Burleson files for SISD board

Luann Burleson filed for her fourth term on the Snyder public schools board of trustees Friday, giving that May 6 election a full slate of candidates — but no opposition.

Burleson was elected in 1987 to a two-year term and to three-year terms in 1989 and 1992.

"I have enjoyed serving on the SISD board for the past eight years and look forward to serving another term, which would allow me to work with Mr. Lomax (Superintendent Gayle Lomax) and his staff," Burleson said. "I am seeking the same educational excellence for all children that I want for my own daughters."

She and her husband, Dr. Jim Burleson, and have two daughters, Jamie, a ninth grader and Erin, a third grader.

Burleson has lived in Snyder for 13½ years and is a member of the First Presbyterian Church. She received her bachelor's degree in biology from Texas Tech University.

She joins fellow incumbent Charles Anderson on the ballot for two at-large places on the school board.

Friday marked the end of the first full week of filing for school boards and municipal positions which are up for election. The deadline to file is March 22.

Earlier in the week, city council incumbents Dayton Robertson and Ron Shaw filed for at-large seats. Also seeking one of two available city council seats is Stanley Noah.

Also earlier in the week, Mayor Paul Zeck announced that he will

'94 provides lots of memories for Snyder's 'Dr. Tony Jones'

By Shirley A. Gorman
SDN News Editor

The year 1994 is not one that Dr. Tony Jones on ABC's "General Hospital" will likely soon forget. He's suffered through the death of a cherished daughter and his once-perfect marriage to Bobbie has long since begun unraveling.

Though the TV doctor is presently emotionally battered, the actor who has portrayed Jones for a decade could not be happier. Snyder native Brad Maule received the Soap Opera Digest award for best supporting actor in a daytime drama on Feb. 17. Maule, in a telephone conversation, shared some of the "multi layers of feelings" he has experienced since winning the award.

He received the good news on the same day he learned that his father, George Maule, would have to undergo major heart surgery in Lubbock last week.

That bit of family news was especially distressing because Maule's older brother died from heart surgery complications when he was only 17. Maule was 13 at the time.

However, George Maule's surgery on Tuesday was successful and he is recovering.

Heart surgery has also played a prominent role in Maule's "General Hospital" storyline. After his TV daughter was declared brain dead last year, her heart was used in a transplant.

Besides feeling very close to the storyline, one that he referred to as, "The best storyline I've had in 10 years," Maule said "On the level of the award, I am very happy to get it."

He considers the recognition "more than just an award."

A self-described "late bloomer," Maule said that after 10 years on the program he had begun to wonder, "If I've just been fooling myself."

But when Soap Opera Digest selected Maule for the best supporting actor award, it was a definite affirmation not only of his talent but perseverance.

Other "General Hospital" cast members also received Soap Opera Digest Awards, and head writer Claire Labine was given a special award.

Dr. Jones and TV wife Bobbie have been "foundation characters" on "General Hospital" for several years. Foundation characters have "longevity and stability" and the rest of the show usually revolves around them. But they can become predictable and dull, Maule said. Until recently, Dr. and Mrs.

WTC play will debut Wednesday

Athol Fugard's "Master Harold...and the boys" begins a four-night run Wednesday on the Western Texas College campus.

The play deals with race relations in South Africa prior to the banishment of its governmental policy of Apartheid.

Performances will continue through Saturday in the Fine Arts Theatre at 8 o'clock nightly.

The play revolves around a 16-year-old white boy who has given himself the title of "Master Harold." The "boys" are two black men.

Cast as Hally, the 16-year-old, is J.J. Hawkins of Graham. The other roles are played by Marlon Hall of Vernon, who portrays a non-violent 50-year-old, and L.S. McClain of Snyder.

Play director Michael Endy said the play is intended for mature audiences. It contains adult themes and is not intended for children.

Tickets are $5 for adults. WTC students and faculty are admitted free. Reservations may be made by calling 573-8511, ext. 234.

The SDN Column

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "If you really want to play a bad joke on someone who likes to argue — agree with him."

Some gifts just bomb out.

State Rep. David Counts, the Knox City Democrat who represents Scurry County in Austin, created a little excitement down in Austin recently.

The Capitol post office called David's office to report a package addressed to him was ticking. The post office asked permission to X-ray the package, then quickly handed it over to the DPS.

There are a lot of difficult issues facing the legislature, but David couldn't really think of any vote or stance that would cause somebody to send him something harmful.

The package was X-rayed and revealed some batteries and a dark, unidentifiable cylindrical object. The Austin bomb squad was called in, secured the package and unwrapped it.

Inside was a beautifully, handmade clock complete with cylindrical weights. It was a thank you gift for helping with a prayer breakfast.

Last session, the legislature passed a bill calling for potty parity for women in public restrooms.

The bill didn't address big signs to indicate which restroom belongs to which gender.

On the third floor of the Scurry County courthouse, the men's restroom is on the north side of the building and the women's facility is on the south. On the fourth floor, the two restrooms are reversed.

County Treasurer Charlie Bell doesn't go to the fourth floor very often, but did a few days ago when district court was in session. When Charlie came out of the wrong restroom, several in the hallway observed his exit, but said nothing.

However, Bell suspected he had not heard the last of his mistake. The next morning in his mail box were items to help improve his reading skills, flash cards with "Men" and "Women" written on each.

Arizona senator picked chairman

by The Associated Press
Arizona Sen. John McCain will serve as national chairman of the Phil Gramm for President Committee, Gramm said before heading for Arizona.

McCain "has been my colleague and trusted friend since we met in Congress more than 13 years ago," the Texas Republican said.

Gramm, 52, formally entered the 1996 presidential race Friday with a rally in his home state. He was to do the same Saturday night in Phoenix, where he won a January straw poll of Arizona Republicans as their choice for president. McCain called his GOP colleague "the right man to fulfill the American people's mandate on Nov. 8 and to bring America into the next century."

McCain served two terms in the U.S. House of Representatives, was elected to the Senate in 1986 and was re-elected in 1992. He is chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs and serves on the Armed Services, Commerce and Governmental Affairs committees.

Political muscle big factor in base closings

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Clinton's base closure plan indicates that in the 1990s, the best defense for a military installation may not be its armament but rather its political connections.

A draft version of the base closure list to be issued Tuesday by the Pentagon spares Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole's home-state Army post and protects facilities in the all-important presidential election states of New Hampshire and California.

In all, the Clinton administration plan, encompassing only a handful of major base closures along with some 80 reductions or realignments, proposes far less drastic cuts than were expected a year ago.

Defense officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, confirmed Friday and early Saturday that Fort Riley, Kan., was spared from the closure list. Dole, R-Kan., pressed administration officials to spare the base, even though the Army had already decided to relocate most of the troops stationed there.

The Portsmouth Naval Shipyard in Kittery, Maine, on the New Hampshire border, also is absent from the administration list. New Hampshire is the site of the first presidential primary a year from now.

And in another apparent bow to politics, California, a state vital to President Clinton's re-election chances, takes a much smaller hit than the last round of closings two years ago. The two biggest targets there are the Oakland Army Base and the Navy's shipyard at Long Beach.

Defense Secretary William Perry could make changes in the list between now and Tuesday, but he said last week he did not expect to do so. The New York Times detailed some of the recommendations in today's editions.

Pick 3

AUSTIN (AP)—The Pick 3 winning numbers drawn Friday by the Texas Lottery, in order: 1-7-5 (one, seven, five)

Defense officials contacted by The Associated Press confirmed the reported list but cautioned that it is not yet final.

"This list has not been approved by Dr. Perry," Pentagon spokesman Dennis Boxx said Friday night. "Until Dr. Perry approves the final list, there is no list."

The Pentagon's recommendations go before the independent

Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission, which can add to or subtract from the list. The panel's list must then be accepted or rejected in its entirety by the president and Congress.

Unless Perry makes last-minute changes, the closure recommendation can be expected to include:

The Army's Fort Hamilton recruiting post in New York City, with 800 military and civilian jobs; Fort McClellan in Alabama, still alive after two previous appearances on the closure list, a potential chemical waste cleanup problem and site of some 8,000 military and civilian positions.

Also, Fort Indiantown Gap in Pennsylvania, with 2,000 jobs; the Red River Army Depot at Texarkana, Texas, and Fitzsimmons Army Hospital near Denver, with 3,000 jobs.

Navy facilities targeted for closing include: The South Weymouth Naval Air Station in Massachusetts with more than 800 military and civilian positions; the Indianapolis Naval Air Warfare Center; the Meridian Naval Air Station in Mississippi, with 3,200 jobs at stake; and the Naval Ordnance Station at Louisville, Ky.

Also on the Pentagon's draft closure list is the Fort Chaffee Reserve Center at Fort Smith, Ark., with about 1,000 jobs; and the Navy's Air Engineering Station at Lakehurst, N.J., with more than 3,000 jobs.

Targeted for shrinking or consolidation are the Army's Fort Eustis in Virginia, its Marine Ocean Terminal at Bayonne, N.J., and Fort Monmouth at Eatontown, N.J., and the Navy's air station at Corpus Christi, Texas, and New London submarine base in Connecticut.

Air Force facilities in line for closure, reduction or realignment include its laboratory in Rome, N.Y.; Kirtland Air Force Base in Albuquerque, N.M.; Hanscom Air Force Base in Bedford, Mass., and Reese Air Force Base in Lubbock, Texas.

Dr. Gott by Peter Gott, M.D.

Why doctors don't admit their mistakes

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

All doctors make mistakes. So do all nurses, hospitals and health care professionals. In fact, medical errors are so common that it's surprising that this phenomenon is so often disregarded in the health literature.

In the Dec. 21, 1994, issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, however, an article by Dr. Lucian Leape (Harvard School of Public Health, Boston, Mass.) addresses this very problem. The findings may surprise you.

Dr. Leape points out that 2 to 14 percent of hospitalized patients suffer from medication errors; in a study of patients in an intensive care unit, 1.7 errors occurred per day PER PATIENT. This translates into a 99 percent efficiency that may not be acceptable. In other professions, "if we had to live with 99.9 percent, we would have two unsafe plane landings per day at O'Hare, 16,000 pieces of lost mail every hour, 32,000 bank checks deducted from the wrong bank account every hour."

Leape concludes that "... the most important reason physicians and nurses have not developed more effective methods of error prevention is that they have a great deal of difficulty dealing with human error when it does occur." Mistakes are considered to be intolerable: Nurses and doctors are expected to perform without error — in short, to be infallible.

This myth is unfortunate because it automatically leads to placing blame, rather than focussing on the problems that lead to the error. For example, the nurse who gives the wrong medication may be distracted because of over-work, the doctor who errs may be exhausted after working a 36-hour shift.

Placing blame also intimidates the health professional, who learns to equate errors with negligence: You made a mistake because you didn't try hard enough. A major stress of medical practice is the need to perform faultlessly, a completely unattainable expectation. Health professionals are not infallible, and never have been. Yet, fearing censure, the threat of being considered incompetent, or malpractice suits, most doctors will attempt to conceal their mistakes or shift the blame to another source, even the patient.

Consequently, there is no acceptable forum in which the doctor can discuss his error or evaluate the circumstances behind it. This leads to emotional isolation, fear, guilt, anger and humiliation. Regrettably, hospitals, colleagues and the medical guild perpetuate this norm, which means that the medical profession overlooks opportunities for improving itself and the whole health care system.

Dr. Leape compares the medical profession to the aviation industry; and, indeed, the two are similar. Herein may lie the answer to the problem.

We need to redesign medical practice for safety.

In aviation, designers assume that errors are inevitable; therefore, systems are programmed to "absorb" mistakes by using multiple monitors, back-up monitors, automation, and extensive feedback — all of which function to avoid accidents. Further, procedures are standardized (for instance, pre-flight check lists). Operations and maintenance are governed by protocols. Finally, because errors always led to disciplinary action, the Federal Aviation Administration established a confidential reporting system for safety infractions: If pilots promptly report a dangerous situation, they are not penalized. The end result of this program was a dramatic increase in the reporting of unsafe conditions, so that problems could be identified and corrected before a tragedy occurred.

It will be awhile before the medical profession learns that improvement depends on admitting and forgiving errors. Physicians and nurses must come to accept their own human proclivity to make mistakes; patients must understand that no medical system is error-free. Life makes us all vulnerable. Recognizing this fact may be the first step to fixing the problem.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I appear to be allergic to cortisone. I've been given this for allergies and have developed constant headaches at the base of my skull. Following a cortisone shot for a sinus infection, my face got red and my ears burned. One physician diagnosed me with asthma, which I don't have, and insisted I use an inhaler three times a day. The inhaler contained cortisone and I suffered horrible chest pains. Is there any documentation of people being allergic to cortisone or am I a rare individual?

DEAR READER: An allergy to cortisone, although not impossible, is certainly rare, because the drug is universally used to block allergic reactions.

From your brief description, I cannot be sure that you are allergic to cortisone. For instance, the use of cortisone injections for a sinus infection is preposterous. (Antibiotics are preferable.)

Perhaps you misunderstood your physician, who may have diagnosed an acute allergic reaction as a cause of your sinus congestion. Moreover, allergies of various sorts may cause headaches. Finally, chest pains often accompany asthma, which may have an allergic basis in some individuals.

Because the nature of your allergies — and your presumed reaction to cortisone — remains a mystery, I urge you to see an allergist, who will test you (with skin and blood tests) to discover the cause of your symptoms. Let me know what he concludes.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Allergies." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: This summer I took Prozac in hopes of losing weight. That didn't work, but I did lose my sex drive completely. I've been off the medication for two months, but my libido has not returned. Did the Prozac permanently ruin my sex drive or will it return some time in the future?

DEAR READER: Although anti-depressant drugs, such as Prozac, have been reported to diminish sex drive (libido), you have been off this therapy for two months. Therefore, I do not believe that the medicine is necessarily the cause of your problem.

