Tech staff learns about fund-raising efforts

Laura Hipp

THEUNIVERSITYDAILY

Texas Tech administrators met Wednesday to brainstorm ways to raise money for attracting and retaining students and faculty at Texas Tech through the capital fund-raising campaign.

The meeting about the campaign was intended to brief upper administrators about plans for the fund-raising program, said Ben Lock, Tech Chancellor John T. Montford's executive assistant. Tech presidents, deans and several regents were in attendance.

"It (the meeting) was to give these people who have some role in the campaign an idea of the structure," Lock said.

Presenters at the meeting discussed possible themes and logos for the campaign, which will launch its push for donations Feb. 6, 1998 at Tech's 75th anniversary celebration, he said. The goal is to raise $300 million from private donations.

"We are trying to familiarize people who will have roles in the capital campaign," he said.

Currently, the campaign is in its "quiet phase," Lock said.

Officials are beginning to decide how the drive will be organized, he said.

"This was somewhat motivational to get people into the mindset that we can do it," Lock said.

The campaign will benefit students and faculty, he said.

A large portion of the funds will be dedicated to student scholarships, said Tech President Donald Haragan. The remaining finances will be applied to endowed chair positions, capital investments, and an annual giving will be made to Congress approves balanced budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Breaking decades of stalemate, Congress sent President Clinton a milestone bill Thursday designed to force the first federal budget surpluses since 1969. The deepest tax cuts in 16 years were right behind after the House voted its overwhelming blessing.

By an 85-15 Senate vote, a measure aimed at balancing the budget by 2002 won final congressional approval, plucking most of its $130 billion in savings from Medicare while thoroughly reshaping the huge health-insurance program for the elderly. The House had approved the measure Wednesday, 346-85.

On a 389-43 vote, the House passed a companion bill Thursday slicing taxes by $152 billion for families with children and for college students, savers and investors who sell property. The Senate debated the tax measure and planned to ship it Friday to the White House. Clinton is ready to sign both bills next week.

"The final congressional passage of the balanced-budget bill is the achievement of a generation and a triumph for every American," the president said.

Oskam named soccer coach

Ginger Westbrook

THEUNIVERSITYDAILY

Felix Oskam, Texas Tech's women's interim soccer coach, was hired for the full-time, head coach position Tuesday.

"This is really a dream come true," Oskam said. "I've always wanted to work with a Division I school."

Gerald Myers, Tech athletic director, made the selection for the position.

"His technical and strategic aspect of his coaching is outstanding," Myers said. "We had a few other candidates, but we felt he was the most qualified."

Oskam is one of the only certified class A soccer instructors in the country, and he also has a history of playing soccer in the Netherlands for 12 years.

Oskam

Oskam played soccer for the University of North Texas during his undergraduate years.

Oskam also served as assistant coach for both the men's and women's soccer programs at the University of Tulsa and led both teams to national rankings.

While assisting the women's team, Oskam helped them reach a 9th and 10th ranking for the central region in the past two years.

"I want to take this team to the next level, which

SPOTLIGHT on Health Care

Mark McLeod

THEUNIVERSITYDAILY

The Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center no longer will provide medical assistance to low income South Plains residents because of the climbing costs of health care.

The Texas Department of Health and TTUHSC officials announced July 17 that Tech plans to terminate its management of the Title V clinics on the South Plains beginning Oct. 1.

The Title V Program uses federal and state funds to provide prenatal, child health and family planning services to low-income mothers and children who do not qualify for Medicaid and cannot afford insurance.

The transition of management was a tough decision to make, said John Walls, TTUHSC spokesman. Tech provided services to clinics in Muleshoe, Floydada, Matarador, Guthrie, Spur, Dickens, Ralls, Post and Tahoka counties since October 1995.

TTUHSC officials decided to end involvement in the Title V Program because the funding of the program was inadequate to THREDBO, Australia (AP) — The desperate voices of people trapped in a landslide that flattened two ski lodges began to fade Thursday while frustrated rescuers, prevented for hours from using their equipment, could only look on.

The slide Wednesday night in southeastern Australia brought tons of earth, trees and cars down on the lodges, trapping at least 20 people underneath. Crushed cars perched precariously on teetering piles of rubble.

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A Federal Express cargo plane crashed and burned at Newark International Airport early Thursday, but all five people on board were rescued, authorities said. No one on the ground was hurt.

The flight was about to land at 1:35 a.m. when the accident occurred, according to the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which manages the airport.

STATENEWS

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Sixteen Texas A&M University students face charges of hazing in connection with events that allegedly occurred while they were part of the elite Fish Drill Team.

If the students are found guilty, punishment could range from a reprimand to expulsion.

The charges are related to hazing within the drill team that is alleged to have occurred during the past several years. The team is a precision rifle unit in the Corps of Cadets made up of freshmen.

WEEKEND SPOTLIGHT

• Hub City concerts

Music lovers in the Hub City should have no problem finding entertainment in the Depot District this weekend.

