Hampton coaches cleared of charges

By Jason Bernstein
 Assistant Sports Editor

During a press conference late Thursday, the Lubbock Police Department officially cleared two Hampton University basketball coaches and a man from any wrongdoing in association with the "pigeon drop" scam. Lubbock Police Chief Ken Walker said all leads and evidence pertaining to the case had been exhausted, leaving city officials back at square one.

"Our investigation of the case exonerates the Hampton coaches," Walker said. "We have no additional evidence, other than the eyewitness, that points to involvement by the coaches in this attempted scam."

Furthermore, Walker said the prosecution of this case would not take place, since the Hampton officials are no longer considered suspects in this case.

"I personally do not believe they are guilty of this crime," Walker said. "Therefore, we will not refer this case to the district attorney."

But Lubbock Assistant District Attorney Clay Abbott said a decision will be made on whether or not to charge the Hampton coaches when an official report is filed with the district attorney's office.

Furthermore, Abbott and his office are keeping in contact with Hampton officials in order to remain updated in this constantly evolving case.

"We'll make the decision on who we will charge or if we will charge any parties at all after we receive the report," Abbott said. "We have had hourly conversations with attorneys from Hampton and will continue to do so in the near future."

The LPD received security tapes Wednesday that helped lead to the exoneration of the Hampton coaches, Walker said.

Wednesday, Hampton coach Patricia Bibbs, her husband Ezell Bibbs and assistant coach Vanetta Kelso gave a press conference disputing their arrest and claiming their detention by the LPD was a race-related issue.

"Race played no part in this investigation," Walker said. "The officers handled the process in a professional manner and followed the laws accordingly."

Lost in the shuffle of the investigation is the canceled basketball game and the affects of the case on the Texas Tech Athletic Depart-

"I think it's a regrettable incident," said Tech Athletic Director Gerald Myers. "We regret that it happened, and it's good that it has been concluded and the charges have been dropped."

Aside from the race issue, Walker reiterated the detention of the Hampton officials was justifiable and lawful and completely within the guidelines of the LPD.

"It is unfortunate that visitors in our city were apparently in the wrong place at the wrong time," Walker said. "But I want to reinforce the fact that our officers lawfully initiated the inquiry and conducted the investigation by the book and with complete professionalism."

Walker went on to say although he does not apologize for the false arrests, he regrets the incident happened in the Hub City.

"I regret greatly the ordeal they went through," Walker said.

"I wish it wouldn't have happened to anybody. I understand why they are upset, and I would be upset, too."

With all the controversy surrounding the case, Myers said he still welcomes Hampton University to Lubbock and Tech.

"I certainly welcome them to come out here in the future," Myers said.

"I think the teams that have been here know us and know our coaches. We welcome them here and would treat them like we would want to be treated when we go out on the road. They have shown no ill-will towards Texas Tech and I wish them the best."

SPS to cut cost of electricity by 7 percent

By Apu Naik
 Staff Writer

Customers of Southwestern Public Service Company can look forward to reductions of almost $210 million beginning early next year in their electricity bill, SPS announced yesterday.

Bill Crenshaw, a public relations representative at SPS's headquarters in Amarillo, said depending on the type of customer and usage patterns, reductions in overall rates will range from 7 percent to 11 percent.

"Our industrial customers and other high-volume electricity purchasers will see a reduction of larger proportions than that of residential customers because fuel costs account for a greater proportion of the bill," Crenshaw said.

"Residential customers can expect about a 7 percent reduction, and industrial customers will see about an 11 percent decrease."

The reduction in fuel costs comes as the result of a recent settlement between SPS and the railroad company who transports the coal to their plant, Burlington Northern and Santa Fe Railway, Crenshaw said.

SPS and their coal supplier, TUCO, have been in a dispute since 1990 with their railroad company over the rates the railway was charging to transport the coal from Wyoming to the SPS plant in Amarillo.

But due to recent negotiations between the two parties, a settlement was reached and the result was a reduction in lowered fuel costs, which according to Crenshaw, will "flow through" directly to the customers of SPS.

"The reductions in coal-transportation cost will directly benefit our customers because fuel cost make up a portion of the total electric bill," Crenshaw said. "SPS does not make any profit on fuel costs, the savings flow directly to the customers."

The average residential customer, who uses about 1,000 kilowatt-hours monthly, will save about $48 on an annual basis.

Don Boatman, the general manager of Lubbock's SPS division, said the company was exuberant about being able to give their customers a more cost efficient means of delivering their electricity.

"We are delighted to provide these significant savings to our customers," Boatman said. "SPS has always tried to find ways to provide lower rates for their customers, and for this achievement, they deserve a lot of credit."

Those Lubbock residents whose electricity is provided by Lubbock Power and Light, the city's utility company, also will benefit from the price reduction because they are a wholesale customer of SPS.

"Depending on the time of year, LP&L buys anywhere from one-fifth to one-third of their power from (SPS)," Crenshaw said.

"And because (SPS's) wholesale customers will benefit from this reduction, (LP&L's) retail customers should benefit from the reductions, as well."

LP&L representative Paul Thompson was not available for comment Thursday.

Crenshaw said SPS rates have been decreasing in a general manner since 1983, with the projected utility rates for 1999 about 25 percent lower than they were 16 years ago.

The investor-owned SPS is a regional provider of electricity to a population of about one million people ranging from eastern New Mexico to southwestern Kansas.

FIJI, Pi Phi raise money for breast cancer research

By Gretchen Verry
 Staff Writer

Forty eight guys, 48 girls, 48 hours and one pole.

Phi Gamma Delta fraternity and Pi Beta Phi sorority had their fourth annual FIJI Pole Sit this week, and 96 members of the two groups spent 48 straight hours on top of a pole raising money for their philanthropies.

Fraternity and sorority members solicited sponsors from around the state to donate pledges for the event.

FIJI member and junior engineering major from Dallas, Brian Martinelli, said about $1000 was pledged from sponsors around the state.

"Our sponsorship is basically corporate, we might get a couple hundred dollars from private donors, but the majority of the money raised comes from companies around the state," said Andrew Townend, FIJI treasurer and a junior finance major from Dallas.

Townend said the event usually raises between $800 and $1500, and donations would be accepted and collected throughout the rest of the week.

The money raised will be donated to Susan G. Komen Foundation for Breast Cancer Awareness on behalf of FIJI Fraternity and Pi Phi Sorority next week, Townend said.

"I've had a lot of friends whose relatives have been affected by this issue (breast cancer)," said FIJI member Chris Cranford, a freshman agricultural communications major from Spur. "We're getting the chance to help out with a great cause."

FIJI and Pi Phi members took turns in one hour shifts sitting on top of a 30-foot pole starting at 5 p.m. Tuesday through 5 p.m. Thursday. One member of each organization sat on a bench atop the pole behind the FIJI lodge.

"This is designed to allow the brothers of Phi Gamma Delta and sisters of Pi Beta Phi get to know one another while contributing to the community," Townend said.

Martinelli said the idea originated among the members of FIJI Fraternity about five years ago.

"We wanted a unique way to bring attention to our philanthropy," Martinelli said. "The Kappa Deltas have see-saw, and we thought we could do something a little different too."

FIJI members collected pledges for the event, and Thomas Brothers of Dallas, Southline Equipment of Houston and Danny's Fins and Hens of Lubbock were the major contributors this year, Townend said.

