WICHITA VALLEY DEVELOPMENT.

Road to Be Into Abilene by the Beginning of the Year.

Austin, Tex., Nov. 2.—Judge D. T. Bomar of Fort Worth, a director in and general attorney for the Wichita Valley Railroad and allied lines, was here today on department matters. He states that the Abilene and Northern, in connection with the extension of the Wichita Valley Railroad, will be completed into Abilene by the first of the year.

With the completion of the road into Abilene there will be a direct north and south line from Abilene through Stamford, Haskell, Seymour and Wichita Falls north to Byers on Red River, and which is to be extended into Indian Territory to connect with the Rock Island and Frisco at Ryan. The Texas lines are known to be controlled by the Colorado and Southern, connecting with the Fort Worth and Denver at Wichita Falls, the Texas end of the Colorado and Southern.

It is possible that the new line will be extended south of Abilene to Coleman on the Santa Fe very soon after Abilene is reached, though no definite statement has been forthcoming as yet from those in charge of the property. It is to be closely associated with the Yokum interests and extended according to the plans of Col. Yoakum.

The road is now in operation from Byers, twenty-three miles north-east of Wichita Falls, to Stamford, running by way of Seymour, Munday and Haskell.

Sells More of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy than of All Others Put Together.

Mr. Thos. George, a merchant at Mt. Elgin, Ontario, says: I have had the local agency for Chamberlain's Cough Remedy ever since it was introduced into Canada, and I sell as much of it as I do of all other lines I have on my shelves put together. Of the many dozens sold under guarantee, I have not had one bottle returned. I can personally recommend this medicine as I have used it myself and given it to my children and always with the best results." For sale at Terrell's drug store.

CIRCUS AT HASKELL.

With one of the finest strings of educated horses, camels, dogs, ponies, sheep, zebras, sacred cattle, as well as monkeys, and many lesser animals, the Gentry Brothers' Famous Shows will visit Haskell on Tuesday, Nov. 20th, when they will give two performances at 7:00 and 2:00 p. m.

The Gentry Brothers' Shows have not visited Haskell for several years, but when they do come this time it will be with the shows larger by many times, and direct from a phenomenal run of four weeks in Chicago, where hundreds were turned away at every performance. In the last two years the Gentry Brothers have scoured the globe searching for novelties, both in the trained animal class and the circus line, with the result that they now have the finest organization of its kind in the world. The street parade which has been augmented by the addition of over twenty-five new tableaux wagons and cages, will leave the show grounds at ten o'clock in the morning, making a tour of the principal business streets. In Time of Peace

In the first months of the Russia-Japan war we had a striking example of the necessity for preparation and the early advantage of those who, so to speak, "have shingled their roofs in dry weather." The virtue of preparation has made history and given to us our greatest men. The individual as well as the nation should be prepared for any emergency. Are you prepared to successfully combat the first cold you take? A cold can be cured much more quickly when treated as soon as it has been contracted and before it has become settled in the system. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is famous for its cures of colds and it should be kept at hand ready for instant use. For sale at Terrell's drug store.

TEXAS TACKLES TRUSTS

Evidence to Be taken in Saint Louis Against the Waters-Pierce Oil Company.

St. Louis, Nov. 5.—Depositions in the suit to oust the Waters-Pierce Oil Company from the State of Texas as an alleged unlawful combine will be taken by R. V. Davidson, Attorney General of the Lone Star State, before Notary Robert Funkhouser in room No. 705, Carleton Building Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Doyle and Watson, process servers, have served subpoenas on a number of prominent St. Louis men during the last week. H. Clay Pierce, whose testimony and arrest will be remembered in connection with the proceedings against the Waters-Pierce Oil Company brought by Attorney General Hadley of Missouri, will be one of the conspicuous persons called upon to give evidence against the Waters-Pierce Company.

Mr. Pierce will be requested to tell what agreement officials of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company of Texas made with the Standard Oil Company. It is believed that his testimony given before Notary Funkhouser next Wednesday will be as sensational as his efforts to keep away from Attorney General Hadley of Missouri. The name of United States Senator Joseph Weldon Bailey is likely to be linked with the alleged deal between the two great oil combines, it is said. Senator Bailey recently came into prominence in connection with the case, and it was stated that some sensational testimony along that line would be divulged when the taking of depositions begins.

The Waters-Pierce Oil Company of Texas is operating under the laws of Texas as an independent company, but evidence now in possession of Attorney General Davidson, it is said, shows that the Texas company has been absorbed by the Standard Oil Company. Several prominent attorneys from Texas will appear in St. Louis in defense of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company.

HORRIBLY BRUTAL MURDER AND ROBBERY

Deamont, Tex., Nov. 5.—Arthur F. Carr, aged about 25 years, employed as night guard in the county convict camp, was foully murdered as he slept in his bed in the camp tent Saturday night.

The crime, for brutality and horror, is not surpassed by any incident in the criminal records of the county.

Nothing of the terrible crime was known until John Baldwin and the county convict gang returned to their camp several miles out Sunday evening at 6 o'clock. Carr was found lying dead in his bed in the tent. He had been shot through the head with a shotgun and the instrument of death, which belonged to him, was found on the place. Carr was undressed and the appearance of the body indicated that the man was killed while he slept. The tent was found disarranged and in confusion. A grip or valise, in which Carr kept his valuables, had been ripped open and the sum of $25, which Carr is said to have had, was stolen.

Clerks Refuse to Strike. San Antonio: The Order of Railroad Clerks Friday night finally decided to forfeit its charter rather than obey the order of Grand Chief Braggins to join the striking clerks on the Sunset. MISSIONARY BAPTIST ASSOCIATION ADJOURNS.

Dallas, Tex., Nov. 3.—Pentecostal fervor marked the adjournment yesterday afternoon of the Baptist Missionary Association of Texas. Old men wept with their younger brethren and tears were upon every eye as the pastors and missionaries bade one another farewell and departed for their respective fields of labor.

The association meets at Jacksonville next year, where is located one of the schools which operate under the patronage of the Baptist Missionary Association. All plans have been made for the work between now and the time of the next meeting.

Rev. J. W. Brewer moved that the salary of the corresponding secretary Dr. S. H. Slaughter, and his assistant, Rev. J. F. McClung, be fixed at $1,200 per annum each, together with their traveling expenses. The motion was carried.

Sudden Death of a Candidate. New York: Representative J. H. Ketchum, of Dover, died of apoplexy at a hospital in this city Sunday. He was 74 years old. He was Colonel of the Fifteenth New York Volunteers in the Civil War.

Big Colonization Scheme.

San Antonio: The statement is made that Holland and New York capitalists, at the head of which is no less a financial king than E. H. Rogers of the Standard Oil Company, is negotiating for the purchase of the great King, Kennedy, Lassiter and Driscoll ranches in Southeast Texas, with the view of establishing thereon a colony. The total acreage of the ranches is 2,000,000 acres, and it is proposed to open up the ranches for settlement and bring in thousands of Dutch and Italian farmers, the latter from the Lombardy region.

Cook County Pioneer's Death.

Gainesville, George Y. Bird died here Sunday afternoon after a few hours' illness. He was one of the oldest settlers of Cooke County, having sold the first dry goods ever sold in Gainesville, and also built the first brick house there. He was the first Mayor of Gainesville, being elected in 1874. He was also County Clerk of the county soon after its organization, being elected in 1852. He was a Confederate soldier and was buried with those honors.

Suspicious Cause Suicide.

Knoxville, Tenn.: As a sequel to the assassination of Mrs. William Garrett at Abingdon, Va., Saturday night, came the suicide at Abingdon of John Hawkins Sunday, a near neighbor of the woman. His reputation had never before been questioned.

The Plainview Extension.

Amarillo, Texas: The Santa Fe officials here report the work on the extension of their road from Canyon City to Plainview to be progressing nicely, the greatest difficulty being the scarcity of labor in this country. The track is now laid within three miles of Tolia, Swisher County. It will reach there by Sunday. It is expected the road will be completed to Plainview by the latter part of January.