"This was a crazy week," said promoter Lane Arnold. "We had Collective Soul, Fates Warning, Vallejo and King's X. They have Joan Jett down the street. This week has been almost ridiculous."

In fact, this weekend's shows will conclude the busiest week of music in Lubbock this summer.

Tonight legendary rock band Joan Jett and the Blackhearts will perform at Roadhouse Ruby's, 2216 U.S. Interstate 27. Fans might remember the band for their hit "I Love Rock 'n' Roll."

Tickets cost $15 in advance and $18 at the door, and the doors open at 8 p.m.

Austin's Vallejo will play at Stubb's Bar-B-Q, 19th St. and I-27. Vallejo is the last name of several of the band members. The band is now touring in support of their self-titled album. They have played at Stubb's several times before. The cover for the show is $6. Charlie's Backyard Planet will open the show at 10 p.m.

Saturday night, the Palladian "Live," 1812 Ave. G, will present King's X joined by special guests Human and Thrill Joy. Doors open at 8 p.m., and the music starts at 9:30 p.m. Tickets cost $12.

p.m. and the cover costs $6. Charlie's Backyard Planet will open the show.

• The Depot Beer Garden will host Mojo Hand at 10 p.m. The cover costs $5.

• Draggin' Juliet will perform at the Hub City Brewery at 10 p.m. The cover costs $5.

• Legion West Role Playing and War Gaming Consortium presents Friday Night Wargames every Friday at 7 p.m. at Mad Hatter's House of Games.

SATURDAY

• The Fortunate Son, a tribute band to Credence Clearwater Revival, will play at Stubb's Bar-B-Q. The cover costs $5, and the show starts at 10 p.m.

• The Depot Beer Garden will host Mojo Hand at 10 p.m. The cover costs $5.

• Draggin' Juliet will perform at the Hub City Brewery at 10 p.m. The cover costs $5.

• King's X will play at the Palsuspended, sheriff's warrants and Lubbock municipal warrants.

• A UPD officer issued a criminal trespass warning to a nonstudent for trespassing at the east farm area.

• A UPD officer investigated the theft of 121 compact discs from room 402 of Weymouth Residence Hall.

July 30

• A UPD officer investigated the theft of an outside mirror from a vehicle parked in the Z-1B parking lot.

Tickets to the shows can be purchased at both locations of Ralph's Records and University Records.

Sin City, an AC/DC tribute band, canceled their weekend performances at the Beergarden and were replaced by Mojo Hand, who always sells out shows at Stubb's Bar-B-Q. The show will start at 10 p.m., and the cover is $5.

"Anytime you have entertainment like that, it enhances what we have as a city," said Beth Bridges, director of membership for the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce. "It also gives us a variety of opportunities for entertainment."

The Chamber of Commerce is in place to promote the business climate in Lubbock, Bridges said, and the music business at the city's smaller venues is doing well.

ladian "Live," 1812 Ave. G. The doors open at 8 p.m., and opening bands Human and Thrill Joy will open the show at 9:30 p.m. Tickets cost $12. Tickets to the show can be purchased at University Records and both locations of Ralph's Records.

• KAMC-28 will host the 22nd annual Boys Ranch Telethon from 7 p.m. to 12 midnight. Admission is free. The event will be at the Cactus Theater, 1812 Buddy Holly Ave.

MONDAY

• The Lubbock Crickets will play the Tyler Wildcatters at Dan Law Field. Call the Crickets office for at 749-2255 for additional information.

• The Lubbock Fine Arts Center, 2600 Ave. P, will present an exhibit of artwork produced through the city's summer youth art program. The exhibit will last all day. Call 767-2686 for additional information.

Religion subject to change by humans

To the Editor:

Mr. Weber, what do you mean we have no authority to edit the Bible? The fathers of the various religions have been doing it for centuries. Who said that Tobit should be part of the Apocrypha and not in the Canon? People. Who said that the Coptic Gospel of Thomas should not be in the Bible at all? People.

We are ultimately the final arbitrator of our faith. "Man creates God in his own image," to quote Terrence McKenna.

I'm fairly certain your picture of God and even your entire faith itself is not the same as it was when you were 6 years old, or even when you were 16. You may not have changed God, but you have changed your beliefs. I know I have, most of it after I spent five years at this university having my mind opened to new possibilities and new aspects of the Almighty.

Look at how much of the Bible is ignored. Raise your hands, all you Christians who still keep Kosher like it says to in the Torah (Old Testament to you Christians). Oops, gotcha. Those are the same laws you are quoting to condemn homosexuality.

And you can't say that Jesus did away with Kosher and most of the Mosaic Law (or just the part Christians don't like), because didn't he say, "I have not come to destroy the Law, but to fulfill it"?

You say the Southern Baptist Convention is boycotting Disney because of the "action" of homosexuality, not the people. But a boycott is an indirect attack on the people who work for Disney, isn't it? It damages not only profits, but it also damages the heart and soul of everyone who has poured their efforts into making Disney what it is.

I imagine there are some who are heartsick at the fact that people hate their company. The Baptists are punishing people regardless of how indirect the snub. Have we become so addicted to our beliefs that we will attack another person's heart to get a fix from polishing our halos? I hope not.