Starr defends investigation in impeachment hearings

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the climax of a historic impeachment hearing, Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr heatedly defended his investigation under insistent questioning Thursday night from President Clinton's private attorney. Clinton's own conduct was scarcely mentioned.

"That is false and you know that it is false," Starr snapped at one point in the nationally televised House Judiciary Committee hearing as attorney David Kendall accused him of prosecutorial misconduct in his dealing with Monica Lewinsky.

"I am confident that we have abided by our obligations," Starr said as his adversary pressed him at another point on leaks of grand jury material.

Kendall set the tone right with his introduction: "Let me begin with the simple but powerful truth that nothing in this overkill of investigation amounts to a justification for the impeachment of the president of the United States."

Kendall pointed interrogation followed a full day of testimony by Starr in which lawmakers mixed questions with pointed statements laying out their parties' positions in the impeachment debate.

Starr said he wasn't present as an advocate for the report he had presented to Congress, although he referred to "the president's perjury and obstruction of justice" in connection with his affair with Ms. Lewinsky and long effort to conceal the truth about it.

In his first 45 minutes of questioning, Kendall did not ask Starr a single question about the evidence he found in his long and costly investigation — a probe that resulted in allegations of 11 separate examples of potentially impeachable offenses.

Senate discusses registration

AIS, registrar officials say Internet registration will be available in time for summer sessions

By Gretchen Verry
 Staff Writer

Representatives of the Office of Administrative Information Services gave student senators a demonstration of web and telephone registration at their meeting Thursday.

Registrar Don Wickard said web registration is planned to be available to students by the first summer session. By fall 1999 registration, students also will be able to register via telephone.

"Essentially, students will have three ways to register: by telephone, on-line and through the traditional system in the Matador Room," Wickard said. "There will be ample areas and ample ways to register."

Wickard said, beginning next fall, the traditional process of registering in the Matador Room of the University Center will begin to be phased out.

The $800,000 project began 2 1/2 years ago, AIS manager Linda Ricks said.

The new system would allow students to register, add and drop classes, change their personal information, check their grades, look for holds on their records and obtain unofficial transcripts over the Internet.

Wickard said, for now, students still must attend advising sessions and obtain permission to register. He said the decision ultimately will be left up to the departments.

"Some departments are already considering only requiring advisement for freshmen and sophomores," Wickard said. "But as for now, the departments want to test the system out first."

Senators also passed four resolutions, including one that would change the process by which the Homecoming queen is elected.

Senate resolution 34.02 calls for an initial screening of candidates' resumes by a Homecoming Committee. Ten finalists then would be decided upon, and a general election would account for 50 percent of the selection. The remaining 50 percent would be based on individual interviews of the candidates.

The resolution also allows candidates to speak for themselves in campaigning efforts.

"Basically, we want to take the emphasis off the popular vote and allow candidates to speak for themselves," said Andrew Townend, a senator from the College of Business Administration.

Senators also passed a resolution calling attention to confusion over the date that classes are dismissed before Thanksgiving.

Human Sciences Senator Katie Verry said it has been brought to her attention that many faculty members have scheduled classes for Wednesday.

The University Calendar calls for Thanksgiving vacations to begin on Wednesday, with no classes scheduled for that day.

Board of Regents discuss campus improvements

By Jonathan Biles
Staff Writer

In the Nov. 13 Board of Regents meeting, aspects of the Master Plan, including the English/Philosophy Complex, the expansion of the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center in Amarillo, and the construction of a new entrance at Broadway, were discussed.

The construction of the English/Philosophy complex so far is one of the smoothest that Tech has begun, said Doug Mann, vice chancellor for facilities planning and construction.

"The project is going well," Mann said. "With the chancellor urging us on, we need to move faster."

A problem encountered while planning for the building, is the location of the complex will cause the loss of a parking lot. Mann said the relocation lots will be created in January.

Construction is expected to begin after the ground breaking ceremony, which was organized by Mary "Cappy" Ritter, executive director of special events and special assistant to the chancellor.

The ceremony will be in mid-March or early April, Mann said.

"I am really looking forward to doing the ground breaking ceremony," Ritter said. "It is going to be a big event."

Tech has expanded the university by setting up an HSC facility in El Paso and Amarillo, and in the Regents' meeting, a $30 million expansion project of the Tech HSC school of medicine in Amarillo was approved.

The current campus consists of one building, which will be transformed into a medical library once the other buildings are completed.

When the project is finished, expected in fall of 2001, the center will consist of a School of Medicine, a School of Allied Health and a pharmacy, Mann said.

Lavin and Associates of Amarillo have been chosen to work on schematic designs and programs.

Mann said with the new construction, the campus will be nearly tripled.

In a beautification effort to the entrance of the university, a project has been approved to allow construction to begin on the Broadway entrance at Tech, Mann said.

Financing of the project began when Don and Ted Rushing donated $300,000 and Tech Regent Jim Sowel gave a matching gift of $150,000.

The entrance will honor W.B. "Dub" and Mozelle Rushing, parents of Don and Ted.

Mann said the construction will begin the first of the year and will hopefully be completed in spring before the commencement ceremony.

When Tech has an event that draws people from out of town, the visitors are forced to stay at a hotel nonassociated with Tech. However, that will change once the Tech hotel, approved for at the regents' meeting, is completed.

The current status of the hotel construction is finding a partner in the project, said Wayne Robbins, administrator in facilities planning. Currently, there are two request for qualifications, an application for partnership, being reviewed and one interview conducted. The second interview will be conducted Tuesday, Robbins said.

Once Tech has chosen a partner and a site is chosen, planning will begin.

The final aspect of the master plan discussed at the regents' meeting was the proposal of a Tech golf course. The status of the golf course is still in its early stages, Mann said.

Mann told the regents there will be RFQs sent out before the end of the year. Mann said there are more than 25 groups interested in becoming partners.

The goal for the golf course is to have a partner by May and to begin construction in fall to be completed in the year 2001.

The Master Plan is separated in a five and 10 year project plan, Mann said. The five year plan is expected to be completed in 2002, and the 10 year plan in 2007.

"With the chancellor urging us on, we need to move faster."

Meat lab expansion to benefit students, create employment opportunities

By Melody Ragland
Staff Writer

The Texas Tech Department of Animal Science and Food Technology will expand to Reese Center, formerly Reese Air Force Base.

The Tech Board of Regents accepted a proposal from the department and Texas T-Bone Express of Amarillo to use the commissary building at Reese for a new meat lab.

This meat lab will not be the replacement of the current meat lab, but an additional lab area where students will gain commercial experience, said Kevin Pond, professor and chairman in the Department of Animal Science and Food Technology.

Tech will not be moving in yet. Pond said they are still discussing whether or not to lease the building or join in a public benefit transfer.

A public benefit transfer, Pond said is for educational purposes. He said they will probably lease since the lab is in conjunction with a commercial company. The only thing that needs to be done to the building, Pond said is move the $2 million worth of equipment in.

Pond said the lab will be used for teaching, and it will be an excellent opportunity for employment.

"It is very important to staying on the cutting edge," Pond said.

He said they will use the development they've learned here and see how it works on a larger scale.

"It's an extension of what we're doing here," Pond said.

He said they will be taking technology in the current meat lab and using it on a commercial scale.

