Stronger quality control planned

by CWO Roy L. Vaughan

The Personnel Quality Control Program, prominently featured for intensified application the coming year, is merely the use of good management practices. To provide commanders more effective means of controlling the quality of personnel, existing policies and programs are being revised or new ones instituted.

Basically, the program is one of selectivity directed toward Air Force career-minded personnel who are qualified and willing to contribute effectively to accomplishment of the Air Force mission both today and in the future. The three main facets of this program are: First, we are applying quality standards that personnel must meet to join the Air Force; second, we are applying a high degree of selectivity in career progression; third, we are seeking out and eliminating marginal and sub-marginal personnel.

Forecasted development of this program include strict assignment controls; strict re-enlistment controls; increased airman and NCO retraining; promotion of best qualified personnel only; stricter classification requirements; monthly identification of marginal and sub-marginal airmen for separation; and maintenance of error-free personnel records.

Of greatest importance is quality is absolute justification of ratings presented on the airman performance reports in accordance with AFR 39-62. Control of the submission of this report has been delegated to records custodians who have also been charged with the responsibility of seeing that all reports are accurate, complete and timely. Local procedures are being presented in a base supplement due for publication early in February.

Airman promotions for March 1959 will be accomplished on a new minimum time in grade requirement which became effective January 1. For promotion to master sergeant-24 months in grade of technical sergeant; to technical sergeant-21 months in grade of staff sergeant; to staff sergeant-18 months in grade of airman first class, plus 4 years total active federal service; to airman first class-12 months in grade of airman second class.

In addition, major commands (See STRONGER, page 5)

ATC safety mark set

Reese personnel this week received thanks from Lt. Gen. Frederic H. Smith, Jr., for their contributions to the most successful Operation "Homesafe" in Air Training Command.

"Our holiday vehicle accident experience has set a new low for the Air Training Command," the ATC commander wrote Col. Dross Ellis, Reese commander.

"For the month of December, a total of three fatalities were recorded which represents the lowest number of December fatalities in the history of this Command. During Operation "Homesafe" the two fatalities that were reported in this Command represent the fewest private vehicle fatalities ever recorded for this period.

"I am sure the attention given the Air Training Command ground safety program by all personnel of your command enabled the accomplishment of this achievement. This record can be maintained only by the diligent concentration of our talents in support of the safety program.

"Please convey my personal appreciation to your command for the exceptional results obtained during Operation "Homesafe."

Reese had only a half dozen first aids during the Operation "Homesafe" period, with no traffic accidents.

Federal Services fund campaign open; health units need to benefit

Manned aircraft most important, general asserts

Importance of man in the Air Force defense of the world must be heavily stressed for a considerable time to come, officers of the Reese Maintenance and Supply group were told this week at a group Dining-In.

"The importance of manned aircraft will continue, despite missiles and other developments," Maj. Gen. Wiley D. Ganey, assistant vice commander of Air Training Command, told the M&S officers. "We still need, and will need for a long time, pilots and aircrews who are efficient and capable."

The general said radar will give a few minutes notice of attack and the nation needs interceptors ready to move fast and effectively.

"With the increase in complexity of aircraft, it is very important that maintenance officers and airmen know their job and do their job well," he said.

The general was introduced by Maj. Ben Gibson, president of the Dining-In.

First Lt. Robert W. Rankin, vice president of the Officers Bowling league, presented the winner's trophy to the M&S Greasers. Maj. Lewis Britain, team captain, accepted and then presented the statue to Col. William Martin, group commander, for placing in the group trophy case. Team members Lt. Col. Mansell McElroy, Maj. Gibson, Britain, Ralph McWhirter, and Thomas P. Carroll, and Capt. John J. Garrett and Robert F. Ehrhart received individual awards.

Enthusiastically endorsed by President Eisenhower and Air Force Secretary James H. Douglas, the annual Federal Services Joint Crusade fund raising drive is being launched at Reese this payday.

Lt. Col. Robert L. Velde is project chairman and project officers also have been named for each unit.

