Cox drops out of House speaker race

By Apu Naik
 Staff Writer

While the resignation of Newt Gingrich as speaker of the House on Friday left Republicans in Washington shocked and eager to find a new replacement, local Republicans seemed optimistic about any candidate for the office.

Rep. Bob Livingston, R-La., received a huge push for the job last night when Rep. Christopher Cox, D-Calif., withdrew his eligibility for the position.

Marc McDougal, chairman of the Lubbock County Republicans, said Friday's announcement came to him as a surprise, but he had no doubt the party would select a qualified replacement.

"I was shocked when I heard the news, especially since he hadn't left any indication prior to Friday," McDougal said. "But I have a lot of confidence that (the Republican Party) will select a qualified new speaker."

The resignation came after the Republican party's poor showing during the Nov. 3 elections, in which the party lost five seats in the house to the Democrats, leaving a trail of rumors the Republicans would seek a new speaker to replace Gingrich.

Gingrich, who told the Associated Press Friday he would rather leave Congress than "allow the party to cannibalize itself," left the position of speaker open for at least two top contenders.

Cox dropped out of the race late Monday evening, leaving the position open for Livingston, who is the perceived front-runner for the position because of seniority in the house.

Christine Rosenthal, chairwoman of the College Republicans of Tech, said the loss of Gingrich was a disappointment, but it is now time to look to the future.

"Obviously, I was surprised to hear of his resignation because he was a great leader and he has done so much for the Republican party during his time as the speaker," Rosenthal said. "But I don't see this as something detrimental to the party because there are many other qualified Republicans who can take Gingrich's position with equal success."

Talks of a new speaker continued Monday, as a subcommittee hearing on the impeachment for President Clinton was presented, in which the House Judiciary Committee was to determine whether to pass the hearing. In the case they did pass the hearing, the Senate would need enough votes to pass it to the House.

But some Republicans are now saying the strong support for impeachment within the House, which was present in the past may no longer be a reality because of the resignation of Gingrich coupled with the disapproval of the American public.

"I think the conventional wisdom is that those things (Gingrich's resignation and public disapproval) will change the whole surface of the impeachment hearings," Tim Lambert, Republican National Committee spokesman for Texas, said. "As for the resignation of Gingrich, I was surprised but not disappointed. What I have been disappointed with is the leadership the party has shown over the past two years."

Lambert said Republicans in Washington need to decide what they stand for and stick to those ideals rather than change their minds as times change.

Search for carrier crew continues

One dead, two injured, three missing in crash

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Navy teams searched the coast off Virginia on Monday for three fliers missing after a deadly nighttime crash on the deck of an aircraft carrier.

A Navy EA-6B Prowler whose crew was practicing landings on the USS Enterprise struck an S-3 Viking aircraft sitting on the deck Sunday night. One of the six crew members who ejected from the two planes was killed.

The two crew members of the Viking were slightly injured.

As for the three others, "there's always a glimmer of hope, but as time progresses, it gets less and less likely that we'll find them alive," said Cmdr. Roxie Merritt, a Navy spokeswoman in Norfolk.

“As time progresses, it gets less and less likely that we'll find them alive.”

Cmdr. Roxie Merritt
 Navy spokeswoman

The cause of the accident was under investigation.

The ocean temperature in the search area about 120 miles off the coast was 58 to 62 degrees Monday. Exposure to that temperature for more than a couple of hours can cause hypothermia.

Each crew member wore a survival vest that inflates automatically when it hits the water.

The vest includes dye markers, an electronic beacon to guide searchers, a flashlight and a radio. Each ejection seat also contains a raft that inflates automatically when it hits the water.

The Viking also was participating in night flight operations, but Ms. Merritt did not know whether it had just landed or was waiting to take off. The Viking caught fire but the blaze was put out within minutes, Ms. Merritt said.

The Prowler went over the edge of the deck, and the four Prowler crew members apparently landed in the sea after they ejected, Merritt said. The body of one was recovered.

The victims' identities were withheld while their relatives were notified.

The Viking is an anti-submarine warfare aircraft. The Prowler's job is radar-jamming.

Catholic school evacuated after anthrax scare

Threat came in envelope postmarked Fort Worth

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Letters claiming to contain anthrax bacteria were opened Monday at a Catholic parish here and the Chicago headquarters of an anti-abortion group, prompting the evacuation of the parish school just 10 days after a similar threat cleared a local abortion clinic.

It was not immediately clear if the letters contained the deadly bacteria, but 481 elementary students and teachers at St. Matthew Catholic Church were evacuated and six administrators were scrubbed down with soap and water and given antibiotics, authorities said.

They were present in an office when someone opened an envelope with a note saying, "You have been exposed to anthrax," the Catholic Archdiocese of Indianapolis said in a news release. Spokesman Bill Bruns said he was unsure when the school would reopen.

"I'm not sure what the threat was but we immediately removed the children, and none of them are in danger," said Lt. Greg Hess of the Washington Township Fire Department.

In Chicago, two FBI agents were sent to the offices of the Pro-Life Action League to investigate a letter claiming to contain anthrax, executive director Joseph Scheidler said. The FBI in Chicago had no comment, according to a woman who answered the phone Monday evening.