I am not aware that Prozac is an appropriate drug to aid weight loss. More likely, your doctor prescribed it for depression, the accepted indication. (Over-eating may be a symptom of depression.) If this is the case, the depression itself may reduce your libido. This is an issue that you should address with your family physician, who may suggest another type of anti-depressant medicine or refer you for psychological counseling.

On second day of campaign, Gramm targets other states

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — After returning to his childhood and political roots to launch his campaign, Texas Sen. Phil Gramm turned his attention Saturday to building support in the two early powers of presidential politics — Iowa and New Hampshire.

"I believe that we need a leader who has the courage to tell people the truth about the problems we face, who has the vision to define the solutions to those problems in ways that people can understand and believe in and who is tough enough to get the job done," Gramm told a campaign kickoff rally this morning in Manchester.

New Hampshire's leadoff presidential primary is still a year away and will follow by one week the caucuses in Iowa, where Gramm was headed later Saturday. In both states, Gramm's organizing lags behind Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole and former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander.

In his effort to make up ground in New Hampshire, Gramm got a boost from GOP Sen. Bob Smith, who told the rally Gramm was "sensitive but tough" and urged his own supporters to join the Gramm effort.

For his part, Gramm stuck largely to the themes of the announcement speech he gave Friday, expressing exasperation that families that once sent $1 of every $50 to Washington in taxes now send $1 of every $4.

"Bill Clinton looks at that trend and says, 'Great, let's accelerate it,'" Gramm said. "I look at it and I say it has got to be stopped and it has got to be reversed and if you elect me president I will stop it and I will reverse it."

Gramm repeated his pledge to balance the budget in his first term or not seek re-election to a second. "I'm going to ax spending and then I'm going to ax the tax," he said to applause.

And he made a special appeal to gun owners in this rural state, saying the answer to crime is not gun control but to "put criminals in prison and let law abiding citizens have their Second Amendment rights."

Arriving in New Hampshire Friday night, Gramm predicted he would prove a good fit for the state's tax-hating voters.

"This is a conservative state, a state that believes in limited government," he said. "This is a state where a real conservative like I am ought to be strong and ought to win."

Gramm's task may be even tougher in Iowa, where Dole has a deep organization and Alexander has won impressive backing from state GOP legislative leaders. Just this week Dole won the endorsement of a prominent Christian Coalition leader in Iowa.

"I think that Senator Dole clearly has an advantage in Iowa, but I intend to run hard there and in New Hampshire," Gramm said in a recent interview.

Ex-legislator and son subpoenaed in probe

DALLAS (AP) — Former state Rep. James Earl Mankins and his son have been subpoenaed to testify before the Rusk County grand jury investigating the 1983 slayings of five people abducted from a Kentucky Fried Chicken stand in Kilgore.

Neither Mankins, owner of a Kilgore transportation company, nor his son, James Mankins Jr., could be reached for comment Friday. But the former legislator's wife, Virginia, told the Dallas Morning News for its Saturday editions that the two are expected to appear before the panel March 7.

There have been longstanding rumors that authorities suspect her son of involvement in the killings, but she said she is convinced her son had nothing to do with the slaughter.

"Absolutely not," she said. "We have never thought he had anything to do with it."

On the night of Sept. 23, 1983, five people, including four KFC employees, were abducted from the Kilgore restaurant at closing time. Their bodies were found the next morning in a remote field in neighboring Rusk County. All had been shot in the head.

Those killed were Mary Tyler, 37; Opie Hughes, 39; Joey Johnson, 20; David Maxwell, 20; and Monte Landers, 19.

The gangland-style killings have baffled investigators for years. They developed at least four suspects almost immediately, but prosecutors said there was insufficient evidence to bring charges against anyone.

A little more than a year ago, Texas Attorney General Dan Morales took over the case at the request of newly elected Rusk County District Attorney Kyle Freeman.

The elder Mankins, 69, who served in the Texas House of Representatives from 1975 to 1981 and again from 1982 to 1984, was said to be traveling Friday and unavailable for comment.

Another Northwest fish nears extinction

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another fish headed for extinction in the Pacific Northwest, the bull trout, is moving closer to protection under the Endangered Species Act with significant implications for logging and mining interests in five Western states.

Government documents obtained by The Associated Press show the Fish and Wildlife Service ignored its own scientists' advice to expedite protection of bull trout last year when it decided to keep the fish off the list of threatened and endangered species.

But since then, the agency's Northwest regional chief has quietly moved the fish closer to a listing under the act, upgrading the bull trout's "threat category" this month and concluding that its plight is worsening, according to agency memos and letters.

Federal protection of the bull trout could have significant implications for loggers, miners, livestock grazers and fishermen in Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana and Nevada.

"There was a consensus among biologists that a vast majority of remaining bull trout populations are subject to threats" meeting the highest priority category, Regional Director Michael Spear wrote in the Feb. 1 memo from Portland, Ore.

Unlike Northwest salmon species jeopardized primarily by massive dams on the Snake and Columbia Rivers, the Fish and Wildlife Service says the demise of the bull trout is due largely to land management activities along the inland rivers and streams.

Conservationists who are suing the government over failure to protect the fish say the Clinton administration is breaking the same laws that the Reagan and Bush administrations violated when they denied listing petitions for the northern spotted owl in the 1980s.

"Illegal political influence has been used in denying bull trout Endangered Species Act protection," said Mike Bader, executive director of the Alliance for the Wild Rockies in Missoula, Mont.

Lady Rebs sock Snyder, 22-1

Midland Lee's Lady Rebels came to town Friday and made Cates Field look like Chicago's Wrigley Field as they belted four home runs over the short fence in a 22-1 victory over the Snyder Lady Tigers.

The game ended after five innings because of the 10-run rule.

Midland showed its power early, scoring six runs in both the first and second innings to take an early 12-0 lead on the hometown Lady Tigers.

"We gave them too many pitches to hit tonight and they made the best of them," Coach Billy Hicks said after the game. "That's why they are still undefeated at 7-0 so far this year."

"When you play games on a field that has a short fence, you must keep the ball down in the strike zone and make them hit the ball on the ground. We must let our defense help the pitchers."

The outfield fence at Cates Field is 180 feet from home plate, while rules recommend that the fence should be located 200 to 220 feet away. Hicks said all four home runs barely cleared the fence and probably would have been caught by the Lady Tiger outfielders, keeping the score much lower.

"You won't hear me complain about the length of the fences because I still think Cates Field is a great place to play," said Hicks. "We get compliments from each team that has played about the great condition of the field. I have to thank the parents for their hard work and dedication in making the field look so good."

Joanie Wemken, who started the game on the mound and took the loss, gave up eight earned runs on just four hits. Joanie Wemken ran into trouble early as she walked six batters. With one out and the bases loaded in the top of the first, Lisa Nobles cracked a pitch just over the centerfield fence for a grand slam and a 5-0 lead.

The next batter, Monica Garcia, hit another ball over the fence as Midland pushed ahead 6-0.

Joanie Wemken then settled down and got the next batter to pop up to catcher Raechelle Wemken. The Lady Tigers got out of the inning by tagging Leslie Smith at home while trying to steal.

In the second inning, Tosha Pullen hit a three-run homer off of relief pitcher Amanda Huff, giving the Lady Rebels a 12-0 lead.

The Lady Tigers got on the board in the bottom of the second inning when Huff hit a hustling triple to the right centerfield fence. She scored on an overthrow. It was the first run scored on the Lady Rebels this season.

Coach Hicks was quick to praise the Lady Tigers because they did not give up.

"Adversity sometimes brings a team together and this team is becoming close-knit and will be strong and ready when the district race begins in two weeks," Hicks said.

"Our tough pre-district schedule should help us when we begin district play (March 10 in Granbury). The combined records of the teams we have played are 25-2 and we have played tough against all of our opponents," the coach said. "The Midland Lee coach came over and told the girls that he thought we have a good team in Snyder. He also told me that if we catch the home runs, the game would only have been 8-1."

The Lady Tigers were to play Big Spring on Saturday. Their next home game will be Tuesday at 6 p.m. against Odessa Permian.

Holyfield clears another hurdle

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Former heavyweight champion Evander Holyfield won another round in his effort to return to the ring, convincing Nevada boxing officials to lift his medical suspension.

But Holyfield still needs to find a state to license him before resuming his boxing career.

State boxing officials gave Holyfield a split decision Friday in his bid to fight again, lifting his suspension after hearing testimony he had no current heart problems.

Members of the Nevada State Athletic Commission, however, stopped short of endorsing Holyfield's plan to fight again, saying there still were questions that needed to be answered before he could be licensed in the state.

"This is not to say we will issue Evander Holyfield a license," said Dr. James Nave, the commission chairman. "It is to say we will not sit up here being pompous and say another state can't."

The 4-1 vote to lift the suspension imposed on Holyfield after he had heart problems following a loss last April to Michael Moorer. That action clears the way for Holyfield to seek licensing in any state.

Two Snyder girls place at Frenship

WOLFFORTH — Two Snyder tracksters placed Friday in final round field events in the ABC Tiger Relays held at Frenship High School.

Bianca Rocha of Snyder tied for fourth in the shot put with a heave of 30-8. Amy Yoder of Lamesa won the event with a 34-63/4 effort.

In high jump, Snyder's Jina Miller earned fifth place with a leap of 4-9. Teammates Mechelle Abboytt and Regina Holt of Pampa tied for first in high jump with a 5-0 effort.

The track meet was to continue Saturday with more than 40 teams entered.

The former champion, who was not at the meeting, reportedly plans to do so in New Jersey, with a proposed fight May 20 at Atlantic City against Ray Mercer.

"It's up to where he may go in the world whether they want to license him or not," said Marc Ratner, the commission's executive director.

Also at Friday's meeting, Holyfield had been seeking a license to box, but his attorney withdrew the request at the last minute without explanation.

Commissioners indicated that the former champion might have a tougher time getting licensed than having his medical ban lifted.

Roby nips Highland; Lady Jays are clipped

Brett Miller filled the net with 27 points Friday but it was two points too few as Highland slipped to Roby, 55-53, in a Class A boys bi-district playoff at Scurry County Coliseum.

Miller led all scorers but was the only Hornet player to land in double figures. Jason Osuna led Roby's more balanced attack with 19 points. Shea Feagan added 11.

Highland had an opportunity to win the game or send it into overtime, but missed a last-second shot. Roby, 24-5, advances in the playoffs. Highland's season ends at 20-6.

In other playoff action, Jayton girls were eliminated in the first round of the Region II-A tournament in Abilene with a 61-50 loss to Brock.

The Lady Jays, coached by Snyder native Randy Courtney, were searching for their fourth regional title in seven years. Jayton reached the Class A state championship game last year.

Jayton, 23-8, led by as many as six points in the game, but went cold in the mid-third quarter and never recovered. The Lady Jays were outscored 18-8 in the fourth.

Brook Baldrige led Jayton with 14 points. Marci Foster had 10.

Brock, 24-9, got 20 points from Ashley Cole and 16 from Amanda Gilbert. Kimberly Branch added 12.

Brock was to take on Robert Lee, a 58-43 winner over Water Valley, at 9:30 a.m. Saturday as the tournament continued.

Jennifer Scott put in 22 points and Jaclyn Waldrop got 14 for Robert Lee, now 20-11. Christy Lacy had 13 for Water Valley, 16-13, in a losing effort.

Robert Lee's boys also won in playoff action Friday. In a Class A bi-district game at Abilene High, the Steers caged Trent's Gorillas 82-48.

Aaron Hood paced Robert Lee with 24 points. Eric Hood had 11 and Lee McCowin added 10. Trent, which trailed 14-4 at the first-quarter buzzer and was outscored 24-8 in the third period, got 16 points from David Boles and 14 from Ben Roberts.

Robert Lee, 25-3, advances. The Gorillas end their season with a 17-10 record.

Pacers win fifth straight

Spurs crunch pistons; Mavericks are netted

By The Associated Press
The Indiana Pacers are starting another second-half surge.

Just like last season, when they went 24-12 after the All-Star break, the Pacers seem to have waited to make their move.

After beating Milwaukee 98-86 Friday night for their fifth consecutive victory, they are 5-1 since the break and just one game back of first-place Charlotte in the Central Division. The victory was the closest outcome of the five-game winning streak.

"Our team said that the time to turn it on has come," reserve guard Byron Scott said. "Everyone has been picking up their game."

The San Antonio Spurs and the Los Angeles Lakers both have four-game winning streaks going.

"These guys are so competitive," said Lakers coach Del Harris, whose team outlasted the Hornets in overtime to win 95-93 behind Vlade Divac's 25 points and 24 rebounds. "I'm amazed at the heart our players have."

In other games, it was New Jersey 114, Dallas 104; Atlanta 107, Washington 92; Orlando 129, Boston 103; Miami 91, Chicago 83; San Antonio 114, Detroit 97; Phoenix 118, the Los Angeles Clippers 106; Portland 114, Utah 101; and Seattle 90, Denver 86.

Spurs 114, Pistons 97
David Robinson scored 37 points as San Antonio beat Detroit for the Spurs' 13th win in 15 games.

Sean Elliott had 24 points against his old team and helped lead Pistons rookie Grant Hill to nine points. Dennis Rodman added 21 rebounds.

Joe Dumars led the visiting Pistons with 34 points, and Allan

Houston added 19.
Nets 114, Mavericks 104
Dallas lost Jim Jackson, then they lost the game.

The Mavericks' leading scorer suffered a severely sprained ankle in the first quarter.

Rex Walters scored a career-high 17 points for New Jersey and keyed a 16-2 fourth-quarter spurt that decided the game. Derrick Coleman had 23 points, Chris Morris 20 and Armon Gilliam 17 for the Nets.

Jamal Mashburn led the visiting Mavericks with 32 points.

Lakers 95, Hornets 93, OT
Elden Campbell's jumper with 2.5 seconds remaining in overtime gave Los Angeles the victory.

