Hefty pay hike seen for Texas' teachers

AUSTIN (AP) - Speaker Bill Clayton predicted Saturday the 1981 Legislature would raise the pay of Texas classroom teachers enough to rank them among the top 10

Clayton said the ranking could be achieved by combining the state pay raise with local financial support.

Representatives of the 36,000-member Texas Classroom Teachers Association responded to Clayton's prediction with a standing ovation. The association is seeking a $784 million pay raise over two years, which would raise salaries to 10 percent above the national average. A bill to accomplish that goal already has been filed by Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center.

Although Clayton spoke of a "considerable increase," he did not specifically address the association's request for a 33.5 percent pay hike.

However, a spokesman for Gov. Bill Clements told the association's workshop, "I'd be lying to you if I said the Legislature is going to pass a 33 percent pay raise. I don't think they are.

Jim Kaster, legislative liaison for Clements, said the governor had recommended a 22 percent increase and added, "Nobody got into teaching to get rich." One teacher said 22 percent over two years "means going down even further. We need 33 percent just to make up for some of the past years.

Kaster said he thought Clements favored the association's five-point legislative program "with the exception of job security. In all honesty, I don't think he would be too keen on that.' Several teachers said single parent-teachers with two or three children could qualify for free school lunches, and one told Kaster she considered herself a professional, and "I do not want to be put in a category with welfare recipients.' Kaster said the governor's "first priority" in education would be "adequate pay for teachers." Asked why Clements opposed job security, Kaster replied, "I didn't say he opposed it. I said he was not too keen on it. He thinks other things are more important than lifetime tenure.'

The association proposes that all school districts be required to offer probationary and continuing contracts. It says such contracts would give teachers "basic minimum process rights with regard to hiring, contract renewal and termination.'

Clayton said the Legislature would give "serious consideration" to a group health insurance program for teachers, and Kaster added that Clements would "probably favor' such a program. Clayton urged teachers to oppose any move toward collective bargaining, and Kaster said any effort to enact collective bargaining or the right to strike is "dead

Reagan group will suggest replacing current Medicare

Reagan's health task force is seeking to dispel the notion that the presidentelect might disrupt Medicaid and Medicare programs.

But it is recommending that Reagan consider a plan to replace the current Medicare system with one in which senior citizens would be given checks and told to find their own health insurance

"There should be no fear among the public that these programs will be diminished," declared Dr. Edward B. Walsh, head of the task force. "Rather, they will be improved.'

Walsh said Reagan "will be more fastidious in going after the misman-agement and waste and taking the money saved there to improve the quality and also pay attention to accessibility.'

Walsh, who is director of Project Hope, the international medical care and education organization, also said the new president should set up a pilot project to assess the feasibility of a voucher system for Medicare.

Under such a system, beneficiaries would be given a voucher worth a set sum of money with which to purchase insurance. Should it prove feasible, Walsh said, the federal government could scrap the bureaucracy that currently deals with Medicare claims.

Insurance coverage should be among the first health problems to be tackled by the new president, said Walsh. Reagan should work with the insurance industry to provide coverage - especially for catastrophic illnesses - for the millions of Americans who either do not have insurance or who are considered bad risks, he

Walsh said the task force had rejected the two central health initiatives of the Carter administration national health insurance and hospital cost containment.

He described Reagan's philosophy in the health area as one that emphadecision-making, seeking to give more responsibility to states and communities. Walsh described some of the task force conclusions Friday, as he prepared to deliver its report to Reagan's transition aides.

That report also suggests that the Reagan administration move quickly to shorten the time it takes to bring new drugs into the marketplace. Some Food and Drug Administration regulations and others affecting drugs should be relaxed, it says.

Walsh also said task force members believe Reagan should put his stamp on the Department of Health and Human Services by changing personnel "at an in-depth level. "We don't subscribe any more than he does to the idea that all people in government are bad. The philosophy of this transition team is not going to be to just go in and clean house,"

Cold and crazy disc jockey Jeff Thomas is hung up this weekend, suspended by a crane 50 feet above the Tierra Del Sol Shopping Center parking lot on West Cuthbert Avenue. Having had only a 100-degree water bed and a walkie talkie for company. Thomas plans to come down this afternoon after a 48-hour stint to raise money for muscular dystrophy. "It's actually nicer than some of the motel rooms I've stayed in," said Thomas, who encouraged Midlanders to come out and donate to "Jerry's Kids." (Staff Photo by Bruce Partain) elect Ronald Reagan and the new Congress should take a harder line against domestic radicals, including reviving congressional internal security committees, an influential conservative research group said Satur-

The House Internal Security Committee, formerly known as the House Un-American Activities Committee, was disbanded in 1975 and the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on Internal Security was abolished in 1978.

Internal security committees achieved wide prominence in the early 1950s when the late Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy, R-Wis., conducted hearing on alleged communist infiltration of the government, labor unions and other areas of American

The Heritage Foundation called for the stepped-up activities against dissidents as part of a blueprint for conservative policies that was presented Thursday to top officials of the Reagan transition team, some of whom have close connections with the Washington-based foundation.

'The threat to the internal security of the Republic is greater today than at any time since World War II," the Heritage report said in recommending "presidential emphasis on the nature of the threat, ... the reality of subversion and emphasis on the un-American nature of much so-called 'dissidence.''

Besides reviving at least one internal security committee in Congress, the conservative group called for end-ing restrictions that ban mail openings by the FBI, require prior approval from the president and attorney general before the FBI can conduct break-ins, and only permit investigation of political groups when they are suspected of criminal activity.

'Many of the current restrictions on internal security fuctions arose from legitimate but often poorly in-formed concern for the civil liberties of the citizen and the responsibility of the government," the report said. "While these are legitimate concerns, it is axiomatic that individual liberties are secondary to the requirement of national security and internal civil

The report argued that serious surveillance of dissident groups requires "such standard intelligence techniques as wiretapping, mail covers (monitoring where mail is sent), informants, and at least occasionally, illegal entries."

The Heritage Foundation listed among groups that should be put under tighter surveillance communist parties, radical and New Left groups, 'anti-defense and anti-nuclear lobbies," and white racist groups like the Ku Klux Klan.

The report also said the nation's internal security was threatened by "an expanded presence of immi-grants from unstable and sometimes Marxist influenced states whose num-ber may include foreign intelligence agents and agents provocateurs.'

A reappraisal

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST Editor-in-Chief, The Heast Newspapers

NEW YORK -Transition periods between presidents provide an excellent opportunity to review and reassess past programs, and plan for the future.

During the Carter-to-Reagan turnover we will get involved in a number of "agonizing reappraisals," to borrow the phrase coined and made part of our language by the late John Foster Dulles. For one, there is the area of military defense. Any reappraisal of preparedness picture inevitably will agonizing, for the next administration will run into that age-old conflict between balancing the budget and, at the same time, spending enough to man the nation's ramparts.

Despite the agony, President-elect Reagan must take a good hard look at the state of the nation's defenses. And despite the unplesantness of spending money, his administration must

DALLAS (AP) — Three high school students stole twin-engine Piper Seneca and climbed in. an airplane and flew over Dallas for 45 minutes, buzzing within 50 feet of some rooftops and narrowly missing a jet before landing safely, police say.

Police said the teen-agers, all from well-to-do North Dallas families, came close to a head-on collision with a Southwest Airlines passenger jet that was trying to land. The incident began, police said, about 8:30 p.m. Friday when the three - one age 15, the others 16 went to a private air charger office at Love Field, which used to be the city's main airport but now serves mostly general aviation.

There, they told police, they walked up to a $25,000.

The youths told police that none of them knew how to fly, but they said the 15-year-old told his companions he had watched his father fly a corporate plane several times. The youngster started the plane's engines, taxied onto a runway and took off, officers said.

Their flight went largely unnoticed until a police helicopter, hovering over a private airfield, saw them cruising 50 feet above the rooftops of a residential area.

The police pilot said he notified airport officials, who broadcast a warning to other pilots but could not reach the teen-agers by radio.

Three Dallas high schoolers take aerial joy ride "Our radio had quit working by then," one of the youths was quoted as saying.

By now, the 15-year-old pilot had become airsick and was ready for the ride to end, but did not know how to land, the three later told police.

"I prayed all the way back to Love Field, hoping we could get down without getting hurt," one of the passengers told police later.

Herded by the police helicopter, the airplane made its way back to Love Field, crossing the path of Southwest Airlines Flight 89, which had taken off from Tulsa, Okia. The airline's office in Tulsa elined to say how many passengers were aboard the

Jurors, prosecutors wish him Godspeed

Several jurors smiled on the 26-year-old defendant, Richard Reni Cornett, exchanged handshakes with him and wished him Godspeed, as they left the courtroom Saturday morning following his trial for the attempted murder of his wife.

The jury had given him a five-year probated sentence following the week-long trial, which revolved around the wounding of his wife and fatal shooting of his large trial, which revolved around the wounding of his vife and fatal shooting of his sister-in-law in the Cornett home on Midland's eastside last June 30.

He was convicted of aggravated assault.

"Good luck, Mr. Cornett," three women jurors told the misty-eyed defendant, as they filed past him and his defense attorney, Tom Hirsch, smiled and shook his hand. Even District Attorney Vern Martin, who was fighting for a stiffer punishment in the attempted-murder trial, courteously shook the defendant's hand and honored the jury's rulings.

"Good luck, Mr. Cornett," said the mild-mannered David Joers, the district attorney's chief prosecutor who had extensively questioned Cornett and 20 state witnesses and seven dese witnesses in the week-long trial.

"Mrs. Cornett," said Hirsch in turning to the defendant's mother, Mrs. Norris Cornett, "you've got a good boy."

CORNETT, a black oilfield welder, was convicted of aggravated assault by the jury, which deliberated more than eight hours Friday night and Saturday morning before returning a guilty verdict to 238th State District Court Judge Vann Culp about 1 a.m. Saturday.

Eight hours later, the jury re-grouped, heard additional testimony, listened to lawyers' arguments and the judge's charge. They deliberated for 30 minutes before returning with the five-year probated sentence. The prosecution had sought for a penitentiary sentence for the defendant, who was indicted for murdering his 31-year-old sister-in-law, Norma Jean Loring of Odessa, and attempting to murder, by gunshot, his wife, Mildred "Blondie" Cornett. He was tried on the attempted-murder charge in the week-long

The shooting came in the wake of a marital squabble on custody of the couple's children, family finances and their incompatibility, testimony indicated. Cornett said he had wanted to reconcile their marriage, but the wife rejected his efforts. And on the same month of the shooting, which Cornett contended was in self-defense and which the wife testified was unprovoked, a divorce court had award the Cornett house at 1715 E. Oak St. to BOTH CORNETT and his defense attorney had described the sister-in-law as big, fat, "mean" and hostile and the wife as money-hungry, occasionally violent and not inclined to work.

The jury predominately was made up of women.
"That shows the old maxim: "There's nothing harder on a bad woman than a woman," opined Hirsch.

The trial, which had started Monday, ran through about 30 friendly and averse witnesses, 95 state exhibits and one exhibit

For awhile in their deliberations, the jury seemed to be entering a deadlock but came up with 12 "yes" votes for aggravated assault about an hour after midnight

We were a long ways apart at the start - from acquittal to quilty," Vance Dee Graham, the jury foreman, said after the judge had released the jurors from the court. "The circumstances were always doubtful, but we couldn't get beyond a reasonable doubt (on the attempted murder charge)," he said. "We felt Richard Cornett is a good citizen now, and he'll even

Like Hirsch, Graham recognized the strict terms of proba-

"If you drink and carouse around, you're going to have problems."

The mainstay of Cornett's probation is that he remain and act out the role of a good citizen, avoid vicious and injurious habits, stay away from sleazy people and places, and obey the law of the Otherwise, his probation could be revoked, and he could be confined in the state penitentiary to serve his sentence. Cornett had indicated he might seek the court's and the probation's office permission to move to Oklahoma to work as a welder and, apparently, to avoid any confict with his wife and her family. The couple's divorce is to be finalized this week in Barbara Culver's 318th State District Court.

PRIOR TO THE JURY'S deliberation on the punishment phase of the trial Saturday morning, the defense presented several witnesses to attest to Cornett's "good character." The prosecution produced no witnesses to gainsay the defense's contention. "As far as I know," testified Truman Friday, "the man don't drink, don't smoke and I've never heard him swear a day in my

"I've known Richard all his life," said Stelle L'arshall. "Gave him his first bicycle. "It (his reputation) has been good." The prosecution, however, did say that Cornett had been charged with burglary in 1974 and with eluding a police officer in 1975, but that both charges were dropped before they reached a In arguing for a light sentence for his client, Hirsch told the jurors that he and Cornett were somewhat disappointed with their guilty verdict. The defense was seeking an acquittal.

"We may be disappointed, but we're not mad," Hirsch said. What happened on June 30 cannot be taken back. Prosecutor Martin, also, said he was disappointed with the verdict but in a far different sense. "I do respect your decision," he allowed. "I don't agree with

He didn't recommend probation, as did Hirsch. The offense of aggravated assault carries a punishment range of two to 10 years in prison and a maximum fine of $5,000. Martin was seeking a conviction of burglary of a building with committing attempted murder; that offense would carry a punishment range of five to 99 years or life in prison.

The prosecutor said the jurors should consider the severity the gunshot wound which Cornett inflicted on his wife. She was shot in the arm, chest and shoulder.

"It's almost a miracle (she survived)...by the grace of God, not by the grace of his intent to kill her," Martin said. Cornett is also indicted for the murder of his sister-in-law, but the trial in that case has not been set.

"The state has no plans to dismiss it," Martin said of the

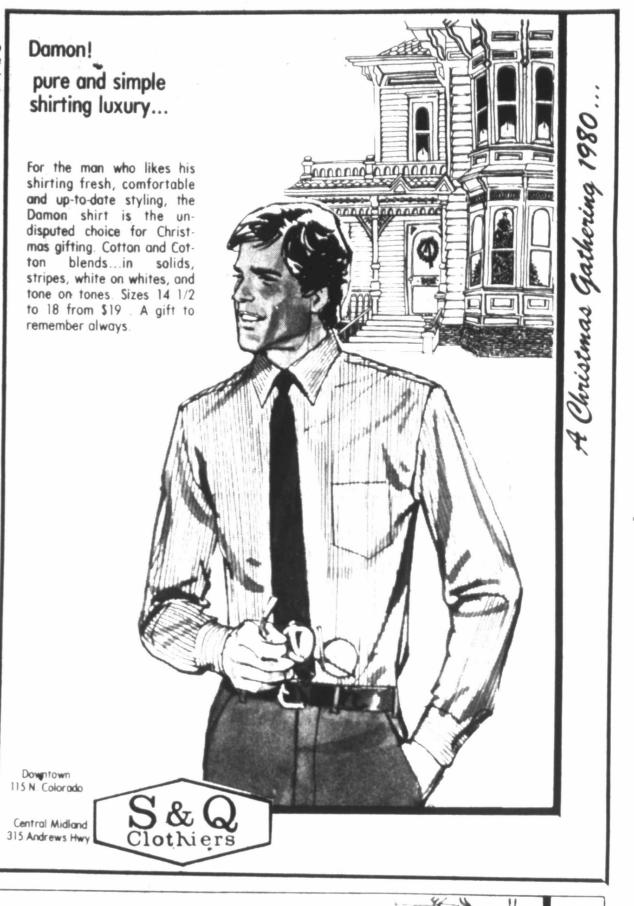

Handwriting experts called in on voting fraud probe in Austin

AUSTIN (AP) - Handwriting experts have been asked to assist the Travis County district attorney's investigation into what state officials call fraud in absentee voting in the Nov. 4 general election.

The Austin American-Statesman reported staff members in Secretary of State George Strake's office said similar allegations are being investigated in Houston, Dallas and San Antonio.

The newspaper said the apparent fraud in Travis County involves several elderly citizens who received absentee ballots in the mail although they said they did not request them.

Stacy Dam model passes simulated flood tests

A model of the Stacy Dam has come acre feet per day), or the maximum through tests with flying colors. While possible f ome simulated flood runs are contin-ting on a scale model of the dam at rado State University in Fort Collins, the most rugged tests have been completed. O.H. Ivie, general manager of Colorado Municipal Water District which will build the Stacy project, said that the tests had disclosed the need for some modifications, but that most of these will result in savings in contruction as well as ncrease the security of the struc-

The dam model was constructed on an exact scale of one to 40, even down to the sizing of the rocks used as rip rap or in the stilling basin. The river flows of every possible magnitude were routed through the spillway, and the emergency spillway, including the "100-year flood" of 265,000 cubic feet per second discharge (132,000

ond feet (170,000 acre feet per day)

Because there is a bend in the river channel above the dam location, it may be necessary to construct a spur dike at one end of the spillway to convey the flow directly upon the face of the spillway and thus even the flow to all gates. The ultimate flood test also revealed a moderate problem of tailwater when both the spillway and the emergency spillway are discharging at the absolute maxi-

Ivie said tests were continuing, and a final report from Colorado State University is expected before the end of the year. Similar model tests on the dam at Lake E.V. Spence resulted in savings which more than paid for the study and also overcame some critical safety problems.

Appeal of Stacy Reservoir case to be heard Wednesday

The appeal of a district court decision upholding the Colorado River Municipal Water District's permit to build the Stacy Reservoir will be argued Wednesday morning before the Court of Civil Appeals in Austin.

Frank Booth of Austin, representing the CRMWD, and Tim Brown, assistant attorney general representing the Texas Water Commission on behalf of the state, argue that TWC acted properly and correctly in issuing the permit for the 544,000 acre feet lake 25 miles southeast of Ballinger on the Colorado River.

"The fundamental question in the case is whether West Texas shall be prived of water for its future while the lower Colorado River basin enjoys a surplus of water," Booth argued in his brief submitted to the appeals

The chief opponent of the permit, the Lower Colorado River Authority which operates a chain of lakes above Austin, argued that the sum of water permits on the Colorado River al-ready equals its yield, hence there is virtually no unappropriated water. Both Booth and Brown argued that unused water is wasted water, under the state's conservation statute, and that it is unreasonable to say there is no water available when 2,115,000 acre feet a year flow past the Columbus gauge into the Gulf.

The CRMWD is asking only for 113,000 acre feet a year. CRMWD filed for the permit in October 1977 and the permit was granted in 1979. LCRA then appealed to the district court where the Texas Water Commission

Not all mortgages conventional

New types developed as market changes

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer

The traditional mortgage — with a fixed monthly payment you can count on forever - may be on the way to extinction.

The median price of new homes is near $70,000, and the high price has combined with rising interest rates to send sales plummeting.

To make it easier for people to buy houses, the government has given lenders greater leeway to grant unconventional mortgages, and two more variations are under consideration.

The new types of mortgages generally are designed to provide lower monthly payments — temporarily at least. Over the long run, however, buyers pay more. The U.S. League of Savings Associations says about one-third of all mortgages written by its members today already have flexible interest rates. Some lenders have stopped offering traditional mortgages altogether The rules governing the new mortgages are complicated. Here is a look at the alphabet soup of

VARIABLE RATE MORTAGE

The VRM has an interest rate that fluctuates up and down according to a federal index that measures the amount lenders have to pay for their funds. The VRMs first appeared in California in 1975. Savings and loan institutions regulated by the federal government have been authorized to offer VRMs since the middle of 1979

Under existing federal rules, the interest rate on a

VRM can be raised or lowered once a year, any time mortgages. If the house were not sold during a fixed, after the first year of the mortgage. The maximum agreed-upon period of up to 10 years, the lender increase is half a percentage point a year or 21/2 percentage points over the life of the mortgage.

There is no maximum decrease. Government regulators have proposed raising the maximum allowable increase to 1 percentage point a year or 5 percentage points over the life of the mortgage. They also have proposed allowing interest rate adjustments every six months.

RENEGOTIABLE RATE MORTGAGE

VRM, but there is a fixed schedule of increases or gage. decreases. Changes are allowed every three to five years and are tied to an index of average mortgage rates at the time of renegotiation.

The RRMs have been offered on a nationwide basis since early this year. The maximum increase or decrease under current federal regulations is half a percentage point a year or 5 percentage points over the life of the mortgage. The government has proposed doubling the maximum allowable yearly change to 1 percentage point.

SHARED APPRECIATION MORTGAGE The SAM - just proposed by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board on a national basis — creates a new type of partnership between borrower and lender. The lender charges a lower-than-usual interest rate. In exchange, the borrower agrees to give the lender up to 40 percent of the profits when the house is sold

The GPM is aimed at young families whose income is expected to rise. Monthly payments during the early years of the GPM are much lower than they would be with a conventional mortgage. Hostage decision may be possible in next few days

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran will make a decision soon on the U.S. reply to Iran's terms for releasing the 52 American hostages, possibly "in two or three days," an advisor to the Iranian prime minister said Satur-

THE U.S. REPLY was delivered to the Iranians by Algerian envoys last Wednesday after they received it in Algiers from Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher. At Iran's request, Algeria is acting as an intermediary in the hostage crisis.

Iran's Parliament, the Majlis, ruled two weeks ago that the hostages would be released if the United States met four conditions: pledged non-intervention in Iranian affairs; released some $8 billion frozen Iranian assets in U.S. banks; dropped lawsuits against Iran and returned the wealth of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. The demands were first suggested some six weeks earlier by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Iran's revolutionary leader.

Christopher carried a pledge of non-interference to Algiers but was said to have told the Algerians the U.S. government would find it legally difficult to meet the other terms.

Radio Tehran, in a report on the Friday night meeting of the Supreme Defense Council, quoted Rajai as saying, "From our point of view, the hostage issue is considered solved The Majlis has announced its conditions. We have passed them on and now it is up to the U.S.A. to react."

The broadcast carried a similar quote from the prliamentary speaker, Ayatollah Hashemi Rafsanjani. It reported he said, "As far as this issue (the hostages) is concerned, the Majlis considers it quite finished, and it is too busy to discuss the issue

Pope condemns pre-marital sex, divorce, abortion in first message

COLOGNE, West Germany (AP) -Pope John Paul II Saturday condemned pre-marital sex, divorce and abortion in a message on family sanctity at the beginning of his five-day visit to West Germany.

Later, he praised the German people for their industriousness in rebuilding from the "ruins and humiliations" of World War II and made reference in a meeting with West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt to the "painful" East-West division of Sources said the pope discussed the latest developments in his native Poland with Schmidt during their pri vate meeting at Augustusburg Castle outside Cologne.

His message on family unity was delivered to a cheering crowd of more than 120,000 people, many of them parents with children in tow, at an outdoor Mass in pouring rain and gusty winds.

The taking of unborn life is not a legitimate method of family planning," the pope said.

IT WAS THE 60-year-old Polishborn pontiff's first major address on his West German trip. Local church officials had expected a crowd of as many as a half million people to greet the pope in this strongly Roman Catholic city. But the weather and national television's broadcast of the Mass kept many at home, officials surmised.

The outcry prompted a statement from a Vatican spokesman saying the passages about Luther "do not reflect the position of the Catholic Church."

The pope was flown by helicopter to Butzweiler Hof, a grassy World War II airfield on Cologne's outskirts, for the Mass. Authorities had cleared the area of explosives left buried since the war in the hulls of wrecked air-uperiority, and talk about equality. That would be a more realistic approach. America is not an aggresive nation. We don't want to knock e Russians off the face of the earth. but we should keep our defenses so strong and in such a degree of readiiess that nobody would even think of hreatening us. I'm no military expert, but like all mericans, I have an interest in survival. I am concerned with keepng our guard up against any evenuality, perhaps partly because I am old enough to remember when our soldiers trained with wooden machine uns prior to World War II. We lost lives because of our lack of preparedess and none of us wants to see that happen again.

During this transition period, and in the months following, I intend to articipate, as the Hearst Newspaers have done historically in the ast, in a review of our defenses.

We need not react, automatically, to every Russian move. By that, I ean we should not necessarily rush to production of say, the B1 bomber, ast because the Soviet Union has ething similar.

We might have better weapons, nd at lower costs. In other words, we should not get hung up on the merits of a single weapon, and believe as some have done that building the B1 means we are better than the Russians, and not building it means we are inferior.

We cannot afford to spend blindly or every gun and rock on the drawing

We need to consider carefully how nany bangs we get for each of ar bucks. That is what a review of ar military defenses should be all

Building an adequate defense, one at has equality with the Soviet Union, is a complicated business. I don't pretend that the Hearst Newspapers can cover all the angles between now and the Jan. 20 inauguration of Ronald Reagan.

But as starters I believe any common-sense review should include an equation of the American and Soviet navies, an appraisal of our weapons production, and a look at our access to minerals essential to development of effective armament. Never before in peacetime has there been such an accelerated armaments program as the U.S.S.R. has displayed in its development of a navy capable of plying the Seven Seas with ultra-modern threats to countries and communications. It bears the imprint of a single-minded officer, Fleet Admiral Sergei Gorshkov, held in great respect by all potential adversaries around the western world.

Military prowess also means the ability to deny the other side access to required resources, whether for aircraft, ships, missiles or plain rapid-fire rifles. The Soviets have been busy for years trying to deny us strategic minerals in southern Africa through either political upheavals or by setting up comradley regimes.

First, let's examine the build-up of the Red Navy. At the end of World War II it consisted of coastal units and pretty slow motor torpe-do boats. Land-minded Russian strategists never believed in a navy and always tried to prove their point by citing the disaster that befell the Czarist Navy during the war with Japan in 1904-05.

The mighty Soviet fleet that exists today — quite a few strategists claim it's even more powerful than ours — is the handiwork of Admiral Gorshkov. He prevailed over all opposition including Stalin's, and received grudging consent for a larger Rus-sian Navy. After Cuba, Gorahkov manipulated the politicians and outmaneuvered the generals. He won an all-out green light to build surface vessels and submarines, rocket-firing destroyers and nuclear weapons. Gorshkov's naval armory includes 289 major surface combat ships and its 64-vessel nuclear missile fleet is the world's largest, seven percent bigger than ours. It deploys an inventory of 950 underseas launchers as John Harris, Hearst military affairs specialist, tells me. Harris also reports that the new Soviet "Alfa" class submarine is built with hulls of titanium, lighter and stronger than steel.

This feature, according to U.S. experts in the field, enable Soviet subs to travel faster (reportedly 45 knots), dive deeper and more rapidly than American underseas craft. In short, it poses a serious challenge to U.S. antisubmarine warfare capability. That's the menace from the Russian Navy, whether, shadowing our Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean, units in the Pacific, or in the oil lanes of the Persian Gulf where the Soviets, under orders of Gorshnov, are playing tag with American naval units and western freighters.

Gorshkow's flotillas and submarines also are hugging the long coastlines of eastern and western Africa. They have established bases, for instance, in Guinea and Angola, in West Africa, and in Mozambique in the east. Over in those countries they have comradely regimes and Mozambique abuts Zimbabwe (formerly Rhodedia) with vast mineral resources and a flaky, pro-leftist government.

In the event of an unexpected war or even tighter tension than pres-ently, the Soviet Navy may blockade our access to many of the mineral resources in southern Africa. We must have cobalt, chromium and manganese that are extential to steel, aerospace and defense production generally, which are found principally in Africa and, believe it or not, the

The Carter administration never understood the problem. It sought to tighten pressure on South Africa as a way of loosening the areas in Africa already in the Soviety's hip pocket. The outgoing government in Washington has also harped on the need to make most of the public lands of Alaska, a hiker's paradise, off limits to even a quest for the minerals we need, and a bill probably will be signed by the president in favor of this ill-advised step by the time you read

A serious and thorough review of all the above, in my view, merits priority treatment. This column and other articles written especially for The Hearst Newspapers will continue to review progress and inadequacies in these vital areas during the transition period and the months to come of the new administration.

The "Southfork Ranch" home of television's wealthiest and tackiest family, the Ewings, has become the area's most popular tourist

The J.R. phenomenon is worldwide

By SCOTT KRAFT Associated Press Writer

The shooting of villainous J.R. Ewing has created a phenomenon that does of J.R. proud — devilishly playing with the minds of millions while at the same time picking their pockets.