The group's office was not evacuated and none of the seven people there was taken to the hospital, Scheidler said.

The threat came in a standard envelope postmarked Fort Worth, Texas, Scheidler said, and read, "You have just been exposed to anthrax Strain 8490, (VNTR)3."

"We have to take this seriously. We have no way of knowing if it is a crank or someone who is serious about attacking pro-life activists," Scheidler said.

The two letters arrived 10 days after similar threats were received at eight abortion clinics in four states, including one in Indianapolis where 31 people were decontaminated and treated with antibiotics as a precaution. In those cases the letters did not contain anthrax, authorities said.

Indianapolis FBI spokesman Doug Garrison said it was possible a copycat was playing on fears from the previous incident. The bureau is investigating.

"That's always a concern," Garrison said. The white envelope with a Texas postmark and no return address was delivered to St. Matthew about 12:30 p.m. and opened shortly afterward, said P.J. Farmer, a U.S. Postal Service inspector.

Iraq flexible on weapons crisis

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — An Irish envoy said Monday that Iraq is "very flexible" in seeking a solution to the impasse over weapons inspections and urged dialogue, not military action.

Former Irish Prime Minister Albert Reynolds, who helped lay the groundwork for the Northern Ireland peace accord, said he believed Iraq had met 80 percent of U.N. demands on eliminating its weapons of mass destruction.

"That remaining 20 percent, in my view, does not justify a strike or a return to conflict," Reynolds said, speaking at the end of a three-day visit.

Late last month, Iraq stopped cooperating with U.N. weapons inspectors, saying they would not be allowed to work until the U.N. Security Council moves to lift sanctions imposed because of Iraq's 1990 invasion of Kuwait.

The United States and Britain have threatened a military strike to force Iraq to reverse the decision.

British Defense Secretary George Robertson warned during a visit to Kuwait on Monday that the patience of the international community was "draining away."

President Clinton met Sunday with his top security advisers but put off a decision on whether to use force against Iraq.

Reynolds said that he would travel to the United States on Thursday for discussions with U.S. politicians.

"We believe that with good will on both sides, that a compromise could be worked out," he said.

Tam Dalyell, a British member of parliament from Scotland who accompanied Reynolds, said he would speak with British leaders.

The visit by Reynolds and Dalyell was reminiscent of the crisis with Iraq early this year when politicians from Russia, Turkey and several Arab states showed up in Baghdad to press for a diplomatic solution.

During that confrontation — over Iraq's refusal to allow arms inspectors into presidential palaces — the United States and Britain also threatened to use force. But U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan defused the crisis by pledging to work toward lifting the sanctions.

Also Monday, Hans von Sponeck, a German national, arrived in Baghdad to take over as head of U.N. humanitarian operations in Iraq. He replaces Irishman Denis Halliday, who left in September after bitterly criticizing the sanctions for devastating the Iraqi economy.

The humanitarian office oversees the U.N. oil-for-food program, an exemption from the sanctions that allows Iraq to sell limited quantities of oil to buy needed food and medicine for its 22 million people.

Tech student found dead

By Melody Ragland
 Staff Writer

A Texas Tech student was found dead Saturday morning in his garage.

Michael David Runci, 20, was pronounced dead around 3 a.m. after being found by his roommate in Lubbock, said Bill Morgan, Lubbock Police Department's public information officer.

The cause of death is unknown because the autopsy has not yet been performed, Morgan said. No foul play was involved, said Ryan Smith, an alumnus of Tech and Kappa Sigma fraternity.

Runci, a sophomore finance major from Dallas, was a member of Kappa Sigma and enjoyed playing soccer.

"He was a paragon of a friend," said Gray Williams, a junior business major from Murphy. "He left no bad memories. He'll be missed even though he's with us."

Blake Smith, a junior finance major from Richardson, said Runci had an incredible personality. "He was the best friend I ever had," said Jeff Potter, a junior sociology major from Richardson.

Runci was known as a wonderful and funny friend, said Todd Berger, a junior finance major from Dallas, he had the biggest heart.

Runci's mother, Jennifer, said he was a good student and loved his friends and fraternity brothers. "He always turned things positive," Berger said.

For the past six months, Runci worked at Office Depot.

"He was one of our best associates," said store manager Danny Campbell.

The funeral will be at noon Thursday at Saint Patrick's Church, 10709 Lake View Road in Dallas.

Visitation is from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Wednesday at Restland Funeral Home in Dallas.

A special memorial service will be at 6:30 p.m. Monday at the Kappa Sigma lodge, 6 Greek Circle. The fraternity will plant a tree in Runci's memory.

His family has asked that donations be made to the Michael Runci Memorial at Plains National Bank in care of Bob Tate.

Runci is survived by his mother, father and brother.

Hispanic voters a growing force

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hispanics, reaching for political power as their numbers grow, sent a clarion call to both political parties Tuesday: do not take us for granted.

In key states across the country, Hispanics helped elect both Democrats and Republicans, but they responded to their concerns, and their leaders hope politicians will see them as a key swing vote as they approach the 2000 presidential election.

"If they expect to get elected, they better start learning," said Cecilia Munoz of the National Council of La Raza, the nation's largest Hispanic advocacy group.

