Resource Center...

Fund-raiser goal nears midway point

Efforts to raise $75,000 needed to construct a Learning Resource Center inside the Price Daniel Unit neared the halfway mark by week's end.

As of Friday, some $34,505, representing 46 percent of the goal, had been donated, according to members of the Economic Development Committee.

The Learning Resource Center is a 3,600 square-foot metal building that will include a chapel seating 250 persons. The facility will have moveable walls that can convert the chapel area into three smaller classrooms to be used for self-improvement courses taught by various volunteers. The building will also have offices for three counselors.

The $75,000 is needed to be combined with a $100,000 grant approved by The Meadows Foundation of Dallas.

Roy McQueen, chairman of the Economic Development Committee, said the entire $175,000 will be used for construction of the chapel and counseling center. "No funds will be used for fund-raising or other administrative costs."

The proposed project has received the enthusiastic endorsements of state criminal justice leaders, including TDCJ Board Chairman Carol Vance of Houston. Vance said the board plans to recognize Snyder's efforts at the board's Nov. 18 meeting in San Antonio.

Several churches in Snyder also are working with individual members to raise funds for the project.

In addition, three Snyder banks are making low-interest loans available to persons wishing to make a contribution.

The loan rate is 4.9 percent for up to 24 months. The amount is dependent on the individual's ability to repay. Donations should be made to the Scurry County Area Foundation and are approved by the IRS as a deduction.

Snyder's recycling program moves another step forward

There should be more room available in the Snyder landfill beginning Monday as the city begins another phase of its recycling program.

Corrugated cardboard will now be accepted by the city for recycling, said Carolyn House, solid waste management coordinator.

The city is leasing a corrugated cardboard baler which is located at the city's recycling center just east of the sewer plant. Trailers in which citizens can leave the cardboard will be in place Monday. Everyone - businesses and private citizens - is urged to bring their cardboard waste to the facility and they can do it any hour of the day.

House emphasized that all packaging material, such as Styrofoam, wood, brads and plastic must be removed from the cardboard before it is placed in the trailers. Dumpsters are on the location to handle this material, said House.

Joe Fogle, superintendent of the city's solid waste department, said the program would certainly extend the life of the city's landfill. "You can imagine how much space all the cardboard waste generated daily in Snyder takes up in the landfill," said Fogle. "What we are doing is making more room out there for future generations."

Other materials will be accepted beginning Nov. 1, including white office paper, newspapers and their slick inserts and copy paper. A special place will be available for telephone books. Tin and aluminum cans will also be accepted, said House.

Citizens assigned to do community service work by the probation office will do the sorting and baling of the material on the new machine. It is capable of making 1,000-pound bales and it is being leased at a cost of $350 per month for 24 months. At the end of the lease period, the city will own the baler. Butts Recycling of San Angelo will pick up the bales.

The recycling program in the city is a joint effort of the executive board of the extension service, the Environmental Concerns Committee at Western Texas College and the City of Snyder. Money received from the sale of aluminum cans go to WTC scholarship funds, said House.

Early voting response good

More than 300 voters made their way to the polls during the first three days of early balloting in the November general election, the county clerk's office reported late Friday afternoon.

"It's been a real good turnout," said County Clerk Frances Billingsley, who said 326 people have cast early ballots at her office. "We hope it continues."

Airport still faces county

Proposed airport regulations will again be on the agenda when the Scurry County Commissioners Court meets at 10 a.m. Monday.

Discussion of airport regulations was placed on the agenda following Thursday night's public hearing — the second in two months — to gain public input.

Some 13 persons, mostly pilots, attended Thursday's session. Since an agenda for the meeting had not been posted, only County Judge Bob Doolittle and Commissioner C.D. Gray Jr. attended to avoid a quorum.

Focus of both public hearings has been whether to require liability insurance for individuals performing commercial services such as aircraft repair.

At Monday's meeting the court is expected to set a date to finalize the set of rules and regulations.

In other business Monday, the court will consider a statement of intent and agreement, as well as a lease agreement for the Hermleigh Gin complex. The Hermleigh Water Works is looking at leasing office space in the former gin office.

Also on the agenda is a request to close an alley behind the First Baptist Church in Hermleigh, the county treasurer's quarterly report and line-item transfers.

Early voting began Wednesday and will continue through Nov. 4 on the third floor of the courthouse. Hours are from 8:30 a.m. until 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays.

The actual election day is Saturday, Nov. 8.

There are six locally-contested races and several others which directly impact Scurry County.

The outcome of three of the races could shape the future of county government here.

Republican Ricky Fritz, who unseated incumbent Bob Doolittle in March, is running against Bobby Goodwin for county judge. Goodwin, a former county judge who was defeated by just 12 votes four years ago, ran unopposed in the Democratic primary.

Incumbent Precinct 4 Commissioner Jerry Gannaway, who defeated Forrest Wemken in the Democratic primary, now faces a challenge from Republican Charlie Henderson in November. Henderson was unopposed in March.

In the other commissioner's race, Republican incumbent Roy Idom, representing Precinct 2, is facing Democrat Wayland Huddleson. Both were unopposed in the primary.

Charlie Bell, Democratic incumbent, is being challenged by Republican Janet Merritt in the county treasurer's race.

There are two other contested races in the county. For district clerk, Republican Polly Wadleigh Echols is running against Democratic incumbent Elois Pruitt. And for Precinct 1 constable, Democrat Jimmy Wilson faces independent Bill Adams.

Running unopposed in November are Billingsley, for county clerk; Charlie Reynolds, for peace justice of Precinct 1; and John David Williamson, for peace justice of Precinct 2. All three are Democrats.

The SDN Column

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "To prevent conversations from becoming boring, just say the wrong thing."

A teen once told us that being late is fashionable. Being habitually late is rude, so rude must be fashionable. We've endured enough meetings over the years to believe that things should start and end on time, although they rarely do.

The dictionary tells us that being punctual means arriving at the agreed, right or stated time. And according to a postal supervisor, that doesn't mean a second earlier.

A postal clerk with 11 years of service recently was reprimanded by her supervisor. The letter read: "This practice most stop immediately. Future deficiencies will result in more severe disciplinary action being taken against you, including suspension or removal from the Postal Service."

The Cambridge, Mass., clerk wasn't late, she was early. Her infraction was that she had punched the clock at 8:59 a.m. — one minute before her shift was scheduled to begin. A total of four persons received letters of reprimand.

Upset, the female postal clerk started writing letters - to her postmaster, her congressman and the U.S. Postmaster General.

All agreed that the form letter received by the clerk was a little strong since the clerk didn't and wasn't seeking overtime.

Anyway, the postal service has a rule that gives a five-minute grace period for checking in late. You just can't come to work early — it isn't fashionable.

It reminds us of the story about the long-suffering executive whose secretary was often 30 minutes late for work. She had many excuses — traffic, kids, faulty alarm clocks, bad hair, etc.

Then one day she slid into her desk only five minutes tardy.

Her boss couldn't resist: "Well," he panned, "This is the earliest you've ever been late."

Boll weevil referendum subject of two meetings

Two public meetings have been scheduled Tuesday for producers who would like information about the upcoming boll weevil eradication referendum.

Scurry County Extension Entomologist Mark Logan said the meetings will be held at 7:30 a.m. at Hermleigh Community Center and noon at Fluvanna Community Center. A light breakfast will be served at the morning meeting. Hamburgers will be served at lunch.

Issues in the referendum are 1) establishing the Central Rolling Plains Eradication Zone, 2) electing a Texas Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation board director, and 3) establishing the assessment rate for paying for the program.

Ballots are expected to be mailed out in mid-November. The election date is scheduled for Dec. 1.

All cotton farmers, including land owners renting land on a share of the cotton crop, are eligible to vote. Producers may vote by mail or in person at the office of the county extension agent. All ballots cast by mail must be post-marked by Dec. 1.

Board sending Meza back to prison

AUSTIN (AP) — Child killer Raul Meza, who was driven from six cities by protests when he was freed from prison last year, was ordered back behind bars Friday by state parole officials.

The action came after Meza violated the terms of his release: He was absent from the hotel where he was living when his parole officer checked on him one night in August.

Meza, who was required to wear an electronic monitor, was supposed to be at his residence from 7 p.m. to 6 a.m. But when his parole officer came by about 12:30 a.m. on Aug. 24, he wasn't there.

Meza maintained he had only left the hotel for 15 minutes to get cigarettes, said his lawyer, Keith Hampton. At a hearing last week, Meza said he believed his infraction was minimal.

"I've tried everything in my power and my ability to do what was required of me," Meza said.

But a three-member panel of the state parole board, meeting in Gatesville, decided Friday that Meza's release should be revoked.

"He goes to prison," said panel member Mae Jackson. "He will go, I'm sure, as quickly as they can move him" from Travis County jail, where Meza was held pending the parole board action.

Hampton said, "I definitely think it's unfair. We're talking about a model releasee who committed a minor infraction ... It's not proportional justice."

Hampton said he would ask the panel to reconsider. If it does not change its decision, he said he plans to take Meza's case to court.

Meza spent about 11 years in prison after accepting a plea bargain in which he confessed to the 1982 murder of 8-year-old Kendra Page, who authorities said had been strangled and sexually molested.

He was sentenced to 30 years for the murder, then received another four-year sentence in 1989 for having a weapon in prison.

Meza's release was mandatory in 1993 because he had accumulated enough "good time" credit in prison to equal his sentence.

But in town after town — El Paso, San Antonio, Mineral Wells, Wichita Falls, Sweetwater and Uvalde — he was met with angry protests.

He finally wound up back in Austin, where the father of his victim still lives. Don Page said last week that Meza should go back to prison.

"He didn't follow the rules we gave him a chance to follow," Page said.

Walter Hagen, one of the most colorful golfers in the history of the game, won the PGA title four years in a row, 1924-25-26-27.

Lynch leaving

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Drummer Stan Lynch is heading into the great wide open after leaving Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers.

He quit to work as an independent writer and producer. "It feels strange," Lynch said, "but I think it'll be a real good change for everybody."

Lynch said the split was amicable and had been brewing for more than a year. His last concert appearance with Petty was Oct. 2 in San Francisco.

"Over time, people have such different desires, musically, and mine are becoming more apparent to me," he said. "I've moved away from them as a person, as well as a musician. I've moved apart from them."

A fresh look at life and death

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

To state that "death is part of life" is a first-class cliché. However, to cellular biologists, not so. Moreover, the method of death is paramount, not the death itself.

For example, we are all familiar with cellular death that results from injury or infection. Burns, abscesses and serious trauma cause cells to break open and release their contents. This is called "necrosis." Such an event also occurs when tissue is deprived of oxygen: for instance, cardiac muscle during a heart attack or brain substance during a stroke. Because cellular contents, which often contain caustic enzymes, irritate neighboring structures, swelling, pain and inflammation always accompany necrosis.

On the other hand, cells can die by simply shriveling up. Called "apoptosis" (pronounced apo-tosis), this mechanism is far more prevalent than necrosis — and has far more significance.

According to Dr. J. John Cohen (Professor of Immunology and Medicine at the University of Colorado Health Science Center in Denver), writing in the December 1993 medical journal Hospital Practice, biologists are increasingly turning their attention to apoptosis in order to explain a variety of diseases, such as auto-immune conditions and AIDS.

Necrotic cells are difficult for the body to remove; in essence, this toxic cleanup severely stresses metabolism. In contrast, when a cell undergoes apoptosis, it sends a signal to its neighbors, who merely engulf the dying cell. It is here one minute, gone the next. No fuss, no inflammation, no pain or swelling. It is through apoptosis that normal, worn-out cells give up their places to new and younger cells.

What controls this natural cell "suicide"?

Researchers are now convinced that a death gene, carried by all of us in our cells, is the primary influence.

For instance, new neutrophils (infection-fighting white blood corpuscles) are programmed to die within 24 hours. Regardless of whether they have done their job, they vanish in a day. Similarly, prostate cells exhibit the same involution after removal of the testicles, when the cells are no longer stimulated by testosterone, the male hormone.

Such a mechanism of death, often termed "cytologic altruism" is a vital component of good health by providing space and a nurturing environment for youth. Those cells that, for one reason or another, do not stop growing and die are cancerous. Consequently, a malignant tumor could well result from a defect or absence of death genes that control cell populations through apoptosis.

Furthermore, older cells are more likely than their new counterparts to react against normal tissue. Therefore, auto-immune diseases, such as lupus and rheumatoid arthritis, may develop because a death gene is inoperative.

Finally some scientists believe that the Human Immunodeficiency Virus, the cause of AIDS, affects certain blood cells (lymphocytes) by activating their death genes, inappropriately changing their pattern of response from combat to suicide.

Apoptosis is probably not a cause of senescence. Rather, this process seems to depend on an age-dependent limit of cellular divisions. As we grow older, our cells simply stop dividing and making new ones.

I am certain that in the coming decades, apoptosis, with its death gene, will revolutionize the diagnosis and treatment of many diseases. The concept is astounding. For us to live, part of us must die every day. In such a perfect and natural scheme, death truly is a vital component of life.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I read your column regularly and notice that your picture depicts you with messy hair on the back of your head. The picture does not change. I realize that neat hair does not indicate your capabilities as a doctor; however, surely your hair cannot be in disarray EVERY day. Is it possible that you could have another photo taken on a better "hair day"? It would certainly display your distinguished good looks.

DEAR READER: Although I've never made a big issue out of it, my hair is probably messy because I wear it short and have a cowlick.

However, I suppose we must consider alternative explanations. Now that you bring it up, I probably have more "bad hair days" now than I used to. This is because I, like other practicing physicians, am increasingly affected by the chaos and disarray of the present health-care system.

I should tell you that on some days, my hair stands up straight all day. At other times, when I am reading a good book or going to the theater, my hair probably lies flat. I'm not too sure about this, but I'll check it out with my secretary, who is amazingly perceptive.

Maybe my picture is sort of an average representation, showing only half my hair (on the back) standing up. Actually, my hair isn't that great; I just have a lot of it.

There's an irresistible compulsion sweeping over the American public right now: the urge to be a victim. A victim of anything; it doesn't matter. By becoming a nation of victims, we can ignore responsibility for our actions, behavior and thinking. Then we can feel powerless and resentful, blame others for our deficiencies, join a self-help group, spend an hour a week whining about our lot in life, wallow in self-pity, try desperately to help other-unfortunates who are somehow less well-off than we, and — finally, be persuaded for a few hours that it could have been worse after all. This is now the fashion.

Therefore, if you don't mind, I'm going to take the position that my messy hair is the consequence of being a helpless victim of the present health-care debacle, which is unlikely to be reformed, because the president has been unable to present a viable alternative to Congress.

In short, it's Bill Clinton's fault. Believe me, with my looks, another photo simply isn't going to help.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is there anything better for gout than Zostrix?

DEAR READER: Zostrix is a cream that is useful in treating the pain of certain nerve disorders, such as diabetic neuropathy. It is not appropriate as an acute treatment for gout; colchicine or anti-inflammatory drugs, such as Indocin, are preferable.