Every person on the base will have opportunity to participate in the campaign and all are being urged to contribute. No quota has been set and no pressures are planned in efforts to obtain funds, the colonel said.

The Federal Services Joint Crusade is a combined campaign to raise funds from federal military and civilian men and women for two similarly named but different organizations supporting widely different aims.

The Federal Services campaign solicits funds for the American Cancer society, American Heart association, the Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation, Muscular Dystrophy Association of America, National Association of Mental Health, National Multiple Sclerosis society, National Society for Crippled Children and Adults, National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, National Tuberculosis association, and the United Cerebral Palsy association.

The Federal Services Joint Crusade supports CARE, Crusade for Freedom, and the American-Korean foundation.

Secretary Douglas said: "I urge each Air Force member to give voluntarily and generously to the participating agencies he or she desires to support during the solicitation for national health agencies and the Federal Service Joint Crusade."

Personnel thanked

TO: ALL MILITARY PERSONNEL AND CIVILIAN EMPLOYEES OF REESE AIR FORCE BASE:

I wish to extend to every person on the base my thanks, congratulations and praise for a job well done. The job, of course was Project Commemorate. It was carried off smoothly, thoroughly and efficiently, yet without neglect of your many other normal duties. That kind of operation reflects extreme credit on both the Air Force and the individuals concerned.

Naturally, some people had more to do directly with Project Commemorate than others. However, whether the job was large or small, each did his job well, giving Reese a truly memorable occasion and providing a meaningful advance in base-community relations.

You are well deserving of praise.

Education opportunity here

"You live and learn" goes the saying. But how many of us really do?

The man who truly learns is more than a sponge for experience. He disciplines his mind to make it a repository for ideas and skills. His body has stopped growing but his mind has not.

Few men have better opportunities to advance their education than those in the Air Force.

The armed services cooperate with accredited institutions to help him study. For men in remote areas, USAFI offers a wealth of courses.

Officers right now have their best opportunity to do undergraduate or graduate study under the Air Force Institute of Technology program. Every cooperation is being given Reese officers to have their education evaluated and enrollment made in proper classes quickly.

Classes are starting soon on base to help airmen, officers, and civilians in English and algebra.

Off-duty education pays off in promotions and dollars. PCS assignment to a college or university for study heads toward quick advancement and pleasant duty.

The world changes. Change with it. Inquire of educational opportunities right now at the base education office.

Teen club . . .

By Cathy Hermann

Don't forget the skating party tomorrow night. The teenage council will chaperon and pay for the party. The round trip will be made by bus. On the bottom of the invitation, that you received last week, it stated that you should bring no guest, so please don't bring any.

The membership cards have been mailed and if any teenager on the base did not receive a card and would like to go to the party, call Mrs. Raymond Hermann, at 3931 or Mrs. Richard Conn, at 2321 and RSVP.

Pam Stone, one of our teenagers, while on a skating party a few week ago fell and hurt herself. We would like to wish her a speedy recovery.

Search for talent launched on base

The Service club director is conducting a search for talent for the annual Air Force talent contest. Printed forms, requesting information on talents, are available at the Service club and are being distributed by members of the Airman's council.

Tryouts and practice sessions are scheduled for Wednesday nights in February and March and will be listed in the Service club calendar.

Reese semi-finals are scheduled for April 22, Mrs. Daphne Hargett, club director, said, and finals to select representatives for the annual Air Force contest will be on April 28.

Mrs. Hargett asked cooperation of all base persons "to make this contest a success."

A/2C John R. Brown of M&S is being sent to Japan, reporting in March.

Skimpy resources used by Chaplain Willis L. Stowers

One day as I sat in my study, I stole a glance through the French doors into the dining room to discover my four-year old daughter trying to wrap one of her story books with a piece of paper and a string that were just a trifle to skimpy to do the job. She tried and tried before giving up and turning over to something else.

