Mrs. Bertha Lowin is shown above standing by the historic altar

Historic Handmade Altar Used by Newcastle's Only Catholic Congregation, Placed in Ft. Belknap Museum

Mrs. Bernice Marie (Bertha) Lowin, who lives in northeast part of Newcastle has given an historic handmade altar, and many smaller items, to the Fort Belknap museum.

ALTAR

The altar was used in all Catholic masses held in Newcastle, Texas. It was in front of this altar their weddings, baptisms, funerals, and other ceremonials were held. The altar is the handcarved handiwork of Mrs. Lowin's father, Joseph Novakowski.

The handcarved altar, a Polish Bible, candleabras, religious statues, and several handmade items (baby rattle, carved dolls, etc.) are included in the gift to Fort Belknap. The old footpedaled organ used in the church for all services is the property of Mrs. Lowin's son.

For several years Mrs. Lowin has wished to present these historic items to the museum. Mrs. H. R. Ledbetter related Mrs. Lowin's wishes to Dr. Cora M. Oneal, President of Fort Belknap Historical Society, and to Dr. K. F. Neighbours, President of Fort Belknap Genealogical Society. Dr. Oneal immediately made official acceptance of the items. Dr. Oneal said, "We are extremely happy to have Mrs. Lowin's contribution to the museum. It is this kind of things in which we are interested. The people of this area will be pleased with this addition to our continuing historical collection."

Dr. Neighbours said, "This is a very significant gesture by Mrs. Lowin. The only thing that could possibly be of more historical significance is perhaps the finding of the Catholic altar used in the 1850's at Fort Belknap. This is historical and shows the interest of the people of the area."

Dr. Oneal moved to make available proper display cases for the historical items at the Fort museum.

NEWCASTLE CATHOLIC CONGREGATION

By the year 1909, people were coming into Newcastle and the coal mining area by the hundreds. The little town was officially organized, the boom was on, and people settled down to daily work in the mines, in the blacksmith shops, livery stables, dry goods and hardware stores, cafes, etc. The citizens of the town began immediately to think about a school for their children, and a church for their family. One of the first such church gatherings was that of the Catholic Church. Many miners were from all walks of life, and many were from all religious beliefs, and some were of the Catholic faith. The first such gathering of worshipers in the Catholic faith met in the Novakowski home.

Many new residents in the tents and small houses in the town of Newcastle were natives of Poland, Germany, France, Italy, Russia, Lithuania, Mexico, Holland, Denmark, Austria, Bulgaria, and England. Many came to the coal mines via the mines on the eastern seaboard.

IMMIGRANTS

Poland drove the Russians from her soil in 1830. Russia recaptured Poland and made Russian the official language of Poland. During the next 70 years there was a constant on-again off-again rule of Russia over Poland. This condition in Poland caused many good citizens to flee the country in search of civil and religious liberties. Near the turn of the century one of these young Polish immigrants was Joseph Novakowski. He first settled in Pennsylvania and became a miner. He had been a leather finisher and a nursery expert in Poland. He was the manager (Mayor) of a village some 40 miles from Warsaw. After his arrival in America, he worked toward one goal—to bring his wife and children to America. Mining was hard work and only the superior physical stamina of these early day miners sustained them. They were usually conscientious and religious men. Most of them were seeking a better life.

His family of six members arrived from Poland to make their home in Thurber, Texas. They came by boat from Bremerhaven, Germany, to New York, Cuba, New Orleans, and on to Thurber.

Upon arrival they told the story of how the enemy of Poland had forced the people to destroy any and everything pertaining to religious beliefs. In their home was an oil painting of "Mother Mary and the Christ Child." The family decided they would somehow get the canvas to their new home in America. The canvas was folded and placed in the bosom of clothing of the mother. She traveled by ship to America with the little family treasure hidden beneath her clothing. From Thurber to Strawn, and on to Newcastle came the Novakowski family. Shortly after arrival in Newcastle, the father took the oil painting and carved a frame and altar from used wooden cracker boxes. The family altar, with the oil painting as its center, was now a family treasure.

