Lady Raider program receives $1 million

By Brent Dirks
Staff Writer

Gene West always has wanted to be associated with a winner.

Both he and his wife, Eloise, got their wish when the couple gave a $1 million endowment to the Texas Tech Lady Raider basketball program Tuesday.

West, vice president of operations at Tech, came to the university in 1982, the same year as current Lady Raider coach Marsha Sharp.

"Through the years, I've watched that program build," West said. "I've watched Marsha just build that team every year and build the kind of program now that I think we reload every year. Texas Tech doesn't rebuild. We reload every year."

West, former director of building maintenance and utilities, said the Lady Raider program has continued to help Tech garner recognition across the United States. The Muleshoe native earned both his bachelor's and master's degree from Tech.

"For a program like this, you get more recognition for Texas Tech than anything at the physical plant or anything anybody else can do," West said. "If you've got any athletic team that wins, you get a lot of recognition for the school."

West said he wanted to give the money to presidential scholarships, but his wife, who along with Sharp are both from Swisher County, helped change his mind.

Sharp and the entire 1998-1999 Lady Raider squad attended the ceremony. Sharp presented the Wests with a basketball signed by the Tech squad commemorating the 30-4, Sweet 16 team from this season.

"The financial gift itself is terrific, but to be the one you choose out of all the great things that happen at this university is something that we can never thank you for and that we will be forever indebted," Sharp said.

Sharp said the donation is a great honor for the Lady Raider program.

"We talk a lot in our program about the importance of giving back to things that you believe in," Sharp said. "So for (the Lady Raider team), you will always be someone special in their lives because of your commitment to do that to this university and our program in particular."

With the donation, which is part of the faculty/staff Horizon campaign, the total Horizon campaign has hit the $265 million mark. The goal for the campaign is $300 million. The gift, the $1 million life insurance policy from the Wests, names Tech as owner and beneficiary.

"The Wests are long time and loyal friends of the Lady Raiders, and Mr. and Mrs. West agreed that this money should go to help attract exceptional students who happen to be excellent basketball players," Chancellor John Montford said.

"So, we are pleased to receive this gift and offer our heart-felt thanks to the Wests for their support of Tech. It is extra special when we get a gift from one of our own."

Senate votes to raise UC fee cap

By Apu Naik
Staff Writer

Texas Tech students now are closer to having the opportunity to vote on an increase in their University Center fee cost. This follows the Texas Senate Subcommittee on Higher Education's unanimous vote last week in support of Senate Bill 562.

The bill first was introduced by Tech Administrators to Sen. Robert Duncan, R-Lubbock. The bill outlines plans to raise the fee cap of $50 per student, which would then be used to renovate and add new facilities to the UC.

Under the bill, the current UC fee cap could be increased, but the fee is not to exceed $75.

Porter Wilson, legislative aide to Duncan, said the bill faced no opposition in the Senate because it does not increase the fee — it only gives students the chance to increase the fee.

"We didn't expect much debate with the UC fee bill because we know that it's really a decision the students should be able to make," Wilson said.

The Senate first received the bill Feb. 17, but the bill's author, Duncan, would not take any action on the bill until Tech student senators passed a resolution supporting the bill.

After the resolution was passed, testimony in support of the bill was taken March 31, and then on April 6, the Texas Subcommittee on Higher Education passed the UC fee bill by a vote of 8-0.

"We will first have to convene with a student committee and then begin deciding on possible areas to first add to the UC and then think about renovations," said Tom Shubert, University Center director.

One addition being considered is the construction of a new bookstore inside of the UC.

"It's still just an option being discussed, but the bookstore could be bigger and more user-friendly, just depending on what the students want," said Blythe Clayton, Student Government Association president.

FIGHTING BACK

Student braves all against leukemia battle

By Laura Hensley
Staff Writer

The only visible proof of Stephanie Arno's current fight with leukemia is her thinning blond hair, which she has fixed in a cropped, spiky do. A wide smile stretches across her face, and she cracks a joke about losing her hair.

"Some people told me to shave it, but I told them they had to be kidding," she said, running her fingers over her short hair. "I just got it cut short. I'm just going to let it fall out."

About three weeks ago, this freshman agriculture business major from McKinney was diagnosed with acute lymphoblastic leukemia. But, she is not facing the fight alone. Ever since her diagnosis, she has been showered with love and support from fellow Texas Tech students and her sisters in Delta Gamma sorority.

