Court considers same-sex harassment lawsuits

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an extraordinary session of graphic talk, the Supreme Court appeared ready Wednesday to rule that a law against sex harassment applies even when the harasser and victim are the same sex.

Six of the court's nine justices criticized a ruling that barred a federal lawsuit by a Louisiana oil rig worker who said he was sexually pursued and harassed by his male supervisor.

A lower court ruled that a federal law banning on-the-job discrimination never applies to same-sex harassment, but Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist said at one point, "I don't see how we could possibly sustain the ruling."

Justices Ruth Bader Ginsburg, David H. Souter, John Paul Stevens, Antonin Scalia and Stephen G. Breyer also voiced grave doubts about ruling that the federal law, known as Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, cannot apply to same-sex harassment.

In the ornate courtroom, where arguments usually are dominated by references to legal fine points, justices spoke on Wednesday of employers who might pat their workers "on the fanny" and of the "disgusting" sexual allegations made by the oil worker. But the gender of alleged assailants and victims was irrelevant, many justices suggested.

"A Jew could discriminate against a Jew," Breyer said. "An African-American against an African-American, an Italian against an Italian."

"Why isn't it possible that a homosexual ... could discriminate?" he asked.

The highest court's decision could have enormous importance for American business. Gay rights groups are watching closely, too, though there is nothing in the court papers to indicate that the worker, his supervisor or two other alleged assailants is homosexual.

If the court should rule that same-sex harassment never violates Title VII, victims of homosexual harassment would be left without a federal remedy.

Comments and questions from Justices Anthony M. Kennedy and Sandra Day O'Connor were more difficult to categorize.

Justice Clarence Thomas, a former Equal Employment Opportunity Commission chairman whose Supreme Court confirmation hearing was marked by sensational allegations of sexual harassment, sat silently throughout the 60-minute session. He seldom comments during such sessions.

The term "harassment" does not appear in the text of Title VII but the Supreme Court ruled in 1986 that harassment amounts to discrimination if it creates a "hostile environment" in the workplace.

In subsequent rulings, the justices said a hostile environment can come about not only by overtly sexual behavior but also by "discriminatory intimidation, ridicule and insult ... sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter the conditions of the victim's employment."

Fatality increase reported

■ Higher death rate noticed near speed limit anniversary

BY APRIL CASTRO
The University Daily

The two-year anniversary of the 70 mph speed limit on Texas highways this week is accompanied with a higher mortality rate on the roads.

Although statistics for 1997 are not available yet, the chances of being killed in an accident in 1996 were 17.8 percent greater than in 1995, according to the Department of Public Safety.

A 4.8 percent increase in injuries also occurred from 1995 to 1996, according to a study released by the DPS.

Although the increased speed limit is probably a major cause of the increased number of deaths and injuries, other factors also play a large role in the numbers, said John Gonzalez, DPS safety education trooper.

"Anytime there is an increase in speed, injuries and fatalities will increase, and there is more probability that you will be killed," Gonzalez said. "It still really is too soon to say that speed is killing everybody. You have to look at many other factors."

The other factors determining the rate of death on Texas highways include the usage of seatbelts, fatigue, attitude of the driver and drinking and driving.

Whereas the death rate is up, the number of speeding citations issued in the Lubbock area have reduced significantly.

However, some drivers still push the limit when traveling, Gonzalez said.

"The people who did 70 back when it was 65, now have an attitude that they can attempt 75 and 80," he said.

"Tech students are a good example when they try to speed home. They just run as fast as they can to get home and back."

Many Texas Tech students are stopped and ticketed for speeding on the Slaton Highway, he said.

"They still think they need to run fast even though I think they've got a pretty good speed limit," he said.

One Tech student said she drives faster since the speed limit increased.

"During the day, I probably drive a little bit faster, but at night I slow down," said Lisa Jackson, a sophomore business undecided major from Austin. "I usually go about 80."

Before the speed limit increased, Jackson said she usually traveled a bit slower.

"I try to only drive 10 mph over the speed limit just because I don't want to have to pay the extra money," she said.

With the upcoming Christmas and New Year's holidays, another significant increase in the motor vehicle rate is expected due to a higher volume of traffic and an increase in alcohol usage.

'Tis the Season: Carol of Lights always has attracted Texas Tech students and local residents. The Tech tradition will begin at 7 p.m. at Memorial Circle. Members of the Tech choir will sing at the 39th annual event.

Witness describes bombing suspects

DENVER (AP) — Prosecutors hammered away Wednesday at several defense witnesses who said they saw Timothy McVeigh with others just before the Oklahoma City bombing yet admitted that their testimony differed from earlier statements to the FBI.