"The bottom line is, as voters, we expect to be respected. We expect to be treated like Americans, which is what we are."

Half of Hispanic voters in Texas, traditionally Democratic, gave their support to GOP Gov. George W. Bush, who made it clear that he had no interest in the sort of anti-immigrant policies backed by California Republicans.

Helping matters, Bush also speaks fluent Spanish. So does his brother, Jeb Bush, who is married to a Mexican-American and was elected governor of Florida, thanks in part to a strong Hispanic vote.

Meanwhile, in California, Hispanics are still in GOP support for anti-immigrant and English-only measures, and they delivered 78 percent of their votes to Democrat Gray Davis for governor and 70 percent to Democrat Barbara Boxer for Senate, based on exit polls conducted for The Associated Press by Voter News Service.

"If the GOP wants to stay in control and move forward, then they need to sort of follow the steps taken by Bush — by both Bushes — to include the Latino vote," said Lydia Camarillo of the Southwest Voter Registration Education Project, which worked to mobilize Hispanic voters in four states.

Voter turnout is growing among Hispanics as more become citizens and more become enraged at anti-immigrant policies.

Hispanics also are becoming an increasing portion of the electorate in several key states. They made up 36 percent of the electorate this year in New Mexico, 13 percent in California and 16 percent in Texas, for instance. But the Hispanic community is not monolithic.

Florida is populated by Cuban-Americans, staunch anti-communists who have traditionally backed Republicans.

Yet the Southwest is home to Mexicans and New York attracts Puerto Ricans, who generally favor Democrats.

Hispanics already make up about 10 percent of the U.S. population and by 2005 are projected to overtake blacks as the nation's largest minority group.

Nationally, Hispanics made up just 5 percent of all voters Tuesday, but that, too, will grow, as more immigrants become citizens and are motivated to go to the polls.

University Daily, La Ventana garner national recognition

Texas Tech's student publications received national awards this weekend at the Associated Collegiate Press and College Media Advisers Convention in Kansas City.

The University Daily's "Welcome Back" issue was third place in the Best of Show category for special publications.

The issue was distributed to students the week before school started.

Teresa Wall won second place for best promotional advertisement. Andrew Teague won third place for best ad campaign.

The 1997 La Ventana received many awards in "The Best of Collegiate Design" by The College Media Advisers and the College Media Review.

Aleesa Miller, Melissa Toombs and Matthew Dillingham won first place for the cover and divider package.

Tech graduate Shanna Sargent won fourth place in photojournalism for all publications. Gina Watkins won third place for an academic spread. Toombs and Shannon Weaver won third place for people spreads.

Courtney Trainor won first place for a group spread.

"We are very honored to receive these awards," said La Ventana editor Tyson Seibly, a junior design communications major from Garland.

Supermodel checks herself into clinic for exhaustion

LONDON (AP) — Supermodel Kate Moss has checked into a London clinic under an assumed name and is being treated for exhaustion, The Mirror newspaper reported.

"I've been doing a lot of hard work and too much partying," the paper quoted Moss, 24, as saying.

She checked into The Priory, an expensive private psychiatric clinic in Roehampton, southwest London, last week.

"I wasn't happy with the way my life was going and so I decided to take a step back and assess my life and future," she said. "I want to be totally responsible for myself."

And this is the place where I can get the peace and quiet to start the process."

The Mirror on Saturday quoted an unidentified source as saying that London-born Moss has had a "mini-collapse" and is expected to be out of the clinic "next week or so."

As a teen-ager, Moss led the fashion world's so-called "waif look" that some critics dubbed "heroin chic."

She has denied ever taking heroin.

Gene therapy helps heart patients grow their own bypasses for surgery

DALLAS (AP) — For the first time, doctors have shown that by inserting extra genes into the heart, they can enable patients to grow their own bypasses.

The approach could someday spare patients the need for bypass surgery, in which a piece of blood vessel is grafted into place to create a detour around a blockage.

Experts say this new gene-insertion procedure, tested initially in the legs and now in the heart, represents the first example of gene therapy actually correcting a human ill.

Several competing teams of doctors have injected a gene that makes a protein called vascular endothelial growth factor — or VEG-F, pronounced vedge-uff — into the hearts of people who have clogged vessels but are too sick to undergo ordinary bypass surgery or angioplasty. Ordinarily, the gene only does its work during fetal development in the womb.

The doctors found, clear, and in some cases dramatic, evidence that the gene prompts the heart to sprout tiny new blood vessels to nourish muscle and relieve crippling chest pain.

Nevertheless, the procedure is still highly experimental and is probably several years away from routine use.

"We are trying to take damaged adult organs and return them to youth," said Dr. Ronald Crystal of Cornell Medical School in New York City. He and others reported their findings Monday at a meeting of the American Heart Association in Dallas.

Still unclear is whether this kind of genetic manipulation will work any better than a more direct medical approach — giving people doses of the protein made by the gene. At a conference last March, doctors from the University of Minnesota showed that the VEG-F protein appeared to ease angina in 13 of 15 patients treated.

Among those receiving injections of the VEG-F gene were 16 patients of Dr. Jeffrey Isner of St. Elizabeth's Medical Center in Boston, all of them heart attack victims who suffered excruciating chest pain at even the mildest exertion.

