Farm project to be unveiled

Tech works with A&M on alternative farming methods

By Melody Ragland

Texas Tech's plant and soil science department in the College of Agricultural Sciences and Natural Resources will unveil its newest research project today, at the New Deal research fa-

Vivien Allen, distinguished Thorton Professor of Forages, said the project was initially funded by the U.S. Department of Agriculture in May 1997.

The project was developed to find alternative farming methods, due to a decline of water resources in the High Plains, Allen said.

The project compares continuous production with an alternative system. The new system will graze cattle between the rotation of crops. The project is spread over 30 acres.

The objective of the project is to unveil a new approach to crop and livestock production, Allen said.

This project is using drip-irrigation to water the land.

"Few if any drip-irrigations have been used like this," Allen said.

The facility is complete except for placing cattle on the land to graze.

The facility will be a long term research project. Philip Brown, research associate, said the project has a three-year grant but could easily collect research for five years or Allen said even though the project is long term, they have already begun receiving research.

"We will measure all that goes in and all that goes out," Allen said. "We will measure each section's inputs of pesticides, equipment, labor and en-

Thirty individuals have been directly involved with the construction of this project. These individuals are from the agricultural industry, scientists and producers. Texas A&M has also had a part in building the research facilities.

Allen said the project has the best technology today.

Tech received funding when they submitted a proposal to the USDA. Tech was one of 80 proposals submitted. Allen said Tech was just one of the projects funded.

The research found will be available for producers to use, Brown said.

"This project is feasible to a producer to make it work on his farm," Brown said. "This system allows you flexibility. It will put Tech at the fore-

Brown said this project will offer producers other opportunities for economic gain.

The unveiling is at 5:30 p.m. at the New Deal research facility.

Interest rates fall in record low

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on 4.055, down from 4.505 percent in September. short-term Treasury securities fell in Tuesday's auctions to the lowest level in 4 1/2 years.

In its regular weekly auction, postponed from Monday because of the Columbus Day holiday, the treasury department sold $8 billion in threemonth bills at an average discount rate of 3.905 percent, down from 4.155 percent last week.

Another $8 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average rate of 4.090 percent, down from 4.185 percent. In a separate monthly auction, it sold $11 billion in one-year bills at an average rate of

The three-month rate was the lowest since

April 25, 1994, when the bills sold for 3.85 percent. The six-month rate was the lowest since April 11, 1994, when the average was 4.03 percent. The one-year rate was the lowest since March 3, 1994, when it averaged 4.03 percent.

The new discount rates understate the actual return to investors - 3.998 percent for threemonth bills, with a $10,000 bill selling for $9,901.30, 4.235 percent for a six-month bill selling for $9,793.20 and 4.242 percent for a one-year bill selling for $9,590.00.

Horizon Campaign chalks up two more donations

Money will be used in construction of Broadway and University Avenue entrance

By Jonathan Biles

Still working for the Horizon Campaign goal of $300 million, Chancellor John Montford received two donations Tuesday, totalling $450,000 from Don and Ted Rushing of Lubbock and Board of Regent member Jim Sowell, of Dallas.

The Rushings collectively donated $300,000 of the $450,000, and Sowell donated the remaining $150,000.

The donations will fund the construction of the Broadway and University Avenue entrance, which will be dedicated in January to W.B. Dub and Mozelle Rushing, parents of Don and Ted, Montford said.

Dub Rushing said he has been a part of Tech since the cornerstone

"Every time I tell someone I was involved in the laying of the cornerstone at Tech, they think I am lying,' Dub Rushing said. "But in actuality, I played in the South Plains Band, which was the official band for the ceremonies.'

Dub's involvement with the university continued when his two sons, Ted and Don, came to Tech in the 1960s and 1970s and met their future wives. Ted's son continued the tradition by graduating from Tech in 1996.

The donation of the money is just one way the Rushings are giving back to Tech, Don Rushing said.

'Tech has always been good to us," he said. "We have enjoyed through the years giving back to Tech what it gave to us.

Ted Rushing said simply being included in the Horizon Campaign is a great reward.

good solid business man and business family than the Rushings." Montford said.

Only the preliminary drawings have been made, however, Montford said the official drawings for the construction of the new entrance will be on the agenda for approval during the November Board of Regents

The two donations will be attributed to the current Horizon Campaign funds to total $208,786,172.

