Soviets withdraw one troop division, tanks

MOSCOW (AP) — Radio Moscow announced today one Soviet troop division, believed to have 7,000 to 11,000 men, and 108 tanks were being withdrawn from Afghanistan and returned home. That would leave about 75,000 Soviet troops in Afghanistan.

It was the first time the Kremlin has said how many of its troops were being pulled from the war-torn country at its southern border, where an estimated 85,000 Soviet troops were sent last Christmas.

Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev was quoted by the official Soviet news agency Tass as saying the troops were being pulled because life in Afghanistan is "gradually returning to normal."

But Brezhnev also was quoted as saying: "Naturally we will continue to help Afghanistan create a new life and to secure the gains of the April (1978) revolution."

The statement suggested the Soviets have no plans to comply with Western demands that they withdraw all their troops.

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda said today that tanks, armored personnel carriers and infantry already had begun withdrawing in keeping with the Kremlin's announced partial pullout from Afghanistan — a withdrawal that has been greeted with heavy skepticism in the West. The official Tass news agency reported from the Afghan capital of Kabul Sunday that "according to information from the command of Soviet military contingents now staying in Afghanistan, some army units whose stay in Afghanistan is not necessary at present are being withdrawn these days to the territory of the Soviet Union on agreement with the Afghan government."

In a followup labeled an eyewitness account from the Afghan capital, Pravda correspondent L. Mironov described sun-tanned Russian soldiers saying goodbye to grizzled Afghan villagers after battling anti-communist Moslem rebels for six months and "fulfilling their international duty."

"Early this morning from the city's outskirts a long line of tanks and infantry began to stretch out. The residents of the villages and towns came out to see them off. The Soviet and Afghan friends made their parting handshakes and embraces," Mironov said in a dispatch dated Sunday.

He said after all the farewells were said the Soviet troops and war machines began their 300-mile journey home by road.

President Carter said he and the other Western heads of state meeting in Venice believed the Soviet anouncement "can only be judged as significant if it's accurate, if it's permanent and if it's the first step toward total withdrawal." He suggested it was designed to increase participation in the Olympic Games next month in Moscow but said the U.S. boycott was "irrevocable."

Zbigniew Brzezinski, Carter's national security adviser, told reporters, "It is much too early to label this as the beginning of a peace offensive." Secretary of State Edmund Muskie added: "Don't believe anything you don't see."

And the seven Western leaders attending the two-day summit in Venice called the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan "unacceptable" and demanded the complete withdrawal of Soviet forces. Some 85,000 Soviet troops have been in Afghanistan since December helping the Marxist government battle anti-communist Moslem rebels.

Tass responded to the American statements in Venice with scorn, labeling them "slandorous" and an attempt to "camouflage with verbiage U.S. actions aimed at heightening tension..."

Leading diplomats here speculated the partial pullback announcement was timed to cause dissension among Western leaders meeting in Venice and might be more cosmetic than real.

Allied leaders have little to say as summit closes

VENICE, Italy (AP) — President Carter ended the Allied summit today with a declaration that the "ruthless" Soviet invasion of Afghanistan would be opposed with "our combined strength." He called this a moral and strategic imperative, but other Allied leaders said little on the subject.

The summit was convened to forge an Allied economic strategy, but the focus shifted Sunday when the Soviets announced a partial withdrawal of troops from Afghanistan.

Allied leaders were skeptical of Soviet motives and demanded a complete withdrawal. Carter emphasized the situation in his closing remarks, but none of the other six leaders discussed Afghanistan in strong terms.

"We have committed our combined strength and our influence and our voices against a ruthless power's invasion of a nearby defenseless neighbor which threatens the stability of a crucial area," Carter said.

He called the Soviet move into Afghanistan on Dec. 27 "a profound assault against the laws of nations and a grave threat to the stability of that vital region."

"We pledge to oppose this Soviet invasion with the means at our disposal," Carter said. "We do this because it is a moral imperative and also a strategic imperative."

Carter and leaders of the other six industrialized nations — West Germany, Great Britain, Italy, France, Canada and Japan — gave individual speeches at the two-day summit closed with agreement on energy and economic issues.

The allied command called for declining reliance on imported oil, and the summit communique noted "the vital contribution of nuclear power," calling for an increase in atomic energy use and expanded conservation techniques.

The meeting was convened to discuss energy and economic issues but was dominated by the situation in Afghanistan.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher called the occupation of Afghanistan a new manifestation of the old difference between East and West. In their remarks, the German and French leaders ignored the Afghanistan situation entirely.

In his address, Carter also said the challenges facing the free world "are both political and economic in nature," and said the nations were "resolved to break the link between our economic growth and our oil consumption."

The leaders developed new goals to reduce oil imports, double coal production by 1990, and expand use of nuclear power and other alternate fuels. The participants also declared combating inflation to be their No. 1 priority and ranked energy concerns second.

The economic and energy agreements amounted to ratification of almost identical goals set last month by the 20-nation International Energy Agency. There was little debate on the goals and agreement was so perfunctory the conference ended 2½ hours early.

The economic summit was dominated more by politics than economy. On Sunday, as the Allied leaders met for the first time in a year, the Soviet Union announced it was making a partial withdrawal of troops from Afghanistan.

Carter and his colleagues had planned all along to issue a fresh condemnation here of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, but they speeded their timetable by 24 hours and issued their declaration Sunday. The Allies were cautious in discussing the Soviet move.

Carter said the Soviet announcement would have "very little significance" unless it signified a permanent and complete withdrawal of Soviet troops.

On Monday, the economic issues were finalized.

The leaders of the United States, Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Canada and Japan estimated that over the next decade they could increase energy sources other than oil at the equivalent of 15 to 20 million barrels of oil a day.

They pledged to make "a coordinated, vigorous effort to realize this potential" by increasing use of coal, nuclear power and synthetic fuels.

A doubling of the production and use of coal, long a neglected energy resource, would mean boom times for the coal mining sections of the United States, which have a significant export trade.

In addition, the leaders agreed that oil conservation goals set a year ago at the last economic summit in Tokyo will be made obsolete because of an anticipated reduction in world oil output in the years ahead.

As a consequence, the leaders decided to call for a further oil import cutback of 4 million barrels a day, to about 22 million barrels, by 1985. Individual targets for each country were not set.

If all the goals are met, the seven nations expect that oil will be reduced from 53 percent of their energy demand to 40 percent.

Carter had personally assured his summit colleagues on Sunday that the United States will resist pressures for "premature or excessive stimulation of the American economy."

White House press secretary Jody Powell reported that Carter's pledge was welcomed by the other leaders.

The American president ate a breakfast of bread, milk and cheese with 12 monks at a Benedictine monastery today and then held individual, private meetings with Prime Ministers Pierre Trudeau of Canada and Margaret Thatcher of England before attending the final summit sessions.

Other summit objectives included:

—Reducing health and safety hazards associated with nuclear power and minimizing risks of secret nuclear weapons production.

—Ending construction of oil-fired generating plants to conserve oil, and converting currently operating oil-fired plants to other fuels.

The summit schedule was derailed a bit Sunday by the Soviet announcement on its claimed withdrawal of troops from Afghanistan.

A blood-stained pew sits outside Daingerfield's First Baptist Church as citizens gather to clean up the bloody aftermath of Sunday morning's attack on the congregation. A gunman, identified as Alvin Lee King III, burst into the sanctuary, killing five and wounding ten others. See related stories and photo, Page 8A. (AP Laserphoto)

Accused gunman was to stand trial

DAINGERFIELD, Texas (AP) — Alvin King III was supposed to go on trial today. His daughter had filed a charge of incest, and King needed some character witnesses. But several members of the First Baptist Church, where he used to go to services, had turned him down.

On Sunday, police say, King kicked open the doors of the church as the congregation sang "More About Jesus." People in the back rows turned around and saw a man in steel helmet and flak jacket, carrying two rifles and two handguns.

He shouted, "This is war!" and opened fire.

In the next few moments five people, including a 7-year-old girl, were fatally shot. Three of the five were fatally wounded in the congregation, and two ushers were fatally wounded as they wrestled King outside. It was not known whether the ushers were wounded before or after they got King outside. Ten others were wounded. The gunman then ran across the road and shot himself in the head.

He was listed in critical condition early today as surgeons prepared to operate.

King, 45, a former high school math teacher with a Ph.D. in psychology who had quit teaching seven years ago and become a farmer, was charged with capital murder.

The tragedy in this east Texas town of 2,600 began at about 11:20 a.m. with the gunman's abrupt entrance into the church. Police said he carried M-1 and AR-15 rifles and .38-caliber and .22-caliber revolvers.

He fired first with an M-1 rifle.

"Those bullets were flying," said Arthur Greaves, 69, who was shot in the shoulder. "Some of the congregation started falling in between the pews and some started jumping up and down. People were screaming and crying and taking on. Boy, was it pitiful!"

The sounds of the shooting were broadcast live on radio station KEGG, which normally carries Sunday services.

"Everybody started screaming and they saw it was for real," Greaves said. "Then I saw this poor little girl lying in a puddle of blood. The little girl was sitting next to us in the back row. I'll never forget that. There she lay."

Police said the gunman fired at random, hitting 13 people in the first fusillade. Of those, Gina Lnam, 7, and Thelma Richardson, 78, were killed immediately. Both were shot in the head. Gene Gandy, 50, died of a gunshot wound to the stomach about 11 hours later in a nearby hospital.

The toll could have been much higher, officials said, but for three men's heroics.

Chris Hall, a general contractor who had once been a student of King's, was the first to reach the gunman. He stripped him of both rifles.

Then ushers Kenneth Truitt and J.Y. "Red" McDaniel, both 49, managed to wrestle him out of the church, only to be shot to death during the struggle.

"They just bear-hugged him out the door, and all the time I could hear a gun shooting," said Hall. McDaniel was shot in the stomach four times and died on the church steps. Truitt was shot in the side and died shortly after noon in a hospital.

District Attorney Charles M. Cobb said King was indicted last fall on charges of incest based on a complaint filed by King's 21-year-old daughter, Cynthia, who now lives in Dallas. The indictment alleges that the act took place in 1977. The trial was to have begun today in Sulphur Springs, about 50 miles northwest of here.

Sanjay Gandhi killed in crash

India shaken by death of prime minister's son

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Sanjay Gandhi, politically powerful son of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, and his flight instructor were killed Monday after their light plane stalled then spun into a clump of trees, witnesses said.

India's vice president said Sanjay's death left India "thunderstruck."

Sanjay, 33-year-old grandson of Jawaharlal Nehru, India's first prime minister, and Capt. Subash Saxena, chief instructor of the Delhi Flying Club, were pronounced dead at a hospital where they were taken from the scene of the crash in the southern part of New Delhi.

Officials said it was uncertain who was at the controls but an earlier unconfirmed report said Sanjay was piloting the plane at the time of the crash. Other reports had said the plane caught fire and crashed into a bloc of municipal apartments.

But witnesses said the two-seater, single-engine Pushpak, an Indian-designed trainer plane, was not aflame when it stalled and crashed into the trees.

Sanjay, who had been taking private flying lessons, took off from a local airport for what was to have been a one-hour flight.

The plane crashed barely two-thirds of a mile from the airport and from the prime minister's residence where his mother lives.

Mrs. Gandhi sped to the scene of the crash, which was cordoned off by hundreds of police.

At the hospital, a solemn Mrs. Gandhi was seen trying to comfort the mother of instructor Saxena.

Gandhi started flying in 1976 and got his license the following year, during his mother's first administration as prime minister. He piloted small planes during the 1977 election campaign.

The license was suspended after Mrs. Gandhi's election defeat in 1977. He resumed flying recently and would often go up for an hour in the early morning.

"The life of a very enthusiastic young man of high quality and promising career has been snatched away," Vice President Mohammed Hidayatullah said. "The death of Mr. Gandhi, who was anxious to do a lot of good to the masses, has left everybody thunderstruck."

Speaking in the upper house of Parliament, Hidayatullah added that Sanjay was "more in love with the people and the country and we are much poorer after his departure."

The mention of Sanjay's name stirred deep emotion among Indians. They ranged from deep dislike to blind adoration.

Even as he stood trial in a number of criminal cases, including one of assault and battery of a police official, he was considered by some political observers to be India's second most powerful political figure after Mrs. Gandhi herself.

Sanjay, a prematurely balding man who favored the homespun cotton clothes popularized by Indian independence leaders like his grandfather, Nehru, served as one of his mother's closest advisers.

Opposition leaders charged that she was grooming him as a successor, which Mrs. Gandhi denied. But the nickname, the "crown prince," remained in use by his numerous critics.

Sanjay's influence in national politics surfaced during the 1975-77 state of emergency proclaimed by Mrs. Gandhi, giving her and other officials extraordinary powers. Although he did not hold an official post at the time, he wielded enormous power.

He inspired a controversial birth control program which led to many allegedly coerced sterilizations and, ultimately, a voter backlash against his mother's regime. She was ousted in the 1977 general elections, after 11 years in office.

Five Palestinians wounded in border clash

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Five Palestinian students were wounded today in a clash with Israeli border police in the occupied West Bank, hospital officials and the Israeli military reported. The clash came hours after the death of a Palestinian woman wounded in the neck after authorities said a border policeman's machine gun fired accidentally in Bethlehem.

Meanwhile, in a move sure to spur protests from Washington, Cairo and the United Nations, Prime Minister Menachem Begin said he will move his offices to East Jerusalem, the largely Arab sector of the city annexed by Israel after its capture from Jordan in the 1967 war.

An official at Ramallah Hospital said four students from Bir Zeit University were wounded slightly but another student whose right arm was shattered by a bullet was undergoing surgery.

A spokesman for the Israeli military government of the West Bank said the students at the university, 12 miles north of Jerusalem, set up a makeshift stone roadblock and hurled a firebomb at an Israeli border patrol. The police fired into the crowd, wounding the students, the spokesman said.

The woman, Taghreed Al-Butmeh, was wounded last Thursday in what police described as an accidental machine-gun burst. She died in a hospital today. Bethlehem University, which Miss Butmeh attended, was closed for a period of mourning but students who tried walking to the funeral were turned back at police roadblocks.

An Arab gunman shot a policeman in the eye on Saturday near the Bethlehem square where Miss Butmeh was wounded.

Meanwhile, Israeli security forces stepped up their search for Palestinian terror bombs as explosives went off today in Tel Aviv and Jerusalem. A bomb blast in a Tel Aviv grocery store injured an elderly woman and two other customers, police said. No casualties were reported in the second explosion at a Jerusalem bus stop.

The transfer of the prime minister's office, announced Sunday, underlines Israel's determination to retain control of East Jerusalem, with its 100,000 Arabs and religious shrines revered by Christians, Moslems and Jews.

In Jerusalem, Begin's aides said the prime minister's bureau would be moved within three months to a government office complex under construction near the Mount Scopus annex of the Hebrew University and Hadassah Hospital on the eastern rim of the city.

Mountaineers climb 700 feet before quitting

TORONTO (AP) — Two mountaineers who tried today to climb the north face of the world's tallest self-supporting tower — the 1,822-foot CN Tower in downtown Toronto — gave up after going about 700 feet, police said.

Climber, top left, (tentatively identified as David Smart, 17, of Toronto) watches progress of companion (tentatively identified as Jerry Banning, 34, of Toronto) as they climb north face of CN Tower in Toronto today.

"The CN Tower may appear to be a difficult climb but it is actually easy," said the note — written by David Smart, 17, and Gerry Banning, 34, both of Toronto, before they started the climb.

The tower — 472 feet taller than the World Trade Center in New York — cost $44 million to build and is made of 145,000 tons of reinforced concrete.

A 416-seat restaurant revolves in the seven-floor Sky Pod at 1,140 feet, and the visibility from the restaurant extends to hills 75 miles away.

Texas GOPs settle differences in caucus

HOUSTON (AP) — Listening to a call from state Republican leaders for unity in this election year, the 3,875 delegates to Texas GOP convention settled most of their differences in caucus, keeping them off the floor and leaving with no major divisions in their ranks.

There was a brief flareup over a tough anti-abortion resolution that eventually was approved. Some delegates grumbled about the fact they would be represented at the Detroit national convention by those pledged to George Bush, who has unofficially ended his campaign for the nomination.

But that was settled in a May primary when Reagan won 61 delegates and Bush 19. Bush has said he would ask his supporters to vote for Reagan on the first ballot.

Gov. William Clements; Sen. John

Tower, R-Texas; Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas; and former ambassador Anne Armstrong took turns in lashing out at President Carter and the delegates gave them each numerous cheers.

Clements brought the loudest response from the crowd, which interrupted his speech at least 50 times.

The controversial anti-abortion resolution called for a constitutional amendment "protecting the unborn child at any stage of biological development."

Lila Rehkop of Athens, a member of the resolutions committee, said she opposed the final version because it made no provisions for special cases and "there are exceptions to everything."

Debate on the resolution, one of 19 passed by the convention, was stopped before opponents had presented their arguments.

The convention also extended a rule providing for presidential primaries every four years. The rule had been in effect only a temporary basis for 1980, but now is permanent.

Others resolutions opposed the Equal Rights Amendment, the life-long appointments of federal judges, forced busing, and supported the reduction of taxes, and the right to bear arms. The delegates also called for the abolishment of the Department of Education.