Faith and beliefs are intended to improve us. Mr. Weber, I'm not trying to be mean and nasty towards you or your beliefs. I'm merely pointing out some holes that will be patched over the course of your time here. Whether they are patched for the better or for the worse is entirely up to you.

Japanese students tour America, Tech campus

Brian Smith
THEUNIVERSITYDAILY

Twenty students and five sponsors from Musashino City, Japan, a suburb of Tokyo, were greeted by Texas Tech Chancellor John T. Montford as they visited the Tech campus Thursday to learn about American culture.

Meichihko Proctor, director of the Lubbock Junior Ambassador Goodwill Exchange program, said it is important for the students involved in the program to stop at Tech and tour the campus.

"It is an excellent way for the students to learn about other cultures first-hand," Proctor said.

The students are staying in the United States for two weeks.

The foreign students traveled the country for the first part of the tour and will stay in Lubbock for the remaining five days, Proctor said.

The students visiting Tech are all junior high school students who excel in their classes at their schools in Japan, she said.

Montford said it is important to continue to have programs like this on the Tech campus.

"It is important to look at the international market and good will," he said. "It is important to expand education to the international market."

Montford said he would like to look at expanding the international exchange program for Tech students.

"I would like to look into some endowments to help fund international study," Montford said.

Many horizons are expanded when students can travel around the world, he said.

It is important to look at the international market and good will.

John T. Montford, Tech chancellor

Kaori Hara, a seventh grade exchange student from Japan, said she believes Tech is different from schools in Japan.

"Tech is very spacious, very green, and it has a beautiful atmosphere," Hara said. "I like Tech better than Japanese colleges."

Hara said someday she would like to come to Tech and learn about American life.

Keisuke Nishimoto, a seventh grade exchange student from Japan, said he believes the Tech campus is huge and that the people are very friendly.

Nishimoto said it would be nice to be an exchange student at Tech.

Naoko Morishima, an eighth grade exchange student from Japan, said if she could she would come to Tech and go to school.

"Tech is very green and big, and I like the campus very much," Morishima said.

Small business office gives advice for entrepreneurial endeavors

Brian Smith
THEUNIVERSITYDAILY

Fledgling entrepreneurs are listening to advice from the Texas Tech College of Business Administration Small Business Development Center.

The center is designed to help people wanting to start a small business gain information about their new endeavor.

Steve Anderson, director of the program, said there are two main ways the center assists people wanting to start small businesses.

"You don't have to be a Tech student or have graduated from Tech to receive help from the program," Anderson said.

One way the center helps entrepreneurs from a 15-county radius is by conducting seminars about various topics that will help people in their quest to own their own business, he said.

There is a small cost to attend these seminars, but just enough to cover the cost of informational materials, Anderson said.

Another way the center helps small business owners and people wanting to start a small business is by providing small business counselors.

The counselors help people develop a business plan to get the funding they need to start a business for free, he said.

The counselors also will assist people with market research and help them determine who their future clients will be, Anderson said.

Anderson said the success rate of the program has increased since last year at this time.

"Our main thing is if people are credit worthy and able to start their own business, we can help them with their business plan to obtain funds," Anderson said.

"If they are not credit worthy, we can give them an idea of what it will take to start their own business."

You don't have to be a Tech student (or graduate) to receive help...

Steve Anderson, Small Business Development Center director

Michael Gyman, senior business counselor at the center, said the program is important for people wanting to be their own boss.

"We can help people obtain bank loans to open businesses and develop business plans to help people gain the funds they need," Gyman said.

Gyman said it is important to receive counseling before beginning a business in order for entrepreneurs to learn how to open a business legally.

Dad diets to be donor

NORTH EAST, Pa. (AP) — Randy Leamer's motivation to lose 85 pounds in six months was much stronger than his health or his vanity. It was the life of his 4-year-old daughter.

Meagan Leamer needs a kidney transplant in the fall. Doctors told her father last December, when he weighed 297 pounds, that he must lose about 100 pounds to be a donor.

"I didn't want them to wait for me," he said.

the Office of Development.

"Basically, the session was to get everybody on the same page," Haragan said.

They talked about what they hope to do with the funds and proposed how they will be expended, Haragan said.

"The level of enthusiasm was obvious," said David Smith, president of the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center. "It will continue to build momentum as Texas Tech continues to grow."

Smith's presentation urged for support of TTUHSC and research projects such as world health and aging.

Tech must strive to be a top research institution, Smith said.

The meeting was under attack because some believed Tech officials were violating the open meetings law. The agenda for Board of Regents meetings must be posted in public according to the law, and many of the regents attended the meeting about the campaign.

Montford said the regents were invited to learn more about the campaign, but it was not an official Board of Regents meeting.

"Yesterday was a staff briefing on the capital campaign fund," Montford said. "It was not a closed briefing. The law doesn't require us to post those meetings."

would be winning the Big 12, and our ultimate goal is to win the NCAA championship," Oskam said.

