WELCOME NEW STUDENTS!

VOLUME 71, ISSUE 148

Application rate increases, admission falls

Ginger Westbrook
THEUNIVERSITYDAILY

As of this month, more students applied to Texas Tech for the fall semester than in years past, yet the number of students actually accepted has declined.

"There have been more applicants this year and fewer students admitted at this point and time," said Gene Medley, director of Tech's Office of Admissions and Records.

These numbers come from reports distributed every two weeks by Dale Grusing, director of undergraduate admissions.

According to the reports, 11,489 students have applied to Tech for the fall semester, and 7,565 have been admitted.

"The lower number of admittants is due to the fact that we increased entrance requirements, which threw more students into the review category, and haven't wanted to follow up with the process," Tech Provost John Burns said.

The follow-up process is for students whose SAT or ACT scores and/or class rank are not high enough, so they must give additional information concerning involvement in school and outside activities, Burns said.

Those accepted do not include students who were admitted on the provisional program, which requires prospective students to pass six hours of assigned college courses to be accepted in the fall semester. The number of provisional students has increased from 939 in 1996 to 1,382 in 1997, Tech administrators report.

However, 282 provisional students applied to Tech's summer program, and only 80 actually enrolled, Medley said. Usually, about one-half of the provisional students that apply come to Tech.

The reasons for the shift in numbers are surprisingly unknown.

Business professionals pick Phelps as one of state's rising stars

A Texas Tech employee will be recognized in late June for her efforts in and out of the workplace.

DaNay Phelps, assistant director of the University Transition Advisement Center, was chosen as a "1997 Texas Woman to Watch" by the Texas Federation of Business and Professional Women. She will receive the award at a reception June 27 in San Antonio.

The award is given to seven women in Texas who excel in their field.

Phelps graduated from Texas Tech in 1989 as a psychology major, and now heads a team of advisers who help incoming freshmen with their classes and any other questions they might have about college.

Don Garnett, director of University Transitions Advisement Center, nominated Phelps for the award.

"I nominated her because she is an outstanding person whom I think has a lot of potential," Garnett said.

"She is a remarkable person with a lot of intelligence and enthusiasm."

To be nominated for the award, individuals must excel in several different areas.

Contestants must show quality performance beyond normal expectations.

Award recipients also must show community involvement.

Phelps was not aware she had been nominated for the award until she received a letter in the mail telling her she was one of the seven recipients chosen.

Phelps said the award pushes her to work hard as a college adviser.

"It was wonderful," Phelps said. "A very pleasant surprise."

SPOTLIGHT on Diversity

THEUNIVERSITYDAILY

Black people turning against each other instead of helping each other as their ancestors did in the 1960s is a main concern for the black community as Lubbock's 17th Annual Juneteenth celebration begins.

"Our Key to the 21st Century" was the theme of a Juneteenth discussion Thursday at the Mae Simmons Community Center.

June 19, 1865, was the day L.T. Granger reached Galveston with the news that President Abraham Lincoln had signed the Emancipation Proclamation, freeing all slaves. Although the proclamation was signed June 19, 1963, the information took two years to reach Texas.

Discussion leader Harold M. Chatman said young black people can do many different things to help unification in the future.

"Blacks in the '60s had many different fractions — Martin Luther King, Malcom X, Muslims and the Black Panthers," Chatman said.

"They did not turn on each other. They had a common calling for the betterment of the black person."

IN BRIEF

WORLDNEWS

MOSCOW (AP) — A flurry of newspaper ads promoting safe sex marked the launch Thursday of Russia's first campaign to stop the spread of AIDS, which is approaching epidemic proportions here.

With its health care system in rapid decline, Russia can't afford the expensive drugs used to treat patients with AIDS and the HIV virus that causes it. Therefore, government officials say, prevention must be the country's main line of defense.

NATIONALNEWS

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Republicans move to abolish federal financing for the arts, Hillary Rodham Clinton criticized the GOP proposal as "totally inadequate, if not embarrassing" and harmful to private support.

