cause looks are only half the story.

Indy 500 rookie steals some thunder from Rutherford

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indianapolis rookie Tim Richmond stole the show from the big name drivers Friday in the last big push for speed prior to the opening round of qualifying for the 64th running of the Indianapolis 500.

The 24-year-old driver from Ashland, Ohio stunned a big, sun-splashed crowd at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway with the week's fastest lap.

With most of the top cars taking part in the final frantic hour of practice — known around the Indianapolis Motor Speedway as "Happy Hour" — Richmond wheeled his one-year-old Penske PC7 around the 2½-mile oval at 193.507 mph.

That was better than the 193.009 clocking earlier in the day by two-time Indy winner Johnny Rutherford, who had been the dominant figure at the Speedway all week.

Richmond finished 26th in last year's California 500 and 12th in the Trenton 150, but he made his first appearance at Indianapolis this week.

His 190-plus clockings Friday made the youngster one of the front-runners for the opening round of time trials for the May 25 race.

The pole position, worth $10,000 and a big psychological edge, will be up for grabs Saturday, as will all the top spots on the 33-car grid.

Despite Richmond's last big effort, Rutherford has firmly established himself as the man to beat. The 42-year-old Texan had his choice of rides for the run at the pole.

He clocked his 193-plus lap Friday in one of his team's Chaparral racers, then went out and did 190.355 in the team's other Chaparral entered by Midland's Jim Hall.

Furthermore, the only rookie ever to win the pole was Walt Faulkner, who did it in 1950.

"It's gonna take 192 or 193, maybe even less, to win the pole," Rutherford said. "I don't know what those other guys are doing out there right now, but it's going to be a very interesting day."

Other than Rutherford, who has been over 190 five straight days, the only drivers to surpass that magic figure until Friday had been Bobby Unser, Mario Andretti and Tom Bagley.

With time running out, Unser and Andretti did it again Friday, and Penske teammate Rick Mears, the defending champion; four-time Indy winner A.J. Foyt; Spike Gehlhausen; Danny Ongais, and Richmond joined them.

Foyt, who had been struggling for speed earlier in the week, was clocked at 192.555, while Ongais hit 190.921 and Gehlhausen 191.5e.939.

Andretti went 191.652, Mears 191.734 and Unser 190.476 in newly built Penske PC9's.

"When we were running 189, I was thinking row three or four," Richmond said. "Then, when we hit 191, I was thinking maybe row two. Then we hit 193. I'm gonna go for the pole."

Restrictions on horsepower and certain aerodynamic aids have made it virtually impossible for the drivers to approach the qualifying record of 202.156 mph set by Tom Sneva in 1978.

Mears won the inside spot on the front row last year with a four-lap average of 193.736.

But the search for speed continues unabated, with plenty of talk about teams cheating to improve their horsepower.

It was also evident this week that the teams were trimming the stabilizing wings on their cars, eliminating downforce in an effort to get more speed in the straightaways.

However, that also meant the speeding cars had less stability than normal in the turns. That, theoretically, was the reason 1973 Indy winner Gordon Johncock crashed during Thursday's practice session.

