

Prisoners Freed By Pakistan

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — A group of political prisoners flew out of Pakistan tonight to be exchanged for more than 100 hostages held by a trio of hijackers at the Damascus airport, authorities said.

Airport authorities in Karachi, Pakistan, said the special flight took off for Libya and would be followed by a second plane with more prisoners. The hijackers, who have held the plane 12 days, demanded the release of 55 prisoners. Pakistani officials have said they could find only 49.

The leader of the heavily armed hijackers said earlier today that none of the hostages would be freed "until all political prisoners and family members" released by Pakistan arrive in Libya.

The Pakistani military government agreed Thursday to free the dissidents after the hijackers threatened to kill three Americans among the hostages. Libya, asked to provide asylum for the hijackers and to receive the freed prisoners, agreed, a Pakistani diplomat here said.

The plane was commandeered over Pakistan March 2 and flown first to Kabul, Afghanistan, and then to the Damascus airport. The hijackers shot and killed one hostage, a Pakistani diplomat, while it was in Kabul.

The hijack leader also told negotiators in the control tower of Damascus airport today that the trio demanded that an agreement in writing be sent to the Syrian government, the United Nations and Amnesty International, a human rights group based in London.

A Pakistani spokesman in Islamabad today denied his government had agreed to pay $50,000 to the hijackers and said, "We have received no demands for money."

15 Green Berets To Aid Salvador

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reacting to concern that it is risking a new Vietnam-type conflict, the Reagan administration is suddenly speaking softly about its involvement in El Salvador while sending Green Berets to train government troops in guerrilla warfare.

Meanwhile, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig told reporters this morning the guerrillas may be "running short of ammunition" and said the United States has "seen some slackening of the movement of arms through Nicaragua."

But Haig said there is evidence that Cuba, which the United States maintains has been using Nicaragua as a funnel for arms going to the Salvadoran guerrillas, is searching for "alternative routes" for arms supplies.

On Thursday, several officials said the administration has decided against any deeper involvement in El Salvador, barring some major setback to the government at the hands of Marxist guerrillas. And even then, no one was prepared to predict the United States would do anything more.

"They are clearly backing off," one State Department official said Thursday. "They apparently feel they went too far, and the Vietnam analogy has a lot of people worried."

"We haven't made a decision not to get more deeply involved," another official insisted. "We had no plans to get any more deeply involved."

For his part, Haig today defined the U.S. commitment in El Salvador as stopping the flow of arms to the guerrillas from outside. The Salvadorans, he stressed, should be allowed to determine their own future.

"Our interest is that they have it out at the ballot box and not with bullets," he said.

And Haig, indicating he felt some previous administration statements had been overlooked, said he has sought from the beginning to make it clear that "we are seeking to avoid extremes of right and left in El Salvador."

While the administration was trying to draw a distinction between El Salvador and Vietnam, however, Pentagon officials said Thursday night that 15 Army Special Forces troopers have been ordered to the Central American country to conduct counter-insurgency training.

Congressional sources, meanwhile, said the administration is working on a $140 million package of new economic aid for El Salvador, with $63.5 million from the United States and the rest from international organizations.

The Green Berets are among 20 additional U.S. military advisers approved by Reagan last month. The Pentagon said three of the Green Berets already are in El Salvador with 39 other advisers, and the other 12 are expected to arrive from the Panama Canal Zone by the end of the month.

Panel Favors Draft System

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pentagon advisory panel is recommending that Congress consider reinstating a version of the military draft that would require youths to serve six months and then decide whether to stay on active duty longer or join the reserves.

Louis J. Conti, chairman of the Reserve Forces Policy Board, called this a "try it before you buy it" approach.

Reporting to Congress, Conti noted recent increases in Reserve and National Guard strength, but said the board still is concerned over "inadequate force levels which must be responsive to mobilization demands."

The board, which includes reserve and active-duty senior officers as well as civilian officials, functions by law as an adviser to the secretary of defense.

However, Conti made it clear the board was not speaking for Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger when it expressed its views to Congress.

There has not been a military draft in the United States since 1973 and it would take an act of Congress to revive it.

However, draft registration, which was ended by former President Ford in 1975, was resumed for young men last summer by former President Carter to have names on hand in case the draft was reinstated.

Weinberger and President Reagan have indicated reluctance to keep the draft registration machinery intact and have voiced strong opposition to reviving the draft itself.

"The board fully realizes that a return to the draft will fall far short of resolving

Haig stressed this morning that the Green Berets "are not over and above what we announced."

The Green Berets will not go into combat with the Salvadorans, as they did with South Vietnamese soldiers, but will conduct training at three centers.

The elite Special Forces unit was created before the Vietnam War to train armies of friendly countries.

all the problems of a modern, technologically advanced military force," Conti said. "On the other hand, the board sees too many positive outcomes resulting from a draft not to pursue the question with utmost vigor."

He described the draft as "potentially the most cost-effective and equitable answer" to many of the problems.

Under the board's recommendation, men — "and women, if mandated by Congress" — would be required to serve six months on active duty. It would start with a "military orientation" period of three to four weeks, followed by basic and advanced individual training.

The required military service would begin after graduation from high school. See DRAFT PLAN Page 18

Shaw Avoids Hassle On Fire Calls

By MARC FLAKE
Avalanche-Journal Staff
Lubbock County Commissioners are ready to listen to city proposals to provide back-up fire service outside the city limits, but they're not ready to talk about it with the news media.

County Judge Rod Shaw explained that "some media" try to create a feud where one doesn't exist. "It would be nice to have some kind of arrangement with Lubbock for major fires," he said. "Everybody agrees there are some county areas that are closer to Lubbock than to rural volunteer fire stations."

Members of the city council agreed in a work session Thursday afternoon that the city should make the county an offer to reinforce rural VFD's at major fires.

While Mayor Bill McAllister proposed that the letter sent to the commissioners should include options and cost estimates, most of the council seemed to agree with Councilman Alan Henry's proposal just to ask if the county wanted a contract for fire service — and if they did, what kind of service they would want.

Once that has been determined, said Henry, the city could put cost estimates on the types of service the county may want.

City firefighters stopped making county fire calls in September 1976 after the county refused to pay $1,250 per call, which the city sought in its contract.

Other offers made by the city since then have also been turned down by the county, which has been paying rural VFD's $275 per call for about four years.

Council Jack Brown said during Thursday's work session that McAllister "took a lot of heat" after Brown suggested another contract attempt be made.