Hundreds of cards and posters from her friends line the walls of her hospital room pleading to "Get Well Soon."

"It means a lot to me," she said looking around her cozy room. "It keeps me going."

In the room, there is a Clint Eastwood poster in the corner, plenty of pictures, balloons, dart guns, puzzles and an Etch-A-Sketch with "Get Well" scrawled on the screen.

"They bring me all of these things to keep me occupied and keep me happy here," she said. "They keep me laughing."

Members of Delta Gamma recently visited Arno for a special Hats Off To Stephanie gathering. They all gave her hats to wear for when she eventually loses her hair.

"She is doing really good," said Amber Albertini, Delta Gamma adviser. "She has a great attitude and is very strong and cheery to be around."

Arno appreciates all of the visits and gifts she has been receiving. She said it shows her how much people really care about her.

"It's overwhelming, actually, that so many people care," Arno said. "The first two weeks, people came in all day everyday. I'd have to ask them to leave because I was so tired."

Arno was diagnosed after complaining of blurred vision. She went to Student Health Services but was referred to another doctor, who found the problem to be hemorrhaging of the retinas. After blood tests were made at University Medical Center, she was called in to receive the results.

"You have leukemia, so you are going to be staying with us awhile," she said mimicking the doctors' explanation.

She was admitted for treatment one day later.

Currently, Arno is nearing the end of a 28-day chemotherapy treatment and is expected to leave the hospital soon. But, she said she is not headed straight home to McKinney, where she will receive monthly treatments. Instead, she plans to hang around Lubbock for a couple of days and attend a Delta Gamma chapter meeting one last time.

The sorority recently has set up a trust fund in Arno's name at Lubbock National Bank. All money received will go toward her medical treatment and hospital stays. Checks can be sent to Lubbock National Bank at P.O. Box 6100, Lubbock, Texas 79423.

Faculty recognized for excellence in teaching

By J.D. Boswell
Staff Writer

Faculty members and professors from all colleges of Texas Tech assembled at the University Theatre Tuesday for the Faculty Honors Convocation to honor those who have excelled in teaching and research.

Tech Provost John Burns opened the assembly, followed by remarks from President Donald Haragan and Chancellor John Montford.

"You are the key," Haragan said at the beginning of the assembly. "The faculty is the key to the ambitions and goals we set for the university."

Both Montford and Haragan expressed their "heart-felt thanks" to the recipients, and those who came to honor the recipients. Montford called the event "a special time for us" and said Tech will reach the Tier 1 Level "largely because of the dedication of the faculty."

The two designated Horn professors were Clyde Jones from the Department of Biological Sciences and Kenneth Ketner, director for the Institute for Studies in Pragmatism. Both were recognized for the achievement.

Haragan called the award, of which only 52 have been given, the "highest honor" for Tech faculty.

Ten professors received the President's Excellence in Teaching Award, which began in 1981. The honor included an engraved medallion and $1,500.

Recipients include: Paul Vaughn, College of Agricultural Sciences and Natural Resources; Michael Jones, College of Architecture; Marilyn Houck, James Whitlark, Judith Oskam and Minerva Cordero, College of Arts and Sciences; Fred Hartmeister, College of Education; Scott Frailey, College of Engineering; Ben Goh, College of Human Sciences; and Maddox Professor Bruce Kramer, School of Law.

The President's Academic Achievement Awards, also given with an engraved medallion and a $2,000 check, were given to three professors for their teaching, research and service to the university. The recipients of the award, which started in 1986, are: Ronald Sosebee, College of Agricultural Sciences and Natural Resources; Carolyn Rude, College of Arts and Sciences; and Sue Couch, College of Human Sciences.

The Tech Dads and Moms Association presented its Bernie E. Rushing Jr. Faculty Distinguished Research Award to a professor who has "published research of the highest quality," Haragan said. Internationally-recognized ecologist, Michael Willig from the College of Arts and Sciences, was this year's recipient of the award, which began in 1977. Willig has received $10 million in research funding throughout his career.

William Lan, of the College of Education, and Scott Norville, of the College of Engineering were the recipients of the El Paso Energy Foundation Achievement Awards, and each will receive $2,000 for three years.

Faculty members who have been at Tech for less than four years are eligible for the Ex-Students Association New Faculty Award. This year,

Tech gets ready for Arbor Day

By Ginger Pope

Texas Tech Campus Caregivers will renew the tradition of Arbor Day April 30, and event planners expect campus-wide participation.