Some 250 million people around the world are watching the wildly popular "Dallas," where the oil-rich Ewing clan hangs out its dirty linen in televi-

They're wondering — even betting — who shot J.R. And they're gobbling up the wares of an industry that may soon make even Ewing Oil's fictitious fortune look like a cowpoke's savings.

Sales of J.R. buttons, bumper stickers, Stetson hats, games and jeans are booming. T-shirts read: "Will Rogers Never Met J.R." Macy's is opening J.R. boutiques in New York and London. Bantam Books recently published "The Dallas Family Album."

The show's massive audience spans geography, social status and income. Even President Carter, during a Texas appearance, wondered aloud if anyone could tell him who shot J.R.

THE question of the television season will be answered before the week is out. CBS has promised. But another question remains

WHAT IS THIS SHOW doing to us?

J.R. Ewing, the "Dallas" centerpiece played by Larry Hagman, hasn't one redeeming quality. He's greedy, he's despicable, he's unfaithful, he's immoral. And he's proud of it.

On the show, he's despised by virtually all who know him. Hence, virtually everyone is a suspect. But they're outnumbered - millions of viewers love him, or at least love to hate him.

Dozens of reasons for the show's popularity have been advanced, to -Ordinary Rich Folk. We love to be told the problems of the wealthy aren't so different from our own problems.

-Revenge. We get a vicarious thrill from J.R. Ewing's vengeance and his penchant for ruthless revenge. We harbor revenge plots of our own, but lack the guile to carry them out.

-POWER. WE FANTASIZE about having the power of J.R. Ewing, using it as they please and never having to suffer the consequences. J.R. never gets his comeuppence.

-Hate. We need to hate someone. And J.R. is eminently hateable. John Homlish, who teaches psychiatric ethics at the Menninger Foundation in Topeka, Kan., thinks "Dallas" has redeeming social value in much the way "All in the Family" did 10 years ago.

The structure of the family in society is changing, says Homlish, who also studies children and family life.

What sociologists call the extended family, generations of grandparents, aunts and uncles living near each other, has all but vanished. And families today are retreating into privacy, handling their own problems within a smaller family unit.

"THE EWING FAMILY IS a kind of mirror of that retreat into privacy," Homlish says. "The Ewings have all the problems of society — alcohol, infertility, etc. And they handle all their problems within the family.

Every daytime soap opera family reflects the problems of society, but the Ewings in "Dallas" take a more active role in dealing with those problems — and viewers can learn from that, Homlish said.

"Characters on soap operas tend to handle their problems in a very whiny sort of way," he says. "In 'Dallas,' they just say, 'Dammit, you're an alcoholic and we're going to handle it.' Then they go at it. Nobody ever looks shocked, they just handle it. They're a tough old crowd."

Whatever the reason, "Dallas" is a bona fide gusher for CBS. And a whole industry is tapping it. Hagman is passing out fake $100 bills engraved "In Hagman We Trust." They might as well be real. Manifestations of what Newsweek magazine has called 'bad-guy chic'' crop up every few weeks.

THE TEXAS-BASED PEARL Brewing Co. has come out with a beer labeled "J.R. Ewing's Private Stock."

The price? J.R. himself says right on the can: "If you have to ask how much my beer costs, you probably can't afford it." There's a "Dallas" comic strip due for December syndication, a J.R. doll,

J.R. playing cards and a full line of J.R. colognes, body talcs and the However, Lorimar Productions, which allows use of the show's trademarks for an undisclosed fee, didn't approve J.R. Ewing toilet paper and 'Clean your dishes with J.R." kitchen sponges. There are fake certificates for Ewing land, oil and cattle. The maker calls them "a perfect gift for the J.R. or any SOB in your life." A "J.R. For President" campaign even surfaced. "With his billions, he'll buy the hostages back from Iran," read one bumper sticker. Hagman warned that the presidential salary would have to be hiked to at least $5 million — before he'd consider the office.

PRESIDENT CARTER MAY NOT have considered the challenge serious, but in a speech to supporters in Dallas he confided with a smile: "I came to Dallas to find out confidentially who shot J.R. And if any of you could let me know that, I could finance the whole campaign this fall.' Even Johnny Carson, the popular host of NBC's "Tonight Show," reflected recently on J.R.'s popularity.

"He lies, cheats, steals ... he's living the American dream," Carson

Meanwhile, CBS executives rub their hands together gleefully.

Viewers in 40 percent of U.S. homes with TV — or 31.1 million — watched "Dallas" on Nov. 9. "Dallas" recorded average ratings in each of its first two seasons of 18.4, and the figure for the last episode of the 1979-80 season, in which J.R. was shot, was 32.1.

When J.R.'s attacker is unveiled this Friday, the show is almost certain to be among the most widely watched prime-time shows in televi-

Viewers of the CBS-TV program "Dallas" will find out on the program that airs Friday, Nov. 21 the answer to the quetion of the summer, "Who Shot J.R.?" Larry Hagman, who plays J.R. Ewing in the saga of the Texas oil family, is pushed in a wheelchair by Linda Gray, who plays his wife Sue Ellen. Steve Kanaly who has the role of the ranch foreman Ray Krebs, stands to the left. By KAY CRITES Staff Writer

There's a new trend developing in Midland that may or may not be seen as a good thing — depending on the viewpoint.

Tenants are organizing.

So far, two tenants' associations have formed, and Betty Sheeler with the Midland Housing Association said she had heard interest expressed in a city-wide tenants' organization even at Hillcrest, a Housing and Urban Development-financed hous-ing development for the handicapped and elderly.

This type of development would be unusual in Midland, a city which has long opposed such organizations as labor unions and tenants' groups. As recently as March, no such organizations for renters existed.

The latest to formally organize are tenants in the Dellwood Duplexes lo-cated in the 3100 and 3200 blocks of Storey and Kansas avenues and on Powell Street. This group met late last week to elect officers, so they could "file suit," if necessary.

THE MEMBERS at the meeting contended that the old owners, Western Properties, for more than a year failed to make repairs necessary to eliminate health hazards. They also said the previous manager collected rents before she left but failed to give receipts or mark the rents paid. Now several tenants, who said they paid, are being told they owe up to $300 in hack rent. back rent. Some tenants have can-celed checks to back up their claims.

"She (the present manager) has us down for over $300 back rent that we don't know anything about," said one tenant, a young black woman, "She's threatening to evict us.'

Western Properties refused Friday to comment on the allegations against them.

The tenants also claim the present manager has refused to make reported repairs, saying they were "unimportant," and that she "hassles" the Cambodian residents and women who report needed repairs.

Incidents cited included one apartment with rats, another with standing water in two rooms for more than a week, and one with a wall heater hanging out of the wall. THE FIRE DEPARTMENT conducted surveys on some of the apartments, found some "minor" fire hazards and these have been corrected, according to a Fire Department spokesman. Rosie Merie Ellis, vice president of the new tenants' association, alleged the manager, Mrs. Rustle Roark, has cursed at several tenants.

The tenants also claim that the current owners raised their rents, but did not give the required 30 day notice. The notices, they say, were placed in mailboxes Nov. 5. The rent increase is to take effect Dec. 1.

However, J.M. Anderson of Crane, one of the new owners, denied these charges, as did the new manager, Mrs. Roark.

Only one notice was not delivered Nov. 1, said Anderson. "You might also find," he said, "the maintenance has been greatly improved in the last 30 days since we bought it. Granted we cannot fix everything that was damaged within 30 days. Also, if you'll drive around you'll see there are about 17 units undergoing total reno-

THE TENANTS complained that they were not allowed to move into these new units, but Anderson answered by saying the units were not finished and no one had been allowed to move into them. He also said he was not aware of any requests by current tenants to move into the refurbished apartments.

"No one's even asked to move.

around saying 'we have a vacancy would you like to move?'

"The only things (repairs) I can think of that were requested that weren't done were things set up in the master program," Anderson said. "A lot of screen doors were missing because the prior management wasn't replacing any back door screens. We intend to replace all of them but we intend to buy them in a package deal because we get a better price.

"And I admit those are a low-priority item compared to getting heaters ready for winter and shutting off the air conditioners so they don't freeze up in the winter.

"The true picture, from what I have got, is that those who went to this meeting (tenants' association meeting) really are complaining against the prior ownership."

MRS. ROARK also denied charges of harrassing Cambodians and women and refusing to make re-

Greenwood shoot Saturday

GREENWOOD — The Greenwood Optimist Club will sponsor a Turkey Shoot from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday at a caliche pit off the Garden City Highway and near County Road 120 East, according to Optimist Pat Anderson.

The Optimists will furnish the .410-gauge shot-guns and 7½-shot shells to be used in the contest. Each shooter handing over $3 will get three shots

The Turkey Shoot site is eight miles east of Midland, and signs indicating location of the shoot will be posted along the Garden City Highway (Texas 158) for shooters and spectators, Anderson said. No admission will be charged to spectators at the shoot.

One of the largest blazes — the worst in 30 years in the Chattahoochee National Forest of northern Georgia - burned 5,000 acres of timberland before it was brought under control Friday night by more than 200 firefighters, aided by aerial tankers.

Bruce Jewell, public information officer for Region 8, Southeast Area, of the National Forest Service, said firefighters had just finished digging a 14-mile line around the burned area, cutting it off from surrounding woodlands, when the rains came and completed the job of extinguishing the flames.

Jewell said investigators determined the fire was Chatsworth and Blue Ridge on Thursday. He said no arrests had been made.

DALLAS (AP) — After six hours of testimony and five minutes' deliberation, a Jury acquitted a 19year-old mother accused of shoplifting a 77-cent rattle that a security guard found clutched in the hands of her 5-month-old baby.

Mrs. Wallace testified she picked up the rattle intending to buy it, but unwrapped it and gave it to her baby to play with while she shopped.

She said she offered to pay for the toy after store personnel stopped her, but company officials pressed charges instead.

Assistant City Attorney Art Lewis, assigned to prosecute the case, said the case seemed "insignificant" but he had no choice. "K mart wanted to prosecute the case," he said.

FARM-RANCH ROUNDUP

Cotton harvest gains momentum in area

ABILENE - Cotton prices remained virtually static, but the cotton harvest picked up some momentum last week when 14,000 samples from ginned bales were classed, according to B.B. Manly Jr. of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Cotton Marketing Services Office here.

So far this season, 22,760 samples have been classed in the office, which checks the quality, staple and cleanness of cotton produced in areas including Abilene and Midland.

Mixed lots of bales were selling for 70 to 79 cents a pound. The demand is poor, and very little cotton is being sold despite the relative lean harvest. The harvest is down due the extended 1980 drought.

Cottonseed prices paid producers ranged from $110 to $120 per ton. And the quality of cotton apparently picked up. This, Manly speculated, probably was due to increased ginning activity in the irrigated areas in and around Glasscock County. Grades were 68 percent light spotted, 20 percent spotted and 9 percent white. Grade 42 was predominant at 47 percent. Grade 52 comprised 19 percent, Grade 43 was 14 percent, and Fiber length was longer, and the micronaire readings continued "very good" with 96 percent in the premium 35 to 49 range.

Farm-City Week Nov. 21-27

COLLEGE STATION — Farm-City Week Nov. 21-27 will be focusing on the roles farm and town people play as partners in progress.

"Farm and city people depend on each other for products and services that are essential to modern business and living," said Dr. Carl Anderson, economist in marketing with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "One group can't live without the other. Together, they make the best food-and-fiber team in the world.

And a highly productive agricultural base is a basic to the economic, political and social success of a nation, he suggests.

One out of every 25 Texans is a farmer or rancher, notes Anderson. Yet, 30 percent of the state's retail trade is directly associated with agri-

Range flexibility encouraged

COLLEGE STATION — A basic principle in managing rangeland is to balance the number of animals, including livestock and wildlife, with the amount of available forage

Carrying out the concept requires flexibility, according to Dr. B.J. Ragsdale, range specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Ser-

In a livestock operation, flexibility can be built into the program to help overcome drought, when forage drops and grazing land becomes poor or poorer. To care for his livestock, a rancher can buy feed or sell some

And his options with wildlife are restricted.

Law regulates the number of animals that can be harvested, or killed, and tradition has resulted in a predominant harvest of the male species - bucks, in the case of deer. Basically, deer and other large hooved wildlife feed on vegetation, especially native plants. And as deer numbers have increased, competition for "preferred" grasses and bushes has caused food supplies to diminish.

Wildlife animals can be brought back into balance through "harvesting" — shooting — if their numbers exceed available forage.

Questionnaires going out

LUBBOCK — Texas farmers and ranchers by the thousands will be receiving crop and livestock questionnaires from mid-November to early January from the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service (TCLRS). Many will be interviewed by TCLFS's field staff.

Information gathered through the questionnaires and interviews will be the basis for determining final acreage, yield and production of crops and end-of-the-year livestock and poultry numbers for the state of Texas

Estimates published by TCLRS are based on the data provided by Texas farmers and ranchers, Texas Agricultural Extension Service agents and Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service officers in each county, and by others in agriculture.

Grain supply still appears tight

Corn, bean harvests sharply reduced

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Not much has happened in the last month to change the government's official view that grain supplies will be tightly stretched to meet domestic and foreign demand in the coming year.

The latest indication came on this week with the Agriculture Department's new estimates showing farmers are harvesting sharply reduced crops of corn and soybeans. Some other crops, notably cotton, also were shriveled by last summer's drought and hot weather.

Officials said the 1980 corn harvest now is estimated at 6.46 billion bushels, virtually unchanged from prospects a month ago but still 17 percent less than last year's huge harvest.

The new corn estimate, based on surveys the first of the month, compared to the record 1979 harvest of 7.76 billion bushels.

Officials also reported further declines in harvest prospects for cotton and a few other 1980 crops. But there was some improvement in yields of soybeans, rice and sorghum from estimates made a month ago.

The department's Crop Reporting Board said that as of Nov. 1 about 86 percent of the corn had been harvested in the major states, compared to only 54 percent a year ago.

It is the first annual decline in U.S. corn production since bad weather shriveled yields in 1974, reducing the harvest to 4.7 billion bushels, a 17 percent drop from 5.67 billion bushels produced in 1973.

crops" production index for 1980 was shown at 129 percent of the crop production in 1967, a base year used for comparison. Last year, the index rose to an all-time high of 144 percent.

Soybean production was estimated as of Nov. 1 at 1.77 billion bushels, a 22 percent decline from last year's record of 2.27 billion. A month ago the crop was estimated at 1.76 billion bushels.

The latest figures showed rice farmers still are expected to harvest a record crop, now estimated at about 146.1 million hundredweight or 100pound bags, up from 142.8 million indicated a month ago and from the 1979 harvest of 131.6 million.

Sorghum grain was estimated at 550.6 million bushels, a 32 percent decline from the 1979 harvest of 814.3 million. However, the latest estimate was up from the October forecast of 547 million bushels.

Cotton production was put at 11.2 million bales, down 23 percent from 14.6 million in 1979. The October estimate was 11.6 million bales.

The department did not issue new production estimates for wheat and a number of other 1980 crops that already have been harvested. This year's wheat crop was a record of about 2.36 billion bushels, with most of it being harvested before the full impact of last summer's drought.

Corn is the largest grain crop grown in the United States and, as livestock feed, is a vital element in the production of meat, poultry and dairy products for American consumers.

Along with wheat and soybeans, corn also is a leading commodity among U.S. agricultural exports to scores of foreign markets, including the big overseas buyers such as Japan and the Common Market countries.

Elevator that exploded had been cited earlier

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — A grain elevator that exploded last week, causing $1 million damage and forcing hundreds of evacuations, had been cited for several safety violations early this summer, a federal safety official says.

But a spokesman for Scoular-Welsh Grain Co., who asked that he not be identified, denied on Saturday that any of the violations contained in an Occupational Ssafety and Health Administration report could have contributed to the explosion and fire.

Local fire officials have tentatively blamed grain dust as the cause of Vednesday night's blast and fire. A federal task force also is investigat-

In an interview Friday with Omaha television station KETV, Neil Ewing, OSHA area director, said inspectors found non-approved electric motors in use at the elevator, inoperative fire doors and large accumulations of Ewing told KETV the inspection turned up "potential sources of ignition." OSHA officials visited the elevator this summer as a follow-up to an inspection completed a year earlier, he said.

The 9:45 p.m. explosion, which blew the top off the old crib-type elevator, shattered windows in nearby buildings. Hundreds of residents and spectators were evacuated from the area as five fire alarms were sounded. The force of the blast blew a hole in the end of the concrete elevator south of the one that was destroyed.

Ewing said Scoular-Welsh had appealed the OSHA findings from a year ago and that a federal district judge had affirmed some of the findings but had thrown out others. Scoular-Weish was fined for some violations, he

The company also has appealed the latest OSHA report, Ewing said, but the company spokesman said Saturday he was unaware of any pending litigation.

The Scoular-Welsh spokesman told KETV that "none of these citations could have had anything to do with the fire. Most of them were overturned by the judge."

Worldwide grain projection down

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Agriculture Department has cut its projection of worldwide grain production for 1980 by 24 million metric tons, mostly to reflect a smaller crop in the Soviet Union.

The department said Monday its latest estimate for the Soviet grain crop is down 20 million metric tons from October's estimate of 185 million metric tons. If the estimate is correct, the grain crop will be 54 million metric tons lower than the Soviet government had hoped for and 14 million metric tons below last year's drought-withered grain production.

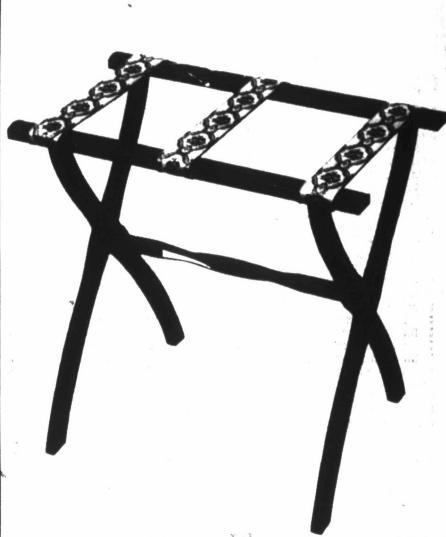

U.S. tobacco harvest is expected to be larger than 1979's crop

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says prospects for this year's tobacco harvest declined slightly in the last month but that the crop still is expected to be about 17 percent larger than in 1979.

Total production - mostly made up of flue-cured and burley types - is expected to be about 1.78 billion pounds, compared to 1.53 billion last year. A month ago, officials estimated the output at 1.79 billion pounds.

Based on Nov. 1 indications, the flue-cured crop was estimated at 1.1 billion pounds, up 16 percent from last year, and burley at 555 million pounds, up 25 percent, the department's Crop Reporting Board said Monday.

Home burglar alarms sales are really soaring

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Once every 10 seconds, a home burglary occurs somewhere in the United States, a statistic that makes it seem it's only a matter of time until the thieves drop in at your place.

Little wonder that sales of home alarms are soaring.

Homeowners can spend as little or as much as they want on security - 39 cents for a package of window decals that falsely proclaim the house to be protected by a guard service, to thousands of dollars a month for sophisticated electronic systems and real

Experts say a rough rule of thumb for homeowners is 1 to 2 percent of the market value of the house and its contents - or $1,000 to $2,000 for every

The cost of a specific home alarm system depends on a number of factors, including the size, location and physical layout of a house, the nature of the valuables to be protected, the degree of security desired and the homeowner's general lifestyle - how visible is the wealth?

The cost of a home security system also depends in large part on the psychology of the buyer - and when the purchase takes place.

'Many people who buy residential security buy it after having an incident and they buy it in a period of stress and will tend to overprotect," says Pat Munro of ADT Inc., a leading residential and commercial security company

We try to discourage them from that, because no matter how much you spend, nothing is foolproof. Unless the homeowner knows of a really factual threat above and beyond the normal thing of someone just wanting to rip them off, they should not overprotect because it gets exorbitant."

The simplest and cheapest alarms start at about $10 for battery-powered devices that go off when they're disturbed. These alarms are basically noisemakers, depending on sound to either frighten the intruder away or bring help

The next level of alarm is one which signals for help, usually through a leased telephone line connected directly to the nearest police station. However, authorities say at least 95 percent of alarms triggered this way are false and many communities have begun to discourage their use.

After a police survey showed that 99.1 percent of the alarms at their headquarters were false, the city of Thousand Oaks imposed a policy "blacklisting" homes and businesses whose alarms cried wolf too often.

Police were authorized to ignore alarms coming from locations that had turned in three false alarms in 30 days or four in a month. Other cities, Los Angeles among them, have enacted ordinances to fine repeat of-

The third kind of system signals a central station staffed by the alarm company. With these systems, an alarm company employee calls the home after an alarm is sounded and checks on the situation. If anything is out of the ordinary, the employee calls the police.

Inexpensive alarms are available at most hardware or electronics stores and do-it-yourself kits that allow consumers to wire their own homes are also popular. Some of the larger companies in the residential security business are ADT, Honeywell, Wells Fargo and Dictagraph

Most home alarm systems include smoke detectors, although many homeowners have chosen to purchase and install these types of alarms se-

Reagan's coattails pull Barry through

By LES SCHLANGEN Associated Press Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — It's been nearly 30 years since Republican Sen. Barry Goldwater, who won a fifth term by a squeaky tight vote, needed anybody's coattails to give him an election edge in Arizona.

But the 71-year-old Goldwater acknowledged in a post-election interview that Ronald Reagan's landslide victory in the presidential election probably nudged him across the line just ahead of hard-charging Democrat Bill Schulz, a 49-year-old multimillionaire Phoenix apartment deve-

"I don't think there's any question that it helped me, just like it was with Ike the first time," said Goldwater in an interview Friday.

Back in 1952, Goldwater parlayed his pioneer family name (Goldwater's department store) and a term on the Phoenix City Council as part of the Charter reform ticket into an upset victory, by fewer than 7,000 votes, over Democrat Ernest McFarland, the Senate majority leader. The symbol-to-be of national conservatism never denied his debt to the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower for his ride into the U.S. Senate.

except for his disastrous presiden tial campaign in 1964, it had been easy riding in Arizona until last week's face-off with Schulz, who fearlessly challenged the legend of Goldwater's invincibility and his usefulness to the state as a mostly absentee senator.

It was late into the day following the election, after absentee ballots were counted, before Goldwater came up a winner by about 9,600 votes.

"It was a tough race and he (Schulz) ran a good campaign, consistently beating on the question of my health and age," said Goldwater. "He put a question in the minds of people who didn't know me.

Of major importance, said Goldwater, was Arizona's rapid growth -"with 800,000 new people since my last run. I'm an unknown quantity to them.'

"I sort of expected it would be close," he said. "My pollster showed me four or five points ahead, but there was the unknown.

As for his health, Goldwater readily concedes all of his aches and pains, but counters with his passing his 51st physical to fly the nation's top jets as a major general in the Air Force

"Sure, I had a new hip put in six years ago, and I've got an infected bone in my leg that has to be treated every two days," he said. "I did that on the campaign, but I'll bet there are few of those who wonder about my health who could pass my flight physi-

He's no longer the physically pow-erful Goldwater of the free-swinging stride and his hearing is less acute. He's still feisty about too much government, unswerving in his devotion to the military but he rarely terrorizes his conservative audiences with gloom-and-doom socialism. In fact, he thinks welfarism is probably here to stay but needs some cleaning up.

"The one area that has concerned me for years is how to handle the welfare state," he said. "I know that sounds strange coming from a conservative, but it can't be abolished. What we've got to do is fix it to where those who need help get it and get rid of those who live off the govern-

One thing Goldwater doesn't want to see is a replay of the riots that hit some of the nation's cities in the

Asked if he felt President-elect Reagan would see things his way in working to heal the alienation which led to the burning of Watts and Detroit, Goldwater replied bluntly, "I'm sure he does but if he doesn't he'll learn it in a helluva hurry.'

The mellowed Goldwater, however, is no less vulnerable to gaffes, especially when he tries to appease his hard-line conservatives and still appear reasonable.

He got caught during the campaign on the issue of abortion, a subject he wishes "would just go away." He assured his anti-abortion constituency he would now support a "human life amendment," but later hedged to allow for rape or incest.

He finally came back with a policy statement that he opposed use of taxpayer funds for abortions.

Goldwater also says his old friend, Sen. J. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., the next Senate Judiciary chairman, won't get far with his pledge to push through a constitutional amendment banning abortion.

"The American people won't stand for it, we've always had it and we always will even if we had the amendment," said Goldwater.

A question that touches a very sensitive spot in Goldwater is whether he really intends to go the full six years of his term, which will make him 77.

Arizona's Republican leaders put extreme heat on Goldwater to run again to avoid the intra-party fight with ultraconservatives that cost the GOP a U.S. Senate seat in 1976

Goldwater had strongly hinted that he was ready to come home to Arizona to stay, or as he put it - to 'chase rattlesnakes and rabbits in

Reports persist that the deal was cut for him to stay on for three years, and then step down and "let it (the intra-party fight between the ultra conservative wing and the Goldwater faction) happen" after the GOP tries to regain the seat lost to Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., in 1982.

'That's a damn lie," Goldwater responded. "I never started anything in my life I didn't intend to finish and that goes for this term in the Sen-

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — A Marine Corps officer was killed early Saturday when he was accidentally ejected from a jet fighter plane at Shepherd Air Force Base, an Air Force spokesmen said.

The spokesman said the plane — an F-4 phantom jet fighter — was preparing to take off when the accident occured. The plane had landed at the base Friday night during a crosscountry flight, he said.

The aircraft was based at the El Toro Marine Corps air station in California. The name of the victim, who was the radar intercept officer on the plane, was withheld pending notification of relatives.

The dead officer was from Brooklyn, N.Y., said Sgt. Terri Widlak, at the El Toro air station.

Lift restrictions

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran on Saturday lifted restrictions on foreign journalists, including American and British reporters wishing to cover the Iran-Iraq war, the official Iranian news agency Pars said, quoting what it called "reliable sources."

The brief report carried by Pars said reporters wishing to travel to Iran can pick up visas at Iranian embassies and consulates abroad.

The text of the Pars report read: "Pars News Agency quotes a reliable source as saying that members of the foreign media wishing to travel to Iran to cover events at the warfronts will be able to obtain the necessary visas from the embassies and consulates of the Islamic Republic of Iran abroad."

American journalists, who had been in Iran covering developments in U.S. hostage crisis, were barred from the country last spring.

"For instance, he memorized how many rows of drinks he had. I didn't. I turn one upright and one upside down instead of having markers between them, and I have found that that works real well. Poland's largest union prepared to call for strike

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A spokesman for Solidarity, Poland's largest independent trade union, said Saturday it was prepared to call for "strike readiness" in the Gdansk area if negotiations involving teachers and health workers are not resolved by Monday.

A stalemate at an industrial center in the south added to this Soviet-bloc nation's simmering labor turmoil, and union sources reported 90 coalminers were on a hunger strike at a mine near Jastrzebie. The sources said the miners, members of an independent union, were protesting a meeting there of the state-controlled miners' union.

Andrezej Kolodziej, a Solidarity spokesman, spoke of "strike readiness" as talks began between a government commission led by Industry Minister Andrzej Jedynak and representatives of the teachers, health workers and cultural office employ-

The talks were being held at the district government headquarters in the Baltic city of Gdansk, the center of last summer's strike wave that gave rise to the independent union movement. The building has been occupied since Nov. 7 by about 120 professionals demanding more pay and greater state investment in their

One union source said the government had offered an immediate across-the-board salary increase of $32 a month and another $10 per month in July and he expected an agreement would be reached.

IN THE SOUTH, sources in the city of Czestochowa said a "state of emergency" declared last Monday by the local governor to prevent a threatened strike remained in effect despite an appeal by union leaders to Communist Party chief Stanislaw Another Solidarity spokesman, Wieslaw Czarnecki, said the central government had invited union representatives to Warsaw to discuss the controversial order issued by Gov. Miroslaw Wierzbicki. The order, issued in advance of a pro-union supreme court ruling that ended the strike threat, banned strikes at area factories and suspended Solidarity operations in the industrial center of some 250,000 people.