McAllister's business, KAMC-TV is located outside the city limits and its only fire protection is from rural VFD's.

"Our danger is more a danger of an electrical fire," McAllister said after the meeting. "We could take care of that ourselves."

The risk of a fire at the building is low and the type of building the television station is housed in — brick — would reduce the seriousness of the fire, he said.

During the work session Brown also said that since the city won't be offering the same type of service to people out-

Texas Demo Fights GOP Budget Slash

A-J News Services
WASHINGTON — House Democratic leader Jim Wright is urging his House colleagues not to rubber-stamp the administration's economic plan and says they should counterattack with a nine-page package of possible arguments.

But budget director David A. Stockman, in an obvious reply to Demo critics, said today that the Reagan administration has no plans to make budget cuts that hurt the elderly or the truly needy. Stockman opposed any change in the cost-of-living adjustment in Social Security benefits as a way of holding down increases in the federal budget.

In a letter sent to House Democrats this week, Wright sharply attacked the president's package in a series of questions and answers. The Texas Democrat suggested the information "may be helpful in speeches, newsletters, press responses or in visiting with constituents."

The letter said President Reagan's plan to slash the fiscal 1982 budget by $48.6 billion while reducing taxes by $54 billion, which Wright claims would benefit wealthier Americans, "imposes a grossly unfair burden on those least able to carry that burden."

Wright said in an interview Thursday Reagan will probably win House approval for half the amount of spending cuts the president proposed, but Reagan's tax cuts may be "vulnerable" to changes. In his letter to Democrats, Wright rejected as unreasonable Reagan's argument that his entire package must be approved to ensure economic stability.

Although Reagan won the election in November, "This does not mean that it is the duty of the Congress to rubber stamp whatever the president proposes," Wright wrote.

Stockman, meanwhile, has a short and simple answer for critics who complain that Reagan administration economic forecasts are too optimistic. Keeping cutting the budget and everything will turn out right.

Members of Congress and private economists are concerned that inflation will be higher than the president's advisers predict, leading to a surge in federal spending in 1982 and beyond.

And while three private economists were telling one congressional committee Thursday the administration's inflation forecast is too rosy, Stockman was telling another panel:

"If you believe that our technical estimates are low ... then that difference needs to be accommodated not only with a change in the estimates, but with a change in policy as well."

That invitation for cuts deeper than the $48.6 billion Reagan has recommended came about the time the nation's three largest economic forecasting firms told Congress the president's program could produce more inflation, not less.

Court To Decide Vote Challenge

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

It will be up to a district judge to determine the winner in the January 17 board election held by Lubbock County Water Control and Improvement District, the district's board of managers agreed today.

Board members spent more than an hour and a half closeted behind closed doors with their attorney this morning, discussing the election contest suit filed by former director Dale Miller.

Miller, a three-year veteran of the water district board, filed suit last month against George W. Whitworth, one of two candidates declared winners in the election.

Following the executive session, the board voted unanimously to let the court settle the election dispute.

Chairman W.D. (Billy) Simms read a statement regarding the board's decision, saying the board does not believe it is proper at this time to suggest or volunteer that a new election be held.

According to Simms, the board will abide by the court's decision in the case.

In his suit, Miller alleges that 20 of the 473 ballots counted in the election were cast by unregistered voters.

The official canvas of the election showed Miller lost to Whitworth by only 18 votes. Miller contends that the 20 contested votes would have changed the course of the election.

The former board member also claims there were other "irregularities at polling places" on the day of the election. Those alleged irregularities will be spelled out in an amendment to the original suit, he said.

But Whitworth claimed in his answer filed earlier this week that Miller is at See ELECTION SUIT Page 18

Snow, Rain Pelt West

A-J News Services

A low pressure system over California today dumped heavy snow on the Sierra Nevada mountains and rain on the West Coast, and National Weather Service forecasters said the new storm will bring precipitation to the Southwest this weekend.

Although Lubbockites got their first good look at the sun in about a week today, thundershowers may return to the area Saturday and Sunday.

There is a 20-percent chance of thundershowers Saturday, weathermen said, and scattered showers and a few thundershowers Sunday. See SNOW, RAIN Page 18

FILES FALSE RETURNS Inmate Admits Cheating IRS

HUNTSVILLE (UPI) — With lots of free time and little cash, prison inmate Steven Robertson said newspaper reading sparked his imagination — helping him devise a way to persuade the Internal Revenue Service to send him money.

And, said Robertson, it would be fine to be prosecuted on federal income tax charges — because federal prisons are nicer than those in Texas.

Robertson has not worked in the free world or paid income tax in recent years, but he submitted a false tax return this year and received a refund from the IRS.

Robertson did not keep the money, however. A refund check for $518.38 was intercepted by the Texas Department of Corrections. A prison spokesman said a second check for $440.42 — addressed to an inmate whom Robertson said he coached — was also intercepted.

Robertson, 32, serving a life sentence at TDC's Ellis Unit as an habitual criminal, said it took a little studying and experimentation to fool the IRS.

The idea came from outside prison. "I read the newspapers. They always have stories about how citizens are gyping Uncle Sam out of money, hundreds of thousands of dollars, and I was trying to think of a way to get some money," he said.

"I didn't know how to go about filing a 1040 because I never worked and never filed one before," Robertson said in a prison interview this week.

"What I did, I wrote to Austin, the Internal Revenue Service, and asked them for instructions on how I could file (because) I was illiterate and I needed simple instructions on how to go about filing the thing."

The Houston branch sent me the actual forms with the instructions and we just, trial and error. I fill it out for a friend of mine. I sent it out for other friends, until we got it down. We sent in about 10 this year.

"I do it with $10,000 or less (imaginary income). I use the 1040 short form. They send forms to use in place of a W-2," he said.

"I said I didn't have it (W-2) because I had moved and, in the process of moving, I'd lost my W-2 and couldn't contact my employer and he hasn't replaced them. They sent me substitute forms."

TDC officials said they would let federal authorities decide whether to punish Robertson. An IRS spokesman said his agency would let the Justice Department decide on whether to prosecute. Robertson said he doesn't care because federal prisons are nicer than those in Texas anyway.

Regulations Snag Water Efforts

EDITOR'S NOTE—This last part of a five-part series on problems with the nation's water supply looks at the bureaucracy that controls the distribution of water.

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
WASHINGTON (AP) — Regulations everywhere, more than you'd ever think, regulations everywhere, so water you can drink.

