Seat belt safety promoted

The Robert Lee FHA is promoting seat belt safety and awareness throughout the month of February. We have taken surveys at school and in the downtown area. The survey taken concluded that less than 5% of small children and 20% of adults and teenagers in the community wore their seat belt to school. In the downtown area, only 39% of the adults wore their seat belts. We would like to remind everyone that the leading cause of death of children is automobile accidents. In 1993 there were 41 car accidents in Coke County with 30 people being injured. It could have been you. Please, don't take a chance. Buckle Up!

On February 7th, Patricia Minjarez, Meagan Hill, Fred Wojtek, Jennifer Scott, Gilbert Torres and Jennifer Parks of the Robert Lee FHA visited the Library Hour. They showed videos and answered questions about the importance of seatbelt safety. Bookmarks were given to the children as a reminder to always buckle up.

Chamber Banquet slated

The Bronte Chamber of Commerce Annual Banquet will be held at the Bronte Community Center Saturday, February 11, 1995, at 7:00 pm. Tickets may be purchased from any Chamber member, at the Bronte First National Bank, or at the door that night.

A Texas, western theme will be carried out, and the meal will be catered by El Rancho Restaurant. Special music will follow the meal.

Guest speaker for the occasion will be Elmer Kelton. He was raised on a West Texas ranch and spent his formative years among cowboys and old-timers. He is the author of more than thirty novels, the winner of four Western Heritage Awards from the National Cowboy Hall of Fame, Five Spur Awards from the Western Writers of America, and the Levi Strauss Golden Saddleman Award for a lifetime achievement in western literature, as well as honors from the Texas Institute of Letters.

A native of Crane, Texas, Mr. Kelton has a degree in journalism from the University of Texas and has for many years been associated editor of Livestock Weekly. A veteran of World War II, he began writing for the pulp magazines before turning to novels. Mr. Kelton lives in San Angelo, Texas. He is the father of Steve Kelton, who lives, and is active, in the Bronte Community.

A door prize will be given. It is a beautiful, bronze sculpture, made by Don Bowen, a local rancher, who is well known for his artwork.

Highlight of the evening will be the naming of the following honorees: Citizen of the Year, Business of the Year, Education of the Year, and Boy and Girl Students of the Year.

Everyone is invited to attend this special event and support the Bronte Chamber of Commerce. It will be a night of good food and good entertainment.

RL to vote on toll-free calling

Some time next week Robert Lee residents will be voting on toll-free calling to San Angelo. This is a result of a successful petition that was circulated a few weeks ago.

Robert Lee residents should be receiving their ballots in the mail sometime around the middle of this month. You have fifteen days to mark this ballot and return it in the stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Public Utility Commission.

If approved by 70% of those returning ballots, all phone calls both from San Angelo to Robert Lee and vice-versa would be local calls, and would not show up as an extra long-distance charge on your bill.

The cost for this service is $7.00 per month for business phones and $3.50 per month for resident or home phone lines.

Those having questions or comments concerning the petition should direct them to the Public Utility Commission at (512) 458-0256, Project Number 13657.

Upcoming

Coke County Seniors Pot Luck Dinner

The Robert Lee Senior Citizens will have a Pot Luck dinner, Thursday, February 23rd, starting at 12:00 noon in the small Rec Hall. Anyone is invited to come for a good meal and socialization with some old friends. If you don't cook, we always can use a loaf of bread or a bag of ice - but no need to worry about it, there is always plenty!

Obituary, Death Notice Policy

As of next week's issue, the Observer/Enterprise will begin charging a nominal fee for obituaries. This change has been mandated by ever-increasing printing costs and sky-rocketing postage increases.

Death notices will be published at no charge. They will include brief information concerning the deceased and time and place of services.

No commodities this month

Due to state funding cuts in Texas Department of Human Service, there will be no commodities distributed to Coke County residents the month of February.

Flanagan appointed Ombudsman

Evelyn Flanagan of Robert Lee will serve the West Coke County Nursing Home as a Volunteer Ombudsman. She recently completed her certification training with the Area Agency on Aging of the Concho Valley.

Ombudsmen serve as mediums for residents to solve problems connected with daily living in a care facility. They seek to smooth complaints, misunderstanding, special needs, etc. and perhaps intervene.