A question that could have spoiled the quiet of the convention never came to the floor for debate. Some delegates wanted a resolution setting standards to be applied to potential vice presidential nominees, but later decided to scrap it.

Clements told the delegates, "We must seek what is right for Texas in Washington, because the man sitting in the White House today is not right for Texas.

"Not one Texan has escaped the disastrous impact of Jimmy Carter's policies. We cannot take any more of a man who answers challenges by creating more bureaucracies like the Department of Education and the Department of Energy."

"We can take no more of a man who doesn't know what he is doing or where he's going, so I say it is high time that we tell him where to go — right back to Georgia."

Tower said the president "has brought about the humiliation of the United States. Since Jimmy Carter has been in office, it has become more dangerous to be a friend of the United States than an enemy."

Texas Demos stick to party loyalty

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Texas Democrats went on record for strict party loyalty at their weekend state convention and stopped short of telling legislators who to select as House speaker.

"It will probably have little effect on the speaker's race," said Rep. John Bryant of the party's action.

The Democratic liberal from Dallas is seeking the top House post. Democrats usually leave the speaker's race to the 150-member House, which elects its presiding officer at the start of each legislative session.

Speakership candidates collect pledges in advance of the actual voting in January.

House Speaker Bill Clayton's indictment on bribery charges and Republican Gov. Bill Clements' involvement in the race brought the speakership issue to the convention floor this year.

Clayton has said he would not seek a fourth term as speaker if his legal problems were unveiled by November.

One of his "inner circle," Rep. Gib Lewis of Fort Worth says he will run if Clayton drops out.

Lewis, a conservative Democrat, and Bryant both claim enough pledges for the job. However, Lewis has angered some liberal and moderate Democrats by claiming votes from Republican nominees facing Democratic incumbents this fall.

Clements says it would be disastrous for Texas if Bryant were elected. The governor wants voters to make the speakership an issue in November legislative contests.

The state Democratic Party adopted a resolution on voice vote opposing any speaker candidate who "endorses or aids the efforts of any Republican candidate to defeat a Democratic candidate for the Texas House of Representatives or who makes prior commitments to the Republican governor or any group of Republican legislators in return for support in the speaker's race."

Lewis, who attended the state Republican convention in Houston on Friday before flying here Saturday, denied having deals with the GOP.

"You can't afford to make any enemies by helping their opponents in the primary or general elections," Lewis said Saturday.

Now is not the time to play "party politics" when the 1981 Legislature faces such tough issues as redistricting and state government financing, he said.

"I'm not going to get involved in any one (legislative) race. As presiding officer, you've got to be fair," he added.

Bryant said he asked the party's resolutions committee not to endorse him outright.

"I don't think it's the role of the party to choose a speaker," he said. As Texas becomes more of a two-party state, the Legislature may one day elect majority and minority officers as does Congress," he added.

"That time is not far off, with the Republicans making the gains they are making, especially when they have the help of Gib Lewis and Governor Clements," Bryant said.

Heat wave to continue through Tuesday in basin

Those dog days of summer have settled in the Permian Basin, bringing thoughts of those "hazy, lazy, crazy days of summer" and dreams of a beach nearby to spend those days.

Hot days should continue through Tuesday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. The mercury should drop into the low 70s tonight and pop into the low 100s on Tuesday, said the weatherman.

Normal temperatures for this date are 94 and 68, said the weatherman, which means that Midland has been hotter than usual. Adding to that is the unusually high humidity this month, he added.

Sunday's high of 99 still didn't catch up with the record 107-set in 1951. And today's low of 67 was still above the record 61 degrees set in 1957.

No chance of rain is in the forecast. Recently, Midland has only seen lightning displays while rain fell on other parts of the Permian Basin. Garden City, said the weatherman, received three inches of rain in two days.

Thunderstorms roamed the South Plains during the pre-dawn hours, and early morning pockets of fog settled on parts of East Texas today. But clear skies spanned most of the state.

Temperatures at 7 a.m. ranged from 66 at Amarillo to 82 at Corpus Christi and Galveston.

Forecasters predicted partly cloudy and hot throughout the state, with a few scattered rainstorms mainly in East Texas.

Nicaraguans gather to protest treatment

MIAMI (AP) — Nicaraguans, feeling slighted by the special status recently bestowed upon refugees from Cuba and Haiti, gathered in a Miami park to protest their treatment by the U.S. government.

"We don't want to go back," attorney Orlando Montenegro told the crowd of more than 1,000 refugees and other supporters at Miami's Bayfront Park on Sunday.

The attorney was one of approximately 20,000 other Nicaraguans who escaped to the United States last year when the leftist Sandinistas overthrew the government of Anastasio Somoza. Most of the exiles have settled in the Miami area.

Spicer Lung, administrator of the Humanitarian Committee for Nicaraguan Relief, said his fellow refugees feel slighted by special treatment given Cuban and Haitian refugees who have poured into South Florida in recent months.

More than 114,000 Cuban refugees have entered this country through Key West, Fla., in the "Freedom Flotilla" that began in April, while an estimated 25,000 Haitians have come to Florida over the past two years.

The Carter administration announced Friday that refugees from Cuba and Haiti would be allowed to remain in the United States under a six-month "parole" while legislation is drafted to establish their legal status.

Lung said the Nicaraguans are becoming increasingly concerned because most of their visas to remain in the United States are to expire on June 30.

"We have been ignored in the public pronouncements — we want the same status as given Cubans and Haitians," Lung declared.

Officer kills teen-ager in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — A sheriff's sergeant shot and killed an East Harris County teen-ager early Sunday after the youth allegedly shot and wounded the officer.

Detectives said Sgt. Steve S. Graeter, 39, was shot once in the abdomen by 19-year-old Freddie F. Stovall Jr. after the officer stopped Stovall on a traffic complaint. Graeter then shot Stovall in the abdomen, face and hand.

It was the fourth suspect Graeter has killed in 15 months.

Sheriff's detective A.F. Rossi said Graeter spotted Stovall, a recent parolee from Huntsville prison, as he was speeding by the scene of a fire.

The officer gave chase for several blocks before stopping Stovall and ordering him from the car, Rossi said.

The teen-ager initially refused, then apparently stepped out and began firing at Graeter, who returned the fire, Rossi said.

Black nationalist escapes assassination attempt today

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe (AP) — The Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, a veteran black nationalist, escaped an assassination attempt in which one of his supporters was killed, police said today.

The attack occurred last Friday in the Chibwe tribal reserve in the Sabi Valley of eastern Zimbabwe, about 200 miles southeast of Salisbury.

Sithole said he fled from a house as the bullets began to fly, hiding in the bush overnight. Police said they found the body of one of Sithole's supporters, whose name was not released, in the house.

Sithole alleged armed supporters of Prime Minister Robert Mugabe staged the attack. Sithole said the men, numbering about 17, arrived in an army truck from a nearby cease-fire base. Police were investigating.

More than 32,000 guerrillas remain at camps set up as part of the British-negotiated cease-fire that ended the seven-year guerrilla war and preceded the February independence elections won by Mugabe's party.

Sithole founded Mugabe's Zimbabwe African National Union, but lost control of it to Mugabe during the war. Sithole continued to call his party ZANU, but it was not able to win any seats in the February elections.

Mugabe's party was called ZANU — Patriotic Front. The Front was the name of the joint command of Mugabe's supporters and guerrillas of Joshua Nkomo's Zimbabwe African People's Union.

Attorneys question jury in Klan murder trial

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Attorneys defending six Ku Klux Klansmen and American Nazis charged with murder were to get their first chance today to question jury candidates already accepted by prosecutors.

The Klansmen and Nazis are each charged with five counts of first-degree murder and one count of rioting in the shooting deaths of five Communist Workers Party supporters last Nov. 3. If convicted of murder, they face life imprisonment or death in the gas chamber.

Four of the jurors are almost certain to be rejected by the defense team. All four told the court last week they believe the Klansmen and Nazis are guilty. However, each said that, as jurors, they could presume the defendants innocent.

Lamesan killed in head-on crash

LAMESA — A 22-year-old Lamesa man was killed Sunday night in a grinding head-on collision inside the Lamesa city limits.

According to police spokesmen, San Juan Lopez of Lamesa died of massive head injuries while being rushed by ambulance to a Lubbock hospital.

Lopez was driver of a vehicle involved in a collision with another vehicle driven by Ollie Bradford of Lamesa. A passenger in Bradford's vehicle was 82-year-old Fagen McKinley.

The mishap occurred shortly after 11 p.m. in the 1200 block of South Elgin Street in Lamesa, police officers said.

The sixth prosecution-approved juror to come before defense attorneys will be Willie Washington, a black man who said last week that he was a friend of one of those slain last Nov. 3.

Washington said he knew Sandra Smith — the only black and the only woman among the victims — both socially and at the textile mill where he worked.

Just 16 of the 33 jurors accepted last week by prosecutors were called to be questioned today by the six court-appointed defense attorneys. Another 16 have been ordered to return to court Wednesday.

The 33rd will be called later, said Judge James Long, along with others from a still-unexamined pool of 600 candidates.

Two separate bus accidents leave one dead, 50 injured

By The Associated Press

Two bus accidents have claimed one life and left nearly 50 persons injured in separate crashes in California and Virginia.

Authorities in Ontario, Calif., say five teen-agers and an adult remain in critical condition as a result of collision between a car and a church bus. Thirty-seven other persons suffered minor injuries, California Highway

Patrol officials said. Virginia authorities praised the efforts of driver Michael Peterson in avoiding a more serious accident. "I think he should be commended in doing what he did," Albemarle County Deputy Sheriff Gordon Cook said of Peterson's decision to chance the wall instead of the embankment. Cook said if the bus had gone down the embankment "there probably would have been five fatalities instead of one."

Assassination has been ruled out in break-in of Shah's sister's home

NEW YORK (AP) — Assassination has been ruled out as the motive for the break-in at the East Side townhouse occupied by relatives of the deposed Shah of Iran because the gunmen had an opportunity to carry out such a plan, detectives say.

The two intruders, disguised as deliverymen, may have wanted to burglarize the exclusive Beekman Place townhouse Saturday or the break-in may have been a "harassment move," Detective Dennis Cauffield said.

The incident was foiled by private security guard who struggled with the gunmen after they entered the foyer entrance of the five-story building. "They were amateurs," said Cauffield. "If they wanted to assassinate anyone, they had all the opportunity to do it. The only obstacle was the guard. So why didn't they continue?"

Cauffield said Sunday that detectives also were discounting an anonymous call made in Beirut to the French news agency, Agence France-Presse, that the break-in was the work of Red June, an Iranian group said to work against opponents of the Islamic revolution. He said detectives had no information about such a group and believed

The bus, chartered by a group of Watertown, Wis., retirees, moments before had stopped to let 33 of its 36 passengers out at Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson.

Peterson, 27, was backing the bus slowly to a nearby parking lot when the motor quit, making the air brakes useless, Cook said.

Three retirees and a tour guide were in the bus with Peterson. John A. Hornickel, 87, of Watertown, was pronounced dead on arrival at University of Virginia Hospital in Charlottesville.

The California crash occurred at about 2 p.m. Sunday when a bus from the First Presbyterian Church in Hollywood was struck by a car at the intersection of the San Bernardino Freeway and Interstate 15 in Ontario.

Police said the impact knocked out a rear axle and the bus went out of control, running up an embankment and striking a light pole. The bus then flipped over, landing upside down.

All of those hospitalized were in the bus, which was carrying high school-age youngsters to Forest Home Christian Conference Center.

Plane crashes claim 14 lives

By The Associated Press

Airplane crashes in seven states claimed at least 14 lives in the nation over the weekend, authorities reported.

Among the accidents causing Sunday's 13 fatalities was the crash of an old-time airliner in Columbus, Ind., which killed three people. Authorities said the Lockheed Super Constellation that crashed and exploded shortly after takeoff from Bakalar Municipal Airport at 2 p.m. had been under surveillance for several days as part of an on-going criminal investigation.

However, Columbus Police Chief Robert D. Talkington refused to disclose any details of the special investigation, which he said was far from complete.

Five people were injured in the crash of the plane that had been converted to carry cargo.

Other Sunday crashes: —Three people were killed and one was injured when their rented Piper Cherokee crashed Sunday evening near Coeur d'Alene, Idaho.

—Two men died when the World War II-vintage airplane they were flying plunged into the ground near Bowling Green, Ohio. The crash occurred after the AT-6 trainer had been in a flying exhibition by members of the Confederate Air Force, an organization of pilots and others interested in restoring and flying World War II aircraft.

—In Milford Square, Pa., the pilot of an experimental plane and his passenger died when the craft crashed into the town's fire station at about 11:45 a.m. The firehouse was destroyed.

—Near Dunedin, Fla., a 21-year-old St. Petersburg man died and a passenger was injured when a twin-engine Piper Cub crashed into the Gulf of Mexico at about 1:30 p.m.

—And two people were killed when their single-engine plane crashed around 2 p.m. in a field about seven miles east of Clifton, Ill., authorities said.

On Saturday, an Ogden, Utah, man was killed when his experimental plane crashed three miles north of Brigham City while he was performing aerobatics.

In addition to the weekend crashes, two separate small plane crashes claimed eight lives Friday night. The two 4-fatality crashes occurred in Burdette, Minn., and East Liberty, Ky.

Mount St. Helens enters quiet period

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Mount St. Helens has entered another quiet period, and even though the volcano has napped before, scientists are still unsure of what to make of it.

The quiet "means the same as it did before," said Tim Hait of the U.S. Geological Survey. "We didn't know what it meant then, except that it was quiet."

"But as far as we're concerned, there's still a chance for an explosion, some ash eruptions, some small lateral blasts ... It's still real dangerous."

Seismic readings showed no activity by Sunday evening and the National Weather Service radar picked up only slight venting from the crater.

Earlier Sunday, scientists recorded what they believed to be avalanches crashing down the inside of the volcano's crater. In addition, a very small earthquake was recorded — the first in three days — the University of Washington reported.

The crater itself was still filled with clouds and steam that obscured the growing dome of crusted lava.

"The steam in the crater is not dissipating — it appears to be sucked back in," said Earl LaOrange, a spokesman for the U.S. Forest Service. Because of the clouds, scientists have not had a good look at the lava dome since Friday.

Scientists estimated then that the dome was about 250 feet high and 600 feet across.

LaOrange added that what makes scientist especially skittish about the quiet of the mountain is that it rumbled for just 90 seconds before the May 18 eruption that killed 24 persons. Forty-four others are missing and presumed dead.

Federal officials in Vancouver have received hundreds of requests from geologists, scientists and college officials who want to monitor the volcano, LaOrange said.

"We can use the help and are trying to coordinate how to put some of these people to work," he said. "Geologists have seen plants growing on the mountain, but can't identify them. We need qualified botanists and biologists, in addition to other scientists."

But, LaOrange said, safety is the first priority before putting anyone on the mountain.

Officials proceeded mission risking losing up to 45 lives

NEW YORK (AP) — Pentagon officials who planned the aborted April mission to rescue 53 American hostages in Iran proceeded even though they estimated that 45 lives could have been lost, according to Newsweek magazine.

Officials estimated that casualties could have included 30 U.S. commandos and at least 15 hostages, the magazine says in its current issue.

Thus, the magazine reports, there was a chance that only 38 hostages would be rescued at a cost of 45 lives.

In addition, Newsweek said that the rescue team never practiced how to abort the mission at the desert landing point, located 250 miles south of Tehran, although they had anticipated that it might happen.

The Pentagon declined to comment Sunday on the report.

Eight RH-53D Sea Stallion helicopters were sent from the aircraft carrier USS Nimitz in the Gulf of Oman about 600 miles to the desert landing point on April 24. The choppers were to rendezvous with eight C-130 transport planes carrying men, fuel, and equipment from a base in Egypt. They were then to fly by helicopter to mountains 50 miles southeast of Tehran where they would have attempted to rescue the hostages.

The mission, however, was called off by military commanders after three of the eight helicopters failed. Before the men and equipment could be evacuated from the desert, one of the transport planes collided with a helicopter, killing eight soldiers.

Police said the gunman, wearing a helmet with a dark shield covering his face, stepped from a powerful motorcycle driven by an accomplice, approached Mario Amato, a 43-year-old anti-terrorist investigator, and calmly fired the three rounds into the back of his head.

An anonymous caller phoned a newspaper in Genoa and said Amato's killing was the work of the Red Brigades, Italy's most feared ultra-leftist urban guerrilla group. "This is the Red Brigades. We have killed magistrate Amato. A communique will follow," the caller said. Police quoted numerous witnesses as saying that after his attack the gunman walked on foot a few yards on a street in the Montesacro area where his accomplice was waiting and both sped away.

Pollution is reduced in Portland

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — An intensive weekend cleanup effort reduced air pollution in the Portland area noticeably, prompting environmental authorities to discontinue the week-old pollution warning.

But an air pollution alert — a step lower than a warning — remained in effect, as it has since the eruption of Mount St. Helens on June 12 spewed ash toward the city.

Jim Swenson of the state Department of Environmental Quality said a pollution alert in three northwestern counties — Multnomah, Clackamas and part of Tillamook — and a more serious warning in a fourth — Washington — would continue at least through this afternoon.

He said these may be lifted today, depending on pollution readings after the commuter rush hour.