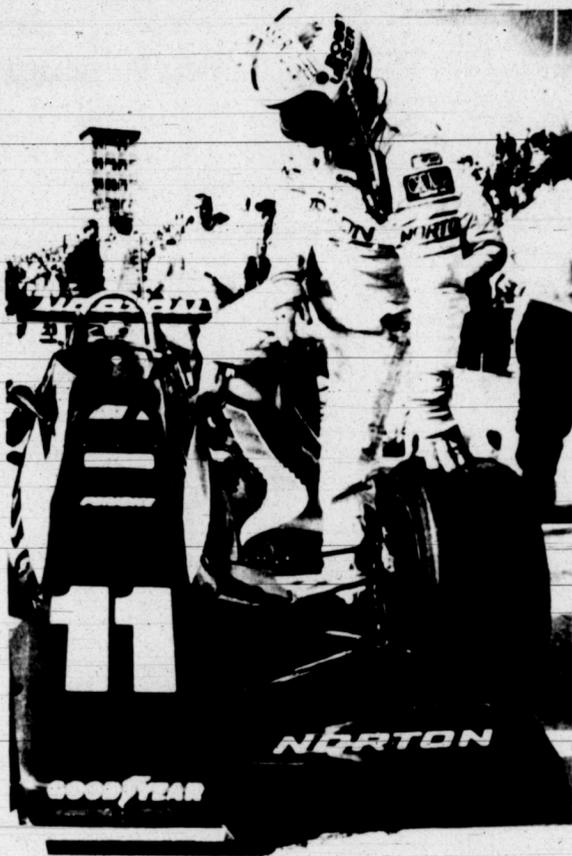

Johncock suffered a chip fracture to his left ankle but was placed in a walking cast and was given the official okay Friday to try to qualify his backup car this weekend.

Sheldon Kinsler drew the first spot in the qualifying line for Saturday, with Mears in the second spot getting the best position among the expected pole contenders.

Rutherford's top car drew the No. 8 spot, while his backup car was way down in the 40th position.

Ongais will be 12th in line, but all the other 190-mph-plus cars drew positions ranging from No. 27 to 49 in the 49-car draw.

The top spots in the qualifying line are considered the best because the track is less likely to be slick from oil and other fluids or less likely to be made slower by the afternoon heat.

Two-time Indy 500 winner Bobby Unser climbs aboard his "ground effects" machine during practice at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Friday. Racers make their bid for the pole position today. (AP Laserphoto)

David Simmons wins state discus title

AUSTIN — Discus throwers from across the state took dead aim at Midland High's David Simmons here Friday afternoon, but the Bulldog had other ideas as the state track meet got underway on the campus of the University of Texas.

Simmons won the state AAAA discus championship with a toss of 187-feet, one inch to down four other discus hopefuls who managed to throw in excess of 180-feet.

The victory was Simmons' 11th of the year without a defeat and it completed a storybook season for the senior, who a year ago failed to get out of district. Simmons will now step into the shot put ring today at 11:30 a.m. in his last competition as a Midland High athlete. Midland Lee's Kevin Harper was set to run in the 800 meters this afternoon to complete another big success story.

Simmons took control of the discus from the very beginning. He never trailed after tossing a 186-8 on his first throw of the day, but just to make sure, he uncorked his 187-1 on his fifth throw to win going away.

"I'm still numb," was the way MHS coach Johnny Williams put it Friday. "He did a great job against a tough field. It's hard to believe that he went through a whole season without getting beat."

Much of Simmons' success has to go with assistant track coach Leonard Boyd, who has worked with him all season. Boyd said, "David is a joy to work with. You just tell him what's wrong and he'll work until he gets it right."

Texas City's Kevin Hancock tried to make a race of it with a throw of 185-0, but that was good for only second place and was not better than Simmons' first throw. Humble's Greg Porter recorded a 184-6 for third and Hurst-Bell's Ron Faurot, who some considered the favorite, was fourth with a 184-0.

The closest Simmons came to defeat the AAAA long jump title with a leap of 24-6½, but finished third in the 400 meters even though he had a fine time of 47.6.

Odessa Ector's Tony Gamble had a big day by placing second in the 1600 meters with his best time of the year, a 4:17.5, and placing sixth in the 800 meters despite his best time of the year with a 1:56.9. Teammate James Ricks won third in the 100 meters with a 10.6.

The Ketchum brothers — Dennis and Anthony — flashed to 40 points to help Needville successfully defended its Class AA state schoolboy track championship.

Arthur McCullar zipped to a winning 20.9 in the 200 meter dash and ran a blazing 46.3 third leg on the 1,600 meter relay team to carry Terrell to the AAA title.

Anthony Ketchum won the 400 meters in 46.8 seconds, chipping one-tenth of a second off the AA record set in 1974 by Bill Cork of Hamlin, and Dennis Ketchum sped to victories in the 100 and 200 meters.

The Ketchums also ran on Needville's winning 400 meter relay team.

Needville piled up 64 points to 44 for second place Giddings, with Dennis Ketchum tallying 25 and Anthony adding 15. Dennis was timed in the 100 at 10.5 and the 200 in 21.7.