The Older American Act requires each state to conduct an ombudsman program. In Texas, training for ombudsmen was developed by the Texas Department On Aging and the Texas Department of Human Services.

DWI laws stiffened

*January 10, 1992 - A 25-year-old drunk driver and his brother die when their truck crashes head-on into a car near Mendoza. Three college students inside the car are also killed.

*December 22, 1993 - A Fort Worth police officer assisting a disabled motorist is killed when he is struck by a drunk driver with seven prior felony drunk driving convictions.

*September 25, 1994 - A drunk driver, with three previous drunk driving arrests, spins out of control near Wimberley, striking a tree and plunging into a sewage pond. He and his two young daughters are killed.

Certainly among the most heinous crashes in recent Texas history, these incidents remind us how severe a problem drunk driving continues to be. The statistics are staggering. Two of every five Americans will be involved in an alcohol-related traffic crash in their lifetime. Across the country, a life is tragically ended every 29 minutes in an alcohol-related crash. In Texas, as in the rest of the country, nearly half of all traffic fatalities are alcohol-related.

But on January 1, 1995, a long-overdue and much-needed new law went into effect in Texas that will help make these atrocities a thing of the past. Called Administrative License Revocation, or ALR, it will automatically revoke the license of anyone caught driving under the influence of alcohol. It is the strongest law a state can enact to deter drunk driving. Experts predict it will save the lives of 100 Texans every year. (ALR was passed in 1993 as Senate Bill 1, sponsored by Senator Judith Zaffirini.)

Thirty-seven other states and the District of Columbia, where ALR laws have been implemented, have shown that the ALR law is a prompt, powerful and persuasive tool to deter drunk driving.

The beauty of ALR is its swiftness and certainty. Drive drunk, and your license is suspended, automatically. Drivers wishing to contest suspensions must schedule administrative hearings within 15 days of their arrest. The suspension occurs 40 days after the arrest. Offenders still may face criminal DWI charges in court.

Administrative suspension lengths vary. A driver registering a blood alcohol concentration of .10 or greater is considered legally drunk in Texas. First offenders lose their license for 60 days for failing the test and 90 days for refusing the test. Drivers previously suspended for a DWI or intoxication manslaughter conviction lose their license for 180 days for failing the test and one year for refusing the test. The driver must pay a $100 fee to reinstate his license after the period of suspension.

Current Texas law results in delayed or lenient punishments for many DWI offenses and does not provide enough of a deterrent to drinking and driving. Suspensions are often delayed due to overcrowded dockets and other legal procedures, or do not occur due to plea bargaining, probation and other options.

In addition to the 100 lives saved, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration estimates that in Texas alone ALR will save Texas as much as $85 million a year in direct and societal costs (medical, insurance and lost productivity). ALR has the added benefit of fighting crime without costing the taxpayers money, overcrowding prisons, overloading court dockets or adding to the state budget. It is a self-supportive program - license reinstatement fees collected from the convicted drivers will fully offset the cost of the program.

ALR provides Texans a new kind of protection from the very real dangers drunk drivers present. And with prevention comes fewer arrests, fewer court appearances, fewer jail sentences and, most importantly, fewer deaths of innocent victims. Public education is vital because the more people know about how quickly and certainly their driver's licenses will be revoked through ALR, the less likely they will be to chance losing their license by driving intoxicated. In fact, studies show that the public fears the guaranteed loss of a license more than the threat of a tough jail sentence or stiff fine.

With this new law, we reach a milestone in drunk driving prevention. Traveling on Texas roads now takes a turn for the better. We invite you to ride along.

New system to expedite auto registration

The Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT) and its partners have introduced a new way of doing business to enhance the level of motor vehicle customer service they provide. Statewide implementation of the Registration and Title System (RTS) began in mid-November.

"It's a total move from a manual environment to an automated environment in one step," said Bob Braden, RTS Project Manager. "We're doing away with the paper forms and redundant procedures that are currently needed to process registrations and title work."

As statutory agents of TxDOT, tax assessor-collectors in the 254 Texas counties handle motor vehicle registration and title transactions and collect related fees. This work will continue at the county level. But computers will be used to enter data at the point of sale. Tax offices will be tied to a network that electronically sends the information to the Vehicle Titles and Registration Division in Austin. This method actually decreases the amount of time it takes to get current information into the system.