Donations received this semester:

Phil and Victoria Price - $1 million to the School of Mass Communications Mary Joe Hamilton (in memory of Carl H. Gelin) - $500,000 to the graduate school

John Ferris - $1.5 million to the College of Business Administration

Program provides students with extra help

By Amy Bishop

Many students preparing to be teachers also are preparing for the test that will determine their certification to be able to teach — the ExCET exam.

This Saturday, students will take the ExCET exam, which is an exam they must pass in order to be certified as a teacher, said Peggy Johnson, acting associate dean of undergraduate studies in the College of Education. 'This test is long and definitely something for our students to take seriously," Johnson said.

The students are well prepared for this test, Johnson said.

The courses the students take help them and so do the field experiences which they participate in during the year, Johnson said ..

We feel the programs they are in prepares them very well," Johnson said. We do not emphasize a massive test preparation, but we do focus on teachers.

A new program has been put together to help students to score higher on this ExCET exam.

The program is called the ExCET

The ExCET Master was designed and marketed by Art Williams, who designed the program due to the struggle he faced when taking the ExCET exam.

"I went back to school to pursue the dream I have always had - be-preparing them to be excellent ing a teacher," Williams said. "When antee if not satisfied with the prod-I took the ExCET exam I thought I was prepared because I had always made straight A's in my classes, but I failed the exam."

> He designed this program which consists of a one hour video, 120 flash cards and a small booklet you can take anywhere to study.

> After using his own method of preparing, he went to re-take the exam and passed with a 91.

"The program has been very successful and has a money back guaruct. I update the program every year so that it is revised accordingly with the exam questions," Williams said.

The students here on Tech campus have done really well on the previous ExCET exams, Johnson said.

"We have a 99 percent cumulative passing rate here at Tech. We have never used any outside programs to prepare our students, but we do publicize anything that we find out about that will help them," Johnson said.

Texas Tech's Ranch Horse Center will sell six, five or sixmonth-old working ranch horses at the 24th Annual Bull and Quarter Horse Sale, The sale will be today at the R.A. Brown Ranch. This is the second year Tech has been invited to the ranch sale.

"It's a prestigious sale," said Heidi Brady, director of the Ranch Horse Program.

The action, after the justices struck down as unconstitutional a similar measure in Colorado in 1996, will likely create confusion over government policies on gay rights. Unlike the earlier ruling, Tuesday's action set no national precedent, but it caused outrage just the same.

The voter-approved measure bans policies or ordinances that give homosexuals claims for legal protection from discrimination - in housing, employment or otherwise based on their sexual orientation. It also bars "any claim of minority or protected status, quota preference or other preferential treatment."

In rejecting a challenge to that amendment, Gerhardstein said, the highest court has let Cincinnati "remain as the only community in America where discrimination charter provision, ruling that it sels against granting (review)." against gay people is institutionalized in the city charter.'

Gay-rights advocates won a dramatic victory two years ago when the Supreme Court threw out a Colorado state constitutional amendment that forbade state and local laws protecting homosexuals from discrimination.

The amendment unlawfully singled out gays and sought to "make them unequal to everyone else," the court ruled then.

What causes bad breath?

Chronic halitosis is caused most often by an infection of the gums. It also can stem from a multitude of sources ranging from something as simple as food particles lodged between the teeth to more serious conditions like respiratory or gastrointestinal disease. Other contributing factors include smoking, alcoholic drinks, garlic and onions. Unfortunately, mints and mouthwashes only will temporarily quell the problem. If you practice good dental hygiene and still have chronic bad breath, consult your dentist to make sure periodontal disease is not the problem. And if it's not, see a physician to eliminate the possibility of lung or gastric disorders.

Is it too early to get a flu

Doctors advise those interested in getting flu shots to do so in October or early November. You can get your flu shot at Student Health in Thompson Hall. Call 743-2848 for an appointment. The cost is $7.

I seem to blush for no reason and my face may stay red for more than an hour or more. What causes this?

You may have a reaction pattern called "rosacea." The blushing results from the dilation of tiny blood vessels in the skin, especially around the nose, cheeks and ears. The dilation often is a reaction to internal triggers such as excitement and certain foods or to external triggers such as exposure to sunlight or extremes of heat or cold. Though both sexes are vulnerable, women more than 30 are more likely to develop the condition.

My roommate says her mother told her that women should douche at least once a week. I had never even heard of douching, much less that I ought to be doing it every week. Is her mother right?