Firefighters clean up debris of desert fire in Carlsbad

CARLSBAD, N.M. (AP) — Firefighters at the Carlsbad Caverns National Park have started cleaning up debris and unburned fuel left by a four-day, lightning-caused fire that consumed nearly 3,600 acres of desert vegetation.

The blaze at the 46,755-acre park burned through rocky, steep canyons and narrow ridge tops before firefighters controlled it Sunday by setting backfires that burned additional acreage but also encircled the flames.

A spokesman for the U.S. Forest Service said cleanup operations had begun and some of the 190 firefighters who battled the flames would begin going home today.

"We are now burning unburned fuel within the fire area to insure there is no new start," said Mike Funston.

The fire scorched heavy grass, juniper, oak, desert shrubs and cactus in the northwestern area of the park, but never endangered the caverns or visitors' center, according to Bob Chrisman, administrative assistant for the caverns.

"How much savings is enough?"

Ask the place that knows

Q We just got married and are planning to buy a house and start a family. We want to start a savings account, too. But we're wondering how much to save each month?

A This is, of course, a personal decision that depends on your income and lifestyle. But there are some rules of thumb for the average family. Try to put between five and ten percent of your monthly income (after taxes) into a regular savings account. (Hint: consider an automatic savings plan so you're not tempted to spend.) Let this account build up until you have three to six months of your salary (after taxes). Keep this amount in a regular savings account as a cushion against emergencies, but let the build-up continue. From time to time, "skim off" any excess and put it into a higher yielding certificate of deposit. This money, then, can be used to finance your home, send the kids to college, etc.

To start a plan now, visit one of the Professional Savings Counselors at the Savings Place today.

Mistaken missiles

It's the stuff of which really good thriller movies are made.

Alarms are sounding, lights are flashing and the computer tells the military strategists the Soviets are sending nuclear-tipped missiles our way.

Something out of a thriller movie it isn't, though. It's recent reality.

And that, folks, is frightening. It wasn't, of course, a Soviet attack. It was a computer malfunction.

The military men charged with the responsibility for the system have expressed utmost confidence in it, saying there is no danger of launching a nuclear war by mistake.

"We are confident we will catch all false alerts," said Assistant Defense Secretary Gerald Dineen. "We did on June 3 and 6 when the error was caught within two to three minutes. I see no reason to change the procedures."

Since the false alerts earlier this month, the malfunction has been traced to a dime-sized computer circuit costing 46 cents. We are pleased with the performance of the military men stationed at the command posts. They responded quickly and with expertise to the initial sounding of the attack alert.

But it concerns us that the military is placed in the position this frequently, apparently, of having to rapidly determine whether this nation actually is the object of a Soviet attack.

It has been speculated in the past that the final war of this world will not be started by men, but by the machinery invented by man. Can we make light of such a theory in view of the events that occurred earlier this month?

Certainly all effort must be made to minimize this type of occurrence. After all, once the missiles of a nuclear strike have been launched there's little that can be done to avoid the nuclear holocaust that undoubtedly will follow.

We can only hope that such false alarms will be minimized in the future.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, June 23, the 175th day of 1980. There are 191 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On June 23, 1967, President Lyndon Johnson and Soviet Premier Alexi Kosygin held a summit meeting on a college campus in Glassboro, N.J.

On this date: In 1683, William Penn signed a friendship treaty with Indians in the Pennsylvania region. The agreement was kept faithfully by both sides for more than 60 years.

In 1836, a $28 million surplus in the United States treasury was divided among the states.

In 1938, Congress created the Civil Aeronautics Authority to regulate air traffic.

In 1974, Israel withdrew from the last remaining section of land captured from Syria during the October 1973 war.

Ten years ago, Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir rejected any proposal for a temporary ceasefire with the Arabs.

Five years ago, the Supreme Court postponed any re-examination of its 1972 ruling that capital punishment was unconstitutional.

Last year, President Carter flew to Tokyo for an economic summit of seven industrialized nations.

Today's birthdays: Former Secretary of State William Rogers is 67. Film and stage director and choreographer Bob Fosse is 53.

INSIDE REPORT:

Refusal to dump Brock reveals problems with advisers

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

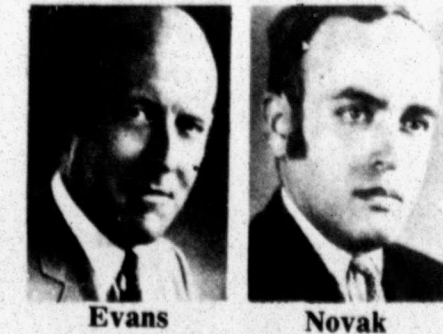

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan's decision to keep William Brock as Republican national chairman after all corrects two widespread misconceptions, showing that Reagan is a better politician than supposed and that his political operation may be worse than its severest critics imagine.

Shortcomings of his political high command were revealed in unanimous advice that he needlessly outrage party moderates by dumping Brock. Besides failing to recognize these consequences, Reagan's senior advisers were guilty of naivete. While dumping Brock, they were trying to hire his closest friend and associate, William Timmons.

In overriding this advice, Reagan is not the marionette liberals take him for but a politician who covets the presidency. "I never appreciated before," one moderate Republican deeply involved in the Brock affair told us, "how much Reagan wants to be president." That lesson has been learned during the past two years by longtime associates heaved overboard by Reagan as excess baggage.

These lessons are intrinsically more important than who occupies the office of national chairman, which is mainly intramural politics. Although Brock's ability either to hurt or help Reagan's campaign is minimal, his fate was closely watched by politicians as a test of Reagan and his campaign staff.

Whatever they may say now, all Reagan's senior staffers urged him to renege on his month-old promise to retain Brock. Apart from failing to anticipate the firestorm within the Republican Party, their ineptitude is reflected in the simultaneous effort to enlist Bill Timmons as Reagan's national political director. Timmons was invited to California the same week Brock was to be administered the coup de grace.

That would be asking Butch Cassidy to join the posse before it lynched the Sundance Kid. Timmons, a senior White House aide under Presidents Nixon and Ford and now a Washington lobbyist, was Brock's lieutenant in national Young Republican politics (in the right-wing Syndicate faction) in the early 1960s and later was his congressional aide. The two Tennesseans remain intimate political collaborators.

In Los Angeles last week, two of the Reagan campaign triumvirs — William Casey and Edwin Meese — urgently sought Timmons' expertise and prestige (The third, Dr. Richard Wirthlin, was ill.) Reagan insiders believe the decisive thrust was delivered by Timmons when he made clear to Casey and Meese that whatever slim prospect they had of getting him to walk away from his business

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Recession sinking hope of balanced budget

WASHINGTON — Perhaps the most prominent victim of the economic recession will be Jimmy Carter's precariously balanced federal budget. Another casualty may well be the whole congressional budget-reform process that has been trying to restrain the free-spending habits of our lawmakers for the past six years.

The direct impact of hard times on unemployment and welfare benefits will be bad enough. But the most drastic effect may be indirect — and the impact may be more lasting. As long as there was still a possibility of achieving a balanced budget — which politicians perceive as important to the voters — members of Congress were willing, however reluctantly, to sacrifice their pet programs. It was the greatest exercise in congressional self-discipline within recent memory.

But in a sinking economy, the first reaction of politicians to the distress cries of voters is to throw them a purse string. The $200 million surplus voted into next year's budget, therefore, will be pitifully inadequate as a cushion against unavoidable anti-recession spending. So many congressmen are ready to break ranks and try to get budget cuts restored to their favorite programs. This revolt against the budget-reform system will have many powerful supporters in Congress, including the chairmen of committees and subcommittees, who resent the curbs put on their power by the Budget Committees.

"We don't like to be constrained," a House staff aide admitted to my associate Peter Grant in a rare moment of candor. "We want to be as independent as we can." The House Budget Committee's concern with specific programs is "a limitation on the freedom of our political action," he said.

Jack Anderson

Exacerbating the already delicate situation is a long-smoldering personal feud between the Budget Committee chairman, Rep. Robert Giaimo, D-Conn., and the Appropriations Committee chairman, Rep. Jamie Whitten, D-Miss. Whitten helped to set up the budget oversight process, but that was before he became head of Appropriations and long before the Budget Committee began intruding into his domain.

Whitten showed his muscle — and his contempt for the Budget Committee — the day after Congress passed its balanced budget. He convened his committee and voted a budget-busting $500 million for Saturday mail delivery, which Giaimo opposed. Giaimo stormed out of the meeting, after telling Whitten his action was a "travesty" and a "turf battle."

Whitten, who insists he still supports the budget process but claims he has always been "skeptical that it was workable," is only one of many Budget Committee enemies. "We've succeeded in antagonizing everybody," a Budget staffer conceded. "Some day we'll go too far and everybody will get together and say to hell with that."

ODDS BODKINS! My political prognosticator, Jimmy the Greek, has had his ear to the ground. The

CHARLEY REESE

Clark has earned contempt of Americans

To put it plainly, I don't like Ramsey Clark. I have never met the former U.S. Attorney General and don't want to meet him. Couldn't be civil.

I am not intolerant of people who have different opinions, but I don't like people who consistently work against the interests of the United States, who consistently malign the United States and its people, and who consistently find virtues in our enemies.

On three occasions that I know about Ramsey Clark has gone off on his own overseas and discovered the same thing in three different countries: the U.S. is no good and our enemies are saints.

He did that in Vietnam. He went beyond criticizing U.S. policy. He accused Americans of criminal behavior. He defended and aided the North Vietnamese. He told the American people they were treating our prisoners of war humanely. That was a lie.

He did that in Lebanon. He bought the PLO line completely and ranted against the U.S. and our ally, Israel.

He did that in Iran. He tut-tutted the holding of our hostages and then foamed at the mouth accusing us of crimes against the Iranian people.

Well, that's three-for-three in supporting the position of the Soviet Union which backs, the North Vietnamese, the PLO, and applauds the militants holding our hostages.

What do you do with a guy like that? I mean without committing a crime. President Carter is foolish to talk about prosecuting him for violating the travel ban. He would love that.

Charley Reese

He'd just use the courtroom as a soapbox.

The first thing you have to do is understand him. He is not an honest critic. If he were honest and truly interested in peace and human rights, then he would have been as critical of the North Vietnamese as he was of us; he would have condemned PLO terrorism as well as Israeli retaliation; he would have criticized the Soviet Union for arming the PLO as well as the U.S. for supplying arms to Israel; and he would have condemned the barbarism of Khomeini as well as the crimes of the Shah.

But, you see, Clark takes a very one-sided view of things. He appears to adopt totally whatever the propaganda line our enemies are offering and just at the very time it will help them most.

Am I saying Ramsey Clark is a communist? No, I'm saying that on three separate occasions he has injected himself into foreign policy issues and supported the communist position. Why he has done so, I don't know and his motivation really doesn't matter. When my father was teaching me to shoot a pistol, he used to say, "If you kill a man with this thing, he won't care whether you did it on purpose or by accident." I don't care whether Clark is helping our enemies out of stupidity, misguided idealism or malice. The result is the same.

President Carter deserves whatever discomfort Clark causes him. The president chose Clark as one of his early envoys in the hostage crisis. If you choose to pick rats for pets, don't complain when they bite you.

The proper attitude to display toward Clark is contempt. He has earned it. The fact that he can show his face in the U.S. without getting pelted with old eggs is evidence of apathy. People who can't distinguish between friends and enemies are people who themselves stand for nothing.

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

What is the significance of a television repairman in California, who is a member of the Ku Klux Klan, winning the primary for a seat in Congress? The mood in the country has changed. A television repairman holding office is a real possibility.

The TV repair-Klansman's victory was no fluke. The frightening fact is that, in the past several years, the image of the TV repairman has improved.

In the minds of some, the TV repairman is no longer the crude slob writing about the countryside terrorizing his victims by burning a set of rabbit ears on their front lawns.

"He tells it like it is," said one irate voter — "and we're mad as Hell. So what if he is a TV repairman. Now, maybe they'll listen to us."

When asked what he thought about the candidate also belonging to the Ku Klux Klan, the voter said, "What's that got to do with anything?"

Italian express trains nothing to sneeze at

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Maybe it was the Italian orange brandy, but there was something faintly Shakespearean about the two gentlemen who got on the train at Verona.

One was selling coffee from a large stainless steel urn strapped to his back like a knapsack. He wore a jacket-like apron, resembling an Elizabethan doublet, and sang a falsetto song that sounded strangely like:

"Who is Sylvia? What is she?"

It must have been the brandy.

The other gentleman was selling watches. His arm, in fact, was covered with them from wrist to elbow.

"Buy watch?" he asked, sliding up his sleeve to display his wares and gazing sadly around the compartment for customers and furtively over his shoulder for the authorities.

The hairy arm carried a dazzling array of men's watches, but there was also a ladies department concealed in a rather soiled handkerchief in his inner coat pocket. These he revealed to select prospects, like the elegantly coiffured contessa-type across the aisle.

"Quartz, very good, cheaper than Switzerland," he testified in a voice as pleading as the soulful eyes that suddenly registered panic at the approach of two men in uniform. They were only soldiers, going home on leave or back to their bases, both a little drunk, but the merchant of Verona cut short his spiel and was gone before any of our fellow passengers looked up from their newspapers.

Both soldiers wore the broad brimmed five gallon hats topped with long ostrich feathers that identified the crack mountain troops. These they doffed with a lurching, reverend flourish, punctuated by a partially suppressed hiccup, at a group of elderly nuns returning from a fruitless search for the dining car. The car was supposed to have been attached at Venice, but like the conductor or whoever it was who was supposed to take the tickets, it never did turn up.

The sandwich man came by, then the newspaper vendor and the candy butcher. At Brescia, a jolly little old lady selling fresh strawberries and a rather ripe cheese hopped on and off, and somewhere near the Swiss border, the passport control officer made an appearance, followed by a traveling banker who changed money from a large schoolbag like those carried by the bookies at Ascot. I also recall a peddler pushing a cart piled high with liter-sized bottles of chianti in straw baskets called fiascos and, out on several platforms, vendors who retailed hot lunches — steaming macaroni and hot sausages — through the train windows. But no conductor and no dining car.

That is what makes traveling on Italian trains so interesting. An unending panorama of humanity passes inside and outside the carriage.

Just outside Milan, the train — the so-called Paris Express — stopped for a long time at a grade crossing. Traffic could be seen piling up for more than a mile in both directions across that flat landscape. The crossing attendant went inside his little shack and emerged with an arm chair, which he tilted back against the drop-gate, and then proceeded to peel an apple with such surgical precision that the skin unwound in a great unbroken corkscrew curl. We figured it would be an even longer wait, when his wife brought out a large portable radio and placed it at his slippered feet.

"If he takes off his cap, we shall be here all night," said the Contessa. She informed us that in Italy, the grade crossing attendants always lower the gates when a train is scheduled to pass, regardless of how late it is. The telltale sign of a train actually arriving is when he (or sometimes she) puts on the uniform cap.

I don't know if she had made up the story to practice her English on the tourists, but the man never did remove his cap. The official paid no attention when several impatient citizens dragged their motorscooters and bicycles across the tracks and under the gates, but he seemed to become annoyed when a chorus of impatient motorists resorted to their horns. He turned the radio up, as if in retaliation and folded his arms haughtily, like Horatio at the bridge.

Mussolini may have made the trains run on time, but postwar Italy has renounced such fascist pretensions.

A sneeze from an elderly farmer taking in the scene over the fence of a nearby cow pasture restored everyone's good humor.

"Salute!" cried the grade crossing attendant. "Salute!" echoed the brakeman further down the track. "Salute!" shouted out the engineer from his cabin. A litany of "Salutes" resounded from inside and outside the halted train.

In Italy, nothing draws more attention or consolation than a sneeze.

A customer could choke to death on a fishbone at an outdoor restaurant and be ignored by everyone around him, including the waiters, who since the days of Pompeii have been impervious to anything not happening at their tables. But a sneeze will stop traffic and bring a fervent "salute" from everyone within earshot. Every Italian knows from ancient legend and his grandmother's store of oral wisdom that a sneeze brings a person to the brink of death. Life is almost snuffed out between the "ah..." and the "choo" — or so they have been telling each other since the time of the Black Death. Shouting "salute" — good health — jolts the victim back from the brink. Gondoliers on the Grand Canal skip a stroke to holler a "salute" at a sneezer.

As we threaded our way through the foothills of the Alps, with the sun slanting lower through the tall Lombardy poplars, the train rumbled through many long pitch-black tunnels that left us in complete darkness.

When it was night, of course, the lights in the car came on. The conductor, wherever he was hiding, probably consulted a schedule and threw the switch at the pre-ordained track milestone. Traveling in Italy, one should always expect the regularly scheduled unexpected. Where else can you park your car illegally by tipping the authorized (by himself) illegal parking attendant, who proudly bears the name of his illicit occupation on his cap.

Hospital choice can be important

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine is arranging to travel almost clear across the country for open-heart surgery even though there are facilities that perform this operation a lot closer to home. I can understand what is prompting him to do this because I would even go to another country for surgery if I thought it would improve the odds. But I wonder whether the choice of a hospital is all that important. — Mr. F.Y.