In one way or another, nearly every federal department, all of the states and most local governments have rules, regulations, policy, planners and projects affecting the nation's most precious liquid asset — water.

"Everybody is in charge (of water). It's kind of like the weather, everybody is in charge, and nobody is," said Russell Langford, associate chief hydrologist for the U.S. Geological Survey.

"It is totally confusing," added Gerald Seinnwill, acting director of the Water Resources Council, the agency with the task of trying to bring order to water policy.

Water quality is one major focus of all the work. Simply finding water and getting it to people and places which need it is another. And different agencies often are responsible for each function.

"We have separated water quality from water quantity. That isn't true. A raindrop doesn't know the administrative distinction we've made," said Seinnwill.

"We have created a monster we are going to have to live with," he added. Water management and policy historically have been primarily state or local matters, but the federal government has been taking a bigger part, both as a builder of costly projects and as a regulator of water use and quality.

Perhaps the biggest of the federal offices involved in water matters is the Army Corps of Engineers with its flood control, power, transportation and other water projects scattered across the country, and a civil works budget proposal of more than $3 billion for the coming year.

With a 1979 budget of more than half a billion dollars, including $399 million for construction projects, the Bureau of Reclamation also is a force to be reckoned with.

Primarily active in 17 dry Western states, the bureau started out in the 1920s to help restore dried out farmland. Over the years it has grown to include water power projects, recreational uses of water, flood control, municipal water systems and environmental enhancement.

Under the new name "Water and Power Resources Service," the agency recently issued a study of its work: It covers 1,462 projects.

The Agriculture Department's Forest Service and Soil Conservation Service are active in the small watershed program, setting up flood control projects on watersheds that aren't big enough for the See REGULATIONS Page 18

Greeting Delivered By Strippers

NEW YORK (AP) — The executive was flustered when the applicant who said she'd "do anything" for a job began unbuttoning her blouse in his office. It got worse when he told her to leave.

She turned on a portable tape recorder and to the sound of striptease music, peeled down to her G-string and bikini top and read him a "Happy Birthday" message.

New Yorkers have begun saying it with "Strip-A-Grams," the newest alternative to singing telegrams, and the entrepreneurs who started the company four months ago say franchises are expected to open within a few months in Boston, Los Angeles, Chicago and even London.

For $80, Strip-A-Gram will send a man or woman dressed as an office worker, party guest or some other character to deliver a surprise greeting. "Gay-Grams" for homosexual customers also are available, says Gregory Fibble, who owns the service with Gary Blumsack.

For $150, customers can get a male-female combination or two strippers of the same sex. A "full burlesque routine" of three to five strippers can be had for an undisclosed price.

The six women and four men who deliver the Strip-A-Grams — actors and dancers earning some extra money — show no full nudity and offer no sexual services, the owners say.

"We show that burlesque can be fun, classy and clean," Fibble said. "A secretary who would never go out to see burlesque can receive a Strip-A-Gram and talk about it for 20 years."

The service, which the partners established with $80, now delivers 35 to 60 Strip-A-Grams a week, mostly to parties and offices.

Female strippers, who get escorts after 5 p.m., "very rarely have had grabbiness from men," Fibble said. When that happens, "they take them by the hand and whisper something like, 'Darling, it's visual. Our girls are very resourceful.'"

One of the strippers, armed with a bogus resume saying she had studied at Harvard, was offered a job during an interview at an advertising agency before she began taking off her clothes.

The actress, who uses only the name "Lyndsy" because she's afraid directors won't believe she does a clean act, earns $300 to $400 a week for delivering about seven Strip-A-Grams.

During a birthday surprise for a bartender, "I ordered a drink and pretended I didn't have any money. I said, 'Do you accept checks or credit cards?' He was about ready to throw me out."

"I said, 'Can I make you a deal?' Then I went behind the bar, turned on my tape recorder and started taking off my blouse. I told him I knew it was his birthday. By then, everybody from the kitchen had come out to watch, and he realized what was going on. He said it was absolutely wonderful."

One Strip-A-Gram was delivered during a stock exchange session and trading stopped for 15 minutes, Fibble said. Others have been delivered to hospitals and homes for the benefit of recuperating patients.

"We always have to investigate who else is in the room. If there's a 90-year-old guy with a pacemaker in the next bed, we have to draw the curtain so we don't end up with a liability suit," he said.

Fibble, a former actor, master of ceremonies and producer of male strip shows for female audiences, has personally delivered some of the Strip-A-Grams. Blumsack was a master of ceremonies for Fibble's strip shows when the two thought of the Strip-A-Gram idea one night.

Fibble declined to say how much they now earn.

The first Strip-A-Grams featured topless dancers. "We figured that was the only way to sell," Fibble said. "But I went with a stripper to a Queens racquet club one night, and the management nearly fell apart. I realized then we couldn't go topless."

Today is Friday, March 13, the 72nd day of 1981 with 293 to follow.

The moon is in its first quarter.

The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Jupiter and Saturn.

The evening star is Mars.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Pisces.

Swiss naturalist Charles Bonnet was born March 13, 1720.

On this date in history:

In 1868, the U.S. Senate began impeachment proceedings against President Andrew Johnson on charges of "high crime and misdemeanors." He was acquitted by one vote.

In 1933, banks throughout the United States started reopening after a bank holiday declared by President Franklin D. Roosevelt on March 5.

In 1969, Apollo 9 returned from a 10-day earth orbital journey which successfully tested a moon-landing craft.

In 1972, the United States and Communist China opened talks in Paris, the first result of President Nixon's trip to Peking.

A thought for the day: British author Thomas Paine said, "Character is much easier kept than recovered."

Subcompact Electric Car To Be Offered

DETROIT (AP) — The two-door subcompact Electrica 007 goes on sale June 1 for about $11,500, as Jet Industries Inc. enters the passenger market with its electric cars.

The model, which uses the body and chassis of the Ford Lynx and Escort but is modified to run on a 20-horsepower, battery-powered motor, was unveiled this week Jet Chairman William L. Bales said that with a fully charged battery, the Electrica has a cruising range of about 65 miles at a speed of 35 mph. The car has a maximum speed of 70 mph.

Singer's Pains Result Of Fall

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The severe neck and rib pains which forced the hospitalization of singer Glen Campbell probably were the result of a recent fall, a doctor says.

Dr. Jerry Maynard, who admitted Campbell to Doneison Hospital Wednesday, said the singer would be released today "unless something unexpected happens."