"It will now take two weeks to issue a title instead of ten weeks," Braden said. "RTS can also update vehicle registrations within 48 hours rather than six to eight weeks." Instant access is a powerful tool for law enforcement officers during traffic stops and other instances when they have to make an inquiry.

The transportation department is introducing RTS in a series of stages. Phase I took place in March 1994 and involved the conversion of 18 million motor vehicle records to a new database. Phase II, the pilot program, began July 1994 when RTS went on-line at the Williamson County tax office substation in Round Rock, Texas. That was the first time the system had ever been unveiled to the public.

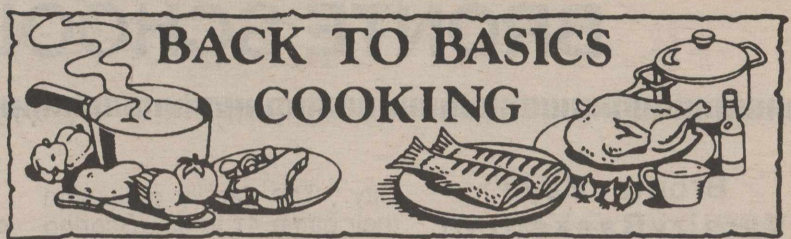

"The staff processed transactions for 300 customers for the first day," said Dorothy Jones, Williamson County tax assessor-collector. "The new system is faster and the end result is more accurate."

Hays County is also involved in the pilot program, but on a much wider scale. RTS was installed at the San Marcos tax office in mid-September. This was a truer test of the system because RTS was being used to do registration and title work for an entire county. The workload was larger than the volume of transactions that were being processed in Round Rock. The results in both locations have been encouraging.

Phase III began in mid-November and involved implementation throughout Texas. That work is expected to be completed by December 1995. Training of tax office personnel will be done by the Vehicle Titles and Registration Division.

The Department of Transportation will also provide the computer hardware and software needed for RTS. Each county tax collector has been notified about the number of workstations their offices are going to get. Distribution of this equipment was made by TxDOT, with decisions based on the number of registrations processed at each location during 1993.

RTS is the result of cooperative effort between state and county governments. The transportation department has involved law enforcement and tax collectors in every phase of development. County officials now seem to be impressed with the outcome and are eager to have RTS in their office to process registration and title transactions.

(DM)—Colorful Chinese Zodiac Cashew Pork is a festive stir-fry that will let you celebrate the Year of the Boar with ease. And only a naturally brewed soy sauce that has been aged for several months has the distinctive taste qualities to provide a savory balance and meaty richness, without overpowering the other ingredients. Chinese New Year celebrations may last for two weeks, but you can enjoy the great flavor of this stir-fry any time of year!

PAPA program

For nearly a decade, the Office of the Attorney General has been sending trained volunteers to Texas schools to help young people understand the rights and responsibilities of parenthood. We call this program Parenthood and Paternity, or PAPA. It is an important part of our child support program.

In our PAPA presentations, we explain the laws that require both parents to help support their children. We advise young people about the importance of establishing paternity for children born out of wedlock, and explain how paternity testing can be used to determine whether or not someone is a baby's biological father.

A REALITY CHECK
We have found that many young people are not aware of the legal rights and responsibilities of parenthood. For example, they may not know that:

*a person can be ordered to pay child support regardless of age;

*the father's name on a birth certificate does not necessarily establish legal paternity;

*some mothers have to pay child support to the father;

*a non-custodial parent ordered to make payments will have to reimburse the government for welfare benefits the custodial parent collected.

For most young people, it is an eye-opener when they add up some of the day-to-day expenses that accompany parenthood, such as diapers, baby food and baby clothes. We ask them to calculate their expected earnings and compare them to the cost of raising a child.

We also explain that every baby deserves to know the identity of his or her parents, and needs to establish emotional bonds with both parents. It is important for every baby to have access to family medical history on both sides, and to receive benefits such as inheritance. By helping youngsters understand the legal and financial realities of parenthood, we hope to prevent the children of the future from experiencing unnecessary financial hardships.