John Davis described for Terry Nichols' jurors the features of a man — not McVeigh — who accepted a delivery of Chinese food at a room at the Dreamland Motel in Junction City, Kan.

That room was registered to McVeigh five days before the blast.

He described the man as having unkempt, dark blond hair, and added that "his nose was not a prominent feature of his face."

But Davis acknowledged telling FBI agents he couldn't recall the features of his customers because he makes so many deliveries.

In court, Davis also identified a composite sketch of the man at the hotel which an artist drew in April 1996.

It does not match FBI sketches of John Doe 1, later identified as McVeigh, or John Doe 2, a man who two witnesses said accompanied McVeigh when he rented the truck.

Tech band director dies

James Sudduth, a Texas Tech professor and director of bands, died Wednesday morning from carcinoid syndrome of his liver.

Since arriving at Tech in 1981 from a former band director position at Southwest Texas State University, Sudduth taught arranging and conducting classes during his career in the music department.

Sudduth also directed the top symphonic band groups at Tech and composed several pieces of music.

A memorial service, featuring a band playing a score of Sudduth's musical compositions, will be at 5 p.m. Dec. 14 in the Hemmle Recital Hall in the music building.

"I think he was a very well-respected band conductor and a great student-oriented teacher," said Wayne Bailey, director of the School of Music. "It's a great loss to the students. He was very popular."

Bush seeks re-election in governor's race

■ Candidate makes education priority

BY JAMES WALKER
The University Daily

The battle for the Texas governor's seat officially began Wednesday as incumbent Gov. George W. Bush formally announced his candidacy at a campaign stop in Midland.

The stop was the first in a whirlwind six-day tour of 24 Texas cities. After leaving Midland, Bush made stops in Dallas, El Paso and Austin.

If re-elected, Bush would be the first Texas governor to win a second term since 1974, and the first ever to win a second four-year term.

He still has refused to rule out the possibility of leaving office in 2000 for a presidential run, saying only that he will do what he thinks is best for Texas.

In his speech, Bush said he was proud of the accomplishments of his first term.

He promised to continue to make education his top priority, and he emphasized reading skills for young children and tough academic standards in public schools.

Other areas Bush addressed included the need for more welfare reform, stronger penalties for juvenile crime and better job training for skilled, high-tech jobs.

Jacqueline Lukich, chairman of Texas Tech's College Republicans, said she believes Bush deserves re-election, but the College Republicans will be focusing most of their campaigning on the lieutenant governor's race.

"We really don't think there will be any problems with the Bush race," Lukich said. "I think he's done a very good job."

Speculation about Bush's presidential aspirations is not likely to hurt him in the campaign, she said.

It's still too early to count Democratic contender Garry Mauro out of the race, said congressional candidate and Tech journalism professor Mark Harmon.

Woman dies after mysterious fall

MIAMI (AP) — A woman who police believe may have fallen out of an airplane was killed after hitting a garden wall in an apartment complex.

Police have no idea who she is or exactly how she fell. Nobody saw her fall.

"We have no clue," Detective Delrish Moss said.

Residents heard a loud bang and went outside to find that a woman's body had landed on a garden wall and was ripped in half, Moss said.

Police said she could not have fallen from a nearby 20-story apartment building, the tallest structure in the area. The condition of her body indicates she fell from a much higher point, Moss said.

The woman was wearing a long black shirt and black tights and had no identification, Moss said. She was described as white with shoulder length black hair. Police estimate she was in her mid-30s to late 40s.

"Right now we're still trying to figure out where we go from here," Moss said.

"You have to put together part of the mystery before you even start a direction."

Police will try to identify the woman through her fingerprints, Moss said. They also are calling airports seeking information.

An autopsy will be performed to determine whether the woman was alive before she fell.

Tech Teaching Academy inducts 89 new members

BY JONATHON CARROLL
The University Daily

The Texas Tech Teaching Academy installed its charter class of 89 members in a ceremony at the Merket Alumni Center Wednesday.

Individualized plaques recognizing the many university-wide teaching awards were given to current active Tech faculty.

"This is the first time in our nearly 75 years that the entire campus has celebrated the outstanding teaching which Tech is so famous for," said James Brink, chair of the academy's executive council.

"It's time to give ourselves a pat on the back. Faculty need the acknowledgement which they get with the initial award, and students need to be justly proud of the care and dedication of their professors."

President Donald Haragan spoke at the ceremony.

"There is nothing more personally rewarding than teaching," Haragan said.

"But, the awards that come from within is often not enough, very often it is necessary but sometimes not sufficient.

"Recognition by one's peers can be even more gratifying, and that is what we are all about here this afternoon."

Award winning teachers and others across campus who had demonstrated a commitment to excellence in the classroom were invited to become members of the academy.