Tuesday, a House Appropriations subcommittee voted along party lines to slash the allocation to the National Endowment for the Arts to $10 million, an $88.5 million cut from last year.

STATENEWS

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) — A man has pleaded innocent to last week's robbery of the American Bank of Texas in Denison.

John Edward Donohue Jr. of Denison was arraigned Wednesday before federal magistrate Robert Faulkner in the federal courtroom annex in Sherman. He entered innocent pleas to two counts of bank robbery, one count of bank fraud and one count of bank theft.

Donohue was arrested Saturday in Dallas by federal agents.

Clinton's announcement coincides with his Saturday speech in San Diego, during which he addressed methods of improving race relations in America.

Top public health officials criticized the plan as not having enough teeth. The plan would not require companies to pay any punitive damages for past actions.

FAIL • An overwhelming thumbs down to Republicans for proposing to all but abolish funding for the Nation Endowment for the Arts. Church more than empty messages

To the Editor:

Many of us were told by our parents to check into a church when we got to Lubbock. Why? There's something significant about the message. But I don't clue into the message when I have to sing hymns I don't understand and dress up to listen to answers to questions I'm not asking.

Fortunately, Jeff Brown, a senior agricultural education major, and the rest of his team of college kids have figured out a way to communicate the answers to questions college students ask. Speaking from experience, they apply principles to practical stuff like college life, dating, redefined parental relationships, money (or the lack thereof) and time management, just to name a few.

This week they will throw a party to get the summer started off right. Come join them Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the UC Matador Room for free food and live music from Flywater Washington, and cool video tricks that would rival the David Letterman Show. I've seen what the guy can do. It will be worth your time.

Animals deserve responsible owners

To the Editor:

I am writing to commend Carrie Kilman on the recent article about responsible pet ownership (6/10/97). Unfortunately, college students are some of the worst offenders when it comes to irresponsible pet ownership.

Please do not be fooled by the idea that it is okay to let your animals breed because you can find homes for all of their offspring. There are two problems with this notion. First, the fact that you can find a home for a baby does not guarantee that the home will be permanent. The sad truth is that in too many instances something happens (allergies, inability to take the time to train the animal, a move or a multitude of other things) that results in the animal being homeless, or at best, taken to the pound. Second, there is no guarantee that the offspring will be neutered — in fact, based on my experience, I would say the likelihood is that they will not be. If you really love your pet, the kindest thing you can do is spay or neuter it. If you can't afford to provide proper veterinary care for your animal, then you cannot afford to have the animal. If you already have a pet and think you cannot afford spaying or neutering, call Lubbock Animal Services and ask about an organization called A.S.A.P. They may be able to help you offset the cost.

When you are considering getting a dog or cat please remember that this is a commitment for the life of the animal. If you are going to move, and you have a pet, do not even look at houses or apartments that do not allow pets. If you get a cat and find out that you or someone in your house is allergic, there is medication available that can help. It's called acepromazine.

If you don't own a pet but still care about animals, there are many ways you can help them. If your house or apartment allows pets but you don't want to make a long-term commitment, consider fostering a dog or cat. You can learn more about this by contacting either Lubbock Animal Services or the Animal Care Shelter. Both of these shelters also desperately need volunteer help.

If you love animals but can't have one of your own, you can go to the shelter and pet or play with the animals. This is a very rewarding volunteer activity and one that will increase your awareness of just how serious the overpopulation problem is.

Custodians work toward education, citizenship

Ginger Westbrook
THEUNIVERSITYDAILY

The Texas Tech custodians are working while students are in school, but from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. every Wednesday and Friday, they attend school.

In the basement of the physical plant, volunteers meet with custodial workers to teach them English and help them prepare for the GED, the naturalization test to become a U.S. citizen and the TASP test.

The tutoring program is led by Henry Estrello, who also teaches at the Adult Learning Center in Lubbock. Estrello and the volunteers not only teach the students, but they learn from them as well.

Jerry Tidrow, physical plant technician, comes to the program to learn Spanish. He decided to learn the language after working with a German student from whom he learned German.

Estrello's classes involve a learning activity where students address each other as "Ambassador" of their native country and then discuss the culture and lifestyles of their homeland.