"THE LITTLE CHURCH IN THE WILDWOOD"

With no Catholic Church in the immediate area, the Novakowski family invited all Catholics of the town and area to assemble in one of the rooms of their home, located northeast of Newcastle.

The first of only two priests to serve the church was Father Sunday. He came from Strawn in a one horse buggy to conduct services in the home. The parishioners affectionately called their priest Father "Sunday." After some research, this writer found the Father "Sunday" to be the most Reverend Paul Niedziela, born in Poland on June 21, 1872. He served the Newcastle Catholic Church from 1911 to about 1920. Later, Father Moseler traveled from Seymour by train to hold mass. He served until just prior to WWII. The name "Little Church in the Wildwood" was given by Father Moseler.

Joseph Novakowski, 1852-1931 and his wife Frances, 1857-1934 were the parents of Frances, Bernice Marie (Bertha), Genevieve (Janie), Joseph, Katie and Cecil. The mother of this family was the former Frances Brecht, native of Germany.

Bertha was born near Warsaw, Poland, June 29, 1889. As a youthful Polish girl, she married John G. Lowin (1886-1956) a Lithuanian. John, son of Jacob and Rosalie Lowin, came to America at age of 13 to live with an uncle. He worked for a family by the name of Kennedy in Massachusetts. After several years he became a US Sailor. He sailed the seas for several years and later became a miner and a railroad employee. John Lowin's father, Jacob, was a Captain in the Russian army for 30 years.

Bertha remembers many of her early day neighbors in Newcastle. Some were—Berkoben, Tetmeyer, McBride, Rowe, Baldwin, Dover, McKinney, Ward, Supino, Sadberry, Savage, Hobush, Sostrich, Windham, Roman, Day, Blackburn, Tirey, Daniels, and many others.

Mrs. Lowin's son, Johnny, is employed by the Conoco Oil Co. in Monroe, La. He married Martha Lee Morris and they have five children, John David, Mary Anna, Amy Frances, Carolyn Jane and Linda.

Bertha Lowin is lovable, hard-working, and deeply religious. She has no enemy and is loved by young and old alike. She has always been evangelistic in her dealings with people. Christ has always been an unseen guest

For nearly 50 years she has made room for those seeking room and board. See recalls how she scrubbed, cooked, ironed, worked in the field, raised hogs and chickens, nursed the sick, helped the destitute, and still found time for her family, and for a little rest. FURNISHINGS Alone Do Not Make a Home

Landscaping, oriental rugs, family heirlooms, and comfortable furniture are desirable, and help. Electric refrigeration, automatic heat, air conditioning, scientific lighting—all make their contribution. But, are these enough?

Church Inspiration Is Necessary

Living makes a home. The Church offers ideals for living—Sacredness of marriage—Family comradeship—Reserves for days of trouble—Comfort in sorrow—Joy in wholesome living.

Let's get this straight—Furnishings alone do not make a home! Love and loyalty must also be there. Your Church inspires and helps you to make yours an ideal home.

"The congress of unborn children would undoubtedly choose homes where the family lived a joyous and comradely life together."

QUESTION: We're anxious to eliminate the opening and closing of our cattle gate by installing a cattle guard. What kind would you recommend?

ANSWER: A simple method of construction for a cattle guard is to weld lengths of old 2-inch pipe across H-beams. The length of the cattle guard should be at least 6 feet. If it is necessary to make it longer than 10 feet, we recommend making the guard in two sections for easier lifting, with a 1 1/4-inch pipe slipped through the inside of two sections to hold them together. Lifting is essential, of course, in cleaning out the cattle guard. The H-beams should be placed 2 to 3 feet apart and you'll need three to five beams, depending on length of the guard.

Two-inch pipes welded across H-beams make effective cattle guard.

The base for the cattle guard can be recessed cement blocks. Lay them in the ground side by side at right angles to the pipe and H-beams so the blocks will not collapse from weight on the guard. Then place the beams on the blocks.