X-rays showed no fractures or tumors. Campbell was in stable condition Thursday.

Campbell, who was staying at Opryland Hotel while taping a "Country Comes Home" program for CBS, awoke Wednesday complaining of pain. He entered the hospital on the advice of Maynard, the hotel physician.

"I understand that a week or so ago, while in Hawaii, he fell, injuring his neck and ribs," Maynard said.

The doctor said he would recommend that Campbell take a brief vacation before resuming work.

Billy Carter To Sell Property

BUENA VISTA, Ga. (AP) — Billy Carter plans to avoid a threatened foreclosure on his home by selling other property in his hometown of Plains, says his wife.

Sybil Carter also said Thursday that her husband, the brother of former President Jimmy Carter, has taken a job as a traveling sales representative for Wood Grain Molding Co., covering Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia and other states.

First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Columbus placed a legal ad in a Marion County newspaper Thursday, threatening to foreclose on the Carters' home unless arrangements are made to make mortgage payments within 30 days.

Dexter Followill, president of the institution, said Carter assumed payments on a $100,000 mortgage held by First Federal when he purchased the 7,700-square-foot home near Buena Vista.

Former Hostage Suing Newspaper

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jerry Plotkin, one of the 52 former hostages, has filed a $60 million libel suit against a suburban Los Angeles newspaper and its parent, the Chicago Tribune, over a story he says implied his trip to Iran involved illegal drug deals.

The Van Nuys-based Daily News reported on Jan. 21, 1981, that "Lt. Clark Wardle, a supervisor in the major violators section of the LAPD's narcotics division, said Plotkin was suspected of being a 'heavyweight in cocaine and some heroin dealings, in the Los Angeles area at the time he left for Iran.'"

Wardle was never available for comment when other news agencies called about the story, but the police press relations office issued a statement that Wardle had denied he ever made such comments.

Plotkin's suit says the story's implication raised "in the mind of the average reader that plaintiff traveled to Iran with the purpose of engaging in illegal activities."

Bruce Winters, editor of the Daily News, said: "Our position is that we stand by our story."

Plotkin said he is not now employed and declined comment on what he has been doing since his return after 444 days captivity in Iran.

Resident Angered By Jersey Joke

PISCATAWAY, N.J. (AP) — New Jerseyans have long chafed under the ridicule heaped upon their state by their big-city neighbors across the Hudson River.

The Lighter Side Of The News

But the last straw for the mayor of this central New Jersey town came when he heard a "Saturday Night Live" player who was portraying a goofy chemical worker give Piscataway as his address.

Mayor Robert Smith said he was "outraged" by the skit on the NBC late-night comedy program and is demanding either a public apology or time to respond.

Last week the regularly featured character played by actor Joe Piscopo was shown endorsing his fictitious place of employment, United Chemical Co. in Piscataway, as "chemicals dripped off his helmet and onto his sandwich," said Smith.

"When they said the guy was from Piscataway, I got outraged. These people have slandered us," said Smith, a professor of chemistry and environmental sciences at Middlesex County College.

Jimmy Carter Returns To Role Of Outsider

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Once again, Jimmy Carter is an outsider.

Given only the barest recognition by the national Democratic Party organization and embarrassed by a squabble among Georgia Democrats, Carter is back in his rural hometown far from the power and panoply of the presidency.

No longer the principal actor in national and world affairs, Carter watches from afar as Ronald Reagan calls for reversing many of the policies of the ousted Democratic administration.

Aides and friends describe Carter as consumed with preparations for his memoirs, a book that could bring him a $1 million advance. They say he also is determined to maintain a low political profile and to avoid early partisan clashes with President Reagan.

The former president planned to attend a Georgia Democratic Party fundraising dinner in Atlanta tonight, but he rejected belated suggestions that he deliver a speech or accept any special tribute.

"We kind of wanted to have a little hoop de da," said state party chairman Marjorie Thurman, who has long been at odds with Carter. "They've told us he doesn't want anything. He prefers to just quietly come as a guest."

Earlier, when Gov. Jay Rockefeller of West Virginia was invited to be the main speaker, Mrs. Thurman said he was chosen rather than Carter because Rockefeller better represented a "challenge for the future."

Georgia Gov. George Busbee was outraged. He called the handling of the invitation "unfortunate and uncalled for." That led Mrs. Thurman to announce the party would make sure Carter was "appropriately honored."

When the Democratic National Committee met in Washington two weeks ago to elect Charles T. Manatt of Los Angeles as the new party chairman, Carter's name was conspicuously absent from the speeches of party leaders.

Only outgoing chairman John C. White referred to the former president and that was to respond to criticism that White had turned all committee resources over to the Carter re-election effort to the detriment of other Democratic candidates.

"I was Jimmy Carter's chairman and I'm proud of it," White said.

Carter called Manatt to wish him well. The two men plan to meet in Atlanta on March 25 to discuss what role the former president will play in the party.

Carter is expected to become a member of the party council Manatt is forming to develop Democratic alternatives to Reagan policies. But it seems clear that Carter, an outsider to Washington politics when he began his successful quest for the presidency, will be regarded as one among equals on the council and not as the titular leader of his party.

Ex-Tennessee Governor, Aides Indicted Again By Grand Jury

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Former Gov. Ray Blanton and two ex-aides have been charged in a federal indictment for a second time with selling liquor licenses for profit.

The new indictment, returned Thursday by a federal grand jury, supersedes an indictment issued last Oct. 29 against Blanton, special assistant Clyde Edd Hood Jr., and Blanton's 1974 campaign manager James Allen.

But federal prosecutors said an April 20 trial for the three — scheduled because of the previous indictment — will go on as planned.

"We'll go to trial on the superseding indictment," Assistant U.S. Attorney Bob Lynch said in a telephone interview.

The new indictment includes the same two counts of conspiracy to sell liquor licenses and eight counts of mail fraud as the first indictment. But it adds another mail fraud count and allegations that the three men conspired to issue a liquor license to a local businessman only if he would accept a partner chosen by Allen.

As in the original indictment, Blanton is charged in the latest indictment with two counts of income tax evasion. He will be tried separately on those counts.

The three men are accused in an alleged scheme involving the sale of liquor licenses in Nashville for 25 percent of the profits.

Lynch said a U.S. magistrate would inform the three of the superseding indictment and that they could plead by mail. All three pleaded innocent to the charges contained in the previous indictment.

The latest allegations claim Blanton, Hood and Allen conspired to issue a liquor license to Robert E. Townes of Nashville. Blanton's former Davidson County campaign chairman.

