The Beadmaker

Artist shares skills with students

BY LAURA HENSLEY
The University Daily

When Bernadette Fuentes first observed glass bead making five years ago at a large craft show in New Mexico, she was in awe.

From the moment she picked up one of Patricia Holand's intricately designed beads, Fuentes knew bead making was something she wanted to do for the rest of her life.

"I knew from the first day I saw it," Fuentes said.

"I picked up one of her (Holand's) beads and looked at it, and I was just like, 'You made this, you really made this.' It wasn't that I didn't believe her, but I was just in awe of her work. It was just so beautiful."

Before starting bead making, Fuentes did intensive research and read books about bead making. She continued to work full time and only made beads on the side.

Now, this self-taught bead maker tours the country demonstrating her skill and selling her work.

Fuentes has been featured twice on the cover of Lapidary Journal, a bead buyers guide, and is recognized for the exceptional quality of her beads.

"Glass is just a wonderful medium. It's very addictive," Fuentes said.

"I get tremendous satisfaction knowing I can constantly create. It's just like playing all of the time."

Fuentes said all bead makers have unique styles. She uses fine silver and 24-karat gold in many of her beads.

Fuentes creates special aquarium scene beads by mixing her own colors and combining seven layers of glass.

Fuentes uses a stationary Bethlehem torch, which heats to temperatures as high as 2,000 degrees. Glass beads are usually worked at 1,200 degrees.

Tuesday, Fuentes demonstrated her bead-making skills at the Texas Tech Museum as part of the museum's Hot Lips, Cool Glass program.