Don't Want Negro Help.

Guthrie, Ok.: The presence of 100 negro cotton pickers on the streets of Waurika was the cause of a calling of a special mass meeting of citizens during the week to protest against negroes in that locality. By the time the mass meeting had adjourned there were no negroes left in town. Five thousand negro cotton pickers from Texas were imported into Comanche, Kiowa and Greer Counties this fall to harvest the cotton crop.

WILL REDUCE FARES.

Commission Proposes to Regulate Sleeping Car Traffic.

Austin, Tex., Nov. 6.—The Texas Railroad Commission proposes to regulate and reduce sleeping car fares, but first proposes to assume jurisdiction over sleeping car service.

Yesterday it issued a notice of a hearing for Nov. 27 to require railroads to continue their present sleeping car service in Texas, unless authorized to discontinue same by the commission, and add such other service as the commission may direct; also to reduce the present charges 20 per cent, which would make the rate $1.50 where $2 is now charged.

It will be noticed in the circular convening the hearing that the commission holds the railroads entirely responsible for sleeping car charges and takes no cognizance of the fact that the sleeping cars are owned by the Pullman or any other corporations.

Important Hydrographic Work.

Washington: The measurements now being carried on by the hydrographic branch of the United States Geological survey in Texas, with a view of determining the amount of water carried by the streams have direct industrial importance in addition to general value as statistical matter, for irrigation cannot be successfully practiced, nor water powers developed, nor the waters applied to various manufacturing uses without fairly precise data as to the quantity of water available. Such data are being collected by the survey, and reports dealing therewith are published annually.

A number of gaging stations have been maintained on the rivers of this region for periods long enough to afford the necessary information, but concerning many of the streams knowledge is still rudimentary. A large part of the value of the measurements of Texas streams is in connection with irrigation works, but a number of the rivers are also very important for power development.

Healthy Business Pulse.

Austin: According to the statement given out by the Secretary of State, there was a material increase in the number of charters filed in the Department of State during the past fiscal year as compared to the twelve months preceding, and attention was directed to the fact that no unusual condition had prevailed during the year just ended, but the increase represented only the normal and substantial growth of the State.

It will be remembered that when the oil boom was at its height in Texas scores of charters were being filed, more than a dozen on some days. In fact, there was a general rush to file the charters of oil corporations and hundreds were filed incident to the opening and development of the several Texas oil fields. No such condition has since prevailed in this State, hence the large number of incorporations during the year reflects a healthy advancement in the State.

Murdered and Body Burned.

SMITH COUNTY SPEAKS.

Does Not Believe Bailey is Nominated, but Endorses.

Tyler, Tex., Nov. 6.—The Democratic executive committee of Smith county met Tuesday and transacted considerable business. It was decided to make a vigorous canvass in behalf of the Democratic ticket, with the view of bringing out a full party vote. Speakers are to be sent over the county to stir up interest in the coming election.

By a vote of 17 to 1, the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved by the Democratic executive committee of Smith county:

1. That we heartily approve the course of Hon. James M. Edwards, the member of the State Democratic executive committee from this Senatorial District, at the meeting of said committee at Dallas on October 16.

2. That we hereby adopt and approve the resolution that was offered by our said representative, Hon. Jas. M. Edwards, at the last meeting of the State Democratic executive committee at Dallas, which resolution was as follows:

"Resolved, That the right of the Democrats of Texas at all times to consider, discuss and criticize the records of their Representatives in Congress and other public servants is fundamental and essential to their welfare. * * * And it is believed that an effort by this committee (State Democratic Committee) or its chairman to suppress or discourage freedom of speech and action on the part of the Democrats of the State would impair Democratic organization and prestige much more than will the free and satisfying speech and action of the Democratic masses, to whatever extent the same may proceed.

"Resolved, therefore, That this committee (State Democratic executive committee) and its chairman are without jurisdiction to control the views or actions of the sovereign Democrats of Texas with reference to the record or conduct of Senator Bailey, or with reference to his re-election; and it would be impolitic, unwise and futile for this committee to take any action which is intended or which may be construed as an effort to do so."

3. That "No United States Senator or Congressman has a right to accept fees or employment from the monopolies or other public service corporations, for the control of which he is sent to the United States Congress or the United States Senate."

4. We approve the course of Hon. M. M. Crane in boldly announcing and courageously defending the principles for which we stand.

There were nearly 600 feet of pipe in the well and it was lifted above the top of the derrick by the force of the gas and then dropped back into the well.

The Busy Hen in Ellis County.

Hillsboro: According to the census bureau Hill county is the banner county in the production of eggs, with a record of 1,791,000 dozen. Ellis county is second with 1,787,000 dozen. Hill county also ranks second in poultry, valued at $119,000. Collin county is first with $120,000 worth. The value of the eggs at 20 cents per dozen would be $58,200, and combining that with the value of the poultry would be $67,200.

Picking Some Cotton.

Waco: In a cotton picking tournament twenty miles south of Waco Wednesday, Sebe Johnson won first honors, having picked 1,135 pounds from 6:30 a. m. to the setting of the sun. The contest was conducted under rules with a committee of farmers acting as judges. He believes he can go over his highest mark. He is the champion of the world and challenges any one to contest the championship.

SELLING BAD BEEF.

Sensational Charges in Staid Old Vermont.

Burlington, Vt., Nov. 1.—Sensational charges were made yesterday in ten indictments which were returned by the Chittenden County Grand Jury in connection with the sale of diseased cattle in the State. According to the indictments two former members of the State Cattle Commission participated in these sales with a full knowledge that such cattle would be used for food.

Four of the indictments are against the Consolidated Refining Company. They contain 100 counts. Four additional indictments are against L. F. Brigham, manager of the Burlington Rendering Company. This company is controlled by the consolidated company and the indictments against Brigham are identical with those returned against the Consolidated Company.

The most sensational disclosures were made in the indictments which were returned against Dr. F. A. Rich, a veterinarian of this city and Victor Spear of Randolph, both of whom were members of the State Cattle Commission. Spear's term expired about a year ago and he was not reappointed. Rich was removed from the commission by Governor Bell just before the latter retired from office.

The indictments against the Consolidated Company and Brigham charge the sale of diseased meat in the State and also the shipment of such diseased meat out of the State. Rich and Spear are charged with selling diseased beef, which they had previously condemned to the rendering company.

Great Wolf Hunt Planned.

Lawton, Ok., Southwest Oklahoma is aglow with the prospects of being allowed the privilege to one more, perhaps for the last time, to participate in one of the greatest wolf hunts known to Oklahoma. Thanksgiving Day has been set aside for the celebrating of the wolf chase, and this year the hunt will surpass any similar undertaking ever witnessed in the "new" State. Hunters and sportsmen from as far north as Wichita, and as far south as Fort Worth, and all intermediate points, will be in attendance.

Judge Jos. E. Gary Dead.

Chicago, Judge Jos. E. Gary of the Superior Court died suddenly at his home in this city Wednesday. The specific cause of his death was degeneration of the heart muscles. The Judge had held court as usual on Tuesday, but was not in his usual health Wednesday morning, and sent word that he would not hold court. He steadily grew weaker throughout the day and expired quietly at about 2:30 o'clock.

St. Helena Is Ungarrisoned.

Jamestown, Island of St. Helena: For the first time in its history, since it became a British possession, St. Helena is now without a garrison. All the troops have been withdrawn as a measure of economy. The guns and ammunition have been removed and the island is left entirely defenseless. The outlook for the islanders is dark, as they practically lived off the garrison and will now have no market for their products.

Jewelry Workers Lose Fight.

Chicago: The Jewelry Workers' Union, which has been waging a four weeks' fight for an eight-hour day, has voted to call the contest off. The 400 skilled jewelry artisans will return to work immediately. It is not certain that the manufacturers will re-employ all of the men who struck. Several of the shops are said to have secured forces of non-union workmen, including many women.