Townes, an East Nashville liquor store owner, pleaded guilty Feb. 25 to mail fraud.

The new indictment charges that Allen met Townes at Allen's office in the spring of 1976 and told him he would receive one of 15 liquor licenses to be approved in Davidson County if he would accept the silent partner. The indictment alleges that Townes "subsequently agreed to accept S.J. King as a partner with a 25 percent interest" in the proposed package store.

Budget Cuts Hit Home

IF IT R-E-A-L-L-Y fears that reducing the tax burden on individuals and corporations would fuel inflation, Congress should cut into the federal budget even more deeply, rather than alter the President's economic proposals.

The administration's proposals not only are practical but philosophically in tune with the free market and as such should be vigorously pursued.

The Reagan program embodies the changes in economic perspective, tax policy and federal spending necessary to bring about a more efficient and productive economy.

Regardless of how Congress alters the plan or how it fares in the short run, the administration should continue to pursue the current course.

The reason is not only that the program is sound, but that consistency is essential to altering expectations.

IN A STUDY published by The Heritage Foundation, economic analysts warn that it is critical that the marginal tax cuts and the accelerated depreciation schedule remain intact.

The tax package, based on the belief that individuals and corporations will respond to altered incentives, does not attempt to channel resources into favored activities, but instead relies on the market to direct the funds to the highest uses.

A more subtle, but equally important affirmation of the market is the administration's decision to take a longer term perspective.

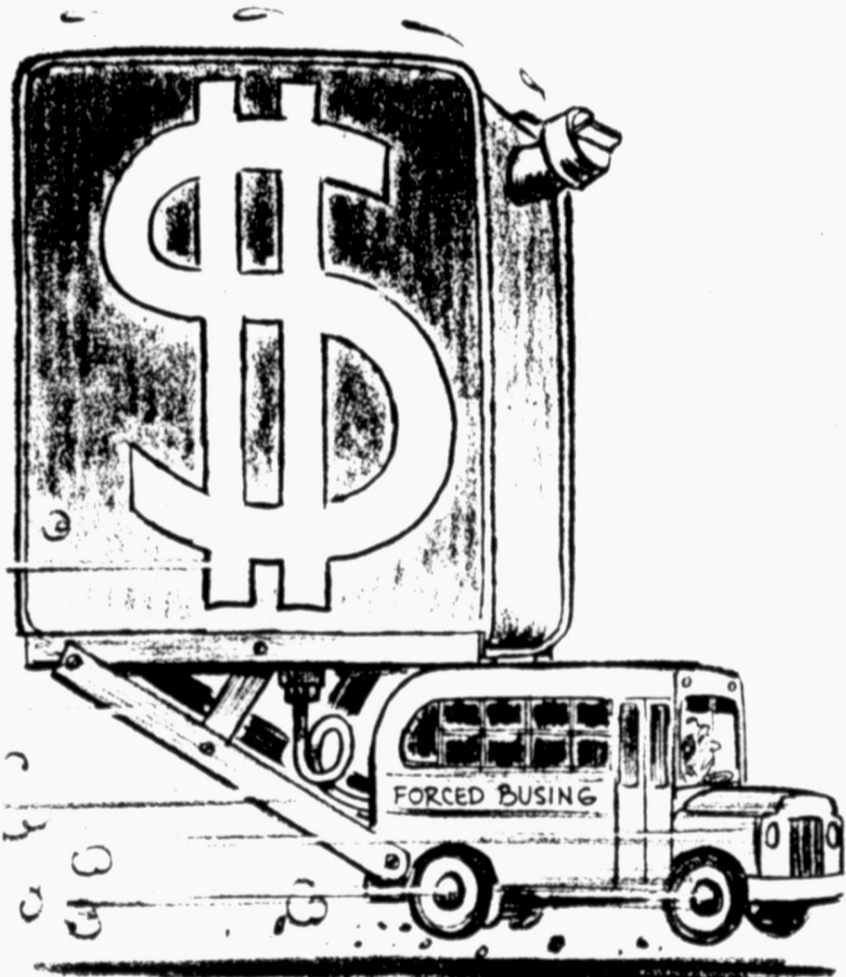

THE TAXING and spending powers of the federal government will not be used in attempts to counter short-term economic fluctuations.

Rather, the intent is to create a climate in which the government minimizes the distortionary effect of tax and spending, regulatory and monetary policies on economic decision-making.

Critics argue that the Reagan proposal, by returning so much money to the private sector, will create inflation. However, inflation occurs only if the rate of growth in the money supply exceeds the rate of growth of goods and services.

Therefore, we need only worry about inflation if whatever deficit exists is funded through monetary expansion by the Fed. As long as the Fed holds the line and follows a rational, steady, monetary policy, there will be no inflationary effect. Obviously, Mr. Reagan hit a nerve and bureaucrats are crying "Foul!"

John D. Lofton:

Budget Cut Hysteria Unfounded

WASHINGTON—President Reagan's program for economic recovery is a giant step toward fulfilling his campaign promise to get the federal government off the back of the American people.

But what is needed are several giant steps in the direction Reagan wants to go. The President's tax cuts and his budget cuts should be much larger. And, there should be no sacred cows.

To hear Reagan's critics tell it, you'd think the President had proposed the abolition of the federal budget. Leon Shull, head of the Americans for Democratic Action, says: "Stop this rape of the American middle class and poor people."

Jerry Wurf, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, says the President's program will do two things: "Reward the rich and (expletive deleted) the poor."

MARIAN WRIGHT EDELMAN, president of the Children's Defense Fund, says the Reagan budget cuts are "devastating to already bare-bone lives." The Congressional Black Caucus accuses the administration of plotting to make the poor "hungrier, colder and sicker."

Well, now. What is one to make of such hysteria? Ultra-liberal Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., questions the Reagan tax cuts, observing: "I think the purpose of Kemp-Roth is to so reduce the revenues of the federal government that it simply isn't possible to have very many constructive programs."

Oh really? If Frank really thinks this, then he should think again. According to administration data, from 1981 to 1986—even with the Reagan tax cuts enacted into law—federal tax revenues will grow at an average annual rate of 10 percent!

So much for the "Reagan really wants to starve the federal government to death" idea.

In my judgment, the 10 percent a year increase in federal tax revenues is a growth rate that is far too great. I believe federal spending can be cut another $100 to $200 billion more than what Reagan is proposing, and these additional cuts can be made with the support of the American people.