Attacks of painful gouty arthritis can often be prevented by taking daily doses of the prescription medicines Zylorim or Colbenemid. Your doctor can advise you.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "About Gout." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

wanted the NAACP to pay the remainder of his three-year contract, which included a $200,000 annual salary plus a housing allowance, insurance and pension benefits.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People's board fired Chavis for failing to disclose that he used NAACP money to strike a $332,400 out-of-court settlement with Mary Stansel, his former assistant. That settlement, the board said, was part of carefree spending habits that fed a $3 million budget deficit for the organization.

NAACP, Chavis settle lawsuit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The NAACP and former executive director Benjamin Chavis settled their dispute over his firing last August, ending a sad saga of fiscal woe at the nation's oldest civil rights group.

The settlement was reached Friday, according to court-appointed mediator Robert Barnett, three days before a Washington city judge was to convene a hearing to determine whether Chavis should be reinstated.

"I'm grateful that this matter has been finally resolved," Chavis said, but he and NAACP attorney Lawrence Greenwald declined comment on the details.

Both sides were under court order not to disclose the settlement's specifics before Monday.

The settlement canceled a Monday hearing before Superior Court Judge Richard Salzman on Chavis' lawsuit, which contended that the NAACP violated its own procedures in firing him Aug. 20. Chavis had sought a court order temporarily reinstating him.

Quayle likely 1996 candidate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Acting more like a 1996 presidential contender each day, former Vice President Dan Quayle has created two campaign funds that are key signs of his White House ambitions.

Quayle recently converted leftover donations from his Senate campaign account to form a political action committee that he can use to give donations to Republican candidates.

In addition, he took $100,000 of the leftover money and formed a presidential exploratory committee that will allow him to raise and spend money to test the political waters.

The exploratory committee and the PAC listed the same address in Indianapolis.

While Quayle hasn't filed any records with the Federal Election Commission declaring his candidacy, the two moves detailed in reports to the FEC this week are the clearest sign yet of his intentions.

William R. Neale, a close Quayle associate and treasurer for his new PAC, said he does not believe the former vice president will make a final decision until next year.

Budgets, revenues...

Budgeting is just one of the important roles played by the county judge. This is accomplished in concert with other members of the commissioners court and department heads.

Once a budget is approved, there must be sufficient revenues to support planned spending. The county court is a major source of revenue. There are more than 30 cases handled each month, and plea-bargain agreements save the county money. A court-appointed attorney can cost taxpayers $600, and fines likely will not cover that expense.

Since 1986, county tax values have dropped $864 million. Loss of values has caused taxes to increase. In fact, during my four years as county judge, controllable expenses were cut. All functions of the county judge are important, and I have the experience to make county government work efficiently and effectively.

PLEASE VOTE FOR POLLY WADLEIGH ECHOLS DISTRICT CLERK

To the tax payers and voters of Scurry County, I need to make a correction to my ad of October, 8-9, 1994 in which I referenced the years of the budget for District Clerks Office to be for 1994-1995, when in fact, with some instruction, I learned they were for 1993-1994. Below is the actual and budgeted amounts for this office, years 1992-1995. These figures are supported by records from the Auditors Office, open to the public.

As stated in my ads and my conversations, I feel positive change needs to be made. Not only does this office need to be made available the full 9 hour workday, tightening of the expenses appear to be in order.

With my business background of Accounting, Office Management and having run successfully my own business, The Mail Center Plus, I feel I can bring to this Office a business approach backed with conservative spending habits, the energy and enthusiasm to do a good job, pushing to get more done with less by whatever method it may take. I will be accountable to you, the taxpayer concerning this.

Hood alert ended

KILLEEN (AP) — More than 30,000 Fort Hood soldiers who might have been deployed to Kuwait were taken off alert Friday. The soldiers had been on alert as part of Operation Vigilant Warrior, during which U.S. troops are massing in Kuwait to deter Iraqi President Saddam Hussein from approaching the border. About 230 soldiers from Fort Hood, mostly truck drivers, mechanics and supply specialists currently are in the Arabian Peninsula. Additional Fort Hood troops still may be sent to the area.

MISSING — Angle Folkes, a 14-year-old ninth grader, has been reported missing by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Isidro Villarreal. She is believed to be in Snyder. Persons with information about her whereabouts should call the parents at 573-8305 or call the Snyder Police Department.

10-year-old foils kidnapping

CHALMETTE, La. (AP) — The old man pulled up in front of four children, grabbed the youngest, a 5-year-old, and threw him in the back seat of his car. That's when Cameron Noel — all 10 years and 66 pounds of him — sprang to action. "I kicked him where it hurts," Cameron said Friday.

The kick to the testicles doubled the old man over. The 4-foot-11-inch hero with thick glasses followed up by kicking the man in his head.

Cameron then reached in through the car's front door, unlocked the back door and let his friend out.

Armando Haramboure, 73, was arrested Thursday with the help of angry parents and charged with kidnapping. He was being held on $75,000 bond.

Haramboure also was charged with indecent behavior for allegedly touching a 4-year-old boy who lives near Cameron in this town about 15 miles east of New Orleans.

All four children, three boys and a girl, told basically the same story about the kidnapping attempt on Tuesday and Cameron's heroic, sheriff's deputies said.

Haramboure was tracked down after one of the four children recognized his car parked at the man's house. The child's mother went to the house, wrote down the car's license plate number and called police.

Officers couldn't find the car, but an informal posse of angry parents spotted him driving on Thursday and one of them pulled out in front of him. The rest surrounded the car until police arrived.

'Roast Howard' kicks off season

A "Roast Howard" ceremonial fire and pep rally is scheduled Halloween night on the campus of Western Texas College and members of the community are invited to help kickoff the 1994-95 Lady Westerners basketball season by attending.

The Westerners open with a non-conference game versus Howard Tuesday, Nov. 1 in the Scurry County Coliseum.

The fire will be located on the southern edge of the campus adjacent to the WTC sign mounted on the rock pile. The fire is to be lit at 7:30 p.m.

Texas files suit against the KKK

AUSTIN (AP) — The state filed a $1.1 million lawsuit against the Ku Klux Klan on Friday, claiming the group threatened blacks and burned crosses to try to stop an all-white public housing project from being desegregated.

The lawsuit, the first of its kind, says nine Klan members from two KKK groups violated the state Fair Housing Act. It also seeks damages for several residents who claim they were discriminated against.

The Klansmen are accused of paying white children to beat up black children, threatening whites who befriended black residents, and burning crosses and hanging "White Power" banners near the complex in Vidor, just outside Beaumont in eastern Texas.

"We will not allow the forces of bigotry, cowardly hiding under sheets, to reverse years of progress," said state Attorney General Dan Morales, who filed the lawsuit on behalf of the Texas Commission on Human Rights.

Commission Executive Director William Hale said Vidor residents and KKK informants helped build the case.

Defendant Michael Lowe, grand dragon of the Texas Knights, said the lawsuit is groundless.

Fall Festival planned in coliseum on Oct. 29

A variety of activities await children of all ages at the annual Fall Festival slated Saturday, Oct. 30, at the Scurry County Coliseum.

Sponsored by Snyder's five elementary schools, festivities will begin underway at 6 p.m. and continue until 9 p.m. Activities will include the perennial spook house, 32 game booths, two concession stands, one mini concession stand and four ticket booths.

All events will be set up inside the coliseum, not the annex as in years past.

Tickets at game booths will sell for 25 cents each on the night of the event. However, tickets may be purchased in advance at any elementary school for five for $1.

Prizes and candy will be given to game booth winners.

There will be no Jack-O-Lantern contest or costume parade this year, but event organizers are urging everyone to dress up in costume anyway.

Western Texas College will also sponsor a roping booth for children. Canyon Gun Club will sponsor a target shoot.

Some of the booths will include face painting by Snyder's cheerleaders, basketball toss, a "soak the principal" booth, Nintendo, pie throwing, bean toss, putt putt golf, tattooing and more.

Glow in-the-dark necklaces will also be for sale for $2 each at all three concession stands.

The two food booths will sell taco salads, hot dogs, Frito pies, drinks and barbecue sandwiches.

The mini concession stand, located on the floor, will sell drinks, popcorn and Nachos.

Proceeds will benefit Stanfield, Northeast, Central, East and West elementary schools.

Financial Focus

A child's education is a major concern to most parents. Although high schools and colleges prepare students to earn money, they typically devote little time to teaching them how to properly manage that money. It's important for children, even at an early age, to understand that money is a limited resource that must be managed wisely.

Children as young as 5 can begin handling an allowance. Having a small, limited amount of money to spend as they wish teaches children to balance their wants with their limited resources.

Another excellent way to teach children the value of money is to introduce them to the world of investing. One way to accomplish this is to purchase the stock of a company with which the child is familiar. Stock certificates are often colorful and imaginative with pictures of the company's products. The annual report published by the company provides information about the firm and gives the child a real sense of ownership.

Unfortunately, purchasing a share or two of an individual stock can be expensive. An alternative is to buy shares of a mutual fund that invests in many different companies.

One mutual fund company recently used its annual report to explain what a mutual fund is and to examine the investments offered through the fund. The information was presented as though a set of grandparents were teaching their grandchild about this investment.

The grandfather began by explaining that by purchasing mutual fund shares, the granddaughter, Andrea, had become part owner of many different businesses. If the companies performed well and the value of their stock rose, Andrea's mutual fund shares would be worth more.

The grandfather went on to explain how the value of the stock changes nearly every day, and he showed Andrea how to find the share price on the financial page in the daily newspaper. He even circled her fund with a red pencil.

"What companies do I own, Grandpa?" asked Andrea. "One is the company that puts out this newspaper," he answered. The grandmother picked up a box of cereal Andrea enjoyed at breakfast. "And the company that makes this cereal," she added. "You own a part of both these companies through your mutual fund."

Andrea learned that her grandfather's car, her favorite restaurant, the clothes she wore and the department store she visited were all companies she owned through the mutual fund.

Andrea's grandparents had brought investments to life, and she agreed that because she liked the products these companies produced, it made sense to invest in them.

Introducing children to the world of investing can be fascinating and fun for you and the child, and it can be one of life's most valuable lessons.

Accomplice in quintuple murders sentenced

HOUSTON (AP) — Jared Althaus has been sentenced to 10 years in prison for assisting roommate Robert Coulson in the murders of five members of Coulson's family.

His attorney argued for probation, citing Althaus' good deeds and maturing since the Nov. 13, 1992, murders.

State District Judge Donald K. Shipley agreed at Friday's sentencing that Althaus had made progress, but "nevertheless, it was a gruesome murder of which he had a part."

Coulson has been sentenced to die by lethal injection for smothering the five family members and setting their bodies ablaze.

Killed were Coulson's adoptive parents, Otis and Mary Coulson; his sister, Robin; her husband, Richard Went Worth; and his adopted sister, Sarah.

Althaus, 25, broke under police pressure early in the police investigation and confessed that he and Coulson, 26, had spent months planning to eliminate heirs to the Coulson family estate.

Recognizing that the state might have been unable to prove its case against Coulson without Althaus' help, the judge gave him half of the sentence prosecutors had sought.

But defense attorney Mike DeGeurin said he was disappointed because he believed he proved that Althaus' participation was an aberration caused by his immaturity.

Although Althaus admitted to helping to plan the murders, obtaining items to carry out the murder and acting initially as Coulson's alibi, he said he didn't enter the house.

Prosecutor Chuck Rosenthal said he thought the state got Althaus' testimony after agreeing to a 20-year sentence. But at Friday's hearing, DeGeurin said he interpreted the 20 years as a maximum and asked the judge to consider probation.

Dr. Richard Pesikoff, Althaus' counselor since December 1992, said Althaus had a mental age of 13 when he moved in with Coulson while in his early 20s and became like a "puppy dog" to dependent," Pesikoff said.

Coulson systematically isolated Althaus from his friends and family, making the roommate "totally dependent," Pesikoff said. President Jimmy Carter signed a 1978 bill authorizing the Susan B. Anthony dollar.

Ira ISD's Fall Carnival scheduled on Oct. 29

Ira's annual Fall Carnival offers something for everyone. The annual event is planned for Saturday, Oct. 29, from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. in the new gym. The theme is "Under the Big Top." A variety of food and game booths will be set up and the traditional crowning of a prince and princess and king and queen will cap the activities. Those crowned will represent the classes which make the most money.

Each grade is sponsoring one or two activities. They include kindergarten, needle in haystack and snowcones; first grade, Plinko; second grade, clown and ghost toss; third grade, general store; fourth grade, dart throw; fifth grade, treasure hunt and grab bag; and sixth grade, Wanted Dead Or Alive (jail).

Other grades and activities will include seventh grade, video vengeance and fishing pond; eighth grade, maze; ninth grade, spook house; 10th grade, hamster races and jerky sales; 11th grade, basketball throw and miniature golf; and 12th grade, dime toss.

The Fellowship of Christian Athletes (FCA) will sell carnal candy and the Bulldog Backers will operate a concession stand in front of the new gym.

Crownbearers during the crowning will be kindergarten students: Aryn Calley, Jessica Odom, Robin Clements and Dustin Janssen.

Marchers for the elementary grades include Terryn Autry and Kerry Jamison, first grade; Matt Long and Amber Sanchez, second grade; Alana Pulis and Nathan Wilkins, third grade; Kayla Krop and John David Chandler, fourth grade; Jessie Green and Jerry Jamison, fifth grade; and Bryce Wilkins and Jessica Brooks, sixth grade.

Junior high and high school marchers will include Josh Long and Bridget Espinoza, seventh grade; Tye Shirley and Brook Wilkes, eighth grade; Jennifer Copeland and Max Perez, ninth grade; Jay Luna and Rikki Wilkes, 10th grade; Jennifer Rigsby and Jeremy Howard, 11th grade; and Jennifer Rankin and Jay Nettles, 12th grade.

RN programs workshop topic

Counselors at Western Texas College will discuss area R.N. programs and answer questions about pre-requisites, admission deadlines and tips on applying on Tuesday from 11-11:25 a.m. in the Science Lecture Hall.

The workshop is for any individual in the community needing basic information about nursing schools and the many options available for getting a nursing degree.

It's been a tough year, but through your prayers, support, and words of encouragement, we endured.

Our adoption is final.

Thank you,

NOT TO DECIDE IS TO DECIDE

It is easier to live life in neutral than to stand up for what you believe. It can be called "going with the flow." It can be called "straddling the fence." This type of conduct might avoid immediate conflict, but it is the first step to cowardly compromise...

All it takes for error to triumph is for those who know the truth to remain silent. The so-called "silent majority" that tolerates...error is really casting their vote for it.

Flu shots urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal health officials are stepping up efforts to persuade the elderly to get free flu shots now available through most doctors and paid for by Medicare.

They are especially concerned about low vaccination rates among black senior citizens, who got shots last year at only half the rate of white seniors.

Thirty million Americans are stricken by the flu each year, and 10,000 to 40,000 people — most of them elderly — succumb to its complications.

"Flu shots save lives," Bruce C. Vladeck, the head of the Health Care Financing Administration, which runs Medicare, said Friday.