Dear Mr. Y.: For some kinds of surgery, the choice of a hospital does appear to be an important consideration. For example, researchers at the University of California — San Francisco and Stanford University report that for open-heart surgery, coronary artery bypass grafts, vascular surgery and prostate surgery, hospitals in which at least 200 operations are done each year have mortality rates from 25 to 41 percent lower than hospitals with lower volumes.

For other procedures, however, including removal of the gallbladder, they found little difference in mortality rates as long as the hospitals performed more than one such operation a year.

Their findings are based on mortality rate data for 12 surgical procedures obtained from almost 1,500 hospitals in the United States.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have read with interest the stories about people in various parts of the world who live well past 100 years of age. What would we have to do to match them? Americans live a lot longer now than they used to, and it seems to me we should be able to do better as we learn more about health and nutrition, and as medical care continues to improve. — Mrs. F.J.L.

Dear Mrs. L.: There is serious question about the validity of reports of people living well into their 100s. The information about their longevity is essentially anecdotal in nature, with no firm proof in the form of birth certificates or similar official documents.

Morever, while advances in medicine and sanitation during the past 40 years have increased life expectancy at birth, the maximum human life span — estimated at about 110 years — has not changed. In fact, Dr. Richard D. Cutler of the Gerontology Research Center in Baltimore says the maximum human life span has remained about the same for the past 100,000 years.

It is the average life span that has shown a significant increase over the years. For example, the average age at death during the time of the Greek and Roman empires was about 30 years; even as recently as 1900, the average age at death was still under 50 years. Today that figure has risen to 75 years in the United States and other developed nations. But even in 1900, life expectancy for a person who reached his or her 65th birthday was almost as high as it is today.

Unless there is a major breakthrough in our understanding of the aging process, we are not within reach of any significant increase in the maximum human life span.

Alamo YMCA Fun Club openings still available

Young people from grades 1-6 can still participate in cheerleading, arts and crafts, a variety of sports, and field trips through the Midland Alamo YMCA's Fun Club, even though it began June 2.

Morning classes are free with the exception of a $3 arts and crafts fee, and meet from 8 to noon.

The afternoon Fun Club is open to YMCA members only, and meets from noon to 5:30. Fee for this club is $20 per week if paid by the month and $25 per week if paid by the week.

Both sessions will run through July 25. Activities already enjoyed by participating youngsters included a paper airplane flying contest, a cheerleading competition and a trip to the movies to see "Mary Poppins" followed by a swimming party.

For more information, call 694-2528 or come by the Alamo YMCA at 901 N. Midland Drive.

'A' student runs afoul of state law

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Tony Peacock's senior project earned him an "A" at the University of North Carolina, but almost got him a $200 fine and 30 days in the Mecklenburg County jail.

It all started when Peacock's computerized slot machine got a $25 prize from the local chapter of the Institute for Electrical and Electronic Engineers. Before going to pick up the award and demonstrate his project last month, he decided to make a quick stop at his girlfriend's home.

When he came out 10 minutes later, he found two police cars blocked his car and a policeman peering through the car window. Then the 21-year-old engineering student found out that in North Carolina, it's illegal to transport, own, possess, store, keep, rent, lease, give away or permit the operation of a slot machine.

Peacock thought the incident was funny until he got a court date for a trial on the misdemeanor charge. But with the help of university officials, the case was dismissed and he was allowed to retrieve the slot machine, which now sits in his room at his home in Denton.

ELIMINATE THE HASSLES OF A RUSH JOB THE NEXT TIME YOU MOVE TO A NEW OFFICE OR EXPAND YOUR CURRENT FACILITIES.

Preplanning your telephone system means fewer interruptions and a savings on your employees' productive work time.

Planning a telephone system before you move or expand your offices means there'll be plenty of time to order the equipment you need. And plenty of time to install the equipment before you arrive or while the expansion is underway.

That means less interrupted employee work time caused by equipment installations going on in your new office after you're in and settled.

Talk with your Southwestern Bell representative today. The next step is easy. Call us toll free today. A specially trained Southwestern Bell representative is standing by to answer your questions and help you with more detailed information.

We want you to call us now, before you expand your office or move to a new location for some important information that can help you realize a savings in time and money.

A move or expansion is the perfect opportunity to evaluate the communications needs of your growing business.

Most businesses move or enlarge their offices for one reason — they need more room. And a growing business demands a telephone system designed specifically to meet its expanding needs.

A move or expansion allows us to easily and efficiently make the changes and additions your telephone system requires — at a greater convenience to you.

By calling us when you're planning a move, you can be assured of getting a system tailor made for your business needs. And not just a temporary system designed to meet a quick deadline and installed as you're unpacking boxes.

Chris Hall, 28, was one of three men who tried to stop accused gunman Alvin Lee King III when he broke into Daingerfield's First Baptist Church Sunday morning, firing on the congregation. Hall is the only "hero" to survive — one died on the church steps, the other in a nearby hospital several hours later. (AP Laserphoto)

Two die trying to stop gunman

By LAURA RICHARDSON

DAINGERFIELD, Texas (AP) — Three men battled the heavily armed gunman who directed his deadly fire into the crowded First Baptist Church sanctuary. Two of them died trying to stop the fusillade.

Church ushers Kenneth Truitt and James Y. "Red" McDaniel, both 49, were killed Sunday as they struggled with man clad in combat gear and a flak jacket and armed with two rifles and two pistols.

In all, five persons were killed and 10 others wounded in the attack by Alvin Lee King III.

Church member Chris Hall, 28, a Daingerfield general contractor, was the first to reach the gunman after he burst into the sanctuary, shouted,

"This is war!" and opened fire.

Hall "really saved the day. He attacked him and got both rifles," said church deacon Harold Edwards.

"I'm really not a brave person. I'm not a hero. I just lived to tell about it," said Hall. "As a Christian, all I can say is the Lord just took control of me."

He said he was sitting on the extreme left side of the church when the gunman rushed in.

"I was about five or six feet away from him on his blind side. He didn't see me until I grabbed the rifle."

He said he struggled with the gunman and both of them fell against the main entrance to the church. As the rifle fell to the floor, Hall lost his balance and fell forward on his hands and knees.

"I turned and looked at him and saw he was reaching for a gun in his holster. I was looking for cover. I crawled and scrambled for the stairs into the basement and skimmed down. He fired three rounds at me but missed," said Hall.

Edwards said Truitt and McDaniel then jumped up.

"They just bear hugged him (the gunman) out the door and all the time I could hear a gun shooting," said Edwards.

Truitt ran an electric store in Daingerfield. McDaniel was a foreman for the TNN Railroad at nearby Lone Star Steel. McDaniel's wife, Laverne, was wounded in the arm and chest by the gunfire in the church.

"I went out the back door when I saw what was happening," said Edwards. "I saw two men lying on the ground. Truitt was holding his stomach. McDaniel obviously was dead."

The gunman then ran to a nearby fire station yard and shot himself in the head, police said.

Authorities said he was critically wounded, but expected to survive. The former high school math teacher faces capital murder charges, police said.

"I'm still kind of in shock," Hall said. "He (King) was a teacher of mine. But I didn't recognize him because he looked like a soldier to me. I never really saw his face."

Town stunned by shootings

By LAURA RICHARDSON

DAINGERFIELD, Texas (AP) — A steady stream of cars rolled slowly down Webb Street on Sunday, past the First Baptist Church where five people were killed in a violent outburst that stunned this Northeast Texas town.

"You just never dreamed it would happen in the town of Daingerfield. I think everybody's in a state of shock," said Mayor W.O. "Bo" Irvin.

The normal quiet of Daingerfield, a close-knit community of steelworkers, farmers and small businessmen, was shattered Sunday when a gunman burst into the church as the congregation began the third hymn of the morning service.

The service was being broadcast live by a local radio station, and townspeople rushed to the scene.

"It was announced over the public address system in the Methodist church where I was, a block and a half away," Irvin said. "I was terrified. My daughter was over there."

"When I got there the men were still lying on the sidewalk. Everybody was trying to help. I took several people to the hospital myself."

Irvin said this town of churches — there is a church for every 100 residents — is now turning to comfort the bereaved.

"We're doing what we can for the living," he said. "I guess when we get all our wits together we'll think of something more but now we're just visiting those who've been hurt and their families."

County Attorney William R. Porter said, "It's the type of wound only time can heal. We're trying to help the immediate families but there's not much we can really do."

At the Nail-Haggard Funeral Home, two blocks from the church on Webb Street, mourners gathered and spoke of the killings in hushed tones.

The funeral home was arranging services for three of the dead. The guest books were filled with names.

At the police station, one block from the church also on Webb Street, officers — many of them pale and unshaven — sounded bewildered as they discussed the case.

Jacky Hiles, the first officer on the scene, said he was "exhausted and dazed" after he returned from guarding the mar charged with murder in the shooting, Alvin Lee King III, 45. Hiles sat in the office of Police Chief James R. Keene, staring at the wall while Keene photographed the arsenal of weapons and blood-spattered combat garb arranged on the floor.

"I still can't believe it," he said.

Across the street from the 75-year-old brick church is a mural on the wall of McKellar's Department Store. It features a bright sun, a pale blue sky and the words, "Walk in love. God is watching."

Accused gunman called 'egotistical, withdrawn'

DAINGERFIELD, Texas (AP) — A co-worker says the man accused of opening fire on a crowd of worshippers at a Daingerfield church is an egotistical and withdrawn man disliked by the high school students he once taught.

Alvin Lee King III was charged with capital murder Sunday afternoon, just hours after the attack that left five persons dead and 10 others wounded.

Police said King, who was to have gone on trial for incest Monday, turned a pistol on himself after he was pushed out of First Baptist Church of Daingerfield by two ushers who were fatally shot during the struggle.

"He (King) was (a) rather egotistical man. Withdrawn and quiet. He thought he was the best," said Daingerfield high school principal Harold Edwards, a former colleague of the alleged gunman.

Dead, hospitalized listed

DEAR ABBY Stripped-down gander is sauce for goose

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: One night after bowling, three of us women (all married) decided on an impulse to stop at a club that features male striptease dancers.

We were amazed to find it packed with screaming women of all ages having the time of their lives. The male strippers had gorgeous bodies; their dancing was rather suggestive, but they were all talented singers and dancers. They stripped down to practically nothing, but you could see as much at any public beach.

The evening turned out to be a lot of fun, and we thought we'd probably go again and maybe even take our husbands.

But when we told our husbands about our little adventure, one said he was shocked and disappointed to learn that his wife had such cheap, vulgar, low-down taste!

Another husband took it personally, saying it was a putdown to him, that a wife who was satisfied with her own husband wouldn't go out of her way to look at another man's body.

My husband said if I got a kick out of it, it was OK with him, and it might even improve our marriage to have a few new fantasies to draw on.

Abby, how do you feel about women who go to see male strippers?—BEV IN PENN.

DEAR BEV: If a woman gets goosebumps from taking a gander at a good-looking guy, I say what's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander!

DEAR ABBY: My husband has been employed at the same place for a number of years. He enjoys his work and earns a good living there.

Recently a new man became his boss. The first time this man came to our home I thought he was a nice person, but the next time he made a pass at me. I told him I wasn't interested in him in that way and please leave me alone, but he didn't seem to get the message. Now every time he sees me he starts up again.

I know my husband would quit his job if he knew about this, so I haven't told him. I don't want him to leave his job as long as he's happy there. What should I do?—CONFUSED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR CONFUSED: Assume a polite but clearly impersonal attitude toward this man. And keep your distance. You don't need your husband's help to protect you from unwanted attention.

DEAR ABBY: I am a drunk who hasn't had a drink in four years and eight months. I have been reading your column since its inception.

At times I've read it through blurred, red-rimmed eyes; I've read it sitting on a bunk in a cell in Leavenworth. Now, thank God, I am reading it with clear eyes and a clear head.

I read your column because I think you have great wit, tremendous insight, compassion and understanding. But your recent column about AA was the frosting on the cake!

My disease, alcoholism, is terminal, progressive and incurable. Only through AA was I able to arrest it and learn how to achieve peace of mind, serenity, sobriety and freedom.

I suspect AA was a divinely inspired program, for there is still a subtle mystery as to why, after 30 years of destructive drinking, I suddenly took myself to an AA meeting. I, like many others, was amazed to find doctors, lawyers, judges, school teachers and other panhandlers like myself there who had to reach rock bottom before trying AA.

I have now come to realize that in a group of any dozen people, one is either an alcoholic or will cross the line from social drinking to alcoholism.

Ten men have walked on the moon. One was an alcoholic. He spoke last year on skid row where I got sober in 1975. Thanks for all you've done, Abby.—FRED M.

CLUB NEWS

PRAIRIE LEE HOME EXTENSION

Mrs. Paula Sheperd, 4524 Lanham, was hostess to the Prairie Lee Extension Homemakers Club this month.

Cathy Harris, nurse at Greenwood School, presented a program on "Breast Self-examination." She showed slides and stressed the three-step procedure which is important in early detection.

Reporting for committees were Mary Bryant, Ray Dunn and Bert Dornier.

New members are Julie Eckerty and Mary Jo Collins. Guests were Ethel Evans and Mary Richardson.

The club will have a covered dish luncheon July 16 and work on a quilt project for Annual Day. The group will meet at the home of Mrs. Bryant, Cloverdale Road.

A nominating committee composed of Allene Smith, Opal Ponder and Minnie Richman was named to select new officers.

WESTSIDE EXTENSION HOMEMAKERS CLUB

The Westside Extension Homemakers Club met in the home of Pauline Fawke.

Roll call was answered with the name of the article each member is making for Oct. 10 Annual Day. Plans were also discussed for this event.

Mrs. Fawke gave a program on drug interaction.

Reports were given by Bonnie Bradley, Opal Reaves and Marie Webb.

Next meeting is 11 a.m. July 16 and will be a luncheon.

MIDLAND SOUTHSIDE LIONS AND DANDY LIONS CLUB

The installation banquet for the Midland Southside Lions and Dandy Lions was held at the Broken Spoke Restaurant.

On the program were the Rev. Jimmy Stovall, Joe Ellis, past president, and Tom Nipp, past district governor.

New officers are William Stone, president; Wayne Butler, vice president; Merrill Cross, second vice president; Charlie Gronou, third vice president; Robert Pierce, secretary; E. J. Pryor, treasurer; James Ree, Lion Tamer; Royce D. Sterdt, Tail Twister; Stovall, chaplain; and Betty Schuler, Sweetheart.

Margie McCain installed the Dandy Lions. They are Mary Ellen Stone, president; Dorothy Koons, vice president; Jane Overstreet, secretary; Frances Garrett, treasurer; and Ramona Pierce, reporter.

Siamese twins may be separated

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Siamese twins now on respirators at the Children's Medical Center may have to be separated in order to save one because of their poor condition, a physician says.

"The twins are less active and are having a great deal of trouble breathing," Dr. Gerald Molfenter said Thursday.

The twins were born to a Piqua couple Tuesday and moved to the medical center here because of its expanded facilities.

The daughters of Randy and Rebecca Wackler were born six weeks premature. They are joined at the base of the spine and face away from each other.

Study says abortions can increase chances of miscarriage

CHICAGO (AP) — Women who have had two or more abortions have a greatly increased risk of miscarriage in subsequent pregnancies, according to a study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

In a study of 1,312 patients at the Boston Hospital for Women, a group of five doctors found that women who have had two or more abortions are two to three times more likely to have a

She's happy with children

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Rachel Rossow, mother of 11 handicapped children, says she's so happy "that sometimes I feel guilty about it."

With her husband, Carl, the 41-year-old Connecticut woman's life revolves around a family of 14 youngsters, 11 of whom have handicaps.

"I'm always tired," laughed Mrs. Rossow. "But I figure being tired is an occupational hazard for any mother of a large family."

Hers is not a typical household. The couple adopted their first multiple-handicapped child in 1971. Others soon followed.

"Our phone kept ringing...nurses and social workers asking would we accept this or that child...until finally in 1974 we set up a non-profit corporation and opened our home to more handicapped youngsters," said Mrs. Rossow, who was in Rhode Island recently to accept an award from her alma

Losing 92 inches cut my weight problem down to size

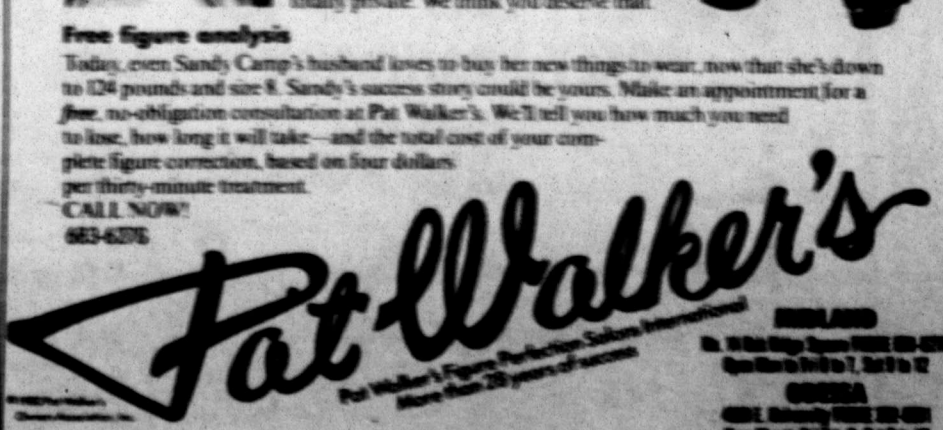

"When I bought these size 18 jeans, I weighed 212 pounds," says Sandy Camp of Danneberg, Texas. "I managed to take off 20 or so on my own, but then I was stuck. That's when I went to Pat Walker's."