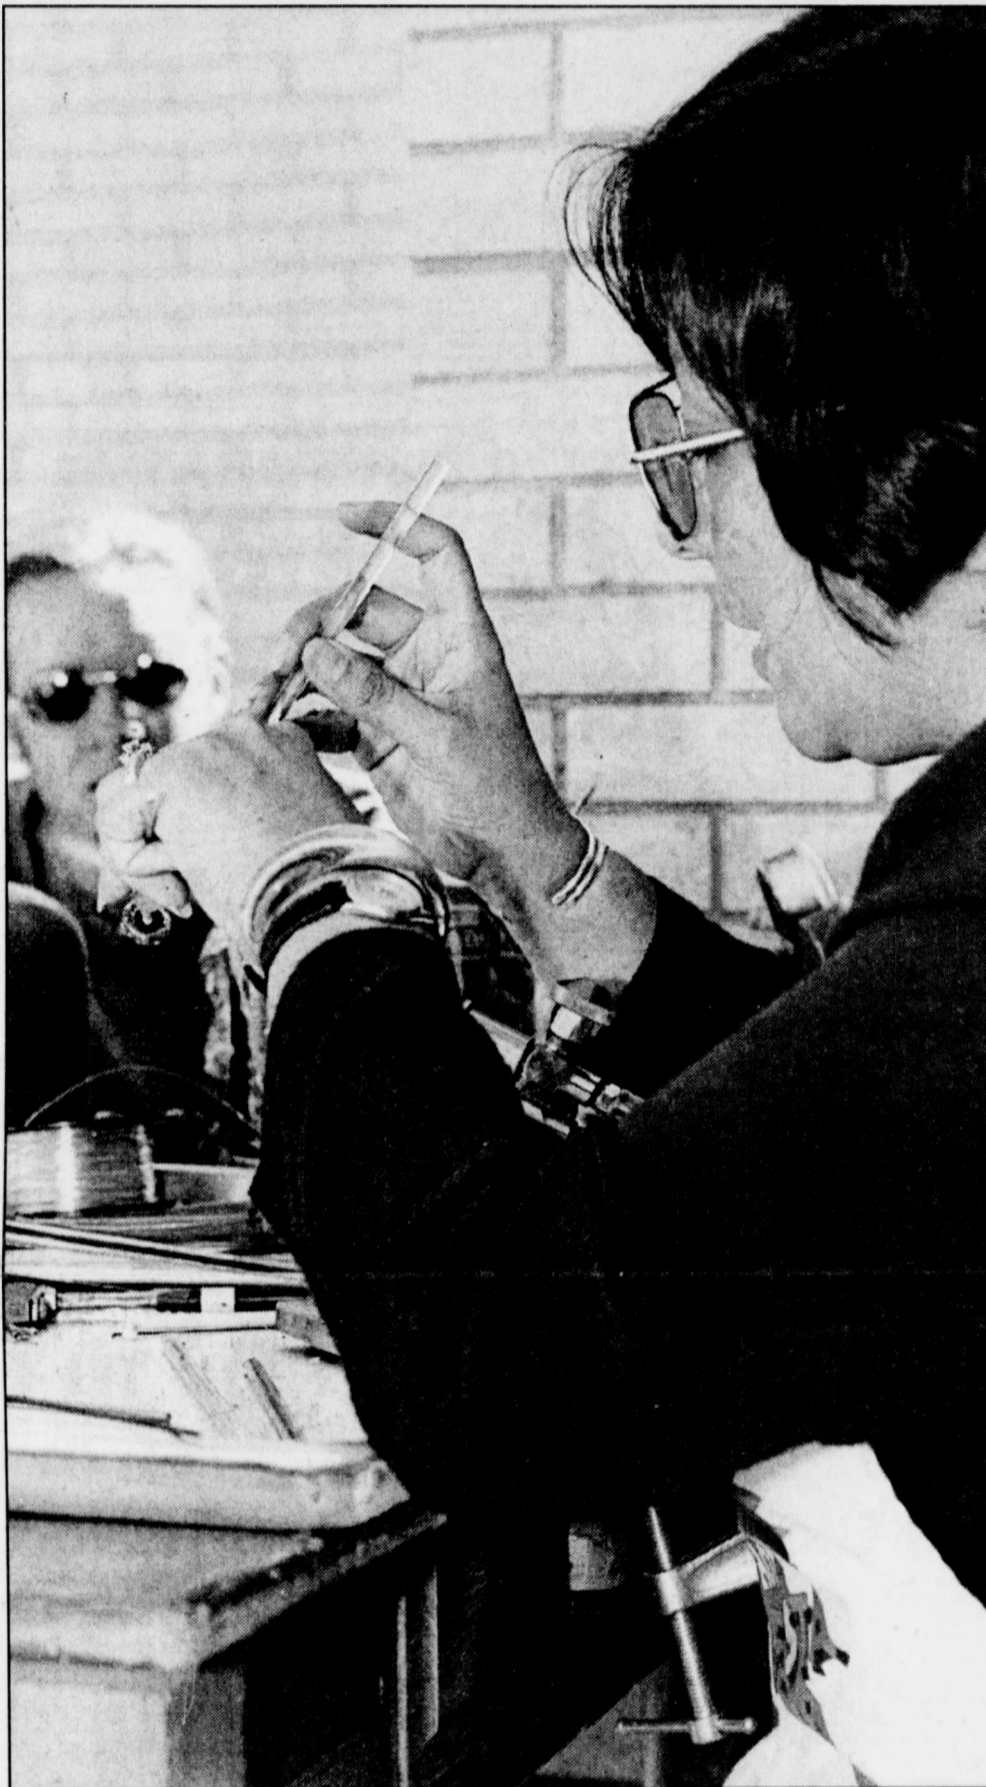

This program is also in conjunction with the Four in Glass exhibit in the FOVA (Forum for the Visual Arts) Art Gallery in the Tech art department.

"Everybody's thinking about glass," said Linda Filippone, coordinator for the glass show. "This is just a good training and educational event."

Today, Fuentes will be at the Tech art department from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. talking with students and demonstrating glass bead making.

Although Fuentes normally demonstrates to gem and mineral clubs or at museums, this is the first time she has ever spoken or demonstrated at a museum and university.

"This is something very different," she said. "I'm looking forward to meeting all of them (the students) and seeing their work and to see what they've been doing."

New signs to reduce skaters' damage

BY CAREN CARNEFIX
The University Daily

Texas Tech grounds maintenance workers began placing red and white "Skating Prohibited in this Area" signs Thursday near the University Center, business administration building and library to prevent further damages produced by skateboarders, said Dewey Shroyer, director of grounds maintenance.

"The new benches (in front of the library) are scratched up," Shroyer said. "If anyone sits on one of the benches, they may come away with aluminum splinters."

Skateboarders are responsible for damaging benches, the steps in front of the library and often put wax on surfaces near the business administration building, he said.

There are plans to place additional signs near the west side of the electrical engineering building and the science quadrangle.

Though Shroyer could not estimate the total number of signs there will be or the cost of adding them once the plan is completed, he said the cost will be less than the cost of repairing the damages.

"The cost of the signs is not anywhere near as much it will cost to repair the damage (the skateboarders) have caused," Shroyer said.

"The cost to repair one bench is $15 a foot. They tore up 20 feet of one bench."

The University Police Department officers patrolling in the evening until midnight have been notified of the signs and will be responsible for making the skateboarders aware of the prohibited areas and asking them to comply, UPD Sgt. Dan Hale said.

UPD officers will issue a warning to first offenders, he said, but repeat offenders may be referred to the Dean of Students Office if they are Tech students.

Non-Tech student skaters who are repeatedly found skating in the prohibited areas can be charged with trespassing, Hale said.

"(UPD officers) will try to be real nice and polite on first contact," he said.

"If they run into some people a second and third time, they'll have to be real professional."

Hale anticipated the signs would discourage a majority of people from skating in the prohibited areas.

"The vast majority of people, when asked to adhere to rules and regulations, do so," he said. "There are some people who it doesn't matter. They don't pay attention to the rules and regulations."

Although there is a skate park located on Brownfield Highway, skaters choose to skate on the Tech campus, said skater Ben Simon, a junior at Lubbock High School.

"We have a skate park which is all right, but it's small," Simon said.

Some popular places for skateboarding on campus are the ramps located on the east side of the chemistry building and the southeast side of the journalism building, Simon said.

Skaters often "grind" or "slide" down the rails of the ramps, he said, and putting canning or candle wax on the rails makes for a smoother ride.

Though Simon has been warned several times, he is not discouraged and plans to continue skating on campus. "I'm gonna skate there anyways," Simon said. "At least I'm not shooting up heroin or shooting up my parents."

Group challenges admission policy at Michigan

DETROIT (AP) — The organization whose lawsuit ended affirmative action at the University of Texas went after the University of Michigan on Tuesday, challenging policies that helped the school double its minority enrollment in just 10 years.

The Center for Individual Rights filed a class-action lawsuit in federal court on behalf of two white students denied admission to the highly competitive university at its Ann Arbor campus. The lawsuit claims the university's affirmative action policies discriminate against qualified whites in favor of unqualified blacks and Hispanics.