Friday, committee members announced the schedule of the celebration and two upcoming informational meetings to help build excitement.

"This is an event where everyone gets involved in giving back to the campus," said Debbie Montford, chairwoman of Campus Caregivers.

Arbor Day is part of the Campus Master Plan beautification program.

The Caregivers' committee hopes Arbor Day will help launch the program Trees for Tech, which eventually could bring 10,000 trees to the campus, Montford said.

During the Arbor Day celebration, which begins in the afternoon, Campus Caregivers expect to plant about 75 trees on the university campus and about 30 at the Tech Health Sciences Center.

"Trees will be placed where they are needed, and participants can come along and help place them in the ground," Montford said.

Symposium to offer both sides of conflict

The 10th anniversary of the Vietnam Center will be celebrated Wednesday through Saturday along with the third triennial Vietnam Symposium at the Holiday Inn Lubbock Plaza.

Along with the Vietnam Symposium, the public will be able to visit the Vietnam moving wall, which made its last appearance at Tech in May of 1989.

The ceremonies will be at 5 p.m. Wednesday with the opening ceremonies for the wall visit on campus at 18th Street and Boston Avenue. Following the ceremony, there will be a public reception at the University Center celebrating the beginning of the symposium.

Having the symposium is important for the Vietnam Center, said James Reckner, director of the Vietnam Center.

"We derive our support from the people," Reckner said. "So now, we have to give something back."

The symposium will officially begin at 9 a.m. Thursday at the Dallas/Irving room at the Holiday Inn Lubbock Plaza with a kick-off ceremony sponsored by Chancellor John Montford.

Also, the center is planning to build a three floor museum dedicated to the Vietnam War that is now in preliminary stages. During the Ceremony, a presentation of the video for the new building will be shown at the symposium.

Throughout the next three days there will be 27 panels ranging from the "Differing Perceptions of the War," to "Peace Operations in Cambodia," and ending with "Teaching the Vietnam War."

The panel discussions will feature prominent guests from both sides of the war such as Adm. Elmo Zumwalt Jr., retired United States Navy; Gen. William Rosson, retired United States Army; and from Vietnam, former North Vietnamese Prime Minister Gen. Nguyen Khanh and Lt. Gen. Nguyen Dinh Uoc.

Having both sides of the Vietnam War represented is one of the most important aspects of the symposium, Reckner said, and it is a rare occasion.

"We invited different sides of the war. That way everybody has a chance to speak from their point of view," Reckner said. "This makes the experience of the symposium academia and not propaganda."

The symposium will conclude Saturday at 4 p.m., but the wall will continue to be at Tech through Sunday afternoon.

Beyond THE WALL

Directing history Reckner brings experience, enthusiasm to center, classes

Twenty-four hours a day and seven days a week is the work James Reckner, director of the Vietnam Center, has put into the center for the past 10 years, but he said it is all worth the effort.

Reckner began his military career when he joined the U.S. Navy in 1958. Little did he know, five years later, he would step foot in Vietnam and change his life forever.

"Joining the Navy was a decision I made on my own, and it was the greatest time of my life," he said.

Before Reckner was stationed in Vietnam, he travelled the world. It was his world travels that led him to his wife in 1959, when he visited New Zealand.

For the next 20 years, Reckner paid his naval dues to the Navy and finally retired in July of 1978. Once his military career ended, he did not stop his education and discipline.

Reckner attended the University of Auckland in New Zealand and received a bachelor's, master's and doctorate with honors in history.

After graduating from the university, Reckner accepted a job as a public relations official for New Zealand tourism. This job lasted for a year because Reckner said he needed more depth in his career.

"My job in New Zealand was very interesting but shallow," he said.

He and his wife left New Zealand in 1987 to come to Texas, where he taught at Texas A&M University for the next two school years, a job that he is not proud to announce around Texas Tech, he said.

Reckner, after realizing A&M was not the place for him, received an offer in 1988 from Tech to teach Naval History.

The acceptance of this offer changed Reckner's life in that he once again had to use the same skills he learned in the Navy.

"I have put 400 percent into my teaching Naval History," Reckner said. "And, that doesn't include my work at the Vietnam Center."

In September of 1988, Reckner bore the idea of having a Vietnam Center at Tech — an idea that soon grew to the largest Vietnam-dedicated center in the world.