No-pain exercise is the secret
After her introductory treatment on Pat Walker's Symmetricon passive exercise unit, Sandy knew that she'd come to the right place. She felt rested and relaxed, not sweaty and exhausted. She didn't even have to change into exercise clothes. And before many weeks went by, she could see how her figure was being toned and firmed up. Sandy eventually lost 13 inches from her waist, 12 inches from her tummy, 10 1/2 from her hips, and several inches in other areas.

Complete privacy is your privilege
If wearing a leotard embarrasses you...if you don't like revealing your figure problems to a roomful of strangers, then Pat Walker's is your kind of place. Every aspect of your weight loss program—from counseling sessions about sensible eating habits, to Symmetricon treatments—is totally private. We think you deserve that.

Today, even Sandy Camp's husband loves to buy her new things to wear, now that she's down to 124 pounds and size 8. Sandy's success story could be yours. Make an appointment for a free, no-obligation consultation at Pat Walker's. We'll tell you how much you need to lose, how long it will take—and the total cost of your complete figure correction, based on four dollars per thirty-minute treatment.

Japan's LDP scores thundering victory

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's ruling Liberal Democratic Party, rallying from the death of its leader and putting aside bitter internal rivalries, scored a thundering parliamentary election victory to assure its grip on power. Final but unofficial returns gave the strife-torn party a total of 284 seats in the 511-member lower house of the Diet, or Parliament. It also won at least 47 of 76 local seats being chosen in the less-important upper house. The lower house total was the most for the Liberal Democrats since 1968, when it governed with 288 seats and 12 independent allies. A handful of independents elected Sunday was expected to boost its margin again. The triumph, leaving opposition parties far behind with a total of 217 seats, set the stage for the Liberal Democrats to choose a new prime minister to replace Masayoshi Ohira, 70, who died June 12 of a heart attack. The outcome destroyed all chance that Japan might wind up with a coalition government for the first time since 1948. The Socialist Party had held out faint hopes for that after winning a no-confidence motion against the Liberal Democrats last month. It was the first time since 1972 that the LDP, a loose conglomeration of conservative and business-oriented groups, had itself won more than 270 seats — considered a safe margin in the Diet. The party has dominated Japan's political scene and promoted its strongly pro-West policies for most of the past three decades. Sunday's election was the first in Japan's history in which votes were cast simultaneously for both the lower house and the upper house, known as the House of Councillors. In the latter, half of the 252 seats were contested. Some 63 million people, about 75 percent of the eligible voters, took part in the balloting. Since a surprise election setback that nearly cost it control of the Parliament last October, the LDP had held precariously to power with 257 seats — 248 of its own plus nine independent allies. The LDP's victory was sure to be well-received by U.S. officials, who were stunned when the LDP lost a no-confidence motion in Parliament on May 16, forcing then-Prime Minister Ohira to call for a new election. The no-confidence move had been organized by an opposition coalition led by the Socialist Party, but it won only because some 50 LDP members — rivals of Ohira — boycotted the session. Following Ohira's unexpected death, other faction leaders within the party called for a closing of ranks to assure that the LDP did not lose its grip on the reins of government because of internal squabbling. That strategy appeared to have paid off in Sunday's balloting, but renewed intraparty strife appeared likely as LDP leaders continued discussions to choose a successor to Ohira. Several closed-door meetings already have been held, with no clear choice emerging. Principal contenders include Toshio Komoto, 69, a businessman and a leading rival of Ohira; Yasuhiro Nakasone, 62, an LDP faction leader known for his strong pro-military views, and Kiichi Miyazawa, 60, a former foreign minister and political ally of Ohira. Those returned to office in Sunday's voting included former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka, still being tried for alleged involvement in the Lockheed pay-offs scandal, and former Prime Ministers Takeo Miki and Takeo Fukuda.

Two drug dealers spared, six others executed in Iran

By The Associated Press

Iran's most feared prosecutor spared two suspected drug dealers, married them in prison and provided them with a house and $800 to start a new life but had six others executed by firing squad today, Tehran radio reported.

Ayatollah Sadegh Khalkhali, head of Iran's anti-drug campaign, announced the six men were executed in Tehran on charges of smuggling and distributing drugs and wide-spread "corruption."

"A young couple arrested by the drug squad in prison were married and freed," Khalkhali added. "We found out that the couple is deeply in love with each other. Since they were young and had no guilt, just they were addicted and unemployed with no money, I took care of their marriage ceremony, provided them a house in which to live and gave them 50,000 rials ($800) cash to start a new life. I made a promise to them that whenever they need money to come here, I will help them."

Khalkhali, who is well-known for his harsh judgments, supports a trial of the American hostages who spent their 233rd day in captivity today.

Meanwhile, Newsweek magazine reported Sunday that Pentagon officials who planned the aborted April 25 mission to rescue the hostages proceeded even though they estimated that 45 lives could have been lost. Officials estimated that casualties could have included 30 U.S. commandos and at least 15 hostages, it said.

The Pentagon declined comment. In New York, detectives ruled out assassination as the motive for the break-in at the East Side townhouse occupied by relatives of deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

The two intruders, disguised as deliverymen, may have wanted to burglarize the exclusive Beekman Place townhouse Saturday or the break-in may have been a "harrassment move," Detective Dennis Caulfield said Sunday.

The townhouse at 29 Beekman Place is now the home of Princess Chafik, widow of the shah's nephew, who was assassinated Dec. 7 outside his mother's Paris home. Princess Ashraf Pahlavi, the shah's twin sister, moved to a new apartment on Park Avenue last week.

Viet forces attack Thai border heavy casualties are reported

ARANYAPRATHET, Thailand (AP) — Vietnamese forces in Cambodia today launched multi-pronged attacks across the Thai border and initial reports indicated possible heavy casualties among Thai defenders and some 200,000 Cambodian refugees camped along the frontier, officials said.

Western relief sources at this Thai frontier town said all foreign relief workers as well as Thai villagers were being evacuated from the border area.

"A limited Thai response was continuing to the incursion and more Thai reinforcements have been requested," one Western source said.

Fighting was reported at scattered points along a 40 mile stretch of border, the sources said.

Witnesses in one border town said they saw Vietnamese troops burn down a school. In Aranyaprathet, witnesses saw Thai tanks, artillery and troops moving up to the frontier.

Earlier, the Thai military command said "foreign forces," its term for the Vietnamese occupation troops in Cambodia, had attacked a Thai army outpost at Baan Mak Moon. Helicopter gunships were scrambled to aid the besieged outpost, the command said, adding that seven Thai soldiers had been wounded and many of the intruders killing in the early morning shootout.

Baan Mak Moon is the site of camp housing about 20,000 Cambodian refugees.

The fighting halted a Thai-United Nations repatriation of refugees to Cambodia from the sprawling Khao I Dang camp, north of Aranyaprathet.

Maimed Arab mayor moved to Jordan

JERUSALEM (AP) — Kerim Khalaf, the Arab mayor of the occupied West Bank city of Ramallah who was maimed in an assassination attempt three weeks ago, was taken to Jordan today for further medical treatment, authorities said. He is expected to go to the United States soon.

Khalaf lost his left foot and suffered severe injuries to his right leg when a bomb exploded as he started his car outside his home on the morning of June 2. In separate incidents on the same day, Nablus Mayor Bassam Shadaa lost both legs in a car-bombing.

and a third Palestinian nationalist mayor, Ibrahim Tawil of El Bireh, narrowly escaped injury when a bomb attached to his garage door exploded.

A spokesman for Israel's military government on the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River said Khalaf was driven in an Israeli ambulance from a hospital in Ramallah to the Allenby Bridge.

French Parliament talking about abolishing draft

PARIS (AP) — While Americans talk about bringing back the draft, the French Parliament is talking about shortening conscription — and perhaps even abolishing it.

Pacifists want the draft abolished on moral grounds, while some generals and civilian defense experts are saying it should be eliminated because it nets far more recruits than France needs.

The most concrete proposal before the parliamentary committee probing France's military readiness is to shorten the period of conscription from 12 months to four.

The proposal was made by committee head Yves Lencien, a Gaullist and veteran of France's Indochina wars. Lencien complains that the army that made Napoleon great is today "half-motivated, half-trained, half-equipped for half-clear missions."

In testimony before Lencien's committee, Defense Minister Yvon Bourges said he was in favor of keeping the year-long period. "It shows the enemy that the will to resist him will go as far and last as long as is needed," he said.

France has the biggest armed force in Western Europe. Britain, Ireland and Luxembourg are the only Western European countries that have no draft. The rest conscript their young men for periods ranging from up to 32 months in Greece to as little as six months in Austria and three in Finland.

The Lencien committee's work ties in with other critical military choices facing this country, such as whether to build the neutron weapon. A decision is expected next month.

French military generals are sharply divided on the draft issue. Those who believe France's security depends on its nuclear power think the government is drafting far more youths than it needs. Those who expect another European war to be fought on the ground see conscription as a vital factor.

Former Defense Minister Pierre Messmer proposed to the Lencien committee that it abolish the draft and depend wholly on volunteers.

Lencien believes the elite strike forces used to protect France's overseas interests can be manned by paid volunteers. A four-month conscription period, he says, would give recruits ample basic training without disrupting their studies or work prospects. He even suggests that recruits choose their own date for being drafted.

Several persons questioned in conspiracy in Jamaica

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Security forces are questioning one civilian and members of Jamaica's Defense Force in connection with "an alleged conspiracy" and subversive activity on the Caribbean island, Prime Minister Michael Manley announced.

Sources close to the Jamaica Defense Force said early today the security forces were alerted to the conspiracy by Americans. John Keller, public affairs officer at the U.S. Embassy in Kingston, said the embassy had no immediate reaction to the allegation.

In his announcement Sunday night, Manley did not name those detained, but sources said they included 28 army personnel including sergeants and corporals as well as a former army officer and another civilian, reportedly the leader of the minor political party.

Other security forces declined to discuss the prime minister's statement.

Manley made his announcement shortly after a pre-recorded television and radio broadcast replying to opposition charges that his government was planning a "military solution" involving international forces.

Manley, in power since 1972, is in the midst of a hard fought re-election campaign against Jamaica Labor Party leader Edward Seaga. Manley has acknowledged polls that indicate his Peoples National Party will lose heavily when elections are held, probably in September.

Manley issued his statement after meeting with the heads of security forces at Jamaica House, his office and residence. He said the security force leaders "have confirmed to me earlier reports concerning events about which it is necessary to inform the nation."

"As a result I must state that a civilian and certain members of the Jamaica Defense Force have been detained for questioning in connection with an alleged conspiracy to commit certain acts detrimental to national security and subversive to the constitutional government of Jamaica.

"The situation is under control, investigations are being pursued and the public will be kept fully informed," Manley said.

Fourth test-tube baby born in Australia

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — The world's fourth test-tube baby, a 7-pound 14-ounce girl, and her 24-year-old Australian mother were reported in excellent condition today at Melbourne's Royal Women's Hospital.

Mrs. Linda Reed, a nurse who lives in Churchill, a small coal-mining town in eastern Victoria, gave birth in a normal delivery to her second child, Candice Elizabeth, on Monday after 12 hours in labor. Mrs. Reed and her husband, John, 30, a schoolteacher, have a 4-year-old son, Daniel.

Mother and child were "beautifully well," said a hospital spokesman.

Dr. Geoff Westwood, acting director of medical services at the hospital, said staff members were "all very delighted and excited."

He said Reed was present for the birth along with the hospital's senior gynecologist, Dr. Ian Johnson, and pediatrician Dr. Ken Mountain.

"She's really beautiful — a super baby," said a member of the delivery team, Dr. Alex Lopata. "She's a perfectly normal baby girl. She has a lovely crop of black hair and looks really beautiful."

He said Candice "cried straight away after birth and the pediatrician smiled and said 'She's a perfectly normal, beautiful baby.' We wrapped her up and put her on her mother's stomach for a cuddle."

According to medical sources here, Mrs. Reed was the first of two Victorian women to undergo in vitro fertilization — the implanting into the womb of an egg fertilized in a test tube.

They said the birth had been expected at the end of this week, nine months after the fertilized egg was implanted. The second woman was expecting her baby in August.

Doctors can't defy woman's plea

Husband powerless as 'no blood' policy kills wife

MIAMI (AP) — Joyce Prudhomme's two words left her husband and doctors helpless in a morass of legalities and despair.

"No blood," the 28-year-old woman said Thursday when she awoke at Jackson Memorial Hospital, where she had been brought after suffering seizures caused by a rare blood disease.

She died Saturday night, resolute in her refusal, on religious grounds, to accept blood transfusions.

"I just can't believe that a religion would let her commit suicide," said her shaken husband, Peter Prudhomme.

"It was horrible to watch," said Dr. Don Temple, an intern at Jackson Memorial Hospital. "The torment her husband was going through was the worst I'd ever seen."

When Mrs. Prudhomme was first brought to the hospital, unconscious, blood transfusions were begun. When she woke, she insisted they be discontinued.

Her refusal sparked hours of discussions at the hospital where a treatment for the woman's disease was discovered four years ago.

"I know that if she had had more time to think about it... she would never have thrown her life away," said Prudhomme, who had married his wife when she was 14.

He shook his head as he spoke of how hospital lawyers wouldn't let him overrule his wife's decision.

His wife was suffering from thrombotic thrombocytopenic purpura (TTP), a disease that causes tiny clots to form in the bloodstream, breaking down red cells and cutting off the oxygen flow to vital organs.

Though the woman was raised a Roman Catholic, she began attending Jehovah's Witness services about two years ago. But she had not formally become a member of the sect, her husband said.

An elder in the congregation Mrs. Prudhomme attended said the denomination considers blood sacred and likened transfusions to eating blood.

The church leader, who asked not to be identified, said it would be wrong "for one to extend life temporarily, then have it cut off forever thereafter. If you save your life by violating God's laws, you have no hope of resurrection."

Psychiatrists called in on the case said Mrs. Prudhomme was competent when she protested the transfusions.

"She had just had a blood transfusion and knew darned well what was going on," said Dr. Philip Greenberg, one of the consulting psychiatrists.

"She didn't want a blood transfusion. She was adamant against it. It was against her Bible studies."

"I disagreed," Temple said. "I felt she never realized the gravity of what she was doing."

But hospital lawyers said they could not legally continue the treatments.

Once the transfusions stopped, Mrs. Prudhomme slipped into periods where she would wildly thrash around in bed. Doctors tried intravenous sedatives and Valium to calm her. By Friday morning, she was in a coma, bleeding internally.

Child Actors

When Rossi (Robert Walden) researches a story on child actors, one of his sources is a studio hairdresser (Peggy Ann Garner) who was a former child star, on "Lou Grant," Monday, June 23, on CBS.

"Lou Grant" is the popular series on newspaper investigation and its team of reporters. The show is so highly regarded that Ed Asner, who plays Grant, has found that newspaper editors stop their work when he visits their newspaper. He was amazed to learn that politicians do not receive the same attention.

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J74 ♥KJ6 ♦AK53 ♠A106
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?
A.—You are in the happy position of having available a bid that describes your holding to a tee. A jump to three no trump shows a hand of 16-18 points with precisely 4-3-3-3 distribution. Since that is what you have, why not make the bid?

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK73 ♥82 ♦A105 ♠K955
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
2 NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—There is no question about making a small slam—it is simply a matter of investigating the possibility of a grand slam. If you can uncover a 4-4 suit fit, it is quite possible that a ruff in either your hand or your partner's could produce the thirteenth trick. Therefore, we would probe with a bid of three clubs and raises, we would begin to think in terms of higher things. If he bids anything else, we would settle for six no trump.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J103 ♥KJ85 ♦87 ♠QJ92
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♦ 1 ♥ ?
What action do you take?
A.—You certainly don't have enough for a penalty double. It's only a question of whether your hand is good enough for a free bid of one no trump. Though you might be a little light in terms of points, the positional factor of your hearts (behind the overcaller) enhances the value of your hand, so we would take that action.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ82 ♥6 ♦Q1053 ♠K92
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
3 ♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Since you have the equivalent of a full opening bid facing a partner who opened and then jumped, you are in slam territory. Your hand is also improved by the fact that you appear to have a double fit. If you aren't off two fast tricks in diamonds, slam is quite likely. The sensible way to start the investigation is by telling partner of your club fit. Bid four clubs.

Q.5—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠10742 ♥10965 ♦A83 ♠A6
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ 1 ♦ Pass Pass
Dbl. 2 ♥ ?
What action do you take?
A.—It is true that you probably can make a part score in spades, perhaps even a game. However, that is not likely to be your most profitable venture. On defense your hand should produce three tricks, and partner should have an equal number, or more, in view of his reopening double. Also, your four trumps are going to be of considerable nuisance value to East. We would double.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠KQ1072 ♥K6 ♦83 ♠J954
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
1 NT Pass 2 ♦ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—If you feel that you have done all that your hand merits, you do not appreciate the playing potential of your hand. Despite partner's delayed support, the spade fit is quite adequate, and your secondary fit with partner's club suit makes your hand much stronger than it counts. We would try for game by raising to three spades.