Wanted Treatment at Asylum.

Lawton, Okla.: Believing herself demented, Mrs. H. C. Crow of this city disappeared and later a telegram announced that she had gone to the Territory insane asylum at Norman and given herself over to treatment. She has at times for several months appeared partially deranged and has often stated that a short period in the asylum would do her good.

Champion Typewriter.

New York: Rose L. Fritz, who won the world's championship for typewriting in Chicago last June came out ahead at the National Business Show in Madison Square Garden. She wrote 2,407 words from dictation in half an hour, making five errors. Of the thirteen entrants, Paul Munter, who defeated Miss Fritz last fall, came nearest to her record. He wrote 2,468 words, but made sixty-one errors.

Some Jones County Apples.

Anson: Mark Owens, the great apple man of Jones county, was in town a few days since with a load of apples that he raised on his farm in this county. Some of the apples in the load brought in measured 12 1/2 inches in circumference. Mr. Owens raised about 1,000 bushels this year and gathered 100 bushels off of three trees. The apples are well colored and highly flavored, and find a ready market at good prices.

HINT FOR LATE STAYERS.

Custom Borrowed from the Boers to Get Rid of Bores.

In South Africa candles are used for lighting purposes in the homes, and when a young Boer maiden has gentlemen visitors, the mother sticks a pin in the candle, and when it has burned to the pin the callers understand that it is time for their departure.

Mrs. Early, a society matron of Washington, recently made a visit to the Transvaal, and was impressed with the custom of the Boers that she determined to introduce it into her own home. Consequently the electric lights were removed and candles substituted in the drawing-room.

Mr. Staylate, a frequent though not always welcome caller, was one of the first visitors to call after the inauguration of the new custom. He witnessed the placing of the pin in the candle by Mrs. Early, and after she had gone ventured to inquire:

"Why, Miss Early, does your mother stick a pin in the candle?"

"Oh," responded the young woman with an air of apparent innocence, "mother learned that in South Africa as a way of sending home the Boers."

YES, THE DRAWER OPENED.

Jones Knew It, But Explanations Were Not in Order.

Jones was going away. And, as usual in such cases, it was up to Jones to put on a clean collar and shirt, and, incidentally, catch a train. He had no time to spare.

"Maria," he shouted downstairs, "where are my things?"

"In your bureau drawer, of course," floated up from the basement.

Jones then tackled the drawer. Stuck, of course. (They always do stick when you are in a hurry.) He pulled and heaved and said things unmentionable. Suddenly, with a perversity for which bureau drawers are noted, it flew open with a rush, and Jones, with a death-grip on the handles, shot clear across the room. The drawer couldn't go through the door, but Jones could, and did, landing at the foot of the stairs with a crash that jarred things mightily, just in time to hear the partner of his bosom ask:

"Did you get it open, Henry?"

That was adding insult to injury, and Henry stalked upstairs with fire in his eye, and said never a word.

Sea Trees.

Forms of life in the sea are far more wonderful than any that exist on land. However much one may doubt the stories of sea serpents, there are probably far bigger fish in the sea than ever come out of it; and as for plant life, it has been conclusively proved that sea trees 1,500 feet in height are quite common in the ocean. These monster trees are a kind of brown seaweed, the uppermost branches being only about a quarter of an inch in thickness. Countless bladders, like miniature balloons, and about as big as a hen's egg, form among the branches of the tree, and being filled with air, buoy up the trunk and branches so that they grow almost erect. Mammoth sea animals often build their nests in these trees, as they give off several degrees of heat, which makes the surrounding water comparatively warm.—Exchange.

New Light on Dairying.

In one of the model schools of the town a first-grade teacher was having a "lesson on cows." She was trying to impress on the young minds the various uses of the milk. Butter, cheese, etc., had been disposed of, and she wanted some bright genius to tell how the farmer fed the surplus milk to the pigs. Leading up to this, she asked the question:

"Now, children, after the farmer has made all the butter and cheese he needs, and uses what milk he wants for his family, what does he do with the milk that still remains?"

Dead silence followed for a moment, and then one little hand waved frantically. The teacher smiled and said, "Well, James."

"He pours it back into the cow!" piped James—Woman's Home Companion.

She Got a Job.

There is a true story of one young woman who had devoted almost a year to pulling wires and using all possible influence to gain an interview with a certain theatrical manager. At last her hopes were realized; she got her appointment and she was finally ushered into the manager's private office. He received her most cordially and offered her a chair. "Thank you," she said, gratefully, "I think I will sit down. I've been just ten months getting here and I'm a little tired." And the manager, who is really a great man and hence has a sense of humor, promptly engaged her.—"The Rialto," in Outlook.

Moral Responsibility.

"Did you get all your money honestly?" asked the censorious friend.

"I have no time to worry about that now," answered Dustin Stax. "I'm too busy with the moral responsibility of not letting others get it away from me by dishonest methods."—Washington Star.

Waiting for Him.

"Lushley is bothered a great deal by insomnia."

"You don't say? Is that why he drinks so much?"

"No; I refer to his wife's insomnia when he comes home from the club."

SERIAL STORY

Lavender Creighton's Lovers

By OLIVIA B. STROHM

(Copyright, 1925, by Olivia B. Strohm.)

CHAPTER VI.

Next morning Lavender strolled idly into the woods back of the fort. Familiarity with the forest had softened its terrors, and she welcomed its solitude now in relief from the curious eyes and wagging tongues of all in the garrison. For news of the averted duel had spread through the camp, and she was tired of questions, of whispers and looks askance.

The woods were more friendly; silent, save the sighing of leafless branches in restless wooing of the spring. Already, promise of her coming lay in the tiny brown buds of yellow-green shoots that peeped bravely out beneath the sheltering heaps of moldering leaves.

Occasionally Lavender stopped to pick a twig that the frost had glided, or a bit of sunchoke to which he had spared the scorch.

On a sudden, the whizz of an arrow rang in her ears, and she felt its wind on her face. At the moment, an Indian staggered through the underbrush. He turned upon her the beseeching look of a wounded stag, then with a guttural moan, fell as if lifeless at her feet.

Her impulse was to run, leaving the wounded man to his fate. For might not another arrow follow—herself its mark?

But after a moment's hesitation, she knelt at the Indian's side, and lifted the unconscious head to her lap.

The ghastly bunch of feathers protruded from the backskin coat; one instant's shuddering pause, then with a quick jerk she wrenched the arrow from its yet pulsing sheath. Warm, gushing, the blood followed. Untying her kerchief, she stanching its flow.

In the wounded man's belt was a flask of brandy with which she moistened his lips, and rubbed his great, limp hands and slanting forehead.

Slowly his eyes opened, and met her gaze, wide with pity.

"All right?" she murmured.

He nodded, keeping his gaze on her; then with an "Ugh!" of relief, closed his eyes again.

Affraid to call, the girl sat motionless. Shouts might bring another arrow, and surely help would come soon!

There was a rustle in a tangle of evergreen near; the bushes were parted, and a head, surmounted by a towering circle of gaudy feathers, peeped cautiously forth.

Lavender's heart almost stopped beating, but she gave no sign. The Indian advanced, his gigantic, plumed head brushing the trees. He stooped over the two figures on the ground, and without touching the girl, raised the arm of the unconscious one. Pushing back the sleeve, he examined the strange tattoo marks which defaced the dark skin. Apparently the scrutiny satisfied him—he rose, and, picking up the arrow, calmly wiped the blood from it and replaced it in his own quiver. Then without word or sign, he departed as silently as he had come.

In a stupor of fright, Lavender sat mechanically stanching the blood, her eyes upon the bushes whence the savage had intruded.

There were few hostile Indians about, and the settlers had grown bold. Lavender was as much surprised as alarmed at this sudden apparition. Familiar with all the friendly Indians about the fort, she knew the wounded man to be a stranger, and wondered at his presence in the neighborhood.

Suddenly her eyes alighted upon a packet that had fallen from a small knapsack he carried. This, with his travel-worn clothes, proclaimed him a runner—a bearer of messages from camp to camp.