The Lakers scored the final seven points of the extra session. Anthony Peeler added 27 points, including a career-best six 3-pointers on eight attempts, for the Lakers. Campbell finished with 18 points.

Alonzo Mourning led the visiting Hornets with 29 points. Larry Johnson added 22, including a 3-pointer that sent the game into overtime.

Hawks 107, Bullets 92
Mookie Blaylock's four 3-pointers set a club record for treys in a season as Atlanta sent Washington to its sixth straight loss.

Blaylock, who finished with 25 points, has 122 3-pointers this season, two more than Dominique Wilkins had in 1992-93.

Steve Smith scored 27 for the visiting Hawks, while Grant Long had 16 points and 13 rebounds.

Chris Webber scored 24 points and Juwan Howard 17 for Washington. The Bullets have lost 12 of 13 overall and six straight at home.

Magic 129, Celtics 103

Harris wins writing award

By Shirley A. Gorman
SDN News Editor

Nancy Harris put her dream to become a writer on hold while she married and raised two daughters. Three years ago she enrolled in her first creative writing class at Western Texas College and she has been writing ever since.

Her perseverance has begun to bear fruit as she recently won a national award, the Iliad Literary Award. Along with the prestige of winning the award, she will also receive a check for $1,000.

The work has also received the Presidential Award, marking it as the best of all the 1994 Iliad award winners.

Harris wrote the winning poem, "Sympathique," in response to a young daughter's heartbreak over losing a first love.

It will be published in "Chapter One, The Laureates of Musing," a private anthology collection sold through subscription only.

The good news came via a telephone call in January. Nancy was very surprised that one of the two poems she had submitted had done so well.

"Sympathique" was one of 8,000 entries, of which 100 received honorable mention. From those, the winner was selected.

Harris submitted her poems in October and was later notified that both had been accepted for publication. Nancy declined to order the book or other merchandise offered.

At that point she said, "I decided if this was just a gimmick then I surely would not win anything else since I never ordered anything from the company."

But she did win. And she will receive a courtesy copy of the book when it is published later this year.

Harris enjoys writing poetry because it gives her the chance to express "quick thoughts." But her real love is short story writing — usually mainstream fiction. She currently has three short stories out that will be judged within the next three months.

Harris does not write children's fiction, but has been told that she has an "ear for listening to children" because children always appear in her stories.

She is currently writing a story based on something she first thought about several years ago.

As with "Sympathique," her writings reflect her observations, feelings and attitudes. "If I know the characters I can build a story around them," she said.

One of her goals is to write stories that "people will not want to end." That's the greatest compliment a writer can receive, she explained. But she enjoys earning money through her writing also.

Harris is currently entering writing contests not only for the experience but also for the exposure. She wants to learn how to "study the markets," a valuable aid to any writer.

Harris composes her stories and poems on an electric typewriter, but is considering purchasing a regular word processor with some of her winnings.

Harris prefers to write about what she knows. Her family has always been supportive. At first, she "followed them around, asking for advice." Now she is more relaxed. Today, her family comes to her, wanting to read her latest writings.

Harris has always enjoyed reading and writing. Even as a young girl, she wrote lengthy letters about her activities.

Harris enrolled in college after high school graduation but dropped out to marry and have a family.

Four years ago, she and her husband, Bill, and daughters Stacy and Megan moved to Snyder from Oklahoma. Since first enrolling at WTC, Harris has taken the creative course three times under Bill McGlothing.

"I learn something everytime I take the class," Harris said. "Mr. McGlothing is so supportive of everything everyone does. He usually always finds something to praise."

Harris did not enroll for classes this semester because she and her husband are remodeling their home. However, she is taking a correspondence writing course, but not through WTC.

Her long range goals in education include earning a degree in English literature. She has a medical records degree but has not worked in that field for years.

Bill is an anesthesiologist at Cogdell Memorial Hospital. Stacy is a junior nursing student at Lubbock Methodist Hospital and Megan is a junior at Snyder High School.

LaToya Jackson ordered to pay nightclub

NEW YORK (AP) — LaToya Jackson's premature adieu caused much ado at the Moulin Rouge — $550,000 worth.

The entertainer was ordered to pay that much to the Paris nightclub because she abruptly ended a 1993 performance run with several months left on her contract. Jackson had asked State Supreme Court Justice Carol Arber to delay enforcement of the French court's judgment while she appealed, but the judge said in ruling made public Friday that under French law, Jackson's 90-day appeal period had expired.

Key Simpson witness agrees to return next week to testify

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The witness who O.J. Simpson hopes will give him an alibi dodged a jail term of her own and tearfully agreed to testify next week — in the middle of the prosecution's case — rather than flee to her native El Salvador.

"I will do it for you, your honor," Rosa Lopez told Judge Lance Ito on Friday night after a long and tumultuous day of emotional testimony.

Lopez, a maid who worked next door to Simpson's estate, is expected to testify Monday that Simpson's Bronco was parked outside his house about the time that prosecutors claim he murdered his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.

Even though Lopez is a defense witness, Ito will allow her to take the stand five weeks into the prosecution's case because he's afraid she'll carry out her threat to flee to her homeland to escape harassment by reporters.

During an all-day hearing, Simpson's lawyers pleaded with the judge to make sure they wouldn't lose the testimony of one of their most important witnesses.

The prosecution argued that Lopez was bluffing, and — while questioning her — caught her lying about booking a one-way plane ticket.

At first the judge agreed to a defense request to put Lopez's testimony on videotape in case she's not able to testify when the defense presents its case. The videotaping was to take place Friday night, without the jury present.

But then Ito changed his mind and hastily summoned the jury for a nighttime trial session at which Lopez would have taken the stand. Most of the jurors showed up in sweatpants and T-shirts.

Ito changed his mind again after Deputy District Attorney Marcia Clark — the single mother of two boys, ages 3 and 5 — reminded him she couldn't work late because of child-care problems. Attorneys for the defense and Lopez argued unsuccessfully against the delay.

"I don't want to be here any longer," Lopez said, speaking through an interpreter. "All these reporters have destroyed my life. I can't go out anywhere. I am so afraid of so many things I don't know what to say. I promise to come today because I was promised this was going to finish today and then I could go to El Salvador."

The judge explained to Lopez that she could promise to return Monday or he would throw her in jail for the weekend. Lopez tearfully promised to return as long as the judge kept the media away.

Ito's ruling was a setback for the prosecution. By putting Lopez on the stand now, instead of during the defense portion of the case, Simpson's lawyers can interrupt the story the prosecution is trying to tell and blunt its impact.

Prosecutors called the video idea a ploy to avoid having her confront the jury, and sought to show that Lopez had no plans to leave and should be compelled to testify when the defense case begins, perhaps in April.

Rangers graduate without comrades

FORT BENNING, Ga. (AP) — Without tears on a day of celebration, a new class of U.S. Army Rangers received the patches earned at the end of 68 grueling days of training, and remembered four comrades who died along the way.

"It's a celebratory mood right now, but we all feel a loss," said 2nd Lt. Jon Terhune of Lexington, Ky.

"We'll never forget the guys," said 2nd Lt. Aaron Loudon of London, Ohio. "They're our Ranger buddies."

FCC official unaware of key ownership details about Fox

WASHINGTON (AP) — A key regulatory official involved in the 1985 decision that paved the way for the creation of the Fox network said he was not aware at that time that an Australian-based company controlled by Rupert Murdoch had put up virtually all of the money for the venture.

The Federal Communications Commission is investigating whether Fox misled the commission about its ownership structure 10 years ago when seeking approval to buy six TV stations that became the foundation of the network.

"At no time was I aware that News Corp. would own 99 percent of the equity or any percentage above 25 percent," Roy Stewart said Friday in a document filed as part of the investigation into Fox's ownership.

By law, foreign companies are not allowed to own more than a 25 percent stake in a U.S. broadcast station unless the FCC says it is in the public interest.

When the FCC approved the Fox transaction in 1985, Stewart, now the agency's top broadcast regulator, was chief of the division responsible for processing Fox's applications.

March 10 last day to apply for graduation

The last day to make application for graduation from Western Texas College for the spring 1995 semester has been extended to March 10. The previously announced date was this coming Friday, March 3.

Students can pick up applications in the Administration Building at the Registrar's Office. They must then go to Mickey Baird's office in the student center to be measured for their cap and gown. The measuring will begin this Wednesday. The last day to be measured will be March 29.

School Wellness Week observed by local schools

February 20-24 was School Wellness Week and Snyder Independent School District observed the occasion in several ways.

Using donations and a small sum of budgeted funds, school nurses made faculty and students a little more aware of their health.

Beginning Tuesday, health remedies were distributed to each SISD employee daily. Health awareness cartoons with sugar-free gum and candy were distributed. Fat information cards and fat-free low cal recipes were handed out the remaining two days. Special banners and bulletin boards have been on display for students at each campus to remind them to practice good health habits.

Parent councils have provided healthy snack trays for the faculty members and a drawing was held for a free one-month membership to the heart gym at Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

Drawings were also held on each campus for prizes for students ranging in age from kindergarten to high school. Prizes included one week of free Tae Kwon Do lessons, courtesy of Greg Gafford; one week of free gymnastic lessons, courtesy of Kay Porter; and four free passes to swim at the college pool courtesy of Mike Harrison.

Other prizes included soccer balls, basketballs, footballs, baseballs, softballs, jump ropes, power grips and T-balls.

This is only the beginning for the school wellness program. The health service department plans to expand wellness week in the 1995-96 school year.

Jones were the soap opera's "happily married couple." But "General Hospital's" writers decided to "shake things up" a few months ago.

Maule said they are now "looking at marriage more realistically. It is not 'and they lived happily ever after.'"

He believes that through Jones and his wife, the writers are trying to show that a marriage can sink to the "bottomless pit of despair before coming out and finding true love again."

Jones and Bobby's marriage has experienced many highs and lows throughout the years, but never more than now. First they separated, contemplated divorce and then agreed to joint counseling, which is what the storyline is presently exploring.

Maule said this storyline is "reflecting what is going on in society. People who aren't happy with their marriage think divorce is the answer. But they end up marrying their problems again. If two people stick it out and both try, they can find a deeper, more passionate love than ever before."

In real life, Maule and Jackie Zeman, who plays Bobbie, are good friends and their children often play together.

Unlike his character, Maule is happily married to the former Laverne Nix of Snyder. They have two children, Lily, 6, who has won several trophies as an ice skater, and Hunter, who plays on a winning ice hockey team. Maule's stepson is 16 and an actor.

Maule considers his parents, George and Josie, as good marriage examples. They will celebrate their 53rd wedding anniversary in March. "They are still in love and it showed during the operation."

Maule's busy schedule on "General Hospital" does not allow him enough time off to pursue other acting commitments, but he is developing a successful weekend sideline career as a country singer of "Texas story songs."

His latest release, "Chameleon," is his second album and features songs he wrote. It is selling well in Europe and is now in its third pressing. It has recently become available at Blockbuster Music stores in the U.S.

The album features all of the top Texas players including George Strait and Jerry Jeff Walker band members. It was recorded in the Fire Station Studio in San Marcos.

On weekends, Maule is often making personal appearances in conjunction with this album. Engagements will include a stint on the "Mary Lou Henner" show to be aired in March.

He will also headline this year's L.A. County Fair which drew a crowd of 50,000 in 1994. He will also be opening for Martina McBride later this year.

As busy as Maule's schedule is, he said he tries not to have more than two weekend engagements per month because he wants to spend more time with his family.

With the recent award and a blossoming music career, things are definitely looking up for Maule and family. He is "living my dream."

While Maule never "aspired to be in a soap opera," he has always wanted to be in show business and "General Hospital" and his music career allow him to do just that.

Today, life for Maule and his family is on the upswing, a sharp contrast to slightly more than a year ago when the Los Angeles earthquake caused around $120,000 damage to their home. Recently, they have discovered another $15,000 to $20,000 in damages.

Maule said he and his family were lucky they were not injured in the early morning quake.

"It was amazing that we got out of the house in pitch blackness," he said. "God and luck led us out of the house." Though shattered glass was everywhere, they were not injured as they exited their home, wearing just their sleeping clothes, Maule said. The home is a 70-year-old structure which the Maules redesigned by building "a new house around it."

The new house had minimal structural damage, but Maule said the living room of the older home fell in. The consequences could have been devastating if they had been in the room at the time.

In his darkest hour immediately following the quake, Maule said, "I thought I faced bankruptcy." Through it all, his father kept his sense of humor — which helped Maule keep his, also. He laughed as he recalled what his father told him at the time, "Some of the best men I know have gone bankrupt."

Maule has two sisters. Charlotte Carey is the county auditor in Fort Stockton and Linda works for the CIA in Washington D.C. CIA rules prohibit publication of her last name, he said.

not seek re-election. The same day, David Holt filed for the post — also an at-large position. As yet, he is the only candidate.

At Ira, there are three places up for election, including one to fill out the term of Darryl Calley, who has resigned as Place 1 trustee. Former board member Sid Wall has filed for Place 1. The others, both full terms, are Place 6, held by Keith Clements, and Place 7, held by Doug White. Both Clements and White have filed for another term. As yet, they are unopposed.

The two at-large seats up for election on the Hermleigh ISD board are those held by Carole Haynes and Neil Beeks. Currently, no one has filed for either of the two positions.

Wild, tacky and outrageous begin Mardi Gras celebration

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Nothing succeeds like excess during Mardi Gras week. No costume is too gaudy, no drink is too strong and absolutely nothing is too outrageous.

The first wave of revelers put on their Mardi Gras party favors of cheap, plastic beads Friday and began the annual ritual of wandering into bars and Bourbon Street strip clubs.

Another sign of a party: the greasing of poles and columns to keep drunken revelers from climbing onto hotel and restaurant balconies. There's also the arrival of 50 state troopers to help 1,500 police officers keep the mayhem safe.