Watching her, I was reminded of our efforts in trying to build the kingdom of God. We keep trying, and seemingly expect, to build the Kingdom using a minimum of time, talent and money. Instead of giving a generous portion of our time, and using what talents we have to the glory of God, we try to get by on much less and expect God to crown our efforts with glowing success.

It is when people give generously of themselves that God opens the windows of heaven and pours out upon them a blessing such as they are not able to receive. So it is that the Kingdom of God will be built.

God will not withhold from us any resources which we can and will use. The only reason we do not receive more is because we use too little of that which we already have.

Only the most outstanding airmen will be considered in this category.

Centralized Records Processing took a step nearer reality this week when the proposed Wing supplement was drafted and placed in hands of coordinating agency for comment. In addition, necessary arrangement for furniture and fixtures is being completed. Although the exact date the centralized personnel processing will commence has not been determined, all "groundwork" has been laid and only minor coordination remains. Announcement of implementation date will be forthcoming as soon as all coordination is completed.

A current shortage of applications for flying training has made it possible for qualified airmen at Reese and other bases to receive immediate class assignment to the aviation cadet program. This training provides a method by which unmarried airmen between the ages of 19 and 26½ may obtain wings as pilots or navigators and reserve commission as second lieutenants.

By Mrs. James M. Shankles

A bridge and canasta party honoring wives of the 3500th PTS is being held this afternoon in the squadron's operations building. The party also includes a kitchen shower for the new snack bar. Sixty wives were invited to the event, which is being hosted by Mmes. James W. Weaver, Joseph O'Connell and John D. Johnson.

Ten pairs of earrings were presented to Mrs. Harry W. Williamson, Jr., at a surprise shower given by neighborhood friends Tuesday. The William-sons leave Reese next week for re-assignment. The shower was hosted by Mmes. Samuel O. Sadler and James M. Shankles at the Shankles' home.

Thousands attend events marking end of B-25 use; generals speak

A spotlight of the Air Force and nation was on Reese AFB last weekend, for Project Commemoration with activities back to normal today.

Gen. Thomas D. White, Air Force chief of staff, and Lt. Gen. Frederic H. Smith, Jr., were on hand Friday and Saturday among military personalities. A. T. Burton, vice president of North American Aviation; Bob Hoover, civilian test pilot; Mayor Lennis Baker of Lubbock; and W. D. Rogers, president of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, were among civilian notables present.

The Saturday open house was highlighted by graduation of Class 59-E, the last Air Force class trained in conventional aircraft; and by an air show headlined by Hoover's F-100 aerial maneuvers, Capt. Robert Fogg's stunts with the T-37, and aerobatics by The Minutemen, National Guard precision flying team.

Several thousand persons came to the base for the open house.

Friday the mounted B-25 was dedicated near the main entrance, and that night Lubbock and military dignitaries were guests at a reception and banquet given by Col. Dross Ellis, base commander, and Mrs. Ellis.

The Air Force, facing a difficult task of keeping up with scientific progress, must always have the best weapons available if it performs its mission, General White told the banquet guests.

He said that milestones are being reached daily in Air Force life and the service "must not only be constantly looking into the possibilities of the future, but must also shoulder the equally grave responsibility of maintaining our day-by-day capability at peak performance."

He also stressed the need for clear understanding, correct decisions and decisive action, and for maximum efficiency and effectiveness.

General Smith, in his graduation address, declared that air power is keeping the United States out of war, and is ready to win such wars as may occur.

"Our commitments are tremendous, and the stakes are high," he declared. "Upon what, therefore, do we base our reliance; what element of our over-all military strength do we believe has an inherent capability to deter aggression, or if aggression occurs, to defeat it? It is our air power."

He stressed that U. S. Commitments extend to the Far East, Near East, and Europe and the nation needs products of each area.

"The security of the free world rests on the ability of the United States to apply modern airpower in adequate strength, and without delay, wherever aggression occurs; and thus to discourage our potential enemies from risking certain destruction by resorting to military action to achieve their objective of world domination" the general said.