A NEW CURRICULUM

Recently, we updated the PAPA curriculum in response to positive feedback from parents, teachers, and kids. Our goal is to provide all the materials needed so that schools can incorporate PAPA classes in their regular school year. The new curriculum includes a letter to the students' parents, a class outline, a discussion guide, a test, handouts, games, review questions, and a video.

By enlisting educators to help us distribute the information contained in the PAPA curriculum, we can reach more young people. With the help of Texas teachers, we hope to ensure that the next generation of children will be born to parents who were prepared in advance for their responsibilities.

FOR MORE INFORMATION

For more information about PAPA, please call our child support office at 1-512-463-2181, ext. 2625. Working together, we can make a big difference in the lives of our young people. Together, we can make Texas a better place to live.

How to choose a college

With competition for good jobs rising, millions of Americans are concerned about how to prepare their children for college and how to pay for it.

An updated edition of the U.S. Education Department publication, Preparing Your Child for College: A Resource Book for Parents, provides answers to some important questions: What high school courses are needed for college? What factors are important in selecting a college? How much does college cost and how can students and their families obtain financial help?

"This book offers parents a step-by-step guide to help their children achieve their education goals," said U.S. Secretary of Education Richard W. Riley. "This guidance, together with President Clinton's education agenda, which includes a tax deduction for college expenses, can help make college education a reality for Americans from all walks of life."

The release of the publication coincides with the announcement of President Clinton's new education and training initiative, the "Middle-Class Bill of Rights," which calls for:

*tax deductions of up to $10,000 a year for postsecondary expenses;

**"Skill grants" to help employees pursue job related education and training;

*tax-free withdrawals from Individual Retirement Accounts for education and medical expenses, as well as first-home purchases or care of elderly parents; and,

*tax credits of up to $500 a year for each child under age 13.

The new second edition of Preparing Your Child for College includes information on college costs, savings programs, and potential sources of federal and other financial aid.

Preparing Your Child for College is available free by writing Consumer Information Center, Department 510B, Pueblo, Colorado 81009 or by calling 1-800-USA-LEARN.

Coke County Juvenile Justice Center is pleased to announce that their employee of the month for January is Cynthia Turner. "Cynthia works as a Care Worker in the medical department and has consistently demonstrated a high degree of professionalism and sound judgement in the execution of her responsibilities," Business Manager Jim Sneed said.

On February 7th, Patricia Minjarez, Meagan Hill, Fred Wojtek, Jennifer Scott, Gilbert Torres and Jennifer Parks of the Robert Lee FHA visited the Library Hour. They showed videos and answered questions about the importance of seatbelt safety. Bookmarks were given to the children as a reminder to always buckle up.

Bronte JV Basketball

Rabies quarantine adopted

Following action this month by the Texas Board of Health, the entire state of Texas is now a designated quarantine area to prevent the spread of rabies. The quarantine forbids the transport of potentially infected animals within or from the state.

"We must act quickly to contain the threat of rabies - now rampant in South and Central Texas. We must do this to minimize the number of animal rabies cases and reduce the threat this deadly disease poses to people," Dr. David Smith, Commissioner of Health, said.

He explained that the board took action following reports of the exportation of coyotes and foxes, including some infected animals, to other states.

"We know that South Texas coyotes have been shipped out-of-state to stock hunting clubs. And just this week we learned that two of four foxes shipped from Texas to Montana have been confirmed with rabies. This is a dangerous situation - one which can spread rabies beyond the point of our ability to control it," Dr. Smith said.

Similar transportation of potentially infected animals exists within Texas, but the extent is unknown, he added.

"This situation is similar to the raccoon rabies outbreak in the eastern United States. When it began in the 1950s, it was considered a local problem. Another outbreak began in the 1970s in Virginia, after infected raccoons were shipped from Florida to hunting clubs there. Now the entire East Coast is battling a raccoon rabies epizootic," Dr. Smith said.

Animals subject to the quarantine are dogs and cats over 3 months old without a current rabies vaccination certificate, hybrid animals - such as domestic dog-wolf crosses - and wild animals at high risk of rabies - such as skunks, bats, foxes, coyotes and raccoons.

In South Texas, a canine rabies epizootic (an epidemic in animals) began in 1988 in Starr County and rapidly moved northward, now including at least 18 counties. Canine rabies is a strain of rabies virus that has become established in coyotes and is readily transmitted from coyotes to domestic dogs and, subsequently, between domestic dogs. Because it often infects domestic dogs, this rabies strain poses a greater risk for human exposure.