Future Bride Wants to Keep Baubles From Old Boyfriends

DEAR ABBY: My future husband and I are having a disagreement. He has asked me to sell all the jewelry I received from former boyfriends. (I was engaged to two of them.)

I think I should be able to keep the pieces I especially like. I returned both engagement rings, but kept some 18-karat gold bracelets and a strand of pearls.

Abby, these pieces have no sentimental value, but I don't want to sell them. Neither do I want to lie to my fiancé, because that is no way to start a marriage.

To me, the most important piece of jewelry is the wedding ring I'll be wearing, but I'd like to keep the bracelets and pearls.

What would you do?
PENNSYLVANIA BRIDE

DEAR BRIDE: Since your future husband is opposed to your wearing jewelry given to you by previous boyfriends, if I were you, I'd sell them to keep the peace. He should be more important to you than jewelry.

DEAR ABBY: You were too hasty in your warning about tattooed eyeliner. I have received several copies of your column from clients who have had MRIs done following permanent eyeliner, eyebrow and lip tattoos with absolutely no ill effects. When done correctly, these procedures have proven to be a safe alternative to traditional cosmetic makeup. I believe your response should have been: Get another opinion.

KATHLEEN CIAMPI, PROFESSIONAL DERMAGRAPHICS, MOUNT PROSPECT, ILL.

DEAR KATHLEEN: I sought a second opinion. According to Dr. Livia Solti-Bohman, president-elect of the Los Angeles

Radiological Society: "Much depends upon the location of the metal particles in the body and the size of the particles."

"There can be two problems for people with tattoos who enter magnetic fields: There have been reports of redness and edema in the tattooed eyelids of patients, which indicate irritation during the MRI. The other concern is whether the metal particles will interfere with the accuracy or clarity of the pictures."

Patients should be able to give informed consent, and in order to do so, they should be aware that there could be a problem, however minor. Thank you for writing. I stand by my answer.

DEAR ABBY: I have been reading your column ever since you started. (I am 93.) Now I need your help. Some friends came to see me early one evening, and they stayed and talked and talked. The lady played the piano and I thought she'd never stop. She also sang, and I got so nervous I could hardly stand it.

Abby, how does a person get rid of guests who stay too long? I don't want to hurt anyone's feelings, but it's difficult to stay up when I can hardly keep my eyes open.

ANONYMOUS PLEASE

DEAR ANONYMOUS: When you think you have had enough, say, "Oh, dear, just look at the time! I didn't realize it was so late. I'm going to let you nice people go home, so you can retire." Then, stand up, smile pleasantly, and walk toward the door.

DEAR ABBY: My younger brother is currently serving a one-year sentence in a federal prison. When he calls, he must call collect because this is the rule. At first I was glad to hear from him, but frankly, I simply cannot afford to accept all these calls.

I write to him often, but he calls several times a week to chat. Abby, I know he is lonely, but my husband's patience is growing thin — and I don't blame him. Our telephone bills are more than we can handle. In addition to those phone bills, he asks me to send him money for postage stamps, toiletries and money to pay his court fines.

I hate to hurt his feelings, but this has got to stop!

Why does the prison system allow inmates to make unlimited collect calls? Surely the prison administrators realize the burden it places on family members.

Perhaps some of your readers in prison will see this and limit their collect calls to no more than one a month. Sign me ...

HAD IT IN ARKANSAS

DEAR HAD IT: Here's your letter, and I hope it helps not only you but others with the same problem.

Tell your brother you will accept only one collect call a month, and if he calls more than that, you will refuse his call. Also, send him no money unless you can easily afford it. And by the way, your letter is a "first."

DEAR ABBY: The volunteer aide in the nursing home who went around zipping up all those "forgetful old men" — then realized (too late) that she had zipped up a visiting priest — had that embarrassing experience coming to her.

I have visited elderly friends and relatives in nursing homes and am really burned up by the condescending way some of the employees treat these lovely older people.

They call them by their first names, print their names in a large childish scrawl on the outside of their clothes, and other demeaning things. Their mental capacity is totally ignored. Example: They go around pulling up zippers without bothering to notice with whom they are dealing.

The kinder thing to do would be to quietly ask each one, "Do you need help with your zipper?"

I am a registered nurse, and when I was in training, if we ever called anyone over 16 years old by their first name, we got a proper "dressing down." We were not allowed to refer to a patient as a room number, a bed number — or "the gall bladder in Room 210," etc. We were expected to speak to (or about) them with all the respect they deserved.

Thank you, Abby, for letting me get on my soapbox. You may use my name.

ESTHER POWERS, CINCINNATI

DEAR MS. POWERS: Thanks for a powerful message. (Forgive me, I couldn't resist the pun.)

DEAR ABBY: The numerous accounts of readers in an unzipped condition bring to mind my experience back in 1934 when I lived in New York.

I boarded a Madison Avenue bus and was soon joined by an attractive young woman wearing a fur stole trimmed with silver fox tails.

Something (a draft) alerted me that my zipper was down, so I very swiftly zipped it up.

At 50th Street, my seat partner stood up to get off the bus when she realized that one of her tails was caught in my zipper. It was really jammed — stuck!

I had to get off the bus with her several blocks beyond her intended destination. We attracted such a crowd that a policeman took us into a ladies' dress shop, where the manager used scissors to cut off the offending tail!

JOHN CUSICK, SUN CITY, ARIZ.

TO THE VOTERS OF SCURRY COUNTY:

IN SEEKING RE-ELECTION TO A SECOND TERM AS YOUR DISTRICT CLERK, I WOULD LIKE TO EMPHASIZE MY YEARS OF EXPERIENCE AND TRAINING, FIRST AS CHIEF DEPUTY, AND THEN AS DISTRICT CLERK. I HAVE STRIVED TO KEEP THE COSTS DOWN WHILE MAINTAINING EFFICIENCY IN ALL AREAS OF WORK. THE LINE ITEMS THAT I CONTROL IN MY BUDGET ARE EXACTLY, TO THE PENNY, THE SAME FOR 1994 AND 1995.

IN 1993, DUE TO THE INCREASE OF WORK REQUIRED BY THE ATTORNEY GENERAL, ONE DAY PER WEEK WAS ADDED TO THE PART-TIME HELP. THE ADDED COST FOR THIS DAY HAS BEEN MORE THAN OFFSET BY THE REIMBURSEMENT TO SCURRY COUNTY BY THE ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE

IF ELECTED, I WILL CONTINUE TO SERVE EFFICIENTLY AND COURTEOUSLY, AND WILL CONTINUE TO BE A FULL-TIME CLERK. THANK YOU.

WTC announces winners in meat judging contest

In the first contest of the year, the Western Texas College Meats Judging team finished fifth overall out of 16 teams competing at the Excel High Plains Collegiate Meats Judging Contest in Plainview.

Sixteen Colleges and Universities competed at the contest Oct. 15-16. It included 120 individuals.

In addition to fifth place in the overall contest, WTC placed third in beef grading; third in beef judging; fifth in pork judging; fifth in lab judging; and fifth in the questions portion of the contest.

Several members of the team placed in the top 15 percent for individual contests.

Winning the most individual placings was team member John Caddal of Abilene, with sixth in beef grading and beef judging;

Phi Theta Kappa attending meeting

The Western Texas College chapter of Phi Theta Kappa is attending the Texas-New Mexico Leadership Conference in Austin this weekend.

The group is to attend various seminars showing how to be better officers, introducing them to mock chapter meets and offering them tips to improve PTK in their community.

Students attending from Snyder are Jennifer Beard, Barbara Chapman, Chris Gayle, Laura Hamby, Michael Hess, Jason Morman and Misty Myers. Also attending are Andrew Burt from Lovington, N.M., Lori Clark from Ira, Steven McDonald from Roscoe, Matt Minkley from Claude and Jeanetta Turner Sturart from Hamlin. The advisors for the group are Duane and Mary Hood.

At the conference, chapter member Benji Felan, Snyder, is to announce the roll call for District One. He is also to introduce the featured speaker at Saturday's activities.

Truck driver dies in wreck

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A tanker truck believed to be carrying jet fuel overturned on an interstate entrance ramp on Friday, burning for longer than an hour and killing the driver.

The truck flipped on its side on the ramp onto Interstate 35, leaving the driver trapped inside during the fire. The driver's name hasn't been released.

San Antonio Fire Department spokesman Rodney Hitzfelder said 40 firefighters responded to the blaze.

Perot endorses Colorado's governor

DENVER (AP) — Former independent presidential candidate Ross Perot on Friday endorsed Gov. Roy Romer's re-election bid for governor, saying the Democratic incumbent "is the role model for what public servants should be."

"Look at where Colorado was several years ago, and where Colorado is today," the Texas billionaire businessman said during a question-and-answer session with reporters.

He said he was "impressed with the man, impressed with his family and impressed with his children," and noted Romer has 13 grandchildren.

Perot characterized Romer as a man "supported by the working people," and added: "He listens to people, and tells the truth."

His endorsement of a Democrat is "completely consistent" even though he has been a critic of Democratic President Bill Clinton, Perot said. He noted that Romer is the "first and only one so far" he has endorsed.

There was no immediate reaction from Republican gubernatorial candidate Bruce Benson about the endorsement.

Perot is mailing, at his own expense, letters to independent voters in Colorado urging them to re-elect Romer. "They'll go vote their conscience," Perot said.

He pledged to send the letter to more than 100,000 independent voters in the state and to publish it as a full page ad in newspapers.

Perot got 23 percent of the vote in Colorado in 1992 and won 25 percent of the vote in 40 of the state's 63 counties.

"I'm pleased to do it. Good luck to you," Perot said to Romer at the conclusion of the news conference.

Perot's letter noted Romer "is a

Love in at Lamesa

Tigers drive 99 yards on 12 plays to culminate second half comeback

By TODD STANLEY
SDN Sports Editor

LAMESA — Snyder's entire 1994 season was held in the balance three times on Friday night, all with under seven minutes to play in the game.

With 6:58 remaining in the fourth quarter and the ball on its own 1-yard line, Snyder marched down the field, converting two po-

Estacado into a big showdown for a District 5-4A playoff berth. Snyder stretched its District 5-4A record to 2-1 (5-3 overall), while Lamesa fell out of the district race with a record of 0-3 (2-6 overall).

The Tigers came out flat to start the game, but were able to rebound after trailing 21-7 at halftime.

"I got after them (the players) a little bit at halftime," Snyder head coach David Baugh said. "I don't usually do that, but I felt they needed to play harder and play smarter."

"We had a lot of mistakes on offense and defense. We would have a good play and then we would come right back and have a stupid one."

Coach Baugh said his goal at halftime was to make the players confident that they could win the game.

"I told them that if we came back it would be the greatest comeback since I've been here, but that I thought they were the team to do it," he said.

Snyder started the game with a big play, when inside linebacker Roy Tavaraz picked off Lamesa's Robby Trevino and ran it down to the Golden Tor 34 yard line.

On second down, Parker handed the ball to Mitchell, who bounced outside and down the sidelines for an apparent touchdown. However, a holding penalty nullified the play and Snyder was subsequently held on downs, forcing a Parker 35-yard field goal at-tentially season-ending fourth down plays in the midst of a 99-yard scoring drive. The drive was capped on a 17-yard touchdown run by Chris Mitchell and a nail-biting two-point conversion pass from Matt Parker to Mark Love with 1:14 to go in the game, that gave the Tigers a 22-21 win over arch-rival Lamesa at Tor Stadium.

The victory not only gives the Tigers a legitimate shot at the playoffs, but it transforms Thursday night's game against Lubbock tempt that sailed wide right.

"I thought that possession really hurt us," Baugh said. "It took the air out of us. We scored and they (the officials) called it back. Then, we missed the field goal, so we came away with nothing to show for the interception."

Lamesa capitalized on the missed field goal by driving 80 yards on seven plays and scoring on a 40-yard run by Anthony Parraz.

The Tigers were able to answer back with a 69-yard drive of their own. Mitchell carried the ball six of the eight plays, gaining 63 yards. Parker scored with :03 left in the first quarter from the 1-yard line on fourth-and-goal to knot the score at 7-7.

The Golden Tornadoes came roaring back with their second seven-play, 80-yard scoring drive.

On that drive, Trevino took an option play off right tackle, eluded two defenders and raced 40 yards to the Tigers 8-yard line.

Two plays later, Trevino hooked up with Ray Garcia for a 10-yard touchdown pass in the corner of the endzone, making the score 14-7 with 9:07 left in the second quarter.

On Snyder's next possession, the Tiger offense became stagnant. Mitchell was stopped for no gain on first down, then Parker was sacked twice, forcing Snyder to punt.

Lamesa's Max Kelly was able to break through the Tiger line on fourth down and block Mitchell's punt.

The block gave the Golden Tors excellent field position at the Snyder 19 yard line and on their first play from scrimmage Trevino hit Garcia in the back of the endzone again, this time with 6:07 left, to give Lamesa its 21-7 halftime advantage.

In the second half, Snyder was able to execute the starburst kick-off return to perfection. Marlowe Riggins zig-zagged his way to the 31-yard line and a late hit out of bounds pushed the ball up to midfield, where fullback Greg McAden and tailback Mitchell put on a running exhibition.

On the first play from the Snyder 46-yard line, McAden took an inside handoff through a gaping hole and ran over a Lamesa defender on the way to a 14-yard pick-up.

By alternating sweeps to Mitchell and inside traps to McAden, Snyder worked its way down to the Lamesa 19-yard line.

On fourth-and-one from the 19, Mitchell took the handoff from Parker, dipped his shoulder like he was going to power through the line for the first down, but instead, he found daylight to the outside and rumbled into the endzone.

With 9:07 left in the third quarter, Snyder had cut the lead to 21-14.

Snyder had a good opportunity to get back into the game, when Lamesa quarterback forced a pass into double coverage and cornerback John Clinkinbeard outleaped the intended receiver to snare his fifth interception of the year.

However, the Snyder offense could not get on track and the Tigers were forced to punt the ball away with 2:31 left in the third period.

Lamesa, then, was able to effectively run its wishbone attack right at the Tiger defense running over seven minutes off the clock before eventually punting the ball away with 6:58 left in the game.

Ray Garcia's punt hit at the Snyder 10 before it rolled down toward the goalline where it was downed by a host of Lamesa defenders at the half-yard line.

Snyder moved the ball down the field for the game-winning touchdown and conversion.

Snyder running back Chris Mitchell finished the night with 29 carries for 222 yards and two touchdowns.

Lamesa quarterback Robby Trevino had a good game running and throwing the ball. He rushed for 98 yards on 8 carries and completed six passes for 83 yards, 79 of which were to wideout Ray Garcia.

After the game, Lamesa head coach Gary Yoder was visibly shaken.

"There is a fifty-fifty chance that you are going to win or lose on Friday night," he said. "When there are 60 guys from both schools out there on the field willing to take a chance at winning for their alma mater there are no losers in high school football."

"That is the beauty of the game at this level. We have to put this game behind us and get ready to play a tough Sweetwater team."

Snyder is scheduled to play Sweetwater in two weeks, but Coach Baugh and company have only one real goal...to beat Estacado on Thursday night.