You know, it's interesting. Prior to announcing his budget cuts, President Reagan jokingly predicted that they would cause him to be "hanged in effigy." But this hasn't happened.

A RECENT NATIONAL ABC/Washington Post poll shows "immediate and overwhelming" support for Reagan's cuts in 83 federal programs. From a surprising number of sources, there have come calls for budget cuts and tax cuts deeper than those asked for by the President.

In a column in the Los Angeles Times, the socialist economist Robert Lekachman, expresses disappointment that Reagan "did not take an immediate gamble on earlier tax cuts and deeper slashes in current spending as a test of the proposition that the unleashing of the private sector will restore the health of the American economy."

The liberal New Republic magazine, calling the exemption of certain sacred cows "an attempt to buy off some of the largest and most politically powerful groups, like veterans and the elderly," says the President could save another $4.3 billion in 1982 by limiting Social Security increases to the average national increase in wages, rather than allowing retirees to do better than workers during high inflation.

— THE NEW YORK Times quotes John Kelly of Lawrence, Mass., a life-long Democrat, as say-

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Eating Prime Cuts

WHAT WE DON'T want to forget is that, despite all the turmoil over so-called "cuts" in the federal budget, the thing still will be getting bigger by about $40 billion a year.

Year after year after year. And, despite all the talk about the so-called tax "cuts," the total federal tax burden still will be getting bigger by about $60 billion a year.

The Reagan administration isn't taking the nation on what you'd call an austerity program. It's merely trying to get some semblance of control over runaway spending that an irresponsible Congress and previous administrations have let run wild.

There remains considerable doubt whether Congress, especially the Democratic-controlled House, will permit even the President's modest attempts to slow the growth of the budget.

AS JUST ONE example, there is a great gnashing of teeth over efforts to trim back the school lunch program, one of the most outrageously extravagant handouts in the federal arsenal.

Because it is targeted toward children, the "free" lunch—and breakfast—program is wrapped in a demagogic tinfoil of concern for humanity that could be fully covered at perhaps half the cost.

Eligibility guidelines for free-loading or reduced-price loading of cafeteria plates are so bloated that a family practically has to be in the affluent class before its application can be rejected.

Take a couple with three children: If the family income is below $17,870 a year, all three qualify for a reduced-price breakfast and lunch.

That reduced price is 10 cents for breakfast and 20 cents for lunch. The full price of 35 cents and 75 cents is a bargain.

If that same family's income is below $11,800 (nearly $1,000 a month), the students qualify for free meals. Moreover, under federal guidelines, school officials pretty well take the family's word with regard to its income.

IN LUBBOCK, which isn't exactly an economically depressed city with one of the lowest unemployment rates in the country, one out of three students in the public schools eats off the taxpayers.

In fact, school cafeterias serve more free meals than paid meals!

From September through January, the local schools ladled out 849,155 free lunches and 132,264 reduced-price lunches. That averages out to more than 10,000 taxpayer-paid meals every day.

During the same period, the cafeterias served 783,120 paid lunches, or just over 8,000 a day.

THE FREE BREAKFAST program, which lacks even the justification of giving children a hot meal while they're at school, is even more outrageous.

Lubbock schools served 354,154 free breakfasts in the September-January period, 33,547 reduced-price ones and only 64,064 paid ones.

Other programs, including the much-abused food stamp one, provide ample nutritional support for truly needy families. If mom and pop would rather buy the kids a color TV set than food, or if they're too lazy to get up and fix them breakfast, it's still not the taxpayers' responsibility to feed children whose parents can afford to do so.

Socialistic supporters of the free meals deny that the guidelines set income levels too high or that school officials are for all practical purposes precluded from investigating applicants' financial status.

They are wrong. The free breakfast and lunch programs can be drastically reduced without hurting the truly needy.

THE FEDERAL Legal Services Corp. employs 5,000 lawyers and enriches the coffers of tens of thousands of others.

Little wonder, then, that the American Bar Association is bitterly attacking President Reagan's proposals that the monster be axed.

Actually, a few members of Congress called Reagan's attention to this $347 million boondoggle that he had missed in his first budget-cutting venture.

Of recent vintage, the Legal Services Corp. puts lawyers on the taxpayers' payroll who then file suits against taxpayers on everything from forced busing and jail conditions to personal disputes with employees.

Other lawyers then must be hired to defend these suits.

The nation got along quite well without the thing for 200 years, but ABA President William Reece Smith says its demise would close "the doors of justice...to millions of our nation's neediest citizens."

Bullfeathers. The only door it would close would be the door to fat fees collected by lawyers to try both sides of thousands of mostly unnecessary lawsuits with which they've been clogging the courts.

Louis Rukeyser:

Boating Industry Out To Launch

NEW YORK—Charting a new economic course in Washington could mean clearer sailing for the U.S. boating industry.

That's the brightening prospect for a business that, just a few months ago, seemed dead in the water—a conspicuous victim of Carter-administration moralists.

Now, following the worst sales year in two decades, industry leaders tell me they can discern a long-awaited turnaround at last.

Not all the problems of the recreational boating business have been political, to be sure.

As with other leisure-time activities, it suffered as inflation chipped away at discretionary income and high interest rates discouraged the making of large capital purchases.

BUT BOATING ALSO seemed a particular target of some Carterites addicted to what we might call the hairshirt school of economic theory.

They came up with a variety of harring government regulations and proposed regulations that the industry publicly characterized as "burdensome" (and privately described as unprintable).

The climax came just over a year ago, on Feb. 7, 1980, when the Department of Energy promulgated a stand-by proposal of weekend boating restrictions.

Its chances of actual implementation were remote, but the presentation was clumsy and many prospective buyers were frightened into believing they wouldn't be able to use their boats on Saturdays or Sundays.

The bottom promptly fell out of the recreational boating business. Overall unit sales collapsed from a peak of near 700,000 (in 1973) to just over 500,000 in 1980.

THOUGH SOME GLOOMSTERS thought the trend was irreversible, they're already being proved wrong. Jeff W. Napier, president of the industry trade group, the National Marine Manufacturers Association, tells me he now looks for unit sales to climb back over 600,000 in 1981, with dollar receipts surpassing the previous record of $7.5 billion set in 1979.

The change in the political climate clearly has helped. The proposed weekend boating restrictions, which were withdrawn as the result of ensuing protests last year, were one of nine such measures put forward at the same time.