"Anybody who's going to think of committing a crime, when they turn their head, they're going to see a police officer," said Assistant Police Chief Mitchell Dusset.

As many as 300,000 tourists are expected to join the locals before Fat Tuesday, and the total crowd could swell to 1.2 million, police say. Hotel occupancy is running around 95 percent.

By midday Friday, Pat O'Brien's bar had as many parties as it could take.

"They're jammed in like sardines here," manager Pat Harding said. "Today, it's just unbelievable."

The Carnival season officially begins on Jan. 6, with mostly private parties and balls among the city's upper crust.

It culminates at midnight Tuesday, the last day of self-indulgent excess before Ash Wednesday and Lenten solemnity take hold in this heavily Roman Catholic city. When the party's over, police and garbage trucks herd people off the streets.

More than 40 parades roll through the streets of the city and its suburbs from Friday night until Tuesday.

There are celebrity parade marshals, such as actors Chuck Norris and John Larroquette. And floats with papier mache designs that look like exquisite works of art roll alongside tacky collections of bangles and sequins.

Town takes gangs too seriously, critics say

HARVARD, Ill. (AP) — A 15-year-old boy found out this one-cow town was serious about fighting gangs when police arrested him for wearing what they considered a gang symbol: a small Star of David dangling from a necklace.

Harvard, a former farm town 90 miles northwest of Chicago that's inching toward suburbanization, doesn't have a gang problem, doesn't want a gang problem, and has a two-year-old city ordinance to make sure it never gets a gang problem.

But some attorneys say the sweeping statute, which among other things says it is illegal "to wear known gang colors, emblems, or other gang insignia," is unlawful.

"We applaud the city for taking a stance," says attorney Charles Weech, who has challenged the measure on behalf of the teenager. "But it must be within the bounds of the Constitution."

It is hard to assess the actual threat that gangs pose to Harvard, population 6,000.

Police say about 35 town youngsters are gang members, and that Harvard's county, McHenry, has seen a jump in gang activity over the past decade.

Youngsters in town acknowledge there are drugs — mostly marijuana — at the high school and shrug when asked about gang problems.

Schools lecture them about the misdemeanor ordinance, which carries a maximum fine of up to $500, and, for the most part, they don't seem to mind complying.

But Mayor William LeFevre says 14 arrests were made last year for violating the ordinance. And he says it has proven effective.

The 15-year-old boy, who wasn't identified because he's a juvenile, was arrested last year as he walked home from school. One of the town's 13 officers spotted the Star of David, a symbol of Judaism that crime experts say can be a gang insignia.

The police officer questioned the boy, who is not Jewish, then took him to the station where he was charged.

Jewish institute recovers lost archives treasure trove

NEW YORK (AP) — A treasure trove of archives missing for 40 years has begun arriving in New York, and historians say it is a window on the vanished world of Eastern European Jews.

It includes eyewitness accounts of brutal Ukrainian pogroms, a schedule of lectures at a rabbinical school in Lithuania, and a collection of such village superstitions as: "If a pig carries straw in her mouth, there will be rain."

The 200 boxes of records, collected before World War II and presumed lost during the Nazi era and the Cold War, turned up in Lithuania's National Library two years ago.

About a third of the collection arrived in New York on Wednesday, and historians from YIVO, the Institute for Jewish Research, began combing through the material Thursday at their Manhattan offices.

It will take months to organize. The disorderly state of the archives, says YIVO Research Director Allan Nadler, is "almost symbolic of what happened to the Jews of Eastern Europe. Chaos. Torn pieces of paper. Fragments. Confusion."

A cursory look already has turned up many gems, including a portrait sketched and signed by Pablo Picasso of a popular Yiddish artist, Mane-Katz.

There's also a copy of a 1929 letter from Albert Einstein, who was a member of YIVO's board of directors, expounding on the importance of preserving "the spiritual and moral traditions of the Jewish people."

A collection of tattered Yiddish documents, some in neat handwritten script and others typed, include eyewitness accounts of pogroms waged against Ukrainian Jews between 1918 and 1920.

One paper painstakingly lists all 187 victims of a pogrom in the town of Dubova in 1919, from the 82-year-old rabbi, Moshe Aaron Bertochefsky, to 4-year-old Liba Liepas, the miller's granddaughter.

AIDS activists say GOP destroying key program

WASHINGTON (AP) — The mother of Ryan White, who died of AIDS five years ago, is urging Republicans not to cut the AIDS program that bears her son's name.

"The AIDS epidemic is sweeping the country, taking with it my son, your daughter, someone else's mother," said Jeanne White-Ginder.

"Congress can't turn its back on people with AIDS at this point in the crisis and expect not to face a crisis of its own — a crisis of confidence," she said at a news conference Friday.

House Republicans this week cut $13 million from this year's budget for the Ryan White CARE program. The money goes directly to states and cities to care for people with AIDS or the HIV virus that causes it.

Overall, GOP lawmakers in the House plan to cut $209 million from AIDS-related programs.

As part of a $17.5 billion reduction from this year's budget allocations, Republicans also would eliminate a housing program for those with AIDS, which has a $186 million budget, and cut $23 million from prevention programs run by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The announcements came just as the country learned that Olympic gold medalist and diving great Greg Louganis has the disease.

Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., called the cuts "one of the most appalling acts of callousness that I have seen."

Moon dust for sale at space memorabilia weekend auction

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Mission Control to astro-buffs: Moon dust, flight suits, Buzz Aldrin's 25-year-old dessert and a plastic mermaid that's flown in space are up for grabs this weekend.

The two-day sale of space stuff could bring $1 million — minus the auction house commission — for about 1,400 items collected since Nazi Germany sent up V-2 rockets a half-century ago. Superior Stamp & Coin is selling the memorabilia on behalf of individual owners, including some former astronauts.

Offerings include moon dust lifted with tape from David R. Scott's Apollo 15 space suit, estimated to fetch more than $15,000.

The dust isn't authenticated by NASA because particles of the moon's surface are national treasures and private ownership is forbidden.

But Jim Gooding, curator of lunar samples at NASA's Johnson Space Center in Houston, doubts that would-be buyers have to worry.

"One is betting NASA and the FBI ... have more important things to do," he said, than investigate whether someone has bought a smidgen of contraband moon dirt. Other controversial mementos are for sale, including one of the commemorative postal envelopes that astronaut Al Worden snuck aboard Apollo 15 in 1971.

By stashing the envelopes, the space travelers violated the NASA principle that "employees should not be making money from the program," former NASA general counsel Neil Hosenball said Thursday. "It was a big scandal back then."

The envelope bears Hosenball's initials from when he catalogued the envelopes during a NASA investigation and congressional hearings. The items eventually were returned to the astronauts, and one was auctioned for $4,000 last year.

Denver's old airport packs up, gets ready to end operations

DENVER (AP) — All their bags are packed, they're ready to go. The signs of Stapleton International Airport's impending demise are everywhere: from the shuttered stores to the workers carting off neon beer logos.

Jack Lynd and Dave Brown, who have been cutting hair side-by-side at Stapleton for 25 years, plan to hang up their scissors when Stapleton shuts down Tuesday and the new $4.9 billion Denver International Airport finally opens.

"The last days have been real emotional, saying good-bye," Lynd said Friday.

Lynd and Brown, both 66, recalled their first barber shop in the basement of the airport that's just one year younger than they are. "They pumped outside air in to us," Lynd said. "Every now and then a jet would back up into our fresh air and fill us full of kerosene."

Nearby, John Richardson was shining shoes, just like he's done since 1970, when he charged 35 cents a pair. His most unusual job? A pair of ostrich-skin boots worn by a gambler named Texas Slim.

"I'll miss coming out here," the 69-year-old Richardson said. "I've seen a lot of the airport built."

For most employees, though, the move simply means "same job, different location," said Tommy Flowers, a 23-year-old skycap.

Along the terminal main terminal Friday, some stores were already closed, while others offered sales on whatever merchandise they had left. Walls were bare, cardboard boxes were stacked in corners and showcases stood empty.

Over the loudspeaker, a kindly monotonous recording reminded folks not to smoke inside the terminal.

Marilyn Sandau, a Denver native, wandered the deserted third floor, taking pictures and remembering the Stapleton of her childhood. She was five years old when she witnessed a crash while at an airshow with her parents in 1941:

"A storm came up, the pilots went under a tree and were electrocuted," Sandau said. "It was nothing but a dirt parking lot then, and out front they had restrooms."

Snyder man excelled at helping amputees

Terry McClain grew up in Snyder, graduated from high school and left home to find his niche in the world.

Both poor and black, college seemed a faroff dream in 1958 when he graduated from Lincoln School — one of the school's first four graduates.

Help from local benefactors, coupled with determination and hard work, helped the young man earn a college degree in physical education. He later studied corrective therapy, now called kinesiotherapy, eventually specializing in amputee rehabilitation. He also took part in a prostheses research project and helped design a removable plaster prosthesis which alleviates some problems associated with amputee surgery.

Terry has received several awards in his field and was nominated for the G.J. Sutton award in 1979, the year it was created.

As a newly certified correctional therapist in 1968, Terry entered what was then virtually a white man's field. Perseverance and a stern commitment to his patients helped Terry overcome the obstacles prejudice placed in his path.

For more than 20 years, he worked in three veterans hospitals in the U.S., ultimately being named head of the kinesiotherapy section (rehab medicine service) at Audie Murphy Memorial Hospital in San Antonio. He joined the hospital in 1974, and retired in September of 1993. While in San Antonio, he helped design a removal plaster prosthesis, a major contribution in prosthetics.

He has returned to Snyder and since November of 1994 has been a physical therapy technician at Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

At Cogdell, Terry is learning to employ modalities like heat, electricity and water to help patients recover. His work within the VA system primarily involved helping veterans regain some or all of their mobility through prostheses.

Kinesiotherapy teaches patients body movements, whereas physical therapy uses the different modalities to facilitate recovery.

At VA hospitals, Terry had leeway to treat the patients as he felt necessary, though he always informed doctors of their patients' progress. In his present position, Terry precisely follows doctors' orders.

Terry's first VA job was in Fort Mead, S.D., where he was employed from April of 1968 to March of the following year.

Though he said he was the "only black man" in town, Terry was accepted and "treated like a human being." It was a good beginning for the young man who was married with one son. A daughter was born later, but the marriage ended in divorce in 1987. He has not remarried.

He transferred to Alexander, La., where he worked in the kinesiotherapy section at the Alexander VA Hospital from March of 1969 to December of 1974.

"That was something Terry admits 'I should never have done,' because from the beginning, 'They let me know I was black.'"

It was the little things that irritated Terry the most. For instance, he had to change his clothes in a different room. Complaints and comments about everything he did were almost an everyday occurrence.

Also, still relatively new in the field of corrective therapy, no one wanted to listen to him, "unless a white person backed me up," he said.

It was frustrating, Terry said, because "I did not want to fight; I just wanted to treat patients."

The situation improved when a hospital administrator championed his cause. When that person transferred to Waco, Terry said he decided to request a transfer also because "I could see the handwriting on the wall."

At Audie Murphy in San Antonio, Terry advanced to head the kinesiotherapy section, a position he held from 1980 until 1993. He also earned performance awards in 1976 and 1980 and received numerous letters of commendation, not only for his expertise in the field but also because of his caring attitude toward patients.

While at Audie Murphy, Terry and Jerry Bridges, CPO, also designed a removal plaster prosthesis.

(See FOLKS On Page 2B)

PHYSICAL THERAPIST — Terry McClain devoted much of his working life to helping amputees and other veterans recover from injuries before joining the physical therapy department at Cogdell Memorial Hospital last November. A former resident, Terry graduated from Lincoln School in 1958. He is also a graduate of Hutson-Tollotson College in Austin. In addition, he completed correctional therapy training (now kinesiotherapy) in Temple. At left, Terry stands next to the whirlpool bath and at right he is shown putting the traction unit together. (SDN Staff Photos)

- Complete checklist for the state

This is not a field guide—the book's entries are full-length and packed with facts on bird behavior and natural history as well as identification tips. But its unique organization, according to birds' appearance and habitat rather than hard-to-see scientific details, makes it easy to use. And experienced birders will appreciate the intelligent, informative text by noted naturalist John L. Tveten.

In First Presbyterian Church...

Crawford, Morton married

Angela Christine Crawford and Bart Lane Morton were united in marriage at 3 p.m. on Dec. 31, 1994, in the First Presbyterian Church in Snyder with the Rev. Nan Crawford Swanson officiating.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Bob Snedeker of Snyder and Tom Crawford of Attica, Ind. The groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Toby Morton of Snyder. The bride's grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Richard Walkup of Kentland, Ind., and Clara Crawford of Attica. Step-grandmothers are Lois Crawford of Attica and Nellie Snedeker of Oxford, Ind. The groom's grandparents are Barney Murdoch of Jayton and Mr. and Mrs. A.C. Morton of Wink.

At the altar where their vows were exchanged, a heart-shaped candelabrum stood behind the cross with two seven-tier candelabra on either side. All were intertwined with ivy, pearls and baby's breath. The communion table, draped with a white, held the unity candle and family candles, on porcelain bases. The church pews and windows were marked with candles encased in glass and accented with pearls, fern and eucalyptus.

Candles were lighted by Ryan Crawford of Attica and Brian Crawford, brothers of the bride of Snyder.

Escorted down the aisle by her brother, Brian, the bride wore an elegant satin Lili gown, lavishly decorated with pearls and sequins, all through the bodice, the Basque waistline and flowing ballgown skirt. The full-length, tapered leg-o-mutton sleeves and sweetheart neckline were completed in the same design. The back of the gown featured an open keyhole bodice atop a candy box bow at the waist, and a cathedral-length train, trimmed with corded lace, pearls and sequins.

She chose a fingertip illusion veil with a pearl studded, double pouf attached to a forehead band of braided pearls and sequins.

