Mexico cuts oil prices by $1.24 a barrel

MEXICO CITY (AP) - Mexico, the United States' biggest foreign oil supplier, has sharply reduced its crude oil prices in reaction to OPEC's failure to shore up sagging oil prices worldwide.

The cut by as much as $1.24 a barrel, announced Wednesday night, is expected to put further pressure on an already saturated world oil market. Saudi Arabia reportedly threatened this week to quadruple its production if other OPEC countries insist on undercutting each other's

"I wouldn't be looking for an impact of this at the (gas) pump, but it is another significant pressure on world oil markets," said Paul Mlotok, an oil industry analyst for the New York securities firm Salomon Brothers Inc.

Mlotok said Mexico's price cut brings Venezuela, an OPEC member, a step closer to cutting prices and also adds to pressures for price cuts of West Texas Intermediate crude

Each $1 cut in the price of a barrel of oil, if adopted by all producers and passed entirely on to consumers, is the equivalent of a reduction of about 21/2 cents a gallon in the price of a gallon of gasoline.

Even though prices may still rise because of other reasons - for example, summer demand for gasoline is higher than winter is - still. this could help American consumers from paying as high a price as they otherwise would have," said Trilby

Lundberg, editor of the oil industry publication Lundberg Letter.

In Vienna, Austria, an spokesman at the OPEC secretariat declined to comment on the price changes.

Mexico, the world's fourth largest oil producer and exporter, is not a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries but had followed the cartel's pricing policies until several months ago.

The announcement implied that after the 13-member OPEC failed at a meeting in Vienna, Austria, this

White: Dam will improve state's economic picture

By LANA CUNNINGHAM Assistant City Editor

BIG SPRING - Gov. Mark White painted Stacy Dam as the beginning in the overall picture of economic opportunity for the state of Texas when he spoke at an appreciation dinner here Wednesday night.

White, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, numerous state senators and representatives and city officials from throughout West Texas - about 250 persons filled the Big Spring Country Club for the event that was described as a kickoff to getting the water package approved by voters in November

White, who was praised for sparking the compromise between the warring Colorado River Municipal Water District and Lower Colorado River Authority boards, wandered from the main topic of water to talk of education reforms. But the evening was otherwise devoid of political overtones, with Democrats and Republicans joining hands to praise each other and plan joint efforts in getting the statewide water plan

CRMWD had worked more than seven years to get approval to build Stacy Dam about 25 miles southeast of Ballinger, the last site in West Texas for a reservoir to meet the cities' future needs. After gaining a permit from the Texas Water Commission, it was appealed to the State Supreme Court by the LCRA, which opposed the dam. In November 1984. the permit was denied by the court.

But when the State Legislature convened in Austin in January and White said that passage of a water package was his primary goal for the session. West Texas lawmakers threatened to pull their support unless Stacy Dam was approved. White called together the CRMWD and LCRA directors and shortly afterward a compromise was announced.

Construction of Stacy Dam will cost a minimum of $68 million, and will not be completed until 1990.

Council sets election on water contract

By LANA CUNNINGHAM Assistant City Editor

Midland City Council this morning called an election for Aug. 10 for voters to approve a long-term contract for water through the Colorado River Municipal Water District's Stacy Dam.

CRMWD received a permit May 14 to construct Stacy Reservoir at the confluence of the Colorado and Concho rivers.

Under the contract with CRMWD. the city of Midland would receive 15,000 acre feet of water per year, which is equivalent to 13.5 million gallons per day. That is equivalent to 64 percent of Midland's daily average, according to a statement by Mayor G. Thane Akins.

By contracting with CRMWD for the water. Midland also would pay a portion of the construction cost of Stacy Dam. Total estimated cost is $68 million with Midland's share to be about $11 million.

We estimate the cost of the average residential user would be about $2.70 per month or approximately 15 cents per thousand gallons. This is a small price to pay to help guarantee the necessary reserves for the future of our city," Akins said. Current average residential bill is

$32.30 per month

Water rates also might be increased at a later date to pay for installing the pipeline from Stacy to Midland and to construct an addition to the city's water treatment plant to purify the water. "This will be subject to contracts and appropriations at a later date," the mayor

Abilene and San Angelo already have set Aug. 10 for their elections to contract with CRMWD for the same amount of water as Midland.

If Midland voters reject the contract, Akins said the city "would be faced with depending on underground supplies to meet the need and would result in a higher cost to the taxpayers." And when these current underground resources are depleted, he said, "that's it."

l can't think of any more important choice for the people to be involved in. It's a critical item for our city if we're going to meet the needs for future growth and generations," Akins said.

In his statement, the mayor pointed out that Stacy Dam "is the ast reservoir that will be allowed to be built on the watershed; therefore, it is imperative that the City of Midland be included in this project to

Senators challenge U.S.S.R. to submit arms talks proposals

WASHINGTON (AP) - Two influential senators, predicting the Reagan administration would accept curbs on its Star Wars program, challenged the Soviet Union to test U.S. flexibility by submitting specific proposals at the Geneva arms

Robot sub recovers jet's second 'black box'

CORK, Ireland (AP) — A robot sub-marine today recovered the other flight recorder from the wreckage of an Air-India jetliner that crashed off Ireland on June 23, killing all 329 people aboard, crash investigators

The flight data recorder — which records height, speed, course and other data from the plane's instruments — was brought to the surface by the same robot that recovered the jet's cockpit voice recorder Weelnesday, investigators said.

Recovery of the two so-called "black boxes" raised hopes of deter-mining what caused Air-India Flight

Indian authorities said the disaster may have been caused by a bomb, but Canadian investigators have said they have found no evidence from wreckage or bodies to support the

The recorders were salvaged from 6,700 feet of water by a robot submarine called Scarab I, which cruised the seabottom while tethered to the French cable-laying vessel Leon

The two recorders were located side-by-side in the Boeing 747 when it vanished from Irish radar screens and plunged into the Atlantic without giving a distress signal, causing the third worst diraster in aviation

Both recorders were to be returned to India for examination, Indian officials leading the crash investigation told reporters at the search headquarters in this southern

old Coke predicted success

NEW YORK (AP) - Coca-Cola Co.'s decision to bring back its old formula as "Coca-Cola Classic" alongside its new soft drink likely will be a success, but the challenge will be convincing consumers they're both the real thing, analysts

The Atlanta-based company announced Wednesday it was bring-ing back the old, familiar Coke, just 21/2 months after it declared with much fanfare that it was improving the taste of its flagship brand

But not everyone approved of the change in the 99-year-old formula for Coke. Complaints from loyal fans received considerable publicity, and Coca-Cola says it has gotten 1,500 calls a day about the new Coke.

"It's certainly going to pose an interesting marketing challenge to position two products that are very similar side-by-side," said Charles Crane, an advertising agency analyst with Oppenheimer & Co. in New

"I think it's a good decision. It will appease," said Hugh Zurkuhlen, a beverage industry analyst with Salomon Brothers Inc. in New York.

"Everyone wins," said company spokesman Tom Gray. "Over 40 million consumers every day in the United States enjoy Coca-Cola, but thousands of dedicated Coca-Cola consumers have told us they still want the original taste as an option. We have listened and we are taking action to satisfy their request.'

Coca-Cola Classic will be available in "some markets" within several weeks, Gray said.

The interesting thing is they backed into a very powerful strate-gic position" of having two regular colas, said Emanuel Goldman, of Montgomery Securities Inc. in San Francisco.

He pointed out that Coca-Cola already has two diet drinks, Tab and Diet Coke. Predictably, competitors were not kind about the latest announcement.

Ken Ross, a spokesman for Pepsi-Cola, said, "We're not surprised. Very obviously people across the country do not like this (new) Coke."

U.S. Sen. David Pryor of Ark., a confirmed "Coke-aholic" who hoarded cases of the soft drink when the formula was switched, put it in equally emotional terms in a speech on the Senate floor in Washington, D.C.

The announcement to bring back the old Coke was "a very meaningful moment in the history of America," he said.

Nunn also said he hoped Gorbachev might use the summit to signal a withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan. He said the continued Soviet intervention in Afghanistan is one of the most poisonous issues' between Washington and Moscow and that a troop withdrawal would do much to improve the atmosphere at the arms talks and overall U.S.-Soviet relations

"They had not been polished or used in a long time," said Jan Scruggs, president and founder of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund. "The parents must have left them there. It was just so eerie — they were kind of all by themselves."

Shortly after that, Eleanor Wimbish, a 58-year-old Glen Burnie, Md., housewife, left a basket of yellow flowers and the first of more than 20 letters she has since written to her dead son, Army Sgt. William R.

"I had to put something there to bring some warmth to that black wall," Ms. Wimbish said. "It was just so empty. And people could look at the names, but none of them had any meaning. I wanted to bring something personal to the wall."

Since then, hundreds of war mementos, from Purple Hearts to tear-stained letters, have been left at the memorial, which serves as a kind of wailing wall for the friends and families of the 58,022 whose names are on the memorial, as well as for those who served and survived.

Neither expecting the volume of souvenirs nor knowing what to do with them, the National Park Service periodically collected and stored the items in cardboard boxes in government offices. Now the Park Service has begun an effort to preserve the most unusual of the memorabilia - the camouflage jungle fatigues, the yellowed pictures of teen-aged soldiers, the plastic roses and childhood teddy bears.

"I think we all came to the conclusion that keeping them in cardboard boxes just wasn't right," said Earle Kittleman, a park service spokes-

There are now cabinets and drawers full of mementos in a 25,000-square-foot brick warehouse in Lanham, Md., adjacent to the Goddard Space Flight Center, where other National Park Service property is limited tours. So far, about 1,300 items are in the Vietnam collection — shut away from rain and sun, stored under controlled conditions where the humidity is kept between 50 and 55 percent. Even the faded plastic roses and the olive-colored cans of cinnamon nut roll C-rations are kept at 68

The only authenticity requirement for inclusion in the collection is that the item must be found at the memorial, so the wide-ranging collection includes Detroit Tigers and Boston Red Sox baseball caps, worn Army dog tags ("Anderson, R. C. USMC. 094098. Presbyterian"), crumbling high school football clippings, diaries and a POW-MIA bracelet that says "Ron, you are with us in spirit,

And the letter wrapped in plastic that Wimbish left at the memorial in 1983 — nearly 15 years after her son's death in a helicopter crash in Vietnam — in which she described finding her son's name on the wall for the first time.

Firefighters use high-tech to quell fires

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) - Smokey the Bear, whose shovel once constituted the forest firefighter's primary weapon, would be amazed by the high technology now being used by the forest firefighting industry. Federal agencies responsible for fighting forest fires now are using computers to evaluate weather patterns, track lightning, determine fire potential and decide manpower

For example, the Bureau of Land Management now has in operation a system that can pinpoint within a mile where lightning has struck any where in the 11 Western states, said Jay Thietten, New Mexico fire management officer for the BLM.

That system is particularly important in New Mexico, which has the second-highest incidence of lightning in the country, said Thietten. Lightning is responsible for most fires, including an estimated 59 wildfires in the Gila National Forest of southern New Mexico since June 1.

During the June 8-9 weekend when 23 new fires were reported in the Gila for st, the system based at the Interagency Fire Center in Boise picked up 4,000 lightning strikes in the state, said Thietten. The system has picked up a peak of 38,000 light ning strikes in a 24-hour period during its three-year existence. The lightning tracking system that covers New Mexico utilizes antennas at Santa Fe, Socorro, Roswell and Monte Vista, Colo. The antennas pick up the unique radio frequencies emitted by cloud to ground lightning strikes and, by crosschecking other monitors, can pinpoint their location. The system was launched experimentally in Alaska in 1975 and still is under development, Thietten said.

Since it was installed in New Mexico in 1981, it has helped firefighting by letting managers "just know where it hit," said Thietten. Most lightning fires are not suppressed now, giving nature the opportunity to self-clean its forests by burning ground debris.

The BLM and the U.S. Forest Service use computer operations based in Boise, Idaho, and Fort Collins, Colo., to help decide how bad a fire might be if one started in a particular part of the forest or range.

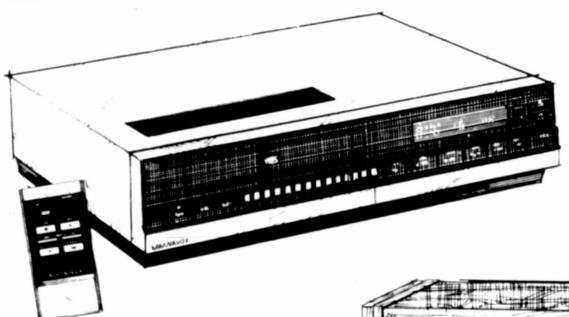

The Forest Service program known as the National Fire Danger Rating System takes weather data, such as humidity, temperature, wind, fuel moisture and density, and issues an "fire rating index" for a geographical area, said Santa Fe National Forest fire dispatcher Gary

Yet another computer operation used by the BLM and based at the National Forest Fire Laboratory in Missoula, Mont., can take similar information from isolated, automated weather stations and compile a "fire rating" for a specific site. Within two years, said Thietten, the system will be able to predict how a fire at a specific location will

Such ratings now are used by fire dispatchers like Olson to decide what kind of manpower or air sup-port to call out to fight a fire. Such decisions are becoming more stan-dardized and pre-planned and even-tually may be computerized.

But for now, those decisions are still made by Forest Service dis-patchers like Olson who, in spite of the technological advances, still uti-lise a measure of human feelings

Baldrige, Lewis top roster to replace David Stockman

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige and former Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis are the top candidates to suc-ceed Budget Director David Stockman, according to White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan.

Two other administration officials are also in the running, Regan said in an interview with The Associated Press on Wednesday.

Regan said he wants to have someone in the Cabinet-level job before Stockman leaves Aug. 1, or at least to have a person designated and able to begin work while awaiting Senate confirmation.

In southeastern British Columbia 1 400 people remained evacuated from Canal Flats, a mill town threatened by five blazes covering 17,000 acres, said Forests Ministry spokesman Ray Wormald. About half a dozen remained behind to help fire-

About 600 of 3.180 firefighters assigned there were allowed to stand down Wednesday night.

The U.S. Forest Service's reward for information leading to convic tion of the arsonist who set the fire was increased from $5,000 to $10,000.

After Los Gatos, the state's other major fire problem Wednesday was south of Big Sur, where the 16,500acre Rat Creek blaze was out of control. The crews battling it also were handling the 4,800-acre Gorda blaze,

Details of the FAA curbs on carry-on baggage are expected to be given to airline representatives at a closed meeting today. although the actual regulations probably will not go into effect for several months.

Organizations representing flight attendants and pilots have more than a year pressed the government to restrict airline carry-on baggage, arguing that passengers are hauling too many items into cramped aircraft

While the FAA has acknowledged concern about the problem, the issue had never been given a high priority in the agency until the recent hijacking of Trans World Airlines Flight 847 and the suspected bombing of Government officials acknowledged that the terrorist attacks, which prompted new concerns about airline security and baggage surveillance, gave new impetus for reducing the number of bags being carried aboard air-liners. A reduction in carry-on

under an airline seat

The number of bags also will be restricted, but these sources said the actual number - probably two or three - may be subject to change. They said provisions also are expected to be made for one of the bags to be a thin, lightly packed garment bag that can be hung in a cabin storage area or put in an overhead compartment.

Pipe bombs caused blasts

NAPLES, Fla. (AP) - The blasts that blew up a station wagon, killing a tobacco heiress and her 21-year-old son and injuring her daughter, were caused by two pipe bombs packed with "high-order explosives," investigators say

One of the bombs had been planted near the front seat of the car and one near the rear seat, but authorities still do not know what detonated them, said Ralph Ostrowski, a U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agent.

The bombs consisted of galvanized metal pipes packed with "extremely volatile, high-order explosives," Ostrowski said Wednesday.

About 40 pieces of the two devices were found around the demolished car, the Collier County Sheriff's Department said in a statement.

Margaret H. Benson, 63, of Naples; and her son, Scott, a tennis pro from

Students like one-room school

ALLAMORE, Texas (AP) — To 6-year-old Jessie Dees, learning the three Rs in a genuine little schoolhouse on the prairie seems a bit inconvenient sometimes.

"We have to get up in the middle of the night," she said

Every weekday, Jessie is up before dawn getting ready for a 30-mile trip on a dusty ranch road to Allamore grade school.

Jessie, a pint-sized kindergartener already reading and quickly picking up the other basics, is among five students attending Allamore School, the oldest school in Hudspeth County and probably one of the very few one-room, one-teacher schoolhouses still standing in Texas. Visiting the school is like walking into a time warp.

The schoolhouse, bleached brilliantly white, sits stark and lonely about 22 miles east of Sierra Blanca.

Little feet patter on wooden floors that moan. A few relics, discarded desks with ink wells, have been shoved into a back room.

For years, Allamore has been injecting ranch children with a liberal dose of reading, writing and arithmetic, preparing them for the rigors of high school in Sierra Blanca or Van Horn. The tiny school has no sports or anything resembling big city extra-curriculal activities. But Jessie and her classmates voted to call themselves the "Alligators" anyway.

On a recent day, the entire school was out enjoying a nature walk during lunch break. Jessie and her 12-year-old sister, Scott Frank wants to be a knight in shining armor when he grows up. Jessie Dees likes the llamas and buffalo that roam freely on the Sierra Diablo wildlife and game preserve where she lives.

Kristi tried elementary school last year in Van Horn, 10 miles away from Allamore. She couldn't tolerate the more abrasive atmosphere and came back to the one-room schoolhouse, which she remembers having 13 students three years ago.

Athough she would like to have a computer, Kristi likes most of her subjects at Allamore except geography.

"My book's got a lot of reading to it, politics and stuff," she said. "I don't like to read a lot about politics unless it's the presidential election."

There's no school janitor. So everybody helps out at the end of the school day, cleaning up the classroom and bathroom. A recent cleanup assignment prompted Kristi to philosophize: "I'm afraid I'm going to get stuck with this thing (a broom) forever.'

Allamore itself once possessed the elements of a thriving community: a railroad depot, a post office, a prosperous grocery store, a couple of filling stations and at one time as many as 70 children in the school.

Two West Texas vipers — lack of water and scarce jobs — eventually killed the village. Now, only a handful of houses are scattered in the shadow of the Pioneer Talc processing plant.

ust a stone's throw away, for pre-indergarten classes.

Teacher Bernadette Bemendorfer, better known as "Miss B," likes the minimal stress, discipline problems and paper work at Aliamore. She is convinced that Aliamore is the ideal place to teach the basics and have the time and freedom to expose children to other non-traditional subjects such as astronomy, the arts, philosphy and Indian heritage. 'I dream about this place. It's almost like a private school," she said, "If I can't teach in a place like this, I'd rather find another job."

Ms. Bemendorfer, 31, graduated from Sierra Blanca High in 1971 and returned to the community after burning out teaching elementary children in Fort Stockton and Pecos.

Here I can teach a variety of things and do it better," she said. "Sometimes, I like to stay away from books and just brainstorm, let them use their minds to develop thinking

The teacher, however, never strays too far from the school's traditional emphasis on the three Rs. Everything else, like exercise, health, science, history and geography, revolves around the basics.

Maria Mendez, the school's closest neighbor, has a fond affection for the little schoolhouse. She was a 1940s student, and her eight children completed the eighth grade at Allamore before commuting to high school in Van Horn.

Once in a while we have a bad teacher," Mrs. Mendez said, "but most of them have been good.

Tina Dees shares carpooling duties once in a while with Sue Frank, the boys' mother. She, too, likes the individualized attention her daughters

'It's handy, a whole lot closer. And the kids are getting further ahead in their education then they would if they were in a bigger school," she said.

Allamore is a common school dis-trict, one of half a dozen such dis-tricts still teaching a handful of stu-dents statewide. The district is governed by a three-member school board and operates at the mercy of the Hudspeth county government.

The district's estimated $22,000 annual budget comes mostly from property taxes. School officials accept only limited state funds.

Hudspeth County Judge Doyle Ziler, the school district's ex-officio superintendent, has been one of its most die-hard supporters, resisting from time to time any notion of shutting it down.

Ziler is not sure how long the Allamore School has been in business. Most everybody agrees it is the oldest in the county, dating back to the turn of the century, he said.

With state legislators talking about consolidating smaller schools to save money, Ziler and school board members like Topper Frank are a little bit more apprehensive these days about the prospect of having to transport children even

"We're locked into it because of the geographic location. It's too far to go any place else," Frank said. The kids get more attention, and the teachers we get are more dedi-

"It's not a glamorous job. There's nobody to yak with in the teacher's lounge," the Hudspeth County rancher said.

Frank worries that the state may carry out its "asinine" ideas and phase out Allamore without any sayso from the community.

"We pay our own way and believe in good ol' fashioned learning. This system has worked well for over 100 years," he said. "We're going to fight to keep the school open as long as we can. I only wish the government would leave us alone to tend to our own business.

LOWER TOWNSHIP. N.J. (AP) -Arne Jensen and his 10-man crew on the fishing boat Courageous knew they had a big dinner when they caught a 37-pound, 4-ounce lobster off the coast of Cape Cod.

They were hoping they'd snared a record, too

The lobster could be 185 years old, and was certainly around during the Civil War, said Judy Capuzzo an associate scientist with the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute in Massachusetts.

"Lobsters that big are rare, but not unheard of," she said.

We brought him back because we thought he might be close to the Guinness record," Jensen said.

Teen Smokebusters help fight Western fires

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — When the fire roars down the slope, igniting fear and choking hope, who you gonna call?

Smokebusters! That's the collective handle of 20 poison oak-plagued young people who came from as far away as Alaska to help turn back the 64,000acre Las Pilitas fire when its 30-foothigh flames burned across the northern city limits.

"Our crew is like a family," said Rose Linn, a blond, blue-eyed 18year-old from Mount Hood, Ore. whose face was blotched with poison

We have a good time, although the older crews think we are crazy," she said. "But we sing songs while waiting on line to go to a fire and enjoy ourselves."