"This lawsuit should serve notice on college presidents everywhere that they will be held individually liable under federal civil rights laws if they do not act now to bring their admissions policies into compliance with the law," said center President Michael McDonald.

Michigan, one of the most selective public universities in the country, has boosted its minority enrollment over the past decade to about 25 percent of the 36,000 students at its flagship Ann Arbor campus through an aggressive diversity policy.

Students learn about using library on Internet, CD

■ Tutorial program may ease confusion

BY JASON BERNSTEIN
The University Daily

The Texas Tech Library now offers an on-line tutorial program as well as a CD-ROM tutorial program for those interested in quelling their fears of the library.

"The tutorial program is designed to give students a different approach to the typical library orientation," said Margaret McCasland, user instruction librarian and tutorial script writer.

The program includes a basic introduction to the library and information on conducting basic research, locating citations, using interlibrary loans and using the library via remote access.

Additionally, the tutorial contains valuable information on accessing periodicals and microfilm.

The web version of the program was made available to the public during the last week of August, McCasland said.

"We really want to give students an advantage as far as getting acquainted with the library on a self-taught basis," McCasland said. The web-based program and the CD-ROM version of the program will be re-issued each fall. The on-line tutorial program was reviewed by students in the Honors Program, said Danielle Roth-Johnson, assistant director of the Honors Program and Tech Transitions Corridor Class instructor.

"I think the tutorial program really takes the fear out of going to the stacks," Johnson said.

The program is beneficial to beginning users of the library and computers, McCasland said.

The program is designed for students as well as faculty members who may want to enhance their library skills.

"I think that most of the students liked the program," Johnson said.

Students in Johnson's Tech Transitions Corridor Class had a brief overview of the program.

"It really can be beneficial if the students decide to take the time to use it," said Tonya Marr, a freshman pre-communication disorders major from Plainview. "If the students are willing, the tutorial will answer a lot of questions about the library."

The on-line tutorial can be accessed via the Internet at: www.lib.ttu.edu/tutorial/default.htm

Additionally, the CD-ROM version of the tutorial is available in the library.

Boy to be sentenced for assault on girl

TEXAS CITY AP) — A 14-year-old boy was found to have "engaged in delinquent conduct" last year in the kidnapping and sexual assault of a 4-year-old girl.

Galveston County judge C.G. Dibrell III said jurors had returned with a "true" ruling against the boy in the case. Under Texas juvenile statutes, a "true" ruling is similar to a guilty verdict in adult court.

The 14-year-old could face anywhere from probation to 40 years imprisonment next week when Dibrell sentences him.

The boy and a 10-year-old were accused in June 1996 of accused of coaxing a 4-year-old girl to go with them on the premise of going to a carnival. Instead, they took her by bicycle to a parking lot outside a Texas City high school football stadium and sexually assaulted her inside an empty school bus, authorities said.

Police were called to the bus parking area after a driver saw a light go on and off in a bus, indicating that someone had opened and closed a door.

As officers approached, police said, the boys scrambled out of a bus, pulling up their pants. The victim was partially undressed and was crying, police said.

Prosecutor Bill Reed said he would ask Dibrell for harsh punishment, "because of the facts of the case and for the protection of the community."

Department names academic counselor

Texas Tech Department of Athletics has named Brian Evans as an academic counselor in efforts to strengthen student-athlete academic services.

Steve Uryasz, director of student-athlete services, said beginning Nov. 4 Evans will be responsible for the academic progress of student-athletes in the sports of men's and women's tennis and men's and women's track and field.

Evans also will coordinate Tech's student-athlete academic honors program, including the nomination of student-athletes for university, Big 12 and NCAA awards.

Uryasz said Tech athletics officials soon hope to enter the NCAA skills program, which teaches student-athletes about life beyond sports.

"The program is designed to help student-athletes get to a point where they understand obligations of life," he said. "It's to let them know there is life after sports."

Evans has served in academic advising and counseling of student-athletes at Montana State and Idaho State.

Evans is an addition to five other new or reassigned personnel within the Tech Department of Athletics.

Uryasz said he continues to monitor men's and women's basketball, but a position still is open for a football academic counselor.

Exxon asks for new trial in spill case

ANCHORAGE (AP) — Exxon has asked for a new trial in the Exxon Valdez oil spill case, saying it has information that suggests a courthouse security guard tampered with the jury that returned the $5 billion verdict against the company three years ago.

The security guard, according to Exxon, inappropriately influenced jurors by offering one of them a bullet to deal with a hold-out juror, by making inquiries about what was going on behind closed doors, by attending a picnic with jurors and by visiting a juror's home.

U.S. District Judge Russel Holland issued an order last week saying he will consider the oil company's request for a new trial.

Exxon's motion is the latest in a series seeking to overturn or reduce the verdict in the case stemming from the 1989 spill in Prince William Sound. The company has vowed to fight the jury's decision all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The court first heard the security guard allegations in June 1995 after Exxon had filed a motion for mistrial and asked the court to subpoena jurors for questioning about whether there were any incidents of jury intimidation during the 4 1/2-month trial.

One juror, Doug Graham, told the court that security guard Don Warrick stopped him one morning and asked him if the jury was still having problems with one particular juror. Then Graham said Warrick "pulled his gun out, took a bullet out and said maybe if you put her out of her misery ..."