In an earlier article in The University Daily Tim Jackson, the president of Texas T-Bone Express said the relationship between Tech and Texas T-Bone Express will be a very beneficial one.

"This will allow students to know what's going on in today's industry," Pond said. "This will increase the worth of their diplomas."

The lab will be opening in four to six months, Pond said.

Preliminary hearing set for Shepard murder case

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — Gay college student Matthew Shepard was beaten and tied to a fence by his attackers as they grilled him for information so they could burglarize his apartment, a prosecutor said Thursday.

"As he lay there bleeding and begging for his life, he was then bound to the buck fence," prosecutor Cal Rerucha told a packed courtroom as a preliminary hearing for Aaron James McKinney got under way.

McKinney and Russell Arthur Henderson, both 21, are accused of killing Shepard, a University of Wyoming student, after luring him out of a campus bar to an isolated area outside town.

The slightly built Shepard, who had been pummeled with the butt of a .357-caliber Magnum, suffered 18 blows to the head, and his hands were bound so tightly that a sheriff's deputy had difficulty cutting him free, Rerucha said. "(The deputy) found what she thought was a 13-year-old boy with severe head injuries," Rerucha said.

A student passing by on a mountain bike found the student, initially mistaking the nearly lifeless body for "a scarecrow or a dummy set there for Halloween jokes."

Shepard's blood-caked face had been partially washed clean by tears; he died five days later.

As the prosecutor spoke, McKinney sat quietly at a nearby table, showing no emotion. Shepard's mother, Judy, bowed her head at times during the hearing as she sat in the front row next to her husband, Dennis.

McKinney is charged with first-degree murder, aggravated robbery and kidnapping with intent to inflict bodily injury or to terrorize the victim.

The murder charge carries a possible death sentence, but Rerucha has not indicated whether he will seek the death penalty.

Henderson earlier waived his right to a preliminary hearing. He and McKinney are being held without bond.

Rerucha and law enforcement officers outlined a timeline of the crime, which drew international attention because authorities believe Shepard was targeted, at least partially, because he was gay.

McKinney and Henderson lured Shepard from a campus bar Oct. 7 by telling them they were gay and that they wanted to get "better acquainted," Rerucha said. As they drove away in McKinney's truck, McKinney pulled the handgun and said, "We're not gay, and you're jacked," Rerucha said.

Outside town, they "beat him for $20, your honor, the contents of the wallet," Rerucha said.

McKinney and Henderson repeatedly grilled Shepard for information so they could burglarize his apartment and then left him with the "constant Wyoming wind" as his companion, Rerucha said.

The crime outraged the gay community and focused debate across the United States on the effectiveness of laws that enhance the penalty for hate crimes.

Russia set to launch first segment of Space station

BAIKONUR, Kazakstan (AP) — A year late, Russian space officials Thursday were readying the launch of the first component of the International Space Station, the U.S.-led successor to Russia's much-maligned Mir.

The 24-ton Zarya (Sunrise) control and cargo module was scheduled to lift off from the Baikonur rocket base in Kazakstan at 9:40 a.m. Moscow time (1:40 a.m. EST) Friday, ushering in a new era in international space cooperation.

The International Space Station, involving 16 nations, will consist of more than 100 components that will take 45 flights to assemble. It is due to be completed by 2004. The United States and Russia are playing the biggest roles, but Russian participation has been hampered by the country's financial problems. The launch of the Zarya module has been delayed for one year, mainly because of the cash-strapped Russian space agency's failure to complete another part of the station.

"After years of discussing, planning and replanning, we are about to launch hardware," Gretchen McClain, deputy associate administrator for the new station, said at a news conference earlier this week. "We are ready to begin a project that will bring us into the millennium with women and men living and working in space permanently."

Mexican volcano likely to erupt

YERBA BUENA, Mexico (AP) — Army troops guarded an abandoned village on the slopes of Mexico's most active volcano Thursday while rockslides rumbled by.

Soldiers said they spent a nervous night listening to boulders tumble off the 12,533-foot peak of the smoking Colima Volcano, which geologists say could erupt at any time.

"You could hear it last night, a booming sound as rocks tumbled down the slope," Capt. Audelio Ramos said as he stood watch over the evacuated hamlet of Yerba Buena, 5 miles from the crater's white plume of gas and water vapor.

Geologists say there is also a 1-in-3 chance that pent-up lava could blow away the blocked passages of the cone in a massive explosion, possibly rivaling a 1913 eruption that showered ash and blew out windows far from the peak.

"The volcano's activity continues to rise ... which means that the possibilities of an eruption continue to increase," a committee of volcano experts and civil defense officials said in a joint statement released in the city of Colima, about 15 miles from the peak.

Geologists don't like to talk much about the other possibility — a massive explosion — but civil defense coordinator Melchior Urrutia said the Colima state government is prepared to evacuate as many people as necessary.

"It's better to sin by being overcautious than to pick up bodies," Urrutia said.

Smokin' out

Lubbock community nationally pledges to 'kick the habit'

By John Davis
Staff Writer

The crowd, numbering around 30, stood in Memorial Circle with their backs to the chilly northern breeze of the cold front that moved in Thursday. In their hands, they clutched trash bags full of white balloons with "The Great American Smokeout" logo on them.

After the 10-minute ceremony, they released the balloons, which flew in a dense cloud across campus.

This kicked off the campaign on campus asking people to put down their tobacco products for one day, with the hope of quitting for a lifetime. Jo Henderson, health education coordinator for Student Health Services said.

"We gather here today in memory of the people we knew who have died from tobacco-related illness," Henderson said.

During the rally, Henderson said the balloons represented those who have lost their lives from diseases linked to smoking or dipping. She also said 528 people die every week, and 73 people die every day from smoking-related illness.

Over the past two weeks, Henderson said she, and members of the Department of Health for the city of Lubbock, has been busy making up free "quit kits" given out at the University Center and the Student Recreation Center.

"We've given out about 73 smoker's kits and 50 dipper's kits," Henderson said. "So, we've given out a lot. And that's been faculty, students and staff. It's been great."

The kits contain reading material on the affects of smoking, some tips on quitting and staying quit and gum and candy.

Blake Brown, a senior telecommunications major from Houston, said he had planned to quit Thursday, but changed his mind.

"I think it's bad to quit on a Thursday, so I'm going to quit on Monday," Brown said. "I'm going to prepare for it on Sunday. I have to get my body prepared for withdrawal. I believe in 'cold turkey.'"

Brown said he started smoking his senior year of high school and has tried to quit five times since then. He said partying has been his major downfall to picking the habit back up again.

According to the American Cancer Society's newsletter, 24 percent of smokers, around 11,280,000 people, participated in the Great American Smokeout last year. Five days later, the statistics showed 19 percent of the participants had cut down or quit completely.

For more information on quitting smoking, call Henderson at 743-2860.

We gather here today in memory of the people we knew who have died from tobacco-related illness.”

Film director Alan Pakula dies in automobile accident at 70

NEW YORK (AP) — Alan Pakula, who directed the films "Kluge" and "All The President's Men," died Thursday in a car accident. He was 70.

Pakula was driving on the Long Island Expressway when a metal pipe crashed through the windshield, striking him in the head, said Suffolk County Police spokesman Officer Santo DiStefano.

Pakula lost control of his 1995 Volvo, veered off the road and crashed into a fence, the officer said.