The 20 Smokebusters, whose average age is 19, ordinarily work for the Bear Springs Ranger Station at Mount Hood National Forest. They wear T-shirts showing a circle with slash through fire — a takeoff on the logo of the 1984 hit movie 'Ghostbusters.

About one-third of the Smokebusters are women.

"I don't think about the danger," Ms. Linn said. "I just do what I'm trained to do. I have confidence in my training.

As to why she chose firefighting, Ms. Linn said: "I wanted a job where I could get in shape and meet new people. I wanted to make better than the minimum wage they pay at McDonald's.

"The problems are bad for women here, because of the convicts who are working the fire. We have to all times. We are escorted to the bathroom and to all meals."

Lawmakers ready to scuttle Reagan's South Africa policy

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) - Maybe, just maybe, if the Reagan administration had taken a tougher stand against South Africa in the beginning, it wouldn't be facing a congressional revolt aimed at penalizing the Pretoria government for its apartheid practices.

Lawmakers seem determined to scuttle the administration's policy of "constructive engagement," which for the past five years has aimed at quietly encouraging South Africa's white minority government to dismantle apartheid.

There have been a few changes. But there has been a great deal of anti-black violence with more than 400 deaths in South Africa since last fall. Hundreds of blacks have been arrested, and a number of leaders held on unspecified charges of trea-

South African troops have conducted raids into neighboring blackruled countries in recent months and apparently even planned to blow up an American oil refinery in nearby Angola.

Fed up with continuing repression of South Africa's 22 million blacks and aggression against its neighbors, Congress is on the verge of imposing economic sanctions, dismissing administration arguments that they won't make one whit of difference.

It's not that the lawmakers believe sanctions will force South Africa to dismantle apartheid. Rather, they are anxious to signal their intent to dissociate the United States from a regime whose racially discriminatory practices they consider inhumane and abhorrent

The sanctions would be relatively mild. They probably will include banning sales of South African gold coins in the United States, barring sales to South Africa of computers and nuclear equipment, banning loans to the South African government and possibly also preventing new investment by American com-

There may be enough support to override a presidential veto, if it comes to that. The House already has approved by a 295-129 vote a package of sanctions that includes banning new investment. The Senate was expected to vote sometime

Existing investments by American companies wouldn't be affected. The United States is South Africa's largest trading partner, but the sanc-tions would have little impact on Mild as they may be, however, the sanctions could be seen as a harbinger of tougher legislation to come. assuming the South Africans didn't change their apartheid practices.

administration argues that American businesses are a force for constructive change in South Africa because they pay better salaries to blacks and provide better working conditions than local companies.

Chester A. Crocker, the assistant secretary of state for African affairs, said in a panel discussion at the American Enterprise Institute here Monday that sanctions would hit hardest at black workers.

'Our role is secondary." Crocker said. He declared that American business "can't be used to force change...but it is a tool to improve conditions there.

sanctions who was assistant secretary of state in the Carter administration, said the argument that sanctions would hurt blacks is raised by people who were "not much worried about the plight of black people until the imminent passage of congressional legislation.

He told the AEI panel the argument "grossly exaggerates the effect of the legislation." He said also that only 70,000 workers out of a black labor force of four million are employed by American companies.

The administration is fighting a rear-guard action to gain passage of the least objectionable legislation, as State Department officials privately concede some sanctions will be approved by Congress.

The key rationale for the administration's constructive engagement policy has been to encourage conditions for a peaceful transition from white rule to a government with significant black representation - and black rights - while maintaining South Africa's capitalist economic

The administration fears that a violent upheaval would force the whites out and bring about a oneparty, black-ruled state with a large dose of socialism. This is the pattern followed in most other African countries that have successfully thrown off white rule

If the administration's policy had worked, it would now be applauded. But in the views of many Americans as reflected in polls and congressional sentiment — it hasn't.

There is concern that by failing to demand change from South Africa's white leadership, the administration is helping set the stage for the kind of black-white confrontation it most

African ministers prepare for economic summit

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP)

— African foreign ministers are preparing for a summit on the economic ills of the continent, beset by failing agriculture and billions of dollars in debts.

In an opening address, Ethio-pian leader Mengistu Haile vered Wednesday by his foreign minister, Goshu Wolde, that Africa's weak economy was a legacy of "the exploitive system of colonialism, neocolonialism and imperialism, exacerbated by natural calamities.

beyond our control, the already backward and underdeveloped economy of Africa has today deteriorated to a disturbingly low level," Mengistu told the minis-ters of the 50-member Organization of African Unity.

"The economic growth of our continent has been hampered by, among other things, continuously plummeting prices of raw materials, a declining flow of official development assistance ever risdevelopment assistance, ever rising interest rates and accumulated external indebtedness.

Actions talk louder

fter the 39 hostages got cute" terrorists, and will act out of Lebanon and returned home, President Reagan wasted no time in pursuing the goal of stamping out terrerism. He wisely gave top priority to identifying the places where terrorists are trained and from which terrorism is exported.

The president pointed a finger at five nations. Libya, of course, was on the list, for that nation has long been known as a hotbed for the spawning of international crimes. The others were Cuba, Iran, North Korea and Nicaragua. The president made these identifications in a Washington speech to the American Bar Association, bluntly referring to the five nations as part of "a confederation of terrorist states" and a "new, international version of Murder Inc." He went on

"These terrorist states are now engaged in acts of war against the government and people of the United States. And under international law, any state which is the victim of war has the right to defend itself." In view of this, Reagan said this nation would use "the full weight of the law ... to indict, apprehend and prose-

"unilaterally, if necessary," to prevent terrorists from receiving training or sanctuary "anywhere.'

Those are fine words, indicating a commitment to stand up for the principles of human dignity and decency Reagan has espoused since first taking office in 1981. But mere words won't accomplish the containment of the terrorism threat Americans are facing. It will take more. Reagan surely realizes that himself and probably is aware of the muttered comments of Americans who don't want this nation to be turned into an international shooting gallery.

No American is seeking an allout war of any kind, not even the war of terrorism being waged against innocent people the world over. But neither do Americans expect the president to sit idly by while Americans are needlessly killed in terrorist

Eloquent words are fine, but Reagan should recognize that the American public is watching him closely and he will be judged in the end - on the scales of history — on the certainty of his actions, not the beauty of his speech

Competency gains

roposals that school teachers be tested for competence and that incompetent teachers be dismissed have for a long time been greeted with resistence. It has come from educators, leaders of teachers' unions, and others who believe teachers should not be singled out for examinations when other professionals are not.

Some of that resistance is being eroded. Arkansas recently became the first state to give competency tests to teachers and administrators, and 90 percent of them passed.

And now, the National Educa-recognition to the quality of teacher training.

Union delegates who met in Washington the other day voted approval of certification tests for men and women entering the profession. The 7,000 members also voted — for the first time to endorse dismissal proceedings against teachers judged to be incompetent.

The NEA is still opposed to requiring veteran teachers to take competency tests, as Arkansas has done. But at least the union's recent action is a demonstration that competence is being recognized and dealt with to a greater tion Association is giving more degree than it has in the past.

Another View: Deficit proposal good

eal progress against the deficit requires action H deficit requires and more both stronger and more evenhanded than either the president the Senate or the House has endorsed so far something like the pending Gorton-Chiles budget plan. That means the president will have to give some ground on taxes.

Budget conferees have been deadlocked by Senate insistence on a certain level of defense spending and by House insistence on keeping Social Security benefits even with the cost of living. But even if those differences could be resolved, neither of the budget plans from which the conferees have been working would do much to narrow future deficits. Both plans rely substantially on accounting devices and on questionable promises of congressional action two or three years hence.

To overcome the impasse a bipartisan group of Senate budget committee members has put together a plan to reduce next year's deficit by $70 billion. With good economic luck, the plan could come close to balancing the budget in five years. It's not an airtight solution, but it doesn't rely on flimflam or unrealistic promises.

The plan asks the House to agree to a one-year omission of cost-of-living adjustments for Social Security and all other government pensions except those restricted to the needy. But this pause doesn't set a precedent for further COLA cuts, as the original Senate plan would. Moreover, roughly $2 billion is set aside to offset benefit losses to lower-income people - not an easy idea to administer but an important protection. Other safeguards for the needy, including such programs as job training and housing, are maintained.

The Senate would be asked to give more on defense spending. Defense spending authority would grow next year by what the Pentagon says would be needed to keep up with price increases and in years after that by inflation plus 3 percent. The defense spending base would be reduced to reflect at least part of past over-estimates of inflation. Actual military spending would rise substantially because of unused past spending authority. In return for these compromises the president would be asked to go along with revenue increases of about $60 billion over three years. Although fairness would suggest that tax hikes be focused on higher-income taxpayers, the goal could be met by alternatives such as an energy tax and retention of the cigarette tax. The president may note that the plan is inconsistent with his proposed tax reforms. But tax reform doesn't seem to be going anywhere with either Congress or the public, while the deficit remains out of control.

'The System's' Pentagon's trouble

ders never cease? Someone at the Pentagon has finally identified the cause of all those scandalously high costs charged by defense contractors: It's 'The System

While this has been obvious to any reasonably sentient observer of the Pentagon panjan drums we've been shouting it from every rooftop for encouraging when the truth finally penetrates the concrete walls of the five-sided spending factory on the Potomac. Maybe the next step will be to actually do something about it. The refreshing revelation is contained in a bluntly worded memorandum being circulated at top levels in the Air Force. Our associate Indy Badhwar got a copy.

The heart of the Pentagon's system - or, more accurately, its Achilles heel - is the uniformed procurement officer, who is invariably innocent of either experience or expertise. The memo points out that they "are not technically trained, do not know contract law and procurement procedures, and are no match for the contractors' engineers and lawyers." The memo adds: "It's like sending a lamb to slaughter.

These innocents typically stay in their unglamorous procurement jobs two or three years, "hoping to get out so that the cost overruns or technical disasters don't happen on their watch," the memo notes. "At China Lake," the memo continues, referring to the weaponstesting center in California, "we found it took several years for a good engineer to develop to the point that we could trust him to manage a program — some never could. Yet we bring in officers with no technical or specialized training, send them to a short course at Fort Belvoir, and put them in charge of multi-million-dollar programs.

Venality and corruption aren't the problem, the memo explains: "The incentives are all backwards. The big spenders are promoted and rewarded with cushy jobs after leaving the government. Those who do something (to cut costs) are quite frequently punished."

Expanding on this point, the memo lays out the "revolving-door" phenomenon that greases the procurement system.

The average age of an officer at retirement is 43, the memo notes. "He probably has kids in or ready for college, and a big mortgage, and can't afford a cut in his income. He is at the peak of his intellectual powers, is emotionally involved and doesn't want to quit. We throw him out anyway.

"Many of these officers, particularly the good ones, who have spent most of their careers flying aircraft, operating ships or leading troops, do not have skills that are readily marketable in the civilian sector.

'This nice man then comes around and offers him a job at $50K to $75K a year. If he (the procurefuss about high cost and poor quality, no nice man will come to see him when he retires. What to do? "The real problem.

the memo states, "is that the procurement process is completely controlled by military officers and that no improvement is possible until the process is controlled by civilians. A civilian employee has crucial ad vantages over a uniformed officer. the memo explains: "He can stay on He has much more protection against reprisals.

The memo recommends hooking" a program manager "until the program either succeeded or failed. so that he would not be able to move on and leave his successor holding the proverbial 5-pound bag full of 10 pounds of stuff.

It also urges "generous awards" to managers who control costs, schedules and quality, and special bonuses to someone who will look at a program and say: "Look, in spite of all the hype, this program is a turkey and is never going to get us decent equipment. Let's terminate it.'

UNDER THE DOME: A year ago we reported the names of members of Congress who owed the General Services Administration substantial sums of money for old telephone bills. The story was an eye-opener for Rep. Brian Donnelly, D-Mass. who owed $1,792.68 in phone bills for his district office in 1980-81. Donnel ly said the account was delinquent due to the carelessness of a staff member. Last month, the congressman got permission from the House Administration Committee to pay the bill from surplus office funds accumulated in recent years.

MINI-EDITORIAL: Chief Justice Warren Burger never seems to get tired - of complaining about the Supreme Court's heavy workload. His latest idea is an "inter-circuit panel" of appellate judges to resolve among decisions by the nation's federal appeals courts. Turning this chore over to a conference of appellate judges would save Burger and his benchmates about 40 cases a year. A spokesman said Burger's goal is to get the Supreme Court's case load down to 100 signed opinions a year. The Warren Court we might point out, averaged about 100 a year during the 1950s and 1960s with eloquence and no whining

Only safe company is a loser!

here was a time when any American company worth its salt would be happy to proclaim it made high profits and held large cash reserves in the bank. No more. Our captains of industry are now scared to death when they have to announce they're operating in the black.

Boomer Cogswell chairman of Dapperdan Foods, who just nounced his company had lost $230 million, is an example of new the type of executive whiz

I assumed Cogswell would be pressed when the news of his losses was reported. But I was wrong. He was elated. "If we luck out and have a lousy third quarter we could drop a billion dollars this year. 'And that pleases you?'

'Why wouldn't it? Last year we showed a net profit of $750 million and had $800 million in cash stashed away in the bank. Every gunslinger in America wanted to take over the company. Our glowing balance sheet threatened our very existence.

'It was a nightmare. The merger boys not only attacked us for the way we were running the company. but they hired detectives to look into our private lives. We couldn't make a move without being sued by a stockholder. The better the company did, the more the sharks kept swimming around us. The worst part of their takeover strategy was they said they intended to buy our company with our cash. They also declared they would sell off our profit able subsidiaries to raise capital to retire their debt.

"The more they studied our assets the more they drooled all over their Wall Street Journals.

"I have to assume then that you took action.

The only thing we could do was call in the bankers and lawyers to devise a shark repellent takeover

The first thing they did after examining all our books was criticize us for having one of the most out standing management and profit records of any company in the United States. Based on our earnings they were amazed we hadn't been ac quired before.

Cogswell continued, "It was hard o explain to them that our polic since old man Dapperdan founded the company, has always been to have low debt, maintain high cash balances and give our stockholders a fair return on their money. They heard us out and then said we were not in tune with the times. The only way to save the company from a takeover was to make ourselves so unattractive that no one would go near us with a 10-foot junk bond. "What shark repellent did they suggest?"

"For starters they made us unload our cash surplus by buying several companies that were worthless. Af ter making the acquisitions they per suaded us to borrow as much money at high interest rates as the traffic would bear. They proved to us that the more debt we built up the more chance we had of surviving in the takeover jungle.

Cogswell went on, "It wasn't enough to have high indebtedness and no cash - we also had to produce low earnings so the stock would be overpriced on the market Last year our shares looked like a dream buy. Now we're in the bottom

I said, "You apparently followed your investment bankers' and lawyers' advice to the letter.

"It wasn't easy to turn the compa ny overnight from a winner into a loser, but we managed to do it," he said proudly. "I can only take so much credit - my management team has to be given recognition for the precarious position the company now finds itself in. 'And although you're almost bankrupt you can still smile? Why not? Thanks to our strategy no one has tried to take us over for six months.

Smuggling 'pain' is deserved

7 ASHINGTON — Herewith a short course on the constitutional law of the alimen tary canal

The question confronting customs officials when passengers deplaned at Los Angeles from Bogota, Colombia, was whether the woman was a "balloon smuggler." Such people smuggle cocaine by swallowing balloons containing the stuff, balloons that are passed through the smuggler's alimentary canal after the smuggler has passed through customs. Two years later, the question preme Court wheth-Fourth tection against "unreasonable'

George F. Will and seizures was violated by the customs officials' method of ascertaining the contents of her alimentary

One inspector, who had caught many such smugglers, had reason for suspicion when he saw in her passport that she had made at least eight recent trips to Miami or Los Angeles from Bogota, capital of the cocaine industry. The lady spoke no English, had no family or friends here, had $5,000 in cash but no billfold, could not recall how her ticket had been purchased and said she planned to travel around Los Angeles by taxi, buying goods for her hus-band's store in Bogota.

The inspector requested a female colleague to conduct a "patdown" and strip search. It revealed that the woman's abdomen had "a firm full-ness." She consented to a X-ray, but when asked said she was pregnant. And when she learned she would be handcuffed while traveling to the hospital, she withdrew consent

She was then given three choices She could return to Bogota on the next available flight, or receive an X-ray, or remain in detention until she produced a monitored bowel movement. She chose the first, but could not get a seat on the flight leaving the next morning

Sixteen hours after landing from her 10-hour flight, she was showing signs of what an appeals court called 'heroic efforts to resist the usual calls of nature." Then officers sought and received from a federal magistrate authorization for a rectal examination and involuntary X-ray. Before the X-ray results were in on the pregnancy text that proved she was lying, a physician removed from her rectum a balloon containing a foreign substance. She was arrested. During the next four days she passed 88 balloons containing 528 grams of cocaine.

The appeals court reversed her conviction, arguing that although customs officials had "justifiably high" suspicions, they should have quickly sought authority for an Xray rather than waiting for natural processes to confirm their suspicions. The court said the indications of smuggling were not sufficiently clear to justify the protracted detention, which was "humiliating" to the

The Supreme Court has now disagreed. It notes that the Fourth Amendment is more permissive of police power at the nation's border (where, for example, cars can be searched at random, or on the basis of the passenger's ethnicity) than in the interior of the country. Justice Brennan disagrees. To say that he just dissents is to match the understatement with which Japan's emperor announced surrender after has developed not necessarily to Japan's advantage." Brennan has an Olympic-class capacity for alarm and for finding por tents of a police state in police procedures. His dissent packs two walloping words ("disgusting" and 'saddening") into its first six, and then shifts into high gear, describing what the customs officials did as "the hallmark of a police state" and 'unbridled authoritarianism" in "an authoritarian twilight zone on the Brennan charges that the customs officials had "at most, a reasonable suspicion." But why the "at most" The Fourth Amendment is founded on the idea of reasonableness, no matter what the Court has said. And the suspicion was not just reasonable, it was right.

The woman had a painful, humiliating experience as the customs officials did their job, which is to prevent her from practicing her chosen profession. She made a bad choice. And Justice Rehnquist, writing for the majority, cites an early Court opinion that "creative judges, engaged in post-hoc evaluations of police conduct, can almost always imagine some alternative means by which the objective of the police might have been accomplished.

The unpleasant facts of this case deserve dissemination so Americans can contemplate the nasty details of the fight to protect the nation from pandemic poisoning by drugs. Bal-loon smugglers are not the core of the problem. The core is the millions of stupid and criminal Americans who comprise a brackish pool of addiction and money. The law should attack demand as well as supply, and do so by making the lives of drug users as unpleasant as that woman's experience at Los Angeles airport.

Hot weather expected to continue

From Staff and Wire Reports

The Midland area is not expected to see a break in hot temperatures any time soon as the National Weather Service expects the high to remain in the 90-degree range for the remainder of the week.

For tonight, forecasters are calling for fair skies with a low in the mid-60s, warming to a high in the middle 90s Friday. Tonight's southeasterly winds at five to 10 mph will continue through Friday. Wednesday's high of 98 was seven degrees below the record set in 1964. This morning's low was five degrees above the 62-degree record set in

STATE

Very heavy thunderstorms rumbled across parts of East Texas this morning. The storms were scattered across a region stretching from near Texarkana to northeast of College

Elsewhere, skies were mostly fair except for mid to low level clouds over parts of the Hill Country, COastal Bend, the lower Rio Grande Valley and far West Texas.

A weak frontal boundary stretched from east to west across north Texas, while a low pressure trough cut through the central part of the state.

Winds varied in direction from the southeast to the southwest across most of the state, except west to north over parts of southwest Texas and the South Plains. Wind speeds were generally in the 5 to 10 mph range.