For the second Indian she could not account, but this one was evidently come with news for Col. Mitchell.

In her haste to get the brandy, she had disturbed the dispatches, and a few blood spots dabbled the writing. Carefully she wiped away the stains, intending to replace them in the knapsack, when a name caught her eye—a name which made her turn from red to white with alarm—Charles Winslow, and closely following it the words, "spy" and "traitorous designs."

The writing fascinated her; the characters burnt deep into her memory, and she kept her gaze upon them as if to assure herself that she read aright—that the words "spy" and "traitor" did, indeed, stand close to the name of Winslow.

At the moment she heard footsteps—not stealthy. Firm and sure they crunched the dead leaves, and the noise was inspiring after the awful calm of the forest and its savage tenants.

She had only time to hide the packet of dispatches in the folds of her gown, when a familiar voice called her name, and Winslow's face, his eyes shining and wrathful, peered across the intervening thicket. "I've caught you, runaway!" he was beginning, but the words froze on his lips. "God in Heaven, what has happened?"

She lifted a warning finger, and tried to speak lightly, though her voice trembled. "Be careful; there are Indians about. This one was hurt by a random arrow; there may be others."

Winslow sprang to her side. "Shall I take your place; or would you rather wait a minute while I go for help?"

To his surprise, Lavender replied: "Neither—yet."

Then, with a gesture that enjoined silence she handed him the dispatches. On the bosom of her gown they had left a tiny red stain. "Read those," she commanded.

He hesitated. "You must be my first care, let the papers wait."

But she insisted: "Read!"

Indifferently he opened the papers, but at the first sentence started with an exclamation of indignant astonishment.

Rapidly his eyes scanned the page, but without wishing to finish it, he stooped to raise her. "Come." But she pushed him aside.

"What is in the paper? What does it mean?"

"It is a lie, and it means a prison," he replied, tersely. Then, bending over the wounded man: "He must be brought to camp," he said; "and you—you are wretchedly uncomfortable; come, let us—"

But she interrupted him. "I will not stir, or rouse this man until I know the contents of those dispatches; they fell from his knapsack, and I was about to put them back when I saw—" she hesitated, and looked around cautiously. "I saw your name, and another word, 'spy.' That was enough for me. I appropriated the dispatches. Now tell me the rest."

Bending low he whispered: "Burr is a prisoner. I am to be held here pending his trial. They have orders to arrest me."

A mischievous smile dimpled the corners of her mouth, and a little color crept into her pale cheeks.

"Pardon me, I have the orders to arrest you," she slipped the dispatches into his hiding place, and over the tell-tale spots of blood arranged anew the folds of her scanty gown.

Winslow was about to remonstrate, but she shook her head in warning as the Indian stirred restlessly and opened his eyes. He tried to rise, but sank back helpless.

"The wound is slight," Winslow said, after a hasty examination; "but he is faint from loss of blood. I will have a litter brought here as quickly as possible."

Lavender put out her hand, and grasping his sleeve, pulled him toward her, until her lips were very near his ear. "First you must promise me to say nothing of the dispatches—let us talk it over. Do nothing rash."

He pressed her hand in both of his, and, with a significant smile, hurried to the fort.

Soon the Indian rallied a little, and struggled to a sitting posture.

"Be patient; one has gone for help," Lavender said.

There was blood on her dress where the dusky head had lain, and the girl, tired and weak after the cramped position, staggered to her feet and leaned against a tree with an exhausted sigh.

All this the red man noted. "White maiden tired?" Then his eyes sought the knapsack, and he made an effort to reach it. Lavender quietly handed it to him, though her heart beat violently.

"See, it is empty," she said.

A strange smile crossed the man's dark face—a smile of cunning, secret intelligence. Only for an instant; it passed, and he wore again the impassive look—his savage soul once more a prisoner behind the inscrutable eyes.

"It is empty," he agreed, repeating her words and inflection; "Owatoga has lost the dispatches."

Then, stretching out his hand for the sack, he deliberately dropped it in the hollow of the tree back of him. There it lay out of sight. Satisfied that it was safely hidden, the Indian hung his head wearily, and neither moved nor spoke.

Lavender, too, stood silent, with every nerve alert—waiting.

It was not long before she heard voices and the tramp of feet. Led by Winslow, a party of soldiers from the fort came to the relief. A few questions were asked, and Lavender told her story. Her description of the second Indian who had so mysteriously come and gone, led them to believe him a wandering hunter whose arrow had flown wide of the mark. He doubtless belonged to the Osages of which tribe the wounded man was a member. Examination of the tattoo marks had satisfied him that he and his victim were akin—that they worshipped the Great Spirit and tortured their enemies after the same good way.

Probably there would have been no trouble in any event, but now they might feel doubly secure.

"And you Owatoga, you come from Washington?"

The Indian nodded, and his question—a corporal of the guard—persisted: "But where are the dispatches?"

In the second's pause which followed, Lavender held her breath.

"Owatoga has lost them," the Indian grunted, and, with a show of great trigue, his head fell forward on his breast.

"Beg pardon, corporal," Lavender interferred. "You see he is so weak; can not the questions wait?"

Obedient to her suggestion the squad proceeded to camp, leaving the wounded man on the litter.

Winslow and the corporal walked with Lavender. The officer said: "It is curious that Owatoga should have lost those dispatches. He is frequently sent from Fort Washington here, and is usually careful. He had nothing in the way of papers when he fell, Miss Creighton?"

Lavender paused to disentangle a bit of briar from her skirt, and replied, without looking up: "Indeed you can well imagine that I was too frightened to pay much attention to particulars."

"I am sure it was a pretty hard experience," the soldier agreed. "She is plucky, isn't she?" he said to Winslow, with an admiring nod in Lavender's direction.

"Very," was the laconic response, but Winslow's manner as he took her arm implied much more.

The soldier chatted aimlessly, and in silence the two followed him back to camp. Occasionally the maid stole a glance half humble, half defiant, at Winslow. He would shake his head with a severe frown—which, however, lost effect from the smile in his eyes.

At the bastion gate they separated, and while the corporal went in advance, Lavender lingered to say: "We hope to see you after supper, Mr. Winslow. Mother and I will be waiting in her room." The commonplace invitation was given strong meaning by her look—half command, half entreaty. This was emphasized, too, by a slight rustle of the papers as she clasped both hands to her bosom that rose and fell with every anxious breath.

When, an hour or two later, Winslow presented himself at Mrs. Creighton's door, it was with feelings hard to define. If the dispatch were discovered, or if it remained secret, were alternatives equally distasteful. The indignity of the guard house, the delay and ill-fame of a trial, scarcely more than balanced his horror at any underhanded proceeding.

"I will leave it to Fate," he thought, as he knocked for entrance. And then: "No, I will leave it to her," was his second resolve, as the door opened and Lavender stood before him.

For in spite of the defiant sparkle in her eyes, and the scarlet in each cheek, there was about her an atmosphere of such absolute innocence—such fearless consciousness of integrity, that Winslow was ashamed of his own scruples. They seemed pusillanimous beside her instinctive perception of the right.

"She is one of the few who can be a law unto herself, and yet walk the narrow path," he thought.

Mrs. Creighton came at once to the subject uppermost in the minds of all. "Lavender has told me everything, Mr. Winslow, and I have read the dispatch. I can scarcely contain my indignation, my sympathy for you, or my personal regret that you are brought to this trouble through care for us."

She beckoned him to a seat beside her, and her voice sank to a confidential tone; "but tell me what you think best to do."

Winslow hesitated. "There are two plans which suggest themselves. One is to go direct to the commander, explain all, and prove my innocence, if possible, relying upon his justice. The other—" he paused, meaningly, and lowered his voice. "The other—is to take French leave at our first opportunity."

Mrs. Creighton smiled as she said, sympathetically: "And you are at a loss how to act? I can well understand it."