The head coaching position opened when Diane Nichols resigned in early July to return to Lubbock High School and coach soccer.

Myers said hiring Oskam will keep continuity in the soccer program, and this would be good for the players because they are already used to Oskam and his coaching style.

Oskam is ready to start the season and already has set goals for the women's team.

"The standard is going to be raised," Oskam said. "What was good enough last year is not good enough anymore."

Oskam plans to increase the intensity of the team and create a practice environment where there will be more competition among players.

"They need to push each other to the limit," he said. "Last year competition among players wasn't as good as I thought it could be."

Oskam said to be noticed, the team needs to be ranked as one of the top four.

"This year, I just want them to keep a focus from game to game," he said. "If we do our job right and keep our kids straight, then I think we'll get there."

The athletes will arrive at Tech Aug. 12, and two-a-days will begin Aug. 13 from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. to 6 p.m.

cover the expenses, Walls said. The clinics were not receiving enough funding to reimburse Tech for the cost of the care.

TTUHSC was spending about $1 million of its own money in the Title V Program and still was not breaking even, Walls said.

"We wanted to be involved with these clinics," he said.

"But with recent changes that decrease reimbursements from Medicaid and other reductions in available state and federal funds, it is no longer financially feasible to continue managing these clinics."

James Morgan, regional director for the Texas Department of Health, said the transition of management will go smoothly.

"The Department of Health appreciates the effort and funds that Texas Tech has put into operating these clinics over the past two years," Morgan said. "We'll work closely with the health sciences center to ensure a smooth transition to another provider."

Presently the Department of Health is reviewing applications for new contractors to assume control of the management positions in the Title V clinics but has not made any selections.

IQ linked to environment, not genes

NEW YORK (AP) — Nurture edges out nature in determining a person's IQ, according to a new study that also finds a surprisingly important role for prenatal development in shaping human intelligence.

In an analysis combining more than 200 earlier studies, statisticians concluded that genes account for only 48 percent of the factors that determine IQ.

That's less than most psychologists would estimate, said study author Bernie Devlin, and far enough below the figure cited by the controversial 1994 book "The Bell Curve" to undercut its authors' main conclusions.

"That number is way too small for their arguments to be of any great consequence," said Devlin, a professor of psychiatry at the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine.

Devlin's study also found that conditions during prenatal development significantly affect a person's intelligence. That suggests that inadequate prenatal care may explain why poorer people and blacks generally score lower on IQ tests.

"Our study gives credence to that idea, and that in fact is something that people should be concerned about," Devlin said. "Poor prenatal care may have a negative impact on IQ."

He and his colleagues report their findings in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature.

UNLV professor moves to Tech

Jason Curtis
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The University of Nevada-Las Vegas is losing a good man.

The author of more than 30 published books, a visiting professor in New Zealand and Tunisia for the past four years and an avid mountain-climber, Jeffrey Kottler officially will become a Red Raider Aug. 25.

Because of his widely published research and experience in the field of psychology and therapy, Kottler was chosen to be visiting professor of psychology and leadership in Texas Tech's College of Education.

Why Lubbock over Las Vegas?

"I prefer small towns," Kottler said. "In fact, I'm always surprised when people in Lubbock seem so apologetic for its being so 'small.'"

In addition to his affinity for Lubbock's close-knit community, Kottler stated his academic motives for moving to Tech.

"Tech has a good reputation," he said. "The faculty seemed to be both congenial and respectful. I've been to many other universities, and this is a rare thing."

Elaine Jarchow, dean of the College of Education, said she looks forward to working with Kottler again.

"I have a tremendous respect for Dean Jarchow," said Kottler, who worked with Jarchow when she was assistant dean at UNLV. "She shows a real commitment to building the counseling education program."

Loretta Bradley, Tech professor of educational leadership and psychology and president-elect of the American Counselors Association, also is familiar with Kottler's work in the field of psychology.

"I've met Dr. Kottler on several occasions at professional conferences," Bradley said.

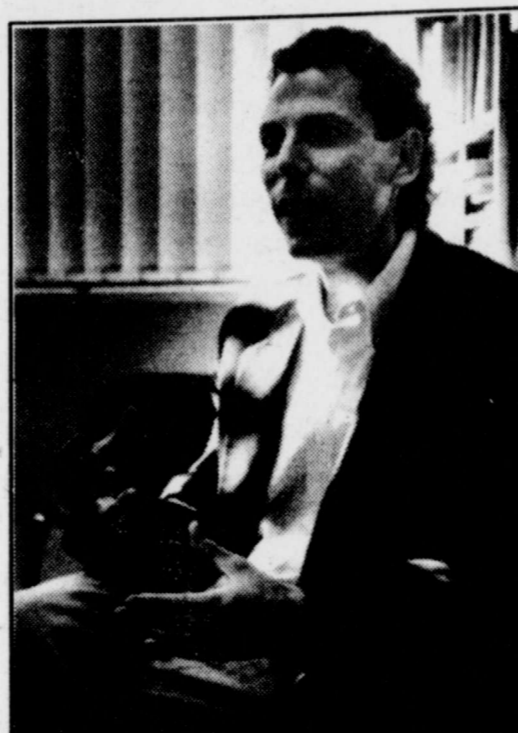

"He will be a great addition to our department, our college and our university."