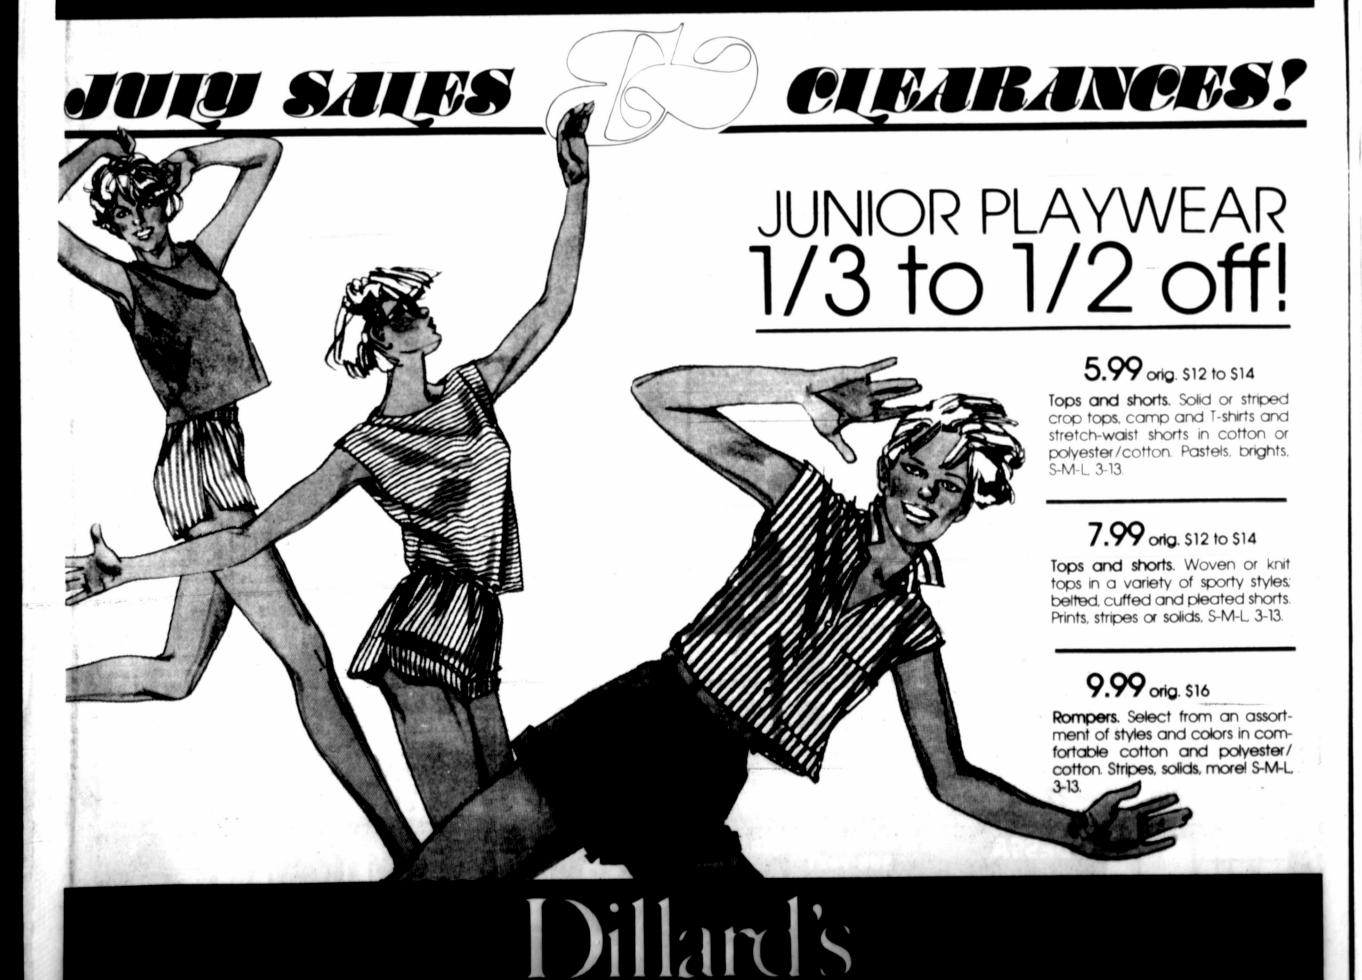

Temperatures were in the 80s in a few locations over north and far west Texas while readings were in the 60s over the high plains and the mountainous southwest. The rest of Texas had readings in the 70s. The early morning extremes ranged from 60 at Marfa to 83 at Fort Worth and Corpus Christi.

NATION

Showers and thunderstorms dotted sections of the nation from New England to the Rockies today as a Western heat wave that pushed temperatures as high as 120 degrees showed no sign of letting up.

Showers and thunderstorms stretched from New England to the Carolinas and into east Texas.

Elsewhere, showers and thunderstorms ranged from the upper Great Lakes through the central Plains into the southern Rockies. Scattered thundershowers spread across the Great Basin.

The Midland Angels, fresh out of the Texas Texas League cellar and out of a month-long doldrums with an impressive four-game winning streak over San Antonio behind them, resume league play tonight with the opener of a five-game set with the Jackson Mets.

Throughout the modest four-game streak, Midland has seen a myriad of heroes, from reliever Todd Fischer working out of a bases-loaded, nobody out jam on Thursday, to Reggie Montgomery's bases-loaded ninth inning single on Saturday, to Billie Merrifield's three-run homer in the 11th inning Sunday. No question, the heroics have been well distributed, just the way manager Joe Maddon has expected all season. But underneath the late inning heros, was the spectacular display of power exhibited by first baseman-/leftfielder James Randall, a source Maddon never considered when he flaunted the talents of this team in March and April. Randall connected for six home runs in the first five games of the six-game San Antonio

"He has really lifted us to the point where he has picked us up and carried us on his back for a while, Midland skipper Maddon said after watching Randall ring his RBI total for the San Antonio series to 12 last

"I don't mean this to sound like we need him to do that all the time, but his being as hot as he has been is the ultimate key factor. With him hitting like that, it sets the tone for the rest of the club.

AND IN the past week, that tone has shifted from somber to jubilant. Players talk about getting back in the West Division title chase with conviction again, not the resigned look of past weeks. Something seems to have clicked in the slumbering Angels, and looking around, it just might be the barrell-chested man they call "Sap". It certainly seemed so last Wednesday and Thursday when Randall connected four times for round-trippers and single-handedly kept Midland in each ballgame. After giving the Dodger pitching corps a break on Friday with an oh-for-four performance, Randall brought the heavy lumber to Angels Stadium again on Saturday, stroking three hits, including his sixth homer of the series and ninth of the season.

THE HOT spell, which actually carries back to the mid-season mark, has raised Randall's average to a team-high .338 from a low of .208 shortly after being brought to Midland from Class AAA Edmonton.

In 60 first half at bats for the Angels, Randall hit .267 with one homer and nine runs batted in. In 73 second half at bats, the Grambling University product has cracked eight homers and driven in 22 runs with a .397 average and a phenomenal .795 slugging percentage.

It all seems the product of a chance to play every day. Something Edmonton, the California Angels' Triple A affiliate and home of Wally Joyner, one of California's hotter prospects. Randall's demotion, if you call it that — he doesn't — came at a time when Midland was struggling to live up to high pre-season expectations that have yet to be fulfilled.

Randall is doing his best to make that long-ago prophecy come true.
"I didn't mind at all being sent down here, it gave me a chance to play every day," Randall says. "I'm just hoping we can begin to make a run at the division title.

HE CALLS himself a line-drive hitter who hits the ball hard to all fields. That much seems true. The left-hander has hit four of his last six homers to left-centerfield, showing tremendous opposite field power as well as an ability to hit the ball hard to the right side.

In all, the homer barrage has surprised the introvertive Randall a lit-

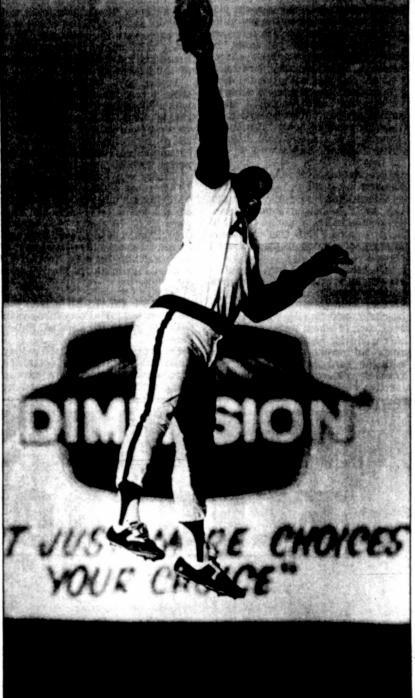

"I've hit the ball as well as this before, but as far as the home runs. I've never hit so many in so short a time. But I'm usually a line drive hitter, but this is a great park to hit in and I've been getting the ball up a little lately and it carries here."

Carry it does, and that is just what Randall has been doing with the Angels in the past week.

But just in case the load gets a little heavy, Randall is happy to have those late-inning heroes, too. He knows winning streaks are not the product of one hot bat, it only seems so in Randall's case.

ANGEL NOTES: Don Timberlake is set to come off the disabled list and is scheduled to pitch in tonight's ballgame at Jackson. Timberlake's presence will bump one of the extra hurlers from the Midland staff, but no decision had been made before the Angels left Midland for the long bus ride to Jackson, Miss., Wednesday.

Sandberg agrees with fans' choice

NEW YORK (AP) - Chicago's Ryne Sandberg has no argument with baseball fans who decided that Tommy Herr of St. Louis deserves to start at second base for the National League in Tuesday night's All-Star Game in Minneapolis.

Sandberg, the Most Valuable Player in the NL last season, was nosed out in the late going by Herr, who leads the major leagues this season with 66 runs batted in.

"Tommy Herr is definitely having an all-star season and that's what the game is for," said Sandberg, who is hitting .282 with 12 homers and has stolen 25 bases. "In this case, the fans did their job."

But Herr, despite getting the starting nod from the fans, would like to see a consensus of opinion.

"I still think the system is wrong," he explained. "I'd base it on the fans having a say, the players having a say and the media having a say get a consensus.' Herr, who also is second in the NL

in batting at .340, came from 32,000 votes behind to beat Sandberg by 58,629 in the tightest NL race.

"God bless the fact that I took 300,000 ballots home and voted for myself," Herr kidded.

He received 1,109,178 votes to 1,050,549 for Sandberg, and becomes the fourth different player to start at that position in as many years. Manny Trillo, Steve Sax and Sandberg were the previous starters.

"I'm really glad for him," said
Herr's teammate and double-play partner, Ozzie Smith, who was selected the starting shortstop. "I think the people really showed that there is a validity to the fans

SMITH, WHO will be making his third straight start, received 1,349,362 votes, well ahead of Garry Templeton of San Diego — the man for whom he was traded in 1982 who had 820,449.

Another new starter, San Diego's Graig Nettles, will occupy third base, but that represents a break with tradition. The 40-year-old Nettles broke a string of six straight se-lections for Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt, who has been playing first base for the last month. Nettles, an American League starter in 1975 and a 1980 replacement for an injured George Brett, received 1,032,335 votes to 739,793 for Schmidt.

The other five NL starters, all repeaters from last year's squad which defeated the American League 3-1 at San Francisco, include San Diego first baseman Steve Garvey and New York Mets catcher Gary Carter, each two-time winners of most valuable player honors in All-Star games. Carter, who will make his fifth straight start, was MVP last year as a Montreal representative.

Henderson, Murray make late surges

NEW YORK (AP) - Rickey Henderson of the New York Yankees and Eddie Murray of the Baltimore Orioles rode last-week vote surges to win election to the American League starting All-Star team, announced today by Commissioner Peter Ueberroth.

Henderson, the leading hitter in the major leagues, finished second among AL outfielders with 820,338, behind teammate Dave Winfield's 929,016, and pushed past California's Reggie Jackson. Henderson had been fourth in the balloting a week ago, 15,000 votes short of the top three. Boston's Jim Rice had 723,022 to grab the third starting job, just ahead of Jackson, who finished at 704,156 in his bid for a 12th All-Star start. Rice will be starting in the game for the fourth time, but the first time since 1980.

Murray made up a 30,000-vote gap to overtake California's Rod Carew, finishing with 778,477 to gain the first base job. Carew finished with 728,070 and had his streak of 15 straight All-Star starts snapped. He had been named every year since 1970 when the balloting was returned to the fans, winning election at second base from 1970-75 and at first base from 1976-84.

Five of the AL starters are repeaters from the 1984 team which lost to the National League 3-1 in San Francisco last year. They are Detroit's Lou Whitaker at second base, Cal Ripken of Baltimore at shortstop, George Brett of Kansas City at third base, catcher Lance Parrish of Detroit, and Winfield.

Whitaker had 1,070,731 votes, outdistancing Damaso Garcia of Toron-to, who had 533,807. Ripken was the leading AL vote-getter with 1,398,901, and more than doubled the total of Alan Trammell of Detroit, who had 669,057.

Brett earned a 10th straight start at third base and had almost 1 million votes more than Boston's Wade Boggs, finishing with 1,394,394 to 395,636 for the runner-up from the Red Sox. Parrish polled 1,037,483 to 787,313 for Carlton Fisk of the Chicago White Sox. who was

Guerrero takes easy route around bases

Associated Press

Pedro Guerrero knew he wouldn't be able to run around the bases. As it turned out, he didn't have to.

"Man, I was hurting," Guerrero said Wednesday night after hitting a two-run homer that helped the Los The Astros wa Angeles Dodgers beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-4.

Guerrero suffered back spasms as he connected for his 21st home run, and the pain made him hold up in the batter's box. Then, he slowly limped to first, second, third and fi-

"I thought it was a line drive, and my first thought was just to get to first because I knew it was a hit," he said. "I didn't want to take that long to get around the bases, but it

"He ran the bases like a onelegged man," Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda said.

In other NL games, New York beat Cincinnati 2-1, Montreal edged Atlanta 6-5 in 11 innings, Houston routed Philadelphia 10-0, St. Louis stopped San Francisco 7-3 and Chicago trimmed San Diego 4-3.

Guerrero left the game after his home run, which capped a three-run rally that put the visiting Dodgers ahead 5-4. Team doctors said he will be checked on a day-to-day basis. Guerrero is now tied for the major league home run lead with Atlanta's Dale Murphy, Chicago's Cariton Fisk and Oakland's Dave Kingman. Guerrero is batting 500 in his last eight games, and has 16 home runs in the past 31 games. "He's pumped life into this team," Lasorda said.

The Dodgers' winning rally, which included a double by Mariano Duncan and a sacrifice fly from Ken Landreaux, came against Lee Tunnell, 0-6, who has lost 11 straight decisions over two seasons.

Jerry Reuss, 7-6, overcame a fourrun uprising in the fourth and got the victory. Ken Howell pitched the final two innings for his eighth save.

Astros 10, Phillies 0 Jose Cruz went 3-for-3, including a bases-loaded triple during a five-run first inning that carried Houston

NL Roundup

The Astros wasted no time in roughing up Jerry Koosman, 3-2, who faced six batters and did not retire any of them. Cruz's triple drove in the first three runs and Glenn Davis and winning pitcher Mike Scott had RBI singles. In all, Houston sent 11 batters to the plate in the first inning.

Scott, 8-4, pitched a four-hitter and got the support of 14 hits in the Astrodome. Houston added five runs in the fifth, the final two on a single by Bill Doran, who had three hits, including two doubles.

Mets 2, Reds 1

Rookie pitcher Rick Aguilera turned in his second straight strong performance and veteran Keith Hernandez doubled home the tie-breaking run to give New York its ninth straight victory.

The Mets' winning streak is their longest since 1976 and two shy of the team record. The victory, in Cincinnati, was a club-record seventh straight on the road.

Aguilera, 3-2, allowed six hits including Dave Parker's 15th home run - in pitching his second consecutive complete game. He retired the last 10 batters in order.

"I just wanted to get it over," Aguilera said. "I didn't want to be the ugly duckling of the series."

The game was tied 1-1 in the fifth when Kelvin Chapman singled and scored on a double by Hernandez. Hernandez, hitting .357 in his last 12 games, leads the major leagues with 12 game-winning RBIs.

Expos 6, Braves 5 Mike Fitzgerald kept swinging his home run bat as Montreal won in Atlanta. Fitzgerald has hit five homers this season, all in the last 10 games. This time, he connected off

Astros send Cabell to L.A.

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros ended Enos Cabell's second tour of duty with the National League club Wednesday by trading the veteran first baseman to the Los Angeles Dodgers for a minor league pitcher and a player to be named Cabell signed as a free agent with the Astros in February 1984. He was named Astros team captain earlier this year but had started only 29 games at first base this season and hit .243 in 50 games.

In exchange for Cabell, the Astros got Rafael Montalvo, who appeared in 30 games this season for the Dodg-ers Class AAA affiliate in Albuquer-que, N.M. Montalvo recorded nine saves, a 1-5 record and 2.97 earned

Chris Jones from Tucson, where he had posted a .352 batting average in Cabell spent six seasons with the Astros before being traded to the San Francisco Giants following the Astros' 1980 Western Division championship season. Cabell played for the Detroit Lions in the 1982 and 1983 seasons and signed with the Astros as a free agent.

Cabell was appointed team cap-tain earlier this year but had been used sparingly in recent weeks.

"Even though I am the team cap-tain, I can:t say much about our situ-ation, because I haven't been in there day to day to judge," Cabell said prior to announcement of the Clark's home run, his 16th, capped a three-run uprising in the third in-ning that broke a 2-2 tie. Smith hit his fourth homer, in the second, off loser Vida Blue, 5-3.

"With the Giants, I felt like I had to contribute all the time. Over here, they still win games without me," said Clark, who spent 10 seasons with San Francisco before being traded to St. Louis in February. "They're going to get their hits. If I can hit the home run once in a while, it will make the team a little bit stronger.

Kurt Kepshire, 6-6, got the victory and Jeff Lahti picked up his seventh save as the Cardinals won their fourth straight game.

The victory, in their 81st game, allowed the Cards to maintain their 21/2-game lead in the NL East over the Mets and Chicago. Another 81 games remain, and Smith knows anything can happen down the stretch.

"Baseball's a funny game. Everything can fall into place in the first half and everything can fall apart the second half," he said. "We're only through the first part of a three-leg journey. Hopefully, it will be culminated in October.'

Rookie Vince Coleman stole two more bases for St. Louis, raising his major league-leading total to 59.

Cubs 4, Padres 3
Dave Lopes tied the game with a two-out, two-run homer in the seventh inning and Keith Moreland followed with a home run that led Chicago past San Diego.

Lopes, who had singled home the Cubs' first run in the fifth, hit his seventh home run. Moreland also hit his seventh, with both blows coming off Dave Dravecky, 8-5.

"It was one of those games," San Diego Padres first baseman Steve Garvey said, "where things were cruising along — then bam, bam, you're behind and there isn't time to catch up.

Most likely to be designated for reassignment, either to Redwood Quad Cities or destintations unknown, were reliever Scott Cannon (15.23 ERA) or starter Fred Wilburn. Wilburn (7.27 ERA in 10 starts) will become especially expendable when Ken Angulo returns to the active list sometime this week giving Maddon more starters than he can keep busy. Besides Timberlake and Angulo, Maddon will likely employ Doug McKenzie, Doug Banning, Bob Kipper and occasionally strong-armed Ray Chadwick in the rotation...

Garvey got 1,310,111 votes in outdistancing Keith Hernandez of the Mets, who finished with 841,951. while Carter got 1,129,018 votes to 777,485 for San Diego's Terry

"The first one, I think, is the most special," said Garvey, a starter for the ninth time. "In my case, it was even moreso because that year (1974) I was a write-in candidate and I ended up winning the MVP award."

"I'll never be tired of All-Star ga mes," Carter said. "They're a lot of fun and I look forward to them.

The outfield includes center field er Dale Murphy of Atlanta, starting for the fourth straight year and the leading vote-getter with 1,425,952 votes. The other starting outfielders will be Tony Gwynn of San Diego, last year's batting champion who got 968,262 votes, and Darryl Strawberry of New York, who received 907,107 despite missing six weeks with a thumb injury.

"I'm very delighted to get so much fan support," Strawberry said. "A lot of players are playing well, such as (Dave) Parker and (Willie) McGee deserve a chance to start. If I hadn't been hurt, I probably would have had the numbers just as well as other outfielders."

Strawberry, hitting just .226, said the fans voted for him "because I proved myself the first two years.

Cardinals McGee and Jack Clark, a first baseman listed as an outfielder on the ballot, Cincinnati's Parker and Pedro Guerrero of Los Angeles, each were overlooked despite excellent seasons. McGee leads the NL in hitting at .347; Clark, at .287, has 16 homers and 59 RBIs; Parker, at .306, has 15 homers and 58 RBIs; Guerrero is hitting .312 with 48 RBIs and is tied with Murphy for the league lead in homers with 21.

"I'd rather be picked by my peers, people I play against," said Clark, a major force in St. Louis' drive to first place in the NL East. "The fans should have their vote, but sometimes the players most deserving don't make the team."

San Diego Manager Dick Williams and the NL office will announce the pitchers and remaining members of pitchers and remaining members of the 28-member team on Friday.

Williams, who chose Chicago Manager Jim Frey and Houston field boss Bob Lillis as coaches, had no specific comments about the selections, saying he is more concerned about the NL West race.

Mantle still draws a crowd of fans AL STARS

By KEVIN DUPONT

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK - Coolly, and forthrightly, the boy with the satiny blond hair stood at the opposite side of the table. He had a presence and a charm far beyond his 9 or 10 years.
"I play baseball too, you know," he said, addressing this man named Mickey Mantle, this other blond gentleman, the one with the thinning strands and the graying sideburns. "You do?" said Mantle, a slight smile breaking out as he signed his recently released book, "The Mick," Tuesday at B. Dalton's book store on Fifth Avenue. "And where do you do that?'

"In Miami," said the Little Leaguer.

"Miami, huh," said Mantle, crossing the 'T' in his surname and emphatically adding a dot to the T in his first name. "Well, there are some pretty good schools to play baseball around Miami."

"Uh huh," said the boy, his interest waning as he brought up an open hand to support his chin.
"You could go to college and play baseball," said Mantle, who has four sons, each of whom wears one of the seven World Series championship rings daddy earned in his 18 years with the Yankees. "And when you graduate, you could sign a contract for five billion dollars."

"Yeah," said the visitor, his interest now piqued. "I wish."

FOR 90 minutes Tuesday, Mickey Mantle sat and scrawled his name for a steady flow of admirers, well-wishers and purchasers of the book he wrote with Herb Gluck for Doubleday and Company, the publishing house headed by the Mets' chairman of the board. Young boys. Old ladies. Men in their teens, 20s and 30s, some of whom were born around Mantle's rookie year, 1951, and some who weren't even around yet to see his last swing in 1968. Mantle knows his ageless appeal, and chuckles at the perspective he keeps on it.

"I know why I'm popular," he said. "It's because of the guys who were watching me and reading about me when I was 18 or 19 years old. They were 18 or 19 then, too, and now they're the ones in power. Only they forget, I was only 18 or 19 when they were watching me play. And, all of a sudden, they think I'm 65 or 70 years

MICKEY CHARLES Mantle was born Oct. 20, 1931. Forty-three years later, he was in the Baseball Hall of Fame.

The fans came up to him Tuesday, almost always in stern reverance. Thanks for the good years, most of them said, if they mustered up enough nerve to say anything.

"Are you tired?" someone asked. Well, let's put it this way," he "It's not my idea of a said. doubleheader.

He maintained his steady strokes of ink on paper. A record crowd, said employees of the bookstore; never before such a turnout for an autograph session. In all, he signed better than 500 books. All strokes Tuesday were taken from the right side by the .298 career switch-hitter.

"You know," said a man in his mid-20s, "Raquel Welch didn't have a line this long." "I'll tell you one thing," said Man-tle, "if she'd been here, I'd a been in that line. The jokes flowed easily, as did some concern.

'You take care, Mick," said an older man from the back of the crowd. 'And feel better.'