QUESTION: What causes foginess in a barn on cold days and mugginess on warm days? I can't seem to get rid of this condition in my barn.

ANSWER: Such a problem usually stems from lack of sufficient ventilation, a condition which normally can be improved by installing exhaust fans or a ventilating system. Only by maintaining the right temperature and moisture conditions in the barn can foginess or mugginess—on healthy conditions for livestock as well as for humans—be eliminated. Barn ventilators in most cases can be self-installed if you have the proper workshop tools.

Prepared by American Foundation for Animal Health

American farmers have a special interest in the fact that the world's population is growing at the rate of about 50 million per year. This special interest, of course, lies in the ever-increasing demand there will be for food.

For instance, some authorities estimate that, by the year 2000, world requirements for meats and animal products will be 190 per cent higher than today.

Livestock disease control is going to be one of the notable ways in which we can meet these increased meat production needs. In fact, the current drive to eradicate hog cholera may point the way to drives against other diseases which are costing our farmers such a heavy toll of meat animals. In this cholera eradication effort, farmers and veterinarians are jointly meeting a challenge which may have far-reaching effects.

Thus far, fine progress is being made in the cholera eradication program. But, there is room for improvement in at least one phase of the drive—vaccination.

Here we have fallen behind. At least 75 per cent of the nation's swine herds need to be vaccinated to provide a shield against widespread outbreaks of cholera. However, this year, less than 50 per cent of our hog herds have been vaccinated.

Another important point—proper vaccination isn't just a routine procedure. Pigs need to be examined by a veterinarian, to make sure they are in proper condition to develop immunity. The right type of vaccine also needs to be determined. Then, and only then, is the veterinarian ready to vaccinate.

With the peak season for fall hog cholera outbreaks not far away, swine producers should mark their calendars to have pigs vaccinated in ample time to provide solid immunity against this No. 1 hog killer.

The present cholera eradication drive may well point the way to the future.

Mrs. Bertha Lowin is shown above standing by the historic altar

Historic Handmade Altar Used by Newcastle's Only Catholic Congregation, Placed in Ft. Belknap Museum

Mrs. Bernice Marie (Bertha) Lowin, who lives in northeast part of Newcastle has given an historic handmade altar, and many smaller items, to the Fort Belknap museum.

ALTAR

The altar was used in all Catholic masses held in Newcastle, Texas. It was in front of this altar their weddings, baptisms, funerals, and other ceremonies were held. The altar is the handcarved handiwork of Mrs. Lowin's father, Joseph Novakowski.

The handcarved altar, a Polish Bible, candleabras, religious statues, and several handmade items (baby rattle, carved dolls, etc.) are included in the gift to Fort Belknap. The old footpedaled organ used in the church for all services is the property of Mrs. Lowin's son.

For several years Mrs. Lowin has wished to present these historic items to the museum. Mrs. H. R. Ledbetter related Mrs. Lowin's wishes to Dr. Cora M. Oneal, President of Fort Belknap Historical Society, and to Dr. K. F. Neighbours, President of Fort Belknap Genealogical Society. Dr. Oneal immediately made official acceptance of the items. Dr. Oneal said, "We are extremely happy to have Mrs. Lowin's contribution to the museum. It is this kind of things in which we are interested. The people of this area will be pleased with this addition to our continuing historical collection."

Dr. Neighbours said, "This is a very significant gesture by Mrs. Lowin. The only thing that could possibly be of more historical significance is perhaps the finding of the Catholic altar used in the 1850's at Fort Belknap. This is historical and shows the interest of the people of the area."

Dr. Oneal moved to make available proper display cases for the historical items at the Fort museum.