Czarnecki said the union would insist that a delegation be sent to Czestochowa to study the situation first hand. Solidarity officials in Warsaw confirmed that workers in the Czestochowa area had been alerted to prepare for a strike at short notice if efforts to resolve the confrontation

Union officials have demanded that Wierzbicki be fired if he refuses to rescind the order.

Solidarity leader Lech Walesa discussed the situation in Czestochowa during a two-hour meeting Friday night with Kania. Walesa was in Warsaw for the second meeting of a joint government-union commission that is preparing a new labor law to codify many of the concessions won by workers in the summer strikes.

A source said the session produced agreement on several points, including conditions under which unions could be dissolved. The source said the draft bill stipulates that unions could be dissolved only by their own resolution or if membership fell below

WALESA ISSUED AN appeal Saturday for workers to refrain from wage negotiations with the government until a formula for coordinated talks could be worked out. Sources said the appeal was aimed at textile workers in Lodz, miners in Jastrzebie and auto industry workers around Lublin demanding higher pay.

In a related development, the government announced Saturday that independent student unions would be permitted to operate on university campuses. Janusz Gorski, minister of science, higher education and technology, told the official news agency PAP his ministry would be responsi-ble for registering the new organiza-

Dissident sources reported the arrest of an organizer of last Tuesday's demonstration on the 62nd anniversary of Poland's post-World War I reconstitution. The Committee for Social Self Defense said Wojciech Ziembinski, 55, was arrested Thursday and charged with insulting Poland and her allies, and membership in a conspitaorial group.

At least a dozen other surrogate moms exist

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A physician who supervised the first known birth of a child from a paid surrogate mother said Saturday that 12 to 15 other surrogates are pregnant as part of his program.

'These women, all surrogates, are anticipating a delivery in the next few months," Dr. Richard M. Levin said at a news conference. "None of this would have been possible without Elizabeth Kane.'

Elizabeth Kane is a fictitious name adopted by a woman who gave birth Nov. 9 to an 8-pound-10-ounce boy for a fee. Mrs. Kane, who had been artificially inseminated with the sperm of a Louisville man, terminated her parental rights to the child at the Jefferson Hall of Justice and the child was turned over to the man and his wife.

"I see my program as a viable alternative for childless couples,' Levin said. He said no fee was paid to him or to Surrogate Parenting Associates Inc., of which he is president.

Levin said he understood Mrs. Kane received something less than $10,000 for acting as a surrogate. "I don't know the exact figure because that was between her and the couple who got the child," he said.

Levin said the organization will charge $20,000 as a package fee to cover medical costs, expenses and a fee for the surrogate mother. "I expect this idea to catch on in other states. I have already been contacted by people in California,"

Mrs. Kane, a 37-year-old housewife from an unidentified suburb in Illinois, wasn't present at the conference because she was "pretty homesick," Levin said. "I couldn't convince her to Katie Brophy, attorney for the organization, said she believes that in the near future "state legislatures are going to pass laws on the surrogate program. It's a wonderful thing and a benefit to childless couples.'

Levin invited Kentucky officials to contact him with suggestions on how the program might be run, so "we may continue to serve without embarrassing the people of this commonwealth.

Levin said he has had no correspondence from the state attorney general's office, nor did he expect legal problems in the future.

Before leaving Louisville Friday, Mrs. Kane, who has three other children, said, "If I were 10 years younger, I'd definitely do it again. I don't think a woman should have to spend the rest of her life suffering and wanting a child just because her ovaries aren't functioning properly. Mine

Levin said Mrs. Kane's husband supported her actions, and added that she was "free of any emotional problems surrounding the birth."

Levin said there would be no publicity about future cases. "We don't want any and we were fortunate that Mrs. Kane agreed to step forward and talk," he said.

Hunter charged in death of woman in automobile

PALESTINE, Texas (AP) - An Austin man who told deputies he was going deer hunting was charged with murder Saturday after a woman riding in a car was killed when a bullet from a high-powered rifle struck her in the head.

David Howell Wade, 28, of Austin, was arraigned before Justice of the Peace John Eady. Bond was set at $100,000.

Anderson County Sheriff Roy Herrington said Vickey Douthit Knowles 28, of Palestine, was dead on arrival Friday at Anderson County Memorial Hospital from a single gunshot wound

Herrington said the victim and Larry Huddleston, 31, of Elkhart, were riding in a car on U.S. 79 near east of Palestine Friday about 6 p.m. when a bullet from a high-powered rifle struck the car's passenger side window and hit Ms. Knowles in the

The sheriff said the bullet crashed through the window on the driver's side, but Huddleston was unhurt.

Wade, who later told deputies he was going deer-hunting, was stopped a short time after the shooting by a Department of Public Safety Trooper Kenneth Buckhanan who had stopped him for a traffic violation.

The trooper arrested the suspect when he heard a description of the car involved in the shooting broadcast on his police radio. A 30-30 rifle was found in the suspect's car.

EDFFOR'S NOTE: Following the the lirst of a ten-part series of excerpts rom "Where is the Rest of Me?", an autobiography by president-elect tonaid Reagan with Richard G.

By RONALD REAGAN with RICHARD G. HUBLER

The story begins with the closeup of bottom in the small town of Tampi-o, Illinois, on February 6, 1911.

My face was blue from screaming, my bottom was red from whacking, and my father claimed afterward that he was white when he said shakily, For such a little bit of a fat Dutchnan, he makes a hell of a lot of noise.

"I think he's perfectly wonderful," said my mother weakly. "Ronald Wilon Reagan."

Those were their first opinions of me. As far as I know, they never changed during their lifetimes. As for nyself, ever since my birth my nickname has been "Dutch" and I have een particularly fond of the colors hat were exhibited - red, white, and blue. I have not been uncomfortable on the various occasions when I have had an overwhelming impulse to brandish them.

MY FATHER WAS John Edward Reagan (always pronounced Ragan), a first-generation black Irishman. He loved shoes. He sold them as a clerk, managed shoe departments nd his own stores. He even studied correspondence courses about how to sell more sabots, and spent hours analyzing the bones of the foot. He was a man who might have made a brilliant career out of selling but he lived in a time - and with a weakness - that made him a frustrated man.

I was 11 years old the first time I came home to find my father flat on his back on the front porch and no one there to lend a hand but me. He was irunk, dead to the world. I stood over him for a minute or two. I wanted to let myself in the house and go to bed and pretend he wasn't there. Oh, I wasn't ignorant of his weakness. I don't know at what age I knew what the occasional absences or the loud roices in the night meant, but up till now my mother, Nelle, or my older brother, Nell, handled the situation.

But someplace along the line to each of us, I suppose, must come that first moment of accepting responsibility. I felt myself fill with grief for my father at the same time I was eling sorry for myself. I could feel entment against him. That was lle's doing. With all the tragedy bouts with the dark demon in the she told Neil and myself over - that we should love and help ur father and never condemn him for ing that was beyond his con-what happened to him after that. He put his principles into practice. On the occasion when that early film classic, "The Birth of a Nation," came to town, my brother and I were the only kids not to see it.

"It deals with the Ku Klux Klan against the colored folks," Jack said sternly, "and I'm damned if anyone in this family will go see it." Years later in the dark Depression years when he was trying to earn a buck on the road as a shoe salesman, he checked into a small-town hotel and signed the register. "Fine," said the clerk, reading his name. "You'll like it here, Mr. Reagan. We don't permit a Jew in the place."

My father picked up his suitcase again. "I'm a Catholic," he said furiously, "and if it's come to the point where you won't take Jews, you won't take me either." Since it was the only hotel in town, he spent the night in his car in the snow. He contracted near-pneumonia and a short time later had the first heart attack of the several that led to his death.

He was a restless man, burning with ambition to succeed. When I left home at 17 to go to college, we had never lived in a house we owned: it was 20 years afterward that I was able to bring him out to Hollywood and present him with the clear deed to a small house and lot, the first piece of real estate he had ever owned. It was the most satisfying gift of my

If he was occasionally vulgar, she tried to raise the tone of the family. Nelle Wilson Reagan had the conviction that everyone loved her just because she loved them. My father's cynicism never made the slightest impression on her, while I suspect her sweetness often undermined his practical viewpoint about the world.

My existence turned into one of those rare Huck Finn-Tom Sawyer idylls. There were woods and mysteries, life and death among the small creatures, hunting and fishing; those were the days when I learned the real riches of rags. Out of town, one way, there was a clear-bottomed creek, the other way, there was a deep and treacherous canal which we always used for swimming.

The rough reality of disorganized play had gradually invaded my dream world, supplanting relics and stuffed animals (my idol was the local taxidermist). I got a wild exhilaration out of jumping feet first into a football pile-up. It was junior mayhem, but I usually managed to time my charge so that I was in one of the upper layers of bodies. As a result, I had a collection of the largest purplish-black bruises possible. More than once, I must have been a walking coagula-

Committee says 'a good American is hard to find'

By LAURA RICHARDSON

DALLAS (AP) — A member of a committee accouring the country for businessmen to fill the top 300 jobs in the Reagan administration says it won't be easy to find executives willing to accept the posts.
"You gotta be a really dedicated

American to take these jobs," said Paul R. Ray, head of a Fort Worth-based executive search firm. "It's not easy, you know. You're confronted with the Congress, and you got people throwing eggs at you all time."

Ray and five other men on the "ad hoc committee" met with Reagan staffers in Washington on Thursday, Ray said in a telephone interview from his Fort Worth office.

Ray said a good candidate for Secretary of Defense would be Tom Phillips, chairman of the board of Raytheon Co., an aerospace and telecommunications corporation that annually receives about $1 billion worth of defense contracts. Dave Lewis, chairman of the board of giant defense contractor General Dynamics, would be another prime choice for the defense department job.

"And it would be the same with the Interior Department, that deals with land, minerals, fish, forests, and so on," Ray said. "I wouldn't think an evavironmentalist would go very well in that job. You might think of someone in the timber industry, say, or the

His employees take first priority

Branson has plans to boost moral as a whole

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series of two Sunday articles on Midland's new hospital administrators.

By SUE FAHLGREN

Ray Branson, Midland Memorial Hospital's new administrator, said his first priority will always be the hospital's employees.

"I still view working with the employees — gaining their respect, making them feel like I'm here to help them — is still my first priority," Branson said. "Management only does so much of the work and the rest comes from the employees."

Branson begins his fourth week as MMH administrator, replacing former administrator Wayne E. Ulrich and interim administrator Robert Bash. Coming here from South Community Hospital, a 390-bed acute care community hospital in Oklahoma City, Branson was the executive vice president of that facility.

Aside from implementation of the wage and salary study findings, Branson plans for several other changes to enhance employee morale.

Branson, who has met several times already with employees and nurses, said he advocates meeting employees in small groups to discuss "some of their concerns." Based on meetings he already has had, Branson said, "We have several changes in mind that we believe are in the employees' best interest."

The 36-year-old former pharmacist said he would like to "start with the internal operations" in terms of restructuring the hospital under his leadership. "And perhaps some of the employees have a bad image of the hospital" because of media coverage on the hospital's internal deficien-

Branson said, "I feel a strong sense of responsibility" about the hospital's image. "I hope to have a relationship with the press that accentuates the positive aspects of this hospital. Continual bad press affects the morale of employees and affects the attitude of the community we're here to serve."

He said helping the employees' morale would help the patients' morale. "You can't expect outsiders to have a good image of the hospital if the employees don't," Branson said.

For this reason, Branson plans to "randomly select employees and meet with them on a regularly scheduled basis to determine their con-

Catholic bishops display surge of confidence, verve

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Roman Catholic bishops of the United States are displaying a surge of confidence and verve, acting boldly on various controversial issues in the name of faith and a more just American so-

They're also worried about what several of them term a new militaristic mood in the country.

"There's unquestionably a greater feeling of urgency among them that they must address the cause of peace," said Archbishop John R. Roach of Minneapolis-St. Paul, the new president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

In the present climate of rival nuclear weaponry buildups, he foresees efforts for arms control and world peace as a "major preoccupation" of the church in the time immediately

Church thinkers are beginning to question whether the traditional concepts of a "just war" are valid any-

BUT ASIDE FROM this heightened concern, voiced in a succession of speeches at the bishops' four-day annual meeting which closed Thursday, the bishops showed their nerve and drive by taking several innovative, and sometimes controversial stands.

Among other things, they spoke out strongly against capital punishment, reinstituted in recent years in this country, saying it must be abolished to "break the cycle of violence" involved in taking a life-for-a-life.

"We know this isn't a popular position in these times," said Bishop Edward D. Head of Buffalo, N.Y. "People are afraid." But the bishops insist that "vengeance" is not the intelligent, compassionate - nor even effective — way to deter crime.

On a subsidiary level, they also saw their stand as making more consistent their wider "pro-life" positions, including their opposition to abortion, work for peace, and help to the weak and poor.

In regard to abortions, several bishops say the conservative shift seen for the new Reagan administration may help secure a ban on such operations, but the outlook for the other causes appears bleaker.

Whatever the situation, the bishops vow they'll keep defending life and its sacred worth, in all cases, whether it involves the indigent black on death row, the aged, the impoverished, the retarded or the unborn.

PROBABLY THE CONFERENCE action that will have the widest impact on the hometown parish level throughout the country is the bishops' decision for taking "sexist" language out of Catholic worship.

They became the first national Catholic hierarchy in the world to take the step, which is subject to expected Vatican approval.

It would replace male-only references to "man" and "men" with words such as "us," the "human race," "your people" in prayers used in celebrating Holy Communion, the heart of Catholic worship.

Catholic women leaders hailed the move, saying it was much needed to make women feel accepted as "full, equal" participants in worship, instead of their being left out by the exclusively male usages.

The bishops also whipped the massive volume of other actions, adopting for the first time comprehensive statements on Catholic higher education and on Marxist communism, contrasting it philosophically with Christianity and calling it the major opposing "religion" of modern

"We were overloaded with documents," said Roach, an open, unaffected and progressive churchman, whose swift election as the church's chief U.S. spokesman was itself a mark of the bishops' stepped-up concern with social issues, as well as for a reconciling touch in church dis-

One matter that kept coming up in news conferences was the status of the many Catholics not abiding by the church's ban on contraception, and the theologians challenging it. Roach made plain that they aren't excluded from communion, even though the bishops will keep working to gain acceptance of the teaching.

AMONG FORMAL actions by the conference was a foward-looking declaration on lay members, saying they have attained fuller maturity in the church, have greater freedom, responsibility, their own authority and a share in the ministry with clergy. With Catholicism, under Pope John Paul II, seen in some quarters as losing enthusiasm for ecumenical work for reunion with other denominations, the bishops issued a ringing declaration that the efforts are advancing at a revolutionary pace, marking the "dawn of a new era."

A statement by Pope John Paul was included, saying the start of the next century "must find us united in full communion.'

Overall, the conference radiated a "hopeful, positive air," said Bishop Albert H. Ottenweller of Steubenville, Ohio. "We feel a groundswell among our people for spiritual values."

Attorneys in Klan trial say they expected verdict sooner

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) - Defense attorneys in the murder trial of six Ku Klux Klansmen and Nazis say they didn't expect to be waiting this long for a verdict.

The jury has been out since Nov. 7 and when jurors went home for the weekend Friday afternoon, they showed no signs of being near a ver-

Attorneys said the long deliberations might be explained by the judge's lengthy instructions to the jury.

The six defendants are charged with five counts each of first-degree murder in the shooting deaths of five Communist Workers Party members at a "Death to the Klan" rally in Greensboro on Nov. 3, 1979. They have pleaded innocent to those counts and to charges of felonious rioting.

In his three-hour instructions to the dury before deliberations began, Superior Court Judge James M. Long told the panel not to take an early vote on the guilt or innocence of the defendants. He cautioned that an early vote "may jeopardize a unanimous vote in

"I believe the judge is probably pleased with the jury's progress.' defense attorney Hal Greeson said Friday. "He told them not to try to reach a quick verdict and they're taking it to heart."

Greeson, who represents Klansman Coleman Blair Pridmore, declined to speculate on when a verdict might be returned.

"If you're asking me when I expect it, I'll say I expected it last Monday,"

Defense lawyer Robert Cahoon said he had looked for a verdict "sooner than this. I have no idea what to expect now as far as time."

cerns and to give them information about the hospital."

Branson said, "The administrator can't speak to employee concerns if you don't know what they are." Branson said he wanted to be sure "that the employees as well as the people have a sense of pride" in the hospital. There are a lot of high expectations of the administrator being of assistance to them,"Branson said. "I suppose some people had been wondering what attracted me to this hospital," he said. Branson was contacted by the search firm employed by Midland Memorial to find a replacement for outgoing administrator Branson, who had been looking for a chief executive position, said he had been contacted by several hospitals for that position. He said the "biggest asset (in Midland) is the friendly people.'

"I have my work cut out for me," he admitted. But, he added, "I was attracted here because it certainly did represent a challenge. I have a commitment to Midland Memorial (for it) to become as good a hospital as our service can make it."

He continued, "There is no question that Midland Memorial is the major provider of health care in Midland."

Branson said he felt Midland Memorial Hospital should be in competition with Parkview Hospital. "Anybody that provides care to patients in Midland represents competition. And we're going to protect our interests, just as I'm sure they (Parkview) will. That doesn't mean you can't have co-operative operations, but competition is good. Competition keeps all of us on our toes. It makes us try harder."

Branson's "tries" with the internal operations of MMH should be aided by his experience with operational responsibilities. At South Community, he was in charge of operations for ancillary and support departments, financial management, nursing and personnel services. His financial background includes overseeing budget preparation and budget presentations to the hospital and board. In addition, he was responsible for hospital development, marketing and community relations, construction projects and medical staff

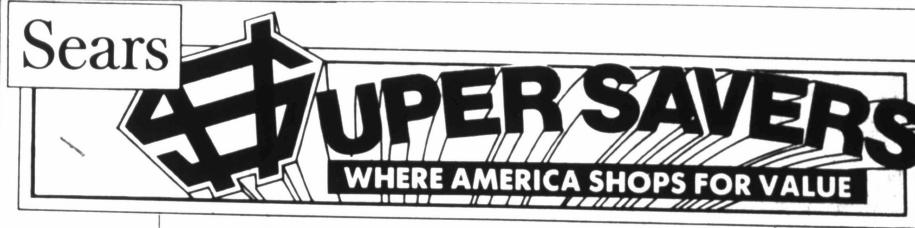

A 1973 master of science graduate from Trinity University in San Antonio in health care administration, Branson was instrumental in executing /a $17 million construction program and making the additions produce revenue a year ahead of plans.

Branson said he left pharmacy (he had intended to be a pharmacologist) because he had been "bitten by one too many rats." Having studied his undergraduate years at University of Kansas and later working at McBride Clinic, Bone and Joint Hospital in Oklahoma City as chief pharmacist, Branson said, "I got tired of laboratory work. To me, research would be frustrating," he said. "I prefer the results of working with people.

His wife, Meg Branson, is a "very active volunteer." She is involved with the Junior League, the hospital auxiliary and a museum board in Oklahoma, Branson said. The couple has two children.

Car import limits still possible, U.S. warns Japan

By WILLIAM CHAPMAN The Washington Post

TOKYO - American trade repreentatives Saturday cautioned Japan not to become complacent because of a favorable U.S. government ruling on its high-volume automobile ex-

They warned Japanese officials that there is still significant political pressure within the United States to force restrictions on auto imports, and urged them to take steps that might dilute that pressure.

Two days of economic talks between high-ranking officials of both sides ended with no new agreements but none had been expected, in part because the U.S. leaders are serving out a lame-duck administration and Japan is waiting to see how their sors approach trad3 issues.

Robert Hormats, deputy U.S. trade representative, said the Japanese had been told that support is growing in Congress for a bill authorizing the president to negotiate what is called an orderly marketing agreement to restrict the volume of Japanese cars imported into the United States.

Hormats and Undersecretary of State-Richard Cooper reported that they had urged the Japanese government to encourage two measures by private Japanese companies that might lessen the pressure.

One would be a promise to increase significantly the import into Japan of U.S.-made automobile parts. The other would encourage Japanese auto investments in the United States, principally through tie-ups between major auto producers in both coun-

Their warnings followed last week's ruling by the U.S. International Trade Commission that Japanese imports are not the major cause of the American industry's sales slump that has caused widespread unemployment. The decision came as a great relief to Japanese manufacturers.

Since that ruling, Hormats told reporters, a number of U.S. interests favoring restrictions have moved be-hind the bill introduced by Sen. Donald Riegle Jr., D-Mich.

Japan's principal representative, Kyoaki Kikuchi, deputy minister for gn affairs, acknowledged that the favorable U.S. ruling did not mean nat a "political solution" to the auto said Japan is following progress of

According to one source, the government here is preparing to respond favorably to requests that Japanese companies invest more capital in the U.S. auto industry and increase purchases of Am3rican-made parts. few of which are imported into this country. The response may be made public in a few days when hearings open in Washington on the Riegle

There is no assurance, however, that the Japanese companies would follow their government's lead on those two matters. So far, the major auto producers here have hoped that political pressures would subside gradually in the United States because the Japanese share of the U.S. car market has declined in recent mo 5hs. 3According to Hormats, the decline was from 23.8 percent in July to 16.6 percent in October.

Industry analysts attribute most of that decrease to market forces, including higher prices for Japanese cars and competition this fall from Detroit's new smaller passenger cars. Some experts, however, think the Japanese carmarkers may be restraining exports in order to dilute U.S. pressures for legal restrictions.

Meanwhile, there were indications that Japan and the United States may be nearing agreement on two othbfbntrade issues.

The major one is the American demand that the Japanese government open up for foreign bidding its large annual purchases of communications equipment.

A Japanese plan for opening up part of those purchases is now being studied by the U.S. government and private suppliers to determine whether it would in fact give American companies a shot at the huge market, now restricted to Japanese firms.

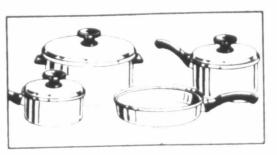

Hormats told reporters Saturday morning there has been a change in the Japanese attitude in the last six months. "They were dead set against it before," he said.

Hormats also said the two counties seem to be "on the threshold" of an agreement that would give U.S. tobacco companies more access to the Japanese market. Those companies now share only about 1 percent of that Hormats said the issue is an important, symbolic one because the market is controlled by a Japanese tobacco monopoly corporation over which the government holds direct control.

Peace Corps closing operations in Brazil

By PETER EISNER Associated Press Writer

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) - The Peace Corps is quietly closing down operations in Brazil, rejected by a government master plan that prefers high level technical assistance to the social rehabilitation programs offered-by the American volunteer

All but one of the 24 remaining Peace Corps volunteers in this South American nation are scheduled to leave at the end of their work contracts this year and the last worker is to depart early in 1981.

The Brazilian Foreign Ministry says that in consultation with the Ministry of Planning, it has chosen not to approve new contracts for Peace Corps programs "because this is not the type of technical assistance we think is most important to the nation at this time."

Government officials say there should be no political connotation attached to the decision, noting that volunteer programs from France and West Germany also may be affected by government priorities.

But U.S. sources say they must conclude that either there is a political reason for rejecting the free help or else that Brazil — the world's eighth largest industrial power — thinks there is a stigma attached to having a program usually identified with underdevelopment.

"Brazil is having a lot of trouble getting financing from some banks and international agencies," said one informed American source, who asked not to be named. "So, if they're angry, the Peace Corps happened to be a convenient hand to slap."

Elsewhere in Latin America the Peace Corps continues to play a part in go % ernment sponsored projects, almost 20 years after President John. F. Kennedy's call for a volunteer program to provide American know-how as part of its foreign aid.

There are 150 Peace Corps volun-teers in Paraguay, working on health and agricultural projects. Ecuador has 200 volunteers and Chile has 100 nvolved in government and private development programs.

"Government and private agencies give the volunteers high marks and contrue to ask for more," said David W. Joslyn, Peace Corps director in U.S. officials say one of the 13 contracts left unapproved by the Brazilian government would have brought 500 volunteers to Brazil for a regional 500 volunteers to Brazil for a regional occupation therapy and special education pilot program in the states of Minas Gerais, Espirito Santo and Ceara. The project was requested and endorsed by the Brazilian National Center for Special Education and educators say there is a need for social workers, especially in the country's poor and underdeveloped north-Among the other programs not accepted by the Foreign Ministry was a plan to send trained volunteers to work in mental clinics and a project to train aides to work with unwed "We've been told that Brazil today is producing only about 20 percent of the social workers it needs to conduct special education programs here," said Phil Lopez, a former volunteer now serving as Peace Corps director in Brazil. "They just can't do it them-

No formal announcement about departure of the volunteers has been made and Peace Corps officials say existing U.S.-Brazilian agreements would permit resumption of activity whenever Brazil is prepared to accept new volunteers.
The nation of 123 million suffers from problems caused by the vast inequality between the small number of wealthy Brazilians and the estimated 50 percent of the population forced to live on no more than the minimum legal wage that is the equivalent of about $8 a month.

The government of President Joao Figueiredo recognizes the problems, but prevailing economic thinking is that inequality will be solved as Brazil increases its industrial and agricultural output and creates new reve-

Brazil is seeking technical agreements for construction projects, financing for the development of its mineral wealth and joint ventures to raise the level of technology.

U.S. and Brazilian officials basically disagree on the nature of the Peace Corps. The Foreign Ministry refers to it as technical assistance, while the Americans say they consider the Peace Corps an "intercultural ex-person that is more capable and more motivated in dealing with the special problems involved. That's what we call transfer of technology."

Peace Corps officials say there have never been complaints about its operations in Brazil. "The Peace Corps has had more than 6,000 volunteers in Brazil since it came here in less and it has an excellent record." 1962 and it has an excellent record," said Edward Elly, spokesman for the U.S. Embassy. Tucson couples' deaths ruled murder, suicide

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The deaths of a husband and wife — found shot to death behind a locked bedroom door that bore a note saying "Don't come in here. Call Police." - was ruled a murder-suicide Saturday by a

Two teen-age children of the dead woman found the note when they got home from school Friday and got a neighbor to call police.

Deputy Chief Medical Examiner Valerie Rao ruled Roberta Desilits, about 35, a homicide victim and Donald Schwering, about 44, a suicide. She said both had suffered gunshot wounds to the head. Results of tests for drugs would not be available "for a while," she said.

Desilits and Schwering, were married despite their different last names, said Pima County Sheriff's Detective Robert Lough. "It's my understanding that she was married before and retained the name when her first husband died."

Mrs. Desilits, a hospital nurse who worked nights, was filing for divorce from Schwering, a building contractor and the stepfather of the teen-agers, according to Lough and Don Aros, the neighbor who called

Chris Desilits, 15, and her 13-year-old brother, Dave, called Aros after finding the note on the door, investigators said. "When I got here the kids were standing outside," Aros said. "They showed me the note. They said it was their father's handwriting. I then called the sheriff's office, and they came and found them both in the Pima County Sheriff's Deputy Gary Thomas said the couple was found dead "laying on a bed in the master bedroom," and Lough said a handgun of undetermined ownership was found in the room.

Aros said investigators told him Schwering apparently shot Mrs. Desilits in the head as she slept, and then killed himself.

The teenagers were staying with "close friends and relatives," Saturday, Lough said.

Confined Italian countess released after 40 years

ROME (AP) - Police have freed a 65-year-old Italian countess who was locked up in a room of her ancestral home for 40 years, authorities said Saturday. Two of her brothers and a sister-in-law were arrested and charged with mistreating her, but one source indicated she may have been her own captor.

The woman, Giovanna Portapuglia, was said to be resting in good condition at a psychiatric hospital near the medieval home in Italy's northern town of Piacenza.

She was freed last week by police who are said to have overheard neighbors gossiping about her in a local bar. Police said they believed she had been held captive by the younger brothers and sister-in-law -Luigi Portapuglia, 56, his wife Maria, 52, and his brother Alfredo. Both men have titles of nobility, according to police.

The three were arrested Friday and charged with unlawful restraint and ill-treatment of Miss Portapuglia and are now in custody awaiting psychiatric examinations to determine if they are fit to stand trial.