From 1988 through 1994, some 530 cases of canine rabies were confirmed, primarily in coyotes and domestic dogs. During this period, about 1,500 people in South Texas were exposed to rabies and received treatment. In recent years, two Texans died from canine rabies - a Starr County woman in 1991 and an Hidalgo County boy in November 1994.

The Texas Department of Health (TDH) is planning an air drop of coyote bait containing oral rabies vaccine in hopes of stopping the spread of the South Texas epizootic. The air drop follows extensive development of the oral vaccine and delivery system. Set for next month, it is unprecedented in this state.

In 1994, a fox rabies epizootic in Central Texas resulted in 270 cases of this virus, primarily in foxes. Another 247 cases were reported from 1987 through 1993.

Gray fox rabies is readily transmitted to raccoons and livestock, especially cows and goats. It may also be transmitted to cats and dogs. More than 300 persons from the gray fox rabies epizootic area received treatment for exposure to this rabies strain in 1994.

TDH will place warning signs about the quarantine in post offices and other high-traffic areas throughout the state. Local health officials and animal control officers will also be asked to help enforce the quarantine. Violation of the quarantine is a Class C misdemeanor.

All Texans are urged to have their pets vaccinated against rabies.

Carbon monoxide threat

According to health officials, there is more than fire where there is smoke. There also is carbon monoxide, an odorless, invisible - and poisonous - gas.

Wherever there are coals or flames without ample ventilation, the gas can reach levels lethal to humans.

Every year, dozens of Texans die from carbon monoxide poisoning, and many more become ill. The Texas Department of Health's (TDH) Vital Statistics Bureau recorded 51 such deaths in 1993. Dr. David Smith, Commissioner of Health, said, "It's tragic that the number of such poisonings rises in periods of extreme cold, when some people sacrifice fresh air for warmth. We urge all Texans to beware of this danger."

Quade Stahl, in the TDH Occupational Health program, explained that carbon monoxide is a by-product of incomplete combustion. "A flickering or low-burning yellow flame gives off much more of the gas than a hot blue flame," he said. Vehicle exhausts, unvented or faulty gas and kerosene appliances, smoldering or poorly vented fireplaces and slow-burning fuels, such as charcoal, release large amounts of carbon monoxide into the air. Outdoors, the gas mixes with the air and is diluted to a safe level; but indoors, without good ventilation, it can reach poisonous concentrations.

Stahl said that persons at home often are in greater danger of carbon monoxide poisoning than those in large work spaces, since small, insulated quarters trap and concentrate the gas. A major source of the gas is from burners of gas appliances that are improperly adjusted or poorly vented, he added.