He was taken to North Shore Hospital in Plainview, N.Y., where he was pronounced dead, DiStefano said.

Pakula began his career as a production assistant at Paramount at the age of 22 after moving from New York to Hollywood. He wanted to be a director but got his first chance working as a producer.

The 1957 film, "Fear Strikes Out," told the story of Boston Red Sox outfielder Jimmy Piersall and his bouts of manic depression. It gave the young Tony Perkins his first shot and stardom and launched Pakula's career.

"I think when you do a film, there's a part of you in each character, or vice-versa," he once said in an interview.

Pakula then went on to produce Harper Lee's "To Kill A Mockingbird" in 1962.

He got his first chance as a director with "The Sterile Cuckoo," starring Liza Minelli, which came out in 1969.

He followed that up with "Kluge," the 1971 film starring Jane Fonda and Donald Sutherland, "The Parallax View" in 1974 with Warren Beatty and "All The President's Men," the 1976 movie, which won four Oscars, was an account of Watergate and the reporting of Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein.

Pakula was nominated for Best Director for "All The President's Men."

He directed Harrison Ford and Brad Pitt in 1997's "The Devil's Own."

FCC to charge fee for new pay-TV

WASHINGTON (AP) — Digital broadcasters should pay the government 5 percent of their gross revenues for new pay-TV services such as all-movie channels or stock quotations, federal regulators decided Thursday.

No broadcaster has current plans to offer such "ancillary" services, but the industry is just beginning to offer higher-quality digital television. By 2006 all stations must be switched to digital.

In 1996, when Congress set that standard, it decided that in the digital world television stations that charge for services beyond what they now provide must compensate taxpayers.

Congress left it to the Federal Communications Commission to decide how much.

The FCC said Thursday the 5 percent fee approximates what the government would have been paid if spectrum for such services had been sold at auction.

The FCC contends the fee is easy for broadcasters to calculate and won't discourage them from providing new services.

But the National Association of Broadcasters, which fought for a phased-in 2 percent fee, disagreed. "We're disappointed," spokesman Dennis Wharton said.

"A lower fee would have provided greater incentives for broadcasters to offer the type of programming and data delivery that cable and others offer."

Gigi Sohn, of the public interest law firm the Media Access Project, said the FCC's plan won't represent fair compensation to the public for giving broadcasters valuable digital channels.

Sohn contends that the FCC too narrowly defined what constitutes an "ancillary" service that would be subject to the fees.

As a result, she predicted, "The bank is going to be empty."

The Media Access Project and other public interest groups wanted the FCC to make digital broadcasters pay the fee on revenues from home shopping shows and infomercials that they air.

They also wanted digital broadcasters to pay fees on any revenues they may receive from cable TV companies to carry their digital services.

Some broadcasters and cable companies are negotiating such carriage arrangements.

Separately, the FCC is considering exempting from the fees public stations that offer ancillary services through the use of digital technology.

The FCC tentatively concluded that public stations can offer advertiser-supported digital pay services.

Woohoo, additional Tech fees

Thank goodness they are finally going to raise traffic and parking fees. For years, every time I go to pay my $25 tickets, I've been begging and pleading with the people in traffic and parking to raise their prices.

Unlike some people who want money for food or rent, I want money so that I can ensure that traffic and parking has enough resources to build dirt parking lots two to three miles from campus.

Julie Mitchell
Columnist

I can't imagine why people complain about traffic and parking.

I'm always hearing people say really facetious things like "Next thing you know they'll be charging us $200 for a parking sticker that permits us to park in a gravel lot in Plainview, and they'll provide a bus that runs every two hours to take us to campus." I think that kind of sarcasm is unnecessary.

Or sometimes I hear people ask for really unreasonable demands like "I would like to drive on campus during the day." or "As a faculty member, I think it would be nice if I didn't have to pay for a parking spot." or "It would be nice if the speed limit went above 20 in the evening." or "I wish they would paint stripes on the road that I can actually see, so that I would know whether the road that runs from the rec fields to the baseball stadium is one or two or three lanes wide." or "I wish the parking spots in front of the dorms were actually wide enough to fit my car."

I've even heard people say "It would be nice if buying a parking sticker ensured me a parking space."

Some people, and you're not going to believe this, actually wonder where the money from ticketing goes, since it obviously doesn't go into parking lots. Well, I say "Who cares where the money goes? It's only money and everybody knows that college students are rich."

People, people, people, what are you thinking? How can you demand of an institution called traffic and parking that they provide you parking? Their job is to ticket us and make sure we don't drive on campus and that's it.

Now, if you park on 19th Street and stay longer than the two-hour time limit you might receive a lousy $3 ticket, but if you park in a 30 minute spot on campus you will receive the grand prize of a $10 ticket.

That's right folks, $10, and it only gets better from there.

Wait five days after receiving your ticket and get the added bonus of paying $15. Or, even better yet, park in a reserved dorm spot and pay a $25 ticket with the option of adding another five if you're feeling very generous.

But the mother of grand prizes provided by traffic and parking is the tow.

Now, I've had my car towed. It was indeed absolute stupidity on my part. I completely forgot that I drove my car to rehearsal so I got a ride home, and as I arrived at the theater the next day several friends rushed up to me and said "Julie, I think they're towing your car."

And I said "Oh, it does look like my car, but I walked to class this morning so it can't be my car."

Needless to say I figured out the truth not long after my car trailed out of the lot.

Some might say that traffic and parking make it almost impossible to get your car back since they tow cars to a building on the other side of Brownfield Highway and charge $75 to get your car out.

But I found the whole thing to be a very pleasant experience. The two-mile hike across campus was good for my health, and paying the money felt liberating. I was finally free of the weight of that $75.

I think that everyone should try to look at traffic and parking as a friend to the students.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Lubbock police mistaken arrests not based on race

To the editor: A few years ago when a friend and I were returning home late at night from playing pool, my friend made an erratic turn into our subdivision just to goof around. I laughed but stopped when I saw the worried look on his face as he peered in the review mirror. I looked around just as a police officer turned on his lights.

My friend panicked and decided to travel another block to park his truck at his house. By the time we stopped, there were two police cars there. We were told to step out of the truck, hands in the air, walk backwards and lie face down spread-eagle on the street.

As I followed the orders, I could see another officer had arrived in a K-9 car and they were all pointing guns at us! After this we were manhandled, separated and interrogated for over an hour. We fit the description of a black Bronco with two white males who had just committed an armed robbery three blocks away and critically wounded the clerk.

Were we upset? Hell yes! Having a gun pointed at me while being barked orders at is frightening.

Were we mad? No. The officers were doing their job and protecting themselves from what were possibly dangerous criminals.

Did we later raise a fuss and tell the neighbors, that we were embarrassed in front of, that the police harassed us because of our age? Hell no.

My point is that the whiny and bigoted coaches and family from Hampton University should stop crying and pull their race card off the table. Whether or not they are guilty of what they have been accused of is not the point.

Unfortunately, to live in America today we must suffer the rare, freighting moments that police officers face every day or live closer to anarchy. If these people would take a moment to consider what was going on with the other side of the badge, maybe they would not be in the national news.

But do they want to give up the spot light?

Everyone should give thanks this holiday

Cameron
Graham
Columnist

First let me say to those concerned, that as a Republican, sorrow is neither expected nor required.