This past month, the new administration signaled its own benign intentions by withdrawing the other eight as well. The boating industry, for its part, has been coming up with new ways to skin the inflationary cat for prospective buyers.

Adapting many of the innovations in the home-mortgage market, such as variable-rate loans and shared-appreciation loans, it has emphasized statistics showing that boats tend to increase in value like real estate, rather than depreciating like cars.

Markedly increased lending is expected, too, from savings and loans, which in most states can charge the auto-loan rate for boats—which have a significantly smaller default rate. Longer terms are being pushed as a way to hold down monthly payments.

Long-term bullishness about boating is fed also by demographic factors (the "baby boom" is reaching its more affluent 30s and 40s, and the number of retired Americans is growing) and by technological improvements producing greater energy efficiency (such as new, lighter materials and innovative power-delivery systems).

Out to lunch in 1980, the recreational boating business is out to launch in 1981.

Home Computer Dawn Just Over The Horizon

NEW YORK—It's the "product of the century," the ad proclaims. Your own "personal computer" that calculates, stores information, keeps notes, organizes your filing, translates foreign languages, recalls sports records, doubles as a stopwatch and "interim timer."

The price? Just $49.50, plus $19.50 for each of the listed tasks you want your "personal computer" to perform.

Is it true, is the Electronic Age really here? Amazingly, the answer is a qualified "yes." In some localities, you can order your computer to do everything from cooking your food to playing games with you—and in all localities, you can do some of these things.

But not for $49.50 or $495 or $4,950—and probably not even for $49,500.

"THE SMALL 'COMPUTER' is here today," says Richard Bonker, a math expert who began selling IBM computers when they were the size of a house and who now is operations research director at Time, Inc.

But he warns: "The micro-computer is not a home appliance yet and probably won't be for five years."

Most mini-computer makers agree that the devices will become faster, better and less expensive. They concede, though, that satisfactory starter sets begin at $2,500 to $3,000.

The key lies in the size of the computer's internal memory capacity, measured in "bytes" or characters.

THE MONSTER COMPUTERS can remember hundreds of millions of characters, the average business computer can recall several million of these bytes—but your individual computer should need only about 64 thousand (64K) in its memory.

Many mini-computers don't even have this much memory. However, some will accommodate "options" that expand their capacity to 64K. A cheap machine won't.

Here's how your outlays will add up, if you buy now:

* Basic "mainframe" unit: $1,000. Bargain basic models under $1,000 usually lack sufficient memory expansion room and the "junk" versions may need a $60 "software program" cassette to work at all.

* Interface or "firmware" cards to adapt the computer software to its hardware: probably another $150 each.

So far, say, $1,300 you have a good basic system which you can hook up to your TV set to see your work and which you can, perhaps with an adapter, rig to your cassette player to store the results.

* A "RANDOM ACCESS floppy-disc" recorder for "real time" speed; your sequential tape recorder is slow. That, in turn, requires a "disc drive" attachment. Add an extra $500. Total now $1,800.

* High-resolution CRT—cathode ray tube—costing $150 for black and white, $400 in color.

For while you're at the computer, others can't watch TV and worse, your words, figures and charts may look fuzzy. You're up to $2,200 and still in an electronic "cottage."

* A "modem" for your computer to use the phone as a plug to the outside world: $300. Then, for "hard copy"—printouts on a roll of paper—you need a $500 printer. You're at $3,000 plus tax.

* Now you can, for $7 to $30 an hour (plus phone time charges) tap into instant news and stock data, research information and—in some places—get recipes and store prices, as well as write electronic checks to your utility companies.

YOU ALSO CAN buy software programs, at $30 to $1,000 each, to do an almost endless variety of tasks from printing lists, keeping company books, supervising the children's homework to keeping track of inventories.

* For $250 additional, a "peripheral" option enables the computer to talk, sing or play tunes.

Or for $3,000, you can order a "word processor" that types letters superbly and retypes if you make a change.

For another $250, you can get a pen-shaped "wand" to correct charts and graphs. And there are all sorts of other gadgets.

Today, the small computer is not yet a true home appliance. But clearly, it's on the way and at a truly practical price.

Texas Town To Celebrate Irish Holiday

SHAMROCK (UPI) — Something akin to a magic spell overcomes the people of Shamrock each St. Patrick's Day, as the small West Texas town becomes Irish.

The city's 3,200 residents are working to paint the town green once again, making the village an Irish stronghold during the annual St. Patrick's celebration.

The Shamrock Chamber of Commerce usually estimates 40,000 people will attend the weekend celebration. But general chairman Ernest Henderson said this week attendance probably will be closer to 20,000.

Events planned today and Saturday — a Miss Wild Irish Rose contest, dancing, a beard-judging contest — are components of the St. Patrick's Day celebration that involves almost every resident of the town.

There are no more Irish surnames on the local tax rolls than in any other town in Texas. Nevertheless, the blood of Shamrock residents runs green each St. Patrick's Day.

The celebration had its beginnings shortly after the turn of the century with George Nickel, a pioneer postmaster who, pining for his native Ireland, bestowed the name Shamrock on the hamlet that had sprung up in the Texas Panhandle.

But it was not until 1938 that the late Glen Truax, a Shamrock High School bandmaster, drummed up the idea of capitalizing on the Shamrock name by conducting a St. Patrick's Day event. Later, the Shamrock Boosters Club, a group of town-touting businessmen, doffed their derbies to Truax's suggestion and set about fashioning an idea into a festival.

This year's celebration will be No. 35 in the succession of annual observances, headed up this year by Henderson. He is assisted by Wendell Morgan and scores of committee members charged with seeing that the arid landscape is flushed with Kelly green. The town newspaper, The Shamrock Texan, will print each

This year the banner flying over the festival proclaims it "An Irish Fantasy."

Saturday features a parade led by the green-clad Shamrock High School "Pride of the Irish" band. During the parade, every man without a beard or a permit to be without one can be placed in jail under $2 bail.

"I'm not going to grow a beard; mine would change colors," Henderson said. "I had to buy my license. That cost me $2."

"Our jail is ready," he said. "We've got some great big old Irish boys with whiskers and they are big enough to put them in there."

Festivities Saturday also will feature the Donegal beard judging, the Miss Irish Rose contest, old fiddlers competition, a street carnival, dances and a championship domino tournament.

Also scheduled is an event to stress the Texas part of the celebration — the team roping rodeo contest.