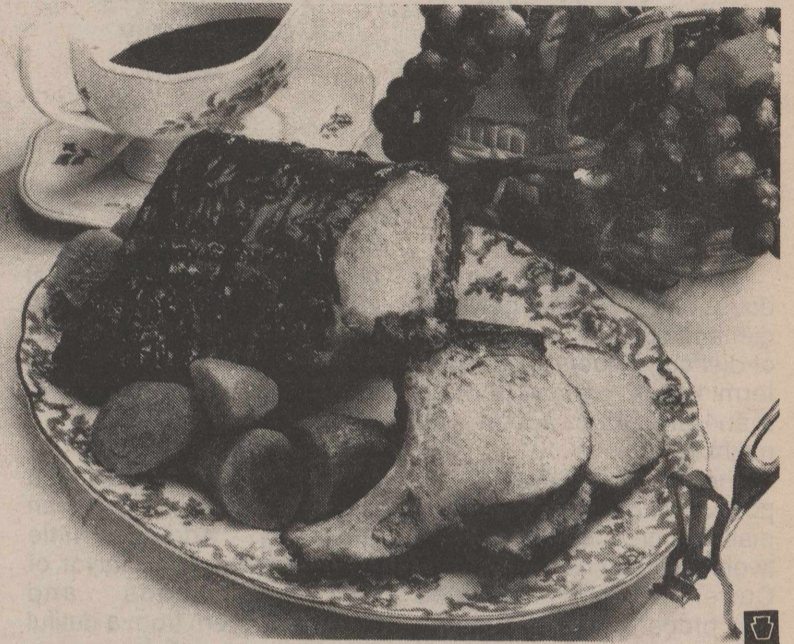

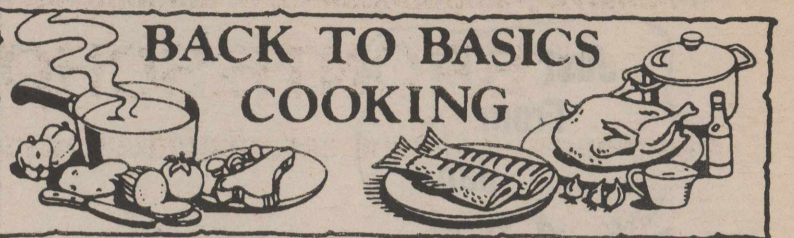

To save energy costs, newer homes are sealed tighter than older homes and may pose greater risks, Stahl warned.

"Many people have had the effects of carbon monoxide poisoning without knowing the cause. Anyone who has awakened with a headache or dizziness after sleeping in a closed room with an unvented heater may have had a mild case of carbon monoxide poisoning," he said. Chemically, carbon monoxide replaces the oxygen in the bloodstream. Lack of oxygen causes headache, dizziness, weakness, sleepiness, nausea and vomiting, which can progress to coma, convulsion and death.

Stahl said persons exposed to the gas often do not recognize these symptoms as carbon monoxide poisoning and fall asleep not realizing the danger of death to themselves or their family members. Persons who notice some of these symptoms and are near or using a fuel-burning appliance or equipment should immediately go outside to get fresh air, he advised. All fuel-burning appliances should be checked by a qualified person for properly adjusted flames and proper ventilation in the area of each appliance, he added.

People at high risk of carbon monoxide poisoning are infants, pregnant women, the elderly and persons with a history of chronic heart or lung problems. Even with emergency treatment of serious poisonings, several hours or days may be required for a victim to regain normal oxygen levels in the blood.

The U. S. Consumer Product Safety Commission has asked that all new dwellings be required to have carbon monoxide detectors, similar to smoke detectors. TDH and the U. S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention have urged all home owners to install these inexpensive, readily available detectors.

Taking it to the Heart

There no longer can be any doubt about the link between diet and disease. Your choice of diet can influence your long term health prospects more than any other action you might take.

The Surgeon General's report on Nutrition and Health makes a clear connection between diet and risk of disease. Current research indicates that proper food choices can reduce related risk factors of cardiovascular disease, high blood cholesterol, obesity and high blood pressure.

According to the American Heart Association, scientific research suggests that we can reduce the risk of cardiovascular disease, the number one killer of Americans by following these guidelines. It is recommended that the following percentage of total calories be consumed in American diets daily: Protein - 15%, Carbohydrate - 50%, Total Fat - less than 30%, Saturated Fat - less than 10%, Cholesterol - less than 300 mg per day, Sodium - maximum 3000 mg per day, Alcoholic beverages less than 15%.

Foods rich in carbohydrates, such as fruits, vegetables, breads, cereals and pasta, supply energy and can be combined with other carbohydrate rich foods to bring additional vitamins, minerals and fiber to the diet.

To increase our health potential, the American Heart Association suggests increasing carbohydrate consumption to at least 50-55 percent of calories, emphasizing increased foods. Carbohydrate rich foods often have little or no cholesterol and can be low in saturated fat and calories. Many provide the fiber that may help lower blood cholesterol levels and the accompanying risk of heart disease.

Realistically, though, for most of us the prospect of a bowl of bland bran is less than appealing. Adding a little sugar enhances the flavor of nutritious foods and transforms them from a dutiful choice to a delicious one. And, according to studies by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, sugar consumed at current levels presents no risk to health.

Since obesity is a contributing factor in cardiovascular disease, reaching and maintaining your desirable weight is important. To reach your desired weight, check with your doctor, reduce consumption of foods high in fat and calories, and begin an exercise and fitness program. Watching your calories does not necessarily mean cutting out sugar or sugar sweetened foods. You should consider both the amount of calories and nutrients in that food. Many people are surprised to learn that sugar has just 16 calories per teaspoon, exactly the same as all other carbohydrate and proteins, whereas fat has twice as many calories. A teaspoon of vegetable oil, for example, has 40 calories. For health and fitness, a well balanced diet includes all foods in moderation. When planning meals, try to select a wide variety of foods each day, following the guidelines offered by the American Heart Association.