Josie Aleman, a junior social work major from Lubbock, began volunteering in January. She gives her time to the program, along with juggling a family, work and school. Aleman began working with the class as part of a course requirement for her major. She has continued to devote her time even though the sessions have ended.

"It's like a big family," she said.

The employees attend the class to learn basic arithmetic, reading comprehension and writing, along with speaking English or Spanish, Aleman said.

The students are paid by Tech for one hour of each tutoring session, and Tech also pays for some of the books from which they learn.

Custodian Odilon Platero took the citizenship test seven months ago and is waiting to take the oath of citizenship in September. Platero has a degree in agricultural engineering and a master's degree of science in soil fertilizer from the University of Chapingo in El Salvador. He has attended Estrello's program for three years.

"I cannot do this program without the help of my students and tutors," Estrello said.

"I must give credit to them because they are what makes the program really go."

Reasons for the increasing number of applicants could stem from the availability of scholarships and particular academic programs offered at the university.

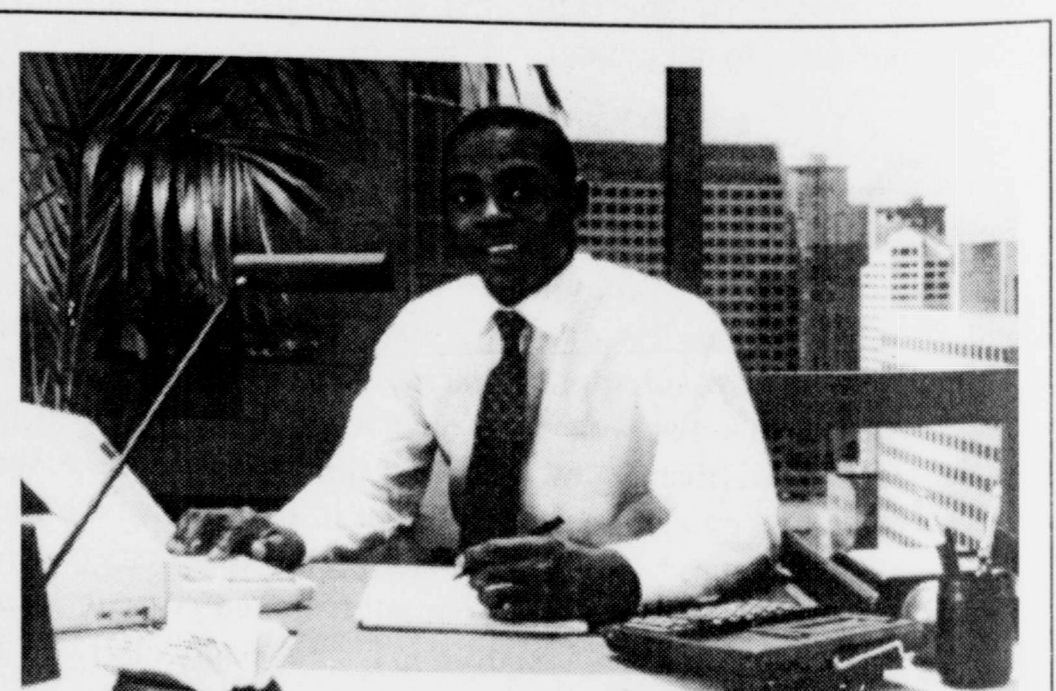

"I'm coming to Tech because the music department has a really great program," said Heather Wiltout, a freshman music education major from Fredericksburg.

Other factors could be responsible for the high number of applicants, Medley said.

Although Tech's athletic department has received an abundance of negative publicity, the Red Raiders won past South-west Conference titles in men's and women's basketball, baseball and football.

This can help Tech's public perception in a more positive manner, he said.

Rainy days

Summer showers dampen mowing business

Brian Smith
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Record amounts of rainfall in the Hub City has generated mixed opinions from Texas Tech students who mow lawns during the summer to earn the extra spending money needed for school.

Craig Nell, a junior English major from Lubbock, mows yards to help pay his way through school and for other living expenses.