But Lavender, who was all this time impatiently tapping her foot against the andiron, turned her back to the chimney piece, her whole figure vibrating with indignation. "You understand his hesitation, mother? Well, I confess I don't. Why should we give up these dispatches? It would do nobody any good, and would cause a great deal of harm. Mr. Winslow's conscience is clear—what is to be gained by the mockery of a trial? They would find him guilty, of course—then as her listeners started in surprise—"He is guilty of the only thing of which he stands accused—connection with the Burr expedition. You would not deny that. So you see it was providential that we got hold of the papers first. And that reminds me—" her mood changed, and she laughed merrily, "if I am not mistaken, I got hold of the papers first."

Here Winslow reminded her: "But you have forgotten the Indian. There is every reason to fear his explanation, or, in any case, the investigation he may set on foot."

Lavender did not reply for a moment. She was thinking of the Indian's face when he said "Owatoga has lost the dispatches." Of the look in his eye when he hid the empty knapsack. She recalled his silence later when interrogated by the corporal, and her belief was strong that from Owatoga he had nothing to fear.

But ashamed lest she be thought over-confident, she said only: "Let us not worry about Owatoga; only let us go as soon as we can."

"Then you approve of the French leave?"

"Strongly, sir; don't you, mother?" and she sank to the stool at her mother's feet—all the frowning impatience gone from the beautiful face.

Mrs. Creighton spoke softly, twisting the tiny curls on the fair, bent head at her knee. "From a selfish point of view, daughter, I certainly do. If Mr. Winslow stands trial, he will be detained here indefinitely, and we with him, or adrift without him. It is characteristic of his generosity that he lets two helpless women decide to their own advantage. We may prefer the more open course, and we must insist that he alone decide. It is a choice of evils—as are most things in his complex world." She ended between a smile and a tear.

"A hard choice, truly," Lavender agreed, with a saucy tilt of her chin. "But think of the brave company you would be in. Chose at once, sir—a prisoner here, alone, or a thief in the night with mother and me, the abetting malefactor?"

All joined in the laugh and Winslow felt his spirits rise as with a new and strange elixir. "A thief in the night be it, then!" he said in mock heroics.

Then soberly the plan of action was agreed upon. They were to say nothing of the dispatches, but to seize the first pretext to leave the fort.

"And in order that there may be no backsliding, the bridges must be burnt," and going to the grate, Lavender dropped the dispatches on the hearth of the coals. Slowly the edges uncurled in a last mischievous attempt to reveal the secret; then a greedy flame devoured the papers.

"Ashes!" Lavender exclaimed, in triumph. Then, turning to Winslow: "There is nobody now to call you spy or traitor!"

NEAR ENOUGH TO PROMISE

A Gardener Who Was Conscious of His Value and Was Correspondingly Important.

Joshua Willet was the best gardener in Bushby, and therefore, in a place where good gardeners were few, he was in great demand among the summer people, relating Youth's Companion.

"Josh, he lays claim to be a regular landscaper, and I don't know but he has a right to," said one of the natives. "He seems to have knowledge of setting a bush here and cutting away a limb there that isn't given to all; but the summer folks'll find they've got a job on hand if they expect to tie him down to set times for working!"

It turned out that this was the case, and one day an exasperated summer resident opened the vials of her wrath and poured them on Mr. Willet's head.

"When we pay you all you ask, and give you carte blanche—all the tools and everything you wish in the way of plants and shrubs and all sorts of garden materials," said the lady, indignantly, "I should think you might at least come on Thursdays, as you promised, instead of making it Wednesday, Thursday or Friday, just as it suits your convenience!"

"Now it's no manner of use for you to get riled, ma'am," said Mr. Willet, calmly. "When you said you'd like to have me come Thursdays, all I said was that I calculated to get round about the same day every week, and I have done it so far. Now if you'll move your foot, ma'am, I've planned to put a rose-garden just where you're grudging in the soil."

"You remember you sent me this group about five years ago?"

"Well," said his brother, "what about it?"

"This, you see this girl in the front row? Well, as soon as I saw her photo I fell in love with her. Man, she's perfect! Her face has been before me in all my wanderings, and I determined that I would make a fortune and then come home and lay it at her feet. Yes, I know it was an odd fancy to take, but I'm like that; and now that I've made the money I've come to you to know who she is and where I can find her."

"My dear old fellow," said Fred, kindly, "don't take it to heart, but—" "She's married!"

"No, it's not that; but that is a photograph of young Tom Robinson. He's a member of an amateur dramatic club, and when that was taken he was taking a girl's part!"

The following extract comes from a school girl's essay in a high school in India, and was published in the monthly magazine of the school: "King Henry VIII. was the greatest widower that ever lived. He was born at Anna Domino in the year 1066. He had 510 wives, besides children. The first was beheaded. The second was revoked. She never smiled again. But she said the word 'Calais' would be found on her heart after death. The greatest man in his reign was Lord Sir Garrett Wolsey. He was born at the age of 15 unmarried. Henry VIII. was succeeded on the throne by his great-grandmother, the beautiful and accomplished Mary Queen of Scots, sometimes known as the Lady of the Lake, or the Lay of the Last Minstrel."

A countryman registered at a hotel in Kansas City the other day. He did not explain on what "plan" he purposed to become a guest.

"European or American?" asked the clerk.

The guest looked surprised. "American," he said, emphatically. "Born and raised up here in Platte county. I don't look like no foreigner, do I?"

The Baptist church accepted the resignation of Rev. V. F. Walker as pastor last Sunday and called Rev. D. James for the ensuing year, and fixed his salary at $600 per year for full time.

Bro. Walker was led to sever his relation as pastor on account of his being a student in Stumous College at Abilene and his care of the churches so far away in addition to his school duties was too heavy a tax on him.

We regret to give up brother Walker as he is faithful and fearless, both as a citizen and as a minister. Where ever he goes his personality will impress itself on the people he labors among and our loss will be the gain of some other community.

Bro. James is well known in Haskell county, having lived in the town of Haskell for several years and presided all over this country. We predict for him a well welcome and a prosperous career in this charge, should he accept the charge.—Thurmer Pioneer.

Mr. H. J. Moseley, the leading druggist of Freeport, Ill., says: "I take pleasure in recommending Hart's Honey and Horsebalm. It is a good seller and gives the best of satisfaction to my trade." Sold at Terrell's drug store.

THE DARK TOWN MINSTRELS.

Entertainment by the Local Company Great Success.

The entertainment given Thursday night of last week at the court house by the local club of young people, who pose under the title of the "The Dark Town Minstrels," was a great success, both in the amusement furnished to one of the largest audiences ever gathered in Haskell and in financial results.

About thirty young ladies & young men took part in the entertainment and their acting and the ease and fluency with which they took off their several parts is much to their credit as well as a compliment to Miss Ella Day, under whose training the stage setting and entertainment were prepared.

We would like to mention some of the special features of the entertainment, if circumstances connected with this issue of the paper permitted, but will have to be content with saying that, the songs, negro impersonations, localized witicism, cake walk, etc., were well chosen and rendered in as catchy a manner as is usually done by professionals, and the large audience was immensely pleased and satisfied.

THE STREET FAIR.

The Haskell Street Fair came off on schedule time last Friday and Saturday, and, although the exhibits were not as numerous in some departments as they were last year, it may be counted a success, from the fact that they were first-class in quality.

This is especially true of the exhibits in the farm products and vegetables department, in which were shown many as fine specimens as could be produced anywhere under any circumstances.

The ladies department was also a thing of beauty and a great success.

We had intended to go into details in describing some of the exhibits, but circumstances prevent us doing so in this issue and we are forced to defer it until next week, when we will attempt to do so.

THE ELECTRICAL WORLD

FOR THE RIFLEMAN.

An Electric Self-Registering Target Has Been Devised.