FOR THE better part of three weeks, dating back to June 20, Mantle says he has been concerned about his health. He has some swellng at the base of his neck, slight bulges on each side of his throat. He also says he has a persistent headache that grinds away a couple of inches behind his left ear.

Tests have shown nothing thus far, said Mantle, who does public relations work for a casino these days and comments on Yankee games for SportsChannel, the cable television station. Hodgkin's disease, which killed his father at 39, has been ruled out.

For now, Mantle follows his doctors' orders, taking medication and no alcohol. He ardently hopes that the whole thing can be diagnosed as a migraine headache.

"It's eased off quite a bit," he said.
"Two or three Tylenol and I have no

Following the signing session, Mantle took a limousine over to 35th Street on the East Side, executing another stop on his daylong promotional tour. Dan Daly, the driver, has shuttled the Mick around for two days, often having to snake slowly through throngs of fans who want to peek in at their hero.

Daly is only 19 years old and never saw Mantle play, though he's heard endless stories from his father.

"No question, he's the greatest," said Daly, a part-time student at St. John's University. He pointed to a damaged antenna on the back of the limo, the work of an overzealous fan.

"It's hard to figure a little, though," Daly said. "I mean, how do I put this politely? It's not like Mickey Mantle's any heartthrob these days, or anything. Heck, he's not (Continued from Page 1B)

1961 — Despite a record seven errors and pitcher Stu Miller getting blown off the Candlestick Park mound by a gale wind, the National League edged the American League 5-4 in the first of two All-Star games played that year. Pittsburgh Pirate Roberto Clemente knocked in a pair of 10thinning runs and pinch-hitters George Altman and Harmon Killebrew homered.

Pettis provides real excitement: Stealing home runs

By SCOTT OSTLER 1985, Los Angeles Times

Forget about the home run. Forget about the stolen base. The most exciting, electrifying play in baseball these days is the stolen home run, a la Gary Pettis. Pettis plays centerfield, and be-yond. He is on the disabled list right now with a sprained wrist. But three times this season Pettis has gone air-borne, flown above a high centerfield fence and snatched a baseball that should have landed in the bleachers

Each catch helped the Angels win game. Baseball doesn't keep official stats on the SHR (stolen home run), but it's a good bet that not many outfielders in the game's history have stolen three in half a season. How does it feel to pull off baseball's most exciting play? "It's a play you grow up thinking about," Pettis said Tuesday, and he smiled just thinking about it again. "I have thought about that play several years, and it finally happened. It's even more exciting than I thought it was going to be. "It gives you a sense of watching yourself on TV," he said. "You can see it happening, even though you're performing the feat. "A diving catch I made last year on (Rickey) Henderson, and the one (SHR) this year on (Toronto's Jesse) Barfield, they were in slow motion. On Barfield, as I approached the warning track, everything started to slow down. It was so clear, like a picture on TV. It's like everything has stopped. The ball hangs and floats, like it won't come down until you get there. It's just like in a

"Once it's over, I get chill bumps. That happens when I watch great plays. Last night I got chill bumps on two plays. When Reggie (Jackson) threw the runner out at home - it was perfect. The other one was Ruppert (Jones, filling in for Pettis in centerfield). He just missed stealing a home run. He said it tipped his

How does one go about stealing a home run?

You start by being a great out-fielder. Pettis, in only his second full season, is being compared with the great outfield glove men of all time.

'I'd compare him to Joe DiMaggio, Paul Blair and Willie Mays," said Angel coach Jimmie Reese, who has seen most of baseball's great outfielders, going back to the days of Babe Ruth. "Pettis can go farther for a ball than any of them. And he cuts off extra-base hits. And he catches every ball he gets his hands on. And he gets the best jump on the ball I've ever seen.

But the stolen home runs? Well, Pettis can jump. The fences over which he has snatched home runs range from 8 to 10 1-2 feet high. He is 6-1 and can dunk a basketball easily, but so can half the high school kids in America.

"I can't figure out why I've done it so often," said Pettis, who then explained why he has. "I work hard. I know in my heart I work hard, on offense and defense. I work with Jimmie (Reese) before every home game. He hits me ground balls, then flies, then drives over my head. Then we work on balls over the fence. He'll hit 10 or 12 over the fence, and I'll try to catch 'em." Pettis studies warning tracks, walls, pitchers, hitters and field conditions. On his home run steals, he in Oakland, I always watched the seems to kiss the walls, not crunch them. Clumsy guys don't steal home

Stealing a homer from Harold Baines in Chicago's Comiskey Park, Pettis battled a fierce sun and a stiff breeze, made a 180-degree turn in midair, hit the wall and made the steal. He didn't realize until later that he had caught the ball well above the top of the wall.

Does Pettis watch replays of his great catches?

'Yes," he said. "My roommate tapes the news, and I watch it later, to see if I can get the same excitement the fans do. I'll run it (a great catch) back and forth, at least 15

Does Pettis ever amaze himself? "I do," he said, smiling. "There are times I don't even believe some of the things I do out here. Growing up news, and it seemed like every night, there was Willie Mays doing something on the ball field. Now it seems like every Saturday, here's Gary Pettis on 'This Week in Base-Pettis doesn't just steal homers. He also guns down baserunners (nine assists already this season), steals bases (24 in a row at one point this season) and steals games. Pettis has a chance to be baseball's unofficial most electrifying player, especially if he can trim his strikeout ratio and increase his times on base, where he worries teams to death, causing panic and chaos. Other candidates for the MEP award are Vince Coleman, Rickey Henderson and Dwight Gooden.

Those are all men who deal in raw speed. But when you need someone to go over the wall, Pettis is your

By RAY CORIO

New York Times News Service Q: When Bobby Riggs was a triple champion at Wimbledon in 1939, who were his opponents and partners?

A: In the men's singles final, Riggs defeated Elwood Cooke, also of the United States, 2-6, 8-6, 3-6, 6-3, 6-2. He teamed with Cooke in men's doubles, winning that final from Charles Hare and Frank Wilde of England, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, 9-7. In mixed doubles, Riggs was paired with the winner of the women's singles final, Alice Marble of the United States, and they beat the English team of Frank Wilde and Nina Brown, 9-7, 6-1. Over all that year at Wimbledon, Riggs won 18 matches without a - seven in singles, six in mixed doubles and five in men's doubles. He captured 51 of 60 sets and 361 of 581 games. For Riggs, who was elected to the National Tennis Hall of Fame in Newport, R.I., in 1967, those three titles were the only ones he ever won at Wimbledon.

Q: Trailing by a run, the home team mounts a threat in the ninth inning by loading the bases with two out. The batter misses a two-strike pitch, but so does the catcher, and the ball bounds a short distance from home plate as the batter sprints to first base. If the pitcher alertly runs to cover home plate, can the catcher throw the ball to him to tag the runner from third, or must the catcher make the longer — and riskier — throw to first base to retire the batter who has struck out?

A: Since the bases were loaded and the batter has become a runner, a force-play situation has been created at second, third and home, and that means the catcher can throw to the pitcher at the plate instead of to first base. Indeed, after catching the throw, the pitcher merely has to touch the plate, not tag the runner, to record the out that will end the game. Under the rules, the runner at third - as well as those at first and second — is forced to advance once the batter has become a runner. And the batter became a runner when the catcher failed to hold a third strike with two out. One note of interest: the scoring on this play would give the pitcher both a strikeout and a putout, with the catcher earning an assist.

Q: Which teams in the major leagues have their home dugouts on the third-base side of the field? Is there any reason for the preference?

A: Although there is no rule in baseball regarding where dugouts are placed, among the reasons for choosing one side over the other are the desire to be situated in the area that has more shade during warm days and wanting the dugout that is more accessible to the team's locker room. Only two of the dozen National League teams have their dugouts on the third-base side the Los Angeles Dodgers and the Chicago Cubs. In the American League, things are quite different: eight teams have third-base dugouts at home and six have first-base ones. The eight near third are: Baltimore, California, Chicago, Detroit, Minnesota, Oakland, Seattle and Toronto.

Q: Before he achieved a good measure of success with the Brooklyn Dodgers, did Dolf Camilli play first base for the Chicago Cubs? What other teams was he with during his career?

A: Besides the Dodgers, Camilli, a left-handed batter and thrower, played for the Cubs, the Philadelphia Phillies and the Boston Red Sox, but never for the New York Giants, to whom he refused to report after he was traded by Brooklyn in 1943. Camilli made it to the major leagues with the Cubs, but spent a sparse amount of time with them - 16 games in 1933 (batting .224) and 32 in 1934 (.275). There was one very good reason for this: The regular first baseman at the time was also the manager of the Cubs, Charlie Grimm, and he had just taken Chicago to the 1932 World Series. On June 11, 1934, Camilli was sent to the Phillies for Don Hurst in an exchange of first basemen, and he began to blossom as a hitter. Camilli hit .315 and .339 as a regular in 1936 and 1937, totaling 55 home runs, and then was obtained by the Dodgers on March 6, 1938, for Eddie Morgan, an outfielder, and $45,000. With Brooklyn, Camilli thrived for five years, leading the league in home runs (34) and runs batted in (120) in 1941, and leading the Dodgers to the pennant. When the Dodgers sent him to the Giants for the pitchers Bill Lohrman and Bill Sayles, and an infielder. Joe Orengo, Camilli retired. He returned with the Red Sox in 1945, batted 212 in 63 games, then retired for good, ending a 12-year career with 1,482 hits, 239 homers and a .277 batting average.

Q: How many times did Barney Ross fight Sammy Fuller and were any of their bouts for

A: They met only once, on Nov 17, 1933, where a crowd of 11,430 generated a gate of $21,163 in Chicago Stadium and saw Ross win a majority decision. One judge called the bout a draw. By winning, Ross retained the world junior welterweight title he had captured from Tony Canzoneri nearly five months earlier and had defended successfully twice against Johnny Farr on July 26 and Canzoneri Sept. 12. Ross also held the world lightweight and welterweight titles in a career that spanned 1929-38 and saw him win 77 of his 81 pro fights, 22 by knockout. He was elected to the Boxing Hall of Fame in 1956 and died in 1967

North Central wins laugher, 29-1

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING - What started out as a close, hotly contested ball game quickly turned into total chaos

Little

Wednesday as Midland North Central took a 2-1 first inning lead and turned it into a 29-1 rout Odessa over Western in the Division III Little League tourna ment here

North Central League

went on to score 15 runs in the next two innings, seven in the second and eight in the third, before slowing the attack to five runs in each of the fourth and fifth innings and only two in the sixth.

MNC's Chad Thomas led the way shellacking Western pitchers for five hits in six at bats, including a two-run homer. Also, Greg Peppers collected three doubles for MNC. The two provided eight of the team's 20 total hits.

On the mound, Jeff Johnston went the distance showing no mercy at any point after the first inning. Johnston allowed only four hits and three walks while striking out nine. Western's Jody Rood took the loss.

In the only other Tall City game, Midland Mid-City survived a one-hit performance at the plate to post a 4-0 victory over Midland Tower.

Jim Martin went the distance for Mid-City, allowing three hits and one walk while striking out six for the shutout. Tower's Robert Thorns took a no-hit loss in three innings of duty. Tower reliever Ronnie Rains gave up the only hit, an RBI single to Mid-City's Brad Odom in the fourth. Tonight, tournament action resumes with Midland Eastern the only Tall City team seeing action.

Eastern will face Big Spring International All-Stars at 8 p.m. at American Legion ball park.

Through Wednesday, North Central is unbeaten in the double elimination tournamet at 2-0 while Eastern and Mid-City are both 1-0. Tower has a 1-1 tournament mark and

Girl wins foul ball injury law suit

HOUSTON (AP) - An 18-year-old Houston woman injured by a baseball during a Houston Astros game received $180,000 in what attorneys say is the first such award ever granted by a jury in U.S. history.

Karen Friedman was 11 when she was struck on the head by a foul line drive - traveling at an estimated 125 mph — near the end of a National League game against Pittsburgh in the Astrodome on June 14, 1978.

A lawsuit filed by her father, Dr. Robert Friedman, said the girl was standing behind the Astros dugout trying to get autographs from players when the ball hit her.

Ms. Friedman suffered a broken facial bone and an eye injury in the incident, according to the suit. Her attorney, Leonard Kahn, said doctors had to insert a plate in the girl's head and she still has vision problems in her right eye.

A jury in state district court on Tuesday awarded her $180,000 -$125,000 in punitive damages and the remainder as compensation for the mental suffering of the woman and her father.

The jury found that the Houston Sports Association, which owns the Astros, was negligent in not warning Ms. Friedman of the hazard posed by foul balls hit during baseball games at the Astrodome

Kahn said he believes it was the first time in U.S. history a jury awarded damages to a spectator injured during a sporting event.

In New York, Chuck Adams, a spokesman for Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth, said his office was uncertain whether if there had been a previous jury award for a spectator injured by a baseball at a major league game.

To the best of our knowledge the plaintiff, generally speaking, was turned down and if it upheld, it was overturned," Adams said.

Ms. Friedman said after hearing the verdict that the area near the dugout is "a dangerous area and needs to be protected.'

Jury foreman Walter Qualls said he thought the sports association and the professional baseball industry showed a "lack of concern" about spectator injuries.

But Molly Anselin, spokeswoman for the sports association, said the lighted Astrodome scoreboard warns farns to be alert for "hard-hit balls." Also, a disclaimer on the back of game tickets warns that the association waives any liability for the spectators, she said.

Frank Rynd, attorney for the sports association, said he was disappointed by the verdict and may appeal it.

Stallions' Dotch USFL Coach of Year

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) - Rollie Dotch, who gave up coaching the offensive line to concentrate more on all aspects of the Birmingham Stallions' game, is The Associated Press' Coach of the Year in the United State Fooball League.

During the Birmingham Stallions' first two years, Dotsch coached the offensive line, although he also was the head coach But for the 1985 season, Dotch said he was giving up coaching the offenssive line because the job "stretched me a little thin at times the planning of other things.

Birmingham led the USFL in defense this year and its offense was one of the best in time of possession and in takeaway-giveaway margins.

The Stallions went 146 this season and won a second straight conference title before losing last Sunday to Baltimore in a semifinal playoff game. It also was their second straight year semifinal loss. They were 9-9 and 15-5 their first two seasons.

In voting by two writers in each USFL city, announced Wednesday, Dotsch was No. 1 on 14 ballots for the coaching honor. Charlie Sumner of the Oakland Invaders received 10

Pepper Rodgers of the Memphis Showboats received two votes and Mouse Davis of the Denver Gold and Jim Mora of the Baltimore Stars one each. Mora was Coach of the Year last season and Dick Coury of Boston, now Portland through New Orleans, won the honor in 1983.

Mark Spitz may be the most handsome specimen ever to achieve championship status in world athletics. In certain light, he can make Robert Redford look positively

JIM MURRAY

Spitz has that olive skin, those piercing green eyes. In a film with Omar Sharif, he'd get the girl. He fairly reeks of health. He's tall-

6-foot-1 - and even 13 years after his greatest triumph, there's hardly an ounce of fat on him. He's the kind of guy you'd want for your son-in-

That's why the guy who has him for a son-in-law, Herm Weiner, is up-set these days over the kind of public view his son-in-law is getting. Herm is a steel man, best known to the sporting press as one of the big all-time boosters of Cal Berkeley sports, a recruiter of note for its football team, a one-time bidder for an L.A. expansion franchise in the NFL, and a canny observer of the local sports scene.

Herm cannot understand how the world goes into paroxysms of admi-

gold medals in a single Olympics but eems to shrug over the seven won by Herm's son-in-law, who set seven world records in the process.

Spitz won nine gold medals altogether in two Olympics. In his sport, many competitors don't last two Olympics. He also won a bronze and silver. He is the nearest thing to a dolphin this country has ever produced. He made Johnny Weissmuller look like a turtle.

BEFORE THE 1984 Olympics here, one of the big guessing games was about who would carry the torch in to ignite the Olympic flame. Speculation turned on figures public and private. Peter Ueberroth, head of the organizing committee, gave no hint.

When Howard Cosell let out the names of the former athletes who would carry the Olympic flag into the Coliseum - divers Sammy Lee and Pat McCormick, swimmer John Naber, track stars Bruce Jenner, Wyomia Tyus, Billy Mills, Mack Robinson, Parry O'Brien and Al Oerter: a fighter named Richard Sandoval, and Bill Thorpe Jr., grandson of Jim ensued. Thorpe - a lot of people noticed that Spitz's name was not on that list and thought: "Aha! Mark lights the Spitz himself began to wonder. "My phone began to ring off the hook," he recalled the other day. "My friends told me to stop being

The uncertainty persisted right up until the morning of the Opening Ceremonies. When his network, ABC, advised him to be on the scene early, Spitz half suspected he would be the mystery guest, tapped at the last minute. It was the kind of gesture Ueberroth seemed to delight in.

BUT WHILE Spitz was sitting alone in the stands, he suddenly looked up and there was Rafer Johnson suited up for the occasion, along with the granddaughter of the late Jesse Owens.

"I was humiliated. I was stunned. I felt slapped in the face," he said. He was not alone. Letters to the editor, calls to talk show hosts, public denunciations of the LAOOC

Indignation was rife. Explanations were demanded. Anti-Semitism was suspected.

The Spitz supporters were outraged. They had no quarrel with Rafer Johnson as the choice to light the flame, but couldn't there have been one more flag-carrier?

Besides, if you could have a second torch bearer in the person of Jesse Owens' grandchild, why not a third torch bearer, even a fourth?" Spitz himself wondered.

The organizers' explanations were conflicting. First, they tried to explain that Spitz's chores as a broadcaster were a conflict of interest. That didn't wash. Jenner and Naber had broadcast chores, too.

Then the story was circulated that Spitz had been involved in a lawsuit against the Olympic committee, having to do with T-shirts and the Olympic logo. How could you use a guy who hauled you into court? Mark Spitz sighed. "Here is what happened: "I had gone to the committee some years before with an idea for marketing a line of visors. They gave me an application to fill out but I investigated and found the visor contract had already been let. It was

"I next had an idea for a coloring book. My associate in this was a man named Bart Jacobs, who had a distribution set-up all ready and in place. The committee notified me they didn't deem coloring books a worthy licensing project. OK. Even though I had invested some of my own money in the project, I dropped out.

"Subsequently, Bart Jacobs got involved in a controversy with Levi Strauss over shirt licensing. It was settled out of court and he was allowed to manufacture certain shirts for airport sale.

"It had nothing to do with me other than that I had been his partner in a previous deal." Still, the resultant publicity was not good.

SAID father-in-law Weiner: "I had a member of my firm in Japan recently, and he told me the Japanese

he spoke to were under the impres sion Mark had done something criminal to be left off the ceremonial

"Not only that," added son-in-law Spitz, "but, in Germany, a story was printed that I had demanded money to be part of the Opening Ceremonies!"

But that's the bad news. The good news is, Olympian Spitz is finally going to get his chance to light a torch.

Next week, at Tel Aviv, he will be the torch bearer for the Maccabiah Games, the Jewish Olympics, which bring together Jewish athletes from all over the world every four years for a massive sports meet.

For them, his father-in-law suggests, Mark Spitz may be the greatest Jewish athlete since Samson, may even be a direct descendant of

For anyone, it's nice to know a winner of nine gold medals finally will get to carry a flame.

Oil Bowl officials want NCAA to reconsider certification

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — Officials of the Oil Bowl, which annually features high school football stars from Texas and Oklahoma, will ask the NCAA All-Star Committee on Monday to revoke an earlier decision not to certify the Shrine-sponsored

The NCAA All-Star Committee refused to certify this year's game because Oil Bowl Chairman Tom Darling didn't provide a final report on after a Nov. 1 deadline, said Nick Seitz, the game's publicity director. The report serves as application for the following year, NCAA offi-

Oliver helps Jays punch Mariners

Associated Press

The Toronto Blue Jays acquired Al Oliver to put more punch into the lineup, and he's already holding up his end of the deal.

Picked up in a trade Tuesday with the Los Angeles Dodgers for Len Matuszek, Oliver celebrated his return to the American League after four years with a home run and three RBIs to help his new team to an 11-1 victory over the Seattle Mariners Wednesday night.

"I'm really glad to get a chance to play, and even gladder to get a chance to get some RBIs," said Oliver, who hit his first home run since the 1983 season.

Oliver had not played a game since May 5, when he was with the Dodgers. "I've maintained my condition over that time," Oliver said. "Tve stayed in shape. I was hoping for a chance like this. Oliver's two-run homer highlighted a five-run fifth inning that gave lead. Oliver also capped a two-run seventh with an RBI single. "He's a professional hitter, a class hitter," said Toronto Manager Bobby Cox. "I like him in the lineup. It looked like a good lineup tonight.

Rangers 4, Indians 1

They really hit the ball well."

Charlie Hough allowed just two singles to Brett Butler, in the first and ninth innings, and Pete O'Brien and Oddibe McDowell hit home runs as Texas beat Cleveland and snapped a four-game losing streak. Hough, 7-10, struck out four and walked two in completing his ninth game of the season. He had a shutout going until wild-pitching a run home in the ninth. O'Brien lined his 10th home run off Jerry Reed, 0-2, in the first inning for a 2-0 Ranger lead. The Rangers added a run in the sixth on Gary Ward's sacrifice fly and one more in the seventh on McDowell's fourth homer. Hough, a knuckleballer, said that both of Butler's hits came on fastballs.

They were both hit solid," the pitcher said. "Hey, they had a line drive to shortstop for an easy out and a line drive to second base for an easy out. I felt like I had pretty good command of my slow, hard and in-between knuckler, though."

Reggie Jackson hit his fourth home run in five games and Ron Romanick hurled a five-hitter to pace California over Milwaukee, the Angels' eighth victory in nine

Romanick, 10-4, lost his shutout bid on Paul Householder's leadoff homer in the eighth, his second of Jackson broke a scoreless pitching duel when he led off the sixth with his 15th home run off right-hander Ray Burris, 47. The homer was career No. 518 for Jackson, leaving him three shy of Ted Williams and Willie McCovey, who share eighth place on the all-time list.