In his seventh season of lawn mowing, Nell said this is the best season for grass he has seen yet, although it has not increased business that much.

"The rain helps the grass grow right now, but it will really help the grass later on when it gets hot and has not rained for a while," he said.

If the area continues to receive as much rain as it has, along with the warm temperatures, business will increase and be profitable, Nell said.

Jake Sadler, a junior business administration major from Amarillo, also mows yards but said he does not agree the rain proves profitable for the current lawn care business.

"I try to mow my yards once a week on the same day," Sadler said. "When it rains I have to change my schedule mowing the yards less than once a week. If I mow less than once a week I will not make as much as if it had not rained."

Sadler said the rain will have an effect on grass growth down the road.

"With all the rain we have had the grass will grow throughout the season when it usually quits growing," Sadler said.

Dr. Jim Reynolds, a local dentist whose lawn is cared for by a Tech student, said he believes mowing is a good way for students to earn money.

Reynolds said he has employed both Tech students and non-Tech students to care for his yard and prefers having Tech students mow his yard.

"I found that if they're conscientious, I would rather have Tech students mow my lawn," Reynolds said. "I had to do the same thing myself."

All of the rain has been nice, but it is going to curse the dry weather in July and later on down the road, he said.

Reynolds said he believes having any kind of job in school will help students in the future.

"You never know when a little thing is going to make a difference," Reynolds said.

... it will really help the grass later on when it gets hot and has not rained for a while.

Gangs in Lubbock should not turn on each other — instead, they should try to help each other and better themselves, he said.

Chatman added that the members of the black community must prepare for the future if they are going to succeed in the future.

"We must prepare ourselves to take over a leadership role," Chatman said.

"Leaders don't just jump up and say 'I'm a leader.' You have to prove yourself."

Chatman said he hopes blacks will be determined to achieve unification in the future.

"People must be determined and do whatever they want to do," Chatman said.

"If you succeed fine. If you fail, don't give up."

Joan Y. Ervin, president of Juneteenth Celebration, Inc., said she celebrates Juneteenth because the celebration means freedom for all slaves.

"In the future there must be a total unified force with no respect to person, just man," Ervin said.

"Everyone must lock hands and go hand to hand into the 21st century, otherwise there will be total destruction."

Lubbock's Juneteenth weekend festivities include a parade beginning at 10 a.m. Saturday at the Lubbock Civic Center's east parking lot. The parade will march down Broadway and Canyon Lake Drive to the Mae Simmons Community Center, 2300 Oak St.

'Reckless' leaves audience members laughing

One Christmas a husband hires a hitman to kill his wife. And so begins several years of running from the past, missed opportunities and uncertainty.

The presentation of the comedy "Reckless" at the Texas Tech University Lab Theatre takes the audience on a twisting ride through the life of Rachel, a woman forced to abandon her children after her husband hires a hitman to kill her.

She finds her way into the hearts and home of Lloyd and Pooty, a man and a woman with pasts of their own. But after Rachel's husband, Tom, finds her and wants to resolve their differences, a mishap occurs and Rachel and Lloyd flee together.

But once again, Rachel ends up alone and in pain. In the end, because of what can only be described as fate, Rachel's path finally begins to brighten.

As the play unfolds, the characters each reveal how and why they are running away, and audience members experience a sometimes heart-wrenching yet comical journey through apprehension and longing.

Although the subject matter is serious, the play is amusing, and the acting is outstanding.

A particularly comical performance was given by Ryan Palmer, who portrayed several characters, including a game show host and a drooling patient at a mental hospital.

But "Reckless" is not void of solemn moments.

"Do we ever really know who people are?" Rachel asks Lloyd during one of the more serious conversations.

He does not immediately respond, but after some reflection he answers — no, he says, people never truly know each other.

"Reckless," like the rest of the Tech Theatre's Summer Rep Season, is a must-see for anyone, regardless of whether they have a past from which to run.

"Reckless" can be seen at 8 p.m. today in the University Lab Theatre. Tickets cost $3 for students and $8 for adults.