In keeping with tradition, the bride carried a handkerchief that belonged to her great-grandmother Whaley. She wore a pearl necklace, earrings and bracelet, borrowed from the maid of honor, Dayla Church. She also borrowed a blue garter from Stephany Drummond. In her shoes she carried pennies minted in the years of their births.

The maid of honor and Theresa Stephens, bridesmaid, wore matching two-piece floral print dresses of predominate hunter green and cranberry, with a fitted bodice that flared at the waist and featured a keyhole back and sweetheart neckline. The dress, with a straight skirt was made by Sybil Reynolds. They both carried cascades of assorted silk flowers, satin ribbons and pearls.

Katlyn Walkup, cousin of the bride from Effingham, Ill., was flower girl. She wore the same pattern, floral print dress with a white eyelet collar and bloomers. She carried a hunter green basket with a satin lining and dried flowers.

The groom wore a black full-dress tuxedo with a white brocade vest and bow tie. Best man Brett Morton of Denton, brother of the groom, and groomsman Bert Merritt wore tuxedos like the groom's with hunter green cummerbunds and bow ties. The ringbearer, Erik Walkup, cousin of the bride from Effingham, also wore a matching tuxedo and hunter cummerbund and bow tie. He carried a heart-shaped white satin and lace pillow.

Guests were seated by Tracy Odom and Chad Cleckler, and registered by Melissa Mattox.

Prenuptial music was played by Lynn Wormeringer. A medley of love songs was played as guests and family members were seated. The mothers of the couple were seated by their sons, Brian and Brett, and lighted the candles beside the unity candle at the onset of the ceremony. The bridal party entered to "A March in C" and the bride entered to the traditional "Wedding March."

Bill Hodges sang "I Swear" before the Bible readings and "I Will Be Here" after the vows were spoken.

A reception was held in the basement of the church following the ceremony. The bride's table featured the bouquet, a three-tiered, stair-stepped white heart-shaped cake with cascading flowers that matched the bouquet. Also, a silver punch bowl and silver trays of nuts and mints in the image of brides and grooms, made by Suzie Burgess, graced the table. Hunter green and cranberry napkins, embossed with the bride's and groom's names and the wedding day, were displayed. The oval table was draped in white linen and lace, and accented with tulle bows and sashes. Serving were Sabrina Warren and Angie Robinson.

The groom's chocolate double horseshoe cake sat on an octagon table atop a white battenburg cloth. Coffee was served from a silver service. Serving were Amy Odom and the groom's sister-in-law, Christine Morton.

The cakes were made by Reta Graham. The church and basement were decorated by Helen Hatter and Becky Robinson. Mrs. Robinson also created the bouquets, corsages and boutonnières.

The bride was feted with a bridal shower at the church on Nov. 11, 1994, organized by Lou McMillan and hosted by several family friends. A lingerie shower in Lubbock was held in the home of Theresa Stephens.

After a honeymoon to Las Vegas, the couple are at home in Lubbock where they both attend Texas Tech University. The bride is doing her student teaching at Stubbs Elementary and the groom also works for Sam's.

sis which helps some amputees to begin walking two weeks after surgery.

At most medical facilities, amputees are not fitted for prosthetic devices until the surgical sites have fully healed. This prosthesis, however, is attached during the amputation surgery.

The key to recovery is getting the patient up and walking as soon as possible, Terry explained.

Originally from Gladewater, Terry and his family moved to Snyder in 1945. His parents were sharecroppers and had lived off and on in Snyder for years before deciding to move here permanently. Now both deceased, his parents worked for many area farmers.

Terry, who played on the Lincoln football team, well remembers a game with Vernon — one of only two games they played that year — because "they beat us up real bad."

training before he could participate in the graduation ceremony in 1963.

Whenever Terry returned to Snyder during school breaks he often visited the two men.

Another benefactor was Daniel Johnson, the principal at Lincoln, who always let Terry substitute teach when he was in town.

Terry also worked for the college dormitory part-time.

Having been reared in the country, Terry said the only jobs he knew black men could hold were to preach or teach. He decided to become a teacher and majored in physical education, but he never actually taught.

At the rate of $16 a day substitute's pay, teachers told him that he actually made more money than they did because of all their payroll deductions.

As soon as he completed college requirements, military service claimed the next two year's of "The key to recovery is getting the patients up and walking as soon as possible."

— Terry McClain

He laughed when he recalled "looking to the sidelines for a relief player," and seeing no one but the coaches. "I had to stay in the whole game," he recalled.

As a senior, Terry also participated in track, winning the 100- and 220-yard dashes and the 180-yard low hurdles in the district meet held at Levelland that year.

He was also the first black in Snyder to win a state track meet medal, second place in the low hurdles. Calvin Edwards was his track coach. Lois Powell was the senior class sponsor.

While in high school, Terry worked off and on for Dr. Robert Kidd, DVM, now retired.

The eighth child in a family of 14 children, Terry did not dare dream that he could attend college, but — when he least expected it — fate in the form of caring benefactors stepped in to turn things around.

Terry's dream to go to college inched toward reality when he met Rev. Cecil Williams, then minister of the Huston-Tillotson campus church in Austin, when Williams spoke at Lincoln's graduation ceremony. He offered Terry a $200 a month academic scholarship.

A few days later, Snyder policeman Fred Davis, now deceased, told Terry that the First United Methodist Church's Hayley Class wanted to help someone attend college. As a result, they agreed to provide the $42 a month room and board required by Huston-Tillotson.

Another benefactor was Roy Lashaway, who is also since deceased. Terry was drafted into the Army just three months shy of college graduation. He sought but was denied a three-month extension until Lashaway intervened. Terry was allowed to complete his college work, but entered basic his life. He later entered the federal service because he thought it would be the best way for him to advance.

Terry completed basic training at Fort Polk, La. He was later stationed at San Dia Base (now Kirkland) in Albuquerque, N.M. He attended nuclear weapons school, learning how to conduct electrical tests for nuclear weapons. He was transferred to Fort Mead, Md. but never worked in his chosen field.

Instead, Terry was put on the inter-sports football team as soon as they learned he could play.

After he was discharged, Terry went to work for the Smithsonian Institution as a museum tech, a job he held for two years.

Then came the National Institute of Health where he served as a lab technician for two years. Ranked as a GS3 in government service at the time, Terry was married and had one child.

"I looked at my options and I was frustrated," Terry said. "My son was a year old and I needed to earn more money."

Former Congressman Omar Burleson arranged for Terry to continue to receive wages from the NIH while he completed the three month course at Temple VA Hospital. His tuition was paid through funds generated from the Hazlewood Act.

Upon completion, Terry said he was upgraded to a GS6 as soon as he began his first VA hospital job.

Terry is a 32nd degree Mason, though presently inactive.

In his spare time, he likes to collect antiques, BB guns, stamp machines, manual typewriters and "tinker with cars." He also likes to attend flea markets.

His son, Terence, lives in San Antonio and a daughter, Monica Melissa, is a college senior studying psychology.

Cows wear reflectors at night

By 3-2-1 CONTACT Magazine Live Stock-ings

Cover up those calves — with stockings for cows!

That's exactly what farmers are doing in Beverly, a town in northern England. In the last two years, 40 cows there have been killed by cars. They got hit after wandering onto the road that crosses their pasture.

So the cows now wear reflective white-and-yellow leggings. That way, they can be seen from the road at night.

Just one question: Do the stockings come in dairy queen-size? Why Do People Get Muscle Pains and Cramps?

You're running as fast as you can when suddenly, "Ouch!" a sharp pain slices your ribs. You've got a stitch in your side. Later on, your leg muscles might hurt, too.

That "stitch" is a cramp in the muscles that help you breathe. A cramp is a strong, sharp muscle contraction. It's painful — and it really cramps your style! A muscle can cramp if it doesn't get enough fresh blood or if your body loses a lot of salt by sweating.

Hard-working muscles also hurt when lactic acid builds up in them. This acid is a waste product formed by muscles working extra-hard. It can be produced when you're running fast and your bloodstream can't bring enough oxygen to the muscles. Lactic acid piles up in muscles, bringing work to a halt and lots of aches and pains.

Exercise also tears muscle fibers — and that's a pain, too. An achy, stiff muscle is called a "charley horse." But muscles grow as they repair.

New farm fresh look for children

By The Associated Press Country looks, bright prints, and sports motifs continue their popularity in children's lines this spring, with generous portions of sensible denims, cords, chambrays and knits.

An indigo chambray vest and sarong skirt combination for girls, embroidered with sunflowers, is part of the OshKosh B'Gosh line. The vest and skirt can be topped with an embroidered knit shirt with a bow. Girls also can wear OKBG's pretty Hawaiian fruit print sunfrock.

The classic bib overall from the company is represented with an updated minitripe for boys or white-island multi-stripe shortalls for toddlers. The team theme is carried out in the OKBG Hall of Fame Line, featuring a striped jersey baseball shirt with embroidery paired with striped jersey slider shorts, or color block jeans shorts in denim stripes, topped with a screenprint jersey T-shirt.

Lots of farm-fresh looks from the Children's Place include blue denims, striped jerseys and chinos. A duck field vest printed with daisies for a little girl can be worn with indigo denim pleated walking shorts.

For boys, Children's Place offers a color block canvas barn jacket, a striped Henley shirt, and denim carpenter pants.

Knit one, purl one

John Ruskin, the English author and art critic, wrote, "Value is the life-giving power of anything; cost, the quantity of labour required to produce it; price, the quantity of labour which its possessor will take in exchange for it."

In bridge, sometimes exchanging one trick for another has great value, making the difference between success and failure.

On today's deal, West led the club king against four hearts. Then he switched to his singleton trump, which South won in hand with the queen. South saw that, from the auction, West held the spade ace. And diamonds would have to break 3-2, so that South's spade losers could be discarded.

South's first thought was an avoid-ance play in diamonds. He could lead twice through West, ducking in the dummy if West had to play the queen. However, as you can see, this line would have failed. East would have won a diamond trick and switched to a spade, defeating the contract.

Then South saw the right line. After winning the trump switch at trick two, declarer entered dummy with a trump, called for the club queen and discarded a diamond from hand. West was welcome to the trick, but now dummy's diamonds could be established without letting East get the lead. As a trump entry remained in the dummy, West had to cash his spade ace to stop the overtrick.

Hopefully the cost — the quantity of labor — required by South to produce this play wasn't so great that he made tired errors on later deals!

Phillip Alder's new book, "Get Smarter at Bridge," is available, autographed upon request, for $14.95 from P.O. Box 169, Roslyn Hts., NY 11577-0169.

Couple married in home ceremony

LUBBOCK — Lisa Michelle McNew and Jackie Kevin Gaines were married in a 3 p.m. home ceremony in Lubbock on Feb. 4. Steve Highfield, youth director of Calvary Baptist Church, officiated the double-ring ceremony.

The bride's parents are Jerry and Johnnie McNew of Snyder and the bridegroom's parents are Jack and Sandra Gaines of Levelland.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and her matron of honor was her mother. The groom's father served as best man. The wedding cake was designed and decorated by the bride's sister-in-law, Cathy McNew of Snyder.

Mr. and Mrs. Gaines are employed at St. Mary of the Plains Hospital. She is a nurse and he is a respiratory therapist.

AMERICAN GOVERNMENT PROGRAM — "The Foundation of American Government," by David Barton of Aledo, was a program presented by Darold Baldwin, Mitchell/Scurry Baptist Association director of missions, to the Daughters of the American Revolution's recent meeting at the Snyder Country Club. Hostesses were Dot Casey, pictured right, and Jane Hinton, not pictured. The next DAR meeting will be held at noon at the country club on May 9. (SDN Staff Photo by Jo Ann Nunley)

Teach children range hazards early

Almost from the time they can walk and talk, children are warned about the potential dangers of hot kitchen ranges, but another serious kitchen hazard — range tipping — is seldom considered.

As a matter of fact, most people are simply unaware that free-standing ranges will tip forward if too much pressure or weight is placed on the open oven door. This can result in injury by the tipping range, and scalds and burns caused by hot pans and cooking foods falling from the range top.

While anyone can be a victim of a tipped range, Whirlpool home economists point out that small children and elderly persons are especially vulnerable to accidental range tipping.

They caution: never lean on an open oven door. This applies particularly to older people who may have difficulty stooping or bending. Children should be taught never to use an open oven door as a seat or stepping stool.

You should check to see whether your range is installed with an anti-tipping device that secures it to the floor or wall to prevent tipping. All new free-standing and slide-in ranges sold in America today must include such a device. If yours is an older unit it may not be so equipped.

Anti-tip devices are made available free of charge by Whirlpool to owners of older Whirlpool brand gas and electric ranges. Just call the Whirlpool Consumer Assistance Center, toll-free, at 1-800-253-1301.

Sunday, Feb. 26, 1995

Favorable career changes could be in the offing for you in the year ahead. Two obstructions might be removed from your path, exposing a new route to success.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Conditions could be propitious for advancing a secret ambition today. Wait for the green light, then move full-speed ahead. Pisces, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $2 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) One of your greatest assets today will be your skill at getting your points across. To your credit, you'll do this by teaching, not by preaching.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) The trend is in your favor for joint ventures, especially if you're involved with a group you were successful with in the past.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today you're not likely to ignore or discount the good ideas of others. You will, however, find ways to expand and improve upon their ideas.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) There is a possibility you might reap hidden benefits today from a situation someone else created. He/she will profit from this as well.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Arrangements in which you work with others have a strong chance for success today. This is a time when everyone involved might gain in some manner.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Even if you have to contend with difficult conditions today, don't be disconcerted or think of quitting. Consistency can turn things to your advantage.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You are better equipped to operate mentally than physically today. Let associates do the heavy lifting while you design the levers and pulleys.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You may start receiving returns from things you have paid for already. Eventually you should get everything to which you're entitled.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today you'll know exactly what needs to be done, and more importantly, how you can accomplish all the things you set out to do.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You are apt to be clever and prudent with dollars and sense today. This is a combination that spells profit.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you want to be the center of attention today, underplay your role. You come across as more charismatic and appealing when you're low-key.