The ceremony awarded plaques to teachers who had previously received teaching awards.

The goal was to give teachers plaques that could be displayed in their offices and departments.

Awards go back to 1966 and include recognition of excellence in teaching from AMOCO, the El Paso Natural Gas Company, the Ex-Students Association, The Dads and Moms Association, Hemphill Wells and Spencer Wells awards and the President's Academic Achievement and the President's Excellence in Teaching.

In the spring of 1997, Provost John Burns recommended the formation of the academy.

The academy elected an executive council last summer.

Since its founding, the academy has co-sponsored a number of programs on good teaching.

Additionally, the academy established The Teaching Learning Technology Center.

The goal of the academy is to promote, recognize and continually improve teaching at Tech.

Greek members brighten holidays

BY CAREN CARNEFIX
The University Daily

The holidays of the less fortunate residents of the Lubbock community may be a little brighter this season thanks to the efforts of members of Texas Tech's Greek community.

Tech's Interfraternity Council and Panhellenic members encouraged fraternities and sororities to donate canned goods as part of the "U Can Share Food Drive."

IFC and Panhellenic representatives tallied the donated canned goods at 7 p.m. Monday for a final count of 20,365 pounds.

Leading the fraternities in donations of canned goods, Phi Gamma Delta and Chi Omega members donated 5,100 pounds and 3,100 pounds, respectively, said Forrest Duke, an IFC representative and a junior management information systems major from Stephenville.

IFC and Panhellenic members set a goal of 25,000 pounds and began collecting in November.

"We didn't reach our goal, but we were really pleased with what we raised," Duke said.

Members of Kappa Sigma and Chi Omega collaborated to spread Christmas cheer among children of the Children's Home of Lubbock.

Tuesday night, the children played with and opened presents from fraternity and sorority members at Discovery Zone.

The Kappa Sigs have sponsored the Christmas party for at least five years, said Logan Spence, president of Kappa Sigma and a senior agricultural communications major from Lewisville.

In recent years, about 25 children visited the Kappa Sig lodge for the Christmas festivities.

This year, Kappa Sig officials decided to invite 50 children to Discovery Zone.

"Since we were able to afford this, we decided to have more (children)," Spence said. "Honestly, I think they will have a better time at Discovery Zone. They probably won't want anything to do with us once we get there."

Participation in the party, however, will not only benefit the children, but also help to improve the sometimes-bleak image of the Greek community, Spence said.

"We're trying to improve that image," he said.

"It's important to let people realize that the Greek system is working for the community as well as building internal relationships."

Melissa Hicks, a residential counselor at the Children's Home of Lubbock, said activities help improve the children's social skills.

"The children need to be able to do things they wouldn't normally do," Hicks said. "I think it's real important for them just to get out."

"It helps anytime the kids to experience new things."

Columnist finds Thomasson good on all promises

ANDREW SCHOPPE/
COLUMNIST

Checks and balances. When the founding fathers of the United States were laying out the plans to develop a democratic government, they decided to divide governmental powers between three branches — legislative, judicial and executive. One additional check on government that was not officially outlined in the Constitution was the American press.

Approximately eight months ago, the Student Government Association conducted its annual elections here at Texas Tech. We, the students of Texas Tech, cast our ballots and ultimately elected Russell Thomasson to serve as the SGA President. With this fall semester rapidly coming to a close, now is as good a time as any to re-examine the platform that Thomasson ran on last spring to see what aspects of his platform have been fulfilled.

Thomasson's campaign was run with five main objectives in mind — continued leadership on current issues, financial aid, communication between the SGA and the students, communication between students and the administration and enhancing tradition at Tech.

The issue that drew the most attention during the spring campaign season was undoubtedly the construction of the United Spirit Arena. Thomasson vowed to ensure that promises made to the students pertaining to seating, parking and other areas would be upheld by the administration. On this issue, Thomasson has fulfilled his end of the bargain. Once the finishing touches are put on the new arena, students will still have the 3,600 seats for men's games and 2,800 seats for women's games that they originally had been promised. The originally promised seat locations also have been maintained. In the area of parking, Thomasson and others kept the contractors on schedule as all temporary lots were constructed by the Sept. 1 deadline that had been established. In addition, Thomasson has worked to impose limits on the percentage increases in ticket prices once the four-year cap on ticket prices expires.

Financial aid was another pillar that Thomasson ran his campaign on. In this area, he has some room for improvement. Thomasson's goal was to create a 10-member financial aid committee that would go through the financial aid office's system as trial students to try and spot any problems. The committee was successfully created, but in Thomasson's own words, it has not done much so far, and this may warrant greater involvement on Thomasson's part.