The Angels' Rod Carew collected two singles and a double, raising his career hit total to 2,981 in his drive to become the 16th player in major league history to collect 3,000 hits.
"It means a lot to me to be able to produce like this after all these years," said Jackson, who has 22 RBIs in his last 22 games. "Pride has a lot to do with it."

game's only run as Detroit edged Chicago in a classic pitchers' duel between the Tigers' Jack Morris and Tom Seaver of the White Sox.

With two outs, Brookens doubled and came home on Whitaker's soft single to short center — only the fourth hit off Seaver, 8-7.

Morris, 10-6, scattered five hits, struck out nine and walked four in turning in his ninth complete game and fourth shutout of the season, tying him for the AL lead with Cleveland's Bert Blyleven.

Seaver struck out five and didn't walk a batter "It does seem like I need my very best stuff to beat the White Sox, Morris said. "I don't think too much about who I'm pitching against, but I have seen Tom, and I throw an awful lot alike. I'm a lot like Tom in some respects. I've seen him pitch well and lose, and pitch not so well Yankees 6, Royals 5 Dave Winfield's single off Kansas City relief ace Dan Quisenberry in the bottom of the ninth scored Rickey Henderson from second base with New York's winning run.

Henderson, who reached base on all five trips to the plate with two singles, two walks and an error and scored four times, opened the ninth with a single. One out later, he stole his third base of the game and 41st in 44 attempts, then scored the winning run on Winfield's hit following an intentional walk to Don Mattingly

Frank White's first-inning grand slam had staked the Royals to an early 40 lead, but the Yankees came back to pull even 5-5 on Mattingly's seventh-inning RBI double. Mattingly leads the major leagues with 24

Yankee reliever Dave Righetti, 7-8, was the winner, allowing one hit over the final two innings

A's 5, Red Sox 4 Dusty Baker homered and doubled to lead Oakland over Boston. Baker's 11th home run gave Oakland a 1-0 lead in the second inning, and the A's collected five hits and three runs in the third to help make a winner of Bill Krueger, 6-8, who pitched six innings, allowing six hits and one earned run.

Jay Howell pitched the last 1 2-3 innings for his 18th save. He was helped by a game-ending throw from left fielder Mike Heath to catcher Mickey Tettleton, who tagged out Bill Buckner trying to score from second on a single by Steve Lyons.

Red Sox starter Bob Ojeda, 4-5, took the loss

Twins 2, Orioles 1 Tom Brunansky hit his 19th home run on a 30 pitch from Mike Boddicker in the top of the ninth inning following a leadoff single by Mike Stenhouse, boosting Minnesota over the Orioles

The hit by Brunansky was only the fourth off Boddicker, 98.

Frank Viola, 10-6, was the winner with one inning of relief help from Ron Davis, who gained his 10th save. Viola allowed seven hits and struck out three while walking one.

"It was the first at-bet I got him into a situation that I knew what he was going to throw," said Brunansky, who was pretty sure he would see a fastball from Boddicker.

Bennett serenades panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Tony Bennett testified on Capitol Hill, he did it the way he knows best: He sang his audience a couple of songs.

Bennett, 58, went before the House Banking Committee's coinage panel Wednesday to promote passage of a congressional resolution that would award congressional gold medals to American composers George and Ira Gershwin, whom he knew.

He grabbed a microphone set up near a piano in the hearing room and launched into singing "Our Love Is Here To Stay" and "Who's Got the Last

The subcommittee passed it by unanimous voice vote, forwarding it to the full Banking Committee, which is expected to follow suit and send it to the House floor.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — U.S. Ambassador John Gavin used poetry to say he was not running for the U.S. Senate from California.

Gavin, in a news release issued by the embassy, quoted from "Cadenus and Vanessa," a poem by English author Jonathan Swift:

Tis an old maxim in the schools, that flattery's the food of fools; Yet now and then your men of wit will conde-scend to take a bit." He went on to say:

'May I presume to add to Swift, this couplet that will tell my drift; "I will not of that cup partake, if only for my saneness sake.' Gavin, 53, a former actor who became ambassador June 1, 1981, reportedly was considering running next year on the Republican ticket for the U.S. Senate seat held by Democrat Alan Cranston. MILWAUKEE (AP) — Veteran actor Ernest Borgnine is donning a clown costume for a circus parade

this weekend, but it will be his shoes that get a lot of the attention. Construction unions have sponsored a boycott of the shoe company making Borgnine's clown shoes, and union officials say they will watch during the Great Circus Parade on Sunday to see if the actor, a member of the Screen Actors Guild, will wear them. Borgnine, 68, who will play the role of clown and Hospital officials would not comment on his condition, but a friend of Fonda's said the actor was expected to be released from the hospital soon. Fonda apparently lost control of his motorcycle on a road about 12 miles south of Livingston and veered into an irrigation ditch, police said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A member of the Temptations soul music group has been booked for investi-

WESTPORT, Conn. (AP) — People who paid $20 for tickets to attend the town's 150th birthday party will get $10 refunds to make up for the failure of popular singers Daryl Hall and John Oates to appear in what city officials now say was a hoax. Westport First Selectman William Seiden said

Wednesday that a local woman claimed to have worked for the singers and promised to bring them in for the town's party Sunday.

When the duo did not show up, she blamed it on a broken-down truck, but Seiden said further investigation revealed the woman had no connection to the band.

The singers' publicists in New York City said they were not familiar with the woman, Helen Richards, who has refused comment.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Raphael Campos, whose 30-year film career began with "Blackboard Jungle" and included regular roles on television's "Rhoda" and "Centennial," died of cancer at the Motion Picture and Television Hospital. He was 49. Campos, born May 13, 1936, in Santiago, Dominican Republic, died Tuesday at the show-business hospital in suburban Woodland Hills, spokeswoman Jean Ferris said Wednesday.

He came to the United States in 1949 and was appearing in the Equity Library Theater production of "Heavenly Express" when director Richard Brooks discovered him in New York and signed him and several other youths for "Blackboard Jungle," which starred Glenn Ford as an embattled in practical transparent. inner-city teacher

Other Campos film roles included "Trial," in which he played an accused boy of Mexican descent. "Dino" with Sal Mineo, "The Appaloosa" with Marlon Brando, "Mister Buddwing" with James Garner, and "Oklahoma Crude" with George C. Scott.

On the "Centennial" TV miniseries, he played the part of Nacho. In "Rhoda," he played Ramon Diaz Jr. Campos more recently appeared in episodes of 'St. Elsewhere" and "V."

Campos was married twice, to singer Dinah Washington and model Sally Boyd, and divorced twice. Survivors include daughters Lucy and Mimi by Ms. Boyd as well as nine brothers and sisters. Funeral arrangements are pending, she said.

Dollar steadies

LONDON (AP) — The dollar steadied early today against key currencies in lively European trading after four straight trading days of sharp declines. Gold prices fell.

Dealers said pessimism about the strength of the American economic recovery and the prospect of lower U.S. interest rates still weighed heavily on the dollar.

U.S. retail prices for June and the U.S. producer price index were expected to be published

The dollar's troubles began on Friday when U.S. unemployment in June was reported unchanged at 7.3 percent, and deepened this week when the U.S. currency fell below three West German marks and nine French francs, sparking a wave of heavy selling.

In London, the British pound lost ground after steadily gaining 10 cents over the last two weeks. It cost $1.3755 to buy one pound, cheaper than $1.3842 dollars late Wednesday.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell to a sevenmonth low of 242.95 Japanese yen from 244.60 yen at Wednesday's close. Later, in London, it moved up to 243.65 yen.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $313.50 an ounce, compared with late Wednesday's $314.75. At midmorning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $313.80.

In Zurich, the bid price was $313.80, down from $315.25 late Wednesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose the equivalent of 22 cents to close at a bid $314.56. Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $6.01 a troy ounce, down from Wednesday's late bid of $6.065 dollars.

MARKETS Stocks advance with help of sliding dollar

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market scored its first gain this week with the help of a continued slide in the dollar, which hit its lowest level in more than 10 months against other major currencies.

The dollar's decline is raising expectations of some revival in the manufacturing sector of the U.S. economy and subsequent improvement in the earnings of American manufacturers, stockbrokers said.
As a result, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks climbed 10.98 points to 1,332.89 Wednesday, recouping most of its 12.54-point loss over Monday and Tuesday. The New York Stock Exchange, meanwhile, announced that it plans to expand its trading day by 30 minutes.

The NYSE said that beginning Sept. 30., it will open trading at 9:30 NYSE trading a.m. Eastern time. NYSE trading closes at 4 p.m. The American Stock Exchange, whose hours mirror those of the NYSE, said it is considering a similar move.

Previously, the lofty value of the dollar had subjected many U.S. manufacturers to intensified competition from imports, and at the same time made their goods relatively demand for dollars, currency tradexpensive in overseas markets.

A lower dollar also would enhance the reported profits of U.S. companies that do a large business in other countries - profits that are translated from those countries' currencies back into dollars.

But many analysts contend that the U.S. economy will still show only sluggish growth in the second half of 1985. Those expectations, together with high interest rates in other countries relative to the United States, are helping to reduce

For example, dealers said investors were switching money from the dollar to the British pound sterling to take advantage of double-digit British interest rates compared with single-digit returns in the United

The pound was quoted at $1.3842 late Wednesday in London, its highest level since June 14, 1984. The dollar also closed below 9 French francs for the first time since Sept. 4, 1984.

And overall, the dollar is down more than 14 percent since hitting record heights in late February. The Agriculture Department, meanwhile, said 1985 winter wheat production is estimated at 1.85 billion bushels, down 10 percent from last year's bumper crop of 2.06 bil-lion bushels and 2 percent less than

Separately, the department said grain crop prospects in the Soviet Union have deteriorated in the past month but the 1985 harvest still is expected to yield 190 million tons, up 12 percent from 170 million tons

Wall Street viewing Diamond Shamrock move as a good one

DALLAS (AP) — A plan by Diamond Shamrock Corp. to spin off some of its oil assets into a new partnership and cut the amount of cash paid on dividends was generally greeted by Wall Street as a good move — even though the company will take a loss in fiscal 1985.

William Bricker, chairman and chief executive officer of the Dallasbased domestic oil and gas company, told securities analysts in New York Wednesday of the four-phase restructuring plan.

Edith Barschi of Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. in New York said she was increasing her 1986 earnings projection for the company by 35 cents a share to a total of $2.25.

"I think long-term it's a positive (step). It's something they had to do eventually. I know they weren't happy paying that much cash (in dividends)," she said.

Diamond Shamrock's plan calls for an $810 million non-cash writedown of assets, the repurchase of up to $200 million in stock, a cash reduction in the dividend, but an increase in the actual value of the dividend by new ownership in a master limited partnership created by a spin off of oil assets.

The writedown involves a $600 million charge against the com-pany's valuable oil and gas properties in Indonesia, which were acquired in the $1.4 billion purchase of Natomas Corp. in 1982. The master limited partnership will involve 88 percent company ownership, with about 12 percent of the ownership units being sold in a public offering to be completed

The new partnership, Diamond Shamrock Offshore Partners Ltd., will consist of offshore Gulf of Mexico oil and gas operations, which accounted for 35 percent of the company's North American oil and gas production last year

J.L. Jackson, president and chief operating officer, said he is prohibited by law from discussing the value of the assets in the spin-off operation until that information has been filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission. A prospectus with details of the new spin off is expected to be available next week. Don Bustos, securities analyst with Duff & Phelps in Chicago, said individual shareholders probably will be pleased with the plan.

Panel criticizes FCC for late action BUSINESS BRIEFS

Los Angeles Times

Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON - Members of a congressional panel registered dissatisfaction Wednesday with the performance of Mark S. Fowler, Federal Communications Commission chairman, as referee in the heated corporate contest for control of leading media and entertainment companies.

Over the last decade, Diamond Shamrock's most significant North American production gains have come from the Gulf of Mexico.

North American output hit a record 16,368 barrels per day in 1984.

In a morning of pointed questions aimed at Fowler by members of the House Energy and Commerce Committee's subcommittee on telecommunications and finance, representatives often characterized the FCC procedures as too slow to deal with the current lightning pace of corporate mergers in the broadcast industry. The FCC has no formal guidelines for weighing the merits of hostile takeovers.

The FCC's pace, said committee Chairman John D. Dingell, D-Mich., promises to result in "an autopsy rather than a set of rules" governing transfers of control of some of the nation's largest media corporations.

"The commission will be compelled to unscramble the egg." Dingell said, if the current wave of financial activity continues without a formal set of commission guidelines for dealing with such hostile takeover attempts as those of CBS, Storer Communications and interest impact of corporate takeovers, but Fowler said the new process was unlikely to go into effect before the end of the year.

"We are attempting to deal with them (takeovers) in accordance with the Communications Act," Fowler testified. "We are striking a neutral posture between the parties while remaining mindful of our ultimate obligation to the public interest.

Currently, all applications to transfer ownership of TV and radio stations must be approved by the FCC. Until the recent wave of unfriendly takeovers, transfers seldom posed a problem for the FCC

Most sales were friendly, and as a result, the commission never established guidelines for dealing with forced mergers, proxy fights or other unfriendly takeover tactics. The targets of recent takeover attempts have been accused of using FCC rules as roadblocks against corporate raiders.

Media companies, which have supported Fowler's long-time efforts to deregulate the broadcast industry, 'shouldn't have any justification asking for deregulation one day and protection from marketplace pressures the next," insisted subcommittee Chairman Timothy Wirth, D-Colo., whose panel has been examining the corporate merger frenzy

Mexico abolishes 'interbank'

MEXICO CITY (AP) - Mexico abolished its so-called "interbank" foreign currency exchange rate today, a move that — in effect — further devalued the peso currency. An announcement by the Bank of Mexico, the country's equivalent of the federal reserve, said late Wednesday night that all transactions made up to now on the government-controlled "interbank" exchange are being immediately transferred to the free market, where the rate varies accord ing to supply and demand. The announcement said the government will maintain the so-called controlled" market rate, where an estimated 80 percent of Mexico's foreign currency transactions are carried out, and which is also controlled

Up to now, the peso has been devalued by 21 centavos daily against the U.S. dollar on both the "interbank" and the "controlled" rates. There are 100 centavos to the peso.

NYSE to open half-hour earlier

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Stock Exchange says its board voted to expand the exchange's daily trading hours effective Monday, Sept. 30, opening a half-hour earlier than usual. The decision to open trading at 9:30 a.m. Eastern time is subject to approval by the Securities and Exchange Commission. t would be the first expansion in trading hours at the NYSE in more than been 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Eastern time since Oct. 1, 1974 when the closing time was moved from 3:30 p.m.

Beginning Dec. 9, shareholders will get 25 cents in cash and a fractional unit in the partnership of 22.5 cents each quarter. The company said that will result in an increase in the dividend's value from $1.76 to $1.90, even though the actual cash paid shareholders would be reduced

But Diamond Shamrock officials also said they have made arrangements for shareholders to convert their interest in the new spin-off company into cash each quarter if

There has been speculation for some time on Wall Street that the Fortune 500 company, with earnings last year of $242 million on sales of $4.5 billion, would have to cut its dividend because of a lagging stock price and poor earnings projections.

This is not the first time the company has reshaped its operation. Bricker, 53, overhauled the company between 1979 and 1983, drastically reducing Diamond Shamrock's dependence on its chemical opera-tions and emphasizing oil and gas.

Bustos doesn't think that trend is over yet. "They might sell some chemical operations and buy some oil and gas operations," he said.

But Jackson said there is no plan to divest more chemical assets, nor make any major oil and gas purchases, even though he said the company continues to be on the lookout for a good opportunity.

"We have no intention of doing anything else," Jackson said. "It would not make sense to divest any major assets we have.

In announcing the changes

Wednesday, Bricker said all of Diamond Shamrock's businesses have been facing "an environment of severe competition and disinflation. These pressures, especially falling energy prices, have reduced the market value of many of our assets."

Diamond Shamrock wound up with egg on its face earlier this year in a hastily planned merger with Occidental Petroleum, which was aborted just before the union was to be announced.

Last month the company's common stock fell to a 10-year low after several investment analysts predicted its dividend could be in jeopardy following a company report which had a poor earnings outlook.

The stock closed Wednesday at $18 a share, down 37½ cents on the day. Its 52-week high and low are $21.12½ a share and $15.25 respec-

HOUSTON — Worldwide production of crude oil during the first five months of the year averaged 53,258,000 barrels a day, or 2.5 percent less than production during the comparable period of 1984, Petroleum Information International reports in its July 8 issue.

Production during May was 52,344,000 barrels daily, according to the daily newsletter that covers Comparable period of 1984. Saudia Arabia's output during the five-month period averaged 3,330,000 barrels daily compared with 4,900,000 barrels daily for the first five months of 1984. More significantly, Saudi production for May averaged only 2,500,000 barrels daily, PI International reports.

Production in Western Europe, primarily the United Kingdom and Norway, rose 5.5 percent during the

the daily newsletter that covers worldwide oil and natural gas exploration and production developments.

PI International figures show that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries continues to bear the brunt of the production decline. OPEC production during the January-May period averaged 15,794,000 barrels daily, down 11.9 percent from 17,930,000 barrels daily for the Norway, rose 5.5 percent during the five month period. It averaged 3,820,000 barrels daily compared with 3,620,000 barrels a day for the 1984 period, PI International figures

Some members of OPEC have been sharply critical of the production increases in the U.K. and Norway, contneding they have helped destabilize the worldwide crude off

INVESTOR'S GUIDE Savings bonds' values depend on date issued

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I have accumulated quite a number of U.S. Savings Bonds through the payroll deduction plan at work. I have 52 $50 E bonds purchased between May 1966 and July 1973, 88 $100 E bonds purchased between August 1973 and April 1980, and 97 $100 EE bonds purchased since early 1980. Can you tall me the current since early 1980. Can you tell me the current value of these bonds?

A. You might think you're asking a fairly simple question. Not so, because each bond now has a different value depending on the month and year in which it was issued. The value of every E and EE bond less than 40 years old increases each month, as interest accumulates. (The oldest E bonds reach final maturity and stop building up interest after 40 years.)

Before taking on the chore you propose, I would have to know the issue date of each bond. With that information in hand, I could turn to the booklet "Tables of Redemption Values for United States Savings Bonds Series E" and the similar booklet for EE bonds. There, I could look up the current value of each of your bonds.

After learning the current value of each of your bonds, I could add them all together and come up with the total value.

That's a major job, which you really should take on yourself. So should everyone else who wants to know what his or her E and EE bonds are worth. If I started handling requests such as yours, I wouldn't have time to write a column.

You can obtain the tables of redemption values booklets from Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, DC 20402. The E bond booklet costs $3.75; the EE version, $1.25.

If you want to duck that cost, ask your bank to let you study the booklets it receives from the Treasury Department. Some friendly bankers even provide photocopies to customers.

Q. Because I am planning to retire soon, I am considering either exchanging my Series E and EE savings bonds for Series HH bonds or cashing my Es and EEs and investing in something paying higher interest. Which would be the better choice?

A. Unless you're really strapped for immediate cash, don't exchange or redeem any of those Es or EEs until November 1987 at the earliest. By exchanging or redeeming sooner, you would miss out on the higher variable interest rates now accumulating on Es and EEs.

In order to get the variable rate, you must hold Es and EEs for five years past their first semiannual interest accrual date on or after Nov. 1,

E bonds issued before November 1947 will not be eligible for the variable rate.

Q. I have always listed on my federal income equal to the interest that accumulates on my Series E and EE savings bonds

Am I correct in feeling that I won't have to pay income tax on the interest I receive when I finally redeem those bonds? A. You're correct only if the amount of E and EE bond interest you reported on each of your income tax returns was equal to the interest that built up on your bonds for that year.

The only way you could accurately tally up that interest would be by calculating it from the savings bond Tables of Redemption Values booklets. Unless you're a mathematical whiz, it's most doubtful that the numbers you "felt" were right were, in fact, equal to the annual buildup of You're headed for problems when you cash the bonds. You'll receive a Form 1099, listing the interest you finally receive. The Internal Revenue Service will get a copy. Unless you've saved all your income tax returns and can prove to the IRS you've been reporting and paying tax on the savings bond interest, the revenooers will want their bite on the full amount of interest.

ODESSA - A 161st District Court jury this morning will decide how much time 36-year-old Danny Fletcher McCubbin should spend behind bars for the Sept. 5, 1984 murder of 47-year-old Curtis Smith.

The jury deliberated about 25 minutes Wednesday afternoon to find McCubbin guilty in the killing of Smith, an operations manager for Roy's Tong Service, 8510 W. Highway 80, where he was found shot to death in the early morning hours of

On May 16, Kenneth Wayne Richards, 32, also accused in the murder of Smith, was found guilty by a 70th District Court jury and sentenced to 99 years in prison.

McCubbin's court-appointed attorney, G. David Smith, attempted to introduce the element of selfdefense in the trial by arguing Smith also had a gun at the time of the shooting, but jurors were apparently not swayed to consider self-defense as a mitigating factor.

Ticket to hell prompts search for old-time religion

What has happened to that old-

I don't know, but the Devil and his insidious Angels probably had some-thing to do with its languished ways.

Compounding my search for old-time religion is this: I'm not so sure what I'm looking for. When I was a child X-number of years ago, at the acme of radio, the motion-picture shows and outdoor revivals, I was exposed to the notion of getting that exposed to the notion of getting that "old-time religion."

Today, I wonder if the old-timers back then were searching for it, too, or if they already had it pocketed in secret compartments in their lives. It wasn't evident. I never asked if they "had it," for I was afraid they would turn the question on me. What would I say? Certainly not the truth, which was somewhere between "I don't know" and "no."