Some of Isner's patients were taking as many as 60 nitroglycerin tablets a week for their pain. Now all have improved substantially, and the average dose is 2 1/2 pills weekly. Of the 11 patients who have been followed up for at least three months, six are entirely free of pain.

A variety of tests, including nuclear scans, show improved blood flow to the patients' heart muscle, even though the blood vessels created by the treatment are too small to be seen.

"We are extremely encouraged about this therapy," Isner said.

Among his patients is Floyd Stokes, a 58-year-old peanut farmer from DeLeon, Texas. For the past two years, he had been so handicapped by chest pain that he could walk no more than 100 yards and did most of his work from the seat of his pickup truck.

Stokes underwent the procedure on May 26. Within three weeks, he began to feel better. Now, he said, he walks and works as much as he wants, completely without pain.

Governor not a player in GOP coup

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. George W. Bush's spokeswoman is denying reports that Bush identified himself as a probable presidential candidate and called a congressman to urge the ouster of House Speaker Newt Gingrich, the Austin American-Statesman reported Monday.

Bill Kristol, speaking on ABC-TV's "This Week" Sunday, said a member of Congress got a call in which Bush said:

"Look, I'm probably going to run for president. I think I can get the nomination. If I lose the presidency to Al Gore, I want it because of my own mistakes not because of Newt Gingrich."

Kristol, editor and publisher of The Weekly Standard, said Bush's attitude was

"the decisive thing" that led to Gingrich's demise.

Bush spokeswoman Karen Hughes said the governor had spoken to many Republican leaders since his re-election last week but wasn't involved in Gingrich's resignation.

"Gov. Bush is not involved in the speaker's race and was not involved in any way in the speaker's decision to step down," Hughes said.

"It sounds to me like a lot of rumors built on innuendo and not built on truth."

She added that Bush did not identify himself as a probable presidential candidate.

"Gov. Bush tells everyone the same thing, which is that he does not know whether he is running for president or not," Hughes said.

NRC announces associateships

The National Research Council announced the 199 Postdoctoral and Senior Research Associateship Programs will be conducted on behalf of more than 120 research laboratories in the United States representing nearly all U.S. Government agencies with research facilities.

The program provides opportunities for Ph.D., Sc.D. or M.D. scientists and engineers. Approximately 350 new full-time associateships will be awarded on a competitive basis in 1999 for research in chemistry, earth, atmospheric, applied, computer, life, medical and behavioral sciences, engineering, mathematics, space and planetary sciences and physics.

Awards are made for one or two years, renewable for a maximum of three years. Senior applicants who have held the doctorate at least five years may request shorter periods.

Library to present discussion

Don Simpson, president of the Center for Research Libraries, will discuss the involvement of the Texas Tech's Libraries' new membership in the CRL today.

A highlight for the public in the discussion will be when Simpson demonstrates to the audience how the public can use the CRL's resources and materials for their own benefit.

The CRL's collections have more than five million volumes of research materials.

The program will involve collecting, preserving and providing access to research materials in print, microfilm and online formats. Another feature is to provide local access to resources that are continuously in demand.

In August, Tech became CRL's 93rd voting member.

The future projects for the libraries include approving eligibility criteria, electing individuals to the CRL's board of directors, approving CRL's total budget, reviewing all purchase proposals, changing the current bylaws and advising the board of directors on other matters under discussion.

For more information involving the discussions Tuesday, call Suzan McGinnis, assistant head of Information Services for Liaison and Collection Development, at 742-2236.

The meeting will be open to the public at 10:30 a.m. today in Room 304B of the Tech Library.

Correction: In Thursday's issue of The University Daily, Sigma Delta Pi's history was wrong. The Spanish fraternity was a top 10 chapter in 1997 and this year.

Marilyn Manson marks Dallas with signature trends

By Sebastian Kitchen
Staff Writer

Thursday night in Dallas, the freaks were out. All sorts of people dressed in makeup, drag, wigs and some with little dress at all were at the Bronco Bowl Thursday to see Marilyn Manson.

Beefed up security, extra police, metal detectors and a protest across the street were all signs Manson had hit Dallas.

The hype for the show was high. Tickets sold out in less than 30 minutes. Controversy sells.

Like many people, even though I like the music, I wanted to see what he was all about, to see if any the hype was true.

"The last time I was here, they tried to say I killed a chicken," Manson said from the stage. "The next thing you know they will blame me for JFK."

I do not care for his politics and religious beliefs, but I enjoy his music. (I hope I'm not going straight to hell for going to the show.)

People showed up in all sorts of attire. Two people, who made a cute couple, were wearing nothing but tape on their upper bodies. Others wore odd contact lenses like their idol to distort their eyes. A woman walked in with wings on. Other just died their hair or wore all black.

This was heaven (or maybe hell) if you are a people watcher. Never at any point did I feel out of place or threatened by the environment. The environment was basically a safe, controlled environment.

Anticipation of the concert kept everyone excited and having an opening band seemed like a formality. People did not seem to dislike 12 Rounds, but they did not care if the band was there. They wanted to see the self-proclaimed "AntiChrist Superstar."