That being said, it does tie in somewhat to what I have to say in this, my Thanksgiving column. I call this that because next Friday we will all be somewhere else besides sitting in class rooms and reading the paper.

A few semesters back, I wrote a guest column in which I said basically that the United States of America is essentially the best country on God's green earth. That same day I received a phone call from some guy from England. I don't recall his name but he was some pencil-necked geek that proceeded to tell me how wrong I was to say what I said, and that if I think America is the best country, then I should come and visit the homeless shelter he volunteered in and ask the poor and wretched refuse if they thought the same thing.

After listening patiently, I proceeded to relate some pertinent points of history to this British chap. Basically, that we won our independence from them and that we fought them to a stalemate in the war that followed.

More importantly, we saved their little island country twice in one century.

What I was saying then and now is that we, as citizens, are the ones that made this country great. It wasn't the government. It wasn't a village. It wasn't even President Bill "The Stainmaker" Clinton.

It was you and I, my friends. It was our grandparents who fought world wars. It was our great-grandparents that fought civil wars and so on and so on. And it is these people that you should give thanks to when you sit down to your holiday meal.

Now, I want you all out there to think about it for a minute. Who defeated a major world power for the sake of independence and liberty? Who was it that suffered a war to end the scourge of slavery? Who won two world wars to keep wthe world free? Who won the Cold War over Communism?

On a more positive note, who was it that invented the airplane? Who broke the sound barrier? Who walked on the moon?

The simple answer to all these questions are Americans. Citizens of the United States of America. They fought and suffered and persevered. They worked and created and achieved. They didn't sit around and wait for the government to give them help to do it. By and large, the people behind these events got to where they were because they each strived for personal excellence. And in doing so they made this country what it is today.

And it is these people that you should give thanks to when you sit down to your holiday meal.

Sure you could say that winning wars and walking on the moon were achieved through government programs and such. That is not what I am saying.

What I am saying is that it is the individual, the actual person who flew that plane or walked on the moon or raised the flag over Mount Surabachi we should thank because it is they who made themselves what they are.

Now, I am sure you would all be happy to know that my Thanksgiving Holiday has never been a politically correct one. I sit and eat some form of dead animal, either a dead turkey or dead pig. I eat things that are high in cholesterol and carbohydrates and all the other stuff that is bad for you.

And I give thanks.

I give thanks to Columbus for getting the ball rolling. I give thanks to the pilgrims and the Jamestown settlers for sticking it out. I give thanks to the Indians that helped these folks make it through the winter. I give thanks to those old white guys who signed the Declaration of Independence. I give thanks to the immigrants that came over here and, instead of heading right for the welfare line like they do now, they worked and achieved and contributed to the country.

But there are those out there who will sit down to a meal of trail mix, granola bars and lukewarm cocoa, and instead of thanking the people who have made this country great, they will curse them and blame everything bad in this world on America.

Friends, don't become one of these people. While your well-fed behinds are sitting in your easy chairs at home with the football game on the boob tube just remember those that made it possible for you to sit there and do that. And don't ever let anyone tell you that you don't live in the best country in the world. You do. And it is you and I, my friends, that made it that way. Some will say it was the supposed kind-hearted and giving government with great liberal thinkers behind it. Don't even start to believe it.

MTV marks Lubbock, Tech campus as part of tour

By Sebastian Kitchen
Staff Writer

MTV, Third Eye Blind and Eve 6 will invade Lubbock and the Texas Tech campus Dec. 1. MTV's Campus Invasion is traveling to almost 30 colleges and Tech is on the map.

During the day, students can participate in a free interactive festival on campus. Students will have the opportunity to preview new music videos, experiment with computer-generated music applications, play interactive music games and audition for MTV shows including "Road Rules" and "Real World." In one tent, people can use Intel music technology to mix their own music. In another tent, lemonade and popcorn will be served. The Kaiser Foundation and Life Beat will present the Wheel of Safe Sex. People can spin the wheel, and if they answer a question correctly, they win a prize.

"There has been a great response (at other universities)," said MTV spokeswoman Suzanne Pollin. "People are really happy to get some one-on-one interaction with music."

That evening, Third Eye Blind will headline a concert at the Fair Park Coliseum on the Panhandle-South Plains Fairgrounds. General admission tickets cost $24.25. Eve 6 will open the show.

"We have never not done well with Third Eye Blind," said promoter Mark Lee of 462 Concerts. "They are doing well all over the nation. Ticket sales are doing extremely well so far."

Tickets are available at both locations of Ralph's Records, 909 University and 3322 82nd St.; area Select-A-Seat locations by calling 770-2000; and the University Center ticket booth.

"All of the concerts have been sold out or close to sold out," Pollin said.

Third Eye Blind went from relative obscurity to national recognition with such songs as "Semi-Charmed Life," "Losing a Whole Year," "Graduate," "Jumper" and "How's It Going to Be." The band's self-titled debut spent more than 75 weeks on the Billboard Top Albums chart.

Eve 6 recently climbed radio and music television charts with the hit single "Inside Out." The song spent more than 16 weeks in heavy rotation on MTV.

The MTV Campus tour began Oct. 24 at the University of Nebraska in Lincoln, Neb.

The interactive festival will be from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 18th and Boston, south of the University Center and west of the Women's Gym.

"MTV is looking to continue the Campus Invasion Tour every year," Pollin said.

Fleiss carries out sentence at half-way house

DUBLIN, Calif. (AP) — Heidi Fleiss, the Hollywood Madam convicted of running a sex-facility service for the rich and famous, was released from jail Thursday to a halfway house to complete her sentence.

Fleiss will serve the remaining 17 months on her 37-month federal term for conspiracy, tax evasion and laundering call-girl profits. As part of a plea bargain, she's also serving a concurrent state sentence of 18 months for attempted pandering.

A tearful Fleiss apologized at her sentencing for running a business she blamed on youth and bad choices.

Woman sues Bob Vila for kicking seat

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — A woman who claims Bob Vila kicked and punched the back of her airplane seat last November has sued the home-repair king for nearly $127,000.

Carol Berger accuses the "Home Again" host of injuring her back and causing her lasting psychological trauma on a Nov. 16 flight from Denver to Eugene. Her lawsuit seeks damages for pain, suffering and mental anguish, medical care and lost earnings.

Paul Simon to testify against activist

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Paul Simon has agreed to testify in the embezzlement trial of prominent anti-apartheid activist Allan Boesak as long as he can do it via telephone or video from New York City.

The singer, who donated about $180,000 to Boesak's Foundation for Peace and Justice Charity, was responding to a request from the prosecutor's office, SABC-TV said Thursday.

Simon cited his heavy work schedule as preventing him from traveling to South Africa in person.

Beverly Hillbillies hotel-casino to be built

RENO, Nev. (AP) — It's a go from the Reno Planning Commission for a Beverly Hillbillies hotel-casino.

Commissioners on Wednesday approved master plan and zoning changes and a special use permit for the $130 million project proposed by Max Baer Jr., who played the dimwitted Jethro Bodine on the TV show from the '60s and '70s.

"I'm pleasantly surprised and I'm happy about it," Baer said after a public hearing on the project proposed for Park Lane Mall south of downtown Reno.