Kottler said his plans at Tech coincide with the goal of his profession — to help others.

"The students I've met so far seem to be very open," he said.

"I have lots of opportunities to help junior faculty members and doctoral students get their work published."

Among his published work, Kottler boasts more than 30 books, including "On Being a Therapist," "What's Really Said in the Teachers Lounge: Provocative Ideas

About Cultures and Classrooms," "The Language of Tears" and "Travel That Can Change Your Life."

His latest project, "The Last Victim: In Search of a Serial Killer," should be in bookstores by next year and is based on the experiences of one of Kottler's students.

"My student developed correspondences with many of the world's most notorious living serial killers," he said.

"Jeffrey Dahmer was said to have written only two people while he was in prison. My student was one of them."

Officials say weapons theft not uncommon

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (AP) — A Marine remains in military custody after federal agents found a cache of explosives he allegedly took from Camp Pendleton Marine Corps base.

But officials said Wednesday that theft of military ordnance is not uncommon.

"We've been recovering this stuff on a regular basis for 20 years," said Sgt. Conrad Grayson of the San Diego County Sheriff's Department, which assisted federal agents in a sting operation.

Lance Cpl. Chad E. Solomon was arrested Monday at his home when federal agents raided an apartment complex in Poway, 23 miles northeast of San Diego. Late Wednesday, he had not yet been charged and base officials declined to say what charges might be brought against Solomon.

After removing Solomon's wife and two children from the apartment, authorities recovered seven blocks of C-4 explosives, blasting caps, gas and smoke grenades and other firing devices, Grayson said.

"We scooped up quite a bit of military explosives," Grayson said. "He had the whole nine yards — booby traps, blasting caps, fuses and everything."

Officials said Wednesday they've been alerted to other instances in which such military explosives had been sold on the black market.

Solomon, of Round Rock, Texas, has been in the Corps for three years, according to base spokesman Capt. Scott Lopez.

Lopez said to protect the investigation, he could not say how NCIS came to suspect Solomon.

"It is possible for Marines not to turn some of that stuff in despite strict accountability procedures," Lopez said.

We've been recovering this stuff on a regular basis for 20 years.

'Beavis and Butt-head' laugh last laugh as show ends

NEW YORK (AP) — "Beavis and Butt-head" will soon have their last laugh — heh, heh, heh — ending four years of first-run weekly episodes on MTV.

MTV and "Beavis and Butt-head" creator Mike Judge have agreed to call it quits for the tales of two channel-surfing, wise-cracking teens. The first of 15 final episodes began airing last week, with the last scheduled to air Oct. 10.

But never fear. Losers like Beavis and Butt-head never really go anywhere.

Their adventures will continue in reruns indefinitely, according to MTV.

In addition, the boys may resurface in specials or a sequel to "Beavis and Butt-head Do America," the blockbuster feature film released last December.

Judge also may create an entirely new program for MTV.

"We've always had a great relationship with Mike Judge, but after 220 episodes, we decided it was time to move on," said MTV spokeswoman Sheryl Jones.

Meanwhile, the Austin, Texas-based Judge is busy producing "King of the Hill," the Fox animated series that became last season's only new prime-time hit among the broadcast networks.

"Beavis and Butt-head" debuted in March 1993.

Ever since, the cartoons have trolled the life of Beavis (the yellow-haired one) and Butt-head (with the prominent gumline), usually found on a shabby couch watching music videos as they added their own off-color commentary.

The show was instantly embraced by a nation of youngsters who mimicked the boys' moronic, hacking laugh and idiotic comments ("This sucks!").

But the show invited controversy as well.

In October 1993, as the cartoon 14-year-olds occupied Newsweek's cover ("The Billion-Dollar Battle to Insult Your Intelligence"), an Ohio mother of a 5-year-old who started a fire that killed his younger sister accused "Beavis and Butt-head" of encouraging her son to play with fire.

Two years later, a Pennsylvania cable system agreed to waive its $50 fee for disconnecting MTV, in response to hundreds of complaints about the cartoon.

Local wineries prepare for annual 'crush'

Sebastian Kitchen
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Every year, Lubbock vineyards send thousands of bottles of wine around the world. And, every August, they begin to crush their grapes to make the wine.

"We crush about 800 tons of grapes every year," said Mark Pearson, a tour guide at the Llano Estacado Winery, south of Lubbock on FM 1585.

The Llano Estacado, along with the other two area wineries, begins annual grape crushing each year in August. The crush lasts until the end of September.

The millions of grapes are brought in from area vineyards.

"We have three acres of established vineyards," said Pearson, who has worked for the winery for two years. "The rest of our grapes are grown by area contractors within 150 miles of Lubbock. They call us and tell us they have grapes ready to bring us."

The grapes are put into a 12-ton press, he said.