Week educates on carbon monoxide poisoning

BY APRIL CASTRO
The University Daily

Texas Tech students renting homes in Lubbock should beware of heating hazards, fire department officials say.

As part of Carbon Monoxide Awareness Week, the Lubbock Fire Department is spending the week installing detectors in more than 83 homes.

Carbon monoxide poisoning is the leading cause of death by poisoning in America, said Marlon Hamilton, captain in the fire marshal's office.

"If you are worried and think you have problems, get with your landlord and advise them of your concerns," Hamilton said.

"If you're sick, and you think you may have been exposed to carbon monoxide, call the fire department or 911. Most importantly, get outside and get some fresh air immediately."

The city of Lubbock Community Development Department, in conjunction with the Arnett Benson Neighborhood Association, identified homeowners in the Arnett Benson area with a need for carbon monoxide detectors, Hamilton said.

Carbon monoxide is a deadly, colorless, odorless gas that joins with the body's hemoglobin in the blood and lessens the blood's ability to carry oxygen to the cells.

"You can get the symptoms and really not know what it is because they are flu-like symptoms," Hamilton said.

Hamilton said.

If you're sick, and you think you may have been exposed to carbon monoxide, call the fire department or 911. Most importantly, get ... some fresh air... ”

Marlon Hamilton, fire captain

"But if you have concerns, question it."

Carbon monoxide can be produced by cars and trucks, as well as any heat-producing equipment in the home that produces an open flame. Fire places and charcoal grills also produce carbon monoxide.

Hamilton said he expects an increase in carbon monoxide poisoning reports as winter months approach.

"I think when we have our first cold snap and get temperatures below freezing, we will see a number of this type of reports," he said.

"Improperly ventilated heating devices are the second leading cause of carbon monoxide poisoning in the country."

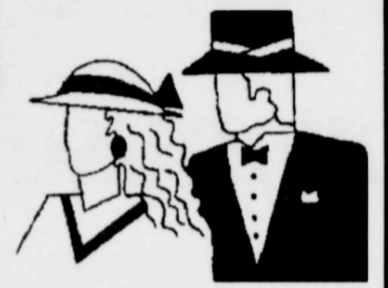

The leading cause of carbon monoxide poisoning is exposure to automobile fumes, he said.

Brad Reed, senior housing inspector at the city of Lubbock Community Development Department, said more homes probably need detectors than are receiving them this week.

"We are only installing detectors in homes based on applications from the neighborhood associations," Reed said.

"It is mostly based on income of the families in the home, not the necessity for detectors."

Communication key to life

DWAYNE MAMO/
COLUMNIST

Ah, the sweet wonders of what people say. Communication is what binds or divides us as a people oftentimes, and therefore, it becomes an important tool for our survival. Think about it, if Valley girls couldn't talk they would die, but at least we'd survive.

If it wasn't for communication, slaves wouldn't have been able to survive in the cotton and tobacco fields without their singing.

Communication is an essential tool for humanity. In fact, it is what is feared most by tyrannical, dictatorial and communistic nations. It makes sense that as time goes by there become less of these types of government and information travels through all sorts of mediums at faster and faster paces.

We now can hop on the web and chat to weird sex-crazed psychos, or even go to the weird food page and order a year's supply of squeezable pudding. Such things simply amaze me. Of course, as with anything good there are the opposing evil forces that critics prey upon. For example, child pornography on the web is quite disgusting. There's no way to protect anyone from the web, and the fact that the Spice Girls can have their own web page is the most disheartening of all.

To get off the web kick let's move to the more fundamental form of communication: verbal, where it all started. Verbal communication is wonderful — we can tell stories, spin poetry, make music with it or even get out in the free speech area and yell in people's faces about finding God lest they be damned to hell. As with the web, there are bad things inherent in verbal communication — hot air, kissing ass and those people at the "In and Out" movie a couple of weeks ago. So, what really gets me is the fact that seeing how much we've "progressed" and how far our language has come, I'm bamboozled by what people say. Here's an easy example: someone comes up to you and asks, "How are ya?"

This statement has obviously taken place of "hello" and, as a retort, they expect variations of the following: "fine and yourself?" or "partly cloudy" (only geeks say the latter, or variations thereof). However, is that what the question really asks? No.

What it's asking is "How are you?" So next time answer it, and see what people say or do. Here's a sample answer: "Oh, well, my colon is flaring up again, and my testicles are receding back into my abdomen. My mother recently died of a rare cancer in her upper bicuspid, and my father just got run over by an ambulance.

“ Take communication seriously... Wars have been started over less.”

My car got totaled yesterday when I got hit by a drunk ZZ Top dancer, and my dog fell into my lawn mower. How about yourself?"

People won't be ready for this because they don't care how you are, they just got tired of the trite statement "hello."

It goes one step further; it's also because society is slowly becoming more desensitized, but that's another column.

I work at a movie theater, and here a whole bunch of classic examples of bad communication occur. My favorite being the following: a customer will come up to the concession stand, and I'll ask them if they would care for something to drink. To which I get this response, "yeah, get me a large buttered popcorn." When did I ask about popcorn? You see, people don't know how to communicate either way — they're bad listeners and bad talkers.

Communication is an essential device and to be able to express oneself lucidly to anybody from any walk of life is probably the best skill for anyone to acquire.