Woolworth chief says August is test month for consumer spending

HOUSTON (AP)—Edward F. Gibbons, chief executive officer of F.W. Woolworth Co., believes retail merchants will get a preview of things to come when the back-to-school sales begin in August.

Gibbons, talking with newsmen before speaking to Woolworth shareholders in Houston, said August "would be a clinical test of the economy, how much consumers have to spend, how much they will spend for the children's clothes and shoes and other things."

And, he said, Christmas sales also will be a barometer. "We are being careful about our inventory level, but the shelves won't be bare. You can never tell about the American consumer. They may say things have been so tough, lets have a good Christmas anyway."

The Woolworth chairman predicted the current recession would continue through this year and probably into the first months of 1981.

He said "There is something unusual about this recession, and that is an election year. There are devices in Washington available to make the recession easier and shorter, such as tax reductions, and that could happen.

"Another difference in this recession as to the one in 1974-1975 is that it is geographical. In the Midwest, because of the auto industry layoffs, sales have fallen flat. In other sections sales seem to be going along as usual."

Hardest hit, Gibbons said, have been the sales of furniture, rugs, appliances. He explained, "with the home mortgage money dried-up, people were not moving, as they had in the past, from the two-bedroom to the three-bedroom homes. So the sales of home furnishings plunged."

Despite the cloud of recession, Gibbons said the company would open 10 J. Brannam stores, a name-brand outlet of Woolworth, in Houston on the same day in August.

"We think this is sound business now," Gibbons said, "because the people of Houston are the type who want style, want name-brands, but because of the recession will be shopping for bargains."

"August is the back-to-school sales and of course December is Christmas. These will tell us something," he said.

Bill would ease access to records

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Carter administration today proposed legislation making it easier for federal prosecutors to get certain tax records for investigations of crime syndicates, narcotics rings and white-collar crimes.

The administration said, however, that the law must preserve strict protection for the privacy of individual income tax returns and the personal financial records that support them.

The administration view, the result of months of negotiations, was outlined today by Irvin Nathan, a deputy assistant attorney general and a key supervisor of the Justice Department's most sensitive investigations of organized crime and corruption. In testimony to a Senate Finance subcommittee, Nathan said the White House, the Justice Department and the Internal Revenue Service now support some easing of the restrictions imposed by the 1976 Tax Reform Act.

That post-Watergate law was designed to prevent the use of tax records for political purposes. But Nathan noted that it was not federal prosecutors but White House aides to former President Richard M. Nixon who delved into tax records to punish political enemies.

"There is no question that such abuses were improper," Nathan said, adding that the law should continue to ban political use of tax records.

But the statute went too far, he asserted. It generally prevents IRS agents from telling the FBI and the Justice Department about evidence of fraud, drug smuggling or other non-tax crimes discovered through tax returns or during the course of investigations of tax crimes.

The Justice Department can gain access to most tax information only by getting a federal court warrant. To get such a warrant, prosecutors must prove that the information is vital to their investigation and cannot be obtained in any other way.

"This standard is a Catch-22 test," Nathan said, contending that it requires prosecutors to know almost exactly what is in the records before they can see them.

Because of that and other time-consuming requirements, he said, "we have found it extremely difficult to investigate and prosecute complex financial crimes," especially drug trafficking, corporate bribery, public corruption and syndicate crimes.

"We believe that many investigations and prosecutions of complex financial crimes have been jeopardized or frustrated for want of information known only to IRS."

As a remedy, the administration proposed amendments that would require the IRS to alert prosecutors to evidence of crimes turned up during its own investigations when that evidence is obtained from a third party and not from the taxpayer's individual return or his personal tax records.

The IRS also would be required to alert other agencies to evidence of non-tax crimes contained in any corporation records except tax records.

The administration took the position that prosecutors still must get a federal court warrant to obtain an individual's tax returns except when the IRS has clear evidence that the individual has submitted a fraudulent return.

The administration proposal would ease the burden of proof on prosecutors applying for court warrants for an individual tax return.

Nathan said the administration cannot support a proposal by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., to give prosecutors access to individual tax returns without court orders.

"We recognize that the Nunn proposal would greatly assist law enforcement," Nathan said. "But we believe that this involves an area where the taxpayer has a legitimate expectation of privacy."

"We believe that the information which should be protected are the tax returns themselves and the financial books and records which an individual keeps and submits to IRS to support the accuracy of his or her return," the Justice Department official added.

But if a taxpayer intentionally files a false return and the IRS is certain of this, he said, "then the confidential protection for his return and underlying books and records is lost."

Chicago Tribune Managing Editor William Jones is shown in the Tribune newsroom Sunday with an edition announcing the newspapers dismissal from the city hall press room. Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne's press secretary/husband Jay McMullen said city officials would be ordered not to talk to the Tribune's reporters or give them access to government records, effective Monday. (AP Laserphoto)

Tribune ignoring Mayor's order

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Tribune has vowed that its City Hall reporter will be back on his beat today despite Mayor Jane Byrne's order that the paper vacate its desk in the second-floor press room.

"At 9 a.m., Bob Davis will arrive at City Hall to cover city government," Tribune Managing Editor William Jones said Sunday.

The mayor accused the newspaper on Saturday of printing what she termed "lies" and "character assassinations" and engaging in "male chauvinism" since she took office more than a year ago.

Her press secretary and husband, Jay McMullen, said that if the Tribune attempts to claim its desk, the administration might shut down the room entirely. "The mayor and her husband have attempted to make this a free desk issue, but it's really a freedom of the press issue and that is how we will treat it," Jones said.

Mrs. Byrne also said she will order city hall officials not to speak with Tribune reporters or allow them access to government records.

James Hoge, publisher of the Chicago Sun-Times, called the action "indefensible," and the American Civil Liberties Union said it clearly violated the First Amendment.

The Tribune said it would continue to publish news without getting City Hall approval.

Mrs. Byrne's announcement came after the newspaper published its Sunday editions parts of a previously suppressed report on city government. The mayor had opposed release of the 600-page document, prepared last year to ease the transition when Mayor Michael Bilandic left office.

The report criticized the performance of several city departments and urged several firings, including the commissioners of aviation, sewers and health, the corporation counsel, the personnel director and the chairman of the Chicago Housing Authority.

The Tribune story said the report "was apparently ignored...as the mayor and top officials of her administration deemed its recommendations...politically inexpedient."

But mayoral aide Andy Bajonski said the administration didn't put much faith in the report because much of the research for it was done by students in a college class of former Alderman Dick Simpson, one of the authors of the report.

Bajonski said the administration fought release of the report because portions of it were libelous, referring to at least one city official as "a drunk."

The Sun-Times also published a front-page story about the report but there was no indication of retaliation against the paper. McMullen is a long-time reporter on leave from the Sun-Times.

Copies of the study were obtained by the Tribune and the Sun-Times after a Circuit Court lawsuit was filed in December by the Chicago Lawyer, a periodical published by the Chicago Council of Lawyers.

Pilot suspended after wrong airport landing

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A veteran Delta Air Lines pilot, who landed a Boeing 727 at an Air Force base when he should have gone to nearby Tampa International Airport, has been suspended pending an inquiry, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration says.

"It's quite an embarrassment for a professional who's been flying that long," Delta spokesman William Berry said of the pilot, whose name has not been made public. He has "an outstanding record" and 15 years of commercial flying experience, Berry added.

"The investigation will be pretty much, 'Now, how the hell did you do this?'" said Jack Barker, an FAA spokesman in Atlanta.

Barker said the pilot was taken "off line" at the request of the FAA after the Friday incident.

The pilot "just made a mistake. That's all there is to it," said John McGinnis, assistant tower chief at Tampa International. "Fortunately, it didn't have disastrous consequences. The poor guy, I can imagine his feelings."

After the unscheduled stop at Mac-

Dill Air Force Base, Delta flight 604, with 90 passengers aboard, proceeded to a safe landing at Tampa International Airport.

Delta blamed the incident on poor visibility because of overcast skies. The flight from Atlanta, which originated in Columbia, S.C., was described as routine until the 5:36 p.m. landing, which came after the aircraft was cleared for landing at Tampa International, eight miles from MacDill.

The pilot thought he was in the right place when he broke through heavy clouds and saw the air base landing strip below, Delta officials said.

When the jet touched down, a "stop alert" was issued from MacDill's control tower, an automatic response when an unauthorized aircraft lands at the base, Staff Sgt. Mark Goldstein said.

A fire truck rushed to the runway to block the plane from taking off and armed guards surrounded the craft. "They converged on us like we were aliens," said passenger Joe Gandolfo of Lakeland, Fla.

Passengers were kept on board while the mistake was explained to military authorities.

Republican National Committee Chairman Bill Brock, under a sculpture of his party's symbol, listens to a reporter's question at the committee's headquarters in Washington Saturday. The committee

No bugs in GOP offices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Weekend searches by private electronic experts and then city police uncovered no bugs in the office of the Republican National Committee's No. 2 official. But party co-chairman Mary Crisp says that doesn't mean her office was not under surveillance last week.

Ms. Crisp, highly criticized in recent months by the conservative wing of the party, ignited five days of tense meetings by top-ranking GOP officials and concern about another political bugging scandal when she said Wednesday that her office might be under surveillance.

District of Columbia police, who first said the case was not within their jurisdiction and then entered it, issued a report Sunday saying that a sweep of the office uncovered no eavesdropping devices and that two suspicious loose wires actually led to a musical intercom system.

A private electronics expert hired by Ms. Crisp last week surveyed her Capitol Hill office and discovered the two wires running through the office ceiling and detected with electronic gear "an odd magnetic field" near her desk, possibly coming from microwave surveillance through a nearby window.

Two private experts said Saturday night that an electronic search showed no signs of a magnetic field.

"Our scan of the office and examination of the main telephone wires disclosed no type of electronic surveillance whatsoever," said the police statement.

Ms. Crisp was playing tennis near her Shoreham Hotel apartment when the report was issued and later she indicated little assurance that it told the complete story.

She said she would "like to see some resolution" between the findings by her own investigators Wednesday and the police conclusions reached during a nightlong canvass of her office Saturday night and Sunday morning.

Could her office have been bugged and the devices since removed?

"Who knows? I don't know," said the 56-year-old Arizonan, who already has said she will not seek re-election to her party post next month. "Now it's Sunday and that was Wednesday."

Ms. Crisp said she had been in the office for 3 1/2 years and only within the last two weeks detected "beeping" during telephone conversations. Furthermore, she noted there was yet no explanation for the magnetic field detected Wednesday during the initial sweep.

The magnetic field, detected by surveillance expert Richard E. Govignon on Wednesday, has not resurfaced since in either the police investigation or in a three-hour scan of all conceivable radio frequencies by private experts hired by the committee.

But police spokesman Joseph Gentile conceded "we don't know what was there on Wednesday, if anything."

Other GOP officials welcomed the police findings and generally considered the matter closed. "They couldn't find any evidence of any eavesdropping or any communication interception," Donald Ivers, the committee counsel, told reporters.

It was just over eight years ago — June 17, 1972 — when the break-in occurred at the Democratic National Committee offices across town at the Watergate.

Ms. Crisp, who ranks behind chairman Bill Brock on the committee, said she has been concerned about her phones being tapped or other surveillance at her apartment since April and became worried about privacy at her office two weeks ago. At times, she said, she used pay telephones to make calls because she feared her telephones were bugged.

She has declined to speculate who — if anyone — might be involved in the illegal eavesdropping. Brock said at a news conference he didn't think "anyone in the party would do anything like this" and considered it "utterly and totally and absolutely inconceivable" that the party's right wing would be responsible.

Ms. Crisp has angered many conservatives, including top aides to Ronald Reagan, the apparent GOP presidential nominee, since she became co-chairman of the party. In 1977 she criticized political action groups based on ideology at a time when the conservatives had just formed such a group behind Reagan; she has been an ardent supporter of the Equal Rights Amendment, which Reagan opposes; and she was quoted — incorrectly she claims — as endorsing independent presidential candidate John Anderson.

Pryor undergoes skin grafts today

SHERMAN OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Comedian Richard Pryor was to undergo surgery today to graft healthy skin over the severely burned upper half of his body, a hospital spokesman said.

However, Sherman Oaks Community Hospital spokeswoman Kueishing Vjang declined to give details of the surgery, saying only that Pryor remained in critical but stable condition and that results of the morning operation wouldn't be known until midafternoon at the earliest.

The surgery at the hospital Burn Center was originally scheduled for last Friday but was delayed because of complications in the entertainer's condition.

Pryor, 39, had been responding well to treatment after an accident at his Northridge home June 9. Doctors removed much of his dead skin a week later in what was called successful preparation for skin-graft surgery.

But late last week one of his doctors emphasized that Pryor was still very ill and said he wasn't "100 percent happy" with the way Pryor's wounds looked after the dead skin was removed.

Moreover, the Emmy and Grammy winner contracted pneumonia, and doctors noted that with severe burns, every body organ is affected because of possible infection and breathing problems.

A kidney specialist has joined a team of about a dozen specialists treating Pryor, but hospital officials declined to say what, if anything, is wrong with the comedian's kidneys.

Pryor underwent kidney tests in 1977 when he was hospitalized for what may have been a heart attack. Pryor denied at that time that he had a heart attack, saying it was only chest pains.

Despite his condition, doctors say that Pryor has shown a great will to live and that his spirits were lifted over the weekend by being able to watch the Leonard-Duran welterweight title fight on television and, by talking to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

At last, a Volkswagen with a bed. Introducing the VW Pickup. This bed holds more than a full half ton of cargo. But not only does our amazing pickup handle your cargo, it handles the road like only a VW can. That's because it comes with front wheel drive and rack and pinion steering. Come in and see the 1980 VW Pickup. It's built like a truck, but it drives like something else.

Gilder, Carner post victories in golf

Bob Gilder...wins by two.

GOLF—Bob Gilder shot a even-par-70 for a 274 total and scored a two-stroke victory over Jerry Pate and Leonard Thompson in the Canadian Open...

JoAnne Carner notched her fifth victory of the season with a 4-shot win over Jo Ann Washam in the $100,000 Lady Keystone Open at Hershey, Pa. by shooting a 1-under-par 71 for a 54-hole total of 9-under-par 207. Washam, who fired a 3-under-par 69, finished second for the third time this season...

Anne Sander of Seattle defeated Sweden's Liv Wollin 3 and 1 to capture the British Women's Open Amateur Golf championship at Woodhall Spa.

TENNIS—Tracy Austin tuned up for Wimbledon by beating Wendy Turnbull of Australia 7-6, 6-2 in the women's singles final at Eastbourne... Brian Gottfried crushed Sandy Mayer 6-3, 6-3 in the final of the Surrey Grass Court championships, the last event before Wimbledon... Spain's Angel Gimenez won the $50,000 Vienna tournament when Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia injured his ankle and was unable to continue the match. Smid was leading 6-1, 1-1. The injury also resulted in the men's doubles title for Gianni Occeppo and Christoph Roger Vasselin.

TRACK AND FIELD—Olga Kuragina of the Soviet Union set a world record in the pentathlon at the national championships in Moscow's Lenin Stadium. Kuragina scored 4,856 points in the five events, breaking the former record of Soviet Nadezhda Tkachenko by 17 points.

YACHTING—The Trimaran Dragster was first across the finish line to set a new record for the Tour of Zealand, one of the world's largest yachting regattas. The Dragster, skippered by Denmark's Gert Frederiksen, had a time of 23 hours and 39 minutes, the fastest in the history of the race.

SOCCER—An 88th minute goal by striker Horst Hrubesch gave West Germany a 2-1 victory over Belgium in the final of the European Soccer Championship in the Olympic Stadium. The West Germans became the first team to win the championship twice. In the consolation, Czechoslovakia defeated Italy 9-8 on penalty kicks.

BASKETBALL—Al Wood sank a 20-foot jumper from the left corner just before the final buzzer to give the U.S. Olympians a thrilling 77-75 victory Sunday night over a team of NBA All-Stars... Greg Manning scored 25 points and Reggie Jackson added 23 to lead the University of Maryland to a 103-71 victory over a Chinese college all-star squad at Nagoya, Japan.

AUTO RACING—Farrell Harris blazed around Alabama International Motor Speedway at more than 200 mph to set a new world record for stock cars. Harris completed the 2.66-mile track in 47.538 seconds — 201.439 mph — in a 1980 Chevrolet Camaro to beat the old ASCAR-sanctioned record of 201.104 mph.

HORSE RACING—Jockey Avelino Gomez died after suffering massive chest injuries in a three-horse spill during the Canadian Oaks at Woodbine. Gomez, winner of more than 4,000 races, was aboard Swisskin when her right-hind leg snapped.

Sunday's Races—Ring of Light, $7.40, charged to a 2 1/4-length victory over Crow's Nest in the $114,000 Massachusetts Handicap at Suffolk Downs... Go West Young Man, $25.40, scored a neck victory over Balzac in the $400,000 Hollywood Gold Cup at Hollywood Park... Key To Content, $19.40, scored a three-length victory over Current Legend in the $60,500 Saranac Stakes at Belmont Park... Foudner survived the 28-obstacle and four-mile distance to capture the $293,000 Grand Steeplechase de Paris by 10 lengths over Tanlas.