But a police officer reached by telephone in Piacenza on Saturday said there were some indications the countess had locked herself up.

"She chose to live by herself," said the officer, who refused to identify himself by name.

On Friday, a different police officer in Piacenza, Cpl. Antonio Pavone, said "The people in the village say she went to bed with her father and they locked her up to punish her.

"We don't know if that is a true story. Other people say the family wanted her money," Pavone said. "We don't know if that's true either, or even if she had a lot of money.'

"It's worse then medieval," Pavone said. "They didn't even do things like this in the Middle Ages.'

Police said Miss Portapuglia was suffering from malnutrition when she was found. Her fingernails were so long they curled around her fingers. Human waste was spread around the

She was treated at a hospital in the village of Firenzuola and then transferred to a psychiatric hospital in nearby Piacenza

Police at first said they thought the countess was mentally retarded, but Pavone said she is of above average intelligence and graduated from a private boarding school.

"At the hospital they say she's okay, at least physically. They say she's talking well," Pavone said. "Her room was on a courtyard.

Now and again the peasants who worked on the farm saw her in the window," Pavone said. "They thought she was sick or crazy. They believed what the family told them.

"When people are rich, it's like that," he said. "The rich don't care about the affairs of the poor and the poor don't care about the affairs of

University says closure is collective punishment

RAMALLAH, Occupied West Bank (AP) — The all-Arab Bir Zeit University charged Saturday that Israeli authorities had used "collective punishment" in ordering a one-week closure of the university because it was sponsoring a Palestine Week exhibit.

Israel's military government of the occupied West Bank closed the school Friday, claiming that the Palestinian cultural exhibit was a political event which had not received the required permit from the military authorities.

"It is not a cultural event, but is political," the spokesman said. "It is held to identify with Palestinians in all the region and show that they stand strongly against the occupa-

The university administration issued a statement protesting an "act of collective punishment aimed at disrupting the functioning of an independent academic institution," and members of the faculty council conferred at the Ramallah home of the university's acting president, Gabi Baramki, on their next steps.

Held in three of the last four years, Bir Zeit's Palestine Week had become a focus of Palestinian nationalist spirit, and the university's campus itself has been a hotbed of anti-Israel agitation in times of tension in the West Bank of the Jordan River.

September, however, the campus has been quiet, although Bir Zeit and the two other West Bank Arab universities complain that Israeli authorities are taking new steps to control the faculties, students and curricula.

A military order issued last July required Bir Zeit, Bethlehem University and Al-Najah University in Nablus to report the names of all students, faculty members and administrators, and it also stipulated that all institutions of higher learning in the West Bank must apply for new operating licenses each year. The three schools have a total of 4,500 students, more than 1,000 of them enrolled at Bir Zeit.

All three universities have refused to comply, but at Bethlehem University officials complain that students and teachers have been stopped at army roadblocks and ordered to report to military government headquarters to receive permits to attend

Overcrowded classrooms a problem:

By DAVID CAMPBELL Staff Writer

Midland's elementary schools are facing crowded classroom conditions as a result of a 1970's baby boom and the city's economic climate.

And the crunch isn't expected to ease. By next year, conservative school district projections indicate an increase of 591 students.

This is in line with a recent trend in the Midland school system. This fall, for example, the schools found themselves with 631 more children in the kindergarten through sixth grade classes than what had been there the previous May, noted Garland Chapman, assistant school superintendent.

And by 1985-86, these projections indicate that 10,434 elementary-age children should be enrolled in the district with secondary schools starting to feel the pinch, all of which may mean some squeezing for elementary-age children in the district's 19 elementary schools and some portable buildings. Chapman noted the district anticipated a growth in elementary enrollments through an increasing birth rate, both local and national, several years ago.

During the mid-70's, the district was experiencing a decline in student enrollment. However, in the past two to three years, that trend has started to re-

Midland's healthy economic climate also helped to bring growth in the city's population which aided, somewhat, an increased elementary enrollment.

Thus far, Bowie, Burnet, Jones and South elementary schools are experiencing crowded conditions, explained Chapman. Other elementary schools are expected to have increased enrollments within the next three years, according to projections issued during an October board meeting. The district has a total of 382 classrooms. But, not all those classrooms are designated for regular

Of the 382 rooms, only 296 are available for regular instruction. The balance is used for special education, enrichment programs and federal programs, such as Title I and migrant, the October report

"At this point, we do not feel that any of our instructional programs are ineffective due to crowded conditions," Chapman said.

"However, the learning opportunities for boys and girls could be limited due to a lack of adequate classroom space."

The assistant superintendent noted "since 1966 there has been no new construction of an elementary school or added classroom space to existing elementary schools."

A year ago, voters said no to a $10.2 million bond issue which included a new elementary school. Although exact figures for construction of an elementary school are unavailable, its cost could be in the neighborhood of $2 million, said Chapman. If indications by the board of trustees at the last two board meetings are correct, Midland voters may be asked to approve a bond issue this year or next to construct a new elementary school.

Texas Education Agency visited the elementary school campuses. In its report, the members expressed concern about the crowded elementary gr school conditions.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Postal offiials have taken action against a halfozen firms charged with false repreentation in envelope-stuffing offers. Envelope stuffing is widely adverised as an at-home money-making poortunity. Battered Democrats are afflicted

By MARK SHIELDS The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — It began with the first exit poll on Nov. 4 and it hasn't stopped yet. Throughout Washington, every kind of analyst has been busy putting the battered Democrats under this microscope or onto that couch.

The early consensus holds that the Democrats are afflicted with an acute shortage of ideas, complicated by severely blurred vision. Undaunted, the Democrats, winners in just 10 of the 33 most recent Senate races, are right now girding for one more civil war - this one over the party chairmanship - in ther political leper colony.

By now, it has to be evident to even the most dedicated Democratic Carterphobes that the party's problems did not all arrive with Jimmy Carter and his Georgians. Nor will they simply depart when the president does.

The principal cerebral problem of the Democrats is not their shortage of innovative proposals, but the party's continuing surplus of ideological premises. Before the Democrats start the wholesale adoption color. What a visual! of fresh answers, they would be aise first to shed

In spite of some strong praise, some years back, for the ideal of participatory democracy, some adjustments were necessary in order to achieve justice. In the choosing of Democratic national convention delegates, the principle of representation had to b3 repealed. Sure, it was important to guarantee access. But the best way to do that, it turned out, was to guarantee an appropriate outcome for the whole process. Cotton Bowl trip next for Bears

HOUSTON (AP) - Walter Abercrombie scored on the second play of the game, Robert Bledsoe kicked field goals of 43, 24 and 33 yards Saturday and 12th-ranked Baylor, dubbed a second division team in pre-season, defeated Rice 16-6 to win its second Southwest Conference title in seven

Coach Grant Teaff, who led the Bears to their first title in 50 years in 1974, also led Baylor's charge into the dressing room where they were to accept an invitation to play in the Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day.

BAYLOR CLINCHED the title with a 7-0 SWC record and moved within one game of its first unbeaten SWC season in the school's history. The Bears are now 9-1 for the season, losing a non-conference game to San

Early in the third quarter, the Bears capitalized on a partially blocked Rice punt and drove to the Rice 7 where Bledsoe kicked a 24yarder for the final score.

The punt by Rice's Dale Walters was partially blocked by defensive end Charles Benson and traveled only 17 yards to the 50.

Abercrombie, Baylor's all-time leading rusher, picked up 114 yards in the first half, aided by his 79-yard game opening run. He picked up 28 yards in Baylor's 47-yard drive to Bledsoe's third-quarter field goal.

Robert Schooler second in state cross country

GEORGETOWN - Midland Lee's Robert Schooler saw his undefeated string of eight victories come to an end here Saturday on the campus of Southwestern University, but his second place finish in the State Championship Cross Country Meet is the best UIL finish by any Midland

Schooler, who had won all eight of his races this season heading into the cn. But it was a worthy match to lose to Kyle Wright of Conroe McCullough posted a time of 15 minutes and one second over the 5,000 meter course (just over 3 miles) to win the event. Wright was a repeat state titlist, and the heavy favorite in the meet.

SCHOOLER POSTED a time of 15: 10, probably his best time of the year, considering that this was the longest course of the season. Carlos Quiones of Killeen, the state AAAA mile champion last spring, Schooler may be the most improved athlete in the state over the last half-year. At the beginning of the track season last spring, Schooler was turning in around 4:40 in the mile. He has been beating that on his last mile in the three-mile cross country runs.

HE IMPROVED almost every week during the spring, and ended the season on a high note by pulling a stunning upset to win the District 5-5A mile title. He went into the race as a big underdog, many thinking he couldn't finish higher than fifth at the best.

Schooler still has track season to look forward to this year as a senior and the UIL has added the 2-mile run to the track circuit, an event Schooler may become one of the state's best again.

What's going on in Chicago front offices?

What's going on in Chicago? First, the Cubs front office announces it is in the market for fringe players, a commodity, at premium prices, that already abounds on the roster.

Next, the proposed announcement of a trade that would send National League batting champion Bill Buckner to San Francisco for Mike Ivie would indicate the Cubs are also in the market for rebellious, I-don'twant-to-play, I-want-more-money, play-me-or-trade-me types, another species with which the roster seems to abound...Jerry Martin, Dave King-man, and the rest. It's the type of player that Chicago in the past has made short rift of. When Ken Holtzman tired of Chicago, he was gone in a twinkling. Ferguson Jenkins indicat-ed he couldn't win more than 20-a-year in Wrigley Field and was traded. Bill Madlock didn't like the Wrigley and atmosphere, Bill North, Pete La-Cock, Manny Trillo, Bobby Murcer all expressed impatience or dissastisfaction and, presto! into thin air.

BUCKNER for Ivie? Even if Mike vere you're All-America boy, he's not the type you want for last year's National League batting champion. You trade a batting champion for a Vida Blue or Jack Clark, not a Mike Ivie. But, that evidently, is in line with the Cubs' established policy of pursuing mediocrity.

However, there is some question as

lohnson leads Pack to win, 96-36

By TERRY WILLIAMSON Sports Writer

It seemed hard to turn thoughts to basketball while entering the Midland High gym Saturday night, but it didn't take long for Herbert Johnson and his cast of thousands to turn thoughts to hardcourt images as the Bulldogs opened the season with a 96-36 victory over the Del Rio Rams.

From a game standpoint, it wasn't much. The Rams were never in the ball game, trailing 39 points by the half. But it was the show which gave cotton mouths to those who dared to think about the coming weeks of bas-

Washington Rose Bowl bound now

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Ray Horton's 73-yard punt return and Tom Flick's 10-yard scoring pass to Paul Skansi broke a 3-3 tie in the third quarter and propelled the Washington Huskies to a 20-10 victory over second-ranked Southern Cal Saturday and into the Rose Bowl

The unranked Huskies, 11-point underdogs, clinched the Pacific-10 Conference football title with a 5-1 league mark. Washington is 8-2 in all

The loss ended a 28-game undefeated streak for the Trojans, who dropped to 7-1-1 overall.

Southern Cal is 4-1-1 in Pac-10 play, but is one of five conference teams ineligible for the conference crown because of a one-year sanction for academic irregularities.

The opportunistic Washington defense forced eight turnovers, recovering four Trojan fumbles and making four interceptions, two by linebacker Tony Caldwell

Washington's victory oversha dowed a fine performance by Southern Cal tailback Marcus Allen, who rushed for 216 yards on 30 carries and also completed a 36-yard scoring pass to Jeff Simmons for the Trojans' only touchdown.

Southern Cal played the second half without starting quarterback Gordon Adams, who suffered a knee injury on the final series of the second quarter. His replacement, Scott Tinsley, threw three interceptions in the half

The contest was tied 3-3 at halftime with Chuck Nelson kicking a 47-yard field goal for the Huskies in the opening minutes and Eric Hipp booting a 35-yarder for the Trojans as time ran out in the half.

Flick, who completed 15 of 30 for 115 yards, made it 17-3 when he found Skansi open in the end zone seven minutes into the third period.

Florida edges past Kentucky

YES, JOHNSON is the featured attraction this basketball season. No one is going to forget that. But the Bulldogs showed even more. Sixteen players got into the game, and not one of them was an embarrassing item.

Second year head coach Jack Stephenson made so many substitutions that the outing looked like a Chinese zoo at times, but the effectiveness never seemed to dwindle.

"I don't have anyone on this team that can't play for me," Stephenson said after the game. "I think we showed that out there. That bench just goes on and on and I'm not afraid to put any of them out there. There are some things we can improve on, but I think it's going to be a fun

Johnson scored 20 points in the first half, but only seemed to be warming up to the first game because he came out and hit 10 quick points in the third period before being placed in bench isolation by Stephenson.

HORACE BROWN, who would be a star on most teams at 6-foot-5, hit for 15 points, 13 in the first half before being relegated to the bench with Johnson. From there on it was a team effort. Mike Velasco, Steve Miller and Preston Robertson all had eight points and Jim Gunnels had six. In all, 14 players got in on the scoring

"This is the closest team I've ever coached," Stephenson said. "I don't know how we've been lucky enough to have this kind of group at Midland High, but this season is going to be a pleasure for me as a coach. I've never seen such a close knit group."

WITH THE skate job in hand, Scott Louderback and Michael Feldt, who played football on Friday against Midland Lee, both got into the game and both scored. They haven't even been to a practice yet.

Donny Mericle was the only Ram to hit double figures with 13 points, and the Rams were totally frustrated by the swarming Bulldogs, who had to make the most of the playing time they got because Stephenson was always trying to run his bus service in and out of the game. That even proved frustrating for the fans, who couldn't possibly keep up with it all, and it is amazing that the Dogs had any consistency at all with the wholesale bench clearing episodes. But you have to use talent when you have it.

Yes, it looks like a fun season ahead

And if the varsity performance wasn't enough, the junior varsity Bullpups jumped on Del Rio, 89-44, to give Milt Fitts his first victory as the new JV coach, and in convincing style

Clifford Fairfax led the way for the Pups with 15 points while Rob Franklin had 12 and Darrell Jones 10.

Ian Hyslop, 6-7 post, scored 29 points to lead Lubbock Monterey to a 59-46 win over a young, but scrappy Midland Lee squad in the season opener for both teams Saturday night in the Lee gym.

Midland broke from the gate slowly and found itself down 17-11 after the first 12 minutes of play. Gary Hodges tossed in nine points to pace the Plainsmen in the opening stanza.

BEHIND THE shooting of Alvin Dunson, the Rebels battled back to knot the score at 22-22 with five minutes left in the half. Just when it appeared Lee was gaining momentum, Hodges grabbed an offensive rebound, scored, was fouled, and nailed the free throw to give the Plainsmen a 25-22 advantage. Midland never managed to get closer then four points the rest of the night. At the half Monterey was up 33-28.

In the third quarter Hyslop got a hot hand. He poured in 11 points and Monterey looked like it would run away from the young Rebs. Barry Blackwell and Randy Pepper both made some fine defensive plays to prevent Monterey from turning the game into a rout. After three quarters of play Lee was down 50-38.

MONTEREY WENT into a more deliberate game in the final quarter. Looking for just the layup, the Plain's men managed nine points, seven coming from the free throw line. The Rebels, forced to shoot quickly, and not shooting particularly well only record eight markers in the last eight minutes of action.

It was at the free throw line that

Notre Dame blanks Crimson Tide, 7-0

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) - Sixthranked Notre Dame ended Alabama's quest for an unprecedented third straight national championship Saturday, scoring on Phil Carter's 2-yard plunge in the second period two plays after a fumble recovery to beat the fifth-ranked Crimson Tide 7-0 Satur

The triumph gave Notre Dame an 8-0-1 record and sent the Irish into the Sugar Bowl against top-ranked Georgia, which boosted its record to 10-0 by defeating Auburn 31-21 to win the Southeastern Conference title. Alabama, which had won the last three SEC crowns and eight of the last nine, suffered its second setback in 10 games overall. It marked the third time in eight years that a loss to Notre Dame knocked Alabama out of a shot at the national championship and it gave the Irish a 4-0 record against the Crimson Tide in the epic series between two of college's all-time powers Notre Dame had failed to score less than a minute before Carter's touchdown when freshman quarterback Blair Kiel fumbled a snap and Warren Lyles recovered for Alabama at the Tide's 1-yard line. But two plays later, Alabama quar-

The Irish then turned things over to their stingy defense, which handed Alabama its first shutout in 54 games dating back to early in the 1976 season. It was the fifth consecutive game in which Notre Dame did not allow a touchdown. Alabama didn't cross midfield until the final play of the first half and did not threaten seriously until midway through the third quarter when Peter Kim missed a 37-yard field goal attempt after the Tide drove from its 26

Arkansas edges hapless Aggies

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Ish Ordonez kicked a 27-yard field goal with eight seconds remaining to give Arkansas a 27-24 victory over Texas A&M and wipe-out a brilliant Aggie rally in a Southwest Conference college football game Saturday. Ordonez had missed two field goals earlier, including a 40-yarder with 5:19 left in the game.

Arkansas led 24-0 at the half, and the Razorbacks' new 4-3 defensive alignment had baffled the Aggies. However, A&M reeled off 24 points in the first 17 minutes of the second half with David Beal, an Arkansas boy that got away, and Johnny Hector doing the damage.

Hector scored twice in the first seven minutes and then Greg Williams blocked a punt out of the Arkansas end zone for a safety to make it 24-16.

The Aggies took the ensuing free kick and went 57 yards for the tying score. Beal, from Russellville, Ark., lobbed a two-yard scoring pass to Thomas Sanders and then slipped into the end zone for the two-point conversion that made it 24-24 with 12:46 left in the game.

The Razorbacks gained field position by making four first downs before Ordonez missed his 40-yard attempt. The Aggies ran three plays and punted to the Arkansas 41 with 3:59 left in the game.

A Tom Jones to Bobby Duckworth netted 18 yards and started the winning drive. On fourth-and-two at the A&M 33, Jones faked inside and hit Gary Anderson in the left flat for eight yards. Then, on third-and-four at the 19, Danny Walters popped for nine yards on a draw play to set up the winning field goal.

The victory stopped Arkansas' losing streak at three and gave the Razorbacks a 5-4 record. Arkansas is 2-4 in the SWC. A&M now has lost five in a row, is 2-7 for the season and 1-5 in the league.

Arkansas rolled up 284 yards in the first half but managed only 119 yards in the second half and all but 13 yards of that came on the Razorbacks' final two possessions.

Jones made the big plays in the Razorbacks' first two touchdown drives. After Jeff Goff blitzed Beal into a fumble and Billy Ray Smith recovered, Arkansas took over at the

BYU's McMahon sets records

PROVO, Utah (AP) - Record-setting quarterback Jim McMahon shredded Colorado State's defenses for 441 yards and five touchdowns as the 13thranked Cougars demolished CSU 45-14 Saturday and all but smashed the Rams' hopes for a Western Athletic Conference football title.

McMahon, the nation's total offense and passing leader, set new NCAA season passing and total offense marks and completed 23 of 33 passes in less than three quarters.

A victory for Colorado State would have given the Rams their first conference title and a trip to the Holiday Bowl Dec. 19 in San Diego against Southern Methodist. But Brigham Young's win set up another conference title matchup next Saturday between the Cougars and Utah

McMahon propelled the Cougars to a 14-3 lead on BYU's first two possessions, connecting on touchdown passes of 23 yards to Danny Plater and a 70-yard bomb which Lloyd Jones caught on the 20 and scored untouched.

However, Colorado State kept the game close with a 5-yard scoring run by Alvin Lewis. The score was set up by an 8-yard BYU punt following an errant center snap.

Lewis' two-point conversion run made it 14-11 at the end of the first quarter. Late in the first half McMahon threw 23 yards to Clay Brown to make it 21-11.

Colorado State countered with a 49-yard field goal by John Poole who had another of 24 yards early in the game. It was McMahon who gave Brigham Young a 28-14 halftime lead with five seconds left as he hooked up with Brown on a 20yard scoring pass.

BYU broke open the game early in the third quarter as defensive end Brad Anai tipped and then intercepted a Steve Fairehild pass and rambled 45

McMahon's 47-yard scoring pass to Matt Braga made it 42-14 as McMahon tied the NCAA season touchdown pass record of 39 set by Dennis Shaw of San Diego State in 1969.

Air Force springs 25-7 surprise

AIR FORCE ACADE MY, Colo. (AP) — Senior Schafer fired two touchdown passes and freshman Sean Pavlich booted four field goals as Air Force upset Wyoming 25-7 Saturday to record its first Western Athletic Conference victory. The Falcons, mixing the run and the pass effectively off the wishbone formation, scored on three straight possessions in the second period. After field goals of 43 and 33 yards by Pavlich, Schafer hit wide receiver Andy Bark on an 18-yard scoring pass for a 12-0 lead.

Judge says Greenville still has 5-5 grid record this year

DALLAS (AP) — Greenville High School football players and fans think they're 10-0 this year, but a federal judge says they'll have to settle for a .500 season.

U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders ruled Friday that last-minute legal efforts by Greenville to halt Plano's march to the District 13-5A title were not sufficiently supported by evidence.

But Sanders said he wants to hear more on the complicated playoff squabble and has scheduled a hearing for next Wednesday.

The fuss started Oct. 24 when the University Interscholastic League ruled that Greenville football player Robert Byrd was declared ineligible because he had reached his 19th birthday in July.

UIL rules forbid any student playing organized sports if he is 19 prior to Sept. 1 of the current school year.

The UIL ordered Greenville to forfeit five games, including two district games. One of those games was a win over Plano, which Friday night wrapped up the 13-5A district title.

The suits, one filed by Byrd and the other filed by quarterback Phil Blue in behalf of the players, claim the UIL ruling violated Byrd's rights to due process and unjustly penalized the rest of the players by making their forfeit their district title.

Sanders said he would rule next Wednesday on whether Plano would represent the district in post-season playoff games.

If Sanders rules in favor of the suits next week, Greenville would become the district champion.

Wichita State downs Buffs

CANYON, Texas (AP) - Sophomore quarterback Prince McJunkins brought Wichita State from behind with a pair of touchdown passes and a 4-yard scoring run as the Shockers downed West Texas State 20-18 in a Missouri Valley Conference football game Saturday night.

McJunkins lifted the visitors from an early 10-0 deficit to a 20-10 advantage with less than 5 minutes remaining to play.

Wichita State then withstood a furious West Texas gally which ended on a pass interception at the Shocker 24, with only 90 seconds left to play. Wichita State now stands 4-1-1 in the Missouri Valley Conference and retains title hopes in the league. The Shockers, 5-4-1 overall, finished last in the valley a year ago. West Texas State, the 1979 Valley champions, now stand 4-6 overall and 1-4 in the conference.

Going into the blustery wind in the first quarter, Wichita State's offense was nonexistent, but its defense kept West Texas State close. The Buffaloes started eight possessions in Wichita State territory during the game, but saw two drives snuffed out on fumbles inside the Shocker ten and their final desperation effort ended with an interception at the WSU 24.

McJunkins, who had touchdown strikes of 21 and 4 yards, finished with 57 yards rushing and 57 yards passing. Running back Steve Warrington led the Wichita ground assault with his first ever 100-yard game.

Michigan blanks Purdue

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — It took a game plan featuring six defensive backs to shut down Purdue quarterback Mark Herrmann, but it worked to perfection for Michigan as the Wolverines powered their way to a 26-0 Big Ten football victory over the Boilermakers Saturday.

The victory set up a showdown for the conference championship and a Rose Bowl berth when the Wolverines travel to Columbus for the season finale with Ohio State next Saturday.

Immediately after the game, Michigan Athletic Director Don Canham announced that the Wolverines have been assured a berth in the Fiesta Bowl in Tempe, Ariz., if they fail to defeat Ohio State.

"The six back idea was (defensive coordinator) Bill McCartney's," Coach Bo Schembechler said. "The way to sack him is to cover his receivers and have four active kids up front. We made him around and the coverage was the key. We made him dump the ball."

A dejected Herrmann said his chances for winning the Heisman Trophy had probably been dashed after the shutout carried nationally on ABC-TV

"I guess it's pretty much out of reach," Herrmann said. "They shut down everything we threw at them. I have to give Michigan all the credit in the world. We just couldn't get the stuff rolling today. It was frustrat-

"When we couldn't score in the first half, our offense lost its confidence and Michigan's defense built up its confidence," said Purdue Coach Jim Young. "Mark Herrmann played a bad game today but the blame can't all be lodged on him.' Shortly after the game, Purdue Athletic Director George King accepted a bid for the Boilermakers to play in the Liberty Bowl in Memphis, Tenn., on Outdoor cook fun and a treat.

CHUCK DAVIS OUTDOORS Outdoor cooking makes tasty treat

Outdoor cooking is unusual and fun and it produces very tasty meals. Who could ask for more?

For example, meals can be prepared early in the day, before your day of fishing or hunting begins. When you return late in the afternoon, just pop the prepared foil meal onto coals or dig out a dutch oven meal.

Eliminating the drudgery of preparing a meal after a hard day in the field makes a trip more satisfying. One of the best known methods of cooking without pans is foil cooking. Begin with a piece of heavy duty foil about 24 inches long. Fold it so you have a double thickness a foot long. Put hamburger, sliced raw potatoes, carrots, celery and onion in the foil. Season to taste. Fold and tightly crimp the edges of the foil to prevent steam from escaping. If steak or stew meat is used in place of hamburger, add butter and water to eliminate

If you prefer a more liquid stew, add water to the ingredients. If backpacked, pile the foil package in a plastic bag - a bread sack works fine. Add the water when you are ready to cook it. Cook on coals for about 20 minutes

An apple baked in foil is the perfect complement for a foil meal and it's a snap to prepare. Core a baking apple two-thirds through and fill with brown sugar. Season to taste with cinnamon or red hots. Place a pat of butter on top then wrap tightly in double thickness foil. Add a little water when you are ready to set on the coals. Cook for about 15 minutes. Outstanding fare.

DUTCH OVEN COOKING —

Nearly everything that can be cooked using a dutch oven. Some favorites are pot roast, fried chicken, pies, biscuits, cakes and some very good stews. Dutch oven cooking is the No. 1 method of cooking for outdoorsmen because of its versatility.

Control heat by the quantity of coals on the ovens top and around its

PEACH COBBLER—Of course my favorite. Adjust the recipe to suit your needs.

Pour a gallon of peaches in the oven, add 11/2 cups of juice, two cups sugar and three teaspoons of cinnamon. Add a cup of tapioca for thickness; mix, cover and heat to a boil.

For simplicity's sake, use a prepared biscuit mix for the topping. Follow the directions, but add enough sugar to sweeten the dough to your satisfaction. Add the crust mix to the boiling fruit a spoonful at a time. Cover and cook till the crust is brown. Then invite me over for dessert.

Hot meals are often avoided after a strenuous day of hunting or fishing. By using foil or dutch oven cooking methods you eliminate most of the bothersome dirty dishes and have a complete, nutritional hot meal. With foil cooking, in particular, you have no dirty dishes to give you indiges-

Pamunkeys need help to keep tradition alive

For more than 300 years the Pamunkey Indians of Virginia have celebrated Thanksgiving by delivering a deer to the governor. It is a tribute the indians make in lieuof taxes.

For many moons his was no problem. The 800-acre lamunkey Indian Reservation on the Pamunkey River 40 miles from Richmond was a happy hunting ground. If recent seasons, the task has becone more difficult, even thorugh the reservation deer populations are till healthy, says

Sports Affeld. Severa times the season has opened just before Thaiksgiving, allowing hunters only a w days to bag the governor's venion. One embarrassfox. Occasionally, there have been only fish from the reservations

"Our problem is that all of our young hunters have left the reservation for jobs in the city," says Tecumseh Deerfoot Cooke, 79-year-old chief of the nation. Cooke has made the annual trek to the state capitol steps at least 50 times. Prospects for the 1979 Thanksgiving offering appeared bleak until the resourceful Chief Cooke sought help from paleface brothers, the Rumford hunters, a club in nearby Hanover and King William counties. It did not take the skilled hunters long to bag a fine six point buck for the govenor.