"My idea only took three months for approval," Reckner said. "This just shows that if any faculty has a good idea and is well organized, here at Tech, the sky's the limit."

The first four to five years the center was funded out of Reckner's pocket and grew to be a success, Reckner said.

The center is celebrating its 10th anniversary, along with the third triennial Vietnam Symposium beginning today and running daily through Saturday.

The symposium will include discussion panels from both sides of the war, as well as an unveiling of the proposed plans of the future Vietnam Center. Also during the symposium, the Tech campus will be visited by the travelling Vietnam Veterans Memorial, "The Wall That Heals."

The symposium is another way the Vietnam Center is trying to preserve the history of Vietnam and the Vietnam War, Reckner said.

"If we don't do something to help preserve it...they might be gone," he said.

Visiting memorial brings history to Tech

The Vietnam Wall has been a place where veterans, families of veterans and millions of others have remembered the lives of those who fought and died in the Vietnam War.

Millions visit "The Wall That Heals" every year.

The exact, half-scale replica of the memorial was constructed with the purpose to tour the country to allow those who cannot make it to Washington to view the wall.

Through the efforts of the Vietnam Center, "The Wall That Heals" will be brought to Tech to coincide with the Vietnam Symposium. The wall will stand on the corner of 18th Street and Boston Avenue.

Having the replicated wall and the symposium together is no coincidence, said James Reckner, director of the Vietnam Center. The center requested the visit of the wall years ago.

The ability of the Vietnam Center to acquire the wall at the same time of the symposium is a sign that the center is moving in a positive way, said Ron Frankum, archivist for the Vietnam Archive.

"The Vietnam Wall was the first national monument dedicated to the Vietnam war," Frankum said.

"Having the wall at the same time as the symposium shows the program expanding in a positive way."

The opening ceremony for the wall will be at 5 p.m. Wednesday at the wall site on campus and will include an invocation by Father Jim Haney, Navy Chaplain in Vietnam and "Taps," by the Tech music department.

Other events taking place during the symposium will be a candlelight ceremony at the Vietnam moving wall at 8 p.m. Thursday; a ceremony at 5 p.m. Friday at the wall with special guest Col. Roger Donlon, Medal of Honor recipient; and a memorial service at 8 a.m. Sunday.

The closing service will be at 5 p.m. Sunday and will conclude the visit of the wall.

The last time the replicated wall visited Tech was in May of 1989, before the Vietnam Center was opened.

All ceremonies at the wall will be free and open to the public, and the wall will be available for viewing during its visit.

Keeping record Archivist preserves past for department

The most prominent department of the Vietnam Center is the Vietnam Archive under the direction of archivist Ron Frankum.

Frankum's interest in history began when he had a high school history teacher who inspired him to no limits, Frankum said.

"I always had an interest in history," he said.

"I think part of the reason is I had a good high school history teacher."

The influence of his teacher carried him throughout college.

Frankum eventually received a doctorate in history at the University of Connecticut.

Frankum did not jump into his field of history once he received his degree.

Ron Frankum

Instead, he taught at the University of Connecticut in Special Education.

However, the call of being a historian still rang in his soul.

"I had done archive work in Syracuse, so my decision on coming to Tech was based on the archive here," Frankum said.

"Especially the fact that it was a Vietnam archive."

Frankum came to Tech and immediately made efforts to improve the goal of the archive to preserve the history of Vietnam.

"We have two main focuses at the archive," Frankum said.

"One is to collect records of the experiences of the Vietnamese; and two, to talk with veteran organizations to preserve records."

The focus is to collect and preserve every source of material the archive can obtain, Frankum said.

"Our key is to preserve," he said.

"Some records we have found in attics and storage. We recently received a collection that we found in Tombstone."

The archive will not stop at Vietnam, Frankum said.

Once they have collected everything they can, there are other countries on the map Frankum and the other archivists have their eyes on, Frankum said.

"Our goal is to try to get all of these collections, and if we can do that, we will move to other countries," he said.

"I have always been interested in Australia."

Besides being the top archivist of the Vietnam Center, Frankum will play another role in the third, triennial symposium.

He also will be presenting papers and will "help as help is needed," he said.

Airport oddities confuse

I hate to wait. But you know that. Last week I went on a long trip. That meant that I had to spend a lot of time doing the one thing that I despise the most. Waiting.