"We knew if we didn't win this game, we wouldn't have a chance (at the playoffs)," he said. "Now it comes down to the game against Estacado for a playoff berth."

Cardinals shut out Ira, 57-0

Hermleigh wins the battle of Scurry County

HERMLEIGH — Jimmy and Billy Joe Digby combined their efforts Friday night with a team concept devised by Cardinals head coach David Rogers to shut down the Ira offense, while putting 57 points on the board during Hermleigh's 57-0 whitewashing of the Bulldogs. Jimmy had 10 solo tackles, four assists and a fumble recovery, while younger brother Billy Joe rushed for 59 yards on 4 carries and three touchdowns.

"I don't know what I'd do without my Digby boys," Rogers said. "They played one heck of a ballgame." Rogers was quick to point out the significance of all pieces that make-up the supporting cast members. "It was one of those nights where everyone and everything clicked," Rogers said. "Our kids stood toe to toe with the kids from Ira the whole game."

Rogers received excellent individual efforts from Chris Roemisch and Joey Sanchez, as well. Roemisch rushed only four times on the night, but managed a robust 100 yards on the ground. He also came away with an interception on the night.

Sanchez punched the ball into the endzone twice and amassed 56 yards rushing on seven carries. Hermleigh was able to pile up 205 yards rushing in the first half alone.

The Ira offense, on the other hand, was held pretty much in check, gaining 69 yards rushing and only 47 yards passing.

Ira quarterback Scott Strong struggled under the intense Hermleigh pass rush all night managing only four completed passes. He rushed for 13 yards on nine carries.

Running back Todd Collom was a bright spot for the Bulldogs. He finished the night with 50 yards rushing on 13 carries.

Next week, Ira battles Loraine while Hermleigh travels to Westbrook to take on the Wildcats.

Borden Coyotes rush past Westbrook 'Cats

WESTBROOK — At look at the statistics by themselves indicates Borden County used a balanced attack to break into the District 6-1A win column Friday night. But it was the running game that made the real difference, said Coach Bobby Avery.

"We went to a running game with James Cooley following Kurt Hess and Oscar Baeza around the corner and it paid off," said a happy Avery, whose Coyotes defeated Westbrook, 74-28.

The victory was Borden County's first in three district outings, and Avery hopes it also signals a turnaround for the squad.

"This takes the pressure off. We've got nothing to lose now. Hopefully we've settled down and can just go out and play as good as we can each week now," the coach said.

Cooley ran for 173 yards and three touchdowns on 19 carries as the Coyotes racked up 319 steps on the ground Friday night. Hess led the other half of the offensive attack, completing 15 of 27 passes for 204 yards and a trio of scores. He also ran for 34 yards and another touchdown.

Borden County got out to a 16-0 start in the first quarter and led 40-20 at intermission. Westbrook put up just 8 more points the entire game as the Coyote defense took over.

"Our defense solved it for us in the second half," said Avery. Cooley had 12 tackles, including 10 solos, and picked off two Jeff Hill passes. Doug Flanigan recovered two fumbles and Hess contributed with eight tackles.

Borden County held the Wildcats to just 8 yards rushing. Hill

Buddy ball hosts Dallas

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys have every reason to believe they will beat the Arizona Cardinals for the ninth straight time — and every reason to expect an ambush.

The Cowboys (5-1) aren't looking for the combination of breaks that allowed them to beat the Cardinals 38-3 two weeks ago in Buddy Ryan's worst coaching defeat. Dallas marched for its first touchdown, then intercepted three of Jay Schroeder's passes and ran up a 28-0 halftime lead by scoring on drives of 23, 18 and 26 yards.

"Their offense turned the ball over quite a bit and gave us great field position, and we were able to take advantage of that," Emmitt Smith said.

This week, Ryan has shown a wild mistrust in the forward pass, even though Steve Beuerlein hit six during a fourth-quarter drive last week that allowed the Cardinals to tie Washington and eventually beat the Redskins 19-16 in overtime.

Pair reunited after 50 years killed as they cross highway

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — Paul Flanagan was Dorothy Thompson's first love, but World War II came between them. Fifty years later, they were reunited, only to be struck and killed by a car as they crossed a highway.

Flanagan, 71, of San Jose, Calif., and Thompson, 69, of Owensboro, Ky., were killed Wednesday night.

The couple had just finished a pizza dinner when they were hit trying to cross a seven-lane highway. Witnesses said they were carried more than 60 feet on the car's roof before the driver could stop. No charges were filed.

Flanagan's family said there was no romance between Flanagan and Mrs. Thompson.

"He was planning a trip back East to visit family and old friends and wanted to see her on the way," Bruce Flanagan, one of Flanagan's sons, said in a telephone interview from California. "There was no romance or intentions for furthering the relationship beyond old friends getting together for dinner."

The pizza dinner marked the 50-year anniversary of Flanagan's marriage proposal to Thompson, said Lisa Rihn, Thompson's daughter. Thompson had turned him down, saying she was too young and he was going overseas the next day with his Coast Guard unit.

The two had dated for two years after meeting at a USO dance. Flanagan and Thompson had vowed to meet up after the war, but didn't speak again until they began exchanging letters earlier this year. She was widowed in 1987 and he was divorced.

They decided to meet in Pittsburgh on Oct. 13 to visit Civil War sites along the East Coast, and attend the 50-year reunion of Flanagan's Coast Guard class on Thursday.

Rihn said she spoke to her mother on the telephone Monday, and the reunited friends were enjoying their trip.

"To put it plainly, you couldn't understand a word she was saying because she was giggling so much," Rihn said Friday.

DRUG AWARENESS WEEK — Mayor Paul Zeck signed a document proclaiming this week as Drug Awareness Week in Snyder. The Lions Club sponsors a red ribbon campaign, urging everyone to wear a red ribbon signifying a drug free week. The Lions Club has placed ribbons at Snyder Daily News, KSNY, chamber of commerce, schools and various businesses. Standing

2 gubernatorial candidates clash in debate held in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Democratic Gov. Ann Richards, locked in a tight re-election fight with Republican George W. Bush, Friday night slammed Bush's business record and questioned whether he is qualified to be governor.

"There are serious questions to be raised whether or not George Bush is qualified to be governor," Richards said. "You've got to have had some experience in the public sector before you get the chief executive's job."

Bush, 48, managing partner of the Texas Rangers baseball team, bristled, branding the governor's remarks as "an attempt to smear my business record" and a diversion from real issues.

"If Texans want someone who has spent her entire adult life in politics they should not vote for me," he said, referring to Richards having held county and state offices since 1976.

Richards, 61, said companies on whose boards Bush served had lost $371 million. Bush strongly disputed her assessment and said he was proud of his record. He invited viewers of their televised debate to "come and see The Ballpark at Arlington as an example of entrepreneurship."

A Texas Poll released earlier this week showed Bush holding a one percentage point lead, 45 percent to 44 percent, over Richards.

The governor said her administration has much to brag about. She also said there's much left to do.

"For the first time since 1976, crime is down in every category — but its not enough," Richards said. "For the first time in 14 years, our kids are (doing) better on their SAT scores ... but it's not enough."

Bush sounded several familiar campaign themes — placing a higher priority on public education spending, reducing welfare spending and getting tougher on juvenile criminals. He said he would bring a fresh perspective to the job.

"I proudly proclaim I've never held office. I have been in the business world all my adult life. I have met a payroll. I know what it means to risk capital," Bush said.

In the debate's final minutes, Bush tried to link Richards to President Clinton, who lost Texas to Bush's father in the 1992 election.

"I am the conservative candidate. She is the liberal candidate," he said. "One difference we didn't discuss tonight, of course, is President Clinton. She'll work hard ... to see him re-elected in 1996. I, of course, will not."

Richards touted her record of balancing the state budget without resorting to an income tax. She noted that the state ended the most recent fiscal year with a $2.2 billion surplus. She said Texas leads the nation in job creation and that during a second term "we must do everything we can to make Texas a leader" in international commerce.

ATTENTION Snyder Water Consumers

Please read and vote according to your conviction on or before Nov. 8.

At the United We Stand, America forum held at Towle Park Barn, the following question was given to each of the four candidates running for county commissioner and the two candidates for county judge:

The County of Scurry, through the purchase of treated water from Snyder, paid the city over $40,000 in 1993. Of this amount, over $4,000 went south to pay our so-called part of a new water district, which now includes Abilene, San Angelo and Midland.

Since Scurry County has never received one gallon of water from anywhere except Lake J.B. Thomas, do you think it fair and just for us to have to be paying for the production and distribution of water in this new formed water district?

All four candidates for commissioner stated that they did not think was fair and just.

The County Judge candidates responded as follows:

Bobby Goodwin - "Leave it like it is, no change necessary."

Ricky Fritz — "Against have to pay it."

Now you know how the candidates feel about you and your public water bills.

As a user of Snyder processed water, I want to use this means to protest the unfairness of my water bill being increased at anytime for the purpose of paying on indebtedness of facilities that will not be used by the Snyder water system; namely, the pipeline and pumping stations from Lake Ivie to the city of Odessa.

Victor Sumerford

1918-1994

Graveside services are set for 2 p.m. Monday at the Dunn Cemetery for Victor Scott Sumerford, 75, of Clute who died Tuesday at Lake Jackson. The Rev. Ernie McGaughey, pastor of the First United Methodist Church, will officiate.

The service will be directed by Bell-Cypert-Seale Funeral Home. Born on Dec. 21, 1918 in Hamilton, he was a resident of Clute since 1953 where he had worked for Dow Chemical as a purchasing agent. He was a Sunday school teacher and choir director at Wesley First United Methodist Church. He was the last original member of the Board of Regents of Brazosport College. Mr. Sumerford was a World War II Army veteran.

Survivors include two sons, Ashley Sumerford of Greeley, Colo., and Allen Sumerford of St. Thomas, Va.; two daughters, Linda Little of Fayetteville, Ga., Debra Boggs of Spencer, W. Va.; one brother, W.A. Sumerford of Midland; three sisters, Opal Conlon of Temple, Lou Anglin of Sweetwater and Hallie Anglin of Brownwood; 10 grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren. Friends are contributing to V.S. and Edith Sumerford Scholarship Fund, 500 College Dr., Lake Jackson, or the V.S. Sumerford Fund, Wesley First United Methodist Church, One Wesley Drive in Clute.

Odessa Atkinson

1905-1994

BRECKENRIDGE — Services are set for 2 p.m. Saturday in the Melton Funeral Home Chapel for Odessa Atkinson, 89, who died Wednesday in Stephens Memorial Hospital.

Officiating will be the Revs. Cecil Harper and J.D. Wright. Burial will follow in the Woodson Cemetery.

She was the mother of Kenneth Atkinson and Ray Jean Atkinson, both of Snyder.

Born in Haskell, she married W.A. Atkinson on April 16, 1925 in Throckmorton. He died in 1977.

Mrs. Atkinson was a homemaker and had worked as a dietician at the Olney hospital and at the Senior Center in Breckenridge. She was a member of the First Baptist Church.

Survivors include four other sons, James Keaton Atkinson and L.B. Atkinson, both of Breckenridge, Frank Atkinson of Paradise and Wilburn Atkinson of Iowa Park; seven sisters, Winnie Mae Starnes, Maggie Lee Allen, Rachel Lang and Opal Gremlin, all of Stephenville, Adelene Pugh of Breckenridge, Ruby Nell Walker of Woodson and Betty Jo Hearne of Rochester; two brothers, Buford Wright of Seymour and Wayland Wright of Stephenville; 26 grandchildren; 60 great-grandchildren and three great-great-grandchildren.

Memorials may be made to the West Texas Rehab Center or to a favorite charity.

More flooding expected along some Texas rivers

HOUSTON (AP) — Swollen creeks and rivers are receding across much of soggy Southeast Texas, but more flooding could still be ahead for those living along rivers still rising east and southwest of Houston.

The Neches and Trinity rivers east of Houston and the Brazos River southwest of the city were expected to crest by Saturday, causing more problems for areas left more than a dozen cars submerged up to their roofs in water in some suburbs.

In the suburb of Balch Springs, Jason Boner, 11, drowned when he fell into an uncovered manhole while playing in a flooded street.

In a nearby portion of southeast Dallas, a 35-year-old woman was missing after slipped into a swollen concrete-line drainage ditch while walking to a day-care center to pick up her son, witnesses said. The woman, whose identity has been withheld, has not been located, police said.

More than 1,400 people were left without electricity for at least part of the day.

Meanwhile, the Coast Guard is struggling to deal with as many as four broken pipelines that spewed a variety of petroleum products into the swollen San Jacinto River, near the Houston Ship Channel.

State ponders Odessa meteor

ODESSA (AP) — State officials are brainstorming ideas for fully exploiting the tourism potential of a meteor crater near Odessa.

Andrew Sansom, executive director of the Texas Department of Parks and Wildlife, said he wants to promote the 550-foot-diameter crater to draw visitors en route to and from Big Bend National Park.

"Tourism and outdoor recreation will be the largest industry in Texas by the end of the century, and nature is the largest growing component," Sansom said after a tour of the crater. "These new travelers want to learn something."

The National Park Service designated the crater as a registered natural landmark in 1965.

Emil Beck, a local expert on meteorites, said he dreams of interpretive trails lined with rocks, permanent fencing and a museum.

"It's going to take a lot more than what we've got and resources to do it," Beck said.

Sansom said planning could begin immediately on site development, including a possible expansion of a closed-off, 165-foot shaft dug by scientists in the pre-World War II era.

"That would be a tremendous draw if you could use the shaft as an interpretive presentation," he said.

Cotton

are well-informed of the details of this program," said Morris Light, president of the Rolling Plains Cotton Growers (RPCG). "It doesn't matter if you are for or against this program, it's just important that everyone know as much as possible before they vote."

Light said Tuesday's meetings are open to anyone interested in the cotton industry and will last "as long as there are questions."

Farmers in this area worked through the Scurry County Cotton Producers Association and elected representatives to serve on the CRP zone steering committee. Those representing Scurry County on the committee include Steve Moore, David Kattes, David Shifflett and Johnny Eicke. Light also serves on the committee as the an RPCG representative.

The proposed assessments with financing are $5 per land acre planted in cotton in 1995 and 1996, and $10 per acre each year thereafter until the costs of the eradication program are paid off. There will be a nominal maintenance fee thereafter.

The proposed Central Rolling Plains Boll Weevil Eradication Zone is one of nine eradication zones established under proposed plans to eliminate boll weevils from Texas and Oklahoma.

Four arrests made locally

Police made four arrests Friday and early Saturday morning, including two for driving while intoxicated and one for public intoxication.

Police arrested a 25-year-old man in the 1900 block of 30th Street at 7:40 p.m. Friday and charged him with driving while intoxicated.

A 26-year-old female was arrested at 12:01 a.m. Saturday in the 2100 block of 40th Street for driving while intoxicated. She was transported to the Police Department where she was later released to her parents. A two-vehicle accident was also investigated at the scene.

Officers arrested a 28-year-old man in the 1100 block of 26th Street at 2:26 a.m. and charged him with public intoxication.