KENNY REDIN'S

Fin & Feather

Looks like the city slickers did it again. Just the other morning we received a report from the makers of the famous "Skunk Skreen" head-quarters at College Station that they had received a call from New York City from a somewhat dazed insurance executive who had had his Skunk Skreen mixed on the carpet in front of his desk. For readers not familiar with Skunk Skreen, it's a manufactured chemical resembling the odor of a mad skunk. Hunters use this scent to erase all human odors while hunting afield for deer, varmints, ect.

The Skunk Skreen people are unsure how many deer this insurance executive saw yet they have strong evidence that his scent was more than adequately covered. Not only was it covered downwind but also down the hall, across the hall and within 50 yards from his stand (desk).

The manufacturing company officials were very pleased to learn that Skunk Skreen has now reached into all parts of the country

UNLIKE most of the hunters who use Skunk Skreen, this one was trying to figure out what to do about the smell. The problem was compounded by the fact that there is a law in New York City which prohibits the opening of windows.

Upon learning of the predicament it was suggested by the Skunk Skreen hunting experts that an attempt be made at varmint calling. A close-in rabbit call would probably work best with the acoustics in the hallway.

It was reported that Skunk Skreen did in fact have no smell until mixed, was easy to handle and only takes a few drops to reach full strength.

WHEN asked to comment on this situation, A.F. "Tex" Isbell, inventor of the chemical said, "With the price of varmint pelts up nationwide, the relatively inexpensive Skunk Skreen should help him show a goodly return on his investment." (Skunk'em).

The high-potent skunk smelling chemical might be good for gags on your enemies or best friends, alike, but hunters are proving this is a very effective product for luring animals within extremely close range. From Africa to Altoona hunters are convincingly becoming amazed with this new product. Gettin' close has not always assured a successful hunt; yet outdoorsmen are beginning to realize with just a little planning and common sense (scents), they can camouflage their downwind smell.

TO EMPHASIZE just how really good a scent used by hunters or wildlife photgraphers to wipe out human odor, this situation happened to me.

Hunting for varmints in the rugged canyonlands of West Texas this particular day had been rather slow for calling varmints into close range. I was mixing the Skunk Skreen and distributing it properly each place I stopped to call. About the only thing after five or six tries that seemed interested in my predator calling was a roadrunner and a raccoon.

The last place I decided to try before parting for home was a steepsided canyon rim, overlooking a brushy creek bottom. I placed drops of my skunk scent in strategic locations around me. No way could a curious coyote or fox get a whiff of my human odor.

I blew on the call for about five minutes before a female coyote came barrelling my way. She circled me to get a whiff of what I was. Evidently, nothing discouraged her from coming on in. Within another minute or so, she was about 10 yards from my location. She stopped, sat down and began barking at me and my noisy rabbit-call sound. She did this for more than 15 minutes before she decided to investigate this situation a

AT THAT particular time as she began to move closer, I was about to stand up and hollor. Just as I made my first move I was nudged in the back. At that same instance, a bark accompanied the nudge. Cameras flew, dirt dusted the area and I hollered at the top of my lungs.

A young coyote pup had approached my location from the rear and jumped into the same bush with me, only to get the surprise of his life...not to mention the surprise of my life. I guess the bitch was trying to warn her offspring to investigate the varmint call rather than come any closer. Whatever, the circumstances, it was one ordeal I shall never forget. And it

Skunk Skreen fools beast..and man, too

But, this situation proved one spe-cial point to me. It does help to have your human odor disguised by a skunk scent or some other well-know scent product.

spell since fishing has been as flat as it was here in Oak Creek last week. It did improve a little last Sunday when several fish in the three caught," reports Ike Pate from Sportsman's Lodge on the Creek.

"With the Midland High Sky Bass Club and the Abilene 35 Club in for tournaments we had hoped they would find fishing was as good as the weather that had been forecast, but it wasn't to be. There have been some fine fish caught since the lake got its first good raise in early September, but it has been so erratic to even try to guess when this good fishing will occur

"No bass fisherman who has been on the lake has ever seen it look more fishable, but we may be trying to rush things too much. The vegetation covered by the 15 feet of fresh water was three years grown and it's gonna take a while for this much to deteriorate," says Ike.

Cancer-stricken youth can be difficult patient

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Joe Kreuter's chaotic struggle with two demons — adolescence and possibly terminal cancer — has resulted in drug addiction, ejection from a National Institutes of Health treatment program and months of hand-to-mouth survival on the streets.

"All I want is what is best for my son," Eloise Kreuter of Arlington, whose 18-year-old son suffers from cancer of the connective tissues, said Friday.

But young Kreuter — angry and suffering pain that requires medication every few hours — is not an easy young man to help.

"I was only a kid and my life was so good when this happened," Kreuter told the Washington Post. "I played basketball and I thought of going to college and now I just hurt."

Dr. Lucius Sinks, a cancer specialist at Georgetown University, said, "These days, kids with cancer live longer, but it's at the price of aggressive therapy that is often terribly mutilating and occurs at a time when kids are most concerned about how they look."

After 2½ years of treatment at NIH in Bethesda, Md., Kreuter was barred from the facility in January when he persisted in smoking marijuana in the wards and became increasingly difficult to handle. Physicians at the institute say he once physically assaulted a doctor, a charge he denies, and passed out illegal drugs to other pa-

The Kreuters' landlady ordered him out of the family's rented home after neighbors complained about his noisy, disruptive behavior.

After his mother's fruitless effort to find a place for him in a half-way house, Kreuter hit the streets.

For seven months, he lived in vacant lots and park benches in northern Virginia, he said, fighting off muggers who wanted his narcotic, pain-killing drugs.

"People would push you around, make you empty your pockets, stuff like that," Kreuter said, and he began injecting himself with the drugs to prevent their being stolen.

Dr. Philip Pizzo of the NIH said that doctors at the federal facility were concerned about Kreuter's dependence on morphine and other pain killers used during treatment, "but we have ways of controlling that."

The real problem, Pizzo said, was

Dr. David Pickar, an NIH psychiatrist who treated Kreuter, said the youth told him marijuana helped him endure the nausea related to his treatment, but "was told repeatedly that this was against the rules,"

"I'm not sure what one does with an adolescent who ... can't be contained to fit in a very aggressive medical regimen," Pickar said. "You can say someone is rebelling against authority, but the ultimate authority is that you're going to die."

you're going to die."

"We never encountered anyone like this," Pizzo said. "We were really torn because Joe could be very likable and charming kid. There were people here who cared for him very deeply.

"What Joe presented was a very profound moral dilemma. What do you do when a patient ... tells us he doesn't want therapy? We tried to say, 'Look, Joe, we want to treat you but you're going to have to promise that you're going to leave the drugs outside.' It just didn't work," Pizzo said

"We don't expect (cancer patients) to behave 'normally,'" he added. "It's obviously a stressful situation."

After fights and threats, "we tried to get alternative treatment for his psychiatric and drug-related problems," Pizzo said, but Kreuter signed himself out three weeks after NIH arranged for in-patient treatment at a George Washington University psychiatric facility.

Pizzo declined to speculate on Kreuter's chances for survival. After his cancer was diagnosed, it went into remission, he said, but recurred about a year ago.

The youth currently is undergoing his sixth treatment session at Arlington Hospital.

His father, Walter, said social workers at that facility are helping the youth find an apartment to live in when he leaves, perhaps as early as

By H. JOSEF HEBERT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Emergency communication links between nuclear plants and the government show little improvement since the information breakdown that plagued the Three Mile Island accident, federal officials say.

And government regulators, at odds with industry over how much information should be provided, said

Thursday they may again be left in the dark in assessing the potential danger to the public during the first critical hours of any future nuclear

Emergency communications with the government were so limited during the Three Mile Island accident near Harrisburg, Pa., in March 1979 that at one point the commissioners of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission likened themselves to "blind men" trying to grope in the dark.

At the heart of the issue, federal and industry officials acknowledged, is a disagreement over how much immediate information a utility should be required to provide the government about a reactor's performance during an emergency.

The NRC staff says it wants the maximum amount of available information — perferably directly from the reactor through a proposed multi-million-dollar computer system. But the nuclear power industry has opposed such an idea, saying it could cause confusion and lead to the federal agency taking over operation of a plant during an emergency.

"The running of a plant must rest with those that are operating the plant," said Warren Owen, senior vice president of Duke Power Co., which has three reactors in South

Shortly after Three Mile Island, the NRC set up direct "hot line" telephone links with each of the country's atomic power plants to assure rapid notification of an accident and to keep the commission informed of developments as an accident progresses.

But a recent NRC report to Congress cited few other industry changes that assure a rapid flow of information from reactor to government regulators in an emergency and said the "hot line" provides only limited information that "can be very easily misunderstood or misinter-

"The flow of information in the first few hours after the initial notification (of an accident) is not yet greatly improved even during normal duty hours," conclude the agency's report on emergency communications, sent to Congress with little notice last

Lameducks in Congress have little in common

WASHINGTON (AP) — "It was a shot in the stomach," said Rep. Thomas Ashley, D-Ohio. "I blame me. I didn't campaign ver well." "The Reagan tide did me in basically," said Rep. Lester Wolff, D-

"I must have underestimated the age and health issue," said Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y.

"My friends did not take the general election seriously," said Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga. It seems the only thing congressional losers in the Nov. 4 elections have in common is that they lost. Few say any one factor did them in.

Some cite the landslide victory of President-elect Ronald Reagan as a factor. Others mention it only in pass-

Some appear despondent in defeat while others say they are optimistic about the future. Some say they enjoyed their public service while others note the job also is frustrating.

But none of the losing incumbents surveyed, even those known to be in close races or believed to be trailing opponents as Election Day neared, really seemed to feel they would

"My opponent's and my unofficial polls as late as Sunday night showed roughly the same thing, I had 52 percent of the vote and I was gaining on the undecided," said Rep. Richardson Preyer, D-N.C., a veteran of 12 years in the House.

'And suddenly on Monday and Election Day, things took a sudden

But Preyer added, "I'm not bitter or frustrated by it. I used to be a judge and I learned not to argue with the jury. When you ride into tides like this, it's all part of the political game.

Ashley, a veteran of 26 years in the House, said he faced defeat "when the first 25 precincts came in. We knew where they are. I've gotta be surthis was my first loss."

Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Texas, said he knew he was in a close race but didn't feel he had lost felt until "the afternoon of the day of the election." It took quite a bit longer for Talmadge to realize he had lost. He went to bed with a 350,000-vote margin and with the news media predicting he had won another term as Georgia's senior senator.

"It wasn't until noon the next day that I realized I might have lost," he said, adding "it was several days until I knew I had lost.'

Rep. Herb Harris, D-Va., also was left hanging — although not quite as long. "It was fairly definite the next morning that unless something untoward occurred, we had lost it," he

Harris - who lost by about 900 votes in a rematch with Republican Stanford Parris, the man he defeated for the seat six years ago - refused to blame President Carter.

Preyer said Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie's statement "that it would be days before anything is resolved (about the Iran hostages) may have tyiggered sort of a last straw reaction that the Democrats can't get hold of inflation, couldn't get the hostages back.' And Preyer, a member of the House ethics committee, said he felt the committee's recommendation to censure rather than expel Rep. Charles Diggs, D-Mich., convicted of padding his payroll for private gain, cost him about 5 percentage points.

"It helped express the anger of the public over the conduct of some members of Congress," he said.

Wolff said he was targeted by conservatives, who helped his opponent, Republican John LeBoutillier, out-spend him more than five to one Ashley said, "I can't lay it at the president's doorstep. He did lose the district but he didn't lose it by as

Javits, who finished third in his race after losing the Republican nomination to eventual winner Alfonse D'Amato, said "The difference was apparently that the idea of my age and what I consider a moderate infirmity, which I myself laid on the table, seemed to have seized the voters' imagination and I just couldn't turn it away from that."

Eckhardt said his defeat resulted from opposition by Big Oil. And, although Carter carried his district, Eckhardt noted that "a Democratic president normally gets a stronger majority."

Ashley said he was proud of shep-herding the energy bill through Con-gress and helping ball New York City out of its financial woes. He said he was proud of his efforts in improving the nation's housing. But he added 'The main frustration is an institutional one. We're stretched awful thin in terms of time. Serving as I did on three committees, it's a wrenching kind of commitment.

Talmadge called the "whole experience in government frustrating.'

Midland College president beginning term as statewide association head

AUSTIN - Dr. Al G. Langford, president of Midland College, was slated to be installed as president of the Texas Public Community/Junior College Association for a two-year

The installation was scheduled as part of the one-day winter meeting of the TPC/JCA, which was comprised of the presidents and chief executive officers of the 47 public community college districts in the state. For the past two years, Langford has served as president-elect and a member of the executive committee of the organization. He also has served as the group's legislation committee chairman for the four years.

Midland College joins with 46 other public community colleges in the state this week in observing the first Public Community College Week, as proclaimed by Gov. Bill Clements.

Midland Mayor G. Thane Akins also proclaimed this week Community College Week in Midland.

Midland College's contribution to post-secondary education in Midland has had its influence on the community since 1969. Organized as part of the Permian Junior College District with Odessa College, Midland College began classes in September 1969 with its offices in a small building on Andrews Highway. The enrollment totaled 688 that year, with most students attending night classes in Lee

High School. Following the defeat of a joint bond issue, Midlanders began seeking legislative permission to create their own junior college district. The permission came in late 1972, when Midlanders voted to create the district and gave their approval to a $5.1 million bond issue for the purchase of a campus site and construction of the first seven buildings. Groundbreaking was in October 1973 and the first buildings were occupied in January 1975. Then-Gov. Dolph Briscoe dedicated the campus in October 1975.

Another bond issue was passed in February 1976 for $6.3 million for two new buildings and an addition because over-crowding had already begun. Groundbreaking was in October 1976 and the buildings were completed by September 1978. Enrollment has continued to climb each semester, reaching 2,699 for the 1980 fall term.

Lisa Eichhorn surely not looking forward to another Mother's Day

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Mother's Day, 1980 — not ended up wearing the blonde wig the best of days for actess Lisa Eichhorn. Her New York apartment had been robbed, her belongings from England had been stolen in transit, her 92year-old grandmother was seriously ill.

Then at 1 a.m. the director of her new film called to tell her she had been fired.

"It's just not working," said Jean-Claude Tra-mont, who was directing "All Night Long." He is the husband of super-agent Sue Mengers, who represents the film's star, Gene Hackman. Miss Eichhorn was replaced by another Mengers client, Barbra Streisand, at a fee reported at $3 million plus 15 percent of the gross receipts.

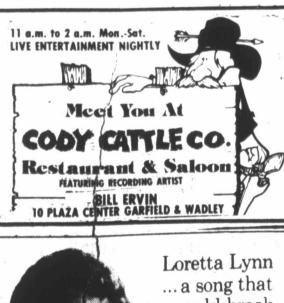

Say Lisa Eichhorn: "I could understand being replaced by Amy Irving or Sissy Spacek or someone else of my own age and nature. But Barbra Strei-

The 28-year-old beauty said the firing came as a complete surprise.

"I thought 'All Night Long' was some of my best work," she said. "I loved doing it, and I had the same feeling as I did about 'Cutter and Bone' (her unreleased film with Jeff Bridges and John Herd). Lisa didn't fret, though. Within days she accepted an important role in "The Wall," a three-hour television movie produced by Time-Life for CBS based on John Hersey's novel of the Warsaw ghetto in World War II. Her three months in Silesia were both rewarding and punishing.

"Although I'm not Jewish, I wanted to feel the kind of experience the Jews felt during the Nazi occupashe said. "Working in Poland was perfect for that. We had the feeling of being watched at all times. Secret police were on the set, and they reported everything that went on.

The pollution in Silesia is the worst in the world factories and mines pouring eight different kinds of poisons into the air. For three months we never saw the sun. they began spreading throughout the country.
Lisa Eichhorn started her film career by subterfuge, albeit a charming one. She tried out for the role of Richard Gere's English sweetheart in "Yanks."

One would think the person speaking, who happens to be male, was referring to his child. However, he's not. In all three instances he is talking to his wife, whom he treats as a child.

Although Henrik Ibsen's play "A Doll's House" was first presented in Copenhagen, Denmark in 1879, it's certainly not dated. Unfortunately, much about it is still quite true today.

Bergman to return to Sweden to live

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) -Film director Ingmar Bergman said Friday his dispute with Swedish tax authorities is "over and forgotten," so he will move back to his native country and shoot his first movie here in seven years.

Bergman moved to West Germany in 1976 after poilce arrested him at a play rehearsal to question him for alleged tax fraud. He said he will return to Sweden in 1983 after finishing commitments in Munich and Brit-

Bergman was originally accused of evading taxes on income of $500,000. The case ended a year ago when he was ordered to pay tax on $50,000, which amounted to $35,000.

Bergman told a news conference he will begin filming "Fanny and Alexander," next September. It describes the life of a bourgeois family on the eve of World War I.

He will make both a three-hour film for movie theaters and a five-hour version for television at a cost of more than $6 million, the most expensive project in the 62-year-old director's career. "Any mediocre American movie costs eight million dollars," he

He said the main characters are 10-year-old Fanny and her brother Alexander, 12, but denied reports that the film is a semi-biographical account of his experiences as a child. The director has described his father, a clergyman, as authoritarian and

Bergman's first movie made in Sweden soil since "Cries and Whispers"

"We are renting all the studios in Stockholm and any other Swedish films produced during that period of time will have to be shot outdoors," Bergman said. The premiere is scheduled for Christmas 1983 in Stockholm, Paris and New York

Norwegian actress Liv Ullmann a star in many of Bergman's films was asked to play one of the leads but was not available because of a prior commitment to Norwegian television, Bergman said.

Speaking of his self-exile, Bergman said his first year in Germany was a "nightmare. I thought I spoke and understood German. But directing is different. Actors demand the precise word.'

Bergman has been making his movies overseas since he was seized while directing a rehearsal of "Death Dance" by August Strindberg. He suffered a nervous breakdown and was hospitalized in January 1976 after the clampdown.

Asked about the tax dispute, Bergman replied, "What dispute? All is over and forgotten."

But the director hinted that the problems had not entirely escaped his memory when he said quietly, "You know, we were rehearsing there. ... I will never direct 'Death Dance'

Cary Grant files suit against Chevy Chase

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Actor Cary Grant has filed a $10 million slander suit against comedian-actor Chevy Chase because of comments the comedian made about him on NBC's "Tomorrow" show.

The suit, it was disclosed Friday, was filed in Los Angeles Superior Court and claimed Chase's references to Grant held the veteran actor up to "shame, ridicule and humiliation."

Grant asked the court for $5 million in general damages, $5 million in punitive damages and additional specific amounts to be inserted by the court for any damage done to his professional and business associa-

Chase, here making a new film, "Under the Rainbow," had no

The suit stemmed from a Sept. 25 interview of Chase on the late-night "Tomorrow" show in New York City with host Tom Snyder. Grant charged Chase said "among other others, the following: 'I understand he is a homo' plus 'what a gal' and 'what a nice guy."

In addition, the suit, filed through Grant's attorneys Trope and Trope, stated, "through gesticulation with his hands, Chase mimed a limpwristed affectation and while lisping in a stereotypical voice, referred to Grant as a 'nice guy,' the innuendo of which was that Grant is a homosexual."

Chase's statements "are completely, totally and absolutely false, and have no basis whatsoever in truth and fact," the suit said.

Grant, a screen heart throb since his film career began in the early 1930s, listed himself as a director of Faberge Inc., MGM Film Co., MGM Hotel Co., the Hollywood Park Racetrack and on the board of Trustees of the Norton Simon Museum.

English debate 'bedroom books'

By SETH MYDANS ssociated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Debate has developed along class lines over two new books that peek into the bedrooms of England's kings, princes and aristocrats, and find mistresses in many of them.

rats, and find mistresses in many of them.

The publisher of one of the books is so irritated over complaints from people with "bourgeois attitudes" that he is withholding review copies.

Nobles have rallied to the cause, in support of their traditional vice.

"Mistresses, and their offspring, have been an accepted part of life for the aristocracy for centuries," said Harold Baker, manager director of Debrett's Peerage, which has just published "The English Gentlemen's Mistress," by Douglas Southerland.

Debrett's has been deluged by complaints — which he describes as "a Debrett's has been deluged by complaints — which he describes as "a pror which frankly surprises" — and he refuses to give out copies of the "The middle classes now seem to think (mistresses) should not even be Commented one female bookseller, "The book won't sell here. People

Evans, indicates times have changed, at least in the public behave the least if the news broke tomorrow that the Prince of Wales (Prince s) had secretly married a twice-widowed woman six years older than himself...by procuring a clergyman, from jail, to marry them?" the Express asked. "That most notorious Prince of Wales of all, later King George IV, did just that.' Examples abound.

Charles II shocked his subjects by riding in his coach with his wife, his mistress and his eldest bastard, Hardy writes.

James II was "perpetually in one amour or another without being very nice in his choice," according to contemporary historian Gilbert Burnet.

George I arrived from Hanover, in what is now West Germany, to take over the British throne in 1714 with two women — neither of them the queen — who were dubbed the Pole and the Elephant by his new subjects. One was thin and one was fat.

No whiff of sexual scandal has touched today's Prince of Wales, Charles, although rumors about who may become his queen have swelled as he celebrates his 32nd birthday today. But Southerland says adultery is still a favorite sport of the British

"If the Islamic penalty of decapitation for adulterers was applied to the English upper classes, there would be the greatest difficulty in making up a mixed foursome at the average tennis party on the vicarage lawn," he And another aristocrat defended mistresses as a better social plan than today's system of marriage and divorce. The Duke of St. Albans, great-great-great-great-great-great grandson of Nell Gwynn, mistress of King Charles II, said, "Taking a mistress was not a frivolous business, not the licentious, libidinous thing the Victorians made out, and had nothing to do with the sleeping around which is supposed to go on

"In the days of arranged marriages, the mistress provided a social life, a normal, loving life, which the wife often could not.... "You could say it had advantages over the modern way. It was probably far better for the children than divorce.'

Much speculation surrounds 9-year-old Diana Spencer

By GEORGE BOULTWOOD
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) - Lady Diana Spencer, sophisticated beyond her 19 years, is charming yet shy, iteeped in etiquette and devotion to duty and rom a family "with royal connections." She has all be qualities to be a king's wife.

And speculation is growing that Prince Charles will choose her as his bride and future queen of England.

The daughter of the 8th Earl of Spencer and a listant cousin of the Churchills, Lady Diana is iterally "the girl next door." Her father's land adjoins the royal estate at Sandringham, where she ristened with a niece of the Queen Mother as Charles has known her since she was a baby. Her prother-in-law, Robert Fellowes, is on Charles' staff. ier father has held an intimate court post to both the ate King George VI and Charles' mother, Queen Elizabeth II.

From childhood, Lady Diana has known about the susiness of royalty, the etiquette, the taboos, the absolute need for discretion and devotion to duty.

Population advocate points out 'disaster'

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) - Stemming an scalating birth rate is one of the world's biggest hallenges in this decade, a population advocate

"Next to nuclear war, overpopulation is the worst aman disaster," said Werner Fornos, founder of the Vorid Population Institute in Washington, D.C.

Fornos, a spokesman for the Population Action Council, is in San Antonio through Saturday seeking upport to prevent an overpopulation disaster he ees for the future.

By the year 2000, Fornos predicted the Amazon River Basin will be a desert, half the world's forests will be gone and 6.4 billion people will inhabit the earth if current population trends continue.

"At the current rate of growth, there is no way we re going to keep pace with supplying all the food and sewage and garbage facilities for everyone,"

w York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Detroit and Los eles will have more than 5 million residents each the turn of the century, he predicted, and San stonio will more than triple its population to 2.5 lilion and rank as the nation's seventh largest

"The 1980s will be the fastest-growing decade forldwide, with the United States growing at the ate of one Los Angeles per year," he said. "It is not doomsday situation yet, but there is a danger in scoming so large."

He said each nation must make a political comfixment to population control, promoting smaller milles and providing access to birth control infor-

Such considerations weigh heavily in the choice of a future queen. Only a princess or someone close to the throne could be aware of the strain of alternating private life with the intense glare of publicity. She could be living at the family estate at Althorp (pronounced Althrup), owned by the Spencers for 463 years and the site of one of the world's finest art and silver collections. But she prefers to live simply with three other girls in a London apartment while teaching in a private kindergarten.

Her parents are divorced but that is no longer an obstacle in royal circles. Her stepfather, Peter Shand Kydd, has been quoted as saying: "Diana is a very genuine person, one of the nicest.

She drives a Volkswagen but often rides a bicycle to work, which she takes seriously, worrying that attention on her might disturb the children or upset their parents.

A short-haired blonde with appealing eyes and a sharp-cut profile, she has a cool poise. With graceful manners she replies patiently, in clear upper-class accent, to questions by reporters dogging her steps. But all she says is that she has decided to say

Admitting that she had been seeing the prince, she told reporters demurely: "I can't say anything about

A glimpse of her personality was given in an interview with the Sunday Mirror by retired family butler, Ainslie Pendry, 68. She is "usually a very shy person and blushes easily," he said. But he remembered that she took it well when thrown fully dressed into the family swimming pool during a party.

Pendry revealed that she used to say jokingly she was saving herself for the 32-year-old Charles' younger brother, Prince Andrew, now 20. When she and her elder sister, Lady Sarah, went on shooting parties with the two princes, "We all throught she was there as a partner for Andrew," said Pendry.

Lady Diana declined the customary round of parties given by rich fathers to debutantes and is little known outside her family circle. She and her family are members of the Church of England. This fits in nicely with the Act of Settlement of 1701, which prevents Charles from marrying a Catholic if he wants to succeed his mother as

This is because the British sovereign is head of the Protestant Church of England. Lady Diana's ancestors have been closely associated with royalty for 300 years. "There cannot be another family so stiff with royal connections," said Peter Townsend, former editor of Burke's Peerage and an authority on blue-blooded family trees.

Some examples: The queen is godmother to Lady Diana's brother; the present earl is the godson of the late Queen Mary; Queen Victoria was godmother to another Spencer, and King George III and Queen Charlotte were godparents to a daughter of the second Earl Spencer.

Writing in the New Evening Standard, Anne de Courcy said: "Only time will tell whether Lady Diana will fill the missing place in the royal jigsaw. What is undeniable is that she could fit it

New Miss World can't believe it

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Kimberly Santos said Saturday it was still hard to believe she was the new Miss World, a fact she discovered while waiting in an airport for the trip home to Guam.

Miss Santos had been the first runner-up in the Miss World competition, which she entered as Miss Guam.

But she unexpectedly gained the crown when 18-year-old Miss Germany, Gabriella Brum, turned down the title at the request of her flance, just hours after winning it Thursday night in London.

Miss Santos was on her way back to her job as a travel agent in Guam Friday night when she heard the news from a Pan American Airways official at Los Angeles International Air-

"I still don't believe it," Miss Santos, 19, said by telephone Saturday as photographers and reporters converged on her room at the Ambassador Hotel.

"I found out about it when I arrived here in L.A.," she said. "Pan Am paged me when I was in customs. I went out and found a newspaper and read about

She told her father the good news, and "he said he just knew it should have been me all along." Her father, U.S. Army Master Sgt. Ben Santos, is stationed in San Diego, Calif. Miss Santos said pageant officials in London told her they may officially crown her in

"That would be very nice," she said

The new Miss World, who is expected to pick up the $48,000 in cash and advertising contracts given up by Miss Brum, said she would like to invest in land.

Connally, Reagan silent after two-hour meeting

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One day after naming his first White House aides, President-elect Ronald Reagan met privately Saturday with former Treasury Secretary John Connally while a committee of economic advisers worked nearby on Reagan's plan to cut federal spending,

Edwin Meese III, newly appointed cabinet-level counselor to the incoming administration, said the luncheon meeting with Connally at Reagan's Pacific Palisades home should not be taken as an indication that Connally, who has served in both Democratic and Republican cabinets, would join the Reagan administration.