It did, however, give me time to think. This is what the outcome of my hour-upon-hour-long brain storming (a.k.a. mindless thoughts) session was.

What is it about being in an airport that makes people totally unaware to the rest of the world around them?

How difficult is it to find gate nine?

All the gates are in a long line in numerical order. If you can count, you can find your flight.

All flights are listed on the huge monitors that you see every 15 feet. As a general rule of thumb, this is your best source of information about your flight because the employees know about as much as you do.

Kevin Preas
Columnist

Here's a tip when you hear a cart behind you— move.

Don't stop. Don't turn and stare. Get out of the way. Next topic: Why are airport employees rude? Generally, I feel that anybody who has a job should be happy. You make a choice to work.

I say that working is your choice in response to not to living on the streets.

So, say "hello" and "have a nice trip" to me and smile when you check my baggage. If I ask a question, don't ignore me, answer me. A simple "I'm not sure" would be fine.

Last complaint about airline travel— Why don't you get a full glass of the beverage of your choice?

It would make life on the flight attendant a whole lot easier if you would just give me the full can of Coke in the first place instead of filling the cup up every five minutes.

I'm sure in some flight manual there is an explanation for the use of the small cups, but I don't think the person who wrote that manual has ever been terribly thirsty on a plane and been handed a three-ounce cup of Coke.

Enough ranting and raving for this week. Please note that the majority of these observations came on the return flight home, not on the way there. Anyone in their right mind would think the same way after spending 12 hours in an airport, waiting. Happy traveling.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Ethnic Albanians not innocent in Kosovo war

To the editor: Who really believes that "our" media is without bias? Who anywhere, believes that "our" media is objective and rational? Lately, we have been deluged by how mean and rotten the Serbian people are.

How President Milosevic is such a particularly vile Serbian man — killing the poor, helpless Albanians, he is committing "ethnic cleansing," which of course makes him much more nefarious.

But what about the other side? Is there anyway possible that Albanians are to blame?

Well, back when intervention in the former Yugoslavia was not a priority this is what the New York Times (November 1, 1987) had to say: "Portions of southern Yugoslavia have reached such a state of ethnic friction that Yugoslavs have begun to talk of the horrifying possibility of civil war ...

"The current hostilities pit ethnic-minded Albanians against the various Slavic populations of Yugoslavia and occur at all levels of society, from the highest officials to the humblest peasants.

"A young Army conscript of ethnic Albanian origin shot up his barracks, killing four sleeping Slavic bunkmates and wounding six others.

"The Army has uncovered hundreds of subversive ethnic Albanian cells in its ranks. Some arsenals have been raided. Ethnic Albanians in the government have manipulated public funds and regulations to take over land belonging to Serbs. . . . Slavic Orthodox churches have been attacked, and flags have been torn down. Wells have been poisoned and crops burned. Slavic boys have been knifed, and some young ethnic Albanians have been told by their elders to rape Serbian girls"

Sort of puts current events into perspective, where was the United States when the Serbians needed us? It was around this time when Slobodan Milosevic entered the picture.

In the last 12 years he's turned the situation in Kosovo around. He's made Kosovo safe for Serbs again and broken the back of an Albanian rebel army of 25,000 armed terrorists and guerrillas. What Milosevic has done is hardly the one-sided Serb aggression against defenseless, peace-loving Albanians that Clinton and the mass-media would have you believe. History teaches us the following: America shall not remain the dominant economic and military power forever. And when we fall they will come and slaughter us, and for our naivete, we will have deserved it.

Response to letter to the editor "Closed parking lots causes problems for Tech student."

We're really grateful to a student for voicing his frustration on this issue in Friday's paper because it gives us the opportunity to try to inform the entire campus of this situation.

Many people don't realize it, but the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum is owned by the city of Lubbock, along with the adjacent parking lots.

Since these facilities are not used very often on weekdays, the city has an agreement with Tech that we lease the parking lot and use it when the city doesn't need it for other events. What this means to you, the student, is that when the city does schedule something in the auditorium or coliseum, they have the right to recall part or all of the lot for their guests.

Fortunately, this doesn't happen very often, but last week, the city did use a portion of the lot on Tuesday/Thursday mornings (7 a.m.-11:30 a.m.).

This is only the second time this school year (including the fall semester) that this has happened. In order to secure their portion of the lot, they control the entrances and try to redirect Tech students to other parking areas. Traffic and Parking also uses some of our employees in this effort.