Documents auctioned with Alamo diary

(AP) — Other Texas revolution documents auctioned with the Alamo diary Wednesday. Prices include auction house commission:

A letter signed by Jim Bowie authorizing two men to be his lawyers. The letter was dated Dec. 27, 1832 and sold for $43,125.

A document signed by Davy Crockett dated Jan. 1, 1833 while he was a Tennessee congressman.

In it Crockett is a witness to a woman's will addressing her wish to free a slave. It sold for $14,950.

A land grant document signed by Sam Houston on Feb. 10, 1860. It sold for $1,265. A land grant document signed by Anson Jones on Dec. 10, 1845 while he was president of the Republic of Texas. It sold for $1,265.

A letter signed April 15, 1857 by Mirabeau B. Lamar to engraver John Sartain, requesting to see proofs of his portrait. It sold for $1,265.

Legal documents signed Dec. 22, 1834 by William Barret Travis, who was once a lawyer. They sold for $17,250.

Houston emergency room to broadcast live on Internet

HOUSTON (AP) — One of the busiest emergency rooms in the country will go online Friday.

From noon to midnight, America's Health Network will provide continuous coverage live and online of emergencies at Houston's Ben Taub General Hospital. Dubbed "Trauma Center Live," the event is being described by the Orlando-based network as a teaching tool — both for physicians and the public.

"This webcast is about explaining how emergency rooms work," said Scott Shapiro, a spokesman for America's Health Network.

The Harris County hospital's emergency room sees more than 100,000 patients a year.

Last August, the 24-hour cable network brought a live quadruple bypass operation, performed by famed heart surgeon Dr. Denton Cooley, to online viewers. Earlier in the summer, live childbirth was telecast on America's Health Network web site.

The Internet address for America's Health Network is <http://www.ahn.com>.

Julie Andrews may never sing again

NEW YORK (AP) — Julie Andrews, Broadway's "Fair Lady" whose voice swept across the hills in "The Sound of Music," may never sing again.

More than a year ago, Andrews had surgery to remove non-cancerous throat nodules, and her voice hasn't been the same since.

"I don't think she'll sing again — It's an absolute tragedy," Andrews' husband, film director Blake Edwards, told Parade magazine for Sunday's issue. "She was told she'd be OK in six weeks, the voice would actually be better. ... It's over a year, and if you heard it, you'd weep." The 63-year-old Andrews last appeared on stage in New York in September as the host of "Leading Ladies of Broadway," a one-night musical evening at Carnegie Hall. She did not sing during the concert which featured such musical theater stars as Liza Minnelli, Dorothy Loudon, Audra McDonald and Elaine Stritch. Andrews starred in the movie versions of "Mary Poppins" and "The Sound of Music," and in the original Broadway versions of "My Fair Lady" and "Camelot."

"Victor/Victoria," one of seven films she made with Edwards, in October 1995 was turned into a Broadway musical that earned her a Tony Award nomination. But Andrews began missing performances because of throat problems.

She eventually did only seven of the musical's eight weekly performances.

The actress quit "Victor/Victoria" for good in June 1997 to have surgery and was replaced by Raquel Welch.

The musical folded six weeks later at a sizable financial loss.

Edwards told Parade he is developing a show about a magic act for his wife and her old friend, Carol Burnett.

If Andrews can handle speaking lines, the show could be on Broadway in a year, Parade reported.

I don't think she'll sing again — It's an absolute tragedy.

Longhorns will still get better bowl bid

Heath Robinson
Columnist

Texas Tech is a better team than Texas. The Red Raiders worked their tails off for 60 minutes Saturday to prove that, and by winning the most exciting game in the recent history of Jones Stadium, they did so.

Also, should the Red Raiders beat Oklahoma, who is led by the seventh dwarf, Dopey, and Texas lose to rival Texas A&M next week, the Red Raiders would finish ahead of Texas in terms of overall record and South Division standings.

But here is where the sad part comes in. No matter what unfolds, the Longhorns will go to a better bowl than Tech. Now, it's not so drastic this year, because a point could be made that the two teams are about as equal as can be. But Tech won, and will end up with either the same record or a better record than the 'Horns. Too bad the bowls could care less.

Here's what will happen. After Kansas State discards of Missouri and Texas A&M, the Wildcats will go to the Bowl Championship Series, most likely to the championship game in the Fiesta Bowl.

Unless the BCS decides to take two Big 12 teams, which is highly unlikely considering the Aggies will have at least two losses, the Cotton Bowl will take the second best team in the conference. Only they won't.

Cotton Bowl officials are in the business of making money, just like every other bowl. Given a choice of who to select, they will take the team that promises better television ratings and bigger crowd attendance.

For the Cotton Bowl, there is no doubt who this is: either the Aggies or Longhorns.

Considering the Aggies have made the trek to Dallas four times in the 1990s, and Texas just once, this will likely be Texas. Ricky Williams' Heisman Trophy and renewed enthusiasm under new coach Mack Brown have the fickle Texas alumni talking glory days again, and they are traveling in hordes to watch them play.

The Cotton Bowl is dying for a Texas-Arkansas matchup, a certain sellout with a lot of regional flavor. This is where the problem for the Red Raiders comes in.

If Texas finishes with the fourth or fifth best record in the Big 12 conference, but is taken with the second pick, better teams start tumbling.

After the Cotton Bowl, selections in order from Big 12 bowl-eligible teams are made by the Holiday Bowl, the Insight.Com Bowl, the Alamo Bowl and the Independence Bowl.

The Holiday Bowl is likely to take Nebraska, considering their recent success and loyal following.

The Alamo Bowl will almost certainly take the leftovers from the Cotton Bowl, either Texas or Texas A&M, unless the Aggies receive an at-large bid to a higher bowl.

The Insight.Com Bowl, for geographical reasons, is likely to choose Colorado.

A jumble, huh? The safe assumption, however, is that after Kansas State, Texas, Texas A&M and Nebraska are the next three choices. That would leave Colorado, Tech and Missouri to fight over the Insight.Com and Independence Bowl and one at-large bid.

A sad state of affairs, true, but there is a distinct chance the Red Raiders could be headed for the Independence bowl or an at-large bid.

Now, this is all hypothetical, but after an 8-3 season, the thought of Tech being the sixth or seventh choice in the Big 12 is a sobering thought. After this great season for Tech football, all the Red Raiders may have to cling to is a win over the hated Longhorns.

But listening to bowl representatives, there is no doubt as to who came out the real winner Saturday.

Tech closes season with Sooners

By Jason Bernstein
Assistant Sports Editor

Coming on the heels of a win over a top-25 squad, the Texas Tech Red Raiders will travel to Norman, Okla. for a 1 p.m. battle Saturday with the Oklahoma Sooners at Memorial Stadium.

For the Red Raider seniors, including wide receiver Donnie Hart, Saturday's contest marks the final regular season football game in their respective careers.

"It's kind of a sad deal," Hart said. "But this is an extremely important football game for us. Oklahoma has a great defense, they have a lot of athletes, a lot of size, a lot of team speed. Probably as a group, they are the most athletic defense we'll play all year. That's including some pretty good defenses. They (Oklahoma) are an attack-style defense. They'll try to shut down the run, so it's going to be critical that we make plays on the outside to give us a chance to win."

Hart and the rest of the Red Raider offense will line up opposite the nation's ninth rated defense as the Sooners are yielding 273.3 yards-per-contest on the season.