Thirdly, Thomasson hoped to keep the lines of communication open between the students and the SGA. The continuation of the Contact a Senator Program and the monthly SGA Spotlights published in The University Daily have kept the students informed of ongoing SGA activities. Efforts also were made to solicit greater student input via the distribution of SGA surveys during last month's registration period. This idea resulted in a 300 percent increase in the number of completed surveys received by the SGA.

The creation of the Chancellor's Roundtable has fulfilled Thomasson's fourth primary campaign promise — to improve communication between students and the administration. After finalizing the selection of members to the Chancellor's Roundtable, everything is in place to begin informing Chancellor John Montford and his fellow administrators of the students' views and concerns at the start of the spring semester.

Lastly, thanks to the inception of the first annual homecoming concert, Thomasson and the SGA have made strides to revitalize the homecoming experience and enhance school spirit. Furthermore, the SGA has helped to obtain the necessary funding required to construct a new bonfire site that will be ready by fall 1998.

In a time when elected officials often are criticized for failing to fulfill their campaign promises, Thomasson has proven to be an exception for the most part. He must still strive to ensure that his proposed Financial Aid Committee works as intended to improve the current system used to handle student financial aid matters. Yet, on all other platform issues, Thomasson has delivered the goods.

High phone price bad for all

HOLLYE HODGES/
COLUMNIST

I'm really annoyed, and I know who is at fault.

Together we can remedy all the things that annoy me.

So, let's get to work.

It costs 35 cents to make a phone call from a pay phone now.

I don't know what moron suggested this little 10-cent price hike, but it's a public relations nightmare.

Now, to have the honor of picking up a germ-infested receiver with stranger's ear-waxy build up on the earpiece will set you back a silver George Washington and what ever dead president is on the dime.

Instead of "here's a quarter call someone who cares," everything is a lot more complicated now.

"Here's a quarter and a dime...here's three dimes and a nickel...here's a quarter and two nickels."

Besides just ticking me off, this sudden change could have some life-threatening repercussions.

Think of your best friend Bubba the boozier, who always goes out and has too much to drink and gives you a ring at 2 a.m. to come pick him up.

Now, think of his inebriated confusion when a sweet, pre-recorded operator lady on the other end tells him that his call cannot be completed with his usual 25-cent deposit.

After Bubba rips the phone out of the wall, he might get behind the wheel.

Bubba loses, I lose, everyone on the road loses, but some telephone CEO somewhere just made 10 cents.

Yipee. But the good news is if you're stuck with only a quarter, there are other things you can buy with it — like air.

Air for your tires is no longer a free service from your friendly neighborhood convenience store; it'll cost you that quarter you saved when you broke the pay phone after it told you that a bank loan was required to make a phone call.

OK, so what's the point of all of this? There's not one.

But, there is a moral buried deep in both of these stories:

Everything has a price.

Always be prepared.

And — the column that you just read cost you absolutely nothing.

It's my gift to you — free.

It has most of the elements of a phone call and a lot of hot air.

So, I've given you a 60-cent value for free.

And we kept the phone man and the air man from profiting.

Merry Christmas to us.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Rieken's column gives bad name

To the Editor: I'm all for cute, funny stories in the paper, but Kristie Rieken's article discussing the No. 1 race in college football is absolutely ridiculous. I cannot believe someone who calls herself a sports reporter, as it says beneath her name, would write an article like this.

She actually said the No. 1 football team should be decided by how pretty the teams' helmets are. She is not doing anything to help open more doors for women sports reporters. This is the kind of thing that just gives more ammunition to bigots that think sports reporting should be left to the men.

I understand the article was meant to be funny, but I know all that space could be taken up by something more important. You could add national football, hockey and basketball scores for one. Even better, you could provide coverage for our rugby team. Most students don't even know we have one. You normally put out a good paper, but this article was just too ridiculous to let go.

Tech offers many different traditions

To the Editor: As a senior, I have had the opportunity to see this university change radically over the past few years.

Not only in terms of buildings and facilities, but in the quality of people who have chosen to become a part of the Tech community.

As a member of University Select, I have been given the distinct privilege and responsibility to showcase all that Texas Tech has to offer.

I also have had the opportunity to listen to a continuous out pouring of complaint, and it has gotten on my last nerve.

Tech doesn't have any tradition, the administration doesn't care, the football team intentionally lost Saturday just to spite me, etc. Sound familiar?

Allow me to briefly run some things by you — this includes alumni. First, Texas Tech is in fact a very tradition-rich school.

The problem lies not with the number of traditions, but with those ignorant or unwilling to observe them.