Quinn Ketchum won the 400 meters in 46.8 seconds, chipping one-tenth of a second off the AA record set in 1974 by Bill Cork of Hamlin, and Dennis Ketchum sped to victories in the 100 and 200 meters.

Johncock's accident opens safety issue

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The question of driver safety suddenly became an open issue again this week when Gordon Johncock slammed his new Wildcat racer into the wall at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Johncock crashed late Thursday afternoon only moments after turning a lap around the speedway's 2½-mile oval at 186.877 mph. The accident happened suddenly and for no apparent reason, leaving a shaken Johncock with a chip fracture of his left ankle.

The accident was a stunner. Nothing appeared to have broken in the car; it was a new car with a veteran driver, and the track was in virtually perfect condition.

People began asking why it happened.

Not wanting to cause a big stir, Johncock's chief mechanic — George Bignotti — and his crew on the Patrick Racing Team quietly circulated around the garage area Friday warning other teams about the pitfalls of trying to boost the speed of the cars by playing with the aerofoll wings.

Roger Penske, one of the most successful car owners on the champ car circuit, explained the problem.

"We've had the horsepower cut way down on us, but everybody is trying to come up with more speed. The way they're doing it is to play with the trim of the wings (on the cars)."

"It's like trimming the wings of an airplane to smooth out the flight. Only, here, they're changing the plane of the wings to allow the cars to go faster on the straightaways. That eliminates most of the downforce and makes the cars looser in the turns."

"Everybody is going all the way around this track wide open and, with less stability in the turns, a little gust of wind and ..."

The U.S. Auto Club has apparently opened a real hornet's nest by lowering the allowable turbocharger pressure to 48 inches of air flow per square inch. That is a technical ruling which has cut the horsepower to about 600, from an allowable level of more than 700 horsepower only two years ago.

Burt Blyleven decides to rejoin Pittsburgh Pirates

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pitcher Bert Blyleven, who quit the Pittsburgh Pirates April 30, has decided to rejoin the team, a spokesman said Friday night.

The Pirates said Blyleven would work out with the team Friday night in San Diego. He is to be activated at a later date.

Blyleven left the Pirates and returned to his California home, asking to be traded due to his displeasure with the pitching philosophy of Manager Chuck Tanner. Blyleven said he was being relieved too early too often by Tanner.

Pirates vice president Pete Peterson said he would try to trade the 29-year-old right-hander, but no deal materialized.

"Bert Blyleven has advised the Pittsburgh Pirates that he has changed his mind about playing baseball again since his contract wasn't assigned to another major league club," the Pirates spokesman said.

"He has decided he will again pitch for the Pirates."

Blyleven was 0-2 in five starts this season.

Despite his winless record, Blyleven, 29, had an earned run average of 3.09.

"Hopefully a trade is still a possibility," Blyleven said after notifying the Pirates from his nearby Villa Park, Calif., home that he would return to the team. "I'm not sorry for what I did and I never will be."

Blyleven threw batting practice before the opener of the Pirates three-game series with the San Diego Padres.

Tanner said he plans to reactivate him "when I think he's ready."

"I don't know how long that will be," Tanner said. "Bert's a good guy and a hard worker. He's probably more frustrated than anything else."

Blyleven was 12-5 with Pittsburgh last year but completed only four of his 37 starts.

Armstrong, Houdek fall in 1st round

AUSTIN — It was a disappointing trip for Midland High's Lance Armstrong and Richey Houdek to the Class AAAA state tennis tournament.

Both Tall City netters lost in the first round Saturday afternoon with Armstrong losing to Clear Creek's Tom Weber, 6-0, 2-6, 6-2 while Houdek took it on the chin to Houston Lamar's Don Tamasco, 6-2, 6-4.

Armstrong came back to win his second set with Weber, but as MHS Coach Pete Barizon put it: "Weber was just serving better and that was the difference in the match. I am awfully proud of these two youngsters and since they are both juniors, we expect another trip here next year and a possible state title," said Barizon.