The easy way out was to say "Yes, I'm saved," and there would be no lecture on Heaven and Hell.

associated good-time religion with the joyful sounds of the old Stamps Quartet and other singing groups sounding praises over the airwaves out of Dallas, Paris and Sulphur Springs. But the singing over the airwaves, under tents or tabernacles or just in the open air on humid summer nights often was a prelude to some Hell Fire-and-damnation preaching, which was laced with preachments about following the "narrow path" of righteousness, being "saved" by confessing sins, turning your life over to the Lord, and getting baptized. Even now, I feel somewhat unworthy even to speak or write His or His Son's name. The fear is that I will slip into blasphemy and be condemned over the airwaves, under tents or before I know it. Zap!

Some of those old feelings returned Saturday amid the carnival atmosphere of the Midland Centennial celebration on and about the courthouse square. I got slammed with a reminder of one version of yesterday's religion.

An angelic child approached me on the west side of the courthouse square and smilingly handed me a square and smilingly handed me a free ticket. I was most impressed. Free? I said "Thank you" with utmost sincerity and wondered what was free. I got Ticket No. 666, which entitled me "To spend eternity in the Lake of Fire with the Devil and his Angels." The price of admission was to "do nothing and ignore God's saving grace." I wanted nothing of that. Who wants torment as a way of life beyond this life?

As a child, I can recall being intimidated by threats of my being cast into the Lake of Fire because of my sins associated with mere existence and by my failure to accept whatever the preacher was offering at

I always was perplexed by how just a few steps in that long walk down the aisle and up to the altar suddenly would transfer me from a suddenly would transfer me from a sinning soul to a life of purity and somehow would keep me out of the place the preachers called Hell. To be honest, I was more interested in avoiding Hell than going to Heaven, simply because admittance to either place involved death and dying. Back then, I wasn't interested in dying; I'm not now. But as I grow older, I am convinced that life is terminal for all of us; death could be

In more than one revival, I recall preachers suggesting if I didn't repent right now, I might die that very night and would have to spend the rest of my afterlife in that Lake of Fire. I wanted no part of that. Once, at a more sedate service, I, at the prompting of my kindly Sunday School teacher, did wander down School teacher, did wander down the aisle on a Sunday morning, was greeted by the balding minister, was congratulated by the congregation and was immersed in a pool in a pasture in a rural place called Charleston, Texas, that very afternoon. Well, even after that experience, I still felt guilty at revivals when the visiting evangelists and the hometown ministers preached about "Hell Fire" and "Saving Grace." They always were talking directly to me, I sensed, and "saved" or not, I always had doubts. In reflection, it seems some of the preachers were likened to salesmen who had quotas to meet. And the more folks they could "scare" to the altar, the more success they had attained. I don't know.

So, last Saturday, I put away that one-way ticket to Hell, but didn't forget about it. It was only later that I happened to look on the other side and discovered Ticket No. 777, which afforded an opportunity to "spend eternity in Heaven" if only I would believe and follow the

Walsh seeks attorney general bid

By JULIE HILLRICHS Staff Writer

Ed Walsh, seeking the Republican nomination for attorney general, emphasized the need for a tougher stand on crime and the attorney general's role in law enforcement during a campaign swing through Midland early today.

Walsh, 38, who served as Williamson County district attorney for eight years, formally announced his candidacy as a Republican for attorney general Wednesday. A former Democrat, Walsh changed parties in Walsh told reporters during a news conference at Midland County Courthouse, "If we here in Texas are serious about fighting crime, we must rededicate ourselve. The first step is electing an experienced and effective prosecutor.

"I know what it takes to convict criminals and keep them off the streets so that our homes and families will be safer. I understand the importance of having a prosecutor who works with law enforcement officials and victims to make criminals pay for their crimes," Walsh

Bob Stearns, father of a Houston murder victim in a case under appeal after eight years, introduced Walsh saying he supported the newly-resigned Williamson County district attorney because "as the parent of a victim, I have a lot of respect for (Walsh)."

Stearns' son, Tom, was the only witness to an armed robbery of a radio equipment outlet where he was working at the time. The day before the trial, one of three gunmen in the alleged robbery reportedly kidnapped and murdered the younger Stearns to prevent testimony, prosecutors claim.

"I came to know Ed Walsh through my involvement with People Against Violent Crimes, a sta-families," Stearns said in support of

According to Walsh, his 81/2 years experience at district attorney prepared him well for the office of attorney general.

Assailing present Attorney General Jim Mattox's record, Walsh said, "That office has a budget of more than $76 million over the next two years and a staff of more than 1,000 employees including 230 attorneys. If Jim Mattox says he can't handle the job with all that help and all that money, it's time we replaced him.

"I will work for the most efficient use of the resources of the office and I won't be constantly complaining that I can't do the job because my budget isn't big enough," Walsh added

Walsh said he would make use of his background as a criminal prosecutor, "not a politician," in his race for the Republican nomination. "It's time that Texas got a prosecutor and tewide organization of victims and not a politician as its attorney general. We need to return that office to being the state's chief enforcer of the law and away from its role as a political stepping stone to a higher

A Round Rock native, Walsh was named 1983 "Prosecutor of the Year" by Texans' War on Drugs Committee. In 1984 he was selected "Outstanding Prosecutor for the State of Texas" by the The Texas Bar Association's Criminal Law Section. The former Democrat also serves on the board of directors of People Against Violent Crimes.

The only prosecutor to have obtained a capital murder conviction for serial killer Henry Lee Lucas, Walsh is a graduate of the University of Texas Law School. He lives in Round Rock with his wife, Lori, and three children.

Walsh appeared here as part of a 12-city, four-day announcement tour. Other cities include Georgetown, Austin, Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston, San Antonio, San Angelo, Lubbock, Amarillo and Abilene.

Midland jail faces wrongful-death suit

By MARK LEWIS Staff Writer

The county jail, which has already exposed Midland County to the wrath of the Texas Commission on Jail Standards, may soon cause the county to be hauled into court to face a wrongful-death suit brought by the widow of a former county prisoner

The latest dispute involving the ail on the fifth floor of the County Courthouse may be resolved on the fourth floor, in 238th District Court Judge Vann Culp's court. In a suit filed last week, Sandra Byrne Collins, widow of George J. Byrne Jr., contends her husband died on Aug. 2, 1983, "as a direct and proximate cause of the negligence and carelessness of the Defendant Midland

Ms. Collins is also suing Midland Memorial Hospital, the Permian Basin Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation, and Dr. John R. Howlett Jr.

Byrne died in the hospital on Aug. 2, the day after he was transferred from the county jail. Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman said the county denied any responsibility in Byrne's death, and Bob Dickson, executive director of the MHMR Center, described the suit as "frivo-

"We deny it all," he said this morning.

The hospital district's attorney, David M. Davis, of Davis and Davis in Austin, was unavailable for comment this morning.

According to the plaintiff's petition, Byrne, who was 37 when he died, was an outpatient at the MHMR Center, where he was being treated "for emotional and mental disorders," and was under medication to control seizures.

The petition said on July 28, 1983, Byrne was asked to leave the daycare program at the MHMR Center. Later that day he was found lying in a parking lot near State Highway 349 by Department of Public Safety troopers. After becoming violent and striking one of the troopers, Byrne was taken to Midland County

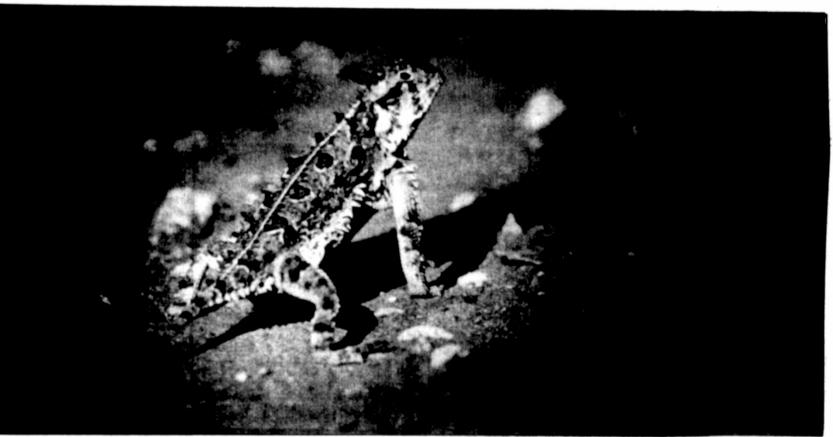

According to the petition, a representative of the MHMR Center recommended that Byrne be jailed, rather than hospitalized, for "therapeutic" reasons. After his condition deteriorated, Dr. Patrick Leung, the jail medical officer, ordered him transferred to the hospital on Aug. 1. The following afternoon, Byrne died after choking on his own vomit.

Leung said this morning the county had no responsibility for Byrne's death because he was transferred when it became obvious he needed hospitalization, and because his death occurred more than 24 hours after his release from the jail. He described the suit as "witchhunting," and said negligence wasn't to blame for Byrne's death.

This kind of thing (patients like Byrne choking to death on their own vomit) does happen," he said. I'm sure the county is clear.

Leung said Byrne should have never have been jailed in the first

"Mental Health-Mental Retardation should pick up their own patients," he said. "The jail is not a

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Supreme Court Wednesday let stand an El Paso Court of Appeals ruling ordering a new trial in a worker's compensation lawsuit from Ector County.

The appeals court reported that Janes had suffered an injury to his

The appeals court said that evidence was "factually insufficient to sustain a jury verdict of injury" and ordered a new trial.

The appeals court said there was a question as to whether the compression plate breaking was "in and

South Texas citrus growers fear contamination by Florida canker

McALLEN (AP) — South Texas citrus growers say federal officials should not ask them to jeopardize their industry for the sake of their Florida counterparts.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture is proposing to lift a quarantine on Florida citrus, some of which has been affected by canker, a bacteria that attacks the branches, leaves and even the fruit.

But at a public hearing on Wednesday, Rio Grande Valley growers who are trying to make a comeback after a devastating 1983 freeze said the canker must be eradicated before citrus is allowed to leave Florida.

"The citrus industry and the economy of the Rio Grande Valley has tried to get up off its knees and we cannot be subjected to another possible disaster," Holbrook said.

In December 1983, a week of subfreezing temperatures wiped about 60 percent of the Valley citrus acreage, costing growers some $100 million. More than 9,000 farmworkers

'We intend to come back. We will come back, but the very worst thing I think that could happen to us, both from an economic standpoint and from a psychological standpoint, is if we got canker," he said. "It would be devastating to even the intentions that growers have about replanting

Workers want bus accident probed

EL PASO (AP) — A local farm workers union in this border city has called on the U.S. Department of Labor to investigate a bus accident that killed two migrant workers and left at least six others injured.

Carlos Marentes, member of La Union Trabajadores Agricolas Fronterizos — border agricultural workers union - said Wednesday that the labor department should investigate the accident and the recruitment practices of farm labor con-

"The accident is a result of the unjust farm labor recruitment system practiced in this area. Marentes said. "Under the system the farm labor contractors as well as the farmers place profit-making above the safety and well-being of the workers."

Home's medical records OK as evidence

GALVESTON (AP) — Medical records seized surrounding the Autumn Hills nursing home case were legally obtained and can be used as evidence in a trial, a state district

Last November, a Galveston County grand jury issued eight murder indictments in the case accusing Indictments surrounding the case are based largely on medical records of two elderly women who died at Autumn Hills in 1978.

State District Judge Don B. Morgan's ruling Tuesday came after five days of testimony on a defense motion to suppress the former Texas City home's medical records as evi-

But Morgan didn't rule whether the prosecution can use other records subpoenaed since officials took the medical records from the former Autumn Hills Convalescent Center in November 1979.

Attorneys defending the Houston based Autumn Hills Convalescent Centers Inc. and five of its present and former employees charged that prosecutors improperly used a grand jury subpoena to seize records from the home.

Defense attorney Roy Minton of Austin said prosecutors deliberately set out to intimidate the nursing home's administrators when they went to retrieve the records.

Although the evidence suppression hearing was conducted in open court, Morgan said he will resume holding closed sessions on pretrail motions that do not require witness testimony

The state Criminal Court of Appeals on Monday refused to consider a Houston Chronicle petition that Morgan be ordered to open all arguments on pretrial motions to the public.

Shiny tomato coating is juicy story

By SONJA HEINZE

Q: In the supermarket the other day was a mound of tomatoes that looked positively fake. Tomatoes don't shine, but these glistened like something I've never seen. I asked one of the clerks what they were coated with and he didn't know. It didn't look or feel like wax but something new.

I thought consumers were supposed to know what additives were in or on their food. I didn't buy the tomatoes and am quite angry about this. J. Carpenter, Stamford, Conn.

A: I, too, have seen quite unnatural-looking fruit and vegetables in the stores lately. They might be coated with a new product called sucrose fatty acid esters which is derived from beef fat.

You can wash this coating off with detergent, which is something you can't do with wax coatings no matter how hard you scrub. Since they add fungicides, growth regulators, bactericides and ripening inhibitors to this wax, if a consumer eats the waxed peel he's really getting a mouthful.

One disadvantage of the new beef fat coating is that it presents religious or philosophical problems for Jewish, Moslem and vegetarian

According to federal law, all stores selling fruit or vegetables treated with any coating must cleardisplay a sign identifying any coating compounds that are used. The Food and Drug Administration depends on state agencies to enforce

Joe Regenstein, of the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell, says, "It is quite clear that this law is not being enforced. When was the last time you saw a label for a waxed the law's requirements, Regenstein says, you can contact the regional Food and Drug Administration office or the state agency responsible for enforcing these regulations at the retail level.

It might take a bit of unearthing to find the addresses and phone numbers of these agencies, but consumers owe it to themselves and their neighbors to see that this law is complied with in their local stores.

Dressing tosses testers

By LINDA ANDERSON

The recent - and unusual - humidity which has blanketed the Permian Basin, coupled with the recent — and usual — high temperatures, have led many Midlanders to believe that cooking and eating normal meals is impossible.

In search of something - anything — to perk up dwindling appetites, some family cooks are seeking new and tasty ways to change the flavors of favorite cool summer salads. The easiest way to do this is to leave the salad basically the same but change the dressing (and in this heat, cooks are always grateful for easy meals).

Kraft, a leading salad dressing manufacturer (among other things), recently has introduced its reduced-calorie "Bacon and Tomato" flavored dressing, claimed to be full of "real bacon and tomato bits." Because both foods are delicious in salads and difficult to resist - and because reducing calorie intake has become a popular pasttime at my house - we tested the new dressing for taste, price and advertising accuracy. The usual taste-testers adults, teen and children - have been complaining loudly about the heat ruining their appetities.

The price of an eight-ounce bottle 99-cents, the same price as an eight-ounce bottle of Kraft regular bacon and tomato-flavored dressing. In fact, this is the same price as many of Kraft's other salad dressings. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

According to label information, reduced-calorie bacon and tomato dressing contains 30 calories per tablespoon serving while regular bacon and tomato dressing has 70 calories per one-tablespoon serving. (That is so unrealistic - who limits servings of dressing to a single

bacon together with bits of ripe tomatoes and smooth sour cream ... So rich, you don't have to diet to like

Ingredients listed on the label really did include tomato (listed third), bacon (seventh on the list) and dehydrated sour cream (listed eighth), but they also included soybean oil (second) and xanthan gum, propylene glycol alginate and polysorbate 60. (When are labels going to be printed in English?) The new low-calorie dressing was tested on two salad types: ordinary iceberg-lettuce-and-tomato (which is so easy to prepare), and macaroni-tuna-with-cheese-pickles-and-hardboiled-eggs (our favorite) which we blend with mayonnaise.

The reviews were mixed. The 4 year-old liked the macaroni salad with the new dressing, but when she ate the lettuce and tomato salad, all she ate was the dressing. The 2-yearold also liked the macaroni salad with bacon and tomato dressing, but refused to touch the vegetable salad. The teen liked the lettuce salad with the dressing but didn't touch the macaroni salad. And the adult didn't like the dressing, in either salad. It had a strong Parmesan cheese taste, (which is not on the list of ingredients) and not enough bacon or tomatoes.

But none of the testers could taste bacon or tomatoes in the dressing, even though it is supposedly made

We will probably finish the bottle and go back to our favorite dressings or try some other new flavor. But unless the dressing is "improved" enough to make it really taste like bacon and tomatoes - the way its advertising claims - this one bottle will be enough for us.

Freeze cheese

By DENESE ALBRACHT Recent tests

on freezing cheese should be good news for e who would like the convenience of having a stock of their favorite cheeses on hand. Ten different varieties of cheese proved successful for Denese Albracht home freezing in tests reported by the Minnesota Experiment Station. But the success depends on rapid freezing as well as the composition of the cheese.

The temperature in the freezer should be 0-F. or lower, and the pieces or packages of cheese should weigh no m re than one pound. The varieties of cheese that were successfully frozen and kept in freezer storage for six months in the Minnesota tests were Cheddar, Brick, Port du Salut, Swiss, Provoloni, Mozzarella, Liederkranz, Camenbert, Parmesan and Romano.

The three brands of Bleu cheese tested all became crumbly and mealy after freezing. If the Bleu cheese is to be used for salad or dressings, this is not a disadvantage and might make the cheese more convenient.

Since the cream cheese in the tests became watery and mealy, it is not recommended for freezing.

When preparing cheese to freeze, cut into pieces no larger than onepound size or use packaged cheese weighing no more than a pound. Small size cheeses like Camenbert and Liederkranz may be left in the original packages or in an overwrap for extra protection. Any cut cheese, such as wedges of Cheddar, should be closely wrapped in freezer foil. Press the foil tight with hands to keep out air. Freeze at 0-F. or lower and thaw in the refrigerator.

Denese Albracht is Midland County Extension Agent, Home Economics.

The universal safety rule for refrigerated food is to keep those foods in the refrigerator at a temperature of 40 degrees or lower (down to 34 degrees). Above this temperature foods spoil rapidly as both infectious bacteria and toxin-producing microorganisms start to grow. All leftovers should immedi-ately be stored in the refrigerator.

Where to get facts on fast-food

Los Angeles Times-

Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — While much attention was focused last week on the announcement from three confirmer groups that they were petitioning the federal government to require fast-food companies to provide in-gredient labeling on their products, it will be a long time until regula-

DEAR ABBY

Sailor's I.D. bracelet may make it home after 41 years

BY ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Thanks to your column in the Fresno Bee, I became aware that you were able to help an American soldier return the identification papers taken from the body of a dead German soldier during World War II. Perhaps you can solve a similar dilemma of 41 years' standing.

I would like to return a sterling silver ID bracelet to the family of a young sailor whose body my husband helped to prepare for burial at Naval Base Hospital No. 18 on Guam in 1944. The bracelet was engraved "MICHAEL HUDZY (and his serial number) 33773514.

Sometime later, my husband was horrified to find this ID bracelet in his jumper pocket where he must have dropped it in order to free his hands for other things. He was afraid to turn it in for fear of being accused of theft, as he truly didn't remember putting it into his pocket. He kept it all these years hoping that somehow, someday he could return it to the boy's family.

Through the years I have written to the Veterans Administration and the Department of Records in Washington, asking for the boy's address through a G.I. insurance policy anything - but my letters were nevaffswered. Not long before my husband's death in 1978, he mentioned again his desire to return this bracelet feeling it must mean something to someone, somewhere

I still have it. Can you help me return it to the family of Michael Hudzy?

I'm signing my name and address. Please contact me if you hear from his family and I will send it to them. - MRS. J.P.W., FRESNO, CALIF.

DEAR MRS. J.P.W.: It's a long shot, but if I hear from the sailor's family, I will put them in touch with Bless you for your

DEAR ABBY: In January, I sent

an original manuscript as a gift to Woody Allen. I had hand-bound the pages, and decorated the binding with baroque pearls and amethyst. I enclosed my name, address and telephone number. I had hoped that Woody would either send me a note or call me, or at the very least, instruct his secretary to do so.

To date, I haven't received even an acknowledgment that my gift was received. Abby, is it unrealistic of me to expect a thank-you from a famous person? — DISAPPOINTED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: The recipients of unsolicited material are not required to acknowledge or return it, unless return postage is provided

Some famous people are instructed by their attorneys to never acknowledge (or read) unsolicited manuscripts, so even though yours was elaborately decorated, there's a good chance that Woody Allen didn't even see it.

DEAR ABBY: I honestly don't know how many denture wearers there are in this country, but I would guess that about 10 to 15 percent of the population wears

I know that all dentures should fit perfectly, but I'll wager that millions

Now, when that ever-present sesame seed creeps under a denture while the victim is eating in a fastfood place, the poor sucker has to interrupt his meal, go straight to the washroom, remove his denture and get rid of the seed. If he doesn't, it feels like he's chewing on a sewing needle!

Abby, why sesame seeds in the first place? They have no taste and are an absolute nuisance. Solution: Order two burger bun bottoms? The two fast-food places in my town (McDonald's and Burger King) charge extra for the switch. I think that's discrimination against denture wearers. What do you think, and can you help us? - DISCOURAGED IN JAY, MAINE DEAR DISCOURAGE: You have a valid point. So this is an open (sesame) letter to all fast-food restau-

Prof stresses proper use of computers in education

By STEPHEN FRANK Hearst News Service

Once you had to learn to tie your shoelaces before you entered grade

Now there are velcro fasteners on sneakers. Once you had to tell time by the hands of a clock.

there are digital wristwatches. Once you needed pencil, paper and a knowledge of the multiplication tables to multiply and divide. Now there are pocket calculators. Once you had to learn mnemonics to spell troublesome words like "separate" and "embarrass." Now there are spelling checkers in computer software.

Once you had to diagram sentences to learn the rules of grammar

Now there are computer programs to polish your punctuation and syntax.

That's progress. Or is it? Computers and other labor-saving gizmos of the high-tech age are becoming ever more common and "friendlier" to use. But are they also doing their users - especially youngsters - an unfriendly turn by robbing them of basic intellectual, imaginative and emotional skills acquired by previous generations?

In the rush to become "computer literate," are children also becoming less literate in the traditional sense of the word?