For starters, Memorial Circle is in fact a war memorial (please show respect by not walking on the grass), the Masked Rider, the Blarney Stone (located behind the engineering key, kissing it will give you the gift of eloquent speech), the twin bell towers, the statue of Will Rogers riding into the sunset, etc.

Being aware of the many traditions helps you to feel connected to the school and certainly more enthusiastic.

I would suggest picking up a copy of the Tech traditions book at the Merket Alumni Center.

Secondly, though the administration has, and will continue, made some questionable decisions (i.e. golf course), they are very accessible and committed to the future success of the school and its students.

The new observatory, arena, Southwest Collections and other additions and improvements should testify to this.

If you ever have question or concerns about anything, talk to them. Chancellor John Montford and President Donald Haragan are a rare breed in their desires to share their visions with students.

With that said, I feel I need to comment on the most abhorrent thing I have ever witnessed at Tech. Obviously it was the booing of the football team when K-State visited. To hear people talking afterwards, you'd think this was acceptable behavior. Even if you feel the players and/or coaches are making mistakes, booing is stupid.

Everyone makes poor decisions in life, some with greater consequences than others.

What motivates you to keep going, someone supporting you or a kick while you are down?

These athletes work very hard every day to be the very best they can be for their school, their family and themselves.

They demonstrate a level of devotion many of those booing have never known.

Next time you get an itch to boo or disparage an athlete or the team in general, take a minute to remember that someone has entrusted you with their child, brother, sister, etc.

Show the same respect and courtesy you would demand to see if someone you loved was out there performing.

It's put up or shut up time at Texas Tech. Either you are in or you are out. My thanks goes out to those whose blood, sweat and tears built this university and those whose hearts beat to secure its great future.

Aggies deserve championship title

To the Editor: It's my understanding that the Aggies own the best conference record (6-2) in the Big 12 South and that's why they "will demand the national television audience." Tech wasn't eligible for the Big 12 conference title game because they ended their regular season in a tie for second place with a 5-3 conference record. Heck, even an Aggie can figure out the math on this one.

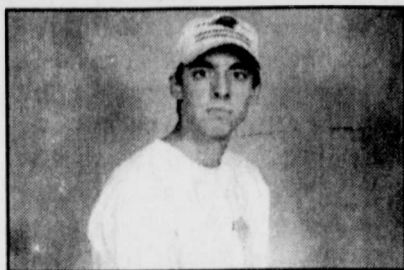

Maybe if Tech hadn't started the party a week too soon, the postseason ineligibility would have been an issue.

Perhaps the problem is that Mr. Robinson wrote this article a week too soon as well?

Pageants stem from loser contests

SEBASTIAN KITCHEN/
A&E REPORTER

Here she is ladies and gentlemen, the winner of the Miss USA South Lubbock Betterment-of-the-Cotton-Industry-for-Women-with-a-GPA-Greater-than-a-3.0 Pageant.

No matter what, there is a pageant for you to be a part of. Even in a city as small as Lubbock, there are several pageants. There is the Miss Lubbock pageant and the Miss Lubbock USA pageant.

What is the difference? Do not ask someone involved with one of the pageants the difference, they will tear your head off.

I know one has talent and the other does not. You are in the pageant where you don't have to have talent and you are going to tell people.

What a joke!

It is like the people who lose one pageant and start another one in hopes of winning. We know the winners of the contests are not the ones starting more and more contests. If you lose, get over it. There is a good reason you lost. Don't do the world a disservice by starting a contest for losers.

I could lose a pageant, despite my beautiful face and masculine features, and go and start another one, the Mr. Universe Lubbock Too Tall, Too Skinny pageant. I still would lose, but I could start one.

I hate the fact people are coming up with more and more awards to acknowledge themselves.

In sports and music, all sorts of awards are thought up to be given every year.

Sports, movies, television, advertising, Broadway and music all have their own awards. Every year, the award programs become more abundant, get longer and the quality seems to get worse.

“ I could lose a pageant, despite my beautiful face and masculine features, and go and start another one... ”

Quit!

Nobody cares but your parents, and they may not.

They could turn to the wrong television station, the wrong page in the newspaper or walk into the wrong building and see a pageant. And still, it might not be the right one.

The most beautiful women I have ever seen never entered a pageant. They obviously did not see the need to prove themselves as being better than other people.

More power to them.

Who would want to be in a pageant anyway?

You are surrounded by many women who are taught to dress like you, walk like you and eat like you. The stage is full of clones who have been told by someone else how to eat, sleep, drink, eat, workout, walk and live.

These pageants are just another sign of our society's emphasis on beauty, being better than other people and conformity.

Recorded by Texas Tech University

Team will return 16 players, hopes for strong recruits

BY CHARLIE RAPIER

The University Daily

The Texas Tech volleyball team ended the 1997 season Saturday with a loss against the Oklahoma Sooners in Norman, Okla.