For Tech quarterback Rob Peters, Saturday's season finale will be a chance at redemption as the Red Raiders dropped a 32-21 decision to the Sooners in Lubbock a year ago, preventing Tech from claiming its first-ever Big 12 South Division championship.

"It's not going to be tough to get up for this game," Peters said. "This is an important game and it's certainly not meaningless. There's a lot for us to play for."

Tech (7-3 overall, 4-3 Big 12) is still positioning itself for a possible bowl game as five Big 12 squads are within one game of each other heading into the season's final contests.

The Red Raider offense heads to Norman after a big performance against Texas last Saturday.

After a slow first half, Peters picked up the pace, passing for 322 yards on 19-of-42 attempts. He also connected on two touchdown passes to flanker Derek Dorris while adding the game-winning touchdown run.

"This is kind of a must-win for us," Dorris said. "Maybe not a must-win, but we'd love to win. For them coming into our place last year and beating us, we'd love to do the same to them. It'd just top-off a great year that we've had."

The Red Raiders enter Saturday's season finale with the Big 12's third-best offense, accounting for 411.50 yards-per-game.

Peters and the rest of the Tech squad are outscoring its opponents by a 28-20 margin through 10 games this season.

"We know that we've got to go up there and play well and play hard to win," Peters said. "I think more than anything we can't turn the ball over and give them anything easy. We want to make them have to go the length of the field against our defense. That's hard for anyone to do.

Wes Underwood/The University Daily

Hard Road: Tech running back Ricky Williams goes for extra yards last week in the 42-35 win over Texas. The Red Raiders finish out the regular season against Oklahoma at 1 p.m. Saturday in Norman, Okla.

You just don't want to give them anything cheap. You want to make them earn everything. The goal for us is to pick up where we left off in the Texas game."

Oklahoma (4-6 overall, 2-5 Big 12) on the other hand, has the 11th rated offense in the Big 12 and 93rd best offense in the nation, putting up 301.4 yards-per-game and 16.4 points-per-contest on the season.

"We have to go in focused Saturday," said defensive end Montae Reagor. "It would be great to go out with a win and end this thing right. It'd be nice to end it with momentum for the seniors and momentum for this team going into next year."

Leading the offensive charge for the Sooners is junior running back De'Mond Parker, who is rushing for 106.7 yards-per-game.

"He's a great back," Reagor said. "But we'll just try to swarm the ball and stop the run like we've done every game this year. If we do that, we should have a good chance for a win on Saturday."

Raiders run past Roadrunners, 87-78

By Jeff Keller
Staff Writer

Despite 29 turnovers, the Texas Tech men's basketball team picked up an 87-78 victory over the Texas-San Antonio Roadrunners Thursday at Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Tech (1-0 overall) led 38-27 at the half but was outscored 51-49 in the second half.

Tech used a 65 percent shooting average from the field and a 63 percent shooting average from three-point range to defeat the Roadrunners.

Leading the way in scoring for the Red Raiders was junior forward Cliff Owens with 23 points.

Owens led Tech in rebounds with seven and added an assist and two blocked shots to aide the Red Raider attack.

The Red Raiders held the height advantage over the Roadrunners, but points in the post did not come easy for the Red Raiders, Owens said.

"I don't think that their lack of height down low made it any easier on us," Owens said.

"They played very hard and they scrapped. When we saw the matchups, we made it a focal point to go into the post."

Senior guard Stan Bonewitz shot 100 percent from the field and was 3-of-3 from three-point range.

Getting off to an early lead was important for the Red Raiders, Bonewitz said.

"It was important as a team that we got off to a good start," Bonewitz said.

"I think we got off to a good start and did some things well early and did some things well late. We didn't play the game we wanted to play. UTSA came in here and fought hard for 40 minutes and made it tough on us, and we were lucky to get the win but we'll take it. At the end of the season you won't worry how things went. All you will see is that W, and that is what we are concerned with right now is getting wins."

Red Raider coach James Dickey said he was glad to pick up the win.

"I'm glad we won," Dickey said.

"I'm glad that the game is over with." Dickey said the Tech lead at the half should have been larger, but turnovers hampered the Red Raider attack.

"In the first half if we don't turn the ball over 16 times, we probably have a chance to have a 25 point lead," he said.

"I think that our defense and rebounding was outstanding in the first half. We were just sloppy with the basketball and that progressed throughout the game."

Texas-San Antonio never got closer to Tech than eight points in the second half, but Tech needs to learn to apply the knock-out punch to opponents when the Red Raiders get them down, Dickey said.

Red Raider men's track team signs top Texas distance runner

The Texas Tech men's track announced Wednesday the signing of one of the state's top distance runners, Ryan Cruz from Shallowater.

Cruz was the 1997 2A state champion and 1998 3A state champion in cross country.

Cruz was also 1998 2A champion in the 3,200 meters and fourth in the 1,600 meters.

"Ryan is one of the best high school distance runners in the state of Texas," said assistant track coach Dave Smith.

Lady Raiders look for revenge

By Brent Dirks
Sports Editor

Angie Braziel didn't like how she and the Texas Tech Lady Raiders rang in 1998 with a 74-71 loss to Old Dominion on New Year's Day.

But more than 10 months later the No. 12 Lady Raiders will get the chance for revenge against the No. 15 Lady Monarchs at 10:30 a.m. Saturday in Norfolk, Va.

"Last year we kind of came out with a big lead and kind of relaxed, and we let them come out with the win" Braziel, who had 10 points last year against Old Dominion.

"But this year, we're going to stay focused and concentrate on our offense, as well as defense and just try for the win."

After the Hampton game canceled Tuesday, Braziel said the Lady Raiders (1-0 overall) have stepped it up during practice.

"We took the day off Tuesday," Braziel said. "We got together and practiced Wednesday. We looked at it as we didn't get the chance to play, so we needed to practice extra hard. That game with Hampton would have prepared us for ODU. But we have to look at it, as we didn't play, so we've got to take care of it in practice."

With the cancellation, the Lady Raiders have refocused. Tech coach Marsha Sharp said.

"It's been kind of an unusual week for us," Sharp said.

"We certainly would have like to played the game Tuesday to kind of get us ready for the weekend. But then, we had to come back and focus on our practice situations and get ready to go. I hope we'll be ready to play Old Dominion, it will be a real test for us."

As for the Lady Monarchs (1-0 overall), they also come into Saturday's contest after a long layoff. Old Dominion defeated Marshall 68-38 Sunday in the team's season opener.

Senior forward Mary Andrade led Old Dominion with 14 points and nine rebounds. Center Jessica Williams poured in 10 points and nine boards against Marshall.

Gone are familiar Old Dominion faces like super-point guard Teicha Penichero, but Sharp said the Lady Monarchs are still a dangerous squad.

"They're good," she said. "They have some awfully good players in their system. They brought in some new players. I think what you think about with an Old Dominion, like some other premier programs in the country, they really don't rebuild, they just reload."

"I think that's true of the group they've got their now. Maybe they're not as experienced, but they're as talented."

But as if playing the Lady Monarchs was not enough, the Old Dominion contest marks the first of a three-game cross-country road trip for the Lady Raiders.

After playing Old Dominion Saturday, the Lady Raiders will take on SMU Monday and Stanford Nov. 27 on the road.