"The machine breaks the skin of the grapes and pulls out the stem," he said. "Then, a bladder inside fills with air and pushes out."

The pressure from the bladder extracts the juice, Pearson said. The juice is transferred into a tank or a barrel, depending on the type of wine, to ferment.

The fermentation process takes about two to six weeks.

After fermentation, the award-winning wine is shipped all over the world and is sold at the winery.

"Our wine is sent to 36 states and seven European countries," he said.

Pearson said the winery gives three to five facility tours a day.

"We have a wide variety of people come through the winery," he said.

"They come from all over the world — (from places like) Germany and Australia."

Visitors also come from Texas who are passing through Lubbock, he said.

Each of the three local wineries give tours of their facilities.

People interested in touring can call the individual wineries.

The Llano Estacado winery has about 15 wines in stock.

"We normally have more, but we sold out of some because they are in such high demand," Pearson said.

"There are some wines we have sold out of for the past three or four years."

The Llano Estacado expects to begin their crush in about a week.

The Caprock Winery will begin their crush in about three weeks, said employee Kim McPherson.

"We usually start the first week in August, but this year we will start later because of the early freeze," McPherson said.

Secretary bequeaths largest donation in hospital's history

CHICAGO (AP) — A $15,000-a-year secretary who made a fortune in the stock market with guidance from her boss left $18 million to Children's Memorial Hospital upon her death.

Gladys Holm, who had no children of her own and no known surviving relatives when she died in June 1996 at age 86, bequeathed the money to the hospital for research purposes.

It was the biggest gift in the hospital's 115-year history, surpassing a $10 million donation from McDonald's founder Ray Kroc in the late 1970s.

Holm lived alone in a modest two-bedroom apartment in Evanston. Few people suspected she was rich. "We were all stunned and surprised by the magnitude of her generosity," Jan Jennings, hospital president and chief executive, said Wednesday. "It's breathtaking."

Holm had given the hospital

$200,000 over the past 25 years and was known around the place as the "Teddy Bear Lady" for handing out stuffed toys.

She retired in 1969 after 41 years at Evanston-based Hospital Supply Co., where she worked as a secretary to the founder, Foster C. McGaw.

By the time she retired, the company was the biggest distributor of health care products in the world. It was acquired by Baxter International in 1985.

Co-workers estimated Holm made a career-high of $15,000 per year before retiring, and said she amassed her fortune by living frugally and investing wisely.

Her one apparent luxury was a classic red Cadillac Eldorado with fins. A friend said Holm drove the large car because she had arthritis and it allowed her to get in and out comfortably.

One of the first clues to her wealth came in 1990, when for her 80th birthday she threw a lavish party at a hotel.

Holm invited 100 guests and even flew in distant relatives from Norway.

"That's when we realized she might have some money put away," said longtime friend Lynn Adrian.

McGaw had suggested Holm invest her yearly bonuses in the stock market, Adrian said.

We were all stunned and surprised by the magnitude of her generosity.

'Brainy' Barbie hits market in November

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) — Barbie is about to show she's more than just a pretty face.

Mattel Inc. in November will release a talking Barbie with a little computer — on a pink desk, of course — and real computer software that can be used to customize what she has to say.

A demonstration Thursday of the $90 Talk With Me Barbie Doll started with Barbie quivering her little chin to say: "I'm ready to sit at my computer."

"It's the first time any doll has personalized to this degree," executive producer Cynthia Woll said.

Talking has gotten Barbie in trouble before.

In 1992, Teen Talk Barbie was denounced by women's groups for uttering canned lines such as, "Math class is tough."

Talk With Me Barbie comes with a mini-computer on a desk, cables to connect to a home computer and a CD-ROM.

Barbie owners put the CD-ROM on their home computer, and use it to choose conversation topics ranging from careers and dating to make-believe and playing house.

They can also program in their name, birthday, hair and eye color and information about four of their friends, too.

During the demonstration,

Help me pick out earrings...I like sparkly earrings when I'm dancing.

Barbie

Barbie talked about going on a date with Ken: "Help me pick out earrings. ... I like sparkly earrings when I'm dancing."

Talk With Me Barbie isn't the only new Barbie hitting store shelves. University Barbie is dressed in cheerleader outfits that correspond to the colors of 19 colleges. Also new this year is a Dentist Barbie that says, "Great checkup."

In 1996, sales of Barbies and Barbie accessories reached $1.7 billion.

Former Air Force quarterback impresses Cowboys, coaches

AUSTIN (AP) — Dallas backup quarterback Jason Garrett thought he was seeing double.

At one of the Cowboys' workouts in Dallas this spring, Garrett spotted former Air Force quarterback Beau Morgan, a wiry guy with a few pimples and braces, growing passes.

The next minute, Morgan was never doing drills with the running backs, and after that he was running pass routes with the receivers.

Garrett nearly lost it when, a little while later, he saw Morgan lining up as a defensive back, covering receivers.