The Red Raiders finished the season with a 10-10 Big 12 record and a 23-11 overall record.

Despite Tech's impressive overall record and upsetting wins against ranked teams such as Colorado, Texas A&M and South Florida, Tech did not advance to the NCAA Tournament after placing seventh in the Big 12.

The conference sent six of 12 teams to the tournament. The six teams that received bids from the NCAA are Big 12 Champions Texas, Nebraska, Texas A&M, Colorado, Kansas State and Oklahoma.

Tech coach Jeff Nelson said Tech controlled its own destiny.

"I feel like we had a good year," Nelson said. "It is disappointing with the politics in the NCAA in not being able to take more than six to the tournament from the Big 12 Conference, but I feel the outcome was in our hands, and we allowed three or four matches that we should have won get away from us. With such a young group, I think we did really well."

With seniors Brande Brown and Cristine Martin leaving, the Red Raiders will return 16 players and hope to have a good recruiting season.

"It is really awesome to return 16 quality players next season," Nelson said. "I expect next season to be better. I'm looking forward to seeing Courtney Putnam come back after showing an impressive year. Lisa Hilgers had an unbelievable year as setter, and she'll be back for her senior year. I see great things in the future from Janelle Jones and Sonia Moric and would like to see them in a starting role next season."

Even though the Red Raiders did not complete the goal of getting into the tournament, several records were broken in 1997.

This year, Brown broke the school record for most career kills and tied an NCAA record for a perfect hitting percentage when she had 10 kills in 10 attempts early in the season.

The season also saw Hilgers break the school record for the most career assists and season digs.

Putnam broke the school record for most kills in a match with 32 against Oklahoma, and she also broke the most attack attempts at 74 in the same match. Martin broke the school record for career digs and attack attempts this season.

"I'm happy for Brande, Lisa and Courtney this year," Nelson said. "They played hard and did a lot of good things for the team. I think we still have a bad taste in our mouths from the overall outcome, and hopefully now knowing what we have to do will give us the mentality for next season to come out strong."

Hilgers said the 1997 season was a good year, and she looks forward to next season.

"Overall, it was a good season," Hilgers said. "The Big 12 is a hard conference, and I think since we did not make the tournament, we have to regroup and learn from where we lacked this season. We did win a lot of games, and next season will have a lot of talent to work with."

Seven Tech volleyball players also were honored for academic excellence when the Big 12 released its All-Big 12 Academic Teams.

Receiving All-Big 12 Academic First Team honors from Tech were junior Kim Breitback from Scottsdale, Ariz., Brown from Ft. Worth, freshman Jones from Denver, Colo., and junior Natalie Rives from Houston.

Receiving All-Big 12 Academic Honorable Mention include Hilgers from Victoria, Minn., Martin from Los Angeles and Putnam from Evergreen, Colo.

Navy seniors look for win over Cadets

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — For every victory over Army, a Navy letter winner receives a star to pin on the golden N on his sweater.

The 28 seniors on Navy's football team have yet to receive one of those special stars, and defensive tackle David Viger is more than a little eager to get one.

"We're one of the only varsity teams without one," Viger said Wednesday, pointing to the unadorned letter on his sweater. "I think about it all the time. If we don't beat Army at least once, then you could say that we failed."

Navy's seniors get their final chance to defeat the Cadets Saturday at Giants Stadium. The Midshipmen (6-4) have lost five straight to Army (4-6) since 1991.

"It means a lot more this year," senior linebacker Travis Cooley said.

After struggling for the better part of a decade, Navy has come a long way over the past three years under coach Charlie Weatherbie. The Midshipmen went 9-3 last year and beat California in the Aloha Bowl, and they are already assured a second straight winning season for the first time since 1982.

But one thing is missing from the list of accomplishments. One very big item.

"From the first day you arrive and they shave your head as a freshman, everyone talks about beating Army," Viger said.

"They beat it into you: 'Beat Army. Beat Army. Beat Army.'"

Viger will be playing in the Hula Bowl and in the Blue-Gray Game, but those prestigious postseason games don't mean a thing compared to this week's grudge match.