"We'll know a lot more about ourselves in 10 days," Sharp said. "I think it will help us in Big 12 play to play in some hostile environments and do some things. You always get better when you play on the road. And I think you usually build some team chemistry. All those things will be important for us."

Wade Kennedy/The University Daily
Long Arm: Lady Raider post Angie Braziel goes for a ball earlier this season. Braziel and Tech begin a three-game, cross-country road trip with Old Dominion at 10:30 a.m. Saturday in Norfolk, Va.

Tech v-ballers battle Kansas State Wildcats

By Jeff Keller
Sports Editor

The Texas Tech volleyball team will try to avenge an earlier season loss when the Red Raiders battle Kansas State Wildcats at 7 p.m. today at the Lubbock Civic Center.

Tech (20-10 overall, 9-8 Big 12) dropped the first match with the Wildcats in three straight games and will be out for revenge, sophomore outside hitter Heather Hughes said.

"We lost to them pretty bad the first time," Hughes said. "There is a big time revenge factor coming in here. Plus a win would give us a higher seed in the tournament. There's a lot riding on this game, so I think we will play well."

Tech is currently ranked No. 24.

"I think that we're playing a lot better now," said junior outside hitter Courtney Putnam. "We have a lot more intensity, and we're playing a lot cleaner. I think it's going to be a lot better game then it was the last time."

The Red Raiders will play the game at the Civic Center because of a schedule conflict with the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

The change of atmosphere should not distract, Putnam said.

"It's different," Putnam said of the Civic Center. "I don't think it will be that big of a difference for us. It might be but we're still at home."

Tech will try to focus on certain areas of their game that hurt the team in the first match against the Wildcats, Red Raider coach Jeff Nelson said.

"We've got to focus a little bit better on our block," Nelson said. "But if we can ball handle and serve tough, I think it will be a good match for us. They're a good ball handling team. If we don't ball handle and serve well it won't matter because they're a good ball control team. They'll eat us up if we don't side-out well."

Tech is coming off a straight-game victory over Baylor in the Red Raiders last match Wednesday.

Though the Red Raiders won the match against the Bears, they hope to play better against the Wildcats, Nelson said.

"We played a little slow, and I thought we played down to their level in terms of we play a little faster game and rely a little more on ball handling," Nelson said of the match against the Bears. "We kind of got in a slow game with them and we needed to keep it fast. We definitely need to pick up the pace before the Kansas State match."

A win would help Tech's confidence, Hughes said.

"It will help our confidence especially since it's against a ranked team," Hughes said. "We need another win over a ranked team this season. So it would give us a lot of confidence if we beat Kansas State."

Sosa overwhelms McGwire to pick up NL MVP award

NEW YORK (AP) — Sammy Sosa insisted all along that Mark McGwire should be the National League's Most Valuable Player. No one outside St. Louis agreed with him.

After losing to McGwire in the race for the home run record, Sosa overwhelmed his friendly rival Thursday, getting 30 of 32 first-place votes and 438 points in balloting by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

McGwire, who hit 70 homers to Sosa's 66, got the other two first-place votes and 272 points. Two sports writers for the St. Louis Post-Dispatch voted for McGwire and had Sosa second.

"I would have voted for Mark," Sosa said in Chicago. "In my heart, Mark McGwire is still the man."

McGwire, on vacation in Australia, praised his rival but didn't say how he would have voted.

"To put it in his words, today Sammy is the man," McGwire said in a statement issued by the Cardinals. "He did a great job carrying the Cubbies back to the playoffs."

As they approached Roger Maris' old home run record of 61, Sosa and McGwire became friends. Sosa repeatedly predicted McGwire would get to the record first and often said it was McGwire's year.

"It's hard to hit 70 home runs and not win MVP," Sosa said. "I was never so sure to myself that I had it until today."

But the baseball writers put a premium on playing for a winning team, and Sosa led the Chicago Cubs into the playoffs for the first time since 1989. The Cardinals stumbled to a third-place finish in the NL Central, 19 games behind Houston and seven behind the wild-card Cubs.

Sosa hit .308 and led the majors with 158 RBIs, 132 runs and 414 total bases.

McGwire finished with 147 RBIs and a .299 average, leading the majors in walks (162), slugging percentage (.752) and on-base percentage (.470).

Sosa's win made the MVP awards a sweep for Latin American players. Texas' Juan Gonzalez — a former teammate of Sosa's in the Rangers' minor-league system and a native of Puerto Rico — won the AL MVP on Wednesday.

Everyone back in Sosa's homeland in the Dominican Republic expected him to win. He joined George Bell (1987) as the only Dominican MVP winners.

"Sosa, This is Your Day," blared the lead sports page of the newspaper Listin Diario, printed before the vote totals were announced.

Sosa will go to the Dominican Republic early Friday morning and meet with First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, said his agent, Tom Reich. Sosa, who intends to spend about 10 days on the island, has been heavily involved in helping the country recover from Hurricane Georges.

"My reputation outside the field, that counts a lot," Sosa said. "Maybe people took it from there."

Sosa, given a hero's welcome last month when he returned to San Pedro de Macoris, said his charitable foundation has been involved in distributing food.

While Sosa was first or second on every ballot, McGwire got 20 seconds, three thirds, one fourth, four fifths, one sixth and one seventh.

Even Cardinals manager Tony La Russa thought Sosa had the edge.

"I'm so biased it's ridiculous, but I think Sammy deserves it," La Russa said during the season's final week. "I don't think he's done more for his team than Mark has, but his team has done more than ours has, so his contribution counts for a little more in my book."

BIG XII WEEK IN REVIEW

FOOTBALL STATISTICS AND STANDINGS

PLAYER AWARDS

OFFENSIVE PLAYER OF THE WEEK:

Michael Bishop; QB; K St
Bishop did the unthinkable in helping the Wildcats to a 40-30 win over Nebraska. He rushed for 140 net yards on 25 carries while also completing 19-of-33 passes for 306 yards. In all, Bishop accounted for 446 of the Wildcats' 512 total yards.
• Had a game-long 50-yard run, helping the Wildcat offense to a score.
• Led Kansas State to its first win over Nebraska in 29 years.

DEFENSIVE PLAYERS OF THE WEEK:

Dat Nguyen; LB; Texas A&M
Nguyen tallied 17 total tackles in the Aggies' 17-14 win over Missouri last Saturday in College Station. He is a finalist for both the Butkus and Lombardi Awards for outstanding defensive play. He also recorded three tackles for losses and one sack. Nguyen and the defense limited the Tiger offense to 14 points en route to the win. Texas A&M became the first South Division school to win back-to-back divisional titles.

Chris Birkholz; PK; Tech

Birkholz tied the Tech school record with four field goals in one game while also booting a perfect inside kick helping Tech to a 42-35 win over Texas. Birkholz hit on a 53-yard field goal, his career long on his first attempt of the game.

• 1-4
Tech's overall record against the Sooners. Tech's last win came in 1996. Also, the Red Raiders have never beaten Oklahoma in Lubbock.

• 2,092-1,145
The Red Raiders have almost outrushed their opponents by a 2-to-1 margin.

• 109
The most yards rushing by any player in the Tech-OU series. Tech's Ricky Williams accomplished the feat last season in Lubbock.

• 2-of-3
Two of the last three Sooner offensive coordinators have previously served as Tech assistant coaches.