The Last Minute Cook

Valentine's Day menu

For those with a lot of love but not a lot of time

You've remembered to send the flowers and chill the champagne. You even had time to stop by the candy store to pick up the chocolates. But what would make this Valentine's Day memorable for your sweetheart? Instead of making reservations and waiting in line at your favorite restaurant, turn off the telephone, light the candles and treat your Valentine to a relaxing and romantic evening at home with a quick and easy meal for the two of you.

Because Valentine's Day falls during the week this year, Cupid suggests a tenderloin dinner menu that takes only minutes to prepare in your own kitchen. George Bay, a Cordon Bleu chef and Last Minute Cook himself, says, "You don't have to go out to a restaurant to enjoy the elegance of a gourmet dinner." Instead, he recommends complementing delicately seasoned beef tenderloin with a rich sauce Choron made from fresh or sun-dried tomatoes combined with prepared Béarnaise sauce. This simple entree is accented with grilled zucchini, red peppers and yellow squash purchased at the deli. Chocolate truffles and fresh strawberries create a sweet ending to a romantic evening, one your sweetheart is not soon to forget.

Tenderloin for two

Makes 2 servings

1/3 cup prepared Béarnaise sauce

- 2 tablespoons sun-dried (or fresh) tomatoes, finely chopped
- 2 Bays English Muffins, lightly toasted
- 1 clove garlic, peeled
- 2 8-ounce beef tenderloins
- Salt and pepper, to taste
- 1/2 teaspoon savory leaves, crushed

Sauce:

Mix Béarnaise sauce with tomatoes; set aside. Rub toasted muffin halves with garlic clove; set aside.

Tenderloins:

Slice tenderloin steaks into two slices each. Season to taste. Sauté in butter for three minutes per side for rare and four minutes per side for medium. Place two steak slices on each muffin half. Top with sauce.

Game Wardens kept hopping

Most hunters in Texas are aware of the rules and regulations regarding deer hunting. Never the less during hunting season Texas game wardens are kept hopping by those few folks that try to bend - if not totally break - those rules. Something in the moon drives people to night hunt (a definite no-no), many times from a public roadway. Following are just a few short stories of things game wardens find going on at night.

Shelby County game warden Mike Hanson received a call that someone was sitting in the middle of a county road with a rifle and a walkie-talkie. The man refused to move for traffic, forcing them to use a ditch to avoid hitting him. When Hanson arrived, the man told him where was no problem, he was only hunting. Hanson disagreed, arrested the subject and took him to visit the local judge.

The judge assessed a $500 fine plus court costs. The hunter began to cry so the judge lowered the fine to $250. The hunter began to cry hysterically, so the judge again lowered the fine, this time to $50. The hunter's friend promptly paid the fine.

Raymond Kosub, Jasper County game warden received word in early December that a hunter on a lease in Newton County had an illegal deer and left the lease.

When Kosub arrived at the subject's home he received permission to inspect the premises and was led on a tour by the homeowner. The man did not appear to want Kosub to look in the bathroom - he told the warden he had a vicious guard dog locked up in there. Kosub cracked open the door and saw the vicious canine - a 6" tall Chihuahua. The dog was guarding an antlerless deer in the bathtub.

HEALTH NOTES

Towelette Treatment

In many parts of the country, a walk in the woods risks contact with poison ivy or poison oak and the itchy rash that the poison from both plants causes. Other than trying to avoid contact, Dr. David Harris, a dermatologist at Stanford University, has a simple suggestion. Wipe exposed skin with moist towelettes about every half hour to wipe off the resin that will eventually cause the itchy rash.

Dr. Harris says research shows poison oak and poison ivy resin can still be rubbed off during that time with a mild detergent, the main ingredient of the conveniently-packaged towelettes. After about an hour, however, the poison is firmly bound to the skin. Symptoms of contact with the three-leaf poisonous plants show up in hours or days and the main course of treatment then is to try to relieve the itching.

Dr. Harris also advises using the moist towelettes on your dog's fur if he has been running through the woods, since the sticky resin can easily rub off onto people.