All sorts of people become successes due to their prowess in speech: car salesmen, politicians, Martin Luther King Jr., and on the flip side there are those that use their skill for evil: Adolf Hitler, David Koresh and door-to-door meat salesmen.

It goes to show that the gift of speech can make people do all sorts of things: buy cars, elect people to office, stir up racial turmoil for the better, kill millions of people, follow a disillusioned leader to death or exercise your right to slam your door in people's faces.

Take communication seriously (all kinds including verbal) and pay attention to what people say and what you say.

So next time you ask "how are you?" make sure you mean it, and if you don't, hope that person hasn't read this article because you could get a really weird, sarcastic answer. Wars have been started over less.

Women should appreciate promise keepers

HOLLYE HODGES/
COLUMNIST

Leading members of my gender have absolutely lost their minds.

In their quest for the equal treatment of women, they are sending the men it took so long to come out of the cave right back in. And they are throwing men who wish to stop being pigs right back into the slop.

It seems that members of NOW, the National Organization of Women, would prefer being hit over the head and dragged by her hair into a cave by a crude, Fred Flintstone-type than being confronted by the dreaded Promise Keepers.

Those terrible men — 2 million strong — have made a commitment to take a leadership role with God and with their families — to be the dominate heads of their household.

I guess that terrible word "dominate" is sending these women into a frenzy. But the ultimate goal of these men is to better serve their wife and God. Their mission is built upon the power of God to change a human heart. I just can't make that statement push a panic button in my mind.

It doesn't make me worry that a bunch of crazed men on a power trip are planning to mobilize a force that will strip me of all the rights I've gained in the last 40 years.

Call me June Cleaver, but it sounds quite nice to me.

The movement emphasizes spiritual, moral, ethical and sexual purity for every promise-keeping male.

Members of NOW have deemed this movement as "the greatest danger to women's rights."

But where is the danger?

I guess they think those mild oafs who rape and pillage are less scary than those crazy gentlemen who strive for moral purity.

But I'll take my chances with the latter.

Promise Keepers also believe in building strong marriages and families through love, protection and biblical values.

Again I'll ask, where is the danger?

I'll take my chances with a man who is committed to loving and protecting me over someone who doesn't have any convictions on the subject.

But NOW keeps insisting there is danger.

With these "dangerous" men as heads of households where they serve their wife and children, maybe the 50 percent of American marriages that end in divorce would stay together or maybe some of the "deadbeat dads" that leave their family and are never seen again would do right by their families.

Worst case scenario would be that Promise Keeping standards would turn wife and child beaters into loving husbands and fathers.

So, where is the danger?

I guess NOW thinks morality is a danger.

That's one danger I'll be happy to face.

READERS ASK

Q If you have sex while having your period, can the guy get an infection?

A Yes, he can. Bleeding will not stop sexually transmitted diseases from being passed on. In fact, the blood may camouflage the presence of vaginal discharge, a smell or unusual lubrication that might otherwise alert a partner to a problem.

One STD in particular — trichomonas — thrives on blood so it can be growing like crazy during a woman's period.

Q Does Thompson Hall provide anonymous AIDS test? If so, how do I get one?

A Yes, we do provide free and anonymous HIV/AIDS testing. You just call 743-2848 and make an appointment. The receptionist will ask you to provide a fake name (like Mickey Mouse) in order to assure anonymity.

You come at your appointment time directly to a specific room rather than checking in with reception. After visiting with the counselor, you will have your blood drawn and will be informed when to check back for results.

Q I have felt very stressed in college because of all the reading and homework we have to do. I'm not used to all of this, and I want to know how to put all of this into my daily life so that I don't stress.

A Don't worry and stress yourself further. This is an age-old problem experienced by everyone from freshmen to PhD candidates. For those of you who are undergrads, there is a wonderful stress relieving place called the PASS Center.

In West Hall, room 214, you can use audio tapes or video tapes to enhance your skills or tutor yourself on a subject you are having trouble with. You can look at their tutor list and locate a tutor (at your own expense) to help you if a particular class is giving you fits.

You can call them at 742-3664 and make an appointment to visit one-on-one with a graduate assistant who can counsel with you to find out where you are having problems and then work to alleviate those problems. They offer one-hour sessions that teach you some great time management skills; work with you to learn really useful study skills; work on your reading comprehension so when you read you use your valuable time in the best way; teach you effective listening skills so those lectures you are sitting through make more sense; and show you how to take better notes in class.

Those sessions also can be provided one-on-one. If you find that your stress is coming more from trying to fit in or from relationship problems with family, friends, roommates or significant others, call the Counseling Center in West Hall at 742-3674. Your fees provide this valuable tool for you to sit down one-on-one with a professional who can help you sort out the stressful things in relationship side of your life so you can focus your energies on your education and success at Texas Tech.

Please don't hesitate to get yourself help from these two offices. They are here to help students, and they don't cost you anything because you paid to use them when you paid your tuition and fees.

Q What are the most common drugs found on the Tech campus?

A Alcohol and marijuana are the two most common. If you are caught with either, you may have to deal with the judicial system in Tech Housing and Dining, the Dean of Students Office judicial system relating to the Code of Student Conduct or the police. If you are caught with marijuana the legal consequence are follows: two ounces or less is a Class B misdemeanor; two to four ounces is a Class A misdemeanor; four ounces up to five pounds results in a state jail felony. Five to 50 pounds or more is a third degree felony. Any of these can result in jail time and/or a fine.