His band came out and behind a curtain, the prince of darkness stood and his shadow was cast as many people screamed and cheered.

When the curtain was gone,

REVIEW

people were able to witness the man who has been seen more on MTV, major magazines and television than in concert. He is the latest problem child of music.

Manson has been performing for years, but until the last few, he toured and played in relative obscurity.

During the course of the night, he had almost as many outfits as songs.

He never wore the partial female body suit many people may be familiar with.

Manson even wore different colored covers over his underwear, which one could see because the crotch was missing from the front and back of his outfit.

Manson used a lot of lighting, and his stage setup worked well with his musical set. A large podium was brought to the front of the stage. Manson, who had changed into a suit, stood preaching his music from the podium. One entrance, Manson made way through the stage using stilts, long arm supports and a helmet, which had a microphone attached to it.

One of the disappointments of the show was the sound quality. Manson's band has increasingly got better over the years, but the sound Thursday could have been better.

The other disappointment of the show was the beginning. Manson and his band seemed to start off a little slow but were recovering.

The band did one set, walked off and never returned. Many of the fans waited for him to return, but he did not. They did not seem too happy.

Maybe that is just another ploy to keep people wanting more and misunderstanding the mystery of Marilyn Manson.

Manson is not Satan or even close. He is just a young man from Ohio who likes to let all of his frustrations go on stage. It is his way of venting. And for most of the people in attendance, the show was just a way for them to vent.

'King and I' makes Texas appearance

The next hit Broadway musical during the 1998 Give Your Regards to Broadway season is set to begin this week.

The classic Rodgers and Hammerstein musical, "The King and I," will premiere Tuesday night and run through Friday in the Lubbock Municipal Auditorium.

"This is a play that can appeal to a lot of different people," said Deana McCormack of Celebrity Attractions. "It's a classic."

The musical is based on a true story and the book, "Anna and the King of Siam." The story is of an English widow who teaches English and other Western ideas to the 67 children of the King of Siam in the 1860s.

As East meets West and the cultures collide, the two learn much more about each other than expected.

The original production of "The King and I" opened on Broadway in March of 1951, starring Gertrude Lawrence and Yul Brynner. The musical has enjoyed popularity ever since.

"It is a play that will be enjoyed forever," McCormack said. "It's timeless."

"The King and I" received five Tony Awards in 1952 and won four in 1996 after its revival on Broadway that year.

Some of the popular songs in the play include: "Whistle a Happy Tune," "Getting to Know You" and "Shall We Dance."

The show runs two hours and 50 minutes with one intermission. Show times are 7:30 p.m. each night. Tickets are available by calling 770-2000. Ticket prices are $37, $32, $27 and $16.

Officials wrong busting holiday bash

Gretchen Verry
Staff Writer

Two weeks ago, I was feeling the typical mid-semester overworked, under-paid University Daily reporter blues, so I decided to go out and celebrate Halloween in grandiose style. I dug in to the closet and came up with the old favorite "Whore of Satan" costume. One pair of fishnet stockings retrieved from my roommate's car (don't ask) and two tubes of body glitter later, I was ready to go.

A couple of my friends had met some members of the Lubbock band Fixation the week before and were excited about a huge party they were going to throw for the holiday. So, we decided to check it out.

You see, the band members and supporters had purchased beer for the event, and all it would cost us to get in was $5, to cover the lighting and building rental, and a canned good, for the South Plains Food Bank. How could you beat it, free beer, two awesome bands and helping out a worthy cause all at the same time? So, armed with my can of creamed corn, $5 and the number of a good cab company, I was off on what I thought to be a great adventure. Anyway, how could you not have fun as the "Whore of Satan?"

Our first problems arose as we approached the door, and a sign announced the party had become bring your own beer. Being totally unprepared for this, we started to turn around — when we were assured there was beer inside. So, we joined the line of witches and goblins clutching cans of creamed corn. We entered the party and quickly discovered the rumors of beer inside were true, and cans of Old Milwaukee and Bush beers were flowing freely. You might be asking at this point, why is she so concerned with alcohol, why is she harping on this point? I don't need alcohol to have a good time, but, I am over 21, as was verified by off-duty sheriffs checking IDs at the door, and do enjoy a good beer every once in a while.

That disclaimer being said, when Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission, or TABC as you might know them, officers raided the place around 1 a.m. and arrested a member of the band and a guy behind the bar, I was confused. I never knew it was illegal to give beer away to people more than 21 in a location that had been rented for a private party. I mean, doesn't that just sum up every fraternity party that is not held at a lodge?

Don't get me wrong, I'm not going back to that Greeks vs. non-Greeks standoff of '97. I only brought up fraternities because I am Greek, and have been to many a fraternity party in that same building.

This bothered me all weekend, so I decided to research it a little bit.

First, I spoke with a friend that was associated with the band and helped to plan and execute the party. He told me that earlier in the day, Doc's Liquor Store had sold them 15 kegs for the event. All seemed fine, and they left the Strip armed with the kegs. Apparently, they had just crossed back over into Lubbock County when the same person that had sold them the kegs just minutes earlier, pulled them over in a undercover TABC sting. In true TABC style, they poured out the kegs and arrested them for possession with intent to sell. Sell what? The beer was a gift from the band to their fans. This brings up another major point though. Shouldn't the liability fall partly on the hands of a store that sells one person that much alcohol?