Douching - the act of directing a jet or column of water against a part or into a cavity of the body — used to be recommended years ago. It was discovered, however, douching might increase the risk of pelvic inflammatory disease and other infections by spreading germs to the upper reaches of the uterus and fallopian tubes. It is no longer recommended. Why not suggest your roommate visit her health care provider to get advice on what her mom told her. That way she is more likely to believe this information and you will not be the cause of a problem with her and her mom.

Can soft drinks make your bones soft?

Soft drink contain significant amounts of phosphorus, and a diet high in phosphorus and low in calcium can put you at risk for osteoporosis. It also can upset your body's calcium balance causing calcium to be lost in the urine. This might eventually weaken your bones. It's hard to say how many cola drinks causes the weakening to occur, but you should take your intake of calcium and vitamin D into account. Try to limit cola to two cans a day and include milk in your diet.

I've read so much about cancer, and I'm worried about it. How can I tell if have cancer?

cancer have greatly improved during the past decade because of more sophisticated treatment programs and earlier disease detection. There are seven warning signs: a change in bowel or bladder habits; a sore that does not heal; indigestion or difficult in swallowing; thickening or lumpiness in the breast or elsewhere; unusual bleeding or discharge; nagging cough or hoarseness; and obvious changes in a wart or

Can you get a sexually transmitted disease from a person by kissing them?

As one of the doctors said here at Student Health, "Depends on what you kiss." I am going to provide an answer to your question in a very narrow interpretation. If you have strictly a mouth-to-mouth kiss, you can get two types of STDs: 1.) Herpes, which is an untreatable lifelong STD that shows up initially as single or multiple blisters that can rupture leaving extremely painful shallow ulcers and 2.) Hepatitis B, which also is an untreatable lifelong STD that can include symptoms common to all hepatitis diseases. The only case I have ever found where HIV was transmitted by a kiss occurred when both kissers had bleeding in their mouths and there was literally and exchange of blood in the kiss. > Can you tell me about the morning after pill?

The morning after pill in the United States is called "an emergency contraceptive" and is a massive dose of estrogen and progestin. You must begin taking the pills within 72 hours after unprotected intercourse. The dose does not prevent ovulation but changes the uterine lining to prevent implantation of an ovum (fertilized egg). One reason this is not sold over-thecounter is because the patient's medical history, needs and history of unprotected sex must be taken into account. You may have nausea as one of the side effects. The FDA recently has approved the use of the product as an emergency contraceptive. Call your health care provider if you have questions.

the only writing on the walls of their small town Columnist rest room stalls is "NWO Rules," but should America also be concerned about the effects of the promotion and the hype of wrestling will have on America's youth in how they view violence?

For those of you who have no idea what I am talking about, first of all be glad. Wrestling or "wrastling" as it is sometimes called, has gone to new heights in recent years, all as a result of the way it is promoted through violence.

Now, I do believe wrestling can be a sport, especially as part of a high school or college athletic program. I used to have a lot more respect for this "professional wrestling," and I even used to watch those Hulk Hogan cartoons that could be seen on Saturday morning television years ago. However, in recent years, the professional wrestling image has gone bad.

NWO stands for New World Order, and there are two groups — the red and black and the white and black. These two groups or gangs, in my view, spend most of the night of each wrestling event, talking trash to each other and using violent methods against their opposing gang. Sure a lot of people would say this is all staged and it is only television, but it has gone farther than just something on TV. Everyday, more and more children are wearing NWO shirts with statements about violence and hate being good and acceptable behavior.

It is unfortunate children, who do not even know the full consequences of violent behavior, are being allowed to hear and subjected to messages that violence has power.

These children are looking toward the professional wrestlers as heroes, and naturally actions will be mimicked. Once actions are repeatedly copied, they will become part of a personality. Ever heard the saying you reap what you sow, and that you sow an action you reap a habit?

Although I do not think it is even appropriate for adults to support this type of showmanship, at least they hopefully are old enough to know that violent behavior is unacceptable. Many children, unfortunately, have not been taught violence is bad, and if they learn it is OK first, then America could be in for some difficult societal problems.

Employees, customers should work together ne thing that sets American businesses not tipping delivery order drivers. People apart from any other is their idea of customer satisfaction. As people involved in business, we are told the customer is No. 1, and we have the power to make the customer happy. After all, happy customers equals more business.

Dwayne Mamo

Columnist

Well, I would have to say this is taken to the extreme when salespeople constantly interfere with your thoughts, conversations and decisions. At a restaurant when the waiter/waitress asks for the fifth time how your food tastes . . . in the last minute, that's a little abusive. Not to mention the fact that apparently all of them have gone to a special academy that trains them to interrupt you right in the middle of chewing — that way you cannot answer effectively and truthfully.