Believe me, they don't like being out there with frustrated students yelling at them any more than you like not being able to park in the lot. The student writing the letter probably is right in the fact that the people at the entrances do not have the time to speak with every driver — usually there is a long line of vehicles also trying to get into the lot, and they're trying to keep things moving.

We make every effort to get this word out in advance to students: temporary signs are posted at all entrances to the lot a couple of days prior to the event, it is published in "Moments Notice" in The University Daily and signs are posted in campus buses.

This is all done in an effort to help you plan ahead so you can seek other parking lots on those days. There usually is parking available in the lots on Indiana Avenue. Please keep in mind, the alternative is for the city to not lease the lot to Tech, in which case you would never be able to park there.

Response to letter to the editor "Traffic and Parking should revise system of ticketing"

There are several inaccuracies in this letter that need to be cleared up. First and foremost, there is not, nor never has been, "some person sitting in front of a computer generating false tickets."

What has actually happened is that the student, who wrote the letter, did in fact sell her car, and the new owner is another Tech student who has not registered it with the university.

Since the seller was the last one to register the vehicle, the computer system logically identified the ticket with her.

Another bit of misinformation is that "car tags are changed as owners change for tax purposes, so a new owner would already have new tags."

For your own protection, please don't believe that this is true. When you sell a vehicle, whether it is to a dealership or another individual, the license plate goes with the vehicle. As the registered owner of the vehicle, it is your responsibility to make sure that the title is changed over to the new owner.

Many people just trust the new owner to make this change. When it doesn't happen, they don't know that they are still legally responsible for that vehicle, and the burden of proof then falls on them.

It is rather easy to prove a change of ownership if you sold the vehicle to a dealership because they usually have good record-keeping — it is much more difficult (almost impossible) when you sell to another individual.

This department would be tickled pink if everyone would park where they should, and we never had to issue another ticket and deal with the aftermath.

The truth is that our writer was upset when she first called and would not even give the young man (who is a fellow Tech student) an opportunity to help her by explaining what had happened.

The next time you call, keep in mind that the men and women in this department, to whom you are directing your anger, are moms and dads just like your parents (or students just like you).

There are not many people they deal with who are happy with having to pay for parking or for receiving a ticket, and the employees in this department do a fine job in deflecting anger and, in many cases, rudeness. It takes a lot of training and patience to constantly deal with these difficult situations.

The truth is these employees have an impossible job — no matter how hard they work or how good an employee they are, there are very few people who appreciate them for what they do and the important part they play in the day-to-day operation of the university.

Take a moment to just chat with them sometime — they're really very nice people.

Disruption in the art/architecture (R06) parking lot

Many of you have noticed the cranes and other pieces of large equipment in the art/architecture parking lot over the past few weeks, and we have had many inquiries.

In preparation for the elimination of this lot, our grounds maintenance department has made arrangements to relocate the trees that were located in all of the islands.

Hope you had an opportunity to observe some of this process — it was fascinating. We have spent a lot of time trying to keep faculty and staff, who park in the lot, informed on what is happening, and we would like to thank those who have been temporarily displaced for their patience and understanding. We also want to acknowledge grounds maintenance for recognizing the value of trees in "barren" West Texas and doing what they can to salvage them.

We urge you to share your concerns, questions, suggestions and other input with us. Information gained through this input may be used to correct inefficiencies and promote positive customer relations. We look forward to what we hope will be a positive exchange of ideas.

College of Education to honor teachers

By Melody Ragland
Staff Writer

On May 3, teachers of all kinds will be honored for their gift of teaching.

Texas Tech's College of Education is sponsoring the fourth annual Tribute to Teachers.

Sue Goodman, a senior development officer, said the event is to honor teachers of any kind. It could be a Sunday school teacher, a teacher in a business or a college professor.

"Tribute to Teachers is a way to show gratitude and honor a teacher," she said.

In the beginning, Goodman said, the event was just to honor teachers in Lubbock, but now, the numbered being honored has grown.

She said the college is expecting to honor 35 teachers this year.

The tribute also has expanded out of Lubbock, Goodman said.

Karen Jacobsen, director of external relations, said everyone needs a pat on the back.

"We know the importance of good, quality teachers," she said. She said the college knows that teachers are important because they certify so many each year. Goodman said the event is not only a way to honor a special teacher but also to help the college.