"Richey was up 3-love in the second set, but was unable to put Tamasco away," stated Barizon. "I feel like both Lance and Richey made a very respectable showing for us and then there's always next year."

Armstrong was winner in both District 5-4A and regional meets with Houdek the runnerup and they faced a possible chance to meet in today's finals if they had kept on winning.

It would have been a real oddity in the state meet for two players from the same school to meet in the finals. But with one more year to play at MHS, Armstrong and Houdek could turn the trick. The experience in the state meet is also a plus for those returning.

Weber got off to a fast start against Armstrong in their first set. Weber won by an easy 6-0 count, but Armstrong fought back for a 6-2 win the second set, forcing a third and decisive match. Weber came back strong again with a 6-2 verdict.

Tamasco ran past Houdek 6-2 in the first set, but appeared to be in trouble when Houdek went up 3-0 in the second set. However, Tamasco recovered and took a 6-4 verdict to keep the match from going to three sets.

Armstrong and Houdek, however, will be determined powers when the District 5-4A tennis run begins next year. Defeats like these always seem to bring out the best in champions. Both have been champions this season, and with another chance to come, the hurt is not as great.

Ali would meet Holmes for release of hostages

MIAMI (AP) — Muhammad Ali has offered to fight his comeback heavyweight title bout against Larry Holmes in Tehran in exchange for the release of U.S. embassy hostages, the Miami News reported Friday.

"I'm serious," the former three-time heavyweight champion told the newspaper. "If they let the hostages go, me and Holmes will fight for the title in Iran."

Ali is training in Deer Lake, Pa., for his challenge of the World Boxing Council titleholder, Holmes. The bout is scheduled for July 11 in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

The former champ said he is optimistic a deal could be made with the Iranians because the militants holding the hostages are fans of his.

"I have many, many fans in Iran," he added.

Ali said he would set up a training camp in Iran one month after the hostages are released.

"The day the hostages are released, give me two weeks to get my crew together and, then, two more weeks to get there," he told the News in a telephone interview.

The loss of any money by such an arrangement did not seem to bother Ali.

Vijay Amritraj upsets Victor Pecci in tourney
NEW YORK (AP) — Vijay Amritraj of India, continuing his giant-killer role, ousted fifth-seeded Victor Pecci of Paraguay 6-4, 7-6 Friday in the quarterfinal round of the $500,000 Tournament of Champions tennis tourney at Forest Hills.
Amritraj said his victory over Pecci was more important to him than the one over Connors, "because the toughest match is the day after you beat a really good player."

Dropout comes back to grab Atlanta lead
The City of Midland Swimming Team will hold its annual awards banquet at Ranchland Hills Country Club, May 14 at 7 p.m.
The purpose of the banquet is to recognize and acknowledge participation and achievements during the past year.
Featured speaker will be former Midlander Gary Schatz, now of Austin.
The four-time NCAA All-American and former American record holder in the 400-yard medley relay and a World record holder in the 200-meter free relay, attended Auburn University where he was the captain of the swim team and of course, All-American. He set may school records and was also given the prestigious Cliff Hare Award which goes to Auburn's outstanding athlete in all sports, an honor never before given to a swimmer at the Alabama school.
He is the first man to ever break the 20-second barrier in the 50-year freestyle relay.
While swimming for Midland High School, he set school records in the 50 and 100 freestyle races and was part of the 400 medley relay that was also a record-breaker.
He also swam in the COM black and gold and his being here gives the current COM team the chance to meet a world-ranked athlete.
Gary is now working for Exxon and has taken the year off to train for the Olympics under Coach Eddie Reese, Longhorn Aquatics in Austin.