A target, for rifle practice, in which the position of each shot is at once registered on a dial at any desired distance, has been invented by Col. George A. Peters, of Toronto, Canada. The advantage of the device is that it avoids the cost of constructing a target for the protection of the marksmen, and saves the heavy wages bill involved with ordinary balanced canvas targets, which require two men each for marking. The principle of the apparatus resembles that of the ordinary hotel annunciator, the impact of the bullets being received by hammers behind the target, which close electric circuits and thus register the results on the dial. Says a contributor to Engineering:

"When the target is brought into use, it is raised by means of suitable levers worked from behind the target box by a wire attached to these levers, and worked from the firing-point, until the hammers rest against the

of the hammers, and the position of the shot is thus recorded at the firing-point. * * * The form of the hammer is such that when it is stopped in its backward movement by the bumper-plate its center of gravity is well in front of the bearing-pin, so that it immediately falls back again to its original position, resting against the back of the target plate. When the position of a shot has been ascertained, the indicator board is 'cleared' by a frame * * * worked electrically by a push-button placed near the marksmen on the firing-point.

The arrangement by which the target is carried on a swinging frame has been designed with a view to its adjustment to suit the force of bullets of varying weight and velocity, and with regard to the length of the range. Thus with a service rifle at 200 yards the target plate is lowered until the hammers rest with their lower sides at an angle of about 50 degrees with the bumper-plate. At longer ranges with lighter charges, the target is raised, and with it the series of hammers, until the angle is such that on a bullet striking directly over a hammer only that hammer is affected. Each hammer will, however, respond to the impact of a bullet striking within three inches of the point on the target against which it rests. Thus each forms the center of a circle six inches in diameter, and will record the position of a shot striking within that circle. The hammers are so arranged that these circles overlap in all directions, so that no part of the target can be struck without one or more hammers being affected. Should a bullet strike where two, three or four circles overlap, all the hammers within those circles will be operated, and a corresponding number of disks on the indicator will fall. It is quite easy to determine from these disks the exact point of the target struck by the bullet.

Front View of Indicator Dial.

back of the target plate, at an angle suitable to the weight and velocity of the bullet. When a bullet strikes the target, its force is communicated to one or more hammers within the area affected by the blow, and these are raised until the back strikes the bumper-plate and contact is made by the projecting lugs at the lower ends

MONEY IN FRENCH BANKS.

Figures Give Eloquent Testimony to Thrift of Nation.

Alfred Neymarck, a French statistician, has recently made a computation of the savings and investments of the people of France, with the result that he calculates that from 1885 to 1905 the deposits in the great banks of the country increased from $182,400,000 to $579,400,000. In the same period the deposits in the Bank of France increased from $71,500,000 to $164,600,000. The value of bonds deposited in the banks increased from $622,800,000 to $1,386,000,000. The six great railroads sold $1,896,493 of bonds out of a capital of $803,200,000, and canceled on their old and new loans $432,800,000.

From 1880 to 1905 the depositors in the savings banks have subscribed and paid for $840,000,000 of government bonds. The limit that each person can deposit in the savings banks is $300. The interest on this sum if not drawn, is invested by the bank in government bonds. From 1891 to 1903 the same class of people subscribed for and held $104,000,000 of bonds issued by the French colonies and protectorates, $189,000,000 of city of Paris bonds, and $185,000,000 of local communal bonds and those of mortgage and loan companies.

From 1865 to 1905 the deposits in the people's savings banks increased from $442,200,000 to $642,000,000, while the number of depositors increased from 4,900,000 to 7,000,000 and the possessions of the mutual relief societies from $11,200,000 to $32,600,000.

Mr. Neymarck estimates the aggregate value of stocks, bonds and other securities in the hands of French capitalists, $14,800,000,000 in 1890, at $17,400,000,000 in 1900, and $18,800,000,000 at the end of the year 1905.

Jerome and Jerome.

That a prophet is not without a certain degree of honor and recognition, save in his own country, has been proved again at the hands of a young Louisville person.

The young man in question reads things and talks about them with a careless abandon that frequently brings some startling information to light.

Recently he was extolling to a friend the virtues of Mr. Jerome, of New York. The friend did not fully agree as to the extent of Mr. Jerome's powers, but finally laughed and said, "Well, I guess William Travers is all right, at that."

"Who's all right?" asked the young chap, with elevated brows.

"Why, William Travers Jerome," replied his friend. "That's his name, isn't it?"

The young champion of Mr. Jerome laughed loud and long.

"Well, of all the darn fools," he cried. "Don't you know his name is Jerome K. Jerome?" — Louisville Times.

Anecdotes of Dan O'Connell.

There are a good many interesting stories told of the famous Daniel O'Connell. Once he was defending a prisoner indicted for murder. The principal witness against the defendant swore that the prisoner's hat had been found near the place of the murder. The hat was then produced in court, and the witness swore positively that it was the same one that was found, and that it belonged to the prisoner.

"By virtue of your oath, are you positive that this is the same hat?"

"Yes."

"Did you examine it carefully before you swore that it was the prisoner's?"

"Yes."

"Now, let me see," said O'Connell, as he took up the hat and began carefully to examine the inside of it. He paused with a curious expression on his face, and then spelled aloud, "J-a-m-e-s. Now, do you mean to say that that name was in the hat when you found it?" he asked, turning to the witness.

"I do."

"Did you see it there?"

"I did."

"And this is the same hat?"

"Yes."

"Now, my lord," said the lawyer, turning to the judge, "there's an end to this case. There is no name whatever within this hat."

The prisoner was instantly acquitted.—The Sunday Magazine.

Let Him Right In.

A minister, addressing a meeting of the London Bible society, of which the marquis of Anglesey was president, said that St. Peter refused to admit the marquis as a peer, or as Wellington's old officer, or lord lieutenant of Ireland, or the leader of the horse guards at Waterloo; but let him right in as soon as he knew that he was president of the Bible society.

To a man who told a minister that a sinner was kept in hades only long enough to repent, the clergyman replied: "Well, if you'd rather go to heaven by way of hades, there's nothing to hinder your trying."

In Greenland, the missionaries had to describe heaven as a hot place, to make it attractive to the Eskimo; but when a West African had ice described to him, he thought that the missionary was lying or that it was to be seen only in heaven.—The Sunday Magazine.

All Changed.

"Don't be so snappy," said Wrounder. "There was a time when you used to call me the light of your life."

"Yes," replied his wife, "but that was before you began to go out every night."

When a man and his wife get along nicely together all the women in the neighborhood think it's because the wife is boss.

Keeping Parents in Subjection.

In the life of the very rich some parents still seek to resemble those curfew incarnate in humble life who keep the girls at home and the boys out of the barrooms. Middle life and old age are too hidebound to get accustomed to the manners of the new generation of young men who are old and worn before they graduate and of young women who win or lose large sums at gambling. Children have a right to expect from their parents docile obedience. At first this may be difficult, but, as Aristotle says, "Virtue is a habit," and it can be acquired. —N. Y. Evening Post.

Waiter's Modest Request.

Melba admires the independence of her fellow Australians, but on one occasion she had rather a pronounced experience with what she calls their "delightful impudence." She had waited a long time for dinner at her hotel in a large mining town and finally made a sharp complaint to the waiter. "Well, ma'am," said he, coolly, "you might sing us a song to pass the time." This to a vocalist who one evening received $5,000 from William Waldorf Astor for singing four songs in his London mansion.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous membrane of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running ear or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and the tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give you Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness caused by Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure, sent for free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists.

A Rule and an Exception.

According to the New York Tribune, a country paper lays down this rule of etiquette: "When a lady and gentleman are walking in the street, the lady should walk inside of the gentleman."

It seems a little strange that this simple rule, so long current among the cannibal tribes of the Andaman and other islands, should find its way into a rural journal of more or less civilization. It would appear that the etiquette editor of the paper in question was either too careless or too hurried to note any exceptions to the rule. Otherwise he would have explained that when the gentleman was thirsty and desired to enter a cafe, the lady would walk on the outside.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Consummate Nerve.

Senator Tillman, at a banquet in Charleston, said of a notorious corporation:

"This is what I dislike about these people.