Q If birth control makes your body think it's pregnant, then if you took a pregnancy test would it come up positive?

A No, because birth control pills only prevent ovulation, and that's how they mimic pregnancy. There is a certain hormone that is present only in pregnancy, and it is detected in your blood or urine sample at the time of the test.

Q They say that any time and any amount of cocaine can kill you. I've done it many times and never seemed to have any trouble. Is this true?

A A sensitivity and/or allergy to any drug can happen at any time and with any amount.

You may have so far managed not to have a problem; however, if a sensitivity pops up to cocaine, be aware that its use constricts the heart arteries, and it can make your blood clot too much, causing a heart attack because the clotted blood can't flow through that tiny constricted artery to your heart. More than one well known celebrity has died from this.

You also cannot know the purity nor the contaminants in the cocaine you buy, so you can never be sure of what you are taking into your body. Cocaine can cause seizures, lung damage, strokes and hypothermia as well as paranoia.

Life is awfully short to play roulette with your body and health.

Keep in mind that if you continue to use cocaine, you may be jeopardizing your future career opportunities if a place you want to work requires a drug test.

Q Can you catch an STD from having sex with an animal?

A Well, I've met some people who behave like animals, some people who smell like animals and some who resemble their pets, but I get the feeling you aren't talking about the human animal.

So, the answer is yes.

An animal can give you a sexually transmitted disease, and you can give an animal a sexually transmitted disease. In fact, the herpes virus was originally passed into the human species through sex with sheep. So, don't be baaaaaad, be careful.

Those greedy humans

Everyone's out to make a buck at the expense of others

WAYNE HODGIN/
A & E EDITOR

Last weekend was Texas Tech's homecoming — the bonfire, the football game and whatnot. It sends a chill up my spine just thinking about it.

Well, not a chill, but more of a sharp pain.

I've been a loyal Techsan when it comes to football games. That's what I really look forward to every year. But this year has put a new perspective on things.

Don't get me wrong, I'm not grip-ing about the team, but about the parking situation.

I know, I know, you're thinking "not another parking complaint," but this one is different.

My friends and I usually ride to the games together.

Every home game we make the trip down University Avenue to Fourth Street, and we usually park in the parking lot across from Jones Stadium.

Every game day when we drive down University Avenue we see all these signs saying "park here — $10" or "park here — $5."

You see these people standing out in the middle of the street beckoning you to park on their store's lot. We've really been getting a kick out of them.

When we finally got in to the parking lot across from the stadium, there was not a parking place in sight. I finally found one and parked my car there.

I was so busy getting my raincoat and blankets and all, I never noticed this man standing next to my car.

I got all my stuff, locked the door and was on my way when the man said, "I'll let you park here, but you have to pay me $5."

I was thinking "You idiot. You waited for me to get out of my car with all my game paraphernalia stuffed in my arms, and now you want me to set it all down and give you five bucks?"

I don't think so. Needless to say, it made me mad. I threw all my stuff into the car, told him to get a real job and went to find another spot.

What has this world come to? It really shouldn't have surprised me, but it did.

Any other time they would have said, "You can't park here because it is reserved for customers."

Now they're saying you can park there, but to make up for the customer parking loss and possible loss in food sales, you can — for a price.

What ever happened to the decency of the common man? Did his ethics go out when Mr. Greedy set in?

Money may be tight these days, especially for college students and those few thousand unfortunate souls who have to park in places outside of the "reserved parking spots for the reserved ticket holders."

I guess it just goes to show you everyone's out to make a buck.

The University Daily

Many people speak of the damage done to the earth and the environment but astronaut Ellen Baker has seen the damage first hand.

While orbiting Earth on her three space flights, Baker noticed the incredible beauty of the planet and the damage being done to it. She shared her view on issues and a view of the Earth from space during her slide presentation and lecture Tuesday in the University Center Allen Theater.

"There is nothing you can do that can prepare you for that first look out the window," she said. "It is unbelievable."

While not doing work on the shuttle, the crew would take pictures of Earth and other spectacles in space.

"Film is pretty cheap, and we take a lot of it with us," Baker said.

The shuttle launch, considering the blast the shuttle gives, does not cause as much damage to the area surrounding the launch site as expected, she said.

"After the launch, the damage is minimal," Baker said. "Most of it is from the thrust and shock waves. There is some acid rain after the launch. Despite such a traumatic event, the damage is minimal. After two weeks, the vegetation looks normal."

The launches occur at Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

"The only thing surprising about the launch is how fast you go," Baker said. "We have a precious and beautiful planet, and we need to take care of it," she said.

Baker brought a real sense of the beauty and damage being done to the Earth during her presentation.

"I thought it was great," said Michael Lucid, president of Students for Ecological Awareness, a senior wildlife management major from Houston. "She's seen it from a distance, and she knows."

Tech volleyball travels to Waco to take on Bears

BY CHARLIE RAPIER
The University Daily

The Texas Tech volleyball team travels to Waco to play its seventh Big 12 match of the season against Baylor at 7:30 p.m. today at the Ferrell Center.

The Red Raiders enter the match with a 3-3 Big 12 and 16-4 overall record.

Tech has lost three of its last four matches after winning a match against Kansas and losing to Kansas State last weekend.

The Bears are 3-3 in the Big 12 and 13-7 overall.