Dropout comes back to grab Atlanta lead
ATLANTA (AP) — Pam Higgins, who rolled in a 70-foot birdie putt along the way, fired a 6-under-par 67 Friday for the opening-round lead in the $100,000 Atlanta Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.
Higgins, who led this tournament with the same first-round total last year before faltering to a third-place finish, recorded her long birdie putt on the par-4 10th hole at the 6,270-yard, par-73 Brookfield West Country Club course.
She had a one-shot advantage over veteran Kathy Ahern and Marlene Floyd, sister of pro golfer Ray Floyd.
Higgins, who dropped off the tour last fall because of tendinitis in both elbows, said the rest had helped her injury and that she felt no pain as she appeared in her sixth tournament this season.
Lee boosters to meet
The Midland Lee Rebel Booster Club will hold a meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday night in the Lee Youth Center.
New head coach Spike Dykes will give a rundown on the first week of the Rebel spring football drills.
Refreshments will be served and all Rebel boosters and the public are invited to attend.

Zisk's late bomb defeats Chisox

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Richie Zisk led off the bottom of the 11th inning with a home run off the top of the left field fence to give the Texas Rangers a 2-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox Friday night.

Zisk hit another home run in the second inning, his first two-homer game for the Rangers.
The blast gave the victory to Jim Kern, 2-3, who came on in relief with runners on first and third and one out in the top of the 11th. Mike Proly, 0-1, who relieved Ross Baumgarten to start the eighth, was the loser.

Ferguson Jenkins went 101-3 innings for Texas in search of his 250th major league victory. He struck out five, walked two and gave up six hits, including Bob Molinaro's first-inning home run.
Claudell Washington singled with one out in the Chicago 11th, stole second and went to third when catcher Jim Sundberg's throw went into center field. Pinch hitter Wayne Nordhagen walked but Kern came in and struck out pinch hitter Thad Bosley and got Lamar Johnson to fly out.

After Washington's one-out single in the third inning, Jenkins retired 18 consecutive batters before Molinaro singled in the ninth. Molinaro was then thrown out trying to steal.

Watson jumps on Twins
NEW YORK (AP) — Bob Watson drove in all five runs with a three-run homer and a double as the New York Yankees defeated the Minnesota Twins 5-2 Friday night for their sixth consecutive victory.
The Yankees jumped on Twins starter Jerry Kosman, 2-3, for three runs before he retired a batter in the first inning. Willie Randolph led off with a single and Kosman misplayed Ruppert Jones' sacrifice bunt. Watson followed with his home run, a shot to right-center field of about 400 feet.
Watson ripped a two-run double off John Verhoeven in the eighth, although the runs were charged to Kosman.

Red Sox lose on walk
BOSTON (AP) — George Brett drove in three runs with a triple and a bases-loaded walk, and the Kansas City Royals held on for a 6-5 victory over the Boston Red Sox here Friday night.
Brett, the American League's All-Star third baseman, accounted for Kansas City's sixth run by walking on four pitches with the bases loaded and two out in the sixth against Tom Burgeimer.
Winner Dennis Leonard, 2-3, stopped the Red Sox on two runs for six innings but was shelved in the seventh as Dwight Evans led off with his third homer and Dave Rader followed with his third hit, a double.

Orioles stop Brewers
MILWAUKEE (AP) — Rich Dauer, batting .156 going into the game, knocked in two runs with a sacrifice fly and a bloop single, leading the Baltimore Orioles to a 5-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Friday night.
The Orioles scored twice in the second inning against loser Jerry Augustine, 0-2, to take a 3-2 lead. Singles by Doug DeCinces and Lee May and a bunt single by Rick Dempsey filled the bases with none out. Dauer followed with his sacrifice fly, and one out later, Mark Belanger, batting .208, singled home the go-ahead run. Belanger also singled home another run after a double by Dauer in the ninth.
The Orioles made it 4-2 with a sixth-inning run against Bill Castro on a double by Dempsey and Dauer's pop fly single which landed in short right-center field.
The Orioles took a 1-0 first-inning lead as Al Bumbry singled, stole second, took third when shortstop Paul Molitor fumbled a grounder for an error and scored on Eddie Murray's grounder.

Lakers notice 'Milkman'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "Maurice Cheeks is a milkman," said Paul Westhead, coach of the Los Angeles Lakers.

A milkman? Cheeks certainly appeared to be a basketball player Wednesday night when he — excuse the expression — poured in 23 points for the Philadelphia 76ers and helped even the National Basketball Association championship round at a game apiece.