"They break the law with bribery and with corruption, and then, if there is a strike among their hands, a window broken, a gate torn down, they are the first to come whining to the law—these lawbreakers—for protection. What nerve, what impudence!"

Senator Tillman paused and smiled.

"Do you know what, in their nerve, they remind me of?" he said. "They remind me of a man who takes shelter from a thunderstorm in an umbrella shop."

HARD TO SEE.

Even When the Facts About Coffee Are Plain.

It is curious how people will refuse to believe what one can clearly see. Tell the average man or woman that the slow but cumulative poisonous effect of caffeine—the alkaloid in tea and coffee—tends to weaken the heart, upset the nervous system and cause indigestion, and they may laugh at you if they don't know the facts.

Prove it by science or by practical demonstration in the recovery of coffee drinkers from the above conditions, and a large per cent. of the human family will shrug their shoulders, take the drugs and—keep on drinking coffee or tea.

"Coffee never agreed with me nor with several members of our household," writes a lady. It enervates, depresses and creates a feeling of languor and heaviness. It was only by leaving off coffee and using Postum that we discovered the cause and cure of these ills.

"The only reason, I am sure, why Postum is not used altogether is the exclusion of ordinary coffee is, many persons do not know and do not seem willing to learn the facts and how to prepare this nutritious beverage. There's only one way—according to directions—boil it fully 15 minutes. Then it is delicious." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pgs. Plenty More!

Russell Sage was much opposed to drinking. He would often rail with homely and humorous wisdom against drink.

"Men drink," he said one day to a byker, "because they are happy, because they are sad, because they are too warm, because they are too cold. Is there any logic in that?"

"When I see men drinking I think of a little boy at the seashore.

"This little boy, at play with his bucket and shovel in the sand, suddenly ran to the edge of an advancing wave, and, scooping up a handful of salt water and foam, drank it greedily.

"Oh, don't drink that," said his nurse. "It will make you thirsty."

"What if it does?" said he. "There's plenty more!"

THE TICKING OF THE CLOCK.

Soothing Company to Some Sleepers Cause of Wakefulness in Others.

"Not all people," said the jeweler, "like the ticking of a clock; it is a pleasant sound to most people, but not to all.

"Some people, clock lovers these, couldn't sleep without a clock in the same room. Its ticking is company and it scares away the spooks. Such people would wake up if the clock should stop in the middle of the night.

"But there are other people who can't sleep with a clock in the same room and who, if they found themselves in a strange place anywhere with a clock in their sleeping apartment, would stop the clock before they went to bed.

"Of course there is much of habit in this; but we have our fancies about clocks, as we do about all things else."

The Human Family Exaggerative.

is one that can be used by the entire family, young and old, weak and strong, without any danger of harmful effects. It should have properties which insure the same dose always having the same effect, otherwise the quantity will have to be increased and finally lose its effect altogether. These properties can be found in that old family remedy, Brandreth's Pills, because its ingredients are of the purest herbals, and every pill is kept for three years before being sold, which allows them to mellow. We do not believe there is a laxative on the market that is so carefully made.

Brandreth's Pills are the same fine laxative tonic pills your grandparents used. They have been in use for over a century and are for sale everywhere, either plain or sugar-coated.

Value of Woman's Nose.

An Englishwoman was awarded $500 damages for a broken nose. The judge said: "If my nose were injured I do not suppose the jury would allow me anything, but a woman stands in a different category."

Two French cases are apropos. In one a man was awarded $150 for a nose broken in a fight, while in the other $600 was received by a young woman whose nose was broken in a collision. The woman was an artist's model, and what would have been a trifle to a man was a serious matter to her, as it would probably prevent her from earning her living as a model.

The Zulu War Cry.

The Zulu war cry, used whenever they take the field by the South African footballers now in London, has puzzled our newspapers, not one of which seems able to spell it correctly, says Notes and Queries. The Daily Express gives it as "gammilzho," and the Daily Mail as "gammillo." The cry really consists of two words, and should be written "igama layo." "igama" is Zulu for "name," and "layo" is a possessive pronoun, meaning either "his" or "their." Thus the Daily Mail, although quite wrong in its orthography of the cry, is right in saying that it merely means "That is his name." The explanation is that Zulu etiquette does not allow warriors, when they rush into battle, to mention the names of their enemies, but the leaders shout out, "That is his name," pointing to the victims with their spears.

THEY CURE RHEUMATISM

A Particularly Painful Form of This Disease Yields to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

Of the many forms which rheumatism takes, that which is popularly known as sciatic rheumatism probably tortures its victim more than any other. That Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured this stubborn as well as painful trouble is a fact proven by the following statement, and no sufferer who reads this can afford to let prejudice stand in the way of trying these blood-making pills.

Rheumatism is now generally recognized as a disease of the blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make—actually make—pure blood. When the blood is pure there can be no rheumatism. Mrs. Thomas Bronschan, of 54 Mill street, Watertown, N. Y., says:

"My trouble began with a severe cold which I took about a week before Christmas in 1904. I began to have rheumatic pains in my back and limbs and after a time I couldn't straighten up. I suffered the most awful pain for months and much of the time was unable to leave the house and I had to take hold of a chair in order to walk and sometimes I could not stand up at all.

"The disease was pronounced sciatic rheumatism and, although I had a good physician and took his medicine faithfully, I did not get any better. After some six weeks of this terrible pain and suffering I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and that is the medicine that cured me. After a few boxes the pain was less intense and I could see decided improvement. I continued to take the pills until I was entirely cured and I have never had any return of the trouble."

All druggists sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, or the remedy will be mailed post-paid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Tons of Metal Saved by Electrical Device

Men at Work Rescuing the Metals.

After several fruitless endeavors, the Selby Smelting company, of San Francisco, have at last succeeded in securing a method by which it is hoped to recover the several hundred tons of metal that melted and sank to the basement of the Selby shot tower during the fire.

The Dwyer-Frickey Electrical company has been engaged during the last month or so in recovering the ores through an electrical process. After removing several tons of bricks, channels were cut through the bed of metal by forcing electrical heat of great power on its surface. After these channels are all cut through it will be a simple matter for the workmen to throw up the blocks of metal in blocks of nearly a ton each in weight.

There are still about 200 tons of lead, zinc and tin remaining firmly imbedded in the ruins of the shot tower.

To recover this it is expected that the work will take all the winter. This metal bed is from three to four feet thick and covers the entire floor of the ruins. The process used by the Dwyer-Frickey company to remove this is known as the electrical arc process, and one of its peculiar features is that while the heat and light obtained in this way is intense and blinding, only ten volts of electricity are used on each implement. Men with their heads and faces covered with queer hats with canvas curtains to protect their eyes are now cutting great channels through the bed. Large piles of metals that have been cut away from the solid mass are lying about the ruins and resemble a sort of mining enterprise. Interested spectators hung about the ruins all day yesterday and watched the work with many curious looks at the strange looking electrical implements the men used.

A Gold and Steel Engine.

A watchmaker of Ontario has made a remarkable working model of an engine. It weighs only four grains, and is made of gold and steel, says the London Globe. It would take 129 of these almost microscopic engines to weigh an ounce, while 1,920 would be required to weigh a pound, and 3,840,000 to weigh a ton. The speed and horse power of this little model have been estimated by Prof. Chant, of the University of Toronto. It makes 6,000 revolutions per minute, and its working power is 1-498500 of a horse power. The bore of its cylinder is 3-100 of an inch in diameter, and the length of its stroke 1-32 of an inch. Truly a wonderful little engine.

"For over thirty-five years I was a severe sufferer from eczema. The eruption was not confined to any one place. It was all over my body, limbs, and even on my head. I am sixty years old and an old soldier, and have been examined by the Government Board over fifteen times, and they said there was no cure for me. I have taken all kinds of medicine and have spent large sums of money for doctors, without avail. A short time ago I decided to try the Cuticura Remedies, and after using two boxes of Cuticura Soap, two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, and two bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, two treatments in all, I am now well and completely cured. A thousand thanks to Cuticura. I cannot speak too highly of the Cuticura Remedies. John T. Roach, Richmondale, Ross Co., Ohio, July 17, 1905."