"The governor has met with a number of people since the election seeking their advice. He had wanted to meet with John Connally earlier and it wasn't possible to work out a mutually convenient time until now," Meese said.

Reagan and Connally posed for photographs at Reagan's front door but shed little light on the subject of their meeting.

Connally said the two would discuss "whatever the president (Reagan) wants to talk about." Reagan added, jokingly, "if I know about national customs here, we'll talk about

"I think that the tax program that the governor laid out as a candidate (10 percent across-the-board income tax cuts for three successive years) is said. "We're not changing that, we're working on implementation plans."

Asked about the lame-duck session of the outgoing Democratic Congress, which has refused — over Republican objections — to act on tax cut measures, Schulz replied, "I just wish they'd go away."

Sunday, Reagan is to meet personally with the economic task force after a breakfast meeting at his home with Texas Gov. William Clements,

GOP governors expecting good times with Reagan

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Republican governors and governors-elect are reveling in the landslide victory of President-elect Ronald Reagan and looking ahead to federal-state relations,

"I think all of us have the feeling that there will be a better federal-state relationship with the Reagan administration than we have had with the Carter administration," said Gov. John

The 23 members of the Republican Governors' Association, beginning their two-day annual meeting here Sunday with swelled ranks and renewed pride, say they expect full support from Reagan — a Republican, a former governor and one-time chairman of their alliance.

Vice President-elect George Bush is to address the governors Monday — one indication that Reagan hopes to keep the lines open to his former colleagues.

Dalton said most of the GOP governors are hoping that Reagan "moves forward with plans to give the states more authority, to get the federal government out of trying to do everything for everybody, and for local and state governments to have more authority," Dalton said.

Dalton, who is in line to become chairman at the close of this session, said Reagan called him to invite suggestions from GOP

Reagan's plans will take two years, advisor says

AUSTIN (AP) - An economic adviser to President-elect Ronald Reagan says it will take at least four years to put Reagan's economic plans into effect. "You don't do something overnight. It's going to take at least the first term," said Charls Walker, former deputy secretary of the treasury in the Nixon administration.

Walker said the first step would be to combat inflation by reducing federal spending, and the next step would be more reliance on private enterprise with less federal regulatory state leaders for his new administration.

"I think Mr. Reagan realizes the assistance that he will be getting from Republican governors," Dalton said. "I think he'll have a sympathetic ear.'

The Republicans, who defeated four Democratic governors in the Nov. 4 election, now control 23 governorships, up from 12 just three years ago and their greatest strength in more than a

More attuned to Reagan's view of government than the Democrats who have controlled most of the states in recent years, the GOP governors are reading the vote as a public The American people have sent an unmistakable message to all elected officials," said the outgoing association chairman, Vermont Gov. Richard Snelling. "They want - indeed, demand - a change in the direction and philosophy of government." Dalton said, "I think most of us feel that the emphasis on the national level should be more on national defense and less on social welfare type programs ... And I think that generally has been Governor Reagan's philosophy of government. Dalton said Reagan told him "he's going to be looking to states to have more responsibility. Now, how he will outline that remains to be seen, but he left that impression with me.' Reagan previously has advocated the transfer of welfare programs to state jurisdiction, and Dalton says that remains a

Reagan priority. "He said he felt this is something the states are better able to handle than the federal government," Dalton said, adding, "I don't know that he would provide everything that's being paid for

But Republican governors are prepared to take cuts in federal aid if it means more control over the money's use, Dalton said. "I don't think we can tell the federal government, 'You need to balance your budget in order to correct this inflation problem,' and at the same time be putting pressure on them for every program to be funded by the federal government," Dalton

President Carter cut the states out of revenue sharing for the current budget year, although the House restored a state share for future years in a bill passed last Thursday.

The Republican governors hope a Reagan administration will replace some state and local aid programs whose funds are controlled by Washington with the more flexible revenue-sharing funds, which are spent largely at local discretion.

"We can manage programs better at the level closer to the people," Dalton said.

With 25 years behind Bernard's, they make a great tortilla today and they still want

Better Tamale

By SANDI BREEDEN Lifestyle Writer

What do you get with 50 pounds of ground lime and a ton of corn? A lot of tortillas. Two hundred and forty tortillas a minute, to be exact.

Bernard's Tortilla Factory, 511 N. Tyler, goes through 100,000 pounds of corn a month to make their corn tortillas, taco shells, nachos and tamales, according to manager Albert Valles. "We get loose bulk corn out of Muleshoe and store it in these two containers," said Valles pointing to the two funnellooking apparatuses on the outside of the factory. Each holds 50,000 pounds of the precious commodity, which without, there would be no such thing known

The factory goes through 5,000 pounds of corn a day, meaning it also goes through 125 pounds of lime a day. Valles said ground lime is used as a preservative for the corn. "Without ground lime, we cannot make anything," he said. "Without the lime, corn spoils in four hours.

And it is lime, interestingly enough, that gives the tortillas and other corn products at the factory its yellow color. "We buy white corn and the lime turns it yellow," he said.

VALLES WENT THROUGH the tortilla making process step-by-step. The first step begins with the corn, which is cooked on an open flame in water with the ground lime added in five vats able to hold 450 pounds, one holding 600 pounds and one holding 2,000 pounds of corn. The corn is cooked for an hour, which makes the corn swell up and become soft, and then it is placed in a 'washing machine' to get the lime

The clean corn then goes to the grinding machine where actual grind stones do their assigned job. Now the corn is known as mesa and is put into a mesa feeder, which is connected to the tortilla maker, which is connected to the oven that cooks the tortil-

The mesa is mechanically dumped bit by bit into molds that determine the shape of the tortilla and the thinness is made by a small wire which looks like a cheese cutter wire. "That small wire is the most important thing," said Valles.

The tortilla now goes through a 400-degree oven and cooks for 15 seconds. The flat-disc looking object is then cooled by being placed on a conveyer belt which has five turns. Valles said the tortillas must be cooled. "If we pack them hot, they spoil," he said.

The conveyer belt then sends the tortillas to a small table where two employees handpack them in packages of 10, 60, 120 and 240. They are then refrigerated to prevent spoilage.

ACCORDING TO THE manager, every tortilla made is already sold. "We do not keep much in stock. because the tortillas are sold before they are made, he said pointing to the almost-empty refrigerator. He added the factory makes about one and a half cents for each tortilla.

Bernard's also makes nachos. These are tortillas cut into fourths and fried for 3 minutes in 400 degree coconut oil. They are then hand packaged for Taco shells are also made from the tortillas. They are put in molds that form the shell and are then fried in coconut oil at 400 degrees for 15 seconds. They are cooled and then packaged.

Another important food item the factory produces is tamales. "A good tamale has to made out of pork," said Valles, who has been with Bernard's for 14 years. "If it's not made out of pork, it's not a tamale and it also has to be wrapped in a corn shuck to be a tamale."

The corn mixture around the meat of the tamale

When Mr. and Mrs. Jessie Bernard started the tortilla factory in 1955, they went through 100 pounds of corn in four days. Today, the factory uses a ton of corn a day.

The meat mixture on the left is mechanically stuffed into the mesa mixture on the right and the tamales come out in one long tube. The cutter, between the two pans of corn shucks, cuts the tamales to size while employees hand wrap them.

Ramon Reyes, left, and James McCarroll pur- once a week to get the tamales they claim "are the chase Bernard's tortillas from Homer Bernard. best tamales in town." Reyes and McCarroll said they come to the factory starts out as the same mesa used to make tortillas. After the mesa is made, chili, salt and shortening is added.

THE TAMALE MEAT comes from pig snouts and jowis, which has been inspected and approved by the United States Department of Agriculture. Valles said the state department also inspects the factory daily because of the factory-produced meat product. "If they find anything wrong, we have to correct it that day," said Valles. The city inspects the factory monthly. "This month they gave us 96 points out of a possible 100 points," he said.
"We boil the meat for the tamales at 400 degrees for an hour and a half," said Valles. "We use 150 pounds of jowis to 400 pounds of snouts." The jowis provide the lean meat and the snouts provide the fat, said Valles. He added that the state requires tamales to be 25 percent meat, but Bernard's tamales are 45 percent meat.

Cumino, black pepper, chili powder and garlic are added proportionately to the cooked meat. The meat mixture is then placed in a funnel-shape vat and the mesa mixture is placed in an identical vat next to it. The mesa mixture is mechanically pushed into a tube and then the meat mixture is pushed into the mesa, thus making the tamale

The tamale comes out in one piece and moves down the conveyer belt where it is cut by a circular piece of machinery which determines how long the tamale is. The cut tamale is then hand-wrapped in a piece of corn shuck, used for additional flavor, and stacked on a tray.

Cooking the tamales is the next step. And contrary to popular belief, steaming tamales is not the best way to cook them. "Steam cooking tamales takes all the flavor out," said Valles. Bernard's cooks their tamales on an open flame in a big open pot with a small amount of water added

VALLES SAID TAMALES are made three times a week in the winter and one or two times a week in summer when their popularity wanes due to hot

He said although the bulk of Bernard's products are sold wholesale, they do offer retail sales on a walk-in basis. Besides the tortillas, nachos, taco shells and tamales, Bernard's also sells special orders of mini-tamales, mini-taco shells, mini-flour tortillas, taco balls, red tortillas and bulk tostados. Mr. and Mrs. Jessie Bernard first started their business in Odessa in 1953. But because there was so much competition there and Midland did not have a tortilla factory, the young married couple moved to the Tall City

Bernard's factory opened in Midland in 1955 at the Bernard's home, with Mrs. Bernard making the corn products during the day while her husband worked as a brick layer. They both worked in the business

When they first started, said Mrs. Bernard, they went through a 100 pounds of corn in four days. "We had a machine on a stand that we hand-cranked to make the tortillas and we cooked them on a hot plate," she said. Those first tortillas were sold only to "walk-in traffic", said Mrs. Bernard.

THEY GOT THEIR corn then from Alva Billingsley in Lamesa, whom, Mrs. Bernard said, without the business would have never made it. "He gave us credit when we could not pay for the corn," said the petite woman whose factory now has a 65 to 75 percent profit margin. Those first tortillas sold for a nickel a package and tamales were 50 cents a dozen. Mrs. Bernard did not know what the profit was then, or even if there was one.

The first outside help was hired after the Bernards had been in business for four years. The factory now has 17 employees, with one 21-year employee. The newest employee has been there for three years. Bernard died in 1971 and his son Oscar died in 1973. But Mrs. Bernard and son Homer still work in the factory. In May, the company incorporated and Mrs. Bernard received her first paycheck after working for 25 years.

Tortilla factories seem to be a business venture for most of Mrs. Bernard's family. She has a sister in Odessa that owns a tortilla factory and she has another sister in Del Rio that has a flour tortilla

Although the factory does work on a high profit margin, Valles said the products' prices will have to go up because of the large increase on the price of corn. "Because of the summer heat, the corn crop was bad and corn prices have doubled," said Valles. "This means we will have to raise our prices, but ours will not double.

Be careful this winter when using auxiliary heat will again be turned down this winter to conserve energy and minimize heating bills. It means many people will turn to fireplaces, space heaters and heating stoves to provide additional low-cost heat. Using these units, however, also increases the risk of house fires.

If you must use auxiliary methods to heat your home, use them safely by fodllowing these tips from William G. Gilmore, senior vice president of A-T-O Inc., Willoughby, Ohio, the world's largest integrated manufacturer of fire protection equipment.

FIREPLACES

"If your fireplace has not been used for a long time, have it and the chimney inspected before using it," said Mr. Gilmore. "Use only real or manmade logs in your fireplace - never use flammable liquids, charcoal or excessive amounts of paper. Burning charcoal gives off deadly carbon monoxide fumes, while high flames from burning paper can ignite the soot in your chimney. If you use manmade logs, never break them apart use them whole and only as the manufacturer recommends," he added.

"To prevent flying embers from entering the room, keep a metal or glass screen in front of the fireplace,' he said. "As an added precaution, keep flamable materials such as cloth, paper, etc. away from the fireplace or mantel, where they could easily be ignited.

When you retire for the evening, make sure the fire is completely extinguished. And don't close the damper if there are hot ashes in the fireplace. Heat from the coals can build u, causing the fire to rekindle whild you're sleeping.

SPACE HEATERS AND HEATING STOVES

Before using space heaters and heating stoves, give them a thorough checkup and cleaning. Even dust can collect near the heating elements and become a potential fire hazard.

Fuel-burning heaters should always be vented to the outside because most fuels produce dangerous fumes when burned," said Gilmore. "Use only the fuel specified for your unit, and NEVER use kerosene or gasoline to speed up a fire Never add liquid fuel while the heater is in operation, and avoid filling a unit to the top with cold fuel. Cold fuel will expand as it heats up in the home and could overflow the fuel reservoir. 'Most importantly, always store all fuels outside the home," he advised.

If an electric heater is used, be sure your home's wiring can handle the extra load.

Study shows information may help in preventing smoking

FARGO, N.D. (AP) - A North Dakota study suggests that schools may have better success in preventing youngsters from starting to smoke cigarettes if they include in their health education programs information about the immediate, as well as long-term, effects of smoking on the human body.

In a study involving seventh-graders, researchers from North Da-kota State University found that when udents received information about oth the immediate and the long-term ffects of smoking, they became more resolved not to smoke than did stuents in three other groups.

Assistant professor of psychology graders included in the study were formed into four groups: One received no physiological information but simply completed forms measur-ing attitudes and knowledge of smoking; a second received only information about immediate effects; a third received only information about longterm effects; and the fourth group received information about immediate and long-term effects.

Students were tested immediately after the instruction and again two weeks later. After the data were analyzed by the university's IBM computer, it was found that students in the fourth group emerged with the strongest intentions not to smoke.

MASTER CHARGE HINTS FROM HELOISE

She caps argument on resistant caps

DEAR FRIENDS,

We all have been involved in pro-and-con discussions about the use of child-resistant closures or caps on medicine containers. At one time or another we all probably have been extremely frustrated trying to open one of these caps.

From the mail I receive, I know most of my readers hate them. What they may not realize aside from all the hassle of opening them — is that deaths of children under five from aspirin poisoning have dropped 76 percent since the use of these caps was mandated in 1972.

Deaths of small children caused by swallowing other products, such as prescription drugs, oven and drain cleaners etc., are down 56 percent, according to the National Center for Health. Wouldn't you say this dramatic drop is more than worth the use of safety caps?

Since the success of these caps has been so fantastic, we can look for more and more containers (pesticides, etc.) in the future to have them even though they can be difficult, even frustrating, to remove.

To try to make opening these caps a little easier for all of us, here are a few tips Jeffery Close of the safety cap industry sent to me, which I thought might be helpful.

First of all, be patient. Read the directions for opening which are printed or embossed on each cap. Think about it for a moment so that you understand the motions required.

Calmly proceed to remove the cap. Hard or rigorous pulling the wrong way will thwart your efforts which is why the caps are safe for youngsters.

If the cap doesn't open the first time, try again. Patient following of directions will do it. Most important of all, replace the cap securely. If you don't, the entire safety system that has taken years to develop is lost. One other thing. Of course you know that when having prescription drugs filled, you may ask your pharmacist to use a As we all know, this is necessary in some instances — for arthritics, ailing elderly, etc. — but unless this is the case, I strongly urge you to use the child-proof caps if you have small children in the house or even visiting occasionally. If you save one child's life, I know you will agree it's worth all the minor inconvenience you might have to experience in order to do so. Thanks for listening... - Hugs, Heloise

FABULOUS FIFTIES

DEAR HELOISE

Most of us know that a slice of bread in an airtight container with rock-hard brown sugar will soften it good as new in a few days.

Did you know this is also true of those expensive raisins we use so sparingly that they become hardened?

Recently, I bought bouillon cubes that were so hard a cup of water was cold before the cube dissolved. A quarter slice of bread, tucked in the top of the jar, restored them as well as it did the sugar and raisins. — Mrs. O.F. Lemmons

Mrs. Albina said her astounding fertility came to public attention one day in the Civil Registry office. She said she had run out of space in her registry booklet, which Chilean mothers are required to keep, and was trying to get another booklet. "The official doubted I could have had so many

Such material is usually inaccessible to the general public. That's why the recently published book, "20th Century Decorating, Architecture & Gardens" which reproduces some of the early pages of House & Garden Magazine — is such a treat.

House & Garden began publication in 1901 as an elitist magazine devoted to showing the finest in country-home architecture and gardens. In the ensuing 80 years, the magazine gradually broadened its coverage to include decorating, cooking and other popular home arts.

Here we see that today's emphasis on plants and natural light in a room had roots as far back as the early part of the century.

Battle of sexes still rages on

By JOHN M. BOGERT Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES—Journalist Gay Talese recently quipped that "on any given night in any city, you will see men looking for sex and women looking the other

Though Dr. Leland Swenson isn't dealing exclusively with the kind of human sexuality Talese dealt with in his recent book, "They Neighbor's Wife," he is very much concerned with the age-old and ongoing war of the sexes.

In fact, the theme is central to his research and a course he teaches at Loyola Marymount University. Moreover, it is the subject of a lecture he gives entitled "Male and Female: A Fresh Look at the Old 'Viva la Difference Problem.'

Though the subject is fraught with more potential disaster than a mine field, the jovial 38-year-old professor has a way of spilling out scientific details and smiling over the ramifications with a ready

Oddly enough, even his years of research, beginning at Western Michigan and Wayne State and continuing overseas in Japan, have turned up very few differences between the sexes. In fact, says the professor of psychology, none of the extensive research now being done on the topic has determined if our few physical and psychological differences make any difference at all. "The major difference appears to be that males ed less irritation to become aggressive. It also ears that women are generally better at verbal skills and men better at engineering and mechanical skills. But how much of this is due to socialization, nobody knows.

"Going back to birth, males are less sensitive to pain and more active. Taking that a step further, maybe dominance comes, generally speaking, to those who are more active and aggressive. And those people in turn exclude those who aren't."

Taking tha reasoning a bit further, Swenson says that many of the customs and attitudes that have come under fire in recent years are age-old products of those small biological differences.

"For instance, maybe the habit of males opening doors began because they were just a bit more

"Margaret Mead's early work notwithstanding, there is not one documented case of a society where men existed in a female-dominated society. "Even many women researchers now agree that there are differences, but they say these differences are not relevant to the workplace."

The main disagreement, he says, stems from our not knowing how important these differences are or what we can do to understand them. "One reason we pursue research of this kind is because our differences dictate our behavior. To pretend that they don't exist is a mistake, likely to lead to a sense of frustration or failure.

"On the other hand, if we find that these differences are small and insignificant, then arbitrary barriers make no sense at all.' Swenson says he can't see why we can't admit to ome differences and be concerned with the essential fairness of situations, focusing our attention on the Throwing another curve into what is already a curvaceous subject, the professor says that since many traits are distributed equally through the sexes, one can expect some males to be more female and vice versa.

"Since averages don't fit the individual, we find that those people who don't fit the stereotypes do better. The supermacho male is too aggressive to deal within a professional setting while passive females are ignored."

However, the doctor says we shouldn't be too concerned about our sense of confusion caused by a nuickly changing social scene as "confusion is a realistic and adoptive response to change."

"When I was an undergraduate in the '60s we men worked at being sexist gentlemen. Later on, the scene changed to one of equality with everyone sensitive to patronization by either sex. "Now we're to the stage where we have to egotiate individual contracts to behavior for each erson we meet. This is not a bad way to do things, ust more complicated. Does she want me to open the door, should I pick up the check? These questions haunt us.

"It used to be that we men used to keep our pride and pay the bill. Now, at 38 and divorced, I'm willing to be much more humble."

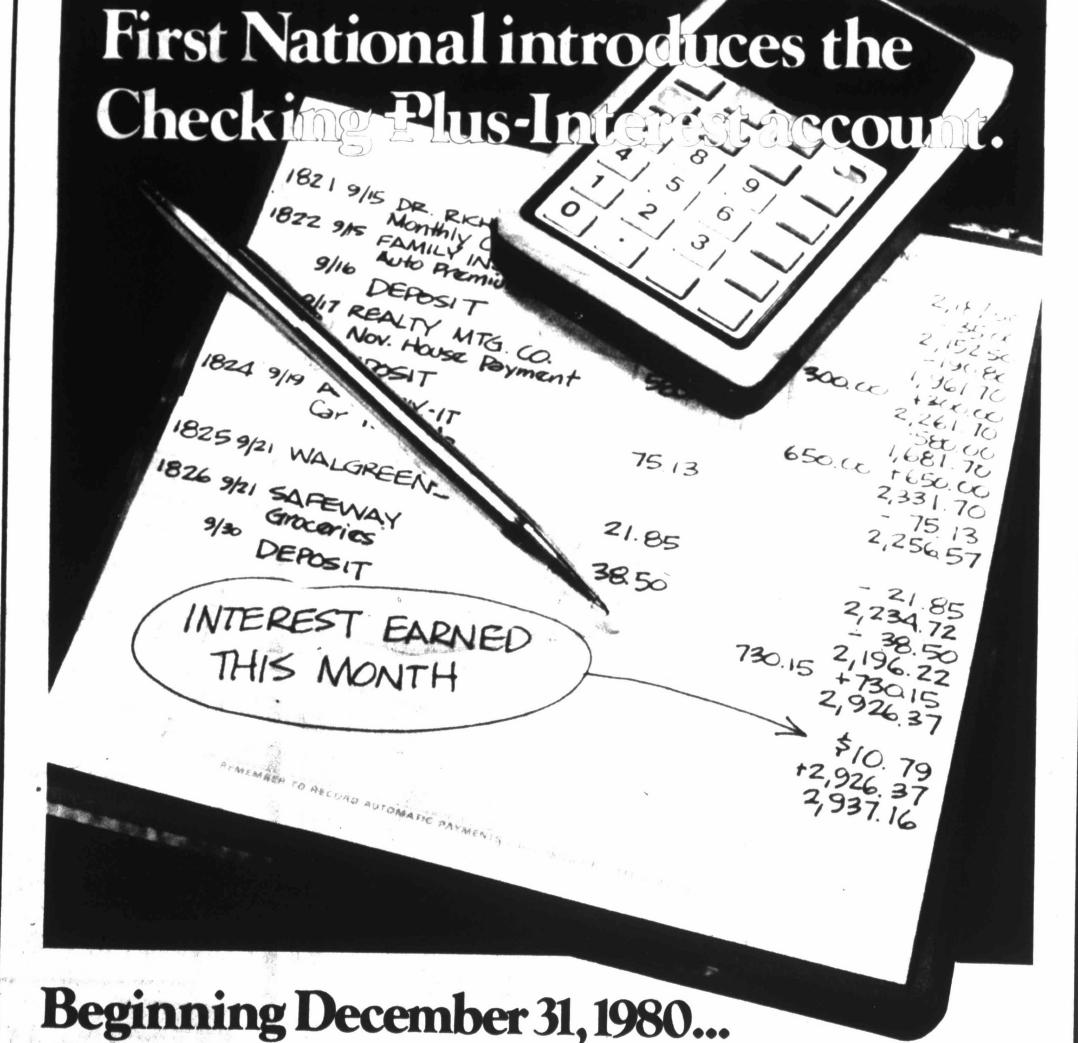

The psychologist says the Western world, for reasons both noble and selfish, is making huge changes and is, at the same time, quite surprised at how messy change can be.

Of course, he says, the problem of change is more amplified in Los Angeles where the roles are less clearly defined than in other parts of the country.

"There isn't more hypocrisy and selfishness here.

"There isn't more hypocrisy and selfishness here.

Accident spurs residents to fight for ambulance

By JAMES R. KING

PRESIDIO, Texas (AP) — The auto accident occurred more than two months ago, and in most small towns t probably would have been forgotten by now, except for those closest to the

But the citizens of Presidio have not forgotten. They were so outraged by what happened after the wreck that even today it is still a hot topic of

The accident itself was a familiar tragedy - the hour was late and the driver was drunk. The speeding car veered out of control on a curve and overturned several times, hurling three victims out

One of them, Antonio Brito, 24, was killed instantly, and those who saw the accident aftermath said Brito was luckier than Martin Manriquez, 16, who bled for 40 minutes waiting for an ambulance before he died.

Presidio has no doctor, so while frantic parents were waiting for the ambulance to arrive from Marfa, 60 tortuous miles away, they crossed the tiny international bridge here and woke up two young doctors in Ojinaga, Mexico.

The Mexican physicians hurried to the scene and did what they could. But their efforts were frustrated by a lack of emergency medical equip-

The ambulance arrived an hour after Manriquez died, and residents say the hour and 40 minutes the accident victims waited that night is par for this remote Southwest Texas border town of about 1,600 people.

The ambulance problem comes up every time there is an accident - and everybody looks at everybody else and says, 'Do something.' Well, after that accident (Sept. 13) enough people got mad enough that instead of asking they finally started doing," said Rita Terry, a local artist and wife of the U.S. Customs chief here.

Mary Luisa Spencer was one resident who helped change Presidio from a town of shoulder-shruggers and buck-passers to a community of volunteers and contributors.

"It dawned on us that no one else was going to help us. We certainly haven't received any help from Marfa (the county seat)," she said. "We realized if we wanted an ambulance

A committee was formed, and Mrs. Spencer was elected president. Announcements were made on the local radio station. Volunteers went door to door collecting money. Collection cans were placed in stores and shops all over town, and one was set up at the bridge over the Rio Grande.

'Our goal is $20,000 for a vehicle and the medical equipment needed to make it an ambulance," said Mrs. Spencer. So far, the committee has raised about $15,000 in cash or pledges.

'We asked each family to give $25, and most everybody has given something," she said.

The committee raised more than $300 by raffling off a Christmas tree and a toy vacuum cleaner. It raised a whopping $1,400 by raffling off an oil painting donated by Mrs. Terry, who specializes in Western landscapes.

Some donations have come from across the Rio Grande in Ojinaga, and the committee held a rodeo in the Mexican border town that raised more than $1,300.

U.S. Customs Chief Laurence Terry has offered what first aid equipment his office has for the town's use, and one of his men, Mike Pileggi, is called to emergencies routinely, along with Mrs. Terry. They are both certified emergency medical technicians

"It just shows us that when the town needs to pull together to get something done people don't hesitate to help," said Mrs. Spencer

Some volunteers and donors are motivated by more than community

Ismael Tarango, who was injured in a traffic accident and survived despite the long wait for an ambulance, donated $100, "because he said he knows how it feels to be lying there waiting," Mrs. Spencer said. "All he could do was lie there and say, 'Help me, help me.

Mrs. Rojelio Brito is vice president of the drive. Her husband, who was no relation to Anthony Brito, died after waiting an hour and 45 minutes for an ambulance the day before Thanksgiving last year.

Brito's pickup had overturned about 10 miles north of Presidio. He died 15 minutes after the ambulance to him in time," said Mrs. Terry.

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) - Want to

"The use of some stimulants like coffee or tea is desirable. They stimulate the body, which we want to do in cold weather

But this is the one point where the doctors differ.

"This is only theory, not fact, but I'm staying away from coffee or tea because they are really stimulants, not sources of energy," says Staebler. "They race the body's motor, but don't provide the energy. I tell people who want to stay warm to stay away from stimulating drinks."

For a good winter drink, "The recipe I've been using is one I call 'Russian tea," Staebler says. "It's two cups of Tang, one envelope of unsweetened lemonade, a half-cup of sugar, half a cup of instant tea, one teaspoon of cinnamon, half-teaspoon each of cloves and nutmeg. Mix it well and use two heaping teaspoons to a cup of boiling water.

"I drink it whenever I feel cool." Staebler, a native of Ontario, Canada, succeeded Donatelle as chairman of the department of family medicine at the University of North Dakota medical school.

Donatelle, a Wisconsin native, now holds a similar post at the University of Kansas. Both men have also lived in the chilly climes of Minneapolis.

As warming as the idea might be. Staebler says hot baths or showers should be avoided in winter. Temperate is the word.

"Hot baths rob the body of heat," Staebler says. "Water is terrible because it rapidly absorbs heat from the body. In the hospital, we use warm baths to bring temperatures down, and for a long time have been used to reduce fevers.