The cost is $250 to sponsor a teacher. The sponsorship includes honoring a teacher, dinner for four at the banquet, a framed certificate of appreciation and a crystal apple. Jacobsen said this event spotlights the teaching profession.

"We want this to be a celebration of teaching," she said.

Jacobsen said proceeds from the banquet will be used for the college's scholarships, programs and activities.

Mary Beth Blegen, the 1996 National Teacher of the Year, will be the keynote speaker at the banquet.

Anyone can sponsor a teacher. Goodman said schools, parents, individuals, businesses, churches and organizations can honor a teacher.

Businesses have sponsored more than 100 teachers in the past four years, she said.

"This isn't a contest or a competition," Goodman said. "This is about saying thank you."

"We know the importance of good, quality teachers."

Kick Butts Day to focus on children

By Tara Nishimura
Staff Writer

Today is National Kick Butts Day, a promotion of the Campaign For Tobacco-Free Kids.

But for five Texas Tech students on The Bateman Team, today wraps up a semester-long anti-smoking campaign aimed at Lubbock children.

As a result of The Bateman Team's request, Mayor Windy Sitton proclaimed today as Lubbock Kick Butts Day.

The Bateman Team competes in a national public relations competition, sponsored by Public Relations Student Society of America.

Teams are given a specific topic to design a campaign around.

The campaigns then are judged based on a series of guidelines.

The Bateman Team is made up of five senior public relations majors: Nathan Bryant from Kati, Allison Kenter from Sugar Land, Niki Moyers from London, Melanie Pendleton from Round Rock and Kevin Preas from Plano.

"Basically, the purpose of the campaign is to promote an anti-smoking awareness for children," Pendleton said.

"We figured the best way for them to learn is by participating and by making it a competition."

The team's campaign involves children from The Lubbock Boys and Girls Club.

The branches of the club compete against each other.

The branch with the most participation will win a plaque.

All branches will receive a pizza party and prizes solicited from different companies.

"We felt that The Boys and Girls Club was the place where we could reach the highest number of at-risk kids," Bryant said.

"These kids will be presented with the choice to smoke at a much higher rate."

There are three ways participants can compete in the 1999 National Kick Butts Day contest.

Participants can create a poster with the theme "Kick off the Millennium Smoke Free", write a letter to their state or local senator or make a video advertisement.

"Our highest level of competition has been with posters," Pendleton said.

Vicki Todd is the faculty adviser for The Bateman Team.

Todd also is an instructor in mass communication.

Todd said in the past years of the public relations competition, campaigns were theoretical.

This year, The Bateman Team also must enact their campaign.

“Basically, the purpose of the campaign is to promote an anti-smoking awareness for children.”

Melanie Pendleton
member of The Bateman Team

Todd said The Bateman Team will be able to use their experience to contribute to their portfolios and resumes.

Arno thankful for positive support from Tech, friends

Delta Gamma also has helped set up a way for people to donate platelets to Arno at the Texas Blood Institute, located at 2543 48th St.

"All you have to do is say you want it to go to her," Albertini said.

"It is something she really needs, and all that she receives comes off her bill."

It has not been determined if Arno will need a bone marrow transplant that many leukemia patients require. But if there is a need, Arno's older brother is a complete match.

"That's really wonderful," she said. "It's very hard to find matches sometimes."

Not only has Arno received support from Tech students but officials in the Dean of Students Office have tried to make her situation as easy as possible.

"We try our best to make an-comfortable situation a comfortable one," said Greg Elkins, associate dean of students.

"We asked if there was anything we could do for her, and we try to do it."

Arno receives The University Daily and notes from the Dean of Students Office each day in order for her to stay connected with the campus.

"Her parents asked to keep her a part of what is going on campus," Elkins said.

"We send her a paper in campus mail each day with a note to keep her up-to-date."

Although Arno is eager to get out of the hospital and go home with her family, she is glad she has been in Lubbock for her treatment.

"It's been great because this is where all my new friends are," she said.

"I'm actually glad if it had to happen, it happened here."

Right time for success

Assistant track coach Dave Smith makes his mark in first season at Tech

By Jeff Keller
Staff Writer

From his standout track career at Michigan State to his managing days at Club Northwest in Seattle, Wash., Texas Tech assistant track coach Dave Smith has been no stranger to success in track and field.

Smith was the Big 10 champion in the 10,000-meter race in his senior season at Michigan State.

After his career at Michigan State was over, Smith decided to further his education at the University of Washington.