I then called Dan Cullers of the TABC. He informed me the legal limit of beer that one person can possess for personal consumption is 24 12-ounce containers. Now, who out there over the age of 21 hasn't broken that law? What store that sells alcohol has not allowed them to break that law?

My friend also told me the party was broken up and two people arrested because they were breaking the law and selling alcohol without a license. I ask you, loyal readers (and you must be if you have made it this far), how are you selling anything if it is given away? I guess my last question is addressed to the TABC officers that saw fit to break up something that was designed as a safe, fun event that profited the community as a whole. Why this, and why now? What rules were broken, and who was hurt in the whole event? I mean, besides all of us who attended the party, whose night was ruined.

Punishment for all crimes should be equal

Those elementary school years are a little blurry, but I'm sure that I learned sometime in my fifth grade history class that every American is promised equal treatment under the law.

Hollye Hodges
Columnist

Now, this constitutional right has had to be tweaked some-what over the years to make sure minorities or disadvantaged parties are always given a fair shake.

Just as O.J. Still, I think we have one of the most fair justice systems in the world.

But recent hate crime laws would do serious damage to this justice system and would segregate victims into two categories: those whose lives, if taken, are worth say 10 years with possibility for parole and those whose lives, if taken, are worth say death row.

The idea behind hate crime laws is to provide special protection for minorities who are frequently attacked for who they are — something most of the general population doesn't have to worry about.

But, since the Declaration of Independence says all lives are created equal, then attacks on these lives must be punished equally. Proponents of these laws say hate crimes deserve special punishment because they harm the immediate victim and spread terror through the victim's minority group.

And I know this must be true, but terror of this kind affects unprotected groups as well as parents, young children, battered women and police.

In New York state, the maximum sentence for aggravated harassment is 15 days in jail, but if the same harassment is accompanied by a racial slur, that increases to one year.

In Wisconsin, an assault motivated by a prejudice is allowed triple the punishment of a "non-hate" crime.

Is this saying it is morally three times less wrong to kill a white man than a gay man?

A killer could just as easily be motivated by hate of a white man's political preference as by a gay man's sexual preference.

The law shouldn't be charged with trying to discern the levels of hate content when someone's life it taken unjustly.

Worst case scenario: Wyoming gay student Matthew Shepard is beaten to death because of his sexual orientation.

His killers should be put to death, but ordinary criminal law would see this punishment carried out. Each life deserves to be protected equally.

We shouldn't need separate laws because of our differences.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Fraternity remembers student, friend

To the editor:
Dear Runci,
You left us Saturday morning, but what you left behind will remain with us forever. Your virtue, honor and reputation are concerned in reporting cheerfully and with dignity the character of a friend and incumbent upon you as a brother. Time passes just like your life through our own, but you will never pass through our hearts.

Runci, thank you for always offering a place of comfort. Thank you for your happy face to make our day. Thank you for the jokes and laughs.

Thank you for lifting our spirits during all situations. Thank you for showing that the size of heart is all that matters. Thank you for being a brother. Thank you for being a true friend. Thank you for all the high fives. Thank you for the smart-aleck remarks, your humorous sarcasm and impressions.

Thank you for showing that friendship is truly a virtue. Thank you for making school a more tolerable place.

Thank you for your unconditional love and for never being judgmental. Thank you for cheering up the parties. Thank you for teaching everyone that friendship and life is to be held sacred. Thank you for showing your true self. Thank you for all your gestures that made the moment.

Michael Runci, thank you for all the great memories you left your friends to enjoy. You brought us closer together, and for this we owe the greatest amount of admiration. You proved yourself worthy of the confidence we have reposed in you and become, indeed, a source of honorable pride to your family and an inspiration to your fraternity brothers. All of our times together will be cherished and your memory will live in our hearts for eternity.

We love you Runci. AEKDB.

Graduation closes in on Tech students

Kevin Preas
Columnist

I don't know if you guys do this or not, but I try to justify everything. I mean I have three papers due in the next two weeks. That means if I have worked hard on them for three days in a row, then I deserve a day off, right?

Here's another example. If we are only two weeks away from the Thanksgiving break, and after the break we only have about 10 days of classes before finals, and given that finals signal the end of another long semester, then I can really say that we are only about two weeks away from the end of the semester.

Now, I'm not really sure if that is inductive or deductive reasoning, but I do know it is one of the two. Who said I don't retain anything from classes gone by?

Anyway, back to my justifications. This time next week all of us will be too tied up in all of the projects due by the end of the week and with upcoming break plans to pay too much attention to even my column. That's way I decided to go ahead and write this column this week.

As the end of this semester quickly approaches, so does the end of the line for many Tech students. As of December, many of Tech's finest will become Tech's ex-finest after graduation. They will say good bye to the day-to-day life of a college student and say hello to the daily grind of the professional world.

I guess you can call it the natural evolution of things, you come here, grow and learn, then as fast as you came, your gone. You can also say that the longer you stay here the more friends you have to say good bye to, and that is never easy.