On the other hand, there is the non-American extreme where one could go in a store, look around, buy something and leave without even having spoken a word to the clerk or the store owner no less. Coupled with this, you could even go into the store, and it would be totally uninhabited. The clerks could be outside smoking, washing their cars, in the back doing something important, who knows.

Both of these extremes are equally as unfortunate. Some balance needs to come into place, however that is not the point. The most unfortunate and truly despicable extreme is that of the customer and their apparent interpretation of "customer satisfaction is our No. 1 goal" into "let me rape you, take your money, steal your wife, kill your kids and overrun the business.'

To be clear, my standpoint is this: I have no problem with customer satisfaction, and I would do anything within my managerial power to make the customer feel better about their moviegoing experience, and as of yet I have not received any bad customers and outrageous complaints/reparations. However, we all know people who have had to face some interesting situations.

Let's start with something of minor offensive, these drivers are doing you a favor by bringing you food while you're sitting on your ever-expanding, lazy butt. Give the brother a break, and tip them. That's not as bad though as what some of my friends have done:

1) they'll call a fast food establishment and say they just went through the drive-thru and a wrong order was given, so in total customer satisfaction compliance, the manager tells them to come by the store for the correct order, while keeping the wrong one for the inconvenience. Here's the catch, they never even went through the drive-thru.

2) one time, a friend of mine got the wrong drink order and raised a whole uproar about the incident and wouldn't settle for anything less than everybody getting a free meal, for starters the place was an expensive establishment and secondly, it wasn't even an alcoholic drink, it was simply Dr Pepper.

We could all fill this in with horrendous stories of cheap, boring, have-nothing-better-todo-with-their-life-than-make-our-lives-hell customers that expect you to not only rectify the problem but give them sexual favors as well. They ask for the world and everything out of your reach for something as simple as bringing you queso when you wanted salsa. That's the thing though, they request more than what the business could possibly do, like painting their house because you were all out of chocolate squeezable pudding. This is where the extreme fits in, the fact that customers know they can get away with it because we need to keep happy customers who keep coming and tell their friends. We have no choice but to do so, and, of course, there are those who take advantage of the system. Please do not be one of these people, it does not bother me much because I realize most customers' complaints have to deal with other things in their life and they take it out on us.

But it is quite embarrassing if your friends do it and people who get minimum wage (give or take a little) do not deserve that treatment and getting reamed over unreasonable demands due to common mistakes is not in their job descrip-

Celebration Week remains as historical educator on city's past

By Laura Hensley Staff Writer

Ithough the city of Lubbock is often considered a mod ern town that has only been around for a little more than a century, Lubbock Lake Landmark has discovered people inhabited this area 12,000 years ago.

ing its eighth annual Celebration acre National Historical and State Week with daily demonstrations, lectures and tours of the site.

The Landmark's museum educator, Susan Shore said the site is edulittle-known asset of Lubbock, and this week is designed to educate the public about the landmark.

"Many people don't know that we are out here," Shore said. "We aren't discovering pyramids or anything here. It's not that spectacular to look at from the outside, but once you take a look and find out what it's all about, it is really a fascinating place."

In celebration of the sites' existence, Lubbock Lake Landmark is observ-Archeological Landmark located on the northwest outskirts of town at north Indiana Avenue and Loop 289. The site was discovered in 1936, but cational as well as an interesting it was not until 1990 that educational facilities were built. Now, the site includes exhibit galleries containing different displays throughout the year, the Robert A. Shore said the remains of these ancient people are interesting and is something everyone should experience at the landmark.

This year's theme for the Celebration Week is "Lifelines, Life Stories" and focuses on the tradition of passing history from one generation to the next by word of mouth and through visual arts.

Many drop-in workshops and activities will be set up for people to enjoy, including pottery reconstruction, beadwork, basket making, flintknapping.

Guided tours also will be available this weekend at every hour on the hour from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m. and from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday.

A tour conducted in Spanish will be at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Sundays tours will be at 1:15 p.m., 2 p.m., 2:30 p.m., 3:15 p.m. and in Spanish at 3 p.m.

"This is a really good way to learn about history and culture in a very tangible way," Shore said.

"It goes beyond what you can read in a book. We can actually show what life was like.'

A series of lectures also will be presented this weekend.