Conventional wisdom has it that computers teach youngsters "to think" by exciting the students, providing them immediate feedback and the opportunity to learn at their own pace.

But a number of educational theorists are beginning to question some of the assumptions underlying the computerization of society, and in particular the computer's role in the Douglas Sloan, professor of history and education at Columbia University's Teachers College, questions the value of computers for elementary and preschool students.

"My major concern is that for young children the effect of the computer is going to be a stunting of Sloan said.

Some educators believe computers may be robbing children of basic intellectual, imaginative and emotional skills.

the kind of sensory and emotional imagery they need in order to develop imaginative thinking," Sloan said.

By generating lifeless, flat images on a two-dimensional screen, computers may hamper the young child's capacity to produce living, mobile, creative images of his own,

"Do you do the child a favor by early are not going to exercise their stressing narrow cognitive skills at earlier ages, or do you prepare a child by giving him the real esthetic

ing pictures and acting out dramas? 'Is (computer assisted instruction), ironically, going to mean those children who learn logical skills very experience of hearing stories, paint-adult imaginations in anything but a rote, virtuoso manner?

Sloan has edited a collection of essays critical of the computer in education, in the summer 1984 Teachers College Recordes, a scholarly education journal. In his introduction, he "Scrambling to lead the van of the computer-communications revolution in education, American educators have made no concerted effort to ask at what level, for what purposes, and in what ways the computer is educationally appropriate and inappropriate, in what ways and to whom we count on its being beneficial or harmful."

According to Arthur G. Zajonc of Amherst College, "The computer is like a fragmented projection of the human psyche. Each of its functions replaces one of our own." Writing in the same issue of Teachers College Recordes, Zajonc maintains: "Just as we have replaced the child's active imagination through television imagery and certain toys, so the computer has the potential to replace nearly all the mental functions of the child." Noting that memory is essential to performing the operation, Zajonc

"We may possess the ability to perform this operation, but be prevented from doing so by an inability to retain all the elements in memory. The development of this operational ability depends, therefore, indirectly on the strengthening of memory. Reliance on an external device - the computer - can easily weaken that

Other aspects of the computer its computing and logical abilities -can "replace and thereby undermine the development of corresponding faculties in the child," he

Not all educators agree computers threaten to degrade or narrowly channel intellectual development.

"There is research that illustrates that learning with interactive technolgies can be superior and in most cases is equivalent at least to tradi-tional methods," said Greg Benson. He is director of the Center for Learning Technologies.

"I see more a positive side of it," said Edith H. Luchins, professor of mathematics at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, N.Y.

"I'm sure that when the abacus was invented people worried that people would forget how to count," she said.

"What I think is happening right now is there isn't enough emphasis on proper use of computers. Individual students might be spending too much time on games or copying discs which they exchange with other students. Within the classroom itself, I don't see there's a danger. What we have to do is explore the non-drill side of it."

New York City rises next to a river full of raw sewage but its tap water is pristine, while New Orleans shuns clean water in nearby bayous in favor of the filthy Mississippi.

Those were among the results of a survey of the best and worst tap water in the United States, commissioned by Connoisseur and appearing in its July issue, which found some surprising candidates in both Urban areas that draw water from polluted rivers, lakes or groundwaincluding Miami. Philadelphia, Cincinnati, New Haven, Wilmington and San Diego - have water containing organic chemicals that conventional treatment never completely removes. Many organic chemicals, unlike heavy metals and minerals, have little taste. That's why bad water can taste good.

Marc Reisner, who spent the last five years researching a book on American drinking water, came up with this list of the country's best and worst urban water, based on water source, purity, hardness and quality of the distribution system.

The best water is to be found in New York City, Seattle, Portland, Ore., San Francisco and Boston. The worst water comes from Niagara Falls and Long Island in New York State, Miami, New Orleans, Texas, and San Diego, Calif.

Texas water tastes bad. In West Texas, it is mineral-laden and very hard. Dallas water is somewhat softer, but the city's reservoirs receive a lot of chemical runoff from farms.

A source in the New York State attorney general's office calls Niagara Falls "the most unthinkable urban-water contamination problem in the United States.

Professors trying to make labs accesible to blind

Engineering professor Barry Horowitz watches as psychology professor Emerson Foulke, who is blind, conducts an experiment using a computer programmed for weights measurement. The University of Louisville researchers have adapted some of the exercises a freshman chemistry student might encounter so that a blind student can enroll in the lab courses.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Freshman chemistry can challenge the best of science students. Imagine the frustration, then, for those who cannot see to hold a red-hot crucible, to tell if an element changes color or to read a chemical equa-

At the University of Louisville, a project for the National Science Foundation seeks to make laboratories accessible for

"Fun, frustrating and fascinating" is how Professor Barry Horowitz describes his year's work on the project.

Horowitz, who teaches electrical engineering in the Speed

Scientific School, is working with chemistry professors Gradus Shoemaker, Joseph Deck and K. Grant Taylor and psychology Professor Emerson Foulke, who is blind himself. This university has no blind students in its chemistry classes now, and not many blind people pursue science careers, Foulke said. "A lot of the blind students are majoring in humanities, communications and in the computer area,"

But the National Science Foundation hopes the project will make science studies more accessible to the blind. The university has made videotapes of the researchers' experiments so that other schools can draw upon the work and blind students can learn of advancements.

The chief difference between a lab limited to the sighted and those accessible to the blind is the use of computers.

The researchers fitted a simple home computer with a voice simulator that reads out information. The computer and simulator are connected to a scale and a thermometer.

To handle a weights experiment, for example, a blind student would weigh an empty beaker, the computer would read out the figure and the student would enter it into the computer. Next, the student would place granular chemicals into the beaker and enter that amount into the computer. The difference between the weights will yield the weight of the chem-

"What you're trying to teach is the logic of experience, and the computer does that fine," Foulke said

Still, measuring chemicals is no small task. Syringes have been adapted for blind users, but nothing existed to pick up and measure solids, Horowitz said. The problem in measuring with most scoops is that a blind person would have to touch

"Just as you can't put your finger in a (dangerous) liquid, you can't put your finger in solids," he said.

The solution came from a Louisville craftsman who created scoop with a sliding cover that permits a blind person to lift powdery or granular substance from a jar without dumping

Dispensing liquids is easier. The scientists prefer syringes with a dialing feature that clicks when a certain amount, say 10 microliters, is dispensed; that permits a student to keep track of how much liquid is used.

To help blind students pick the right chemicals, Foulke made Braille markers for the containers and designed a labeled rack. The chemicals are arranged in a specific order.

For experiments involving test tubes, blind students would use tubes anchored in rings of cork. A light beam that shines into the tube through a hole in the cork would indicate when liquid rises to that level and set off a buzzer.

A similar technique is used for experiments that produce a color change in a liquid. A light beam that shines through the fluid activates a tone when the liquid starts to change its hue.

The project has met some frustration. Horowitz said the scientists had so far failed to modify experiments that involve heating crucibles.

"If you put (protective) gloves on the blind person, you blind the hand. You lose a great deal of the tactile (feeling), Horowitz said. "We've not come across a suitable adaptation."

The professors have drawn on experiments done at the New Jersey Institute of Technology and at East Carolina University

"The principle of some of these adaptations is not unique with us," Horowitz said. "The thing that I think is unique with what we're doing is that we're collecting ideas, refining them to some degree and then taking a human approach.

'We're striving to enable the blind student to achieve the same level of accuracy that was demanded of a sighted student," Horowitz said.

Some school names Bland, Boring, Ugly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Boring. Bland. Big Ugly.

How would you like to have those school names on your diploma?

Some children do. The American School Board Journal recently put out a call for unusual school names. And its readers came through with a list sure to gladden the heart of anyone who thinks "Horace Mann" or "George Washington" or "P.S. 236" are truly boring and bland.

Big Ugly Elementary School is in Lincoln County, W.Va., surrounded by Big Ugly State Park, Big Ugly Creek and even Little Ugly Creek. Its partisans are quick to note that it is neither big (only 81 students) nor ugly.

The name was given to the creeks by turn-of-the-century railroad surveyors who found the area rugged and brushy, "making an 'ugly' job of clearing lines for the survey, according to Ellen Ficklen, an associate editor of the Journal.

Boring, Ore., boasts a Boring Grade School and a Boring Middle School, and the folks in Bland, Mo., send their children off to the Bland Elementary School and Bland High School. Merit, Texas, also has a Bland High School.

Portland, Ore., once had a Failing Elementary School, christened in the late 1800s to honor a board member, but the school failed in 1959.

You can find the Robert McGregor Elementary School in Toledo, Ohio, named after a famous trotter of the late 1800s known as the "Monarch of the Stretch." The horse was foaled on the farm where the school and its tomb now stand.

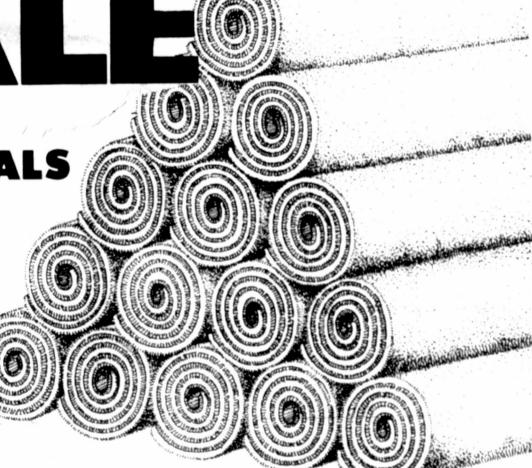

Ravenwood, Mo., has the Northeast Nodaway School, where narcolepsy is not encouraged, and Shortsville, N.Y., sends its pupils to the Red Jacket School District. Texas has a slew of towns with singular names — Dime Box, Muleshoe, Snook, Whiteface and Lazbuddie and schools with the same monikers.

Back in the early 1900s, Cocke County, Tenn., had a Pig Trot School, so called because the building lacked underpinnings and local farmers' pigs "trotted" under the school to wallow. A temporary school in the same county went by the name Opossum Trot School.

Dallas businessman Frank Prasifka has collected about 4 million tires, which he has hauled from area tire companies and which will eventually be recycled.

Old tires buried in graveyard until used again

DALLAS (AP) — The Firestones, bustion engine survives, the gravesandy loam, their graves unmarked by tombstones or epitaphs.

Canadian and German shipping companies, interested in melting the tires to reclaim their oil, have offered to buy the graveyard for "substantial sums." And although Prasifka could retire if he accepted the offers, the 55-year-old Dallas native isn't selling.

'I didn't sell because I don't believe anybody could carry on my tradition of disposing of tires," said Prasifka, who operated three smaller such graveyards since 1955 before digging the pit near Hutchins

"My sons might sell out when I'm dead and gone, but until then, it stays. It was a different challenge every day. People call me from all over the world wanting to use the tires for all kinds of things.

More than 300 tons of used tires are dumped in the graveyard every week, adding to the bulky mountains of rubber that fill the pit. Crews battle the mounds daily with bulldozers, burying thousands of the poorer quality tires, which will be unearthed later for reincarnation. Better quality tires, however, are treated with more respect. Once unloaded, they are separated from the 2,000-pound truck tires that rest along the yard's northern perimeter. Some of the tires are so large the treads are as wide as a man's arm, and a child easily could stand inside them. And as long as the internal com-

In past years, Prasifka has shipped thousands of tires to the Gulf Coast and to Saudi Arabia, where they are lashed to shrimp trawlers and oil rigs as bumpers. Others are sent to Detroit, where a company punches holes in the sidewalls and uses the rubber plugs to separate metal joints in vehicles' suspensions.

Smooth-soled aircraft tires are reconditioned and sold for $350 apiece to plantations in Mississippi, where they are used on sugarcane buggies and road graders. All totaled, he ships out about 25 tons of tires a week.

Prasifka is proud of the graveyard; he likes the Yankee ingenuity that goes into turning spent tire rubber into something useful. And just as important, he likes turning a quick buck where others think they can't.

"Yeah," he said, scanning the yard. "I'm gonna keep it. Who knows; 10 years from now, it might be worth twice as much

Sweeper whisks, blows streets clean

ICHARDSON, Texas (AP) - Arapaho Road. In the quiet morning darkness a large white street clean-ing truck is hugging curbs at 8 mph and Billy Barnes, a veteran sweeper" for nearly three years, is sitting at the controls.

His left forearm rests on the driver's side window frame, and when Barnes steers the $76,000 Tympco airsweeper truck with his right hand, a second steering wheel in front of the passenger seat turns as well. The truck, you see, is ambi-dextrous: driveable from the right

Barnes, 30, unconsciously scans his eyes up and down — ahead to the picturesque and brilliantly lit Arapaho Road, his sweeping assignment one recent night, and then down to the spinning circular brush dislodg-ing dirt and debris from the road surface itself.

Normally he will be listening to country music, which helps keep him alert. But tonight he is explaining a few of the intricacies of street sweeping to an interested rider. There are tricks that make the job easier, he says. Like turning on a hydrant to flush a mud-congested

Barnes is one of a crew of four sweeper drivers, newly organized under the Richardson Parks and Recreation Department this past fiscal year. Three of the six sweeper trucks patrol every night, tidying up Richardson's main thoroughfares and commercial areas. One sweeper runs on spot calls during the day. (Aside from city-caused spills, the gutters of residential streets, officials say, are left to the responsibility of homeowners.)

Arapaho Road, which spans Richardson's city limits from Coit to Jupiter, presents one of the common problems street sweepers face in the

Billy Barnes, a three-year street-sweeper veteran, is one of four sweeper drivers who rotate on the midnight to 8 a.m. shift.

Part of his continual frustration is Each night, Barnes said, a sweeper having a freshly cleaned street messed up again — sometimes by the time he has returned from his coffee break.

According to law, gravel trucks should have tarpaulins covering their loads but Barnes said many oblivious gravel and cement trucks shields struck by fragments are often the result.

"I think they (the gravel truck "It makes you so damn mad — drivers) ought to be fined," he said. "If it's not brought to their attention they'll do it as long as they can get away with it. Barnes said sweepers will take a truck's license plate number if they see them spilling loads. One of the reasons they are so conscious of the nuisance: When, for instance, concrete hardens on the street, sweepers will have to descend from their trucks and break it away using hand

Late at night, when city traffic drops off considerably, is the optimum street cleaning time, Barnes said. He will steer the street cleaning truck down one median curb and back the other side before cleaning the property-side gutters two lanes away. On this eight-hour shift he will clean only one very long street. There are still traffic hazards even though the hour is late, he explains. Once two young girls on bicycles rode directly in front of his huge white truck despite its flashing red and white warning signals and yel-low beacon. Or cars ride in his lane until they practically crash into the truck's rear storage compartment which hold six yards of dirt.

"People," he said, "don't always pay attention."

Problems will arise during the night, such as the clogging of one of the hard rubber chutes that collect the road debris blown into them by air. Descending from the sweeper's cab, Barnes gets a garden hoe from the rear and said: "this thing doesn't like to pick up mud."

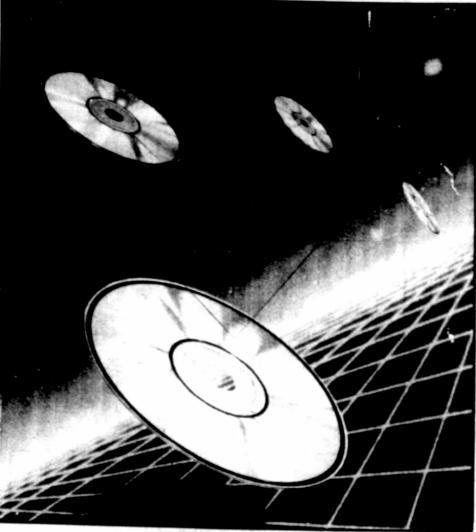

Ramming the hoe into the chute, Barnes breaks away muck and discovers what has been sucked into the truck's blower, under a hard rubber curtain, is a mud-encrusted Texas license plate, 471-HAP.

He smiles. His truck has found billfolds, which he has turned in. Once the machine sucked in a necklace that he eventually gave to his

Usually he will operate the truck using water sprayers that wet down the road, preventing boiling clouds of dust generated by the spinning steel brushes canted at an angle to the road surface. If the water tank runs dry it is a simple matter for the sweeper, which is a city vehicle, to pull up to the nearest hydrant and take a 170-gallon drink.

Sweeping the streets of Richardson is a job Barnes likes to get right. He is definitely neat, he admits.

Soviet pilot believed killed in Baltic crash

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) - A Soviet air force pilot was believed killed when his SU-15 jet fighter crashed in the Baltic Sea after pursuing a Swedish fighter plane monitoring a Warsaw Pact naval exercise, the Defense Staff reported today.

The incident occurred Sunday when a Swedish Air Force fighter approached a Warsaw Pact naval exercise in international waters southeast of the island of Gotland, Defense staff press officer Jan Tuninger said.
Tuninger told The Associated Press both the Swedish and the Soviet pilots were following routine procedures and a spokesman for Sweden's Foreign Ministry said that no diplomatic repercussions were expected.

"It was apparently an accident. It is not a diplomatic issue," said Jan Eliasson, head of the Foreign Min-istry's political department. He said there had been no contacts between Sweden and the Soviet Union about

When the Swedish plane neared the naval exercise, two SU-15 fighters apparently were dispatched to identify the plane, as is common under international military routine, Tuninger said.

Bomb caused Greenpeace ship's sinking

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP)— Police said today a bomb caused the double explosion that sank a ship of the environmental group Green-peace, and Prime Minister David Lange called the attack "a major criminal act with...terrorist over-

Detective Superintendent Allan Galbraith said navy divers found a 6-foot-by-8-foot hole in the hull of the sunken Rainbow Warrior, used by the 14-year-old Greenpeace group in its protests against nuclear testing and dumping and the killing of whales, seals and dolphins.

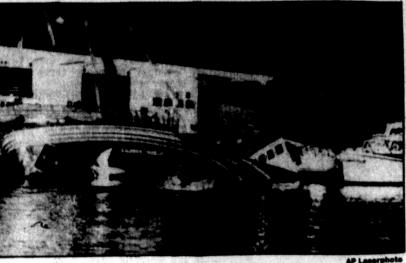

"An examination of the hull has satisfied us that we are dealing with a case of sabotage and that an explo-

One crew member, Portuguese photographer Fernando Pereira, was killed, and Galbraith said investigators were treating his death as a homicide. Twelve other people, including two Americans, were on board during the explosions Wedneay night but escaped unhurt. Lange, whose Labor Party has championed anti-nuclear causes, said the confirmation of sabotage meant "we have the implication of political or terrorist overtones and we have...an urgent need to investi-Tuninger said the cause of the gate it." "If you look at...skilled, ruthless, Lange acknowledged earlier today that he did not have "the slightest evidence of any association' between terrorist activities elsewhere and the sinking of the ship.

Galbraith declined to say what ype of bomb was used to sink the 60-foot Rainbow Warrior, which was berthed in Auckland harbor when the explosions occurred. The vessel's skipper, Peter Willcox of New York, said it sank within

"There were some loud bangs, the boat shook and I only had time to walk off." he said.

The other American on board, radio operator Lloyd Anderson, also was unhurt. His home town was not immediately available.

Greenpeace, based in Lewes, England, has offices in more than a dozen countries. It has six ships still in operation.

The Rainbow Warrior's sinking forced Greenpeace to cancel a planned four-month protest voyage at Mururoa Atoll, French Polynesis in the Pacific Ocean about midway between Australia and Chile.

The 30-year-old converted Scottish trawler was to have led a protest flotilla to the atoll. A decade-long French nuclear testing program there has been criticized by New Zealand and other Pacific nations that want the region declared that want the region declared nuclear-free.

"There's no way they could go without the Rainbow. This has certainly saved the French a lot of trouble," said crewman Jim Keogh. Lange said his government would consider suggestions from the public that the government send a military vessel to the French test site in place of Rainbow Warrior. He did not

Meanwhile, the French Embassy in Wellington sent a message of sympathy to Greenpeace today and said it had not worried about the planned protest.

Sobbing survivors gathered at Marsden Wharf to gaze at the gutted ship, joined by a steady stream of Auckland residents offering help.

"Assuming it was deliberate we have no idea who could have done it," said crewman Steve Sawyer, who left the ship just before the blasts. "We've never had anything on this scale before. I can't think of a direction to point the finger."

Greenpeace, founded in 1971 by Canadian environmentalists, is seeking donations to raise $100,000 to replace the ship and help the family of the dead crewman.

Schultz: U.S. ready to work with Hanoi to end MIA issue

New York Times News Service

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia -Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Wednesday that the Reagan administration was ready to work "promptly and decisively" with Vietnam to resolve the issue of missing

In his first public response to a request for "high level" talks on the issue passed from Hanoi to Washington last week by Foreign Minister Mochtar Kusumaatmadja of Indonesia, Shultz said at a news conference at the U.S. Embassy here Wednesday:

"I think the next step for us is — as we will be doing — to organize the kind of group we think would be best able to respond and to let them know in Hanoi that we'd like to start to work on this problem. We want to work at it as promptly and decisively as possible.

Shultz's comments followed a decision by Vietnam last week to turn over the remains of 26 Americans thought to have died in Indochina. This was the largest repatriation of remains of MIA's - missing in action - announced since 1975, when South Vietnam fell to the armies of the North, two years after the withdrawal of American forces.

listed as missing in Indochina, over half of them in Vietnam.

In his remarks Wednesday, Shultz was also critical of Congress for what he called its "changeability" as he expressed the administration's reservations about congressional efforts to provide non-Communist Cambodia with $5 million that could be used for military aid. The measure was approved by the House.

"I think we're going to have greater success in our program if we keep it the way it is now," he said, referring to the administration's limiting of aid to mostly humanitarian expenditures.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Sanctions 'hurt Lebanon'

WASHINGTON (AP) - Imposing sanctions against the Beirut airport because of the recent hijacking will strengthen terrorists and weaken U.S. friends in the area, the Lebanese ambassador to the United States said today.