Westhead explained what he meant Friday after putting his team through a two-hour practice session for today's (2:30 p.m. CDT) third in the best-of-seven game series.

"He (Cheeks) knows his role. He always delivers the milk. He only shoots when he has a clear shot," Westhead began.

"He spends his time getting the ball to the right guy, which is the way to play basketball," Westhead continued. "We obviously didn't expect him to shoot as much. In the third game we'll pay him more attention."

Cheeks caught the attention of the Lakers in the 76ers' 107-104 victory Wednesday night. In addition to his 23 points, the 6-foot-1 guard handed out 10 assists, stole the ball six times. He was eight-for-eight from the field in the first half.

The Lakers' Earvin "Magic" Johnson also was surprised at the performance of Cheeks, an 11.4 scorer in the regular season.

"Eight-for-eight," said Johnson in an incredulous tone. "You never dream the guy is going to unload on you like that. He hit everything. He played a great game." But Johnson said the Lakers plan no changes for game three. He said the Lakers are a good team on the road, although they haven't won in their last nine games here.

"We're in Philadelphia to play basketball, you can believe it," Johnson said.

Incidentally, the 76ers and Lakers really are poles apart. Each practiced Friday from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., about 35 miles apart, reviving the old saying, "only in the NBA."

The Sixers, according to Coach Billy Cunningham, have no major tactical changes. They'll try to take advantage of the Lakers' double teaming Julius "Dr. J." Erving, with Cheeks firing away from outside, and 6-11½ Darryl Dawkins trying those 15-foot jumpers to draw Kareem Abdul-Jabbar away from the basket. Dawkins had 25 points in Game Two.

Dawkins will guard Jim Chones and 7-foot Caldwell Jones goes against Abdul-Jabbar.

"I think they'll do something different on me," Dawkins theorized. "I think Jabbar will be forced to come out and play me more because I think the coach (Westhead) and some of their players realize it wasn't luck that I was hitting those shots (15 foot jumpers) ... When I get the ball at the top of the key and look at the guy (defender) and the guy doesn't know whether I'm going to shoot or drive, I'm a good jump shooter."

Dawkins intends to "milk" the Lakers for everything he can get.

Not another milkman?

Belinda Campos

Pool trick-shot artist at Hilton

Texas pool champion Belinda Campos is in the Tall City today for trick-shot exhibitions at the Midland Hilton to benefit the Big Brothers/Big Sisters program.

Campos, of Austin, has placed third in the United States Open and proven herself to be a match for the country's top men's players.

Exhibitions will be at 7 and 9 p.m. A $1 donation to Big Brothers/Big Sisters will be charged at the door.

Belinda Campos discovers Wonderful World of Pool

When Belinda Campos was asked if she ever lost her shirt playing pool, she looked at the questioner as though he had said "bra."

For a moment it was touch-and-go whether the inquiring reporter would get an answer or a slap in the face, but then she broke out into a wide smile. "Oh, I thought...." Shame on you, Belinda.

She suddenly remembered. Early in the interview, the Nancy Lopez-Melton of the pool world had mentioned that her stop in Midland would entail several exhibitions at the Hilton, the first 30 to 45 minutes devoted to trick shot demonstrations and then the Challenges, in which members of the audience test her skill with the chalked cue.

"If any one beats me, I give them a T shirt," she informed. If it's folded just right, the T-shirt is as misleading as the reporter's "innocent" question. It says, "I played with Belinda," with a picture of Belinda on the shirt. Then, down below, it says, "For the benefit of Big Brothers/Big Sister, which, of course, is what this Midland visit is all about."

Pool fans are invited and asked to give a donation, which benefits the Big Brothers/Big Sisters group.

The Miss from Austin has been associated with the organization for sometime and this is her way of doing something out of the ordinary.

However, pool has long been a men's bastion and a skilled woman is unique. Belinda doesn't consider herself a "shark," but rather a professional. "I think the term shark gives the game a bad name."

She began playing pool at 18 while in college and like most sports for her, it came easy. "I soon discovered that it's not strictly a game for men. There are national championships for women. And more and more women are playing the game."