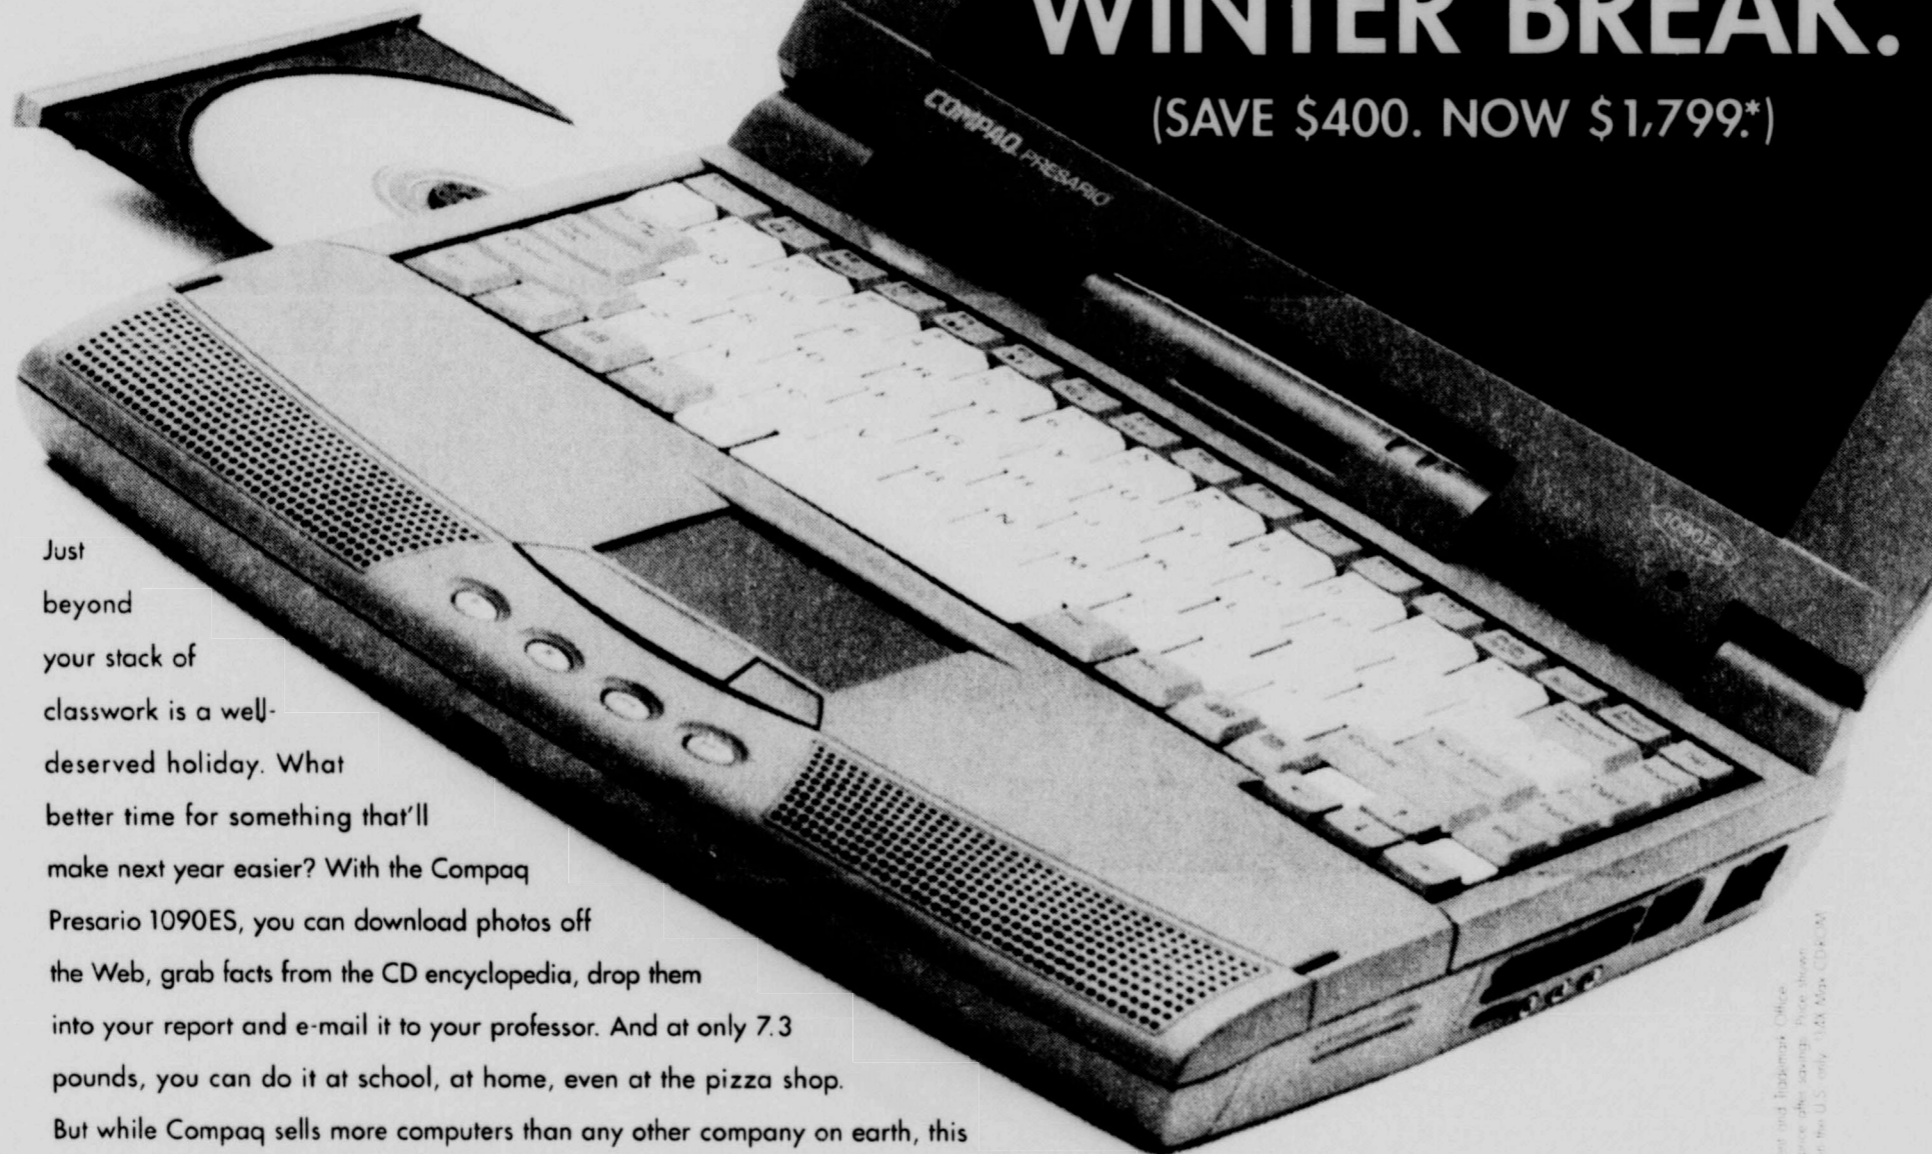

"It's our way of life against theirs," Viger said. "Winning this game is our No. 1 priority."

Tech cruises to season's first victory over Colonials

BY KRISTIE RIEKEN
The University Daily

The Texas Tech men's basketball team snapped their three-game losing streak with a convincing 80-57 win over George Washington Wednesday at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Senior guard Archie Myers saw his first action since the season opener against Texas Christian and scored 11 points.

He also had five rebounds, two blocks and two steals against the Colonials (5-2 overall).

"I just wanted to go in and help the team and be productive again in any way I could," Myers said of the contest.

"So it felt nice to be back in there." Tech (1-3 overall) coach James Dickey said he was happy with Myers performance, and that he provided the spark the Red Raiders needed from the bench.

"Archie was tremendous off of the bench for us," Dickey said. "We were glad to get him in the rotation, and he responded in a very positive way for us."

The Colonials scored first when Yegor Mescheriakov sunk a three-pointer 33 seconds into the contest. But after that, the Red Raiders took the lead and retained it for the majority of the first half going into the break leading 38-35.

Guard Cory Carr led all scorers with 25 points, including three three-point goals.

He also had two assists and two steals.

Carr said the Red Raiders really needed the win, and that the key to their victory was playing hard for the entire game.

"We were just desperate for a win, any way we could," he said.

"The guys were just ready for the game, did a great job of getting ready and played a full 40 minute game for a change."

Although the Red Raiders led at halftime, the second half is where they put the game away outscoring George Washington 42-22.

The Red Raiders improved their shooting percentage against George Washington by shooting 52 percent from the field and 72.5 percent from the free-throw line.

The Colonials had a 36.5 percent game average from the field and a 56 percent average from the free-throw line.

Sophomore guard Rayford Young was strong for Tech with 15 points and four rebounds.

Young also had four assists and three blocked shots for the Red Raiders.

Junior guard Stan Bonewitz and sophomore forward Cliff Owens scored 12 points apiece against George Washington. Owens had eight rebounds and three steals and Bonewitz had five rebounds and four assists.

Dickey said he is proud of the win but that the Colonials are coming off of a string of tough games that could have contributed to their performance tonight.

"First of all I am really proud of our team and proud of our victory," Dickey said.

"But I am sure we caught GW at the right time. I mean they have been to Hawaii and played three tough games and then flew back to Washington and then back here. So the timing was good for us."

The Red Raiders next game is set for 7 p.m. Saturday when they face Southwestern Louisiana at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Strength: Red Raider forward Cliff Owens muscles his way to the basket.