After eight tries, Bobby Unser wins

By MIKE HARRIS
LONG POND, Pa. (AP) — Bobby Unser says he never had a worried moment as he sped through the last miles of an amazingly easy victory Sunday in the Pocono 500.

Unser, a two-time Indianapolis 500 and three-time California 500 champion, finally ended the frustration of eight losing efforts at Pocono, winning the third leg of championship racing's triple crown for the first time.

"It feels good to win here — finally," the tall, rugged veteran said with a tired smile. "I've won just about every race there is, but I guess I was wondering if I'd ever win this one."

Unser, driving for racing entrepreneur Roger Penske, put his metallic blue Cosworth-powered PC-9 in victory lane for the second straight time.

IT WAS also the second time in a row he has outriven Johnny Rutherford and his yellow Chaparral, the revolutionary ground effects car that easily captured the first two races this season.

"Johnny did a heckuva job of driving out there, but I just had the faster car," the 46-year-old Albuquerque, N.M., driver said.

"I went out ahead of him by 10 or 12 seconds late in the race and I just tried to stay there. No sense being a pig about it."

"Then I came in and the crew gave me another 10 or 12 seconds (by turning up the boost)," Unser added.

Asked if he thought much about the car breaking down during those last lonely laps, with Rutherford nearly a mile behind on the 2 1/2 mile tri-oval, the winner smiled and said: "I never worry about that because there's nothing you can do about it."

"Besides, I don't drop out of many races. My guys normally do a very fine job of putting the car together and having it ready to go the full distance."

UNSER won $74,730, while Rutherford, who finished 21.33 seconds behind, took home $38,580 for second place.

Tom Sneva was third, two laps behind the leaders, while fourth-place Bill Alsup was six laps down and fifth-place Vern Schuppan was seven laps behind.

Only 12 of the 33 starters were still in action at the end as accidents and mechanical problems took a heavy toll.

Unser's teammates, Mario Andretti and Rick Mears, both went out with mechanical problems. Andretti's car suffered a broken transmission on the 105th lap, while Mears was running third when his car's engine failed on the 163rd lap.

Unser's average speed was 151.454 mph.

Little League plays begins with two games

The Midland Junior Baseball Association's double elimination A League tournament begins at 6 p.m. today with two games and will conclude with the championship game eighth Friday or Saturday.

Western, managed by Warren Pyle with Shug Bowlin as coach, will face Mid City, Bob Lambreth manager and Ron Westbrook coach, in one game while Eastern, Pete Ruiz manager and Victor Pena coach, faces North Central, Jimmy Wilson manager and Archie Reeves coach, in today's other game at the Tower League diamond, scene of this year's tournament.

The Eastern-North Central winner moves into second round play against Tower, Frank Acosta manager and Jim Barnes coach, Tuesday while today's losers meet in the other game.

Bobby Unser...never a worried moment.

Diablos' 8-run sixth beats Cubs

BY TED BATTLES

The Midland Cubs seemed well on their way to the win column with their fourth straight when what has become traditional mid-inning turbulence struck Cubs Stadium Sunday night.

In the previous games during this El Paso series, high winds or rains have interrupted play in the middle innings, but Sunday it was a rain of base hits as the Diablos rallied for eight runs in the sixth inning on the way to an 11-7 win, thwarting the Bruins' attempt to equal their longest winning streak of the season. Earlier in the season, Midland had won four straight against the Diablos at Cubs Stadium.

Although Midland and El Paso split the series 3-3, the Cubs' three straight did sew up third place in the first half of the Texas League West Division first half, the Cubs finishing one game in front of El Paso.

Tonight the same teams resume hostilities in El Paso as the second half of play opens. Steve Brown, 7-6, goes for the Diablos against the Cubs' Herman Segelke, 4-5, the same two starters in El Paso's 19-9 victory last Wednesday.

Sunday, Henry Mack appeared in rare form, taking a 5-1 lead into the sixth as the Cubs played superlatively behind the righthander from Winchester, Ky. The Cubs had scored twice in the third on successive singles by J.W. Mitchell, Mike Shepston and Jared Martin plus a wild pitch. They added two more on solo homers in the fourth by Gary Krug, No. 1, and Randy La Vigne, No. 9, seven of which have come against El Paso. A walk and Jesus Alfaro's double produced another run in the fifth.

El Paso's only retaliation was Mike Bishop's league-leading 16th homer in the fourth, a solo job.

Midland bailed Mack out of trouble in the fifth after Scott Carnes singled. Mitchell lunged to the line to grab Donnie Jones' scorching labeled "double" and Krug recovered the hasty throw in time to tag the runner. Then after a popup, righthander Tom Grant took Rich Brewster's single and gunned down Carnes trying to score from second as catcher Shepston blocked the plate beautifully.

The Cubs were playing so well, they almost looked invincible. So much for illusions. El Paso, held to four runs and only 14 hits the last three nights, sent 13 batters to the plate to score eight runs before Vinny Valentini, Midland's third pitcher, finally got the side out.

Mike Walters, 2-1, making his first start, got the win with last-inning relief help from Charlie Phillips when Krug doubled and La Vigne walked to open the frame.

Kent Hunziker, who relieved Mack, was the loser and is now 0-3.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—The homers by Bishop and Scioneri, his seventh in the ninth, made it 15 for the Diablos at Cubs' Stadium this year...Lefthander Tom Spino will go on the disabled list and his place will be taken by Ed Moore, a relief pitcher from Quad Cities, "their No. 1 reliever," notes Les Moss, pinchhitting for Randy Hundley. Hundley will accompany the Cubs to El Paso, but will rest a few more days before trying to return as field leader...

Stan Floyd stays unbeaten at 100 meters

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Stanley Floyd turned 19-year-old today and still is looking for somebody who can beat him at 100 meters.

The Auburn freshman led an all-Georgia finish in the Oregon rain Sunday night to keep his big-time track and field record perfect.

The former junior-high miler, who is 12-0 in final competition this season, became only the fourth person to win the short sprint title in the national collegiate, amateur and Olympic Trial competition in the same year.

The others were Ralph Metcalfe in 1932, Jesse Owens in 1936 and Bobby Morrow in 1956.

"I really didn't expect none of this," Floyd said after he edged his teacher and Auburn alumnus Harvey Glance and Georgia junior Melvin Lattany at the tape in Sunday's feature event at the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials.

Floyd's triumph and Willie Banks' victory in the triple jump finals Sunday finally gave the athletes a chance to grab the limelight from the off-field controversy that has swirled around the Trials all week.

Former world record holder and gold medal winner Rod Milburn, one of six former professional track athletes banned from competition in the Olympic Trials, showed up here anyway Sunday and was told he couldn't Banks, who didn't win many big titles in his four years at UCLA, was a big winner over the rest of the field in the triple jump.

He won at 55-feet, 1 1/2-inches — nearly two feet ahead of runnerup Paul Jordan.

Lee Palles of the Athletic Attic held the lead halfway through the decathlon competition with 4,290 points. John Crist of the Greensboro Pacers was second at 4,203 and veteran Fred Dixon, in his last competition, was third at 4,197. Last year's top-ranked decathlete, Bob Coffman, was fourth at 4,155.

Jays wipe out 5-1 Texas lead

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Sunday was supposed to be Jerry Garvin's day off. And Toronto Manager Bob Mattick tried to give him one.

Then the Blue Jays made an incredible rally and finally had to call on Garvin to preserve a 10-inning, come-from-behind 6-5 victory over the Texas Rangers Sunday night.

"I've been pitching a lot lately and Mattick told me I had the day off," said Garvin. "I was just sort of looking around at the stands and enjoying myself. Then Garth Iorg hit his first major-league homer. Things changed real fast after that."

Iorg drilled a two-run homer off Ranger reliever Sparky Lyle in the eighth inning after Ranger starter Gaylord Perry had tired and taken himself out of the game with a 5-1 lead.

"We were glad to see him go," said Iorg. "Perry was simply awesome." Toronto scored three runs in the eighth, then tied it off Jim Kern in the ninth inning on a run-scoring single by Alfredo Griffin.

Lloyd Moseby's sacrifice fly in the 10th inning provided the victory margin for Garvin.

Jack Kucek started for Toronto but yielded to Balor Moore. Tom Buskey, Paul Mirabella and Joey McLaughlin all pitched before Garvin entered the game in the eighth inning.

Perry allowed only four hits while the Rangers piled up a lead as Bump Willis and Al Oliver each knocked in two runs and catcher Jim Sundberg knocked in another.

Ranger Manager Pat Corrales said, "Gaylord told me he was done. You couldn't ask for any more than what he did. You couldn't ask for more than a four run lead. But I still have to go to my bullpen. Right now the bullpen just isn't doing the job."

Kern's record dropped to 2-9 after a 13-5 season in 1979 which included 29 saves. Kern has two saves this year.

Perry wasn't available for comment on his opinion of the Ranger bullpen's performance. It was a costly victory for the Blue Jays who lost centerfielder Rick Bostett with a fractured right arm when he was hit by a Bob Babcock pitch in the eighth inning.

The loss dropped the Rangers into fourth place in the American League Western Division.

"Iorg's homer was a big hit for us," said Garvin. "We haven't been scoring many runs. In fact, we had only scored four runs in 31 innings before the homer."

Jim Bibby awes Astros with his fastball, 2-1

HOUSTON (AP) — Pittsburgh's Jim Bibby considers his fastball on a par with those of the Astros' J.R. Richard and Nolan Ryan, and he demonstrated it for them Sunday night.

Bibby and Grant Jackson combined on a four-hitter to lead the Pirates to a 2-1 triumph over Houston that broke the Pirates' six-game losing streak.

A season-high Astrodome crowd of 46,213 saw two Astros' strings broken — six wins in a row and 14 straight home victories. Despite the loss, Houston remained three games ahead in the National League West.

"I think I've matured as a pitcher," Bibby said. "I'm 35 years old, but I feel like I've got a 25-year-old arm. I've got good velocity on my fastball. I think I rank up there with J.R. and Nolan."

It was the eighth win in nine decisions for Bibby, who didn't enter the majority until he was 28 years old. That was after four years of college, two years of military service and a back operation.

"I've learned how to pitch now," Bibby said. "It came late in my career but I started late."

Pittsburgh manager Chuck Tanner agreed. "The fastball would be all he threw, but he's added a curve ball and some other pitches. He and (Bruce) Kison were our two best pitchers coming down the stretch last year," Tanner said.

Losing pitcher Joe Niekro, 7-6, surrendered a first-inning run and a solo home run by John Milner in the sixth.

Omar Moreno led off the game with a single and scored on Bill Madlock's single after Niekro had loaded the bases on walks to Milner and Mike Easler.

Airport computer out

CHICAGO (AP) — Technicians have been unable to repair an air traffic control computer that has been out of order since Friday, officials at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport say.

The computer breakdown poses no danger to flights but may cause minor delays for arriving and departing flights, Neal Callahan, spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration at O'Hare, said Sunday.

Tuition boost battle promised

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sen. A.R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, says anybody who wants to increase state college tuition had better count on a stiff fight from him.

Another senator, Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, said he is "not too enthused" about a proposal to double the tuition paid by Texas undergraduates and graduate students.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who presides over the Senate, heads a special committee that recommended the tuition increase last week. The recommendation included boosting medical school tuition from $400 to $3,600 a year and dental tuition from $400 to $2,500.

Gov. Bill Clements and the Texas College Coordinating Board also want a tuition increase but have not issued specific proposals. Schwartz said in a telephone interview he would use all the tricks he has learned in his 20 years as a senator — including a filibuster if necessary — to defeat a tuition increase.

He said the preferred tactic would be to organize 11 senators to deny a tuition bill the two-thirds majority needed to reach floor debate in the Senate.

Changes in the Senate, including the retirement of Sen. Tom Creighton, D-Mineral Wells, and the defeat of Sen. Bill Moore,

Imperial burglarized

Midland police Sunday were investigating the burglary of Imperial Service Center, 1613 S. Main St.

Listed as taken in that burglary were nine American flags, several boxes of candy, four boxes of shoes, five pairs of boots, five belts and four billfolds. Total value of the items was listed at $367.

The burglary was reported to police by George Leech. Police reports indicated entry was gained to the building by prying open the front west door.

JDL steps up weaponry classes

By JACKIE HYMAN

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The 32 people, some of them in their early teens, take turns aiming their guns. Those who've never fired before use .22-caliber rifles, while the more experienced shoot semi-automatic weapons.

Their targets are silhouettes of human figures, each with a swastika painted in the middle.

"We want to psych up the Jews a little," says Irv Ruben, national chairman of the Jewish Defense League. The militant group has stepped up classes in weaponry and martial arts this month in response to what Ruben sees as a trend toward anti-Semitic candidates attracting considerable votes.

He admitted he's drawn "a storm of criticism" from establishment Jewish leaders and that the JDL's gun classes have been opposed by the Jewish Federation Council in Los Angeles, an umbrella group for Jewish organizations. The JDL is not a council member.

"We believe in teaching all Jews to fire weapons effectively because, in view of the fact that the political situation is topsy turvy, with Klu Klux Klan candidates and neo-Nazi candidates running and amassing thousands of votes, we truly believe that a Holocaust can happen in the United States," Ruben said.

He cited California Klan leader Tom Metzger's nomination as the Democratic congressional candidate in a district that includes Imperial County and parts of San Diego and Riverside counties.

In addition, North Carolina National Socialist White People's Party leader Harold Covington recently received 43 percent of the vote in an unsuccessful bid for state's attorney general.

Ruben said 35 to 40 members of the Jewish community attended a four-hour weapons class at the JDL offices in Los Angeles a week ago and 32 more participated Sunday. The classes are open to all Jews at least 13 years old, the age at which Jews become adults according to their religion.

He said some of the participants also were concerned about crime in general, but he doesn't believe any came just for that reason. Ruben said there have been several desecrations of synagogues with swastikas in Southern California recently and attacks in Brooklyn, N.Y., and the Fairfax area of Los Angeles on orthodox Jews whose dress indicates their religion.

He characterized objections to the program as "ghetto mentality in which the Jew turns the other cheek and gets hit by the other fist."

Former Dallas police chief dies

DALLAS (AP) — Former Police Chief Jesse Curry, who was chief when President John F. Kennedy was assassinated here in 1963, died late Sunday of a heart attack.

Curry, 66, collapsed at home shortly before 11 p.m. Sunday and was pronounced dead on arrival at Baylor University Medical Center.

Mac McMurry of the Dallas County Medical Examiner's office, said early today the cause of death was an acute heart attack. He said Curry, who was retired, had been in failing health during the last few months.

Curry and his 1,100-man force were praised for swiftly capturing accused presidential assassin Lee Harvey Oswald within 90 minutes of the Nov. 22, 1963 Kennedy assassination in downtown Dallas.

Two days later a storm of police criticism erupted after Jack Ruby slipped into the City Hall basement and shot Oswald to death during a routine jail transfer as a national television audience watched.

Three years later, on March 10, 1966, Curry resigned from the force and took over as chief of security for a large bank. At the time, he said tensions of the office were affecting his health.

"The worst thing that ever happened to us was Jack Ruby," Curry said. "I wake up every now and then at 2 and 3 in the morning thinking about Kennedy, Oswald and Ruby and can't go back to sleep."

Bert Kaempfert, composer, dies in Spain

PALMA DE MAJORCA, Spain (AP) — Bert Kaempfert, composer of "Strangers in the Night," "Spanish Eyes" and "Dankeschoen," died at his vacation home here, the Spanish news agency EFE reported. He was 56.

The German-born Kaempfert died of cerebral thrombosis at his chalet in the town of Cala Brava, the agency said.

It said he had arrived on the island a few days ago with his wife Hannelore to begin a summer vacation. No time of death was given.

Earlier, West German television said it learned Sunday that the big band leader died of a stroke.

Kaempfert, a West German who was not even listed in the German version of "Who's Who," directed his big band mostly in studios for recordings which sold millions of copies all over the world.

Better known abroad than at home, he recently stepped up appearances in public and on television programs. Kaempfert's last tour took him to London.

Kaempfert's career began when his mother used a $285 insurance payment to buy a piano. He followed up years of private lessons with music studies at Hamburg's school of music where he practiced piano, clarinet, saxophone and accordion.

The youngest member of a Hamburg band before World War II, he joined the navy during the war and established his first own band — made up of 18 prisoners of war — in Denmark in 1945.

Wildcat, field work reported

Felmont Oil Corp. will attempt to reopen Ellenburger production in the Block 12, South field of Andrews County, 22 miles southwest of Andrews.

The project is No. 1-32 University, 660 feet from north and east lines of section 32, block 12, University Lands survey.

Contract depth is 11,200 feet.

The site is one location south of the depleted Ellenburger discovery which produced at 11,075 feet.

STERLING PROJECTS

Champlin Petroleum Co., operating from Midland, announced locations for three projects in the Conger, Southwest (Pennsylvanian oil) field of Sterling County.

The operator also reported potential test on a well in the same area.

Each of the projects is contracted to 8,800 feet.

No. 2 R. L. Cope is to be drilled 3,900 feet south and slightly west of production and as a twin to a 6,700-foot dry hole.