That's why I have taken it upon myself to say it to everyone at the same time. Good luck for whatever the future holds for you. I am sure that each of you leaving will have some legacy to leave behind.

It might be coming over at all hours of the morning to play golf on the play station ('cause he's Lee Janzen, yeah). Or for some it might be the guidance and example you have set for those around you. It might just be the good company you have kept with those all around you. What ever it might be it will be missed, and don't forget that.

For those who are graduating that I know personally, you guys will always live on through legends and stories (some true and some might stretch the truth a little bit, but they will live on).

So in closing I would like to say good bye to Chad, Sean, Mike, Toby, Nathan and Todd (and to anybody else that I missed) good luck guys. You can be replaced but never equaled.

Again to all the other grads this semester, good luck to each and everyone of you. I hope you have enjoyed your time here, and I hope you are happy where ever you end up. Thanks for everything.

Rested Raiders prepare for Texas

By Jason Bernstein Assistant Sports Editor

With a week of rest now behind them, the Texas Tech Red Raiders were back on the gridiron Monday, as they prepare for their final home contest of the season. Tech coach Spike Dykes is 11-4-1 following an open date and will once again look to knock off the Texas Longhorns at 6 p.m. Saturday. "This is a big game for us," Dykes said. "This is one you look forward to every year. When you've lost one or the last few games as we have, you just can't wait to get back out there." Tech (6-3 overall, 3-3 Big 12) is 5-6 against the Longhorns during the Dykes Era, including a 24-10 win in Austin a year ago. Dykes was a Longhorn assistant coach from 1972-76 before making stops at New Mexico, Mississippi State and Midland Lee High School. Both squads enter Saturday's game bowl eligible, as they have notched at least six victories against Division I opponents. Aside from the obvious bowl implications surrounding both squads Saturday's game will also feature two of the nation's top-five running backs, including the Longhorn Heisman front-runner Ricky Williams.

"Texas is a good team and they have a lot of offensive power," defensive end Taurus Rucker said of the Longhorns. "Hopefully we'll be well rested after the break." Williams, who leads the nation averaging 191.56 rushing yards on the ground per contest, needs 204 yards on the ground to surpass Tony Dorset's all-time NCAA rushing record. Williams also owns the all-time records for career points by a non-kicker as well as overall career points. He has scored 73 touchdowns as a Longhorn, including 25 scores this season. "He's a great back and a great player," Dykes said of the Texas' running back. "It's nice to have a guy like Williams because he can take the pressure off of your other players." Tech limped into the off-week last week, as the Red Raiders not only dropped three-straight close games, but also lost three offensive starters during its 28-26 loss to Missouri Oct. 31. Despite the injuries the Red Raiders head into this week's practices in relatively good health.

Wade Kennedy/The University Daily On the Run: Red Raider linebacker Tim Duffie sets his sights on Missouri quarterback Corby Jones during Tech's 28-26 loss to the Tigers Oct. 31. After a week off, the Red Raiders will battle Texas and Longhorn running back Ricky Williams at 6 p.m. Saturday at Jones Stadium.

"Health-wise we're alright," Dykes said. "This game means a lot to the coaches and players," Dykes said of the game. "It's sort of a sad day because these are such great kids to coach. This is a great team to coach. I'm proud of this team, and I will always be proud of them." appearance at Jones Stadium. "This game means a lot to the coaches and players," Dykes said of the game. "It's sort of a sad day because these are such great kids to coach. This is a great team to coach. I'm proud of this team, and I will always be proud of them."

Cowboys continue to win with backups

IRVING (AP) — With two and sometimes three backups on the offensive line, the Dallas Cowboys didn't allow the New York Giants any sacks and Emmitt Smith had his best day in three years. It was just another example of the team's seasonlong trend of getting solid production from their reserves. The Cowboys are 6-3 and leading the NFC East despite injuries that have forced them to play multiple games without former All-Pro Troy Aikman at quarterback, Leon Lett at defensive tackle and Erik Williams at offensive tackle. Everett McIver, a free agent signee at offensive guard, has been out a month. Center Clay Shiver missed much of the second half of the 16-6 victory over New York and is doubtful for Sunday's game in Arizona. "Everyone else is continuing to play well and think we can win," Dallas coach Chan Gailey said. "They don't hang their heads and say, 'So-and-so is hurt, so we're going to lose.' I think that says a lot about our other players as well, keeping the faith and the positive attitude that we're going to win no matter what." The second-teamers who thrived against New York included rookie Flozell Adams, who played left tackle in college and was starting his fourth game at right guard; former practice squad player Tony Hutson making his second pro start at right tackle and CFL refugee Mike Kiselak filling in at center and guard. That's quite a change from previous years, when an injury to a starter — especially on the offensive line — has often meant dire results for Dallas. "I don't know about what happened before, but the guys that are having to go in and play right now when we get a starter hurt are playing fairly well," said Gailey, who is in his first year with the Cowboys. "That's a tribute to them." Another role player will get a chance to step up as kick returner-corned Kevin Mitchell broke his right forearm Sunday and will be out at least three weeks.

The time for Saturday's Tech-Texas game has been moved from the scheduled 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. at Jones Stadium to accommodate television coverage.