A disturbance call at 4:01 a.m. Saturday resulted in an 18-year-old male being arrested for criminal trespass and resisting arrest.

Police arrested a 30-year-old man at Don's Value King at 11:22 Friday for possession of a controlled substance.

A theft report on five subjects who had not returned video rentals to Don's Value King was made at 3:42 p.m. Friday.

Police investigated a minor accident in the 1500 block of Campus Drive at 8:42 p.m. Friday.

Museum displays elections exhibit

Americans will be going to the polls in early November and, in keeping with the times, Scurry County Museum recently opened a politically oriented exhibit.

The exhibit is titled "Five Critical Campaigns and Elections in U.S. History." The campaigns were selected based on such criteria as the emergence of major issues and the involvement of candidates with strong personalities and leadership abilities.

The campaigns involve presidential races between Thomas Jefferson and John Adams in 1800, Andrew Jackson and John Quincy Adams in 1828, Abraham Lincoln, Stephen Douglas, John Breckinridge and John Bell

Diana ducks press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Princess Diana smiled for the cameras after a visit to the American Red Cross, but she has had nothing to say to the press pack following behind her during her private visit to the city.

On Friday, several dozen reporters and photographers followed Diana, whose shattered marriage is front-page news at home.

While she has no public appearances scheduled, she could not elude the cameras, which waited outside the Red Cross while she spent an hour inside.

"I was amazed when I walked her down to the door. The whole front yard was full of people," said American Cross President Elizabeth Dole. "That probably happens everywhere she goes."

Hutchison, Fisher argue over issues

DALLAS (AP) — Republican U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison and Democratic challenger Richard Fisher debated numerous issues Friday night, ranging from crime to health care and the environment.

The two top the Nov. 8 general election ballot.

Under questioning from a panel of citizens and journalists, the candidates traded verbal jabs in a forum held at the Loews Anatole Hotel and carried live on public broadcast stations statewide.

Mrs. Hutchison said Fisher flipped on issues, while Fisher accused the senator of partisan gridlock.

"I stand on principle. Mr. Fisher has changed his position on just about every major issue,"

Mrs. Hutchison said.

Fisher retorted, "If you took the word 'No' out of Kay Bailey Hutchison's vocabulary, she would be speechless."

Fisher criticized Mrs. Hutchison for voting against the crime bill, opposing a ban on assault weapons, and her views on health care.

He said Mrs. Hutchison's statement that poor people have access to coverage at charity hospitals was the "Marie Antoinette" approach.

Mrs. Hutchison criticized President Clinton's proposals, saying they would have cost too much and created a massive bureaucracy. Fisher said he didn't support Clinton's proposal.

"We do have access to everyone into our system. It may not be the best and we need to work on that," she said.

Both candidates said they supported insurance pools for small businesses.

Mrs. Hutchison said she opposed the crime bill because it added to the deficit and became

'Soap' executives attend meeting

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Soap opera executives met on Friday to ponder how to make love in the afternoon, responsibly.

The two-day soap opera summit, which features talks by Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders and Jane Fonda, is sponsored by Population Communications International, a group concerned about overpopulation.

PCI chairman Sonny Fox, a former vice president of children's programming at NBC, said he hopes to persuade soap opera executives to think about population control when writing story lines.

He contends the soaps are more influential than other shows because they're on every day and viewers identify heavily with the characters.

"The teen-age viewers are, in particular, watching the soaps to develop their expectations of what their sex lives might be like," he said.

Just how steamy are the stories that dominate midday TV?

This year, soap opera programming showed 6.64 incidents of sexual activity or references to sex per episode, said Michigan State University Professor Bradley Greenberg. The incidents and references range from sex out of wedlock to prostitution and artificial insemination.

Laurie McCarthy, co-head writer of ABC's "Loving," said she would like to see her soap do away with stories that victimize women such as abductions — long a staple of soap storylines.

"I think we're looking for ways to dramatize and break the traditional gender barriers," she said. "I think real issues, presented well, are always more dramatic."

Roby plans turkey shoot

ROBY — The Roby Volunteer Fire Department has scheduled its annual turkey shoot for Saturday, Oct. 29, at the Cottonwood RV Park located 1 1/2 miles south of Roby.

Activities will begin at noon. The event will feature bingo, BB shoot, skeet shoot and rifle target shoot. The concession stand will be furnished by the Ladies Auxiliary.

Drawings will also be held for a shot gun and $300 gift certificate.

pork-barrel legislation.

She also attacked the federal government for over-regulation, specifically environmental laws. "We have gone overboard," she said.

Fisher said he would oppose attacks on reasonable environmental laws. "I don't want to just throw the baby out with the bath water," he said.

Fisher said he opposed the sale of assault weapons, while Mrs. Hutchison said, "I am not for banning guns from law abiding citizens."

The two also tangled over illegal immigration.

Fisher criticized Mrs. Hutchison for supporting more barriers on the border with Mexico. Mrs. Hutchison said illegal aliens take services away from legal residents and that building walls in heavy crossing areas has proven effective.

In a lighter moment, both candidates indicated their support for free trade with Fisher saying, "I would like to see Lone Star beer from Texas exported to Germany."

Mrs. Hutchison said she supported an experiment of vouchers in public schools, which would allow tax dollars to be used for students to go to private school.

The debate preceded one between Gov. Ann Richards, a Democrat, and Republican challenger George W. Bush.

The forum was sponsored by Dallas-Fort Worth PBS station KERA-TV, The Dallas Morning News, Texas Monthly, Dallas ABC affiliate WFAA-TV and Houston CBS affiliate KHOU-TV.

Earlier, it was briefly unknown whether Mrs. Hutchison could participate in the debate because she was suffering from a stomach virus, according to her spokesman.

Eamon de Valera, one of Ireland's most prominent figures in its quest for independence, died in 1975 at a nursing home near Dublin at the age of 92.

Homer Anderson

When you come we want you to feel perfectly at ease without fear of embarrassment. You are invited to participate in the singing and prayers that will be led by men of the congregation. Also, you may wish to bring your Bible and read the passages upon which the Bible teaching is based. You will be reminded of the crucified Christ as the members observe the Lord's supper each first day of the week (Acts 20:7). The members also make a free will offering each Lord's day (1 Cor. 16:1-2). Visitors are not requested to make an offering. The voluntary contributions are used to preach the gospel to every creature (Mark 16:15-16), to care for the needy (James 1:27), and to teach those who have been saved (Matthew 28:19-20).

Apples and oranges...

My opponent wants Scurry County to be like Nolan County. "To cut one million dollars in spending, with no loss of services."

A review of the Nolan County budget and services provided reveals that Nolan County's budget is actually $2 million more than Scurry County when services are compared. Nolan County is not responsible for the airport, parks, BCD or hospital. When the hospital district tax of 25 cents is added to the Nolan County tax rate of 42 cents, the two total 67 cents compared to Scurry County's rate of 54 cents.

When you compare apples to apples and services to services, there is no way to cut $1 million without slashing services as well.

Scurry veteran receives posthumous award

Sgt. Carl Guinn served as WWII 'Hump' pilot

Sgt. Carl Maurice Guinn of Hermleigh has been posthumously recognized for his services during World War II — delivering gasoline to the Chinese Air Force.

Guinn is the recipient of the Chinese Air Force Flight Engineer Wings, authorized by Gen. Tang Fei of the Chinese Air Force, Republic of China (Taiwan).

The presentation was made by Maj. Gen. Kwang-Ying on Sept. 1, during the Hump Pilots Association's 49th annual reunion in Sacramento, Calif.

Guinn was a flight engineer in the U.S. Army Air Corps in the China-Burma-India Theatre. He flew 49 trips from India into China.

His widow, the former Lila Balenger, still lives in the Camp Spring Community and, provided information about her husband.

Guinn was a native of Camp Springs and lived all of his life there, Lila said. His parents were J.O. "Dick" Guinn and the former Pearl Roe. His dad moved to Scurry County in 1888, along with his family. They were farmers.

Guinn graduated from Hobbs High School in 1941 when he was 16. Though he wanted to enlist immediately, Lila said his parents would not consent, so Guinn had to wait two years.

Actually, Lila said that she was relieved that he did not enlist when he wanted. She is from Fisher County and she and Guinn met while students at Hobbs.

When Guinn did enlist in the U.S. Army Air Corps in April of 1945, he began as a mechanic, but started flying after he was in Europe.

He trained at Camp Luna near Las Vegas, N.M. and was later stationed in San Bernardino, Calif. In India, he was stationed in Tezgon, Mishino and Shamshanager.

Lila said she was relieved that her then future husband was not flying when he first deployed to Europe. She said he flew C-109 planes and B-54s.

As the flight engineer, it was his job to make sure that his plane was ready for flight. She said when he returned home he was so thin she could see his ribs. Subsisting on eggs and green rice and bread peppered with husks and weevils caused him to lose a lot of weight. That was all the Chinese people had to offer, she said.

Chinese military police kept order among their own people and Guinn later told his wife that if anyone was caught breaking the law they were taken behind the buildings and shot. They could also have their hand chopped off for stealing, she added. The Chinese punished their own people severely.

Some liked to take discarded cigarette butts which had been thrown on the ground, Guinn told his wife.

The Chinese her husband encountered all kept a bowl under their hats because all they had to eat was rice.

Lila said being in India sometimes upset her husband because he could see that the people were starving and yet no one was allowed to kill the cows, which were plentiful but considered sacred.

She said he also observed that the caste system was very strong in India and what you were born into you remained in for the rest of your life.

The caste system was so strict that halfbreeds were shunned because neither side wanted them. They were raised in orphanages. Guinn told his wife that the women, which he described as "smart and pretty," were allowed to work on the U.S. bases.

POSTHUMOUS AWARD — Sgt. Carl Maurice Guinn of the Camp Springs Community received posthumous recognition last month for his efforts during World War II to keep the Chinese Air Force supplied with gasoline. Guinn, who died in January, is survived by his wife, Lila, three children and seven grandchildren. (Contributed Photo)

Guinn also encountered Gurka tribesmen who served as a unit for British forces. The Gurkas were a hill tribe known for playing the bagpipes. She said Guinn told her that when they played reveille it made his hair "stand on edge."

While in the service, Lila said her husband once spent a Christmas holiday in Miami, Fla. He was one of the few people in his unit who reported for duty when he was told. Many others delayed arriving in Miami because they wanted to spend Christmas with their families. This delayed the unit's departure time, thus stranding Guinn and the others in the hotel, and, even though the beach was nearby, they had no way to get there.

Guinn kept in touch with some of his war buddies and was in fact working on his memoirs when he died. Never one to "sit around a lot," her husband continued to work on the day he suffered congestive heart failure.

While in the service, Guinn flew to the Philippines once but never made it to Australia, something he had wanted to do. En route home after the war ended, he did visit Jerusalem during Easter. She said he traveled a "slow boat" to get home.

The Guinns were married Dec. 5, 1948, in Roby.

Guinn never lost his interest in flying, and in fact earned his pilot's license after he was discharged, she said.

In addition to being a mechanic in the Camp Springs and Snyder areas, Lila said her husband also tried stock farming but a seven year drought forced him to quit.

He also had the first bale of cotton in 1949. However, he eventually had to find work in town. Guinn also returned to school where he studied to become a teacher. He was a graduate of Western Texas College and later earned a bachelor of science in occupational education from Wayland Baptist College in Plainview.

He later returned to WTC to teach diesel mechanics in the fall of 1976 to 1977 and then taught at Cooke County College for one year. He returned to the WTC faculty in 1982, retiring in 1985. He was a member of the Hobbs Baptist Church.

Guinn described her husband as someone who was "interested in everything." Besides "reading a lot," she said he also collected stamps and had joined the Scurry County Genealogical Society where he served two terms as president, starting in 1990. He had had some success in researching his family tree back to a grandfather, she said.

The Guinns reared three children. A son, Hal, lives in Phoenix, Ariz. with his wife, Regina, and children Will and Mary. The oldest daughter, Carla Bavousett, lives in Camp Springs with her husband, Dan. They have two children, Frances and Emily, who attend Snyder schools. Another daughter, Robbie Odom, lives in Floydada. She and her husband, John, have three children, Patrick, Nicole and Brian.

During the presentation in Sacramento, Col. Konsin Shah, president of the Chinese Air Force Veterans Association, said that the

In church chapel...

Fuqua, Garza repeat vows

Amanda Kay Fuqua of Snyder and Torrence Lee Garza of Virginia Beach, Va., pledged nuptial vows in an 8 p.m. ceremony on Aug. 6 in the First Baptist Church Chapel with Anthony Wofford, minister of The Word is Life Church, officiating.

The bride's mother is Terri Fuqua of Snyder and the groom's parents are Don and Armanda Herrera of Snyder and Felix Garza of Midland.

The church entrance was adorned with a garland of grape leaf ivy and white tulle, accented by white satin bows. In the vestibule, Kristin Kollar of Lubbock registered guests at a round table covered by a lace-trimmed white satin sheer cloth. It held a white plume pen, the couple's wedding album, and a white rose topiary that was accented with white doves, tulle and satin lace ribbon.

Another lace covered table, displaying a large floral arrangement in the wedding colors, was flanked by brass candlesticks holding white candles.

The aisle was decorated with large white satin bows, alternating white candle-lighted pew markers adorned with lavender blooms of wisteria atop tufts of white tulle that cascaded to the floor.

Background for the couple's vows were four columns backed by a curtain of white tulle. Clusters of lavender and white wisteria blooms were draped over the top. On either side of the columns and at the base of the two end columns, arrangements of ivy completed the scene. The unity candle sat atop a small Grecian stand decorated with white iridescent doves, English ivy and matching tulle, cascading to the floor.

The chapel was scented with baskets of mulberry potpourri. The bride's uncle, Harold C. Martin Jr., presented her in marriage as she was attired in a gown of Dutchess satin featuring a bodice accented by Venise lace, seed pearls and iridescent sequins. The full skirt featured a front applique of lace, pearls and sequins and an identically beaded hemline.

A cathedral-length train flowed from a large beaded and sequined back bow. Sheer cut-outs extended the length of the train and was covered with sequins and pearls and surrounded by smaller cut-outs of embroidered Venise lace, sequins and pearls.

The bride's veil of white illusion, fell from a tulle bow accented with white satin roses, sheer pearl-trimmed leaves, springs of pearls and English ivy.

She carried a cascading bouquet of one dozen white roses and traditional wedding accessories. It was backed with tufts of white tulle and falling from the bouquet were streamers of lace, satin ribbon, tulle, English ivy and strands of pearls.

Maid of honor was Stacy Titus of Grand Prairie. Bridesmaids were Tiffany Garza, sister of the groom; Becky Powell and Brandy Word. Junior bridesmaids were Rebecca Fuqua, sister of the bride, Rina Geiger, sister of the groom, and Stephanie Parmer. Each carried white baskets of lace holding bunches of violets enhanced with Standing on a heart-shaped mirror, the candlesticks were enhanced by blue sweetheart roses and greenery winding down the base, meeting blue bows and an arrangement of miniature pink and lavender carnations, filled with baby's breath, lavender and greenery.