Hypothermia — the body's inability to hold heat - can kill.

"It's good advice for all age groups, but specifically older people, to develop the 'windshield concept' and make sure they cover their heads in the winter." Staebler said

"You should cover your heads and hands in the winter. The head takes almost 30 percent of the body's entire circulation. It's a tremendous radiator. An uncovered head can chill the body very quickly, although the rest is covered.

"And a lot of people bundle up with jackets, and forget the lower halves of their bodies.

Because of rising fuel and food prices, the elderly - particularly those on small incomes — are subject to a fuel crisis of the body as well as of the home, Staebler says.

Lack of either sufficient warmth or decent diet will sap the strenth provided by the other.

"Senior citizens whose nutritional state is not as good have lower reserves," he says. "Like a battery, their cranking power isn't as good. "Younger people crawl under the covers and produce heat through body mechanisms, but older people must also make sure they have an adequate balanced diet of fat, carbohydrates and protein."

'We've seen older people come in confused, disoriented, who in fact probably suffered from hypothermia and not strokes as we first thought."

Donatelle says it helps to wear porous, heat-retaining garments in layers, such as loosely woven wool or cotton. Bundling up too heavily requires the body to spend energy which may be needed to survive, if not to stay warm.

"The garments should trap air and

There probably won't be a Board of Education in 1990. There may not even be any schools, at least as we now know them.

Computer technology now in existence promises to make both the buildings and the bureaucracy obsolete before the end of this decade.

Tomorrow and tomorrow, in the next decade, the whining school boy, with his satchel and shining morning face, will creep like a snail unwillingly to his TV terminal. He will sit down at the keyboard, mark himself present, and call up the day's lessons from the school computer bank at the state capital in Hartford or wherever. The teacher, an expert in the field, will appear on the screen and begin the lesson, recitation or quiz, as the curriculum calls for, and homework, tests and book reports will be reviewed and corrected by a computer located in a basement miles away. Students who are ill can catch up on missed lessons via video cassettes, so a teacher inquiring when the Pilgrims landed no longer will be met with the classic demurral, "Eh ... teach, I was absent that day."

Officials say supply, demand scales lean in favor of teachers

ODESSA — Midland and Odessa school officials say the supply and demand scales are moving in favor of teachers and will continue to do so during

The local outlook reflects national and regional findings reported in a supply and demand survey published by the Assocation for School, College and University Staffing (ASCUS).

Conducted for ASCUS by the Career Planning and Placement Center at Kansas State University, the report says job opportunities for teachers have improved appreciably during the past four years.

Although supply and demand ratios vary by geo-Although supply and demand ratios vary by geographical area and teaching field, opportunities to teach have increased overall and teacher shortages are reported in several fields.

The south central region of the U.S., consisting of Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisana, reported considerable shortages in the fields of mathematics, chemistry, physics and industrial arts and slight shortages in agriculture, bilingual education, driver's education, biology, earth science, social science, speech pathology-audiology, and most areas of special education.

THE REPORT showed a balance between supply and demand in business education, elementary and secondary counseling, primary and intermediate elementary education, English, journalism, Spanish, vocal and instrumental music and speech.

Slight surpluses were reported in only five teaching fields - art, home economics, French, German and physical education.

The ASCUS report says one of the reasons for the healthy employment outlook for teachers is the reduction in the number of new teachers entering the field.

"Various data reveal that the number of new teachers completing programs leading to certifica-tion is now less than half the new teacher total in 1970," the report says.

Thus, the ability of job candidates to relocate continues to be important. For secondary school teachers, having a second teaching field and being able to supervise extracurricular activities continues to be important.

Locally, the supply and demand picture is much the same as shown in the south central United

Leslie Hines, personnel director for Midland Inde-pendent School District, said there are probably as many applicants as needed from May to August, but vacancies made late in the summer are difficult to fill.

"These vacancies often reveal major shortages in the areas of bilingual education, math, physical science and vocational courses," he said, pointing out that many people who make application for teaching positions have found other employment in business or industry by the end of the summer.

He said a position in vocational agriculture was unfilled this year.

"WE HAVE an extreme shortage in substitute teachers. We find more and more families need two incomes to survive, and both family members need full-time work," he said.

He pointed out the number of days a substitute works each month is somewhat unpredictable, and there is also the problem of substitutes who are mothers finding babysitters on short notice.

Hines said there are slight surpluses in the number of applicants in home economics, social studies and physical education.

Dr. Joe Starnes, personnel director at Ector County Independent School District, said all positions in math and science were filled this fall although there had been a critical shortage and a position in industrial education is still unfilled.

"We also had need for a tennis coordinator, but that was a unique situtation for this year." He said there is a great need for teachers in all areas of special education.

Dr. Scott Irwin, professor of pedagogical studies at UTPB, said students in elementary education at the university are finding a "good balance" when it comes to finding teaching positions.

"A high percentage of our graduates are getting positions. The only exceptions are those people who by their own choice don't compete or because they go on to graduate work."

He noted about 30 students are enrolled in elementary student teaching this fall and another 25 to 30 will be enrolled this spring.

"TYPICALLY WE graduate 50-65, and 90 percent of these work in Midland-Odessa or within a predictable commuting distance," he said.

Students working for secondary certification also face a balanced picture, according to Dr. Russell Johnson, associate professor of pedagogical studies. He said seven UTPB students are now student teaching in area secondary schools. Another 20 teaching in area secondary schools. Another 20 will likely seek certification this spring.

"Fortunately, we have a high rate of employment for our graduates," he said, noting most students who graduate with secondary certification find teaching jobs and continue in the education field.

However, some stay in teaching for a few years and then go into business or industry, he said.

Kids give two butterflies cross-country trip by jet

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Judith Leach told her kindergarten class that their monarch butterflies might get cold in Rhode Island because "they can't wear hats and coats and mittens.

On Thursday, the two butterflies were among the passengers of a California-bound jet. They even took their own lunch — sugar water.

"We had to go to the counter and get little tiny tickets," Mrs. Leach said with a smile.

The cross-country trip came after the kindergarten teacher at Washington Oak School, Coventry, found two caterpillars last month. They were eating milkweed, leading her to believe that they were monarchs which could not survive a New England

She took them to her class, where the caterpillars became the subjects of class drawings and stories. On weekends, they went home to a box in Mrs. Leach's bathtub.

Finally, last weekend, the insects spread their beautiful black and orange wings — and Mrs. Leach began looking for a way to get them to a warmer

When she ran into United Airlines custom service supervisor Joe Dzialo in a store, she told him her story. And they ended up in the cockpit of a United Airlines jet destined for San Diego.

But the tale may not be over. A student has rought in another caterpillar.
"I think it's starting all over again," Mrs. Leach

A neglected winter or fall garden can become insect haven

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent — Agriculture

A week of mild weather favored cotton harvest and outdoor activity by gardeners pursuing fall gardening chores. Cotton producers who have stripped fields are finding turnout and yield of the 1990 crop to be even more substandard than anticipated. Harvest activity is still slow as many producers are giving fields a little longer to dry. The profuse growth that occurred after the heavy September rainfall has meant a longer wait for more favorable

A neglected garden site this fall and winter can become an insect haven waiting to explode next spring with hundreds of hungry and unwanted insects. So, to reduce the number of insects in your garden next spring, destroy their critical food supply

Garden insects, like most living creatures, need food and shelter to survive freezing temperatures and other adverse weather conditions. Don't give them a place to spend the winter in your garden.

Ideal places for insects to overwinter are trash, vegetable stubble, unharvested fruits and tubers boards, mulch, tall grass and weeds. Removing plant residues and disposing of debris, weeds and other volunteer plants eliminates food and shelter for many insect pests such as cutworms, webworms, aphids, wireworms, white grubs, squash bugs, sow bugs and spider mites.

When a garden stops producing, spade plant material into the soil or take to the compost pile. Don't allow it to remain in the garden. Spading the soil deeply during the fall also is good as it will expose many insects to be eaten by birds and predators. Other insects will be tilled deep enough into the soil to prevent their emergence.

By practicing good garden sanitation this fall, you will be ridding yourself of many undesirable garden inhabitants and saving time and money for insect and disease control next growing season

Although tulips are advertised in garden catalogues and sold in all nursery outlets here in the south, seldom is anyone told about their need for a cold treatment prior to planting. The bulb catalogs never mention this fact.

Tulips require cold temperatures to perform at their best, and southern winters are usually too warm for good flower bud development. The south ern gardener, therefore must provide a substitute, cold conditioning by chilling the bulbs artificially at 35 to 40 degrees for at least 45 to 60 days prior to planting. The vegetable drawer in the refrigerator provides an excellent also for this transfer. provides an excellent place for this treatment. Many southern bulb fanciers keep an old refrigerator in the garage or store room for this purpose.

Keep the bulbs refrigerated until mid-December, then plant immediately upon removal from cold storage. If bulbs are planted earlier than this, the warm Texas soil may nullify the cold treatment

Pre-cooled bulbs are frequently advertised, but unless they are kept in cold storage, the normal garden shop temperatures will usually nullify the pre-cooling effect if they are not sold immediately.

Without pre-cooling, the flower quality will usually tulips should be considered as annual plants and discarded at the end of the blooming season.

Hyacinths respond to much the same treatment, but other spring flowering bulbs can be planted immediately after purchasing.

When purchasing bulbs of any type, beware of the so-called "bargain" bulb. The spring flowers will only be as good as the bulbs you use, so select them carefully and buy from reputable dealers. Good bulbs are firm, clean and free of insects and diseases, while bargain bulbs are usually dried out and of poor quality because they were held in the dry warm atmosphere of the store too long before dropping the price.

Congress may ask intensive study of public land

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal overnment said Friday it plans an itensive study of some 24 million cres of public land in the West to etermine if it should be recommended to Congress for permanent protec-tion as untouched wilderness.

The Bureau of Land Management, ompleting the second phase of a cylew of 174 million acres of public and under its jurisdiction, said the lecision releases 33 million acres to called multiple-use management, allowing commercial use and devel-

The first phase of the review, com-pleted last December, resulted in the elease of 117 million acres that BLM said was obviously unsuitable for wilderness designation. Friday's derision brings the total land excluded from wilderness consideration to 150 million acres.

The review does not include 224 million acres of BLM land in Alaska. That land was considered separately by Congress in the historic Alaska lands bill passed earlier this week.

Conservationists complimented the BLM on its review, but said it would fight the agency on some recommen-

"On the whole, a very large and very complex process has been done very well," said William A. Turnage, executive director of the Wilxgness Society. "But we do have some diffi-culties."

Turnage, joined by representatives of the Sierra Club, Friends of the Earth and the Public Lands Institute, characterized the BLM's decision as a bare-bones recommendation" that enjustly excluded many desirable

"It's a rather severe reduction," Turnage said. "In every state, BLM has eliminated some lands that we feel are emminently suitable as wilderness. It's clear tht if you start with 174 million acres and end up with 24 million acres, that you've cut to the

The 33 million acres released Friday were found not to meet the cri-teria for wilderness desigation. Those critea mandated large, natural areas capable of providing an "outstanding opportunity for either primitive rec-

In the next phase of the review, to be stretched over a six-year period, BLM will do intensive studies on the 24 million acres, which are contained in 919 separate areas scattered among the 14 western states.

The study will include mineral surveys of the tracts to determine what natural resources could be taken from the land and try to strike a balance between the wilderness values of the land nd the ommercial

"Many areas will have high conflicts between energy and wilderness characteristics," said BLM Director Frank Gregg. "Our job now is to discuss the relative values in an objective manner and make the best recommendations we can to the secretary (of the Interior), the president

Dear Nancy: Although I make it a practice not to diagnose a condition from a distance, I'm going to make a partial exception in this case. At least I'm going to exclude a diagnosis. I can say unequivocally that you do not have cellulite, and the reason I can be certain is that there's no such thing. I am unaware of any dictio-nary, either general or medical, that carries a listing for "cellulite."

Those who support the cellulite theory say it is a special kind of fat, easily recognizable by its orange-peel texture. It is supposed to be much more common in women than in men because it is influenced by sex hormones which determine both body structure and the distribution of fat.

Actually, fat is no different in chemical composition or structure regardless of where it it found in the body. ss of where it it found in the body.

by those who compile dictionaries, is described as a vegetable sponge that helps destroy cellulite. It is said to work by promoting better circulation, thereby increasing the elimination of waste material.

While it is true that diet, exercise, and the use of the loofah will result in weight loss in most people, it is equal-ly true that they would be able to achieve the same result through diet and exercise alone. As I have written on numerous occasions, fat accumu-lates in the body when a person's intake of calories exceeds the amount expended. Any adjustment in diet that changes this balance — that is, decreases the intake of calories in relation to the amount expended would lead to a loss of weight. Similarly, if a person's food intake remained unchanged but the expenditure of calories increased as a result of additional exercise, the same goal would be achieved.

In effect, "cellulite" is a cosmetic rather than a medical problem. Referring to fat deposits with an orange-peel texture as "cellulite" does not change the fact that it is no different from other fat.

Although I am very conscious of the importance of cosmetic consideraimportance of cosmetic considerations in my patients, as a physician I

Social Security task force to suggest eligibility change

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - A Reagan task force on Social Security will urge that the eligibility age for getting the retirement enefits be gradually raised from 65, the task force chair-nan said Friday.

Economist Rita Ricardo Campbell of the Hoover Institution lined to discuss the details, but she said, "It's true we've ed some age postponement The task force will e out that way.

Other sources on the task force said the group tentatively has reed that eventually, retirees should be at least 67 and possibly 68 to get full Social Security benefits.

Ms. Campbell, in a telephone interview from the Stanford University think tank, said that unless the age is raised gradually

The task force report is still tentative, with the nine members still reviewing drafts. A final version will be presented to Reagan and his economic team in December or early January. t Reagan's transition office here, a spokesman, Robin Gray,

Two sources on the task force, who asked not to be identified, said the group also will recommend holding down the long-term costs of the system by switching from a wage index to a price ndex in computing retirees' initial benefits. The panel also liscussed possible alternatives to the Consumer Price Index for etermining annual cost-of-living increases for retirees.

One alternative would be to make the annual increase by using ther an index of prices or wages, whichever was lower that

The task force also is suggesting improving benefits for working wives, which would cost more. During his campaign, Reagan promised to appoint a team of The Social Security Administration said it would cost more than $2 billion to eliminate the retirement test for the elderly. Reagan officials have said the move would cause more of the elderly to work and pay higher taxes, thereby reducing the net loss to the Treasury to under $500 million.

Ms. Campbell said raising the age of eligibility eventually would make the retirement test moot.

Robert Myers, chief actuary of Social Security from 1947 to 1970, has suggested Congress pass legislation now to raise the age after the turn of the century when the post-World War II baby boom reaches retirement.

Stanford economist Michael Boskin has suggested gradually raising the age for early or reduced benefits from 62 to 65 and for full benefits from 65 to 68 by increasing the eligibility age one month a year for 36 years.

U.S. should prepare for war, minimize risk, adviser says

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The United States, with the West's biggest arsenal of atomic weapons, is a magnet for nuclear attack and should prepare r a nuclear war because that "is the only war that ean kill us," says one member of Ronald Reagan's loreign policy advisers.

But at the same time, the United States should tize the risk of war by vastly improving its civil fense and withdrawing American troops from illied nations around the world, says Beverly Hills ney Laurence W. Beilenson.

These soldiers, he says, are "hostages to get us in vars" and should be withdrawn over five years. ink that nuclear war somewhere, someplace, me is probable. However, he does say the spread of nuclear weapons to many countries, is inevitable as the weapons become cheaper and easier to make. And if people believe only a madman would start a nuclear war, he said, then they are predicting such war "because there have been mad rulers throughout history.'

Beilenson says it is a mistake to emphasize, at the expense of nuclear might, the ability to project American might around the world "to fight wars the American people are unwilling to fight.'

"To survive as a free people is our primary aim. We should prepare for a nuclear war because a nuclear war is the only war that can kill us," he

There are two ways to prepare, Beilenson said. First, improve defenses so the bombs don't strike. "If men were bright enough to invent nuclear weapons, given the necessary resources and urgency, they would be bright enough to invent a defense. We ought to get about it, with a crash program."

Second, improve the chance for survival if the bombs do strike. "There is no excuse for our not having a civil defense. We can save millions of American lives. Civil defense is passive, you dig holes in the ground, that you get in, so you don't get Beilenson said John F. Kennedy was the last U.S. president with a strong commitment to civil defense, due to the Cuban missile crisis. "I think we're going to get a president who has a strong commitment to civil defense in Ronald Reagan...," he said.

Halbouty was ready with big energy report soon as Reagan was elected

By MAX B. SKELTON AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Michel T. Halbouty had a two-foot package ready for delivery as soon as Ronald Reagan became president-elect.

The package contained the report of Reagan's energy policy task force, a 17 member group headed by Halbouty, Houston geologist and independent oil operator.

"We had a mission to prepare an energy policy to be submitted to the president-elect after the election, not at any time during the campaign." Halbouty said.

"We did not give him any information as a committee during the campaign and the two-foot high report went to him the day after the elec-

Withdrawals affect supply

WASHINGTON, D. C. — A survey of public lands studies shows that Federal withdrawals and land restrictions have adversely affected the nation's supply of minerals and fuels. The survey, conducted by Everett and Associates, Rockville, Md., reported that these obstacles, "coupled with expensive time delays resulting from administrative processes, have made many domestic fuels and mineral projects uncertain. Moreover, the survey said, these restrictions and delays have "to a significant degree rendered the fuels and minerals industries incapable of responding rapidly to market demands.

Further, the report charged, Federal land-use planning processes rarely include adequate assessments of minerals and fuels resource potential.

The report said that a Federal agency frequently withdraws land from a public area without consideration for its known or potential uses. "This lack of coordinated multiple-use management creates a serious impediment to the proper evaluation and use of public lands as the nation's resource base," the document said.

The Federal restrictions, the survey said, have caused the nation's balance of trade and national security to be "seriously affected" by dependence on foreign sources of energy.

The report noted that "it is apparent that the problems are not new; they have been clearly identified in the past. Yet the problems have not diminished, despite such remedial action as has been taken. Instead, both the severity of potential adverse consequences and the extent of reduced access to minerals and fuels on public lands appear to be increasing with the passage of time. The survey was commissioned by the Public Lands Study Group, a Washington-based organization consisting of the American Mining Congress, the American Petroleum Institute, the Rocky Mountain Oil and Gas Association, Independent Petroleum Association of America, and the Western Oil and Gas Association.

Goldschmidt said there were too many differences between the original plan offered by the Texas port authority and the latest proposal, including a move from 26 miles to 16 miles offshore and a change in depth from 100 to 75 feet. The port authority could not line up enough commitments for the offshore terminal's use to be able to finance revenue bonds to construct it as origi-

Kent Hance gives tax instructions

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U. S. Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock, Tex., issued a reminder last week to persons with oil and gas interests concerning correct application of the depletion allowance deduction on upcoming income taxes.

Hance, who strongly opposed the "windfall profits" tax, said the depletion allowance deduction becomes doubly important because of its relation with the "windfall" tax.

"If you have income from oil and gas interests you may want to make sure the depletion allowance deduction is applied to gross income before 'windfall' profits are substracted." Hance said. "Failure to do so could substantially increase your tax payment."

"The crude oil 'Windfall Profits' Tax of 1980 does not deny the percentage depletion allowance for the portion of receipts treated as 'windfall profits.' " the congressman said. 'The standard procedure for treating the depletion deduction is still in effect on gross income.

"Since this is the first year in which the 'windfall profits' tax is being administered, individuals affected by the tax should be sure to deduct the depletion allowance from gross rather tyan from net (after tax) income. If individual taxpayers have specific questions they should contact their tax preparers or the Internal Revenue Service."

Hance said he plans to introduce legislation in January during the new session of Congress to repeal or alter drastically the "windfall profits" ta ... He earlier sponsored legislation to exempt royalty owners and independent producers from the majority of

The solarists say big business has two motives in this effort: to discourage development of solar power any faster than would suit its interest in nuclear and fossil fuels, and to be in a position to control the market when the nation decides it is ready to invest in solar technology in a big way.

World Bank head sees some defaults

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - With some countries in danger of defaulting on their international loans, an American banker is stepping in to head the bank of last resort, the bank that lends to the world's "basket cases."

The choice of Alden W. Clausen, the president and chief executive officer of the Bank of America, to head the World Bank comes at a time when concerns are growing over the ability of many countries to pay their loans.

Clausen, in an interview at his office here, said he expects some countries will not be able to pay their debts, but that no catastrophe was brewing for the major international banks. And he said he will be willing to make loans to countries that could borrow nowhere else.

In his 31 years at Bank of America. Clausen worked his way up from a $185-a-month clerk counting cash in a vault to become the $790,000-a-year boss of the world's largest commercial bank. The World Bank job will pay just $78,000.

The World Bank last year lent more than $12 billion to developing countries, with the loans going to build roads, schools and industries and finance a wide range of other projects including the search for new energy supplies in poor nations strapped by soaring foreign oil bills.

Although Bank of America's international operations have expanded dramatically since he became president in 1969, Clausen says the bank's lending abroad has been marked by "conservatism. At the World Bank, however, Clausen said he will be dealing with some of the "basket cases," countries "that are not entitled to credit from the commercial sector. "For those countries, you need a World Bank, you need international financial institutions that can step in. You need an International Monetary Fund" to lend money to nations whose balance of payments are in the red,

Clausen said. "For development and restructuring, you need the World Bank" and its affiliates who can step in when "a country is really behind the goal posts and needs to borrow for a very long time at a marginal interest rate in order to keep the patient alive and effect the cure," Clausen said.

The IMF generally lends to countries whose credit, if not in good position, has a reasonable chance of recovering. The World Bank, with 138 member countries, lends mostly to countries that cannot qualify for IMF

The problems of the world's poor countries have increased since oil prices first shot up in 1973 and 1974, and worsened again last year when of prices leaped again.

The oil-importing developing countries are expected to spend $50 billion for petroleum this year, up from $7 billion in 1973, and may face a $100 billion-a-year oil bill by 1990, according to a World Bank projection.

The mounting oil payments have eaten into export revenues these countries - among them, India and Brazil - use to finance domestic development programs and repay loans to Western banks.

While Clausen did not say which, if any, countries might fail to repay their loans to international banks, he acknowledged that "I would expect there will be lesses out there."

But "I don't see any devastating, blockbuster losses that will bring the commercial banking system down to its knees and cause the extreme of runs on banks," he said. "I just do not think that's in the cards,'

The 57-year-old Clausen was picked by President Carter to hold the traditionally American slot of World Bank president, replacing Robert McNamara, who is retiring.

But the nomination was approved by Ronald Reagan and seems likely to sail through. Clausen was a "low-profile" adviser and supporter of Reagan. The Clausen nomination is expected to be approved by the bank's board of directors by the end of November.

Clausen's nomination has been generally well-received among the countries aided by the World Bank, in part because he has gained an image of being more sympathetic to their problems than delegation at a World Bank meeting in Kenya, where the United States opposed efforts to tie establishment of new international reserves to aid to developing countries. But he made a speech that some interpreted as opposing the American position.

"You have undermined our whole position at this conference," George P. Schultz, then Treasury secretary, was reported later to have told Clau-

"Two technical gold market pressures are about to detonate a bullish explosion in the interrelated markets for gold bullion and gold stocks. The first is that gold is going up because the effort to drive it down has failed. Any market that won't go down will go up. The source of the second pressure is the foreign manipulation that failed. The London gold bears first sold short and then bad-mouthed the market. Their failure to trigger a selling panic has hurt them in a rising market that is being driven up by two fundamental pressures as well: 1) the roaring resurgence of 'hyperinflation' in the U.S. and 2) the sizzling of war dangers in the Middle East. BUSINESS NOTEBOOK Texas labor leaders may be on defensive

By BILL KIDD

Austin Bureau AUSTIN - Legislation for a corporate profits tax, election of members of the Public Utility Commission, increased unemployment and worker's compensation benefits and expansion of group auto insurance proograms are among the matters on the Texas

AFL-CIO's 1981 legislative agenda. Labor officials agree they may find themselves on the defensive in the 67th Legislature, with its apparently more conservative makeup compared to the 66th, but note "we've found ourselves in that position more often than not. Some items on the AFL-CIO's list such as support for "sunset" proce-

Others are, however, and include items such as creation of a fair employment practices commission, collective bargaining rights for farm workers, wellhead taxes on oil and gas production and possibly repealing

the $25 automobile documentary fee

- enacted by the 1979 Legislature after much wrangling. In addition to expanding the group auto insurance program, enacted last session for drivers 55 and older, AFL-CIO would like to see all group accident and health policies include treatment for alcoholism - a proposal which was rejected in 1979. On worker's compensation, the labor organization would like to see benefits at two-thirds of an employee's gross wages or four-fifths of the employee's spendable wages, without payments for the duration of disabili-

Dollar-volume of applications has been exceeding half a billion dollars a month, he notes, with activity still "We're seeing more common stock offerings than in the last few years," Latham says. "That's a good sign that people are willing to buy equity now; I'm not sure why that is...It may be a feeling that the return on fixed-return investments just aren't keeping up with inflation, either, and there's some merit in getting back into the risktaking of capital investments.

Latham also notes, however, that money-market issues also remain "very high" and account for a good portion of the filings. State Board of Insurance has adopted staff-proposed procedures intended to expedite processing of individual rate applications from insurance companies - which run in the tens of thousands annually. Those applications include requests on worker's compensation, general liability, auto and burglary policies

ings in personal lines is under study. House Employment Practices Committee has recommended that the 1981 Legislature pass a bill allowing "certain financially capable employers" to self-insure their worker's compensation risk, through a system to be administered by the State Board of Insurance. A similar bill failed to win final passage in the House of Representatives in 1979. That measure would have covered only the larger corpora-

The committee also recommended that group insurance programs, such as are authorized for political subdivisions, be allowed for "private organizations or qualified groups;" that legislation be passed to "encourage claimants with hernia to undergo a medically approved operation when possible or lose a given amount of benefits;" that lump-sum payments in worker's compensation cases be prohibited; and that subcontractors be made liable for their employees' injuries "whenever the work is performed under a bona fide sub-contract between a prime contractor and a subcontractor. Also requested is legislation to create a statutory preference for "older 'suits-to-get-aside' that would hasten the resolution of such claims more than a year old."

SBI has set a meeting with its staff for 2 p.m. Nov. 25 to discuss its final report on insurance problems of the elderly and handicapped, which is to go to the Legislature next year.

Tower says schools need aid for aliens

By SOLL SUSSMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John Tower, pointing to the federal government's inability to enforce immigration law, says local school districts should get some financial help to educate illegal alien

"The states are not responsible for the establishment or enforcement of our nation's immigration policy and laws, and I do not believe they should be burdened with the expense brought on by the federal government's failure of enforcement," the Texas Republican said last week in introducing a bill to provide federal aid.

The measure is the second introduced since a federal judge last summer declared unconstitutional a Texas law that denied state funds for the education of illegal alien children.

Supreme Court Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. later refused to allow Texas school districts to postpone enrolling illegal aliens or to charge them tuition while the decision was being appealed.

Rep. Jim Mattox, a Democrat from Dallas, introduced in the House a bill similar to Tower's but there has not been any movement since it was referred to committee.

Tower aide Linda Hill said any groundwork laid during the current lame-duck congressional session would make it easier to re-introduce the bill when the new session starts next year.

"It would be overly optimistic to predict passage," she said of the bill's chances during the lame-duck

Tower's bill also would ease federal regulations for local school districts with growing enrollments of illegal alien children, including suspension of the Department of Education's proposed bilingual education regulations.

The loosened regulations would apply in districts where 200 illegal alien children are enrolled or where they make up at least 2 percent of total enrollment. The bill authorizes a maximum of $200 million annually for the 1981-1983 fiscal years to be paid to eligible state education agencies. The reimbursement for local school districts would be the average per pupil expenditure in the state or $1,500

Texas was the only state to have a law of the type leclared unconstitutional by U.S. District Judge Woodrow Seals in Houston last summer. The state's school districts have not reported the expected flood of illegal alien children since the court order went into effect. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, is the sponsor of a proposal to authorize $45 million in funds to border shool districts for the construction of new facilities, particularly classrooms, to handle the increased nrollment of legal aliens.