Monday, Feb. 27, 1995

Two of your favorite people from the past might play new roles in your life in the year ahead. Everyone will enjoy getting together again.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) This could be a productive day for you, provided no one is looking over your shoulder giving you instructions. You will find dictators irritating, not inspiring. Major changes are ahead for Pisces in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $2 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You may feel very determined to do things your way today. Your ideas will have merit, but pay attention to other people's ideas as well.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Give top priority today to matters that effect your material security. Do not let insignificant issues switch you to an unproductive track.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today you may deal with persons who aren't as broad-minded or creative as you'd hoped. Discussing expansive plans and programs with small thinkers may prove frustrating.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Today it may be difficult to distinguish between persons trying to take advantage of you and those who really need you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Friends who stood by their word in the past are apt to do so again in arrangements at this time. However, someone who didn't still can't be relied upon.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Although you think you're heading in the right direction, that doesn't mean your objective will be achieved today. Allow time for adjustments that may be required.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be patient with your long range plans today. If you try to accelerate the process before its time, it could set you back instead of moving you forward.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) New people who deal with you today will go away thinking you're a pretty nifty person. However, your family members may get a different impression.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Associates will strive to help you today if you're not pushy or demanding. Instead of dictating terms, use diplomacy and gratitude.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In a collaborative effort today, don't take any action without the consent of everyone involved. You will be held accountable for what you initiate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Friends will only back you up if they feel you're supportive of them. If you compete against them today, it could be every man for himself.

"Family Focus"

By James C. Dobson, Ph.D.

QUESTION: You stated on your television program once that the sexual revolution has resulted in a higher incidence of certain physical problems. Explain what you mean.

DR. DOBSON: I was discussing that observation with my guest, the late Dr. David Hernandez, an obstetrician and gynecologist from the University of Southern California School of Medicine.

He had noted an increase in the presence of the disorders which are known as "soft spots" for emotional pressures—gastrointestinal (digestive) disorders, migraine headaches, high blood pressure, colonitis and general fatigue.

Dr. Hernandez believed, and I agree, that these medical problems are more prevalent among those who struggle to overcome sexual mediocrity—those who are now under such intense pressure to "perform" in bed. The stress and anxiety that they feel over their orgasmic inadequacies actually affects their physical health adversely.

Incidentally, Dr. Hernandez commented further that many men and women engage in sexual intercourse for various illicit motives. He listed a few of those motives:

1. Sex is often permitted as a marital duty.
2. It is offered to repay or secure a favor.
3. It represents conquest or victory.
4. It stands as a substitute for verbal communication.
5. It is used to overcome feelings of inferiority (especially in men who seek proof of their masculinity.)
6. It is an enticement for emotional love (especially by women who use their bodies to obtain masculine attention.)
7. It is a defense against anxiety and tension.
8. It is provided or withheld in order to manipulate the partner.
9. It is engaged in for the purpose of bragging to others.

These "non-living" reasons for participating in the sex act rob it of meaning and reduce it to an empty and frustrating social game. Sexual intercourse in marriage should bring pleasure, of course, but it should also provide a method of communicating a very deep emotional commitment.

QUESTION: My 10-year-old can be very irresponsible. He hates to work and he has lost or broken everything of value he's ever been given. I've read many books about teaching children to be responsible and mature, and we're working on these objectives. My problem is that I lose patience with him too often. I yell at him and accuse him of being stupid and lazy. Then I feel terrible about my lack of control. Am I damaging his self-esteem by these outbursts?

DR. DOBSON: Children are usually very resilient and most of them can absorb occasional parental outbursts without sustaining permanent harm. In fact, your displeasure is part of the teaching process whereby a parent nudges his child in the direction of maturity.

However, if you realize you are over-reacting frequently or habitually, especially if it involves labeling him unfairly, you would do well to remember what someone has said about the way people perceive themselves:

We are not what we think we are...
We are not even what others think we are...
We are what we think others think we are.

There is a great truth to this statement. Each of us evaluate what we believe our associates are thinking about us, and then we often play the prescribed role. This explains why we wear a very different "face" with different groups.

A doctor may be an unsmiling professional with his patients, being reserved and wise in their presence. They "see" him that way and he complies.

That evening, however, he is reunited with his former college friends who remember him as a postadolescent screwball. His personality may oscillate 180 degrees between afternoon and night, being totally unrecognizable if seen by an amazed patient. Similarly, most of us are what we think others think we are.

That being true, your child will conform to the image he thinks you hold of him.

If you call him lazy and stupid, his behavior will prove that assessment to be correct. Fortunately, the opposite is also true. So whenever possible, control your impulsive reactions and give him a high image to shoot for. Otherwise, he will stoop to match the one you are now communicating.

I know! I know! It sounds easy on paper, but it is tough to implement. I have trouble following this advice, too. But we can at least try to provide what our imperfect kids need from us imperfect parents.

Teachers, principals believe school lunch program valuable

WASHINGTON (AP) — Melva Eakin shudders when she remembers the little boy who came to her kindergarten class one morning a few years ago, chewing on a dry hamburger bun.

"That was his breakfast," says Eakin, who teaches at Southside Elementary in Hookstown, Pa. "It just broke my heart."

The school immediately enrolled the boy into a program that provides free school lunch and breakfast to children from poor families.

"It made all the difference in the world," Eakin says. "He was more alert, more awake — I'm sure he was healthier."

Backed by such stories, schools nationwide are warning that a Republican House committee vote Thursday to change the school lunch program will result in more hungry children.

But Republicans angrily reject any prediction that American children will starve. All they want is to change the way the government pays for lunches, they insist.

"We're not saying...take the school lunch money and build highways," said Rep. Bill Goodling, R-Pa., the chairman of the House Economic and Educational Opportunities Committee. "We're talking about a more efficient way to run the program."

Principal Carole Kennedy thinks the school lunch program runs fine now.

To her, the proof is the 31 percent of students at her New Haven Elementary in Columbia, Mo., who get a free or reduced-price lunch each day.

One day this week, the children ate baked chicken, mashed potatoes, green beans, salad bar, a fruit rollup and milk.

"With this program, we know that the money to support poor families is going where it's supposed to," Kennedy said.

In all, about 14 million American schoolchildren — one-third of all public school students — received free or low-cost school lunches last year. Five million also received breakfast. Not all schools offer breakfasts.

A few schools also offer lunches during summer vacation. On weekends and school holidays, children are on their own.

A child in a family of four with income below $19,240 gets the free lunch. Parents are asked to fill out a form each year if they think they're eligible.

Key role for high court's beginner

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court rookies seldom speak for the high court on the most divisive cases. But Stephen G. Breyer — the newest justice — proved the exception this week.

Typically, new justices are assigned to work in such legal backwaters as workers' compensation, trucking regulation and maritime law.

Breyer, however, wrote for the court as it ruled that federal judges should give state prisoners the benefit of the doubt when they are not sure if procedural errors in criminal trials helped bring about the guilty verdict.

Such cases don't attract much public attention, but at the nation's highest court they are among the most ideologically tinged.

Breyer was considered up to the task.

"He's comfortable. He fits in well," said Bruce Fein, a conservative commentator and court watcher. "In terms of collective leadership, Breyer could become an utterly critical vote."

The 6-3 decision making it easier for state inmates to win new trials probably won't affect many prisoners.

But the tone of Breyer's opinion marks a significant change from the court's recent hostility to such appeals to federal judges, known as habeas corpus petitions.

Defendants convicted in state courts, including many awaiting execution, routinely seek help from federal judges, contending that their prosecution violated a federal constitutional right.

A series of recent high court rulings had decried repetitive filings of such petitions as abuses by prisoners, particularly those seeking to prevent their execution. These decisions had curtailed the right of prisoners to habeas corpus petitions in federal court.

Rather than emphasize the blizzard of paperwork filed by criminals who turn into jailhouse lawyers, Breyer highlighted the importance of federal judges in guaranteeing fair trials in state courts.

The court's three most conservative members — Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices Antonin Scalia and Clarence Thomas — dissented from Breyer's majority opinion.

Those three and Justice Anthony M. Kennedy also dissented earlier this term while Breyer joined a 5-4 majority to make it easier for death-row inmates to get federal court hearings to press claims that newly discovered evidence proves their innocence.

So, will Breyer move the court's ideological center further to the left or right? Although the 1994-95 term is more than half over, it's still too soon to say because the justices put off writing

Editorial Roundup

"Everyone wants a home run hit. If you don't have a ball park, you can't very well hit a home run." — Doug Hutchinson, DCOS executive director.

It was with a lot of pride, enthusiasm and optimism that the Development Corporation of Snyder, Inc. announced Thursday the pending purchase of 312 acres of land for a park.

No, not a park for leisure or for athletics, but an industrial park. Land — soon to be improved land — with which Snyder hopes to attract major industry.

We share the board's enthusiasm and optimism. With this move, Snyder steps up into a competitive level. The city can now host industrial prospects and truly say "We're ready for you."

A lot of work and study went into the ultimate decision to go ahead with the project, and to the selection of the site itself. Much more work will need to be done.

Snyder hasn't hit a home run yet, but it has stepped up to the plate.

Appoint or elect education board?

A bill being considered by the House Committee on Public Education would change the makeup of the State Board of Education from a 15-member elected board to a seven-member panel appointed by the governor.

The bill's sponsor, Rep. Curtis Seidlits, believes the education board should answer to the governor and legislators rather than to the voters.

This is sure to stir some debate and an outcry from voters, who will likely see it as a move by government to take away local control.

And Seidlits, a Democrat from Sherman, isn't exactly presenting the bill in the most diplomatic matter.

"The State Board of Education should act at our (legislators') direction and our policy. How can they do that when they are answering to a different constituency (the voters) that is out there electing them?" he said.

"When the policy that we give them is at odds with their constituency, how can they write rules that carry out or implement policy that we ask?"

The average voter might interpret Seidlits' remarks to mean that the general public should have no say so in education policy.

Of course, Seidlits and his fellow legislators are public servants, and elected by their constituents.

An appointed board probably would have a better grip on education, and — depending on who served on the panel — be more qualified. Often, we see candidates running for the board who are of a single-mindedness. They want sex education taken out of the classroom, or organized prayer put back.

Their values may be in the right place, but their overall qualifications for the job may be severely limited.

There will be debate on this issue, to be sure. After all, while some see the average voter as apathetic, most citizens perk up when the topic rolls around to education of their children.

The need for revised speed limits

The Pecos Enterprise

A bill has been introduced at the current session of the Texas Legislature to increase speed limits on rural Texas highways to 65. This is long overdue and we encourage support of this bill.

We fully realize that since the 55 speed limit has been imposed, there has been a decrease in traffic fatalities. However, we believe most of that is due to increased enforcement of drinking-while-driving laws and making penalties stiffer for those violations.

This increase would not and could not apply to all rural roadways, as many are just not suitable for higher speeds because of width, terrain where curves are involved and limited visibility.

However, in most parts of West Texas, South Texas and the Panhandle, roadways are perfect for higher speeds, and most motorists on those roads drive at higher than posted limits.

We appreciate Rep. Charles Finnell, D-Holliday, a champion of rural needs, for sponsoring this bill and encourage other legislators to support it.

In his resolution proposing the bill, Finnell says the change would be good for rural Texans who suffer under the 55 mph speed limit because they must drive long distances for work, shopping, medical care and other necessities.

We encourage voters to write those in the legislature about this proposal.

Looking at school reforms

The Dallas Morning News

Give home campuses more power. That's what the Brookings Institution concluded several years back in studying what produces the best educational results. Of course, with more power comes more accountability. If principals and teachers have fewer bureaucrats breathing down their necks and still can't produce results, then there's nowhere else to pass the buck.

Significantly, decentralization and accountability are the guiding principles of the school reforms offered Tuesday by Texas Sen. Bill Ratliff. R-Mount Pleasant. Sen. Ratliff's reforms were part of an interim legislative committee's proposal to modernize the voluminous Texas Education Code.

The committee's changes largely head in the right direction. The changes would sharply restrict the Texas Education Agency's reach. The agency's functions would be limited to a handful of functions: setting education goals, creating graduation and curriculum standards, for example.

In return, local educators would be freed to determine "how" to meet those goals. For instance, students would have to demonstrate a proficiency in a new core curricula, which focuses on language arts, math, science and social studies. The proficiency would be determined through a test at the end of a course. But teachers would not be told by the TEA in minute detail how to teach core subjects. They would just be expected to meet statewide academic standards.

Indeed, the reforms include a number of tools to strengthen the local educators: Home rule education districts; charter schools; allowing school board members to be recalled.

In one way or another, such measures give parents, teachers and principals more authority — and hold them responsible. ...

Are some minor changes needed in the new reforms? Yes.

In sum, however, Sen. Ratliff and his fellow Texas Education Agency reviewers have done a sharp job. If improved and passed, these reforms would help put Texas on the cutting edge of school reform.

It was a wedding well documented

By Bill McClellan

Made a trip recently back to Mexia. That's Ma-hay-uh, not Mex-ia. And it's near Waco. That's Way-co, not Whack-o, although some people might say the latter version more typifies the people there.

The purpose of the trip was the wedding of a niece, Anna. I thought she was my niece-in-law because she is the daughter of my sister-in-law. My wife says I'm wrong, there are no nieces-in-law, just nieces. And since women understand these things better than men, I won't argue.

It was a beautiful wedding for a beautiful couple and we had a good time. And, we'll be able to relive it over and over again because my wife's brother's wife — another sister-in-law, I guess — videotaped the whole thing. And I do mean the WHOLE thing.

You've heard of couples videotaping the birth of a child? She videotaped the birth of a marriage. From the pre-service until they drove off after the reception.