Baylor enters the match splitting its last two matches.

Baylor defeated Kansas three games to none, and the Bears were blown out by Kansas State by the same score last weekend.

The Bears are led by Elisha Polk, who leads the Big 12 with 361 kills and .252 hitting percentage. Baylor's game is also helped by Kia Young with 184 kills and setter Jennifer Harris with 697 assists.

Tech coach Jeff Nelson believes the Bears are another team in the Big 12 that has played better since last season.

"Baylor is another team that has improved a lot in the Big 12," Nelson said.

"It's always tough to go down there and get a win. We can't afford to go down there and lose another match."

Polk will be tough for the Red Raiders to stop in the match, Nelson said.

"They have one outstanding player in Elisha Polk," Nelson said of the Bears.

"Currently she is leading the conference in hitting and kills per game.

She is really doing a good job which means that we will have to control her on defense."

Nelson said when the Red Raiders start off slow in a match they don't recover.

"If you look at some of the games we have lost, we started off slow," Nelson said.

"This could be because of our team being so young and having a lack of experience. Against Baylor we will try and change that by playing all the way through."

Tech assistant coach Mike Lessenger said the Baylor match is a must-win situation for the Red Raiders.

"Baylor is an improved team with a powerful outside hitter in Elisha Polk," Lessenger said. "If Polk plays well, they play well. We must win this game, and by accomplishing that, we will have to stop the outside attack."

“ One of our problem has been playing all the way through a match. If we are going to beat these guys, we need to play hard from the first serve to the last kill. ”

Tech assistant coach Mike Lessenger

One of our problems has been playing all the way through a match. If we are going to beat these guys, we need to play hard from the first serve to the last kill."

The Red Raiders are fortunate with the escalated play of junior middle blocker Sonia Moric, Nelson said.

In last weekend's matches, the junior from Tempe, Ariz., had a career-high five blocks and a .825 percentage against Kansas.

"Our No. 1 priority against Baylor is to play good defense and get our blocks and shut down the Bears' outside attack," Moric said.

"Personally, I feel I need to have a good game."

Tech will return to Lubbock Thursday to resume practice for Saturday's 7 p.m. match against Oklahoma at Lubbock Coronado High School.

Tech players optimistic about Nebraska

BY HEATH ROBINSON
The University Daily

While critics and fans around the nation see a matchup of Texas Tech at No. 2 Nebraska (5-0 overall, 2-0 Big 12) and immediately write the game off as a sure win for the Cornhuskers, members of the Tech football team view such games as the supreme challenge.

are not doing. The initial spread in Las Vegas was Nebraska by 35 points.

That doesn't sound like much respect for a Tech team looking to go to a fifth consecutive bowl game. Worse yet, television executives across the nation apparently feel Tech won't give a good enough game to televise it.

But talking to Tech players, none of that matters between the sidelines Saturday.

"These games are a lot of fun to play in," Tech defensive end Montae Reagor said.

"Believe it or not, going and playing on the road against a great team is as good as it gets. We look forward to playing teams like Nebraska."

For the Red Raiders (3-2 overall, 2-0 Big 12), games like these always present a chance to prove themselves to the doubters across the nation. Last season, Tech was in much the same situation against Nebraska, and the game was tied 10-10 at halftime in Lubbock before the Huskers ground their way to a 24-10 victory.

For Nebraska coach Tom Osborne, the Red Raiders' effort in that game still looms large.

"Outside of the two games we lost last season, Texas Tech played us as close as just about anyone else," Osborne said. "Our players remember the way they played. We're taking this game seriously."

Which is one thing the oddsmakers good week of practice and give everything we've got Saturday."

Many Tech players said the earlier trip to Tennessee, which Tech lost 52-17, will pay dividends.

According to Reagor, there is no reason for the Red Raiders to be intimidated when they step on the field.

"We've played in some really tough environments," he said. "A lot of teams beat (the other team mentally) before they get on the field. I don't think that will be the case with us."

Apparently, brash confidence is the ticket to beating Nebraska.

In last season's Big 12 Championship game, Texas defeated Nebraska, 37-27, one of only two Cornhusker losses since 1994.

Entering the game, Texas quarterback James Brown predicted that the Longhorns, 21-point underdogs, would be the team that won by three touchdowns.

Tech coach Spike Dykes said not to expect any such quotes as Brown's coming from the Red Raiders' camp.

"I don't think we're going to be predicting any big wins," Dykes said of the Red Raiders. "But that's one of the really great things about young kids. They don't listen to people telling them they can't do this or that. They just go out and play."

"We look forward to playing teams like Nebraska."

Tech defensive end Montae Reagor

"I feel kind of bad for the fans that can't watch it," freshman I-back Ricky Williams said.

"But for me and the rest of the team, we're not paying attention to the people that say we don't have a chance. We're going to have a

India wins International Olympics

Greg Henry/Rec Sports

Attack! A soccer player tries to advance the ball during Friday's International Olympic soccer match between Korea and China held on the Rec Sport's Soccer Field. Korea won the match to advance in the single elimination tournament.

Scoring points in 16 of 17 events, India easily outdistanced 11 other countries or world areas to claim the overall championship in the recently completed 20th annual International Olympics.

They also won first in the women's and men's divisions thus sweeping the top team awards.

Korea used a balanced approach to come in second place in all three divisions while China took third place.