The Summer Rep Season also includes "A Girl's Guide to Chaos," "Comanche Cafe/Domino Courts" and "Laundry and Bourbon/Lonestar."

For additional ticket information, show times and dates, call the ticket office at 742-3601.

New Japanese dance craze soon may sweep nation, replacing Macarena

Just when it was safe to step back onto the Macarena-free dance floor, a new ballroom dancing craze threatens to make the mambo and fox trot hip again.

Japanese director Masayuki Suo's new movie about an office worker turned competitive dancer — "Shall We Dance?" — has already swept tsunami-style through his native island.

And now the quiet-spoken director, who parts his hair conservatively to the side and avoids direct eye contact, has set his wire-rimmed sights on this continent.

"I saw the same reaction here in the United States as I did in Japan," Suo said. "I know a lot of people who started ballroom dancing after this movie."

Time to lace up those dancing shoes. With a script finely balanced between humor and sentimentality, Suo's film recalls the magic of older, classic movies — before special effects and splatter flicks took center stage.

RATT's recent tour is revision, not reunion

Sebastian Kitchen
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

RATT ran wild through the heavy metal industry during their first decade of existence. In 1991, the band members went their separate ways.

This month they hit the road again to mass approval of old and new fans alike.

"It was a mutual decision," said lead singer

Stephen Percy of the band getting back together. "We had unfinished business."

The tour is not a reunion but a revision, Percy said.

Thousands already have seen the band in their first few shows of the "Back For More 1997 U.S. Tour." RATT started their tour June 15 in Albuquerque, N.M., to a sold-out crowd of 2,200 people, and Wednesday the band made their first appearance in years in Lubbock.

Promoter Lane Arnold said about 800 people came to Lubbock to watch the legendary band in their first tour since 1991. Fans sang along with Percy to their hit songs.

The band's set featured three or four of its new songs and a good mixture of its older hits.

They even played music from their 1983 EP.

The new songs were from their upcoming album, Collage, which will be released July 22.

"This is a good start, a good re-introduction," Percy said. "The shows are going well."

The band looks different now, but their style is not.

Original band members Percy, guitarist Warren DeMartini and drummer Bobby Blotzer are joined by a new bass guitarist, Robbie Crane.

RATT is classified as one of the "big hair bands."

Percy and DeMartini said the group does not appreciate the classification of the band by fashion and not musical style.

"That is the wrong image," Percy said. "We do not like that. We were not around when a lot of that started and neither were some of the other bands."

They sound nothing like many of the bands they were classified with, including Poison, Winger, L.A. GUNNS, Warrant, Anthrax and others.

DeMartini was featured in a recent article in Guitar World magazine about hair bands and where they are now.

"I was kind of disappointed in that article because of the way it was classified," he said.

RATT was one of the more popular bands of the classification.

They separated themselves from the others with five straight platinum albums and 13 million albums sold in the U.S. alone.

"We just want to reintroduce our music," Percy said. "We are in no big hurry to conquer the earth."

Tech netters receive accolades

Six members of the Texas Tech women's tennis team were named to the 1997 Academic All-Big 12 Team.

The student-athletes who earned first-team honors are Erika Fisher, a senior marketing and management major from Dallas; Carrie major from Lake City, Fla. and Christine Van Regenmorter, a junior general studies major from Modesto, Calif.

To qualify for the first team, student-athletes must have lettered in their sport and maintained a GPA of 3.3 or higher.

Dallas hopes to sign free agent LB Joyner

IRVING(AP) — The Dallas Cowboys are considering signing free agent linebacker Seth Joyner, who has tormented Cowboys quarterbacks for years while with the Philadelphia Eagles and Arizona Cardinals.

Joyner was released Monday in a cost-cutting move by the Cardinals.

One of his agent's first calls was to the Cowboys.

Dallas is thin at outside linebacker after losing Darrin Smith, Jim Schwantz and Godfrey Myles to free agency.

Joyner, 32, is a three-time Pro Bowl selection with both Arizona and Philadelphia.

"We want to see if Joyner's seen his better days or if he can still play," Cowboys vice president Stephen Jones said.