The groom's German chocolate cake, presented on a rectangular mirror, was lined with miniature pink carnations and lavender. Also served in crystal containers were minis, nuts and wedding cookies. A silver coffee service and blue and white napkins completed the table.

A buffet table offered iced tea, chicken wings, ham, rolls, and fruit and vegetable trays. Guest tables were decorated with centerpieces of white rose topiaries and candlelight votives, surrounded by iridescent marbles.

The gift table was a black grand piano accented with white tapers in crystal candlesticks of various heights, surrounded by flowing white tulle and lace ribbon. Also displayed was a framed marriage poem.

Serving were George Alvarado, Della Webster, Robbie Brazier, Veronica Gomez, Shelby Hildebrand of Dallas, Andrea Neal, cousin of the groom from Midland, Kristien Heredia, cousin of the groom from Crane.

A rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's parents at the Golden Corral.

A shower was held for the bride at the home of Esther Clarady on July 23. The couple have made their home at Virginia Beach, Va., where the groom is attending Central School as a FC Seaman. He is a 1993 Snyder High School graduate and attended U.S. Navy basic training and A School. The bride, also a 1993 SHS graduate, attended Western Texas College and was employed by Cogdell Memorial Hospital and Golden Corral.

Yeildings celebrate anniversary

Ann and Ralph Yeilding of Snyder noted their 40th wedding anniversary Saturday with a family gathering at their home.

Their children are Rhana Pratt of Fraser, Colo., George Yeilding of Big Spring and Mary Martin of Snyder.

The couple met on a blind date in June of 1953 and they were married on Oct. 22, 1954 in Lovington, N.M. They lived six years in North Carolina when Yeilding was serving in the Marine Corps for 34 years.

Yeilding is employed by Western Motors and Ann works at Friendly Flowers. They are members of Colonial Hill Baptist Church.

The Yeildings have five grandchildren, one great-grandchild, and two step-grandchildren.

The dinner jacket that came to be known as the tuxedo made its American debut at an 1813 autumn ball in Tuxedo Park, N.Y.

WEDDING PLANNED — Linda Bennett of Snyder announces the engagement and approaching marriage of her daughter, Melanie Ann Bennett, to Stephen Christopher Sullenger. He is the son of Rodger and Janie Sullenger of Snyder. Their wedding is set for Feb. 14 at 5 p.m. in St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church. (Contributed Photo)

Try to play a virtuous game

By Phillip Alder

How do you view virtue? Not doing something to someone else that you wouldn't want him to do to you? I was amused by the definition of Robert Lynd, the Anglo-Irish essayist and journalist: "By virtue we merely mean the avoidance of the vices that do not attract us."

There is, of course, an avoidance play in bridge. Sometimes it is easy to spot, sometimes — as in today's deal — less easy.

How should South plan the play in four spades? West leads the club three. East wins the first trick and tries to cash the club ace.

South ruffed the second trick, played a spade to dummy's ace and called for the spade eight. East's discard stopped South in his tracks. If he ducked the trick to West, a heart switch would set up East's king before the diamonds were established. So South won with the spade king and led the diamond king. However, West won with the ace and immediately switched to a heart. Declarer lost a trick in each suit.

South should have fought to keep West off the lead. The correct play, just in case West has all four trumps, is to run the spade jack at trick three. Even if the finesse loses to East's queen, the contract is safe because East cannot attack hearts.

When the spade finesse wins and East follows, declarer draws West's remaining trumps and drives out the diamond ace. The heart switch comes, but too late. Here South brings home an overtrick: six spades, one heart and four diamonds.

Those downed aircraft made an "aluminum trail" over the Hump, as the Himalayas were called. The terrible weather and rugged terrain posed as constant a danger as the Japanese fighters and bombers.

A three-volume set of books, "China Airlift — The Hump," records a first hand "history" of the CBI Theater during WWII and is available through the association.

HPA erected a memorial to those who flew the Hump. This memorial is located at the Air Force Museum, Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Dayton, Ohio.

Tips for foot comfort

For AP Special Features
A new pair of walking shoes can give you a lift. But there are so many styles to choose from, it's hard to know what to buy. Here are some tips from Better Homes and Gardens magazine, that can help:

— Define your type of walking. Performance walkers (faster than 4 mph) want a shoe that will support and cushion their foot type. If you walk and run in the same workout, buy a shoe that will accommodate both. Often a smooth-sole running shoe will meet this need.

Off-trail walkers need stability, traction, and water-resistant uppers, but also cushion and support. Mall walkers can get by with light, breathable uppers. Casual walkers (under 2 miles each workout) can go with lighter shoes and less durability. Serious walkers need polyurethane, a more durable mid-sole material.

— Examine old shoes to see where they're the most worn — that's where you need extra support. Keep this in mind when buying a new pair.

— Listen to podiatrists. They know feet and shoes. "Most physicals go from the ankles up, yet the foot is the foundation of the body," says Tom Brunick, director of The Athlete's Foot Wear-Test Center in Naperville, Ill.

— Buy from people who know shoes, especially athletic shoes, and who truly know how to fit you. Specialty shops are your best bet.

— Expect to pay $50 to $80. Pay less (unless they're on sale) and you're not getting good quality. Pay more and you are paying for fashion and advertisement.

For a free copy of the brochure, "How to Choose a Walking Shoe," send a business-size, self-addressed stamped envelope to: The Athlete's Foot Wear Test Center, 450 S. Brainard, North Central College, Naperville, Ill. 60566.

Motifs help garden party success

By TRADITIONAL HOME For AP Special Features

When Beverly Reese Church, co-author of "The Joys of Entertaining" and author of the new "Wedding Southern Style," entertains outdoors, she relies on some key and some unexpected supplies, says Traditional Home magazine. Once her party goods are gathered up, she chooses a motif, and is partial to painting it all over her linens, serving pieces, and favors.

"I like to be creative when I entertain, and a motif gives me a great place to start," says Church. "Your motif can be as simple as a favorite flower that's blooming in your garden," Church says, "or a featured food that's part of your menu — maybe watermelon or chili peppers."

To help you host an outdoor party in your own casual, creative style, Church's list of party essentials and ideas offers lots of inspiration:

— Market umbrellas opened over a few tables, or even just one, lend high-impact ambience to an outdoor party. Customize a white or off-white umbrella by painting or stenciling a border along the edge, using permanent fabric paint. As you'll want to use this umbrella again, choose a design that will be appealing throughout the outdoor season.

— Clay pots filled with blooming flowers add color to your party scene. Not only are clay saucers and pots inexpensive, you'll find plenty of secondary uses for them year-round.

— For a centerpiece that wraps around the base of your umbrella, soak an oasis ring (that green, hard foam that florists use to secure arrangements, available at craft stores) in water, then cover it with ivy or another green. Then mix in colorful seasonal flowers. You can also trail some ivy artfully up the pole, as long as the roots are secure in the water-drenched oasis.

— Clay saucers make wonderful, rustic dinner and serving plates. Buy 10- or 12-inch saucers, and boil them before your party. Line the plate with greens, such as kale, then arrange food in individual ramekins.

— Inexpensive glasses, napkins, and napkin rings can be customized by painting your party motif on them using water-based enamel and fabric paint.

According to French moralist Joseph Joubert, "To be capable of respect is almost as rare as to be worthy of it."

Trevino has injury

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Golfer Lee Trevino may be off the seniors circuit for the rest of the year because of a neck injury.

The 54-year-old Trevino has consulted three doctors for a bulging disc but hasn't decided on a course of treatment, said his agent, Chuck Rubin.

"We are awaiting opinions from a variety of physicians, and no decision has been made for Lee as far as surgery or non-surgery," Rubin said. "What is for certain is that all three physicians have suggested rest and, in all likelihood, Lee won't play the rest of 1994."

"CREATIVE ACCENTS" LUNCHEON — Martha Ann Woman's Club was the site for the Christian Women's Club Luncheon Wednesday. Tina Sanders (right), owner of Timber & Threads, presented the special feature on unique and original designs in skirts, vests and shorts, along with Victorian country and antique gift and decorating items. Flutist Marie Clark, not pictured, presented music. CWC chairman Temi Matthies is pictured left. In the center is Louise Russell, the guest speaker from Abilene. The CWC prayer coffee is set for Nov. 2 at 9:30 a.m. in the home of Martha Schiebel, 3011 Ave. T, and the next meeting will be featuring a silent auction on Nov. 9 with the guest speaker to be Wanda Williams of Lubbock. ## Parish influenced decorating

By BARBARA MAYER
For AP Special Features

Toss a patchwork quilt over the back of a sofa, stencil a pattern onto a wood floor, pair a primitive accessory such as a basket or a birdhouse with a silver candlestick, and you'll be borrowing from the decorating capital of Dorothy Kinnicutt Parish, aka Sister Parish.

Parish (Sister was a family nickname), who died in September at age 84, was sought by the rich and famous. She took familiar furnishings and made them chic through her own great sense of style in a decorating career that spanned six decades.

"There is no question that Sister Parish was one of the biggest influences on decorating in the United States," Lou Gropp, editor of House Beautiful, says. "She dominated the decorating of the 1970s and '80s, and many of her ideas that were fresh and new in the 1970s are now in the mainstream of American decorating."

Her influence probably will live on. A number of the country's leading decorators, including Mark Hampton and Mario Buatta, acknowledge her effect on their work. And the firm she founded, Parish-Hadley Associates Inc. of New York, continues under the leadership of Albert Hadley, her partner and associate since 1962. "Mrs. Parish had no formal training, but a wonderful background," Hadley says. "Her motto was: 'Either you have it or you don't.'"

She had it. She didn't have a high school diploma, but she had a privileged childhood. Her parents were antiques collectors with four homes, including one in Paris. She attended the elite Chapin School in New York City and the Foxcroft School in Middleburg, Va.

She started her business in 1933 in tony Far Hills, N.J., and her first clients were friends who admired the unconventional way she decorated her own weekend house in Far Hills.

"It never occurred to me that I wasn't qualified to give it (advice)," she once wrote.

In the 1930s, in her first foray into decorating in her own home, she had her bedroom floor painted a cherry red with white diamonds and had a mantel of glass blocks installed. Later, in a traditional living room, she stenciled the floor with crisscross lines and put a little red star at each intersection.

"Nobody else would have had the nerve to do it," Gropp says, "but she had unbelievable assurance."

"She had little regard for periods and she had a great eye for items," Hadley says. "They could cost a million dollars or a few dollars. She might put a prim wooden dog made by some backwoodsman up in Maine on a giltwood and lacquer table."

When Sister Parish began using handicrafts in upscale rooms, it was highly unconventional.

She was one of the first to drape a patchwork quilt over the back of a sofa. She and Hadley worked with quilters from Selma, Ala., in the late 1960s to develop patchwork quilted yard goods.

In the 1970s, Parish-Hadley commissioned artists to paint old furniture in unusual colors and patterns. For example, a marble-topped console table was painted black with red dots. They stocked hand-woven Irish rugs and baskets and other crafts in a small private shop on New York's Upper East Side. It was open by invitation only. As the items were photographed in magazines they spread into general use.

Part of her influence in American home decor is that she worked for many influential people — Mellons, Rockefellers, Vanderbilts and Whitneys. She decorated the Georgetown home occupied by President and Mrs. Kennedy when he was a senator from Massachusetts. In 1961 she was called to the hite House by Mrs. Kennedy to refurbish some rooms. The two women eventually parted company.

"It was an unhappy divorce," recalled Pat Linden, who profiled Sister Parish in Town & Country magazine in September 1988. "'Oh, she was young,' Mrs. Parish said when I asked her about it."

Fergie, the Duchess of York, hired her in 1988 to put the Parish imprint on a new country house near Windsor Castle. The duchess's mother-in-law, the queen, later rescinded the assignment in lieu of an English designer, but just getting in the door was a triumph.

Sister Parish gained early recognition through national magazines. In January 1967, House and Garden featured her house in Maine with its painted white furniture and quilts and rag rugs. The departure from traditional decorating was on a par with fashion's introduction to Dior's New Look.

Sister Parish didn't readily admit to being influenced by anyone. But Linden attributes it to British designers John Fowler and Nancy Lancaster who helped originate the so-called English country style.

"She developed a style of pastoral opulence," Linden says, "as if the vicar had married a rich wife, as Brooke Astor, who was one of her clients, is supposed to have said."

Powerful organ malfunction

By DR. JOHN H.C. RANSON
For AP Special Features

The pancreas, an organ located in the abdomen behind the stomach, secretes powerful digestive juices into the intestines, breaking down foods, allowing them to be absorbed into the bloodstream.

However, in some people, this organ malfunctions and strong digestive juices are released into the body tissues and bloodstream, and can cause tissue destruction. In effect, part of the digestive process then becomes a threat, instead of an aid, to the body.

The people most likely to be affected fall into two identifiable groups: those with gallstones and those with a history of heavy alcohol use. If you belong to either group, you should be aware of the risk of pancreatitis, as the condition is called.

The symptoms of pancreatitis typically are severe pain in the upper abdomen, nausea and vomiting. Nausea and vomiting occur because of the pancreas' close relationship to the stomach. When the pancreas becomes inflamed and begins its abnormal secretion, the stomach is the first organ likely to be irritated and damaged.

Gallstones may cause pancreatitis if they pass into the intestine and obstruct the duct from the pancreas to the intestine. Alcohol abuse apparently causes a breakdown of the general function of the pancreas. Other less common causes include extremely elevated blood fat (triglyceride) levels, infections, blockage of its blood supply and injuries.

Most cases of pancreatitis are not life-threatening, but often still require hospitalization. Patients usually need intravenous fluids for nourishment because the stomach cannot handle food. Also, sometimes external support for body functions such as respiration is needed. Drugs to relieve pain are usually required.

For the most part, with rest and support, mild cases of pancreatitis are usually resolved within seven to 10 days. More severe cases take longer and may require the draining of excess pancreatic juices.

Ask Anne & Nan

By Anne B. Adams & Nancy Nash-Cummings

BLUE JEANS, BLUE JEANS, BLUE JEANS! A few weeks ago we asked our readers to send in suggestions for using or re-cycling old blue jeans. What a response we received! Many thanks to all of you for writing.

Many of you have made quilts: Linda Balco of St. Charles, Ill., kindly sent us some photographs of blue jean quilts she has made and they are gorgeous. She writes: "Using a rotary cutter, I cut strips 5 inches wide and sew them together, then cut across to make the rectangles (4 inches x 5 inches). I use not only blue jeans but 'leftover' cotton pants from myself and my family. I back the quilts with flannel and tie them with embroidery floss. We use these all winter for TV quilts and they wear like iron."

If any of our readers would like more detailed instructions for making a quilt, drop a note and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Anne and Nan.

Rosalie Auel of Gilbert, Minn., wrote: "I sew strips into a yard blanket. It picks up no dirt, twigs or sand. It's best to tear the strips because of the bias. After sewing the pieces together, I then use a zig-zag stitch on the flattened, open seam to make them stronger. Alternately colored thread adds a nice touch. You can use a hotpoint to make a fabric quilt."

a different fabric to line it, but I just doubled the size, sewing it together."