Last year's national championships were held in Louisville and one must win a regional to qualify for the nationals, which is a nine-ball rather than eight-ball competition.

Her big thrill in pool thus far was when she played U.J. Puckett of Fort Worth in 1977. "We were tied at 10 in a game of 11 of 21 and I got the deciding point."

Playing an exhibition schedule requires Belinda to check out the tables before hand. She checks the rails to see how a bankshot will react and to determine if they are long or short. The pocket tendency and speed of the surface are also important factors.

For the beginning pool players, her tips are "make sure of the basics are solid. The bridge and stance should be steady and keep the head still."

And as for losing her shirt, it happens about eight to 10 times out of 100 of these challenge matches, which is a remarkable ratio, considering that most of the challenges come from men and a mere woman isn't supposed to compete in "their" game.

Silas may boss Seattle

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Veteran forward Paul Silas, now a free agent from the Seattle SuperSonics, was rated the leading candidate Friday to become head coach of the San Diego Clippers.

He has played in the National Basketball Association for 16 years but has never coached.

Owner Irv Levin said he was talking salary with Silas — something that hadn't been done with 10 others considered for the job.

"I don't think we'd have any financial problems with Paul," said Levin. "He would be a first-time coach, and I think he understands that that puts him in a certain area. Besides, he wants the job very badly. This is a real opportunity."

West Germany recommends boycott

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — The presidium of the West German Olympic Committee decided in a crucial session Friday to recommend that West Germany boycott the 1980 Moscow Olympics.

Willi Weyer, one of the 20 members, said the executive committee voted 12-7 with one abstention not to send a team to Moscow.

The resolution will be handed to the 54-member full Olympic committee which is scheduled to hold a vote next Thursday in Duesseldorf on the final decision.

"This in no way prejudices the outcome of the vote on May 15," said Willi Daume, president of the West German Olympic Committee. "Every member of the presidium is free to vote as he wishes and is not bound by this resolution."

Daume said after the nearly five-hour meeting at a Frankfurt airport hotel that the presidium unanimously denounced "the events in Afghanistan."

"The meeting was also unanimous in stressing the necessity for solidarity with the United States and looking forward ... to save the Olympic Games."

Ceasars Palace files law suit

BALTIMORE (AP) — Lawyers for Caesars Palace filed suit in federal court here Thursday against Sugar Ray Leonard over an alleged breach of contract in an attempt to stop a scheduled fight in Montreal between Leonard and Roberto Duran.

Caesars Palace attorneys claim that Leonard's promoters and manager agreed to stage the fight in a specially constructed 24,000-seat stadium, but then changed their mind and went to Montreal, where they could get a better deal.

Leonard, from Palmer Park, Md., and Duran, Panamanian former lightweight champion, announced Friday they would fight June 20 at the Olympic Stadium in Montreal.

Leonard, the World Boxing Council's welterweight champion, first came to public attention at that stadium during the 1976 Summer Olympics when he won the gold medal during the boxing competition.

In addition to asking that the Montreal contract be forbidden, the suit seeks to force the pair to fight at the Las Vegas hotel.

The suit claims the hotel would suffer "multimillion dollar losses" if the bout were held in Montreal, because Caesars has already blocked off more than 1,000 rooms at the hotel for its best customers, who the suit claims, would otherwise not use the facilities.

Arnold Weiner, attorney for Caesars Palace, said the right of first refusal for a Leonard-Duran fight was signed by promoter Don King — last December, when the hotel staged a fight between Duran and Josef Nusbucha.

Weiner said the $3.5 million title bout between Leonard and Duran at the Las Vegas site was negotiated on April 24 with King.

According to the suit, King telephoned Leonard's representative, Michael G. Trainer, the night of April 24 and the morning of April 25 from Las Vegas, and "Trainer gave explicit approval" to stage the title bout at Caesars Palace.

And the suit claims King phoned another promoter, Robert Arum, who has staged many of Leonard's recent fights, and that he also agreed to the Las Vegas fight.