Over 250 international students took part in the week long event that mimicked the regular Olympics.

The only event that India did not score any points in was soccer, where Bangladesh beat Korea in the finals.

India's overall point total was 335 points, 84 better than second place Korea.

H Wang from Korea bowled a score of 484 to win the individual title in that event.

W. Kank from China went undefeated in women's tennis to claim the top tennis spot.

Other winners included S. Natarajan in men's table tennis and Jimmy Lam as best sportsman for all events.

Congratulations to all 12 teams for a week of exciting Olympic competition.

Hiking Workshop

The Outdoor Shop at the Rec Center will be conducting a workshop on hiking technique tonight at 5 p.m. in room 205 of the Rec Center. There is no charge or sign up needed, as interested participants only need to come by the room tonight at the 5 p.m. hour.

Participants will learn what types of clothing and footwear to include on your hiking trips. Also, discussion will include necessary equipment, where to go, trail etiquette, safety and minimum impact on environment techniques. For additional information, please call the Outdoor Shop at 742-3351.

Rappelling Workshop

The second rappelling workshop of the semester will be held Tuesday at 6 p.m. on the upper level of the Student Rec Center. It is sponsored by the Outdoor Program and is intended for beginners who would like to earn the basics of rappelling.

Proper procedures, available equipment and safety will be discussed. Then participants will be able to rappel down the 25 foot inside wall of the Rec Center. If interested, meet on the top floor of the Rec Center north end.

First Aid and CPR CPR for the professional rescuer

This course is designed to teach additional CPR skills. Topics covered are: adult, child and infant CPR, 2-person CPR, and use of a rescue mask.

You do not have to have Community CPR to register. This class will recertify lifeguards for CPR. The cost is $30 for TTU and $35 for the community.

Session Two will be Oct. 27 and 29, Monday and Wednesday, from 6 p.m. until 10 p.m.

Community First Aid and Safety

The course provides the latest information on Standard First Aid, and adult, child and infant CPR as set by the American Red Cross. Those who pass the course will receive both a Standard First Aid and Community CPR. The cost is $25 for members of the Tech community and $35 for the general public. The first session will be Saturday, Oct. 18 from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Alcohol Awareness Week starts next week

National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week is Oct. 20-25.

Because of the high incidence of alcohol abuse on college campuses, this week is jam packed full of activities to address this issue.

On Monday and Friday, the Department of Public Safety will have a Automobile Rollover Simulator for demonstration of seatbelt use and non-use at Greek Circle and near Wiggins West Dining, respectively.

A panel discussion on drinking responsibly is Tuesday, Oct. 21 at 12:30 p.m. in the UC Matador, and Wednesday night there is a costume party with mocktails and door prizes during the Spilling Poetry Concert in the UC Ballroom at 7 p.m.

Saturday is the Fun Run/Walk co-sponsored by Texas Tech and the Texas A&M University Health Services and Recreational Sports Department.

Registration begins at 8 a.m. and the race starts at 9 a.m. at the Student Recreation Center.

Throughout the week, there will be informational tables with a device used to simulate intoxication called "Fatal Vision Goggles."

Come to the Rec Center, University Center or Student Health Services to try the goggles.

For more information or to sign up for the Fun Run/Walk, come by the Fitness/Wellness Center in the lower level of the SRC.

Want to get exercise and have a good time doing it?

Drop by and play water polo on Thursday nights from 6 p.m. until 8 p.m.

Wild backpack trip into the Grand Canyon

The Grand Canyon of northern Arizona is more than just a big hole in the ground. It is a monstrous canyon 277 miles long, over a mile deep and as much as 18 miles wide. It is full of precipices, amphitheaters, buttes, slopes, spires, and nameless shapes in red, gold, pink, green, orange rust, mauve, and a good many other colors.

Students, faculty and staff have the opportunity to experience this wonder through a sponsored backpacking trip by Recreational Sports' Outdoor Program. The trip is scheduled during the Christmas holidays January 5-10, 1998. The trip will leave Lubbock on the 5th, hike in the canyon the 6th through the 8th, hike out of the canyon the morning of the 9th and return to Lubbock either on the evening of the 9th or on the 10th.

The cost of the trip is $135 which covers transportation, all equipment and permit fees required from the National Parks. Sign ups are being taken in the Outdoor shop, room 206 of the Rec Center, every weekday afternoon. There are only 9 slots available and a $100 deposit is required so early sign ups are advised. A mandatory pre-trip meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, Nov. 18.

For additional information, please call the Outdoor Shop at 742-3351.

Recreational sports notes and briefs

Circuit Workshop

Want to learn how to use the weight equipment in the Circuit Room? Come to the Circuit Room workshop tomorrow night at 8 p.m. The cost is $1, which you can pay now or at the workshop in the Fitness/Wellness.

Indoor Soccer

The annual Natural High Indoor Soccer Tourney will be played Friday night and Saturday afternoon. Registration is being held in Room 202 of the SRC and teams are limited. Entries are due at 5 p.m. today.

"CHEERS Week"

Fun Run

National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness is a national event. Celebrate this week with a 1 or 3 mile run/walk on Saturday, Oct. 25 at 9 a.m. Registration is currently being taken in the Fitness/Wellness Center.

There is an $8 t-shirt fee or register on the morning of the race beginning at 8 a.m. at the North Entrance of the SRC.

Only 100 shirts are available so don't wait until the last moment to register.