"I was saying to myself, 'This is unbelievable.' And he wasn't even signed yet. But that's the guy he is," Garrett said. "He tries everything and does everything real hard. He's a guy you love to have around."

The Cowboys would love to have the 5-foot-10, 192-pound Morgan around.

But the rookie free agent's first preseason game against the Oakland Raiders Sunday night at Texas Stadium, just a short distance from where he grew up in Addison, will also be his last.

At least for now.

On Monday, Morgan will pack up his Honda Accord and make the 12-hour drive to Colorado Springs, Colo., to begin fulfilling a two-year postgraduate commitment to the Air Force.

The normal commitment is five years.

But Morgan has petitioned for release after two with an increased amount of reserve duty, which he could fulfill during NFL offseasons.

Dallas coaches are high on Morgan's unrelenting work ethic. He knows the playbook from attending all three of the Cowboys' minicamps, even without a contract, and he can play four different positions — quarterback, running back, receiver and defensive back.

"To make an impression on the coaches you have to go after it every play," says Morgan, who is always early to practice and then stays late to put in added work.

He makes up for his smallish size with quickness and determination, hitting holes at full speed in drills in which others loaf and then racing back to the huddle after a play is whistled dead.

To make an impression on the coaches you have to go after every play.

Beau Morgan, former Air Force quarterback

"Beau works as hard as anyone out here," said Dallas coach Barry Switzer. "Hopefully, he'll come back and play for us in a couple years. He's just a good kid who is a tremendous competitor and incredibly smart."

Running backs coach Joe Brodsky insists Morgan isn't just a training camp novelty.

He points to the fact that Morgan set an NCAA Division I record for rushing yards by a quarterback last year as the focal point of Air Force's option attack with 225 attempts for 1,498 yards and 18 touchdowns.

Brodsky has some ideas for Morgan when he comes back.

"We can use him as a quarterback in the option game," Brodsky said. "We can use him at running back and as a slot receiver."

Petty likes Gordon's racing, notes background differences

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Richard Petty knows better than most what makes Jeff Gordon tick.

It's not that they are close friends, or even that Petty has studied Gordon. The thing they have in common is winning.

During his NASCAR career, Petty won 200 races. That's 95 more than anyone else in the history of the sport.

In 1967, Petty won 27 of 48 races, a record that will likely stand forever, since NASCAR cut the schedule to no more than 32 races in 1972.

Gordon, who will turn 26 Monday, already has 26 Winston Cup victories, including 10 in 31 starts last year.

"He impresses me," Petty said. "But you've got to figure, you've taken a 25-year-old body and put 15 years of experience in it. When I was 25 years old, I had four years of experience."

Rangers able to keep 'Pudge'

ARLINGTON (AP) — Fans love chanting his nickname at The Ballpark, where he has been a hometown hero for years.

But why the almost hysterical hype over a guy who catches baseballs for a living?

It's because Ivan "Pudge" Rodriguez, who signed a five-year, $42 million contract with the Texas Rangers Thursday, has been hailed as the best catcher since Johnny Bench, someone who could be remembered alongside greats such as Bill Dickey, Yogi Berra and Roy Campanella.

The 25-year-old Rangers' phenom gained his love of baseball in his Puerto Rican homeland.

Rodriguez' earliest memories are of begging his father to take him to the local baseball field so he could practice.

His passion for the sport grew on the hometown fields of Vega Baja.

Once on the mainland, Rodriguez amazed Texas manager Johnny Oates, himself an ex-catcher. Oates, then manager of the Baltimore Orioles, noted in 1991 how quickly and accurately the pudgy rookie threw the ball.

He had thrown out an average of 44 percent of baserunners who tried to steal — far above the major league average — entering this season.

The player's Hall of Fame potential has been evident ever since Texas signed him at age 16. Now he's the best all-around catcher in the American League and likely in all of baseball.

He's also a key in the Rangers' offense. Rodriguez is a career .291 hitter with 79 home runs and 387 RBIs. Last year, he hit 47 doubles, 44 while he was a catcher, setting a major league record for the position. He's batting .332 with 11 home runs and 47 RBIs this season.

A workhorse, Rodriguez has played so much this year that backup Henry Mercedes has only about 30 at-bats. Shy and often reluctant to talk about himself, Rodriguez hasn't been on the disabled list since 1992.

He also has five Gold Gloves and three Silver Slugger awards under his belt.

Before Thursday's deal, it appeared Rodriguez's days in Texas were numbered. Worried fans made their opinions known by slapping "Sign Pudge" bumper stickers on their cars.

Now they can relax.

Rodriguez will now be in Arlington through at least 2002.

Young's deal extended, leaves room under cap

(AP) — A week after Brett Favre got a contract that allowed him to lay claim to being the NFL's highest-paid player, Steve Young jumped over him — at least according to the San Francisco 49ers.

Young signed a new deal with San Francisco Wednesday that will pay him $45 million over six years, presumably more than Favre's deal, reported at $47.25 million for seven years. Mark Brunell, Jacksonville's quarterback, also has a new deal: $30.5 million for six years.