She videotaped the service, the after-service reception and the after-service reception-reception. It's rumored that she hid in the trunk of the car the newlyweds drove off in, to capture shots of the honeymoon. But that's not true. I know because I saw her videotaping the clean-up after the reception-reception.

In between, she videotaped comments from wedding guests. These were, for the most part, unrehearsed comments. She'd walk up to someone, whip the camera up in their face and declare "Say something to Anna!"

Their first reaction was usually to throw their hands up yell "Get that thing out of my face!" A few people ran.

Corey, our youngest son, tried to hide behind a large indoor plant. But Jeanne doesn't take no for an answer, and so when Anna sees the video, she'll see a plant wishing her a wonderful marriage.

You have to understand that Jeanne is a recently-retired airline stewardess. She's very self assured, extremely outgoing and used to dealing with difficult people. When someone would complain, she'd turn the camera on herself and sing "New York, New York," then say "See, it won't hurt you. It's fun. I love it."

She remarked later, "When you have to hold this little cup in your hand each flight and demonstrate to all these people how to use it, you get over being shy real quick."

As it turns out, New York is where the couple spent their honeymoon. As I recall, my wife and I spent our honeymoon by going back to work. Such is the way of second and third marriages.

The reception was held at the country club at Fairfield and it, too, was very special. We ate, met a lot of people we didn't know, and listened to a piano player (my wife says pianist) who knew just about every song anyone has ever heard.

I won't say there was alcohol at the wedding reception, but my wife actually asked me to dance. And Jeanne videotaped it.

Before leaving the next day, I stopped by Wright's Barbecue for a chopped beef sandwich. Some things are beautiful, spiritual — like weddings. Some things are tradition. For me, a beef or pork sandwich at Wright's is all three.

But look at me. Typical male. Talking about food and home movies at a time like this.

Best wishes, Anna. Best wishes, Damien. May your marriage be a long and happy one.

Letters to the Editor

It's experience

Dear Editor,

At the Feb. 9, 1995 meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Snyder ISD, I recommended the Board accept a bid from Trans Texas out of Houston to pour a post-tension slab for the junior high tennis courts. I recommended Trans Texas over the other quality bidders for only one reason — experience in pouring post-tension tennis court slabs.

I want to assure the citizens of Snyder, Texas that this administration does support the concept of utilizing the many contractors located within our city limits. Furthermore, I want to make very clear that my recommendation for using Trans Texas is not a derogatory statement con-

Great sentiment

Dear Editor,

When I was a small girl, my dad (Buck Hatfield) and my three brothers went to Erwin's Jewelers in Snyder on Christmas eve and picked out a beautiful Mother's Day ring for my mother.

This ring had four stones signifying the months of the year that her children were born. My mother wore this ring for many years and last year decided that she would like for me to wear it. I have worn it with great pride and sentiment.

On Monday, Feb. 13, I was at the hospital to be with my dad. I left the hospital for a little while and went down to the emergency room exit. As I was getting in my car I noticed that I no longer had the ring on my finger. I am certain it fell off, either in the hospital or in the emergency room area outside.

If you happened to find this ring, I would appreciate it so much if you would contact me. As mentioned, this ring has great sentiment to me, especially now that my dad has passed on.

I can be contacted at (505) 392-6975 or 2515 N. Breckon, Hobbs, N.M., 99240.

Thank you,
Shari (Hatfield) Patrick

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

Ever find yourself in a hotel vending machine room at midnight, kicking the living daylight out of a Coke machine, because that's all you want in the whole world, and the machine has just eaten your last quarter, and the restaurant is closed, and you haven't had any dinner, and you didn't know you were going to miss dinner so you didn't have anything to eat in your room, and you're just in a very, very bad mood?

Yeah well, that was me last Friday night.

I thought it was going to be so great. Here these people had flown me out to the beautiful mountain city of Santa Fe, (all right, so they flew me to Albuquerque and made me take the bus to Santa Fe), so that I could be one of the keynote speakers at their writer's conference. There were two other keynote speakers there, and it was all I could do not to wiggle at their feet like a star struck lapdog: Robin Moore, the author of "The French Connection" and "The Green Berets," among others; and David Morrell, author of "First Blood" and creator of Rambo, as well as numerous other best sellers, including "Assumed Identity" and "Desperate Measures."

Usually, writer's conferences take care of their speakers, especially their keynoters. They send somebody to pick them up at the airport; they put them up someplace nice with room service; they make sure rides are provided to places like book signings; and they make nice all over the place. I've been fortunate enough to keynote conferences from Houston to Chicago and what happens is, well, you get kinda spoiled.

It's not that you set out to be a prima donna or anything, but in my case, traveling by air is exhausting. I've got a two-hour drive just to get to the nearest airport, then I'm hauling around a briefcase which is usually loaded down with books and a garment bag heavy with stuff like hot curlers and a hair dryer and business suits and more books.

I've gotten pretty good at packing and usually don't have to check any bags, but what I do carry on board the plane and heft up to the overhead storage compartments is heavy and bulky. By the next morning, I'm in pain; I take my breakfast in my room so that I can spend time managing that pain and be all smiles and professional courtesy by the time I'm asked to show my face.

Not so this time. I was literally marooned at this place without room service and no way to get to the community college where the conference was held. It was just one of those trips where you're on your own, and I could have handled it better if I'd been prepared for it. I had to bum a ride to the book-signing Saturday night; my ride got lost and I was forty minutes late, which made me look bad.

So there I was signing books and thinking up creative ways to kill all the people who were responsible for putting me into such a ferocious mood, when the crowd cleared and, like the moon shining out from behind the clouds, there stood Robin Moore, inviting me and David Morrell, and this hot-shot true crime author all over to his hotel for drinks.

You never saw a bunch of writers sneak out of a signing quicker.

Of course, they didn't put up the great Robin Moore in the same crummy place as yours truly. The author of "The French Connection" was staying at the lovely St. Francis, located in the beautiful Plaza in this gorgeous mountain city. The bar had walls lined in tooled mahogany and floors of gleaming red saltillo tiles.

We sat at a round table and for the next several hours, I got to talk shop with some of the greatest suspense authors ever known. I found out that, to research "The Green Berets," Mr. Moore had to get special permission from "Jack" Kennedy, then he went through the actual training and was the only civilian ever to be given jump wings. Then he traveled to Vietnam and went out on missions with the guys. To research "The French Connection," he rode patrol for a whole year with New York cops. And to research "The Happy Hooker," which he ghost-wrote, he...well, never mind.

I found out that Rambo is a fictional character, entirely made up, not based on anybody, in spite of what a few very visible former soldiers are now claiming in magazines and on national television. "If there was truly a soldier whom I had in mind when I created Rambo," David Morrell told me, "it would have to be that incomparable hero of World War II, Audie Murphy." Morrell himself never served in the military, but he is the only civilian ever given honorary membership into the Special Ops organization which meets at an annual reunion every year and contains some of the greatest fighting men this country has ever known as its members.

It was a magical evening. I was given a great deal of encouragement on the book I am writing now by my fellow authors, even though they, of course, had never heard of me before the conference. When I bought their books to sign for me, they paid me the highest compliment: They bought copies of my book, "Losers, Weepers," and asked me to sign it for them. (I was so unnerved by that I knocked over a glass of red wine one was sipping and spilled it all over the table. A klutz to the bitter end.)

The trip home was a logistical nightmare and included a three-hour layover in El Paso, two very late planes, and a solitary drive home from Midland at 2 a.m. Would I go through the whole bungled mess all over again, knowing what I know now?

Oh good Lord, yes — in a New York minute.

Wife Feels Unsatisfied When Husband's Kiss Is Just a Kiss

DEAR ABBY: I am a 29-year-old wife and mother — married four years with a 3-year-old and a newborn.

My husband and I have a good, solid relationship with trust and loyalty, but no romance. It seems that romance is not part of our marriage. My problem is not lack of sex — it is lack of passion.

"Arnold" was never overly romantic, but we used to be more passionate with each other. I understand that children can dampen some spontaneity in a relationship, but I wish there was more passion in our bedroom.

All I want is to be kissed like before we had children. All I get is a peck "hello" or "goodbye" — like he is my brother. We don't even kiss while making love.

Because we can be truthful with each other, I have told him how I feel several times — but nothing has changed.

Abby, please tell me what I can do to get him to kiss me passionately.

HUNGRY FOR KISSES
IN LOUISIANA

DEAR HUNGRY: Tell him again. And if necessary — teach him. As a last resort, there are sex therapists who can acquaint you with techniques that could be helpful.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who will be getting married in the near future. For the last two years, I have heard nothing except this wedding.

This is my concern: She asked me to be her maid of honor and I said yes. It now turns out to be the most expensive thing I've ever said yes to.

The dress itself cost $200, and that's not including the shoes to match, hairdo, etc.

Now, she is planning her own bachelorette party where everybody gives her money to pay for a limousine. She never asked us if we would pay for a limousine — she told us she hired one, and we have to pay for it. What should I do?

FINANCIALLY DRAINED

DEAR DRAINED: Either tell her exactly how you feel, or send her a copy of this column.

DEAR ABBY: Please settle a disagreement for me. When a husband and wife get divorced, does the wife keep her married name, or does she go back to using her maiden name?

Please answer this in your column because there may be others who are just as baffled about this as I am.

F.M. IN BROOKLYN

DEAR F.M.: The choice is hers. She should tell the judge which name she prefers to use in the future.

If she decides to keep her married name — which most women with children prefer to do — instead of "Mrs. John Smith" she becomes "Mrs. Jane Smith," in order to avoid being confused with John's next wife, should there be one.

FAMOUS LAST WORDS: "I'm not so thick as you drunk I am." (Attributed to John Squire, but it sounds more like W.C. Fields.)

For everything you need to know about wedding planning, order "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

DEAR ABBY: Many years ago, I had surgery to enlarge my breasts. The procedure cost $3,000, and I suffered considerable pain. I never would have done it had I not been strongly encouraged by my husband — who is now my "ex."

The problem I now face is the colossal nerve of folks who ask, "Are they real?" or, "Are they yours?" Such remarks are equally rude whether they come from a lingerie saleswoman, a co-worker or a new acquaintance.

Abby, how should I answer? I would like to say, "Yes, they are 'real' and they are mine," but I hate to lie. Any other answer would make it obvious that I do not want to answer because they are "altered" or "not real," which isn't something I care to advertise.

Perhaps through your column, people might realize their curiosity can cause embarrassment.

ENHANCED

DEAR ENHANCED: You are not compelled to answer a rude and intrusive question.

There are a variety of appropriate responses "It's none of your business." Choose one:

— "I can't believe you asked that."

— "If it were any of your business, you'd know."

— "What an incredibly rude question!"

— "If you forgive me for not answering, I'll forgive you for asking."

DEAR ABBY: I have recently learned that my father is currently having affairs (an old habit of his). It bothers me that my mother is unknowingly being exposed to sexually transmitted diseases. I avoid her as much as possible because I'm afraid I might say something that will hurt her and possibly cause a divorce. My parents have been married for 37 years.

I have lost all respect for my father because of this — especially because he slept with my best friend when she was 17. He was 40 at the time. I just found this out.

Should I tell my mother? I can't avoid her forever.

TORN DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Since your mother cannot protect herself from a sexually transmitted disease unless she knows that she is at risk, she needs to know. Tell your father that you are aware of this behavior, and give him the option of breaking the news to your mother. Let him know that if he doesn't — you will.

DEAR ABBY: At the age of 84, I am still trying to maintain a sense of humor, and pray that I will be able to do so until I pass on. I have always believed that laughter is the best medicine.

I couldn't resist sending in this quip regarding your column in which a reader suggested writing letters or exercising while waiting to see the doctor:

It seems that a little old lady named Amy waited and waited and waited to see the doctor.

Finally, the doctor came out of his office — looked over in the corner and said, "Amy, it's about your lunchtime — aren't you getting hungry?"

"No," she replied, "but I am getting homesick!"

House panel slowly plods through Gingrich complaints

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats are increasing the frequency and fury of their attacks against Newt Gingrich's conduct, but the House ethics committee is plodding slowly through their complaints.

A crucial question is whether the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, the panel's formal name, will heed Democrats' calls for an outside counsel to investigate the allegations.

Committee Chairman Nancy Johnson, R-Conn., said Thursday

it would be "five meetings down the road, at least," before such a decision is made.

The committee, which met Thursday to be briefed by its staff on the Democratic charges, has been convening once a week. Johnson declined to say whether it would step up its pace.

The Democrats escalated the political tension Thursday when they:

— Filed a new ethics complaint, contending that the speaker received an illegal gift of free cable television time worth up to $200,000 for his college course. The cable company providing the time said there was no gift.

— Contended Gingrich and other Republicans used intimidation tactics to threaten local projects. "This sounds more like a Mafia operation than a political party," Rep. Cynthia McKinney, D-Ga., said.

— Cited recent remarks by the business school dean at Kennesaw State College, where Gingrich formerly taught his college course. Timothy Mescon said he would not have permitted Gingrich to teach on the campus if he had realized that political and academic resources were being commingled.

A complaint filed by Ben Jones, a former Democratic congressman from Georgia who was defeated by Gingrich last November, contends that the speaker violated House rules by using tax-deductible contributions to finance the politically oriented course.

"If the class turned out to be partisan in nature or design it would be a clear violation of both tax law and House rules," House Democratic Whip David Bonior, D-Mich., said.

Before those attacks, Gingrich had fired a salvo of his own.

"What you have now got is a game where Democratic partisan leaders will routinely file anything — that seems to be what is going on," he said at his regular news conference.

Key role for new justice their toughest assignments until the end.

Still ahead in the traditional spring and early summer flurry of decisions are rulings on congressional term limits, affirmative action, school desegregation, mandatory drug tests for secondary-school athletes, the bounds of religious expression, police powers and race as a factor in drawing election districts.

Neither Breyer's votes in the 22 decisions he has participated in so far nor his energetic and enthusiastic on-the-bench questioning in oral-argument sessions foretell specific votes.