Boot business booming in NYC

Transplanted Texans take Western touch along

By SOLL SUSSMAN Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Texans aren't the only ones who swear by their Justins, their Noconas and their Tony Lamas. Two transplanted Dallasites have found the boot business booming deep in the heart of Robin Steakley and Al Martinez headed East with the idea that New Yorkers, although probably not yet ready for the flash of Cutter Bill's, might be hanker ing for a new look on their feet.

The result, some two years later, is a boot boutique on New York's booming West Side successful enough to have just expanded into the onetime dry cleaner's store next door to add Stetson hats and other western

And the owners of To Boot and the neighboring Clothes To Boot claim they are not worried in the east that the boots at the base of their business might be just a fad.

We're seeing a tremendous increase in repeat business - so it's totally transcended faddism, Steakley said. "They're fun; they're comfortable and they make a little statement.

However, the auctioneers firmly denied a French press report that the pear-shaped diamond earrings belonged to Empress Farah, widow of deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi of Iran.

Iran's ambassador to Switzerland, Gholam Ali Farivar, told The Associated Press that an Iranian commission in charge of "recuperating the shah's stolen property" is investigating the French report. He said he doubted the earrings were part of the Iranian crown jewels, adding, "To my knowledge, these are being kept in the vaults of the Central Bank of Iran."

The earrings are made up of two large diamonds weighing 58.6 carats and 61.8 carats, suspended from "smaller" diamonds weighing 5.6 carats and 5.9 carats.

Sotheby's said the earrings' price exceeds by more than $200,000 the previous record for the sale of a work of art or jewelry. The previous record was held by the painting "Juliet and her nurse" by English artist J.M.W. Turner. An unidentified Argentine bought it at auction in New York last May for $6.4 million.

The previous record for a single lot of jewelry was $1.55 million paid for The boot store carries only Texas made brands. The Texans admit to having learned all they know about boots only since they decided to set up shop in New York, but they have used their Texas heritage to advantage in advertising and publicity.

'We became boot experts real fast," Steakley The media took an immediate liking to the store, because we were sort of different from the average New York businessman.

Martinez said he designed the store to avoid the western cliches that were at the time becoming almost commonplace in New York.

"I'd gone to Saks and Bloomingdales and all of the department stores. They were still treating it as a costume," he said. "The boots themselves are western, so why not put them in a backdrop that was Retailing is a new experience for both partners Steakley said they had been tossing around the idea of moving to New York for some months before coming up with the idea of a boot store.

'We were sort of antsy to make a move," he said. 'If you're going to be alive in the United States, you might as well live in New York.'

Steakley said it's the challenge of it that's exciting, a feeling that a business that works in New York Sources in the art could be successful anywhere. "To be successful in New York, you have to be the best at whatever you're doing," he said. Some of the boots were designed by Martinez, chased the 16th century including a model for men expressly made to meet German painting "Christ the conservative demands of Wall Street. in the clothing store is now 70-30, but the western items have had enough success for them to plan to increase the share to 50-50.

The owners admit that "Texas chic" as evidenced by hit movies and television series has played a part in their success, but they deny it is on the down-

"There were people who were predicting that last year, that Texas chic was on its way out," Steakley said

He added that those people were proven wrong. The owners keep a handwritten list on a yellow pad of their celebrity customers, and it includes Mia Farrow, Mick Jagger, John Lennon and Yoko Ono, Diane Keaton, Arthur Miller and the entire Isley Brothers

Steakley claimed the business' main problem so far has been that demand nationwide for Texasmade boots is outstripping the supply by far.

'We're down to the nubbins now," he said about To Boot's inventory. "We're literally turning people

Renewing the dream

That old double curse - inflation and interest rates — remains a barrier to home ownership for literally millions of middle-class Americans.

Some communities have struck out on their own to find a solution to the problem and to help renew the great American dream.

In Midland, for example, the single-family home mortgage bond programs have proved exceedingly successful. Hundreds of low- and middle-income families have benefitted from the two bond programs staged here already, acquiring homes at mortgage rates considerably less than the prevailing rates.

Elsewhere in the nation, other communities have found methods of reducing the financial burden of home ownership.

Pilot projects in Hayward, Calif., Shreveport, La. and Alleghany County, Pa. have shown vividly that a good percentage of the increase in new home costs is the result of burdensome building permit processes, overly restrictive construction codes and zoning laws that require construction on lots larger than what is really

Officials in those three communities found that the cost of a new, single-family home could be reduced as much as 33 percent by simplifying the building permit process, permitting the use of prefabricated materials and revising zoning laws to allow home construction on smaller lots.

Significantly, the most important savings resulted from speeding up the granting of construction permits and revising building codes that add needlessly to the cost and complexity of housing construction.

In California, for example, delays in approving building permit applications boost the cost of many new homes by as much as 20 percent.

While individual cities and communities can reduce the cost of home ownership through progressive, creative actions, the federal government remains the major culprit in this home ownership nightmare.

The problems of inflation and unacceptably high interest rates won't be removed until some semblance of fiscal and monetary discipline is re-established in Washington, D.C.

The nation's elected leaders should take note that such is a primary concern of taxpavers throughout the nation.

Russian razor produces no close shave for Arafat

WASHINGTON — A reader has asked me to help him with a problem he has. The question he posed is: "I notice that PLO leader Yasser Arafat and new Iranian Prime Minister Rajai always manage to appear with a four- to six-day growth of beard, which never grows any longer. How do they manage to do it?"

In order to get the answer I called a friend of mine at the CIA who was very upset that I was on to something. He agreed to meet me in a safe house in McLean. Va. He told me to take a taxi to National Airport, buy a ticket to Bangor, Me., and then at the last moment rent a car and drive to the address.

When I met him at the house there were three CIA agents in the living room, who refused to give their names, and my friend.

"Why are you interested in Arafat and Rajai's shaving problems?" one of them wanted to know

I played dumb. "Just curiosity. A reader asked me and I thought he Rescue attempt: Was failure intentional?

WASHINGTON - If the Senate takes Ronald Reagan's suggestion and probes every aspect of the Iranian hostage situation, the senators won't like what they learn about the aborted rescue mission last April.

The shocking truth is that our military and intelligence professionals the pampered darlings of congressional conservatives — planned, re-hearsed and executed the raid as if it were Amateur Night at the PTA. The breakdown of the helicopters, humiliating as that was, didn't compare with the failures of command-level brainpower that foredoomed the compiex expedition. A combined operation of the type envisioned — a secret raid by land. sea and air forces on enemy territory — is the trickiest military operation on the books. It requires careful planning, tight security and bold leadership if the men who must carry it off are to have a fighting chance.

There was a time within memory when combined operations were an American specialty. D-Day in Normandy was the most spectacular example; the Inchon landing in Korea more than six years later showed that our armed forces still had the knack they had perfected in World War II.

How was it possible, then, that three decades later, the Pentagon's best and brightest could produce nothing better than a fiasco that made the U.S. military a laughingstock among friend and foe alike? It's a question congressional investigators might well ask.

I've already reported on the confusion and lack of inter-service coordination that plagued the rescue mission from start to tragic finish. Now, from intelligence and Pentagon do raid had little chance of success. Indeed, the plan itself was so complicated, and the preliminary blunders so serious, that some bitter insiders suspect the raid was never intended to be more than a show — a predictable failure designed to convince the frustrated American public that Jimmy Carter was, after all, willing to "do something" - or perhaps to demonstrate that military action would not work.

Here are some of the undisclosed details that show how hopeless the commandos' chances were:

- The Desert One site was a wellknown CIA evacuation area, dating back to the days before the shah's overthrow. It was chosen despite the fact that a high-ranking Iranian security officer, who supervised development of the CIA site, was known to have been captured by the revolutionary authorities. The officer was arrested some time before the rescue attempt. Sources said that even if he did not tell what he knew under torture before he was executed, he had a document on him at the time of his arrest which pinpointed the Desert One landing site.

Desert One included two missions to resupply Iranian agents — on Oct. 21, 1979, and March 4, 1980. A third mission — to collect soil samples to determine whether the C-130 transports could land safely - occurred in the second week of March. The sample collectors landed in a light plane, which was immediately spotted by a smuggler's vehicle - an ominous portent of the April raid.

- If the mission had proceeded, as scheduled, from Desert One to a mountain hideout east of Tehran and then on to the actual rescue, the prospects were even more grim. The CIA estimated informally that there would be 60 percent losses among the hostages — in other words, about 30 of them would die. This estimate was regarded as optimistic by CIA ana-

- The commandos were wearing black knit caps with strips of reflective tape inside. If they found they needed firepower from the gunships that would be circling Tehran, they were to signal for help by pulling on the caps inside out so the reflective tape would be visible to the helicopter

 Operational changes continued until virtually the last minute. In fact, two days before pushoff, officers were still sketching optional versions of the plan in the sands of Oman

The first C-130 to land activated landing lights buried in the sand on a preliminary mission. It landed in spite of the fact that the pilots saw vehicles on the road below. So when the transports touched down, the commandos had to chase and fire at one of the vehicles — a smuggler's truck — and capture the other, a bus full of civilians. The Iranians were to be evacuated in the C-130s, first to Egypt and then to Germany.

The raiders' maps were pitifully inadequate. For example, soldiers on Kawasaki motorcycles were to post themselves at a sharp curve shown on the map. But there was no such curve, and the motorcyclists overshot their assigned location, creating confu-

 A list of Iranian undercover agents in Tehran was left behind in one of the abandoned helicopters. Only three of dozens succeeded in getting out of the country, using French and Belgian papers.

 There was some reason to believe the helicopters would have been blown up if they had made it to the Tehran stadium chosen as an evacuation site. Though a CIA agent had traversed the stadium and found no land mines, some experts pointed out that the Iranians would be more likely to use radio-detonated mines than pressure-sensitive ones. One source summed up the prevailing opinion of the intelligence community when he told my associate Dale Van Atta: "This was basically a bustin-and-shoot-'em-up kind of plan. It's a good thing it failed so early - and the reason the administration hasn't released any details is because it would have taken much more criticism than it got on just Desert One.'

Legislature likely to consider state's personnel turnover problems

By BILL KIDD Austin Bureau

AUSTIN - A while back, when one state agency was experiencing a fast and extensive turnover, a joke made the rounds about an employee who went to lunch and came back to be told by a co-worker, "your supervisor wants you to call.

"Did you," asks the first worker, 'happen to get his name?''

Employee turnover is, in fact, a problem for state government, as it is in some other employment fields and that turnover has come in for increased attention in recent years from the Legislature.

The problem was studied by the state Personnel Policies Subcommittee of the House State Affairs Committee during the interim after the 1979 Legislature adjourned - and that group has come up with some recommendations, including an increase in salaries, to help offset the

In its report, the subcommittee says that a salary increase should be given all state employees "in an effort to curtail turnover rates and absenteeism, to enhance the advantage of working for the state and to compete with private industry.

INCREASING SALARIES would, the report argues, "have a domino effect, solving various problems centered on state employees that are currently under consideration and discussion by various state offi-

In the scenario envisioned by the subcommittee, increased salaries will lead to increased efficiency, which will lead to decreased turnover of career employees, which will decrease the number of new employees needed, which means less costs for training and an overall savings which will offset the additional revenue required to raise salaries.

According to the subcommittee's study, turnover for Texas state employees has been increasing in the past few years, from 23.68 percent in 1977 to 27.23 percent in 1978, and 28.96 percent in 1979.

For 1980, the rate is expected to be 29.74 percent.

Turnover for the federal government was 22.6 percent from June 1978 to May 1979, while the manufacturing industry had a rate of 46.7 percent but the report comments the "employee profile" of that latter group is 'dissimilar.

"A TURNOVER OF 15 percent is an acceptable level to operate efficiently," the report contends, "this being the level that private industry considers inevitable

The group's study also shows that last year "personal reasons" were cited most often (44.43 percent of the time) for employee termination; inadequate salary was cited 18.76 percent of the time, with dismissal for cause 8.02 percent of the time.

The report also notes that inadequate salary has been cited more frequently in recent years - while personal reasons have been declin-

Dismissals for cause and resignations in lieu of dismissal also have been rising, the study reports, which the panel feels reflects "the inability of state agencies to compete with private industry in securing the most qualified applicants for positions....

It's also noted that the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation and the Texas Youth Council have the greatest rates of turnover — 49.01 percent for MHMR in 1979, and 43.08 percent for the TYC, rates which have been rising by about 5 percent annually in recent years.

DURING THE SAME period, the Department of Public Safety saw employee turnover go from 14.12 to 14.45

Somewhat ironically, it was concern over DPS turnover - arising from legislation by Denton Rep. Tip Hall and others to increase DPS pay - which led to the current study.

DPS calculates that it loses $30,000 per recruit for each one leaving after completing officers' training - so that with 200-plus officers leaving annually, it comes to a $6 million per year loss.

Those officers are leaving, the agency reports, to take jobs with cities and private security firms leaving DPS scrambling to find, and train, replacements.

"It is generally felt," the report comments, "that the state has become the training ground for many professions

That complaint has been voiced by a number of agency officials - including, recently, Comptroller Bob Bullock, who issued a press release to complain about losing a number of his auditors in Dallas to some of the very industries he needed them to be moni-

ANOTHER AGENCY head comments, somewhat tongue-in-cheek, that "we feel that providing these well-trained employees is one of our greatest services to the taxpayers because when they leave us, they know what they're doing and will ... keep those businesses paying taxes."

Whether the idea of raising salaries to save money over the long haul will work may be open to questions, since at present, the study indicates that state salaries are competitive with private industry in San Antonio and Austin — although not as good as some comparable jobs in Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth.

Even some of the House State Affairs Committee members admit they aren't sure about the approach - but they hope the study will serve as, at least, a starting point for the 1981 2 Legislature in its efforts to improve state government.

Moral concern

To The Editor:

On November 4, 1980, the citizens of this great country voted for a change in our government. The incumbents were defeated for many wide and varied reasons, with some being "targeted" by special interest groups. A spokesman for one group called the 'Moral Majority," as well as an outspoken Baptist minister, appeared November 5 with three defeated Senate incumbents on an ABC special concerning the election. In fascinated horror, I listened to the senators and religious spokesmen discuss some of the smut tactics employed against the politicians during the election campaign, and the religious leaders' reason to sway the public vote.

For over two hundred years our nation has prided itself in the separation of church and state. I saw the two religious advocates throw this great principle of faith in our country to the dogs. We, as a church and a nation, should well recognize that many comprise the whole. All of the scriptures in the Bible point to John 3:16. The duty and moral obligation in all aspects of man is to direct others toward this passage of scripture. No matter how one views God, this is a dogma of God. But God is not bound by principles, especially our principles. We must not impose our principles of worshiping and voting upon the will of others; God does this individually. Therefore, let us seek our faith and politics in peace and harmony through Him who is all, lest we consume ourselves. Already there are reports that Vice Presidentelect Bush and the spokesman for the "Moral Majority" are in controversy.

You won't believe it, but President Carter is giving away U.S. oil deposits. You say this is crazy, no American would do such a thing. But it is a fact the president has signed a treaty to divide up the Gulf of Mexico. More than a million acres of oilrich territory belonging to the U.S. is being given away. It is an area just off our southeastern shore from Texas to Al-

The U.S. would get little of this seabed oil as a result of the treaty already signed (failure by the Senate to act would give the treaty between the U.S. and Mexico the force of law) and as a result other foreign countries, like Cuba, would have access to the oil. This is because the treaty creates an "international zone" in the middle of the gulf.

Now if you do not want this to take place write your U.S. Senators. Demand that they take action to rescind the treaty and thus save our southeastern shoreline.

The art of editing

To The Editor:

Nancy Renick had a letter published in the Midland Reporter-Telegram recently (Sun. Nov. 9, 1980) in which she took exception to the editor's "choice of material for the first page." From her statement, she obviously desires to be either an editor or a censor.

Among the many functions of an editor is the right to choose content based upon some criteria, and the placement of the accepted material within the radio schedule or newspaper layout. After all, there is only so much time and space available, and the interests of their public largely dictates content.

Censorship is similar in action, although usually applied from outside the medium itself. Editors look upon it as an intrusion upon their rights; censors look upon it as safeguarding the public welfare, either in the context of morals, national security, or some other subjective value.

The mere fact that some listeners may be offended by some material and that it must therefore be removed is a fallacious argument. Any contro-versial subject offends many people, some pro, some con. God save us from a news medium which offends no one. How insipid it would be! And about as thought provoking as a Ma & Pa Kettle movie!

Moral minority

To The Editor:

Present religious-moral conditions lead me to the conclusion that the battle of Armegeddon is about to be declared. The two sides will be the moral majority lead by Christ and the moral minority, lead by Jesus. It becomes obvious that the majority has already limited its theological position to the 16th verse of the third chapter of John, and they have left the whole rest of the Bible to the minority.

The Christ of the re-born majority obviously believed that he was sent to earth as THE son of God. The Jesus of the minority camp came and lived among the people spreading human concepts and values. (This would it seem to make him a humanist!)

Now that the sides have been chosen, some religious-moral rules should be established and I would like to present some clarification. It becomes aparent that Christ wanted to get us all into heaven; Jesus wanted to get heaven into the people. Christ seems to want the minority condemned and punished, Jesus said, "forgive them, seventy times seven, if necessary." Christ said, "fear " God," but Jesus said, "love God, with all your heart, etc."

All of which, and more, has to de with the historical differences between Trinitarians and Unitarians. But there is no Trinitarian position in religion any more for the "moral majority" has extinguished the Holy

Apparently we have been reduced to a choice of sides. Those who "believe and are re-born" under the majority leadership of Christ, and those who "live and help others to live," under the minority leadership of

About diabetes

On behalf of the diabetics in Midland and the surrounding area, a vote of thanks goes to the Midland County Medical Society and the Midland Chapter of the American Diabetic Association.

At 8 p.m. Thursday, November 20, in the Midland Hilton, two very outstanding professionals, doctors Holbrook Seltzer and David Schade, will speak to the medical society and to the general public about diabetes. They have participated in research involving insulin in the body.

Dr. Seltzer has been doing extensive research on organ implants that will help to normally produce insulin. Dr. Schade is active in the development of an insulin pump that will methodically release insulin into the body. Both doctors have expressed hopes for the future and hope to achieve a happy ending to the "needle" aspect of insulin, so necessary to a normal way of life for the diabetic. It is really something to see these two organizations putting out such great effort toward a natural control of a disease that effects such a large segment of the world's population.

Later in the evening, at twilight, back in Zurich walking by a park where the Bahnhofstrasse meets the lake of Zurich, I noticed a huge crowd listening to a large chorus of young people all attired in blue sports jackets. Becoming aware that they were singing in English and accompanied by their own marvelous band, I joined the crowd around the bandstand. And the song had a repetitive phrase: "I want to live for God." Apparently the crowd of Swiss, mixed with visitors from many countries, got the message. They signified their approval

Many stores help reserve your closet space by allowing you to hold a product in their storeroom while paying for it. This is usually called a layaway plan. Although convenient, the store is not required to refund your money if after a period of time you decide you no longer are interested in the product.

During this holiday season, if you are unsure as to the acceptability of your gift, inquire about the store's policies concerning returned merchandise and layaway plans before you buy

If the store will make an adjustment on a returned gift, make sure you do the following:

-Save all tags, price labels and all sales or charge receipts. Don't expect a store to exchange a product if you cannot provide proof of purchase. -Return the merchandise in the original container including all packing materials and instruction sheets. -Keep the product from being used. A store usually will not accept merchandise that shows wear, or has been damaged or altered. It is always wise to check the merchandise for damage before you leave the store.

-Make the exchange soon after the holidays. If you wait too long, the store may be unwilling or unable to make the necessary adjustments. If you have problems getting a store to make an adjustment for a legitimate return of merchandise, contact

Many women still using tampons

By SCOTT KRAFT Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - The link between tampons and toxic shock syndrome has effectively knocked off one tampon brand and jolted others, but tampons still are being used widely and the industry is a long way from going under, Wall Street analysts

"There won't be a mass defection away from tampons," predicts Deepak Raj, cosmetics industry analyst in New York for Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith Inc., the investment

"This product traditionally has been much more suited to women's lifestyles and I don't think you'll see a major shift away from it," he

THE DEATHS OF menstruating women using tampons, Procter & Gamble's subsequent voluntary recall of its Rely tampons and lawsuits against all major tampon makers, have created havoc in the $500 million tampon industry this fall.

Last week, the industry leader, Tampax Inc., reported a 27 percent drop in net earnings for the three months ending Sept. 30, compared to the same period a year before. Unit sales fell 11 percent.

Tampax president E. Russell Sprague blamed the decline on strong sales of P&G's Rely tampon, and also on the "adverse publicity" surrounding Rely's association with toxic shock and subsequent recall.

TOXIC SHOCK SYNDROME is a disease characterized by sudden high fever, vomiting, diarrhea and a rapid drop in blood pressure that often results in shock - and, about 9 percent of the time, death.

Fifty-six women have died since the syndrome was identified in 1975. Although many of them were tampon users, the link was discovered only

Since the Rely brand tampons were recalled in mid-September there have been no industry figures on tampon sales or defections to sanitary nap-

Analysts say they expect tampon sales to fall slightly and then level off, but they note the tampon market today is unstable. There has been no final word on the tampon-toxic shock connection and lawsuits stemming from the controversy still are pend-

"The jury still is out," Raj said. "But my gut feeling is that the market won't disintegrate because of the TSS scare. In fact some companies remaining in the business may become stronger.'

THE REASON IS TWOFOLD. Rely, which had climbed to No.3 in sales behind — and at the expense of — No.1 Tampax and No.2 Playtex, is no longer a competitor. And U.S. Food and Drug Administration concern about toxic shock syndrome likely will mean more stringent testing and study of new tampons before their sale is allowed.

Procter & Gamble, the $10 billion-ayear personal care giant based in Cincinnati, lost an estimated $75 million, plus untold future profits, by pulling its Rely tampon off the market, the company says.

In a report to stockholders last month, P&G chairman Edward Harness said $75 million of the company's $194 million net earnings for the three months ending Sept. 30 was being set aside to cover losses incurred by withdrawing Rely from the market.

And the company has laid off approximately 165 workers at plants in Missouri and Georgia.

A SPOKESMAN AT Procter & Gamble said the company "has no immediate plans to reintroduce Rely or to introduce any other tampon product.'

Harness didn't rule out the possibility, though. "We are not saying P&G has given up on the tampon or ... the sanitary napkin business," he said.

Hercules Segalas, industry analyst for the Wall Street firm Drexel Burnham Lambert, said it's "highly probable" Procter & Gamble will introduce a new mini-pad sanitary napkin next year. Once the cause of toxic shock is determined, P&G, with its widely respected research division, might be in the best position to develop a tampon treatment that kills the bacteria, Segalas said. Scientists suspect the culprit may be a common bacterium, but that hasn't been proven conclusive-million advertising campaign and distributed 60 million free samples last spring. Other tampon makers were suffering from the challenge of Rely, which moved from a 10 percent market share to 20 percent in less than a year.

P&G launched Rely with an $18

But in June toxic shock was linked to the use of tampons in menstruating

The Center for Disease Control in Atlanta confirmed a statistical correlation between toxic shock and tampon users but termed the incidence too low to warrant recommending that women stop using tampons.

IN A STUDY OF toxic shock cases in July and August, the CDC found that of the women with the disease, more than twice as many had used Rely than a similar group of healthy

P&G said then, and continues to say, that there's nothing wrong with Rely. But FDA officials, charged with acting on CDC findings, said they made it clear they expected P&G to take Rely off the market.

The company recalled the Rely tampon in mid-September and financed a four-week ad campaign telling consumers not to buy Rely and to get rid of those they already had.

Meanwhile, other tampon manufacturers were scurrying to point out the differences between their product and Rely, and the FDA proposed that warning labels be put on all brands of tampons to warn women that tampons have been linked to toxic shock.

Proposed legislation prohibits scalping tickets, wearing masks

By KEN HERMAN

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Wearing masks, scalping tickets and selling babies are some of the things under attack in proposed legislation that will be scrutinized by Texas lawmakers when they convene here in Jan-uary.

Legislators won't take their seats ıntil Jan. 13, but several eager particpants have pre-filed a pile of bills that would:

Make it illegal to wear a mask.
Ban excessive profits on ticket scalping.

- Increase the penalty for selling children. - Do away with the Sunday blue law. - Allow criminal prosecution of children.

- Double the penalties for crimes against the elderly. Under the mask bill, it would be illegal to wear a mask as a disguise except on celebrations such as Halloween and other festivities. Exemption would not apply to events held by underground groups.

Wearing a mask during a crime would be a third-degree felony. The bill, a rerun from Rep. Sam Hudson, D-Dallas, died in committee

Another 1979 loser is Sen. Chet Brooks' ticket scalping bill. Tom Kleinworth, an aide for Brooks, D-Pasadena, said the bill is backed by professional teams.

The bill would make it a misdemeanor to sell tickets to entertainment events at excessive profits. A $2 profit would be allowed on tickets costing $10 or less. A $5 profit would be allowed for more expensive tick-

Scalping was illegal in Texas from 1941 through 1976, Kleinworth said. Doyle Willis, D-Fort Worth, wants the penalty for selling children bumped up to a third-degree felony frrom the current misdemeanor

Willis also is taking the latest shot at the blue law, barring sales of certain items on Sundays.

"It's verbatim the bill introduced last session," said Susan Butterick, Willis' secretary.

Rep. Frank Hartung, R-Houston, favors tougher prosecuton of juvenile offenders, but only capital cases and first-degree felonies are covered by Scott Williams, a Hartung aide, said the bill is "directed at those considered knowledgeable enough to know better.'

If the bill passes, a child of any age could be tried as an adult, if certified by a judge. Convicted juveniles would be sent to the Texas Department of Corrections. Under current law, only 15- and 16-year-olds can be certified to stand trial as an adult

WHAT A SPAGHETTICALLY GREAT GAME! DEAR HELOISE

If you are home on a rainy weekend with nothing to do, try this. Ask your Mom for several pieces of long spaghetti. Drop them on the floor, table or whatever and you have an instant game of sticks to pick up. Believe me it works. I know, I'm a kid!

YEAH, BUT FRANKLY I'M NOT TOO CRAZY

ABOUT THE CROWD IT ATTRACTS !

STOWAWAYS DEAR HELOISE:

I purchased two pairs of Oriental-type woven slippers and attached them to the wall in my bathroom to hold makeup, combs, etc.

They are very handy and practical as well as pretty. With rattan baskets so popular nowadays, these fit right in.

They can also be used near a desk, to hold pencils, pens and other office supplies.

DEAR HELOISE: Sometimes when riding my bike, it starts to rain sot keep one of those cheap lightweight raincoats taped under the seat of my bicycle.

Now, when a shower comes, just take the raincoat out from under my bicycle seat and slip it on. Alison Geschke

BOOT BLOW-UP DEAR HELOISE:

I have three pairs of knee high boots. The cost of the boot stay forms is over my budget so I found a good, inexpensive substitute.

Take long balloons, blow them up and stick one inside each boot. Presto! Boot shapers for the price of a pack of balloons. Stella Hawk

© Field Enterprises, Inc., 1980

If your husband says, "I never know what to get you" for your birthday, Christmas, etc., check the items in a catalog that you would like to Check sizes and colors, too, if applicable, but be sure to keep your "checks" within your budget. Sandy

WORDLORE DEAR HELOISE:

To enlarge and improve children's vocabularies, teach them a new word (one which can be found in the dictionary) when everyone is gathered around the dinner fable.

After pronouncing the word, ask if anyone knows what it means and if someone does, have him or her use it in a sentence. If, no one knows, then you tell the meaning and use it in a sentence.

This doesn't have to go on for the whole meal, of course, but we did this on occasion with our children and they had extensive vocabularies when they were very young. All became rapid readers early and better understood what they read.