"The government of the United States is really penalizing the Leba-nese people and the Lebanese government, who were supporting the U.S. efforts, who were for freeing the hostages, only for the sake of a few terrorists," Ambassador Abdallah Bouhabib said on the NBC "Today" show.

What the United States is doing is really strengthening the terrorists, weakening other Lebanese friends of the United States, weakening U.S. friends in the region and damaging U.S. interests in the region," Bouhabib said. "And these sanctions are not going to stop or eliminate terrorism in Lebanon.

Lebanon's efforts to increase security at Beirut International Airport are a "hopeful sign" but stiffer steps must be taken, a State Department spokesman said Wednesday.

Sri Lanka foils plot

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) - The overnment said today a plot by Tamil separatists to assassinate Pres-dent Junius Jayewardene was folied when police discovered more than 260 pounds of explosives wired to a timing device in a parked van.

A statement by Information Minister Anandatissa de Alwis said the alleged conspirators "told police that the target was to be the Presidential Secretariat, where in the normal course the president would have been driving to his office at the time set for the explosion.

The government said a Tamil separatist group called the Eelam Revolutionary Organization of Students was responsible.

The statement said that at about 6:45 a.m. today, a policeman detected a vehicle parked by a Catholic Church, St. Lucia's Cathedral, at Kotahena, a densely populated neighborhood in north Colombo, with three young men inside behaving suspiciously.

Senate to vote on sanctions

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate is ready to join the House in voting anti-apartheid economic sanctions against South Africa despite an opponent's warning that the "fel-lows over there in the Kremlin" will be delighted.

"The relevent question is whether we're going to continue this folly of undermining allies of the United States because we don't like this or don't like that about the way they do something," Sen. Jesse Helms, R.N.C., said Wednesday. Heims made the comment after the Republican-controlled Senate voted 86-8 to stop his filibuster against the proposed sanctions against the South African government.

Business group says 'economy definitely has problems'

NEW YORK (AP) — An industrial slump continued in June, with production, manufacturer's inventories and prices falling, a business group said Sunday in a report that warned "the economy definitely has prob-

The National Association of Purchasing Management said its composite index declined to 46.7 percent in June from 47.3 percent in each of the previous two months and was at its lowest level since December 1982, when the economy was just beginning to recover from a severe recesssion. The seasonally adjusted index has been below 50 percent since Feb-

A reading below 50 percent generally indicates the economy is in a declining phase while a reading above 50 percent is a signal of expansion, according to the group, which represents executives who purchase raw materials and other supplies for the nation's industry.

"The economy definitely has problems based on the information we are receiving from our members," said Robert J. Bretz, director of purchasing for Pitney Bowes Inc. and chairman of the purchasing agents' business survey committee. "The continuing decline of the Purchasing Managers Index and the weakness exhibited in production, inventories, prices and vendor deliveries are of serious concern.' The group's monthly reports are among the earliest indicators each month of the health of the manufacturing economy.

The report for June said production fell to its lowest level since December 1984, reflecting a sharp decline in new orders the previous "Production levels are now at a point where they are no longer growing," the report said. The speed at which suppliers delivered orders also improved in June, an indication that demand was not heavy enough to cause backlogs. Thirteen percent of the managers surveyed said deliveries from vendors were faster in June, nearly three times those reporting slower

Only 9 percent of the managers surveyed in June reported inven-tories were higher than in May, while 29 percent said inventories fell. Typically, companies reduce inventories when they anticipate of future demand, the report said.

The group said none of the 250 companies surveyed reported items that were in short supply, another sign of decreasing demand.

Meanwhile, the number of managers reporting lower prices in June was 2½ times that of those reporting higher prices, the seventh straight month in which more purchasers said prices were lower than higher.

Brother, sister find unity in political realm

By JOAN MOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) - Rep. Barney Frank and Ann Lewis are united by more than their desire to revive liberal political traditions.

The two host joint dinner parties, share a similiar sense of humor and talk so fast that outsiders have to ask them to slow down.

And yes — they're also brother and sister. As president of the Americans for Democratic Action, Frank, D-Mass., has become one of the liberals' top spokesmen on issues ranging from defense to economic development.

He believes the Democratic Party must alter its big-spender image by stressing high-technology economic development and cuts in defense.

At the same time, Frank says, the liberals must remain committed to the poor, the elderly and the dispos-

If liberals go "issue-by-issue, we are generally on the most popular side," Frank maintains. He was buoyed by the House of Representatives' recent decision to cap the number of MX missiles and freeze defense spending at last year's

'What we have to do is refocus," Frank said.

Added Lewis: "We've been invisible...We've got to articulate our posi-

AS THE ADA's national director. Lewis deals with the nuts and bolts of the 85,000-member organization. One of her priorities is attracting younger, college age members.

At a recent ADA issues conference, Frank joked that conservatives who extol the virtues of the family would not be able to criticize the lib eral ADA on that front.

But Frank and Lewis are not all there is to this all-in-the-family

Their 35-year-old brother, David press secretary for one of Frank's good friends, Rep. Steven Solarz, D-N.Y., and their sister, Doris Frank Breay, was treasurer of Frank's congressional campaign last year.

Even their 72-year-old mother, Elsie, gets in the act as president of the Massachusetts Association of Older Americans.

Although the family has lived in the Boston area, the Franks got their start in Bayonne, N.J., where their father, Samuel, ran a truck termi-

He was a businessman with a lib eral conscience, Mrs. Frank said. "His idea of a good time was to buy a ticket to a fund-raiser," she said. The Franks were the kind of family where "everyone read a different newspaper every day," according to Breay, who said her sister grew up thinking "politics are the most fun you could have."

Lewis, the oldest at 47, remembers spending time with her brother Barney, now 45, as they were growing up. They didn't have identical upbringings, though, because "boys and girls did sufficiently different things in those days," she said.

MRS. FRANK, however, insisted on elocution lessons for her kids, and she credits that training with her children's ability to think on their feet in front of a crowd. Breay, who is 42, joked that her older brother and sister always liked to talk, and "I couldn't get a word in edgewise.

The Frank children got along fine as children, said Breay, who recalled Lewis baby sitting for her siblings. "She was bossy — as oldest children always are."

"There was rivalry, but it was good-natured," recalled Lewis. Added Barney Frank: "We've had occasional fights, nothing serious." Lewis was the first to leave home, heading to Radcliffe College in Cambridge, Mass. Barney Frank followed her two years later, going to Har-

Right after graduation, Lewis married and moved away. She had three daughters — now all in their 20s. After her divorce in 1989, she moved to Boston where her brother was chief of staff to Mayor Kevin

Lewis moved to the nation's capi-tal in the mid-1970s to work on a campaign, and later ended up as a staffer in Maryland Democratic Rep.

Barbara Mikulski's office.
She served as political director of the Democratic National Committee before moving to the ADA.

BARNEY Frank, meanwhile, served as a Massachusetts state legislator for eight years prior to his election to Congress in 1980.

He succeeded the Rev. Robert Drinan, a Roman Catholic priest who was forced to resign because of a papal decree. He also followed Drinan as the ADA president.

Old hand mixes games with celebrity guests

By JERRY BUCK

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Merrill Heatter is an old hand at devising shows that skillfully combine games with celebrity guest stars.

His latest creation is ABC's "All Star Blitz," which blends the same elements as "Hollywood Squares" and even has the same host, Peter Marshall. The problem is it's not getting the same kind of audience that made 'Hollywood Squares" a favorite for 15 years.

Its morning competition on CBS is the second half of the hour-long "The Price Is Right," the most popular daytime game show. Before "All Star Blitz" was moved back half an hour recently, its NBC competition was the high-rated "Wheel of Fortune." Now it's up against NBC's Scrabble.

In a recent rating week "All Star Blitz," the only game show on ABC, was 22nd out of 25 daytime shows. 'We're scheduled in the 'Bermuda

Triangle," said Heatter. "Our show isn't getting a sampling. We're still up against 'The Price Is Right.' We have a problem.

Heatter started in public affairs at CBS in the early 1950s, where he was an associate producer of "You Are There." But since then he has devised more than 20 game shows. His partner for many years was Bob Quigley.

"I'd gotten into the business because my uncle was a famous newscaster, Gabriel Heatter," he said. Heatter broadcast for many years on Mutual Radio.

One of his shows was CBS' "Celebrity Game," with Carl Reiner as the host. That one dealt with the opinions of such celebrities as Hedda

Hopper, Basil Rathbone, Robert Mitchum, George Sanders and Ronald Reagan

"I was looking for the impact of multiple stars," Heatter said. "I spent most of my weekends analyzing ways I could use nine or 10 celebrities in a familiar configuration without having to teach the audience a new game.

"I ended up with the tick-tack-toe concept. I drew up a game layout and pasted in photos of celebrities. It looked as dramatic as hell." CBS and NBC turned down the new show, called "Hollywood Squares."

Finally I wound up having breakfast at the Polo Lounge with Fred Silverman when he was head of day time programming at CBS," he said.

"I sketched out the concept on a paper napkin and he said let's go back to CBS and work it out."

Will daytime drama viewers accept humor of 'soapcoms'?

By JAY SHARBUTT Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD - Although the five-day forecast for soap operas still calls for furtive affairs followed by pregnant pauses, it is said that a fas-ter pace, an occasional murder, disco music and location shooting have enlivened the plots in recent

Now another ingredient is afoot: humor. The setting is what is called a "soapcom," a cross between a soap opera and a situation comedy. Such may seem heresy for a network, or at least as improbable as a tuba solo during a Jane Fonda workout.

But two soapcoms are being created for ABC; "Fitzgerald and Fennelli" and "Love on Trial." The former is by soap-and-comedy vet-eran Ann Marcus, the latter by Lin Bolen, NBC's daytime programs chief for 41/2 years and now an independent producer

The term soapcom and these works-in-progress were unveiled last month to ABC affiliates gathered in New York by Jacqueline Smith, the network's head of daytime programs. She described a soapcom as perfect for the morning," and

'It doesn't have a laugh track, but it does have sitcom humor, combined with the continuing stories of love and jeopardy associated with

She later declined to be interviewed about these matters, pending developments, particularly by Ms. Marcus and Ms. Bolen.

though, the Los Angeles-based deve-lopers recently said their respective shows would be daily half-hour efforts. The programs, they said, probably would air in late morning, in game show country, instead of in the afternoons wherein the ladies and gentlemen of most soap operas now get their exercise. All this, of course, depends on when and if ABC's proposed soapcoms — still in the planning-andmulling stages — go into production and get slots on ABC's daytime schedule

(No similar enterprises were announced to executives of NBC and CBS affiliates during their conventions last month.)

Neither Ms. Marcus nor Ms. Bolen finds it odd that television's traditional vale of tears soon may be invaded by a chuckle or two, "although 20 years ago I don't think the (predominantly female) audience would have watched," concedes Ms. Bolen, who left NBC in 1975.

Her theory is that while women still account for perhaps 90 percent of the daytime soap-opera audience, "they're much more educated and sophisticated" now and thus more willing to accept a different approach to an ancient form.

The traditional soap-opera form itself is ripe for change, says Ms. Marcus, who co-created the noted, syndicated soap-opera spoof, "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," and whose writing credits include Search for Tomorrow," "Days of Our Lives" and "Love of Life."

The producer-writer, also a veteran of prime-time situation comedy work in the '60s, believes that "it's In separate phone interviews, kind of a natural thing that comedy should come to daytime. Everyone's getting sick of heaving and grunt-

The torrid boudoir scenes of unshirted passion that have become a cliche of contemporary daytime drama have been adopted as an art form by the various nighttime soap operas now at large, she notes.

'I think it's time there were changes to shake people up, to have fun, and be a little stimulating to the head," Ms. Marcus says.

At the ABC affiliates gathering, 'Fitzgerald and Fennelli" was bouncily described in a recorded announcement; the announcer may yet hear from Gloria Steinem: "two girls on the rise and on the loose in New York."

Ms. Marcus is content to describe it as the stories of two young professional women who, because of an unscrupulous "holistic dentist," must share a Greenwich Village apartment (each thought she was subletting his place for her own). Ms. Fitzgerald, she says, is a Boston blue blood, a Harvard Law School grad working as a public defender. Ms. Fennelli, from Trenton, N.J., and of blue-collar stock, toils as a production assistant at the kind of talk show only Phil Donahue could love; or do.

social inquiry offers possibilities galore for "marvelous satire," Ms. Marcus says. But her soapcom, she adds, would not be parody. It would be a daily diet of "strong stories" with humor, stories that are "mainly about the lives, loves and experiences" of the show's leading ladies

Actress learns not to worry after 29 years in Hollywood

By BOB THOMAS

LOS ANGELES (AP) - When Celeste Holm made her "Falcon Crest" debut with the season finale, she naturally enough asked what was in store for her character when she returns for five new episodes in

"We don't know," said the pro-ducers of the hit CBS serial. "We haven't written it yet." Did Miss Holm worry? Not a bit. Since 1946 she has been contributing her skills to Hollywood with a minimum of fuss and a maximum of pre-fessionalism. Her visits here have often been rewarding, including the supporting actress Academy Award for "Gentleman's Agreement" in 1947 and nominations for "Come to the Stable" in 1949 and "All about

Her latest assignment casts her as Anna Rossini, the Italian mother of Cassandra Wilder (Anne Archer) who has dedicated her life to ruining the domineering vineyard matriarch Angela Channing (Jane come from the northern part of work sniping.

She is no stranger to television. Back in 1954 she starred in "Honestly Celeste," a comedy that lasted less than three months even though it was written by the estimable Larry Gelbart of later "M*A*S*H"

A White House comedy called 'Nancy" perished after a few episodes in 1970 from "a lack of similitude." She also bears scars of last season's "Jesse," the Lindsay Wagner series about a police psy-

"It's fun to be in a series that works," she said of the "Falcon Crest" assignment.

Celeste Holm is a brainy Easterner who never quite fit into the local pattern. After a brilliant career on Broadway, especially as the original Ado Annie in "Oklahoma!" and the title role in "Bloomer Girl," she began work for 20th Century-Fox in

Her first films were unpromising "Three Little Girls in Blue" and "Carnival in Costa Rica." Then came

"I never really felt comfortable out here," Miss Holm recalled. "My agents used to take me to parties. Social life was much more organized in those days. People stared at me, and I could read in their eyes what they were saying: 'I wonder how much money I could make out of her. I became very defensive.'

Her career at Fox was progressing well until 1950 when the studio started making cutbacks during a box-office slump due to television. When her contract called for a raise, studio boss Darryl Zanuck asked her to stay on at the same salary

"When I declined, Zanuck said he would call all the other studios and tell them not to hire me," the actress said. "I couldn't get a job in films for two years. At the moment it seemed like a dumb decision on my part, but I was young and impatient.

Strangely, Zanuck allowed her to be cast in Joseph Mankiewicz's land mark "All about Eve."

Miss Holm and her fourth husband, actor Wesley Addy, divide their time between Manhattan and her family's fifth-generation farm in New Jersey. She heads New Jersey's film and TV commission

Red Army helps TV crew burn down Moscow

By JERRY BUCK

AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - When a television production crew filmed the first U.S. produced dramatic show in the Soviet Union, they burned down Moscow. And the Red television production crew filmed the first U.S. produced dramatic could sustain a production of this size. They didn't have script stream Army helped them do it.

It was all for "Peter the Great," an NBC miniseries based on the life of the 17th century ruler who made Russia a world power. Maximilian Schell stars in the title role. NBC may show it as early as next February, probably at nine or 10 hours. In all, the cast and crew from NBC Productions spent 33 weeks filming "I believe it will be as unique as 'Shogun,' " said John Agoglia, executive vice president of NBC Productions. "Picture this: we're in a birch forest at 7 or 8 in the morning.

on foot. They're all in costumes of size. They didn't have script approval, although they did read the script. They made some comment about the historical accuracy.

Agoglia said the logistics of the production "were incredible."

"We brought 240 people into Russia, not all of them Americans," he said. "We even brought a catering truck from Los Angeles. We had to have a steady supply of hot food and soups available because of the extreme cold, and there was no such thing in Russia. I think the truck drew more attention than anything

The production was a mix of nationalities: American, British, German, Italian and Russian. Several major roles were played by Russian actors. The first assistant director, and costume designer were Russian. "Moscow" of 200 years ago was built of timbers by the Red Army at Suzdal, a town north of the real stream and built bridges and wooden buildings for old Moscow.

The cooperation was incredible, Agoglia said. "We found out one thing they needed was chainsaws, so we brought them in and gave them to the crew. A few scenes that could not be done in the Soviet Union, such as Peter learning to sail, were filmed in Austria.

He said the finished film will be offered to the Soviets after it is edited. "Will they accept it?" he said. "I don't know. They've already produced four movies on Peter the

The series is based on the book by Robert K. Massie.

Agoglia said he didn't think NBC would have tackled the project with-production designer, art director, out the cooperation of the Russians. The production's principal contact with the Russians was through Sovinfilm.

They set us up in Gorky Studios in Moscow and coordinated the filming in Leningrad and Suzdal." Agoglia said. "Some of the things we photographed in Leningrad were beyond belief. There was a former merchant's house that had a small opera house built inside it."

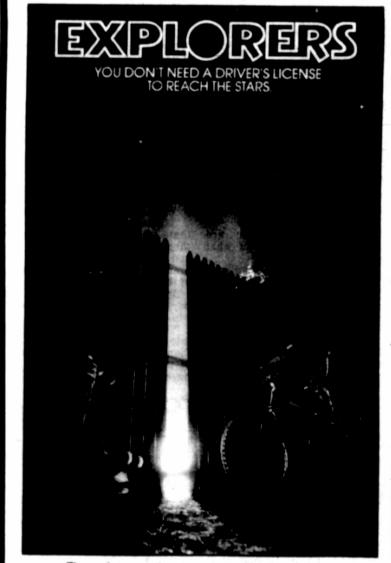

Agoglia said that although the cooperation was splendid, he had to assume the Americans were closely watched. "But it didn't make us uncomfortable because we weren't doing anything unusual," he said. We ran into a lot of regulations, but they weren't just for us. Everyone had to comply with them."

He said they once sent a Russian crew member to Moscow to buy an extension cord. He came back with a coffee grinder. "He said they had no extension cords that day but they had coffee grinders," Agoglia said. "So he bought one.

Playboy wins race to get Madonna issue on sale

CHICAGO (AP) — Playboy claimed victory over Penthouse in the rush to get nude photos of rock star Malonna onto newsstands, but dis-tributors and publishing executives said both magazines were assured of the real prize: a sellout.

Penthouse announced, meanwhile, that its September edition with similar photographs — would be available in some markets today.

Both magazines will probably sell out, said Paul Davidson, vice presi-dent and general manager for Charles Levy Circulating Co., which distributes Playboy and Penthouse to 2,600 Chicago-area outlets. "We're trying to get as many copies as we can," Davidson said. Madonna has declined to comment on the photos or on the race by the men's magazines to get them into print. Liz Rosenberg, publicist for the singer's record label, Sire, said Monday, "Madonna has acknowledged in past interviews that she did pose nude for art classes" when she was a model.

"Her feeling is she's never done anything she's ashamed of."

The 26-year-old singer, whose hits include "Like a Virgin" and "Material Girl," is one of the hottest acts in pop music after a recent rise to stardom. When the photos were taken she was working as a dancer and model in New York City.

Youths learn more than comedy at camp

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (AP) -Anne Cassidy didn't laugh when her 9-year-old son came home from Comedy Camp and started walking into

"He'd go around bumping into things, and I couldn't tell if it was real or imaginary," she said.

It was imaginary. Jacob, his 10year-old brother, Ben, and 15 other students were learning such slapstick antics at the Oddfellows Playhouse Comedy Camp, a three-week venture taught by professional comedians and street performers. At Comedy Camp, usual summer activities such as arts and crafts or swimming are replaced by juggling, miming, tumbling and acrobats.

Walking on stilts, stage fighting and costumes come later.

Classes take place in "the big top, a musty basement at a local church, where costumes consist of T-shirts, shorts and bare feet.

The camp, which culminates in two-day performance on July 26 and 27, is designed primarily for summertime fun, but the instructors also hope their charges, ages 7 to 16, will carry something more into their adult lives.

"Self confidence, that's it," said Jean-Jacques Plante, a Comedy Camp instructor from Montreal. "Even if these kids are going to be doctors or lawyers, they carry this with them. All these things make you feel better about yourself.

Young kids, unfortunately, are bombarded by stereotypes of what everybody should be like.

Dic Wheeler, a Middletown resident and member of Oddfellows, invited Plante and Corinne Eckenstein of Switzerland to join him in teaching the camp this summer. The three met at the Del Arte School of Mime and Comedy in California.

This year is the second the camp is being offered. Held weekdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., it attracts mostly children from central Connecticut, although some parents are willing to drive their children from other parts of the state each day. 'I want to be an actress some day," said 15-year-old Debbie Dion. She and a schoolmate, 15-year-old Tracey Raines, come to Middletown each morning with Debbie's commuting brother. They arrive two hours early and stay two hours late, but both say it's worth it.

"This opens up a lot of things," Debbie said. "Now that I have some experience. I can try to call cable (television) and audition for commercials.

While the children benefit from the course, the instructors admit they get just as much valuable experience, themselves.

"It is quite a challenge teaching little kids," Ms. Eckenstein said. "There's a sensitivity you have to create in yourself to work with kids. You have to be inside of them, have that personal connection to them so that they trust you.

"Some kids block certain things out and you have to awaken them to it," she said. "Some are so fragile with these things we do because of limited self exposure.

Plante acknowledged that the three-week course won't turn the children into professional comedians - or even make them completely comfortable with themselves. 'It's just about impossible to teach them to juggle seven balls behind their back in one week, but if they can learn to juggle one ball with presence, they become more aware of their body and themselves.'

Such self-possession, Plante said, pays off later in situations such as addressing a crowd.

"It doesn't matter if the kids go into the theater or not after this," Plante said. "It's what they get out of it personally, and whether they