Former resident aces in El Paso

By REX WORRELL
Hogan Park Pro

For our hole-in-one report this week, we didn't have one here at the Hogan Park Golf Course; however, one of our former members had an ace in El Paso. Joyce Parker, now residing in the Border City, scored her hole-in-one while playing with two LPGA golf professionals. They were Judy Shreve from Ascarate and Joyce Benson who were playing a practice round for the LPGA Sectional Championship Tournament.

Parker scored on the 138-yard, par 3 number 16 hole at Ascarate Golf Course.

THE HOGAN PARK Men's Golf Association Memorial Day Partnership will be coming up soon. The two-man low-ball event will be over the three-day Memorial Day weekend. The entry fee is $25 per player plus green fees. The entry fee includes free refreshments all three days plus a barbecue on Monday night for the contestants and their wives. Merchandise certificates will be awarded flight winners and a trophy will be awarded each flight winner. Sign up at the golf shop soon.

THE HOGAN PARK Women's Golf Association annual Spring Fling Tournament will be held this Thursday, May 15 at 9 a.m. Ladies have for the first time reached the 100 player mark for this tourney. They have a waiting list now. The 100 players are from various clubs and towns around West Texas and Eastern New Mexico. The tournament will be a shotgun start at 9 a.m. on the 18-hole course. The course should open at 12:30 p.m. for regular play. Prior to that time, regular play will be on the new nine-hole course.

ON MAY 1-3, Hogan Park played host to the annual API Golf Tournament. We would like to thank all of the committees who put forth so many hours of hard work to make this a very well-run golf tournament. We give a word of thanks to all of the businesses in Midland and Odessa who gave tremendous support to this tournament by donating gift certificates. Supporters like these are what makes the Permian Basin the best place in the state, if not the country to live. Thanks to each of you and your continued support of Permian Basin endeavors.

ON THURSDAY, May 8, the 18-hole division of the Hogan Park Women's Golf Association held their monthly Trophy Day event with Florence Mailey taking home the trophy with a fine round of 70. Pat Walter finished as runnerup with a 71. There will be no pairings for either division of the association Spring Fling Invitational on May 15. The 9-hole division will make their own pairings for those who want to play on the new nine-hole course.

USAC moves to curb cheating in Indy 500

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Seeking to avoid last year's controversy of alleged cheating on manifold pressure limits, the U.S. Auto Club announced Friday that any race cars suspected of illegal alterations during qualifications for the Indianapolis 500 may be torn down for total inspection.

A year ago, there were charges that some teams were able to override the USAC "boost" limit by inserting a washer in the exhaust pipe. That created extra pressure which fed back through the turbocharger and gave the engine more than the allowable power.

Amid the charges of cheating, there were threatened lawsuits by other teams who claimed they had been denied a fair chance to qualify because of illegal activities by others. USAC and the Indianapolis Motor Speedway agreed to an unprecedented fifth day of qualifications in which nearly a dozen cars had an extra opportunity to make the starting field.

Only two others managed to top the slow qualifying speed of the original 33, and the 35 cars that eventually took the green flag comprised the largest Indy lineup in 46 years.

In a strongly worded bulletin issued Friday, the day before the first of the four scheduled qualifying sessions for the May 25 race, USAC technical chairman Jack Beckley said officials may "... at their option, require a complete tear down inspection to assure that all regulations have been met."

"This will be done if, in our opinion, there is reasonable cause to believe that the race car has used illegal means to attain performance," said Beckley.

"Such an inspection may include the removal of access plates in order to visibly inspect all inner cavities and fuel cells, as well as the engine. If anything is found that could be used to illegally improve performance, the qualification attempt and-or the car will be disqualified and a fine will be assessed."

Beckley said all manifold pressure relief valves will be checked and sealed before pre-qualification practice Saturday morning.

He said a complete inspection of a car might be prompted, for example, by a noticeable increase in speed.

"Say someone goes 185 today and jumps to 190 tomorrow," the USAC technical chairman said in an interview.

"We're concerned about everybody, of course, but the good teams don't have to cheat," Beckley said. "They have too much at stake with their sponsors and with credibility. The thing we're going to have to watch is next weekend (with the teams that haven't already qualified)."