"He's not doctrinal, and seems comfortable working out compromise language. He could become a Lewis Powell," said Fein, the conservative commentator.

Powell, who retired in 1987, was known as a middle-of-the-road "majority maker" who played a pivotal role in shoring American law for 15 years.

Breyer's role largely will be defined by how often he votes with those colleagues in the court's political middle — Kennedy and Justices Sandra Day O'Connor, David H. Souter and Ruth Bader Ginsburg.

If the conservative bloc is to be frustrated as it was in this week's habeas-corpus decision, Justice John Paul Stevens, who finds himself the most liberal justice, must find four allies among Breyer, Kennedy, O'Connor, Souter and Ginsburg.

How many times have you told yourself that you were going to save a little each month so that by the time school started you would have enough money to pay for tuition? But then the car broke down and you had to shell out $200 for an oil leak. And you weren't counting on the $80 doctor bill and $30 for a prescription. Then to top it off you wake up to a stream of water on the floor surrounding the water heater and where does it end. So now the little bit of funds you have been able to save for college are gone and what you planned on this month isn't enough to even make up the balance of these surprise expenses.

Don't lose hope. There is still a way to help yourself and keep your sanity at the same time. It is called financial aid and you may be eligible for assistance. At WTC applications must be completed before July 1 for you to be fully considered for financial aid the following fall and spring semesters. You can turn in an application at anytime, but you are encouraged to complete the application process before the deadline to be assured of full consideration. If you are interested in applying for financial aid at WTC, you should request detailed information by writing the Financial Aid Office at Western Texas College. If you have trouble with filling out the application or have questions you can call their office at 573-8511 Ext. 309 and they will be happy to assist you in any way.

There are several financial aid grants available at WTC. The Pell Grant is a program, formerly called the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant (BEOG), which is designed to help students meet a portion of their educational expenses and can be combined with other forms of aid. The Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant is a program designed for students with financial need who, without the grant, would be unable to continue their education. Another program offered at WTC is the Texas Public Educational Grant. This grant supplies assistance to students judged to be in financial need and provides funds needed to supplement other aid programs.

The State Student Incentive Grant is funded through a combination of federal and institutional funds. Students must be in financial need to receive this grant.

Other financial aid opportunities at WTC are the College Work-Study Program. This program provides students demonstrating financial need with part-time jobs to meet educational expenses. Positions range from teacher assistants to library clerks.

WTC does make information available about alternative educational loan programs. To find out what is available, you would need to contact the Financial Aid Office. WTC no longer participates in the following guaranteed loan programs: Stafford, SLS, and Plus.

The Texas Rehabilitation Commission offers assistance to students who qualify for services because of certain handicaps. Application for this type of assistance should be made to the nearest Rehabilitation Office. Inquiries may be addressed directly to: Texas Rehabilitation Commission, Abilene Field Office, 3104 S. Clack, Abilene, Texas 79606.

Other financial aid opportunities at WTC come in the form of Scholarships. If you have high academic potential and achievement going for you, then why not apply for a scholarship. Again, the Financial Aid Office has a list of available scholarships and can assist you with information you may need to apply.

So don't despair about finances. Just remember, money can be a rather sore subject this time off year. Especially the closer we get to tax time. It seems like between bills, necessities, taxes, and don't forget the unexpected; there isn't a whole lot left over to work with. There are resources available and don't put off finding out if you may qualify. With financial assistance, if you qualify, a great start to a better education and future are just a visit to the WTC Financial Aid Office or a phone call away.

Help pours in for dog nearly skinned alive

PALATKA, Fla. (AP) — Whether you call him Dawg or Prince, a mixed beagle that someone tried to skin alive is getting donations from across the country for his vet bills and reward fund.

A New York-based animal protection group pledged $5,000 for information leading to the conviction of whomever was responsible for skinning the dog Sunday. And the Putnam County Humane Society has been besieged by letters and offers of help by phone, said Carla Hutchins, supervisor of the society.

"The lady from our local post office said I needed to come up there and get the mail because it wouldn't fit in our mailbox," Ms. Hutchins said.

The dog's owner, 12-year-old Donald Tolliver Jr., found him tied to his chain in his dog house Sunday, his skin hanging over his rump.

Commission may make needed budget cuts

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — With a Senate vote due on the balanced budget amendment while House Republicans try to fill in spending cut blanks, another option is being proposed: Set up a commission. Let them make politically tough calls when Congress doesn't.

That's a tried, although often failed route around the risks that go with unpopular votes. This time, it would be based on one that works, the military base closing commission.

For 12 years before that system was created, not a base was shut because Congress couldn't agree on whose should stay and whose should go. The commission system broke the impasse by reducing the political dangers. Congress has agreed since to close or consolidate more than 250 installations.

A new base closing panel is about to begin work; it will consider Pentagon recommendations and put together a shutdown list by July 1, for yes or no votes in Congress, no changes allowed.

Sen. Connie Mack, R-Fla., and Reps. David Minge, D-Minn., and Dan Miller, R-Fla., have introduced bills to apply a similar process to the budget cuts it would take to get to balance by 2002, the aim of the balanced budget measure.

The amendment easily passed the House, a month ago. It's closer in the Senate, which is to vote late Tuesday. It will take two-thirds, or 67 votes there, to send the amendment to the states for ratification. Approved by three-quarters, 38 states, it would become part of the Constitution.

The White House and Democratic leaders oppose the amendment, saying the way to balance the budget is to cut it and do it, not write an aim into the Constitution. But advocates insist that without constitutional discipline, that won't happen.

Democrats tried and failed in the House and the Senate to require that Congress spell out in detail how the budget would be balanced over the next seven years, which would take a reduction of more than $1 trillion in projected spending.

Rep. John Kasich, R-Ohio, chairman of the House Budget Committee, said spending actually will be increasing anyhow, but at a slower rate, by about $2 trillion over the seven years instead of an anticipated $3 trillion.

AP analysis

House Republicans are working now on a $17 billion down payment in quick reductions, with the long term plan promised later. Their leaders argue that to issue details on spending curbs and cuts in advance would have opened the whole process to attack by the interests that stand to lose, and could have cost crucial votes on the balanced budget amendment, facing a close count in the Senate anyhow.

It's easy to embrace the concept of a balanced budget amendment, hard to cut a favored program or government benefit.

"Our fight is going to be with the lobbyists and special interests who are fat and happy," Kasich said in a TV interview. But there also is an institutional problem when cuts hit home and voters.

Economist Joe Cobb of the Heritage Foundation said the proposed commission "would insulate lawmakers from the political fallout they fear from budget cuts." Cobb told the Joint Economic Committee "there may be no other way" to get to a balanced budget.

The seven-member Spending Reduction Commission would be bipartisan, with a new panel appointed each year, to propose spending cuts to make sure the deficit is reduced by $45 billion a year.

The cut list would be sent to the president each summer; he could seek changes, reject it, or send it on to Congress for up or down votes with no amendments allowed. The current budgeting system wouldn't change; any cuts made the old-fashioned way would count against the commission target.

That would spread the pain and the blame for unpopular budget cuts, if it all worked.

But along with the successful base closing model, there are more examples of commissions that couldn't agree, most recently on reform and cost control in entitlement programs. In 1983 a commission dealt with problems then looming in Social Security financing, and Congress agreed.

A commission meant to make federal pay raises automatic so that Congress wouldn't have to vote on its own salaries, worked at first but collapsed in 1989. Ronald Reagan set up a commission to cope with budget problems; it ended in deadlock.

House OKs endangered species limits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government couldn't list any new plant or animal species under the Endangered Species Act if legislation passed by the House is approved by the Senate.

The measure passed the House by voice vote Thursday after opponents failed to mount a challenge to the legislation drafted by Republicans and conservative Democrats.

Some environmentalists, unaware that the measure was coming to the floor, acknowledged that they had been caught flat-footed. But they promised a battle in the Senate.

The amendment offered by Rep. Gary Condit, D-Calif., was co-authored by four Texans — Republicans Lamar Smith and Henry Bonilla of San Antonio, and Larry Combest of Lubbock; and Democrat Chet Edwards of Waco.

The measure would prevent the government from any new listings of endangered or threatened species as well as designations of critical habitat through 1996 or whenever the Endangered Species Act is reauthorized.

"With the passage of today's amendment, private property owners will no longer be held hostage by heavy-handed bureaucrats," said Bonilla.

The Endangered Species Act was due to be renewed in 1993. But the Clinton administration and environmentalists have resisted bringing it back before Congress, concerned that it would be gutted. The administration contends the 22-year-old act requires only slight adjustment.

Environmentalists said the freeze would have a devastating effect on the animal and plant protection. "Listing species is the cornerstone to how you start to help a species that is going extinct," said Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund attorney Suellen Lowry.

Currently, more than 100 proposals are pending to declare plant or animal species threatened or endangered.

Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, who is leading efforts in the Senate for a moratorium on new listings, greeted the House vote with pleasure and promised swift Senate action.

"There is a clear mandate for Congress to stop the running over of people and property rights," the Texas Republican said. "I think Congress will speak forcefully on a moratorium."

Mrs. Hutchison, who co-chairs a Senate task force on regulatory relief, has offered legislation that would provide a six-month moratorium. She said she prefers the longer freeze enacted by the House, but offered her shorter version out of deference to Senate Environment and Public Works Chairman John Chafee, R-R.I. Chafee has long been a staunch defender of environmental protections.

"Of course, I like the House version the best," she said, adding that she will fight for the House language.

Hinckley will share profit from story

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Hinckley agreed to pay as much as $2.9 million in potential profits from book and movie projects to James Brady and two other men wounded in the 1981 assassination attempt on President Reagan, Hinckley's lawyers said.

The agreement requires Hinckley to surrender the legal rights to his life story to a trust controlled by Brady, and the other two men. The trust would hire an agent to sell the story for a book, movie or other use.

The agreement is intended to end a 13-year-old lawsuit in which the three men sought to force Hinckley to pay for his act.

One of Hinckley's lawyers, B.J. Jones-Terrell, said Thursday that Hinckley agreed to the settlement because "he wanted to compensate the victims. He wanted to let people know that for many years now he's wanted to make some sort of restitution."

Jones-Terrell said Hinckley signed the agreement on Monday at St. Elizabeths Hospital in Washington, where he has been confined since 1982, when he was found innocent of criminal charges by reason of insanity.

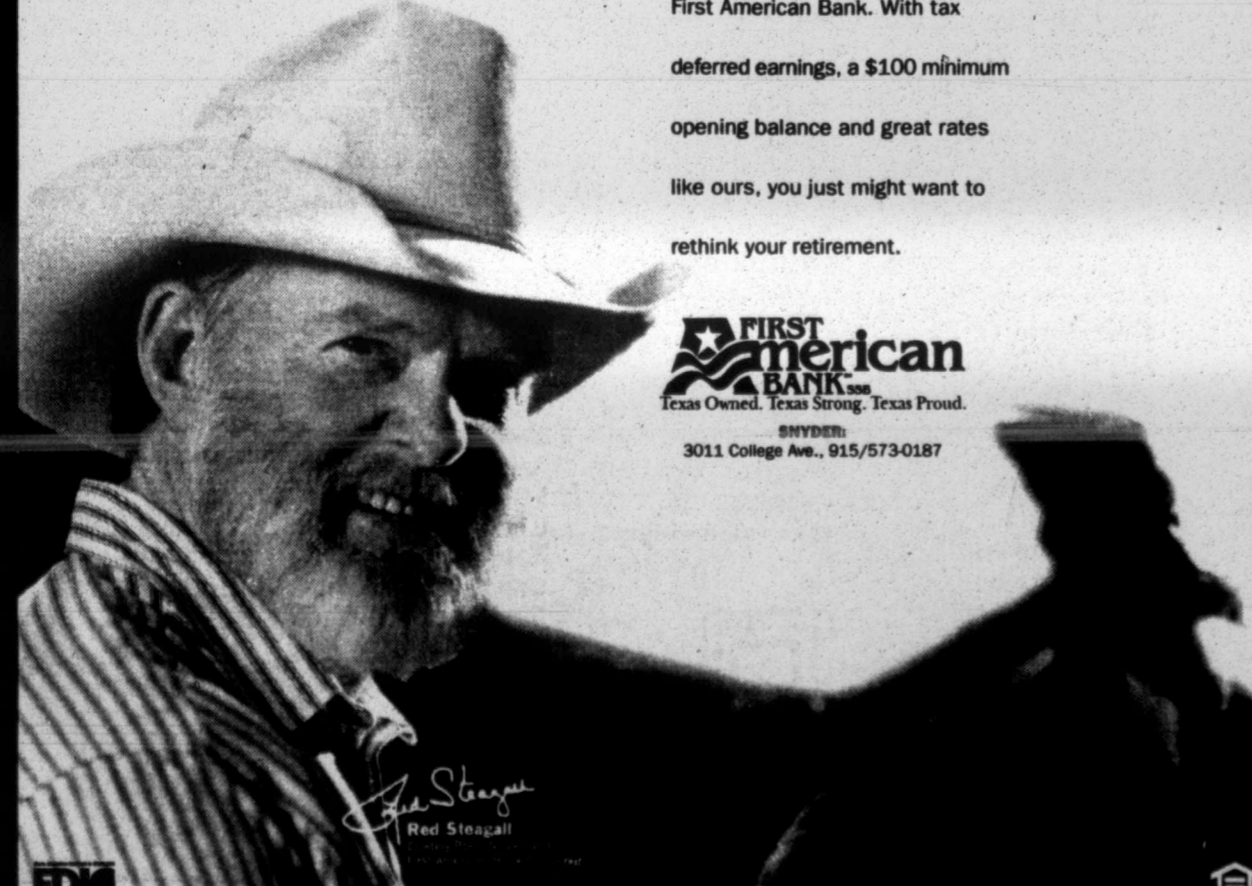

The agreement could lead to a movie or book revealing his reflections on the attack.