Young's contract, really an extension, cleared $1.5 million in room under this season's salary cap, which the 49ers will use to sign their top draft pick, Virginia Tech quarterback Jim Druckenmiller.

"He will be with us the remainder of his playing career. I think this contract guarantees that," 49ers president Carmen Policy said.

Young, who turns 36 in October, is unlikely to see all the money in the deal. None of it is guaranteed and both Policy and Young's agent, Leigh Steinberg, said there's a strong possibility it will be restructured as early as next year, when Young is due to receive a $10 million base salary.

It also is part of what seems to be a game of one-upmanship.

Last week, after Favre signed, Dallas quarterback Troy Aikman, also a Steinberg client, joked: "Leigh will be on the phone to Jerry Jones to redo my deal; then he'll call San Francisco."

It turned out he called San Francisco first.

Young, who overcame a series of injuries last season to win his fifth passing title, took over San Francisco's starting job in 1991, when an elbow injury sidelined Joe Montana. In 1994, Young led the 49ers to their fifth Super Bowl championship.

The deal should provide the 49ers the leeway needed to come to terms with Druckenmiller, their only remaining unsigned player.

Prospect of pavilion being considered

What started out as a pregame, tailgate party may be growing up.

The Texas Tech Board of Regents is considering building a pavilion for Raider Alley festivities.

The pavilion, if approved, will be constructed on campus, near Jones Stadium and will host pregame activities, said Bill Dean, executive vice president and CEO of the Ex-Student Association. It will be available for student organizations' use as well.

"It's a project that's been discussed for several years," said Steve Locke, senior associate athletic director for development.

Dean said the proposal began developing in the fall of 1996.

"The idea was discussed at our homecoming meeting," he said.

"We wanted to build an open-air pavilion that could be used during football season home games. We would invite student spirit groups such as the Saddle Tramps to use it year-round."

Dean said, if approved, the pavilion would be built by the fall of 1998.

The architecture of the pavilion would allow for it to be sealed off and air-conditioned, Dean said.

The idea originated with Tech Regent Jim Sowell of Dallas.

Sowell was unavailable for comment.

The regents will meet Aug. 22 and vote on whether to construct the pavilion.

Skinner looks to end slump Saturday

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — When Mike Skinner won the pole for the season-opening Daytona 500, he said, "I know it's not supposed to be this easy, and I'm sure it won't be."

He was right.

Skinner, a former NASCAR Craftsman Truck Series champion, became Dale Earnhardt's full-time teammate this season with Richard Childress Racing, aiming at the rookie-of-the-year title.

Since that pole-winning effort at Daytona, little has gone right for Skinner, who nevertheless holds a substantial lead over Robby Gordon, David Green and Jeff Green in the rookie standings.

Heading into Saturday's Brickyard 400 at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, Skinner is 27th in the driver standings and has only two top-10 finishes. That certainly isn't enough to satisfy Skinner, who has raced for nearly half of his 40 years.

"We started out really good this year and were pretty successful and had some decent finishes," he said. "Then it seemed like we went in a terrible slump."

Skinner has been around racing too long to let such problems get him down for long. He and Childress have talked long and hard, and the team owner told him to make his own racing luck and not get himself in positions that force a bad finish.

"We've tried to approach this thing starting the second half with a little bit different approach," Skinner said.

"We went to Daytona (the first week of July) with that in mind and got rear-ended by another car and taken out of the race. It seemed like it wasn't going to change.

Through his struggles, rumors have been flying that Childress will replace Skinner at the end of this season.

"I try to put them aside," Skinner said of the rumors. "A lot of guys who want my ride are going to Richard and saying, 'Mike is making this rookie mistake or that rookie mistake.'"

Now Skinner is back at Indy, where last year he filled in for the injured Earnhardt, finishing 15th.

HASSLE #1: CLEANING

My Gosh! How can you live like this?
There's something green growing in your sink!

Hey, lay off! Between classes and work, I don't have time to clean!

Me neither!
But my room is cleaned
once a week!

How do you manage that?

I get weekly maid service at the U.P.! I don't have to worry about growing unwanted foliage!

That maid service thing sounds great!
Uh...could you step on that brown thing by your foot!? I think it just moved!

HASSLE #2: RESTRICTIONS

Omigosh! Look what time it is!
Visitation hours are almost over!

You have visitation hours?

Yeah, we're going to have to study someplace else!

Oh great! Well, let's go to my room at the U.P.! We don't have to worry about any dumb ol' restrictions!

Of course not! The U.P. treats me like an adult! I've outgrown the need for babysitters, haven't you?

You mean I won't get kicked out later?

HASSLE #3: RACING THE CLOCK

I can't believe I was late for my 8 o'clock class again!

I told you not to move so far away from campus! Now you have to fight traffic
AND find a parking spot!

I guess living at the U.P. means you're always on time for class huh?

Well no...but it sure makes it easier living right across the street from campus! If I oversleep, I'm only 5 minutes from class!

What? And give up that 15-minute search for a spot in commuter?
It's so enjoyable!

Uh-huh! You definitely need to get more sleep!