Linda Henning of Baton Rouge, La., suggests old blue jeans be used to make a picnic table cloth or beach "blanket": "Cut off all the usable leg portions. Open the legs out flat and stitch together randomly to form a flat piece. When you have a size you like, trim to a square and hem all around. Fold neatly and keep in a plastic bag in the trunk of your car so it will always be handy."

Diana Louise Dassow of Lombard, Ill., recently learned how to make blue jean gift sacks at her local recycling education program. "Just cut off the lower legs of the jeans. Make a seam to close off the cut part (just below the knee), which becomes the sack bottom. The hemmed leg bottom becomes the top which you can just tie with yarn or fabric ribbon. Saves on wrapping paper too!"

William J. O'Connell of Northfield, Vt., sent us an ad from Collector's Magazine & Price Guide that offers money for any and all pre-1970s denim workwear, denim jackets and Levi 501s. The address is Heller's Cafe, 1654 E. Olive Way, Seattle, WA 98122.

Sherrie Gunn of Orangeburg, S.C., writes: "There are so many people in need of hand-me-downs who would be proud to get cast-off blue jeans. Here's a partial list: The Salvation Army, Red Cross, Battered Women's Shelters, foster children (the Department of Social Services can help distribute them), your local church's aid group (our community has one called Cooperative Church Ministries, and it helps burned-out families of all denominations), your school guidance counselor and your friends."

Write to "Ask Anne & Nan" at P.O. Box 240, Hartland, VT 05048. Questions of general interest will appear in the column. Due to the volume of mail, personal replies cannot be provided.

Anne B. Adams and Nancy Nash-Cummings are co-authors of "Ask Anne & Nan" (Whetstone) and "Dear Anne and Nan: Two Prize Problem-Solvers Share Their Secrets" (Bantam). To order, call 1-800-888-1220.

Double Dog Dare

Dear Editor:
My observation is that at the current pace, the Snyder United Way campaign will not meet its goal. This concerns me.

The city council, of which I am a part, at its October meeting agreed to take positive steps to deter the rise of juvenile crime in our city. This is good. There are agencies funded by the United Way (Boys and Girls Club and Scouting programs) that work with young people. My train of logic is that it is better to reach them and help them in these programs than it is to handle them through our judicial system.

Your newspaper recently reported how many millions of dollars have been contributed to the Texas Lottery from Scurry County. We can spend millions on a game of chance, but cannot support a $68,000 budget of the United Way.

The naysayers will explain that with a $1 Lotto ticket they have a chance at millions. I say that a $1 given to the United Way can save many tax dollars spent apprehending criminals, court costs, prison expense and supporting prisoner's families while they are incarcerated.

I "Double Dog Dare" you to join me in putting the United Way over the top by Oct. 31.
Ron Shaw,
Snyder, Texas

Had a great time

Dear Editor:
Congratulations on your successful Buffalo Festival! We came from Irving to attend it and had a wonderful time. The many activities from the parade to the final street dance were exciting and appealing — a job well done!

We loved the emphasis on both the Indian culture and the culture of early settlers. We especially enjoyed the store displays and exhibits which gave us a real sense of the historical significance of Scurry County. In fact, we half expected to see Elmer Kelton himself amid the crowds of the day pursuing the activities and displays, perhaps contemplating fodder for a new and exciting book about Scurry County. Believe me, there is enough to make a dandy tale!

We are looking forward to returning for next year's Buffalo Festival. You folks have a lot to live up to now and we can't wait for the next one — it's a delightful change from the fast pace of the Dallas Metroplex, much needed by weary city dwellers like us. Keep up the good work.
Sincerely,
Royce & Judy Hogue
Irving, Texas

Not give up

Dear Editor:
Let me expand on the answer to the Ask Us question published, Thursday, Oct. 20.

The question was: "If Snyder were to withdraw from the Colorado River Municipal Water District where would the city get its water?"

1. We cannot withdraw because our city officials signed another contract with the CRMWD in 1982 for a period of fifty (50) years.
2. If we could withdraw and regain the water wells we once owned, we would be much better off. (During the boom, these 31 fresh water wells supplied water for a population of over 16,000 people.)

We may have "hocked our body and soul to the company store (CRMWD)," and our water bills will get bigger and bigger; but, let's not give up the fight!

The Simpson trial circus

The El Paso Times

A nation's collective view of its own judicial system is being reshaped by the preliminary hearings of the O.J. Simpson trial. For many observers, this is the first or only chance to learn about that judicial system, a system that one day might envelope the observer as a juror, as the accused or as a crime victim. The lessons from this case are not all accurate, and there is enough blame to be shared by numerous culprits. ...

This case has verified many Americans' worst suspicions about manipulation: that money influences court proceedings, that jury selection is a raw recruiting contest, that prosecutors, defense attorneys and even police officials are orchestrating leaks to the media.

Too often forgotten in this public feeding frenzy is the lingering suffering of survivors. Also abandoned is the opportunity for all of us to research and correct key problems such as spousal abuse.

Worst of all, though, is the fading attention to the real purpose of our judicial system: to determine the truth and mete out punishment fairly.

The legacy of the O.J. Simpson trial, if the numerous culprits continue their patterns of action, will be one of debris, not resolution. Such a legacy could scatter more cynicism than hope.

Central Intelligence Agency

The Valley Morning Star

News reports alleging that the Haitian quasi-terrorist group FRAPH was formed at the urging of and in part paid for by the Central Intelligence Agency ... are only the latest blows at the CIA's credibility and prudence. Perhaps it is time, as part of a thoroughgoing reassessment of the role of the United States in the post-Cold War era, to consider whether this particular organization should continue to be a part of the U.S. government.

The FRAPH allegations come at a time when the CIA still is reeling from the aftermath of the Aldrich Ames story. ...

To suggest that the CIA as an institution might have outlived its usefulness is not to say that there won't be a need for intelligence and information in the future. Indeed, in an increasingly decentralized world with many centers of power and influence, the need for reliable information about the actions and intentions of a multitude of players and would-be players might just be greater than it has been for the past 50 years.

But the CIA, formed to deal with the emerging realities of the Cold War from a spy agency created to help the United States win World War II, might not be the agency to fulfill this need.

By Bill McClellan

"Nary a one," said Elber. He pulled off his hat and wiped his brow. "It's a shame, a doggone shame. Not one to be seen."

I was with Uncle Elber and Smithy Thompson, looking out over flatland that not too long ago was prime roaming grounds for Big Blue Jumpers. We'd been out since daybreak, searching a three county area for any sign of a herd, even a small one. Now, here we were on Dodd's Hill and the sun was going down and we hadn't found a thing. "You ever seen anything like this, Smithy?"

"Naw, I ain't," he said. "If my daddy was to see this, he'd roll over in his grave. This is pit-ti-ful."

A lack of significant moisture has so sharply affected tumbleweed reproduction that the survival of some species — the Big Blue Jumper, for instance — may be severely threatened.

Some longtime hunters blame pesticides for the decline in tumbleweed populations. Officials from the Tumbleweed Welfare Educational Enlightenment Department (TWEED) are presently testing trapped tumbleweed bucks for possible levels of contamination, but the research hasn't been completed yet.

Unfortunately, while TWEED has been empowered by the government to regulate tumbleweed hunting — considered a recreational or sporting activity — it has no authority to stop the eradication of them by farmers who consider the animals as pests. Despite well-documented research proving the benefits of tumbleweeds to both other wildlife and crops, ignorance remains.

But whether pesticides have had an impact or not, we've experienced several consecutive years where rainfall has been sparse or nonexistent during a tumbleweed's relatively short mating season.

Although tumbleweeds are most active on hot, dry, windy days, they actually refuse to mate unless there is sufficient moisture. And stock tanks won't do. Tumbleweeds are afraid of large bodies of water. Understandable, because they can't swim.

You may have heard that the semi-drought conditions in Scurry, and surrounding counties have contributed to the scarcity of tumbleweeds, but that's misleading. It's not the amount of rainfall, but the timing of the rainfall that is critical. In fact, tumbleweeds are a close cousin of the camel, and can go a very long time without water.

For the second year in a row now, TWEED has imposed bag limits on tumbleweeds in this area of the state. And while some small species remain moderately plentiful, larger species are suffering. Just last month, TWEED announced that it is illegal to bag any Big Blue Jumpers until further notice.

Longtime hunters like Elber and Smithy Thompson are disappointed, but they understand.

"Sa' doggone shame, but they'll come back," said Uncle Elber, that evening, while sipping a ceremonial cup of tumblesoup. Then he paused. "I just hope they come back, that's all."

For Smithy, it's been particularly disappointing. He had worked all summer perfecting a call. He let us hear it that night.

His lips pursed and his head high, cocked just a bit to one side, he called "shoeeee-innng, shoeeee-innng." Both Elber and I turned and looked out into the night, as if we expected a Big Blue to come running.

Smithy's call sounded for all the world like a barbed wire fence being pushed by the wind against a cedar post. As anyone with any hunting experience knows, tumbleweeds are highly attracted to barbed wire fences. Bagging a tumbleweed off of a fence is illegal, of course, but if you can attract a tumbleweed by simply sounding like barbed wire, well, it's a feat that only a few of the most veteran hunters have accomplished.

I don't have the years and years of experience that men like Uncle Elber and Smithy Thompson do, but I know what they're talking about.

One thing I can tell you is there's nothing in the world like the thrill of tracking a Big Blue Jumper, trying to get him barehanded, and all the while knowing that if he picks up your scent, he could suddenly turn on you.

And as I also took a sip of that bittersweet tumblesoup, I couldn't help but think that Elber's right. It's a shame, a doggone shame. But they'll be back.

You gotta' believe.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

It was my own fault, really. It's what I get for spending days at a time submerged in a thick psychological study entitled, "The Criminal Mind."

Before that, I'd read up on such little character quirks as Paranoid Personality Disorder, Narcissistic Personality Disorder and Sadistic Personality Disorder. I was trying to flesh out and get to know the kind of mind my latest bad guy character might have. I didn't want to make him a cardboard stereotype, but a living, breathing predator who uses other people his whole life to get what he wants.

According to the psychologists who put together this study after spending over 12 years working closely with this type of violent criminal, the reasons "why" they do what they do or think what they think is not because they grew up in the ghetto or came from broken homes or were abused as children. It is because they are basically mean. Just plain mean. They don't really know why they blew somebody's head off on a given day. They might have just been in a bad mood that day. And furthermore, they don't really care.

Basically all they care about is that they got caught, and now they want out.

(I might add that eventually the docs figured out a way to help some of these thugs change their lifetime behavior patterns — the ones who wanted to, that is. The ones who were sick and tired of making everybody who ever knew them miserable and wanted a shot at living a "boring" normal life. But that's in Volume II. I didn't buy that one because the guy in my book has no interest in changing his life in any way except to get richer and not get caught at it this time.)

So I was reading along, studying case histories of some really bad bad guys — real ones, I mean — when the phone rang. It was 9:20 on Sunday night. My son had dropped my daughter off for her youth group meeting at church and had gone on to visit his girlfriend. He was supposed to pick her up at 9 and they were expected home about 9:30.

He didn't even say his usual, "This is Dustin." Instead, he said, "Did you guys already pick Jessica up? Because I can't find her anywhere."

"Is there anybody else there at the church?" I asked.

"There's one car parked out front and I found an unlocked door. But I've been looking around for about five minutes and there's nobody here."

"Okay. Look all over the whole church, and if you still can't find anyone, then drive over to the youth director's house and see if he or his wife know what's going on."

"All right." He hung up and immediately, the battle started. That's the flaming war that always goes on in such instances between my two selves: my Common Sense Self and my Paranoid Self, whom I'll call CSS and PS.

CSS: "They probably just went out for pizza."

PS: "They've never done that before. Why would they pick tonight?"

CSS: "Look, if they changed their plans, Jessi would have called."

PS: "Exactly. So why hasn't she called?"

CSS: "I'm sure there's a good explanation."

PS: "Yeah, and you know what it is."

CSS: "Shut up."

PS: "You know how sex crime offenders are. Sometimes they stalk their victims for days, but a lot of the time, they just seize an opportunity when it presents itself. Did Dustin make sure she entered the building safely, or did he just drop her off and drive away? If the youth meeting was canceled tonight and she didn't know about it, he could have unknowingly left her at an empty church. The guy could have seen her and followed her into the building."

CSS: "Shut up! There's a perfectly good reason why her brother can't find her and it's going to be fine. They'll walk through that door in just a few minutes."

PS: "So this creep's got her alone in an empty building and what do you do? You send your teenage son in there to find her. What do you think will happen when he stumbles onto the situation?"

CSS: "There is no SITUATION. They're probably upstairs or out in the chapel or something. Would you put down that stupid book?"

PS: "If he door was locked when she arrived, she'd have had to walk several blocks in the dark to get to the nearest phone. Even then..."

CSS: "Oh for heaven's sake! This is a small, peaceful town..."

PS: "Like these guys don't travel?"

CSS: "Shut UP!"

The battle raged on, spraying psychic shrapnel far and wide, for about 45 minutes before my son and daughter walked in. (He'd found them all out behind the church, playing basketball.)

My kids know I'm paranoid so I didn't embarrass all of us by gushing. Kent, who'd gone to bed early but had been awakened — probably by all my bad vibes — joined us while they rummaged for snacks, gossiping and debating the youth director's message that night and relaying to me his teasing comments about my son's letting a woman lead him astray.

But I kept gazing on my daughter's face, thinking about all the mothers out there who've lost their precious ones because some guy somewhere was looking for kicks. It's an occupational hazard, I guess, shared by anybody who's made a career in law enforcement. (Even cons worry about their families, and for the same reason — they know what's out there.)

I decided to teach my kids some safety tips for these types of situations. At the same time, I pledged to myself, just as I have a thousand times before, not to ever, ever take one sweet moment of this life — of our life together — for granted.

Underwater cattle drive saves heifers

LIBERTY (AP) — No one knew the train was coming.

Rancher Howard Pipkins only knew that flood waters were rising as 65 of his heifers were stranded on the edge of a railroad trestle with no more than a few feet of ground on either side.

The relentless Trinity River had already taken his house, barn, pickup truck and tractor. He wasn't going to let it take his cattle.

He summoned about 20 neighboring ranchers and cowhands to help drive the herd of 2-year-old cows off their tiny island refuge, where they'd been stranded for two days after their pasture was flooded.

It was a half-mile swim in cold, snake-filled water to the only dry ground for miles — Highway 90.

Pipkins wasn't worried about a train coming by. He thought the San Jacinto River had washed out another trestle to the west.

Sunlight was fading fast as he planned his underwater cattle drive from the edge of the two-lane highway, where rush-hour traffic was backed up for miles.

"The cattle, they're a young bunch," Pipkins said as sweat rolled down his worried face and he smacked fire ants biting his ankles. "They've never been through this. They may be hard to handle."

Mutt Neuman and his son,

Kody, brought two horses from the Bar N Bar Ranch. Jeff Green of the Northfork Ranch supplied the portable corral and cattle trailers.

Tony Dillard, his son, Kevin, and three other neighbors brought small fishing boats.