The game will be shown on the cable channel Fox Sports Southwest.

Tech (6-3 overall, 3-3 Big 12) will look to break a three-game losing streak this season against the Longhorns.

Tech tips off exhibition play

Staff Writer

The Texas Tech men's basketball team will get the 1998-99 season underway today when the Red Raiders face Arkansas Express in an exhibition match at 7 p.m. today at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

This will be the first chance for the Red Raiders, who began practicing for this season Oct. 17, to battle another team.

The Red Raiders are anxious to get on the court and compete, junior forward Cliff Owens said.

"We're ready to play someone else besides ourselves," Owens said of the Red Raiders.

"I think everyone is looking forward to see how the new guys come together and bond with the returning starters and vice versa."

Tech will have six new faces taking the court for their first game as Red Raiders, one of those being junior college transfer Mario Layne.

Layne said he is ready for his first game as a Red Raider.

"I'm pretty excited," Layne said about the game.

"It will be interesting for me, being the first game for me in the Big 12. We have practiced real hard and this is what it is all about. This is what we've been waiting for. I hope we can give the crowd a good performance, play some good defense and win the game."

The exhibition will begin the last season for the lone senior on this year's squad, guard Stan Bonewitz.

The Red Raiders need to make some improvements before the regular season starts, Bonewitz said.

"We've got a lot of stuff to work on, and a lot of improvements to make, and a lot of things to put in," Bonewitz said. "It will be a good chance for us and an opportunity to get out and go up against somebody else besides ourselves. I don't think we are playing where we need to be playing, or doing stuff we need to be doing right now to be ready to go out and play a regular season game."

"We're improving everyday and we're getting better and hopefully we will continue to improve and get where we need to get."

Red Raider coach James Dickey said he is ready for the new season to start.

"We're anxious to get started tomorrow against the Arkansas Express," Dickey said.

"I'll get to see how the new players respond. I am pleased with our practices and we had a good scrimmage Saturday morning. We still have a long way to go. We have new players in the system, and they're learning how to move without the basketball. Our rebounding has improved, and I am interested to see how the defense has improved."

Starting for the Red Raiders will be Rayford Young, Bonewitz, Layne, Owens and Johnny Phillips, Dickey said.

Tech will finish the exhibition season against Global Sports at 7 p.m. Friday at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Ready to Go: Red Raider forward Cliff Owens and the Tech basketball team will battle Arkansas Express at 7 p.m. today in an exhibition.

Coaches: KSU-Nebraska should be a dandy

(AP) — The Big 12's football coaches weren't ready Monday to predict a winner of this week's much-anticipated showdown between No. 2 Kansas State and No. 11 Nebraska. However, they agree it should live up to the hype.

"I think Nebraska is still Nebraska, and Kansas State has not beaten them in some time," Colorado coach Rick Neuheisel said. "So if Nebraska goes in there with a little bit of a swagger, I think it's going to be a great ball game."

Kansas State (9-0) has rolled through the schedule this far, thanks to its top-rated defense and the playmaking ability of quarterback Michael Bishop.

Nebraska, on the other hand, has actually lost two games this year, including one at home. Most schools would gladly take a two-loss season, but this is a program that had lost two games in the previous four years combined.

The Cornhuskers (8-2) have beaten Kansas State 29 straight times. There have been times in recent years when the Wildcats felt they had enough to beat Nebraska, only to come up short.

But while Nebraska has history on its side, Kansas State has Bishop.

"He's a guy that can turn any play into a touchdown," said Kansas coach Terry Allen, whose team has lost to KSU and Nebraska this season.

Another coach with the same perspective is Bob Simmons of Oklahoma State. His team almost beat Nebraska and got wiped out by Kansas State on a day when Bishop threw for 287 yards on just eight completions.

"What he brings to them is the fact he's a winner," Simmons said. "He finds a way to get things done because he has been there. That's what a quarterback is supposed to do. He's supposed to win and lead his ball club."

Texas got hammered by Kansas State early in the year, but later upset Nebraska in Lincoln. Coach Mack Brown says Kansas State deserves its No. 1 ranking in the coaches' poll, but he didn't seem ready to bank on a Kansas State victory this week.

"I don't know that anybody can beat Kansas State," he said. "But if anybody can beat Kansas State, Nebraska can do it because they're settled down at quarterback. Eric Crouch may wind up to be one of the best they've ever had before it's over."

Baylor coach Dave Roberts saw Kansas State beat his team 49-6 last weekend. Last season, Baylor played Nebraska and Michigan, which went on to win a share of the national championship.

"They were all real good, and they were all real good in different ways," Roberts said. "But Kansas State is going to sit there with those guys. They're right there."

Iowa State coach Dan McMarney got a first-hand look at Nebraska last weekend in a 42-7 loss, and he expects the Cornhuskers to give Kansas State a battle.

The Cornhuskers have had to work through injuries at quarterback while retooling the offensive line.

Newsroom experience or not? That is the question.

The real question is "Do you have enough experience to even get a job when you graduate?" Well here's your chance to get great job experience while still a student at Tech. Good experience that employers are looking for. The kind that will open doors for you when you graduate. Okay, so what job is it anyway?