NEWCASTLE CATHOLIC CONGREGATION

By the year 1909, people were coming into Newcastle and the coal mining area by the hundreds. The little town was officially organized, the boom was on, and people settled down to daily work in the mines, in the blacksmithshops, livery stables, dry goods and hardware stores, cafes, etc. The citizens of the town began immediately to think about a school for their children, and a church for their family. One of the first such church gatherings was that of the Catholic Church. Many miners were from all walks of life, and many were from all religious beliefs, and some were of the Catholic faith. The first such gathering of worshippers in the Catholic faith met in the Novakowski home.

Many new residents in the tents and small houses in the town of Newcastle were natives of Poland, Germany, France, Italy, Russia, Lithuania, Mexico, Holland, Denmark, Austria, Bulgaria, and England. Many came to the coal mines via the mines on the eastern seaboard.

IMMIGRANTS

Poland drove the Russians from her soil in 1830. Russia recaptured Poland and made Russian the official language of Poland. During the next 70 years there was a constant on-again off-again rule of Russia over Poland. This condition in Poland caused many good citizens to flee the country in search of civil and religious liberties. Near the turn of the century one of these young Polish immigrants was Joseph Novakowski. He first settled in Pennsylvania and became a miner. He had been a leather finisher and a nursery expert in Poland. He was the manager (Mayor) of a village some 40 miles from Warsaw. After his arrival in America, he worked toward one goal—to bring his wife and children to America. Mining was hard work and only the superior physical stamina of these early day miners sustained them. They were usually conscientious and religious men. Most of them were seeking a better life.

His family of six members arrived from Poland to make their home in Thurber, Texas. They came by boat from Bremerhaven, Germany, to New York, Cuba, New Orleans, and on to Thurber.

Upon arrival they told the story of how the enemy of Poland had forced the people to destroy any and everything pertaining to religious beliefs. In their home was an oil painting of "Mother Mary and the Christ Child." The family decided they would somehow get the canvas to their new home in America. The canvas was folded and placed in the bosom of clothing of the mother. She traveled by ship to America with the little family treasure hidden beneath her clothing. From Thurber to Strawn, and on to Newcastle came the Novakowski family. Shortly after arrival in Newcastle, the father took the oil painting and carved a frame and altar from used wooden cracker boxes. The family altar, with the oil painting as its center, was now a family treasure.

"THE LITTLE CHURCH IN THE WILDWOOD"

With no Catholic Church in the immediate area, the Novakowski family invited all Catholics of the town and area to assemble in one of the rooms of their home, located northeast of Newcastle.

The first of only two priest to serve the church was Father Sunday. He came from Strawn in a one horse buggy to conduct services in the home. The parishioners affectionately called their priest Father "Sunday." After some research, this writer found the Father "Sunday" to be the most Reverend Paul Niedziela, born in Poland on June 21, 1872. He served the Newcastle Catholic Church from 1911 to about 1920. Later, Father Moseler traveled from Seymour by train to hold mass. He served until just prior to WW II. The name "Little Church in the Wildwood" was given by Father Moseler.

Joseph Novakowski, 1852-1931 and his wife Frances, 1857-1934 were the parents of Frances, Bernice Marie (Bertha), Genevieve (Janie), Joseph, Katie and Cecil. The mother of this family was the former Frances Brecht, native of Germany.

Bertha was born near Warsaw, Poland, June 29, 1889. As a youthful Polish girl, she married John G. Lowin (1886-1956), a Lithuanian. John, son of Jacob and Rosalie Lowin, came to America at age of 13 to live with an uncle. He worked for a family by the name of Kennedy in Massachusetts. After several years he became a US Sailor. He sailed the seas for several years and later became a miner and a railroad employee. John Lowin's father, Jacob, was a Captain in the Russian army for 30 years.

Bertha remembers many of her early day neighbors in Newcastle. Some were—Berkoben, Tetmeyer, McBride, Rowe, Baldwin, Dover, McKinney, Ward, Supino, Sadberry, Savage, Hobbush, Sostrich, Windham, Roman, Day, Blackburn, Tirey, Daniels, and many others.