Armed with oars and lassos, the rescuers headed across the swollen river to the trestle. They hollered and yipped, but the cattle wouldn't budge. When they got them in the water, the heifer turned back twice when they couldn't touch ground.

Finally, with two cowboys chest high in water, the herd started swimming. But it split in two, with half heading toward the highway and the other heading upstream.

"Hee-yaa! Hee-yaa!" the cowboys shouted as the swarm of cattle inched along, straying left, right and even backwards.

Like baby whales, the cattle bumped the undersides of the ranchers' small fishing boats. The cowboys shoved them off with oars and smacked their tails to keep them swimming past the submerged trees, fences and telephone poles.

"Don't get too close, they will turn you over," Dillard yelled to his son piloting a second boat.

As about 30 cows neared shore, state troopers stopped traffic. Jeff Green opened the gates on the makeshift corral across the highway as the heifers trudged out of the water and bolted into the corral.

The second half of the herd was back on the tracks. Two cowboys shoved them off, but the cattle got caught in the current and started piling up at the trestle.

They didn't know the train was coming.

Senior Center sets dominos

A double elimination domino tournament will be featured on Monday's Game Day in the Senior Center. Those taking part should plan to play two matches on the first day. Twenty-four players took part in the August tournament and there is space for more.

Benny Benitez will be playing for country/western dancing in the center Tuesday night. Dancing will begin at 7 p.m.

Senior citizens with October birthdays will be honored at a birthday party in the center on Wednesday. The party will begin at 10 a.m. and will be followed by a performance by the Kitchen Band starting at 11 a.m.

Other entertainment in the center this week will include a performance by the Local Yokels at 11 a.m. on Tuesday and a game titled "Draw A Song" starting at 11 a.m. Thursday. The Sunshine Choir will provide entertainment for the Mutt Neuman thought they might drown. So he took his paddle and poked their heads under the trestle, hoping they would be jerked by the current to the other side.

Like bobbing apples, the heifers popped up on the other side one by one — tails up, bellies up, hooves up.

residents of Snyder Oaks Care Center at 10 a.m. Friday.

Dot Stokes will be in the center for benefits counseling with senior citizens from 8:30 a.m. to noon on Tuesday. She can provide help in understanding and solving problems related to health insurance coverage such as Medicare and Medicaid, Social Security and Supplemental Security Income (SSI), food stamps and other income support programs.

The senior center is selling chances on a quilt to be given away on Dec. 14. Tickets are $1 each and can be purchased at the center at 2603 Ave. M.

The center invites local residents to donate used or new Christmas cards which will be recycled as Christmas postcards for residents at Snyder's long-term care facilities. The cards can be taken to the center between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

"Family Focus"

By James C. Dobson, Ph.D.

QUESTION: I have heard the term "classic underachiever" applied to children. Will you define that concept for me?

DR. DOBSON: The underachiever is a student who is unsuccessful in school despite his ability to do the work. He may have an IQ of 120 or better, yet earn D's and F's on his report card.

If possible, underachieving children are even more numerous and less understood than slow learners or late bloomers. The confusion is related to the fact that two specific ingredients are necessary to produce academic excellence, yet the second is often overlooked.

First, intellectual ability must be there. But mental capacity is insufficient by itself. Self-discipline is also required. An able child may or may not have the self-control necessary to bear down day after day on something he considers painful or difficult. Furthermore, intelligence and self-discipline frequently are not correlated. We often see a child displaying one without the other.

QUESTION: What solution would you offer for the problem of underachievers?

DR. DOBSON: I have dealt with more than 500 underachievers, and have come to the conclusion that there are only two functional solutions to this syndrome.

The first is certainly no panacea: parents can become so involved in schoolwork that the child has no choice but to do the job. To make this possible, the school must expend additional effort to communicate assignments and progress to parents—Junior is certainly not going to carry the message!

Adolescents, particularly, will confound the communication between school and home as much as possible.

In one of the high schools where I served, for example, students had a 20-minute "homeroom" session each day. This time was used for the flag salute, council meetings, announcements and related matters. Very little opportunity for studying occurred there, yet each day, hundreds of parents were told that all homework was finished during that session. The naive parents were led to believe that the homeroom period was a two-hour block of concentrated effort.

Parents must know what goes on in school if they want to reinforce their child's academic responsibilities. They should provide support in areas where self-discipline is needed. The evening study period should be highly structured with routine hours and a minimum of interferences. To do this, parents must know what was assigned and how the finished product should look. Finally, negative attitudes should be withheld from the learning situation. Berating and criticizing an underachiever will not make him work harder.

I must hasten to say that this procedure is not an easy solution. It rarely works for more than a week or two, since many parents also lack the required self-discipline to continue the program. And when they quit, so does Junior! There must be a better way, and I believe there is.

An underachiever often thrives under a system of immediate reinforcement. If he is not challenged by personal satisfaction and motivators usually generated in the classroom, he must be fed some artificial incentives in the form of rewards applied to small units of behavior.

Instead of gifts or other desirable objectives being offered to the child for earning an A in English at the end of the semester, he should be given 10 cents for each properly diagrammed sentence.

The use of immediate reinforcement serves the same function as a starter on a car! You can't drive very far without it, but it gets the engine going much easier than pushing.

For the idealist who objects to the use of the extrinsic motivation (which is often inaccurately called a bribe), I would ask this question: "What alternative do we have, other than to let a child grow out of his problem?"

Heart attack claims longtime screen actor, Burt Lancaster

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Burt Lancaster, the rugged one-time circus acrobat who became a star in physical, intelligent roles that earned him the description "thinking man's tough guy," has died. He was 80.

He died Thursday night, his wife, Susie, said Friday.

Lancaster had suffered a stroke four years ago that left him partially paralyzed, but Mrs. Lancaster said it was a heart attack, not another stroke, that killed him.

"He went very, very peacefully. We were together, thank God," she said. "This last week he's been better than ever. It came as a complete surprise."

"He was patting my hair and touching my face and he took a sigh and that was it."

In a career that included more than 70 motion pictures, Lancaster was frequently cast in strong, angry roles but excelled in sensitive roles, too.

He won an Oscar for the 1960 film "Elmer Gantry." Among other memorable films: "The Birdman of Alcatraz," "From Here to Eternity," "Judgment at Nuremberg," "The Rose Tattoo," "The Swimmer" and "Sweet Smell of Success."

He used his athletic skills in such films as "Trapeze," "Ten Tall Men," "The Flame and the Arrow" and "The Crimson Pirate."

Lancaster remained active well into his 70s, starring in 1989's

"Field of Dreams" and 1990's television miniseries "Voyage of Terror." He drew wide praise and his fourth Oscar nomination for his skilled depiction of a hard-luck petty criminal in 1980's "Atlantic City" and also starred in the acclaimed 1983 comedy "Local Hero."

The actor supported a variety of political causes and was a former president of the American Civil Liberties Union. A lifelong liberal, he often chose to act in films with social significance: "Buffalo Bill and the Indians," about the myths of Western history, and "A Child Is Waiting," about a school for mentally handicapped children. He made two anti-war films,

"Twilight's Last Gleaming" and "Go Tell the Spartans."

An introduction to a 1992 series of Lancaster films at New York's American Museum of the Moving Image called him "a thinking man's tough guy."

"Whether he was masterminding a prison break, conspiring to overthrow the government, or leading a band of ragtag mercenaries across the Mexican border, Lancaster always gave his characters a believable emotional core," the museum commentary said. "More often than not, it was their moral or emotional shortcomings which made them memorable."

Frito Lay test marketing new low fat potato chip

PLANO (AP) — Hoping waist-watchers won't Lay off, Frito-Lay Inc. said Thursday it is testing a new low-fat potato chip and plans a nationwide rollout next year.

The company is using Iowa as a test market for Baked Lay's Potato Crisps, a version of its Lay's Potato Chips.

A national launch of the chip is expected late next year in original and barbecue flavors, the company said.

The new chip is 94 percent fat-free and has less than 2 grams of fat per ounce, compared with 10 grams of fat for regular potato chips.

It has been tested in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, since April, where Baked Lay's have represented nearly 15 percent of total Lay's potato chip sales. The snack also has been introduced in Des Moines, Iowa.

"Baked Lay's was created for the growing number of consumers who are looking for low-fat alternatives to traditional salty snacks," Steve Reinemund, Frito-Lay's President and Chief Executive Officer, said in a news release.

Russian spy's wife sentenced to 5 1/4 years in federal prison

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — The wife of CIA turncoat Aldrich Ames was sentenced Friday to 5 1/4 years in prison after she admitted helping the most damaging spy in U.S. history. She had begged for mercy for herself and her 5-year-old son.

"I beg you to be merciful..." 41-year-old Rosario Ames told the judge in a quavering voice. "Please understand that you are not only sentencing me, but Paul, too."

U.S. District Judge Claude M. Hilton gave her the minimum prison time called for in the deal she made with prosecutors in pleading guilty last April to conspiring to commit espionage and evade taxes.

With credit for eight months served since her arrest Feb. 21 and time off for good behavior, she could be freed in three years and eight months, prosecutors and defense lawyers agreed.

Her husband, a 52-year-old former head of counterintelligence in the CIA's Soviet branch, is serving life without parole. In nine years of spying for the Soviet Union and Russia, he admits, he was paid more than $2.5 million, compromised dozens of CIA operations and exposed numerous foreigners who were spying for the CIA. The government says at least 10 were executed.

Mrs. Ames, wearing a loose, dark green outfit emblazoned "Alexandria Jail," riveted a standing-room audience as she read a 3 1/4-page statement.

She admitted she "provided advice and support" for her husband's spying after he told her about it in 1992. But she sought leniency so she could take care of their son, Paul, now living with relatives in her native Bogota, Colombia.

"I beg you, your honor, Paul needs me, Paul is innocent. He did nothing wrong," she said.

In the 25-minute hearing Friday, she was portrayed by her lawyer as another of her husband's victims.

Your Birthday

Sunday, Oct. 23, 1994

Your leadership and executive assets could be more pronounced than ever in the year ahead. The heavens indicate you might be appointed to manage something of significance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be attentive today when wise people are speaking. Something might be said in your presence that will be worth remembering and serve a purpose at a later date. Libra, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Before getting involved in a new endeavor at this time, make it a point to analyze all of the available information.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your spirit of cooperation increases your appeal to others today. Partnership arrangements should work out to everyone's advantage.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today you are suited for projects that require both mental and physical dexterity. For productive fulfillment, keep your head and your hands busy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Instead of participating in familiar involvements with your usual set of friends, experiment with something new today. Try doing something with pals you haven't seen lately.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your place could be a magnet today, attracting people as a gathering spot. Don't be surprised if you have some unexpected guests.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Keep your schedule as flexible as possible today. You might require a variety of activities to appease your restlessness. Don't get tied down if you can help it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Try to spend some time today evaluating your budget to see where you can trim off some waste. Your efforts could be surprisingly rewarding.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your dynamic personality will be evident today and your presence will generate a stir of excitement wherever you go. Spread your sunshine and have fun.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your sense of humor and subtlety are your most effective tools today. They can be used to your advantage to reverse a troublesome development.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Attend to your essential duties, but do not make today all work and no play. Pleasant diversions can help improve your outlook and attitude.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Career goals aren't apt to be denied today if you're flexible and prepared to change tactics to meet the needs of the moment. Go with the flow.

circumstances might provide you with an opening for a piece of the action where two others have already done most of the spade work.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Something you've been hoping for might soon come about. An important ally could play a key role in making it happen.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You're presently in a cycle of high achievement but you will have to earn what you hope to gain. Striving for your goals will prove educational and fun.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Although you might not deliberately seek attention today, you will make a favorable impression wherever you go. Have fun as a standout.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Situations should have a way of eventually working out to your ultimate advantage today, even though events and early indicators might signal otherwise.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If a delicate matter exists that you've been wanting to discuss with a close friend, this is a good day to make your presentation. He/she will be tolerant and understanding.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your intense efforts are apt to pay off today, especially in arrangements where you're striving for personal gain. Be tenacious.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You have a commanding presence today which others will find appealing rather than offensive. In fact, your demeanor could enhance your esteem in their eyes.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Taking bows isn't as important today as getting the job done right. Function as the power behind the throne instead of playing the front man.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your influence over your intimate circle of friends is rather extraordinary today. Use it in ways that benefit others as well as yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Generally speaking, conditions remain quite favorable for you today. You're likely to reap your greatest benefits in material affairs.

Affects of halt in work

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The shutdown of key operations at the Oak Ridge Y-12 Plant is continuing without a definite date for resuming disassembly and storage of bomb-grade uranium.

"Obviously, there will be an impact at some point" on the nation's disarmament goals, Frank Juan, a Department of Energy spokesman in Oak Ridge, said Friday.

But operations won't be affected anytime soon at DOE's Pantex Plant near Amarillo, Texas, which does the initial disassembly of nuclear warheads and then sends the highly enriched uranium components to Oak Ridge.

"We currently have sufficient staging area to continue with the current number of weapons that we are working on into the near future," DOE spokesman Tom Walton said in an interview Friday from Amarillo.

"There could be a long term impact, but in the near term we are fully functioning," he said.

Pantex and Y-12 are both former weapons production plants now involved in post-Cold War weapons dismantlement.

Y-12 is responsible for final disassembly and uranium storage, for up to 1,000 warheads a year.

Grant money causes town problems

MOFFETT, Okla. (AP) — There hasn't been this much excitement in Moffett since a poultry company tried to dump chicken sludge on the edge of town last year.

Last week, the federal government awarded this tumbledown town a three-year grant of $106,000 from the crime bill to make the dirt streets of Moffett safer, and the 340 locals have been in a dither ever since.

For one thing, they don't have a police department — or much of a crime problem either, some say.

Besides, to get the money in hand, they have to come up with a 25 percent match — $26,500, or 2 1/2 times the town's annual budget. For a community that had to hold a barbecue to raise $2,000 to clean up after the Arkansas River flooded the town in 1990, that's real money.

"I wish in a way it never came through," says Ruby Lindsey, who raised her children in this town that's seven blocks long and four blocks wide. "It's caused a lot of friction between a lot of people."

The grant was applied for by Jimmy Jones, who was fired last year after 18 months as the town's lone police officer. Folks say they ran out of money and patience with Jones, who patrolled in his own 1977 Pontiac Firebird with a red light propped on the dashboard after the town's Ford LTD "wore plumb out." Jones had had squabbles with town leaders over whether he was doing his job.

Now David Lindsey, Ruby Lindsey's ex-husband and one of two town councilors, is accusing Jones — who was paid $120 a week — of applying for the grant simply to get his job back.

For his part, Jones says that he does want his job back but that he also believes the town needs police protection.

The rest of the townsfolk are taking sides, and city leaders are looking into what to do next with the offer from the Justice Department.

Mayor David Carolina says there's not much need for law enforcement in this sleepy town. The 78-year-old, who collects aluminum cans for extra money, says the biggest problem is speeding.

"Kids are speeding up and down this highway," Carolina says of the potholed, country lane that runs through town. "All we need is one policeman — part time."

He lets out a belly laugh when told that the county undersheriff is recommending a police chief and three officers to keep watch on the town.