A presentation on "Borderlands: Culture and Tradition" will be at 2 p.m. Saturday.

Norma Cantu will speak and share her knowledge about the ways of life of Chicano Americans.

Frederick Rathjen also will talk on "The Texas Panhandle Frontier" at 2 p.m. Sunday. All programs will be in the Interpretive Center at the land-

'Baltimore Waltz' kicks-off Tech's mainstage season

By John Davis Staff Writer

The Texas Tech Department of Theatre and Dance will open their mainstage season with "The Baltimore Waltz," by Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright, Paula Vogel.

This show also kicks off the department's new policy of sneak-peek seating.

The night before the production, Mainstage shows are open to the public and students with a valid Tech ID card can see the show for free.

Students also can bring one guest for $5, half the price of general admission to the sneak-peek. Seating will begin at 8 p.m. today.

"(The play is) a valentine that Paula Vogel wrote for her brother who died of AIDS," said Linda Donahue, director of the show.

"He asked her to go on a trip to Europe, and she couldn't go.

Two years later, he died of AIDS." Donahue said the show is not too weighty and serious but deals with the topic in a bitter-sweet fashion. "I'm calling it a comedydrama," she said.

"It's about a woman who has a disease - Acquired Toilet Disease - which is a disease of single female elementary school teachers. The word, AIDS, is never mentioned in the show."

"Baltimore Waltz" will run from Oct. 15 through 18.

Show times are 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday.

There is also a 2 p.m. Sunday matinee. Student rush will still be going on during the run.

Nebraska running attack suffering

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) -Running away from the run won't happen at Nebraska.

Even though Cornhuskers totaled a meager 214 yards on the ground in their last two games, coach Frank Solich says he's not about to panic and start pass-

"We are not about to abandon the ground game," Solich said as the Huskers (5-1) prepared for Saturday's game against Kansas (2-4).

"We will continue to work at getting better on the ground game and try to develop our power game a little bit more."

On Sept. 26, all was right at Nebraska after the Huskers ran for 434 yards in a 55-7 rout of Washington. The next week, in a 24-17 win over Oklahoma State, the ground game was held to 73 yards. And last week, in a 28-21 loss to Texas A&M, Nebraska had 141 yards rush-

Not exactly heady numbers for a team that's synonymous with the run and one that led the nation in rushing last year with 392.6 yards per game. If there's a silver lining for Nebraska, the Kansas defense ranks last in the Big 12 against the run, allowing 219 yards per

But as is typical in Lincoln, the Huskers — averaging 237.8 rushing yards per game — are concerned more with themselves than their opponent.

Center Josh Heskew said Nebraska lacked focus the last two weeks.

Tech spikers set to resume winning ways

The Red Raider volleyball team will try to get back into the win column against Baylor at 7:30 p.m. today in Waco.

After dropping their last two matches to conference foes Nebraska and Colorado, Texas Tech will try and get another conference win against the Bears.

Baylor is 7-10 on the season and 1-5 overall in Big 12 action.

right now," said head coach Jeff

"They started off early doing very well but they've struggled. They've played the same schedule that we have, so they have played tough teams.

This will be the 45th meeting between the two teams with Tech owning a 40-4 lead in the series including a season sweep of the Bears last

"The key for us will be to play well on our side of the net," Nelson said.

"We're not going to spend a lot of time focusing on Baylor. We're going to focus on playing better and competing harder on our side of the net." The Red Raiders are coming off a home stand in which they lost to Nebraska and Colorado and were out-blocked by the Cornhuskers 16-5.5. Tech will need to improve on their blocking for the Baylor match, senior setter Lisa Hilgers said.

"We passed well this weekend but we're going to have to serve a lot tougher," Hilgers said.

The Red Raiders have never lost to Baylor in Big 12 action and currently hold an 8-game winning streak against the Bears leading back to "Baylor's a good team and it is going to be a good match," Hilgers said.

Important Information for Students! TechSIS Implementation

In an ongoing effort to improve service for our students, faculty, and staff, a new student records system (TechSIS) is being installed. The new system will be faster and more powerful than the one presently in use and will allow the University to introduce new services such as telephone and web registration by the summer of 1999. Other student services to follow will include the use of the web to check grades and a web-based degree audit system.

The installation process will begin during the month of October and is scheduled to conclude by early November. We want to assure you that the installation process has been planned to minimally affect any administrative or student services you may use during the conversion period.

If you have any questions about TechSIS, please feel free to contact Ms. Linda Ricks at 742-2907.