While studying in his hometown of Seattle, Smith managed the women's cross country team at Club Northwest that finished second in the USAF National Cross Country Championships.

Tech track coach Greg Sholars heard about Smith through a friend and gave him a call to see if he was interested in visiting Tech.

Smith said, at first, he was unsure if he wanted to leave the northwest for the plains of West Texas.

"At first, I wasn't sure if I was interested in moving here," Smith said.

"But, coach Sholars convinced me to come down here for an interview. I got here, and I was really impressed with his attitude about the team, and his vision of where the program was going. His enthusiasm and the way he is got me really excited about the program."

Sholars said Smith's youth and energy were some of the factors in bringing him into the Tech program.

"I was excited about bringing someone young into the program," Sholars said.

"He is able to run and train with the kids, which is a positive."

Sholars said Tech had a promising season last year, but there was not a coach that specifically focused on the distance events.

This season, with the addition of Smith, Tech distance runner Leigh Daniel has won the indoor national championships in the 5,000-meter race.

Sholars said part of Daniel's success this season is due to Smith's guidance in practice.

"Last season, the distance runners had a good year, but there was not a coach to give them one-on-one attention," Sholars said.

"Leigh's success this season is due in part to Smith's coming in and giving her that one-on-one attention. He has really helped her grow as a distance runner." Daniel said Smith's training schedule involves running higher mileage than the team had in the past.

"With coach Smith, we have done a little bit more mileage than we have done in the past," Daniel said. "But as far as a person, he is a little bit younger than we have had in the past, and he's real energetic. He has brought in a lot of new ideas to the team."

"His enthusiasm and energy have brought a new spark to the team, and he's made it a whole lot more fun to come out here and train."

With the success of the Tech distance program this season, Smith said he is excited about remaining in Lubbock and watching the program develop further.

"I plan to be at Tech for a while," Smith said.

"Maybe at first, honestly, I didn't think of this as a long-term thing. I thought of this as kind of a stepping stone. I would come down here for a couple of years and then move on. But after being down here, I've kind of grown attached to it."

"I really feel like we're doing some positive things here. I feel like things are building here, and there's a lot of positive energy. I have grown attached to it, and I don't see myself leaving."

"I plan to be at Tech for a while ... I don't see myself leaving."

Baseball contest moved

By Jason Bernstein
Sports Editor

With their second game postponed due to poor weather this season, some Texas Tech baseball players do not seem to be bothered by the lack of a mid-week, non-conference contest.

After a weekend sweep of Oklahoma, Tech (32-8 overall, 12-4 Big 12) was ready to take the field Tuesday against the College of the Southwest.

Outfielder Jon Weber said he is a little disappointed Tech was unable to play Tuesday but will look for a strong team effort when conference play resumes Friday against Texas.

"It's not good to have a game canceled when you've got a little streak going from the OU series," he said. "You just want to keep things going. You want to play well, hit well, field well and pitch well. Everything's going well now, and you just want to keep it going."

Tuesday's postponed game has been rescheduled for 7 p.m. Monday at Dan Law Field.

"We'll be fine," said infielder Mark Austry.

"I think we'll just concentrate on the weekend games. As long as we practice well, we'll be fine."

The revised schedule will put the Red Raiders in a string of five consecutive contests starting with the three-game series against the Longhorns. Tech will return for Monday's contest before concluding the five-game swing with a 2:30 p.m. clash Tuesday at Dan Law Field with Southwest Texas State.

Payton fatigued after festivities

CHICAGO (AP) — NFL Hall of Famer Walter Payton canceled a personal appearance Tuesday because of fatigue after throwing out the first pitch at the Cubs' home opener.

Payton, who has a rare liver disease, was scheduled to speak to the Machinery/Materials Conference and Exposition at Chicago's McCormick Place. He canceled at the last minute, convention spokesman Leo Nadolske said.

The baseball game at Wrigley Field was the first public appearance in months for the former running back.

"He had a very big day yesterday, and part of the symptoms of (his disease) is fatigue," said Ginny Quirk, vice president of Walter Payton Inc.

"Therefore, his feeling was that it was going to be too much to go all the way downtown and give a powerful keynote speech."

Payton lives in suburban South Barrington, about 40 miles from McCormick Place.

At the Cubs' home opener, he looked decidedly healthier than he did in early February when he announced that he needed a liver transplant because he had primary sclerosing cholangitis.