Location is 660 feet from north and 760 feet from east lines of section 44, block 2, T&P survey and 18 miles southwest of Sterling City

Champlin Petroleum will dig No. 7 I. W. Terry 18 miles southwest of Sterling City and 1,800 feet southwest of production and 1,000 feet from south and 330 feet from west lines of section 4, D. L. Carbery survey, abstract 26.

Champlin Petroleum No. 1-A J. E. Watson will be dug 20 miles southwest of Sterling City and 660 feet from south and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 3, EL&RR survey, abstract 1249.

The drillsite is 1/2 mile east and slightly north of Pennsylvanian production.

The new well is Champlin No. 4 I. W. Terry, 844 feet from north and 5,300 feet from east lines of section 1, G&SF survey and 18 miles southwest of Sterling City.

On 24-hour potential test it flowed 169 barrels of 42.4-gravity oil and seven barrels of water, through a 10/64-inch choke and perforations from 7,933 to 8,247 feet. The gas-oil ratio is 8,923-1.

The pay was acidized with 2,500 gallons and fractured with 58,000 gallons.

Total depth is 9,500 feet, 5.5-inch pipe is set at 8,523 feet and hole is plugged back to 8,456 feet.

The pay was topped at 17,933 feet on ground elevation of 2,648 feet.

PECOS TESTER

Mobil Production Texas & New Mexico Inc. No. 9 James O. Neal is to be dug 1/2 mile east of production in the Coyanosa, North (Delaware) field of Pecos County, 17 miles west of Imperial.

Scheduled on a 5,500-foot contract, it is 1,980 feet from south and 1,870 feet from east lines of section 47, block OW, TTRR survey.

MARTIN PROJECTS

Saxon Oil Co. of Midland spotted four more projects in the Breedlove, East (Spraberry) field of Martin County, six miles south of Patricia.

Each is contracted to 9,400 feet and will be drilled six miles south of Patricia.

No. 1 Knox is 1,675 feet from north and 6,154 feet from west lines of league 253, Ward County School Land survey and six miles south of Patricia.

Saxon No. 2 Knox, also six miles south of Patricia, is to be dug 1,675 feet from north and 2,652 feet from west lines of league 253, Ward County School Land survey.

The third test, No. 1 Rollow, was spotted a 675 feet from north and 825 feet from east lines of league 253, Ward County School Land survey.

The fourth test, No. 2 Rollow, was spotted 1,675 feet from north and 4,327 feet from east lines of league 253, Ward County School Land survey.

LEA PROJECT

Durham Inc. of Midland No. 2 Elkan is to be dug as a 10,600-foot project in the Cerca (upper Pennsylvanian) field of Lea County.

Operator staked location 1,980 feet from north and 660 feet from east lines of section 34-13s-34e.

Carter likely to celebrate energy independence on 4th

By CLIFF HAAS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is likely to give President Carter the chance to celebrate an "energy independence day" on the Fourth of July with final approval this week of a multibillion-dollar measure to develop synthetic fuels.

The legislation, which includes a variety of energy-related programs, features a $20 billion, five-year program to launch a domestic synthetic fuels industry as an alternative to imported oil.

Last week, the Senate passed the compromise bill 78-12, and House approval is expected Thursday.

Congressional leaders have said they hoped to get the bill to the president for his signature by July 4 as a demonstration that the nation is moving to become independent of foreign oil.

In addition, the House could take action this week on another energy measure the president wants — legislation to establish an Energy Mobilization Board designed to cut red tape for high-priority projects. Critics say such a panel would just expand the bureaucracy.

The House and Senate have passed different versions of the bill and a compromise measure now is awaiting action.

Meanwhile, the House is scheduled to take final congressional action Tuesday on Carter's plan to renew draft registration of young men as early as next month.

ENERGY OIL & GAS

House approval of a minor Senate amendment would send Carter the $13.3 billion he requested to begin registering all 19- and 20-year-old men at post offices across the country.

Selective Service Director Bernard Rostker has said Carter will set the date for renewing registration, but that it should be in about five weeks.

A $51.9 billion weapons authorization bill is pending in the Senate. It would cut Army manpower by 25,000 in an effort to upgrade the quality of Army personnel.

A major administration bill to consolidate the government's youth employment and training programs also is ready for House action this week. The $2 billion bill, authorizing money for 1981 and 1982, also would create a new program intended to help disadvantaged and minority youths develop basic skills.

Action is also expected this week on several major appropriations bills for fiscal year 1981, which begins Oct. 1. None of the major spending bills has been acted upon, and this will be the last full week Congress will have to work before a series of breaks.

Congress will recess for more than two weeks, beginning July 2, for the Fourth of July and the Republican National Convention. The legislators will recess again on Aug. 6 for the Democratic National Convention.

Petroleum industry publication says nation's gas demand shifting rapidly

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Declining demand for gasoline in the United States has given refiners time to provide the higher octane unleaded fuel needed by many vehicles, the Oil & Gas Journal reports.

Demand has increased for unleaded premium gasolines, said the Journal in its Monday issue.

"While overall demand is dropping...components of gasoline demand are shifting rapidly. Most obvious is unleaded gasoline's swelling share of the gasoline market," said the Tulsa-based petroleum magazine.

"Even within that well-established pattern, refiners are having to adjust to some demand changes and regulatory snares."

Cars equipped with catalytic converters require higher octane levels than the standard unleaded grades, the Journal said.

"That has triggered strong refiner interest in unleaded premium. Development of that market may be delayed to a degree by knock limiting devices on automobiles and pricing problems for unleaded premiums that have octane ratings between those of leaded regular and premium grades."

The lead phase-down, delayed last year, will resume in October unless the Environmental Protection Agency changes its rules, the magazine said. EPA allowed refiners to use a manganese substitute to boost octane from last June through October.

To meet future octane requirements, refineries are expanding capacities of reforming and other octane-boosting processes, the Journal says. Plans are being developed for plants able to produce anti-knock additives allowed by the government such as methyl tertiary butyl ether, tertiary butyl alcohol and ethyl alcohol.

"Thus the downturn in gasoline demand — born mostly of increasing prices and improving mileage of new autos — has given refiners relief from an octane squeeze that likely would have hit this year, as well as time to adjust to changing requirements, the Journal said.

Operators final strikes

Monsanto Co., operating from Midland, announced potential test on its No. 1 Jackson, a Devonian gas discovery in Ward County, five miles south of Pyote.

A re-entry project, it finalized for a calculated absolute open flow potential of 4,986,871 cubic feet of dry gas per day.

Completion was through perforations from 13,589 to 13,977 feet after 11,000 gallons of acid.

A re-entry of a former Ellenburger gas well, it is bottomed at 17,465 feet and plugged back to 16,980 feet. The five-inch liner is cemented on bottom.

The Devonian was topped at 13,584 feet on derrick floor elevation of 2,572 feet.

Other tops include the Delaware, 4,767 feet; Bone Springs, 6,977 feet; Wolfcamp, 10,183 feet; Mississippian lime, 12,540 feet; and Woodford shale, 13,170 feet.

Wellsite is 467 feet from northeast and 1,980 feet from northwest lines of section 58, block 34, H&TC survey.

PECOS OPENER

American Trading & Production Co. of Midland No. 4 Max D. Shafrauth and others has been potentialized as a pumping discovery from the Castile in Pecos County, four miles southwest of Coyanosa.

The operator reported a daily potential of 93.5 barrels of 28.1-gravity oil, no water, through perforations from 3,699 to 3,784 feet. The gas-oil ratio is 107-1.

The pay zone was acidized with 500 gallons.

Total depth is 5,330 feet, 4.5-inch pipe is set on bottom and plugged back depth is 5,278 feet.

The Castile was topped at 3,699 feet on ground elevation of 2,687 feet. The base of the Lamar is at 5,130 feet. Wellsite is 1,980 feet from south and west lines of section 26, block C-2, psi survey.

WARD WELL

Adobe Oil & Gas Corp. of Midland No. 6 Barstow Unit has been completed as the third well in the Barstow (Ellenburger) field Ward County, three miles southeast of Barstow.

A re-entry project, it originally was completed from the Fusselman as a gas well.

The operator reported a calculated absolute open flow potential on the Ellenburger of 14,750,000 cubic feet of gas per day, natural, through perforations from one-foot of perforations at 19,713 feet.

Total depth is 19,713 feet and 5-inch liner is set at 19,712 feet.

Location is 1 1/2 miles east of one of the field's other two wells and three feet from northwest and 3,300 feet from northeast lines of section 35, block 53, H&TC survey.

West Texas, New Mexico areas gain locations for wildcat tests

Energy Reserves Group, Inc. of Midland announced location for a rank wildcat in Culberson County, 40 miles northeast of Van Horn.

Scheduled on a 6,300-foot contract, it is No. 1 Norman, 1,341 feet from south and 1,445 feet from east lines of section 4, block 117, psi survey.

LEA EXPLORER

Frank M. Agar of Midland spotted location for a 10,300-foot wildcat in Lea County, eight miles northeast of Maljamar.

Scheduled as No. 1 Nosredna, it is 1,980 feet from north and 330 feet from west lines of section 27-15s-32e.

MARTIN WILDCAT

American Crude and Henry Petroleum Corp. of Midland staked a 13,200-foot Ellenburger wildcat in Martin County, 14 miles northwest of Tarzan.

It is No. 1 Scotty, 660 feet from south and 4,916 feet from east lines of labor 22, league 248, Hartley County School Land survey.

It is 1 1/2 miles east of the Sprberry-Dean discovery well in the La-Caff field which produces at 9,490 feet, and 4.5 miles northeast of the pool's Ellenburger discovery which produces at 13,285 feet.

ANDREWS SITE

Discovery Operating, Inc., of Midland No. 1-11-B University is a new 9,500-foot wildcat in Andrews County, 16 miles southwest of Andrews.

Operator staked location 660 feet from south and 2,244 feet from west lines of section 3, block 11, University-Lands survey.

The site is 1/2 mile east of the Three Bar (Devonian) field which produces at 8,385 feet; 1/2 miles southwest of the pools depleted San Andres discovery which produced at 4,384 feet and 1.5 miles northwest of the Block 11 (lower Wolfcamp) field discovery.

LOVING TESTA

Mobil Production Texas & New Mexico No. 1 W. D. Johnson Unit and others is to be dug as a 22,000-foot wildcat in Loving County, nine miles northeast of Menton.

Operator also will test for production in the Slash Ranch (Fusselman and Ellenburger) field.

Location is 1,320 feet from south and 1,520 feet from west lines of section 22, block 53, T&P survey.

It is one mile northeast of Fusselman production and two miles north of Ellenburger production.

It will test the Atoka as a wildcat

CRANE PROJECT

Southland royalty Co. of Midland No. 1-28 Moss is to be drilled as a link project between the Troporo (Devonian) and Troporo, North (Devonian) field of Crane County, 25 miles southwest of Crane.

The project, scheduled on a 5,700-foot contract, is 100 feet from north-west and 655 feet from southwest lines of section 28, block 1, H&TC survey.

The operator field the project in the Troporo (Devonian) field.

It is 1/4 mile southwest of Troporo, North production and 1/2 mile northeast of Troporo production.

$1 trillion in petroleum may be prize

By BILL STALL
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The federal government has launched a search that could lead to $1 trillion worth of oil in a growing new frontier of the geologist and wildcaters: America's coastal waters.

After a 20-month-long study, Secretary of the Interior Cecil D. Andrus announced plans last Tuesday for 36 lease sales over the next five years of federal waters encircling most of the U.S. coastline — from Maine to the Bering Sea.

The plan carries out a 1978 congressional order to speed up the Outercontinental Shelf leasing program to increase domestic oil production and reduce America's reliance on imports from the politically unstable Persian Gulf.

There is nothing new about offshore drilling in the United States. The federal government has collected more than $15 billion in bonuses and fees during 50 lease sales since 1954. The oil companies boast that they have drilled 23,000 offshore wells and have produced 8.4 billion barrels of oil with only one serious incident — the Santa Barbara Channel oil spill off the coast of Southern California in 1969.

But the bulk of the drilling so far has been Mexico and off Southern California.

The new leasing program opens up millions of acres of frontier areas to leasing for the first time, particularly in Alaska, and it offers one of the best prospects of finding another giant or super-giant domestic oil field of the dimensions of the Prudhoe Bay discovery in Alaska in 1967, now producing 1.5 million barrels of oil a day.

As with all such programs, it is a compromise. More lease sales were scheduled than environmental groups and state and local governments wanted. And fewer sales are scheduled than the oil companies and some members of Congress wanted.

Department of the Interior officials view the plan as pragmatic, consistent with the nation's energy goals, sensitive to state and local governments, and protective environment.

But announcement of the plan may only trigger a new series of battles. Consider, for instance, the contrasting views on the proposed lease sale schedule from Robert Clark, an aide to Alaska Gov. Jay Hammond, and Robert nz, a Shell Oil Co. vice president for exploration and production in the western states and Alaska.

Clark said that the sale schedule threatens one of the world's most productive fisheries. "The world needs protein perhaps more than it does oil," he said in a telephone interview.

Nanz took this view: "I am shocked at the failure to develop adequate lease sales for the Alaskan offshore to meet the nation's critical energy needs."

The Alaska attorney general and Hammond's advisers will decide in a few days whether to sue the Department of the Interior over the lease schedule. Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.'s office in California is considering similar action.

The stakes involved are staggering. Geologists theorize that the lease areas could contain as much as $7 billion barrels of oil, worth well over a $1 trillion at current market prices. An estimate of the undiscovered Alaskan reserves is about 20 billion barrels.

Shell officials have testified in Congress that the oil industry is prepared to spend $60 billion to build platforms and drill development wells in Alaskan waters, not including bonuses and lease fees, exploration and other costs.

Balanced against that are the arguments of the environmentalists and politicians who contend that the risks are too great to warrant going full bore ahead with a plan of this magnitude. Often, the values opponents stress are intangible ones with no way of assigning them a dollar value.

Often the argument is not that there should be no drilling, just that there should be no drillers.

An example of how appealing those arguments can be occurred last year when Rep. John L. Burton, D-Calif., assured the House Select OCS Committee during a California hearing that after touring the Marin County coast, they would "see for themselves why so many Californians feel their blood pressure rise when oil companies talk about drilling there."

Drilling off Northern California should be abandoned or postponed until all other options were exhausted, Burton said.

After the tour, Marin County Supervisor Gary Giacomini eloquently described a fragile lagoon, Tomales Bay, and the view from Ten Mile Beach where one "could envision what would happen if there were oil platforms 15 miles from that beach" — all of this the most compelling testimony as to "how critical it is that we not sacrifice the most important coast in probably this entire nation."

With characteristic congressional dignity and courtesy, acting chairman William J. Hughes, D-N.J., remarked on "the grandeur of California." He could sympathize, he said, since his own district had six nuclear power plants, off shore oil and gas, a e ocean dumping.

In the e, however the committee recommended a speed-up in the leasing schedule for a total of 38 sales, and no change in Lease Sale 53 set for next May.

Nor did Andrus cancel the sensitive California sale as state officials had demanded, or several of the Alaskan sales as Alaska officials had demanded.

The secretary did indicate that he might delete three of the particularly controversial areas from the California sale including one off Point Reyes near the site of the congressional hearing. In fact, Andrus accelerated the decision schedule so that an announcement could be made before the November presidential election.

One of the goals of the 1978 Outercontinental Shelf legislation was to allow state and local governments to have a strong role in offshore oil leasing. Their concerns includes spilled oil, the impact on coastal communities, air pollution from tankers, pipelines crossing into state lands, onshore storage tanks, and the effects on industries such as fishing.

The mechanisms allow for the state governor to review each proposed lease sale at three different points said Heath R. Ross, a deputy assistant secretary of the Interior in charge of coordinating the leasing program.

She described the process leading up to Andrus' announcement as "two years of jumping through hoops" but believes the result is a balanced program that serves the general national interest — environmental protection as well as meeting energy needs.

The plan is not written in concrete, she said. "It's a planning schedule...It is the beginning of the process...It is only to get us looking at the right places."

She added, "If this program can't make it, I think we're in deep trouble."

Chances are that it will go — but in bits and starts. Some lease sales may be delayed by court action or until technology is developed to cope with Alaskan weather conditions, deep waters and Arctic ice.

State officials agree with Ross that "the public participation in this program has been incredible." But right now, they are more concerned with the output.

In Juneau, Robert Waldrup, another aide to Gov. Hammond, said bitterly: "They (the federal government) got a lot more input. But they listened a lot less. It's a great process. But it's the results. Up to the final day there were nine sales. After all of that, they added another sale." Alaska had wanted three sales canceled.

Down in Houston, Shell's Nanz had a different view. Shell had proposed 26 Alaskan sales, claiming that they could yield 4 million barrels of oil a day by 1995, the equivalent of more than half the nation's current daily imports. The 10 sales that were scheduled would produce only about 1 million barrels daily by then, Nanz said.

Production announced

AUSTIN — Texas oil and gas wells produced 606,492,267 Mcf of gas in March 1980, up 2.58 percent from field runs a year earlier.

Marketed gas production, the total gas to transmission lines, carbon black and plant fuel and lease use, totaled 518,339,668 Mcf and reflected a 3.87 percent increase from the March 1979 volume.

Gas exported from Texas in March totaled 277,516,000 Mcf. Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America was the month's largest exporter, moving 83,312,408 Mcf of gas of which 39,307,789 Mcf was Texas-produced.