Mrs. Lowin's son, Johnny, is employed by the Conoco Oil Co. in Monroe, La. He married Martha Lee Morris and they have five children, John David, Mary Anna, Amy Frances, Carolyn Jane and Linda.

Bertha Lowin is lovable, hard-working, and deeply religious. She has no enemy and is loved by young and old alike. She has always been evangelistic in her dealings with people. Christ has always been an unseen guest

She recalls how she scrubbed, cooked, ironed, worked in the field, raised hogs and chickens, nursed the sick, helped the destitute, and still found time for her family, and for a little rest. FURNISHINGS Alone Do Not Make a Home

Landscaping, oriental rugs, family heirlooms, and comfortable furniture are desirable, and help. Electric refrigeration, automatic heat, air conditioning, scientific lighting—all make their contribution. But, are these enough?

Church Inspiration Is Necessary

Living makes a home. The Church offers ideals for living—Sacredness of marriage—Family comradeship—Reserves for days of trouble—Comfort in sorrow—Joy in wholesome living.

Let's get this straight—Furnishings alone do not make a home! Love and loyalty must also be there. Your Church inspires and helps you to make yours an ideal home.

"The congress of unborn children would undoubtedly choose homes where the family lived a joyous and comradely life together."

QUESTION: We're anxious to eliminate the opening and closing of our cattle gate by installing a cattle guard. What kind would you recommend?

ANSWER: A simple method of construction for a cattle guard is to weld lengths of old 2-inch pipe across H-beams. The length of the cattle guard should be at least 6 feet. If it is necessary to make it longer than 10 feet, we recommend making the guard in two sections for easier lifting, with a 1½-inch pipe slipped through the inside of two sections to hold them together. Lifting is essential, of course, in cleaning out the cattle guard. The H-beams should be placed 2 to 3 feet apart and you'll need three to five beams, depending on length of the guard.

Two-inch pipes welded across H-beams make effective cattle guard.

The base for the cattle guard can be recessed cement blocks. Lay them in the ground side by side at right angles to the pipe and H-beams so the blocks will not collapse from weight on the guard. Then place the beams on the blocks.

QUESTION: What causes fog-giness in a barn on cold days and mugginess on warm days? I can't seem to get rid of this condition in my barn.

ANSWER: Such a problem usually stems from lack of sufficient ventilation, a condition which normally can be improved by installing exhaust fans or a ventilating system. Only by maintaining the right temperature and moisture conditions in the barn can fog-giness or mugginess—unhealthy conditions for livestock as well as for humans—be eliminated. Barn ventilators in most cases can be self-installed if you have the proper workshop tools.

Prepared by American Foundation for Animal Health

American farmers have a special interest in the fact that the world's population is growing at the rate of about 50 million per year. This special interest, of course, lies in the ever-increasing demand there will be for food.

For instance, some authorities estimate that, by the year 2000, world requirements for meats and animal products will be 190 per cent higher than today.

Livestock disease control is going to be one of the notable ways in which we can meet these increased meat production needs. In fact, the current drive to eradicate hog cholera may point the way to drives against other diseases which are costing our farmers such a heavy toll of meat animals. In this cholera eradication effort, farmers and veterinarians are jointly meeting a challenge which may have far-reaching effects.

Thus far, fine progress is being made in the cholera eradication program. But, there is room for improvement in at least one phase of the drive—vaccination.

Here we have fallen behind. At least 75 per cent of the nation's swine herds need to be vaccinated to provide a shield against widespread outbreaks of cholera. However, this year, less than 50 per cent of our hog herds have been vaccinated.

Another important point—proper vaccination isn't just a routine procedure. Pigs need to be examined by a veterinarian, to make sure they are in proper condition to develop immunity. The right type of vaccine also needs to be determined. Then, and only then, is the veterinarian ready to vaccinate.

With the peak season for fall hog cholera outbreaks not far away, swine producers should mark their calendars to have pigs vaccinated in ample time to provide solid immunity against this No. 1 hog killer.

The present cholera eradication drive may well point the way to the future.