MOONSHINING IN NEW YORK.
 Still Constantly Working in Crowded Sections of the City.

"Don't talk to me about moonshining in Kentucky," said the internal revenue agent. "There's more moonshining going on all the time in little old New York than could be done in ten Kentucks. In the crowded sections of the East and West sides stills spring up right along and for awhile conduct a flourishing business in the low grade whisky they manufacture. "You see, it doesn't take much trouble to equip a still with corn and yeast and start in to make the mash which is finally turned out as a pretty poor sort of whisky. The great difficulty is in getting rid of the peculiar smoke and odor from the stills without exciting suspicion. This is usually attempted by running the still in connection with a dye shop or some other chemical enterprise as a blind. We keep watch on all such establishments and have the town well covered by sharp-eyed and sharp-nosed agents besides."
 "We are constantly arresting these small moonshiners and sending them to jail. But enough spring up in their places for you to say with safety that, as I say, there's more moonshining going on in New York city right along than there could be in ten Kentucks."

CODICIL WITH A POINT.
 Jocular Bequest of David Hume to His Lifelong Friend.

A jocular bequest of David Hume to his friend John Home was curious. Home liked claret and disliked port, calling it poison, and the two friends had many discussions on the subject. They also used to have disputes as to which of them took the proper way of spelling their common family name. The philosopher, about a fortnight before his death, wrote with his own hand the following codicil to his will: "I leave to my friend, Mr. John Home, of Kilduff, ten dozen of my old claret of his choice and one single bottle of that liquor called port. I also leave him six dozen of port provided that he attends under his hand, signed John Hume, that he himself alone finished that bottle at two sittings. By this concession he will at once terminate the only two differences that ever arose between us concerning temporal matters."

Mouse Killed Cat.
 It is not often that a mouse kills a cat. Such a death, however, was meted out recently to a fine black cat in a Cape May hotel.

The cat caught the mouse, and began, as cats will, to play with it, to tease it. For some ten minutes this went on.
 And then, all of a sudden, the cat found herself struggling for her life. In mauling the mouse, without desiring to hurt it, she had inadvertently half-swallowed it. There it was, stuck in her throat, choking her to death.

For three or four minutes the cat choked and gasped. Then it fell over dead. And the mouse, oddly enough, was disgorged at the moment the cat died. The mouse was alive. It lay on the floor a moment resting. Then it stole away after one triumphant look at the dead body of the cat which it had killed.

Beardless Americans.
 The fantastic trimming of beards into formal shapes corresponding to old-fashioned box-hedges began during Elizabeth's reign, and has continued to a greater or less degree to the present day. In England now a gentleman is supposed to wear a moustache, and until comparatively recently the growth of one was the first ambition of the youth of this country. It is hardly ten years since the American usage changed, but the revolution was so complete, when it did arrive, that nowadays, young men are almost invariably clean-shaven, and their elders are gradually yielding to the new fashion.—North American Review.

An Uncertain Obituary.
 A Georgia man has written the following on an oak slab which marks a supposed grave in a meadow:
 "This spot is sacred to the memory of a faithful animal—a white mule, born ten years before the civil war, and went through that war on a rush, from Bull Run to Lee's surrender. We ain't certain that the mule died here, but when last seen the faithful critter was grazing on this identical spot and trying to kick a lightning flash back to the clouds."

Lucky Horseshoe.
 "I see you have a horseshoe nailed over your door. I hope you are not so superstitious as to believe that they are lucky," remarked the visiting friend.
 "That horseshoe was on the horse that kicked my uncle to death. My uncle left me nearly a million dollars. I am not superstitious, but somehow I can't help but think that there's some luck about a horseshoe."

Irish Object to Cromwell Statue.
 When the British parliament reassembles a motion will be made, at the instance of the Irish party, for the removal of the statue of Oliver Cromwell from the precincts of the house of parliament, where it now stands.

FROM GIRLHOOD TO WOMANHOOD

Mothers Should Watch the Development of Their Daughters—Interesting Experiences of Misses Borman and Mills.

Every mother possesses information which is of vital interest to her young daughter.
 "Too often this is never imparted or is withheld until serious harm has resulted to the growing girl through her ignorance of nature's mysterious and wonderful laws and penalties.
 Girls' over-sensitiveness and modesty often puzzle their mothers and baffle physicians, as they so often withhold their confidence from their mothers and conceal the symptoms which ought to be told to their physician at this critical period.
 When a girl's thoughts become sluggish, with headache, dizziness or a disposition to sleep, pains in back or lower limbs, eyes dim, desire for solitude; when she is a mystery to herself and friends, her mother should come to her aid, and remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will at this time prepare the system for the coming change, and start this trying period in a young girl's life without pain or irregularities.
 Hundreds of letters from young girls and from mothers, expressing their gratitude for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished for them, have been received by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., at Lynn, Mass.
 Miss Mills has written the two following letters to Mrs. Pinkham, which will be read with interest:
 Dear Mrs. Pinkham:— (First Letter.) "I am but fifteen years of age, am depressed, have dizzy spells, chills, headache and backache."

Uncanny Chinese Legend.
 There are two celebrated towers of the imperial city, the Bell tower and the Drum tower. As to the casting of the bell in the former there is this legend: There had been two unsuccessful attempts and the life of the founder was threatened in case of a third failure. His daughter discovered by occult means that nothing but the blood of a virgin mingled with the molten metal would insure success. So at the next casting she sacrificed her life by throwing herself into the molten metal, leaving only one shoe behind. The casting was perfect. But when the bell was first struck "all were horror-stricken as, after the heavy boom of the bell, came a low wail, as of a girl in agony, distinctly saying the word 'heish,' shoe. And to this day people when they hear it, say, 'There's poor Ko-ai's voice calling out for her shoe.'"—Szechuan Times.
Leaves Literature for Invention.
 It is said that Gabriele d'Annunzio has wearied of literature and now aspires to become a great inventor. His discoveries up to date are a new system for bicycles which does away with the rubber tire and a sure cure for baldness. The discoverer is still very bald.

Gymnasium Organized.

Quite a number of the young people of Haskell held a meeting Monday night and organized a gymnasium club, for which they elected the following officers: Miss Mamie Meadors, president; Carey Touchstone, vice president; Miss Eula Poole, secretary; Caleb Terrell, Treasurer. It is the purpose of the club to procure and equip a suitable hall. The proceeds of the "Dark Town Minstrel" performance go to this purpose, the club will probably give other entertainments from time to time.

MADE HAPPY FOR LIFE.

Great happiness came into the home of S. C. Blair, school superintendent, at St Albans, W. Va., when his little daughter was restored from the dreadful complaint he names. He says: "My little girl had St. Vitus' Dance, which yielded to no treatment but grew steadily worse until as a last resort we tried Electric Bitters, and I rejoice to say, three bottles effected a complete cure." Quick, sure cure for nervous complaints, general debility, female weaknesses, impoverished blood and malaria. Guaranteed by Terrell's drug store. Price, 50c.

AN HONEST STATEMENT.

Mr. William Acton of 212 Fourth St., Lincoln, Ill., says: "Our daughter, aged sixteen, was suffering with a severe cough and cold on her lungs. Common remedies seemed to afford no relief and myself and her mother feared pneumonia or consumption. She began taking Hart's Honey and Horehound and in less than two weeks was entirely cured. We always recommend Hart's Honey and Horehound to anyone suffering with a deep-seated Cough or Cold. Sold at Terrell's drug store."

There is no Reason why your baby should be thin and fretful during the night. Worms are the cause of thin, sickly babies. It is natural that a healthy baby should be fat and sleep well. If your baby does not retain its food, don't experiment with colic cures and other medicine, but try a bottle of White's Cream Vermifuge, and you will soon see your baby have color and laugh as it should. Sold by Terrell's drug store.