Tiffany's Gets $5 Million Tax Credit

NEW YORK (AP) — Tiffany's chief executive says his company deserves its $5 million tax credit under the state Job Incentive Program, despite the famous jewelry store's gilt-edge reputation.

"All we've done is follow the law," Henry Platt, Tiffany chief executive, said this week. "Maybe there should not be this kind of program. That's not for me to decide, because I did not write the law."

But state Sen. Franz Leichter, a Manhattan Democrat, who says Tiffany & Co is not a charity case wants the state to revoke the tax credit, which will reduce the store's income taxes by about $504,000 a year for each of 10 years.

The company, which had sales of about $100 million last year, will pay $300,000 a year in income taxes under the program, said Leichter.

The purpose of JIP is to attract new businesses and to persuade companies already in the state to remain or expand, keeping or adding jobs for New Yorkers.

"The JIP is not only providing free lunches, it is providing a free feast paid for by the taxpayers to some of the biggest and most prosperous businesses in the state," said Leichter.

Two years ago, Tiffany pondered expanding its operations and moving manufacturing, mail order and other departments elsewhere, according to Platt.

Eventually, the company decided to add three floors to its building on Manhattan's Fifth Avenue building and to hire another 170 employees. Platt said that would not have happened "without this incentive."

School To Continue To Pay Youngsters

SAN DIEGO (AP) — City school trustees have voted to keep through the spring term a program that pays Memorial Junior High School students the equivalent of a quarter a day for coming to class.

Principal Robert Amparan, who came up with the plan in an effort to cut truancy, said unexcused absences have dropped from 65 to 55 a day on the average during a four-month trial period.

Oil Causes North Dakota Town To Boom

WILLISTON, N.D. (AP) — Despite increasing unemployment and sagging wages elsewhere, Williston's economy is white hot. Oil is the reason, and it has made this northwestern North Dakota city a boom town.

The jobless rate in surrounding Williams County has ranged from 1.8 to 2.5 percent the past two years, and is lower than that in Williston itself, officials said.

"Last summer, only 35 people were on unemployment benefits one month, and that's because some people are always changing jobs," said Mayor Jim Haugen, 51, a lanky, laconic farm-implementation dealer.

"We're running about double the number of job-seekers through our doors now than we did two years ago," Frank Kurtz, manager of Williston's Job Service office, said.

"We get telephone calls every day, from every state, from people looking for work. We try to discourage them from coming, unless they've got a skill in oil-field work."

"The pay isn't as big as they've heard. It's overblown."

Oil was discovered in the Williston Basin in western North Dakota and eastern Montana in the early 1950s, but production costs were too high and the mini-boom faded.

Then the energy crisis of the 1970s focused attention on the western states as a vital source of oil and gas. Williston Basin became a target.

Winters are brutal in this nearly treeless farm and cattle country. But despite the lack of more varied lifestyles found in metropolitan areas, the hope of steady work and high wages is drawing an influx of thousands.

Williston's two-story downtown area swarms with new faces and out-of-state license plates.

There are plenty of jobs for skilled oil workers "but probably 100 applicants for every unskilled job," Kurtz said.

"Living in an energy-impacted county is like a two-edged sword, but the advantages far outweigh the disadvantages," said Haugen.

"Energy exploration has provided us with the lowest unemployment rate in the Dakotas and Montana. In mid-December it was 2.3 percent.

"But we compete directly with the oil industry (for city and county government employees) and it's a little tough."

People with average oilfield skills earn perhaps $14.50 an hour "working seven days a week, with overtime, and at completion of a job get a bonus if there are no accidents or that type of thing," Kurtz said.

Women are also finding non-traditional jobs such as truck drivers and drillers' helpers, making up to $5 an hour, "but they also get subsistence for out-of-town work and overtime," Kurtz added.

"Women who did sales and waitress work are taking these non-traditional jobs. And that makes a shortage of help in sales and waitressing."

Contrary to nationwide trends, commercial and residential construction improved from $19 million in 1979 to $29 million last year.

But lack of housing is a major problem.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

PISCES (Feb. 28-March 20) You will have excellent leadership qualities tomorrow because you know how to manage others without making them feel they are being directed.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your concern for those you love will be strong tomorrow. You'll be anxious to help make things easier for them. Do so without admonishing them simultaneously.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You tend to reflect the attitudes of persons you're with tomorrow, so make it a point to be with cheery types. You'll be assured of a pleasant day.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Sometimes, in order to get what we want, we must first cast a little bread upon the waters. A thoughtful gift to the right person could smooth your path tomorrow.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If companions do something worthy tomorrow, by all means acknowledge their accomplishments with a few kind remarks. Compliments mean a lot.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It's often been said that, when one is lucky materially one is usually not lucky in love. What may occur for you tomorrow should dispel this theory.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Tomorrow's happenings may offer you the opening you've been looking for to draw closer to someone you are fond of, but whom you've been unable to truly reach.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Situations others may find a bit intimidating won't prove difficult for you tomorrow. You have the ability to make the hard look easy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You don't need to be doing special things tomorrow or to be around certain types of people in order to enjoy yourself. Where you go, the sunshine follows.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Something could occur tomorrow to give you the opportunity to change things for one you love. By all means, make this a top priority.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your secret for success tomorrow will be to bend a little extra in order to show others how cooperative you really are. A right example is magic.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Doing good work is reward in itself, but tomorrow jobs which you perform well may carry extra bonuses. Take pride in your tasks.

Your Birthday
March 14, 1981
This should be a more active year for you socially than you have experienced for quite some time. If you happen to be unattached, this may be especially true.
Romance, travel, finances, luck and possible pitfalls are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

Preliminary Ruling Issued In Hanging

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The death of a young man found hanging from a tree on Sunset Boulevard and wearing a black Halloween monster mask and black clothing has been preliminarily ruled a suicide.

The body, which could be seen from a nearby junior high school and caused a traffic jam as motorists stopped to look, remained hanging for hours until coroner's investigators arrived to cut it down this week.

Soldier Refuses To Serve In Arab Territory

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Gadi Elgazi, a 19-year-old private in the Israeli army who was commended for excellence by his commanders, sits in a military prison. His crime: refusal to serve in occupied Arab territory.

The slogan "Free Gadi Elgazi" is daubed on walls in Tel Aviv. Local artists and performers have dedicated shows to the dark-haired young man, and the controversy has spread so far that even Americans are writing letters to local newspapers. A group of French intellectuals is pushing Elgazi's cause in Paris.

Elgazi was sentenced in January to a year in prison for refusing to join his tank unit in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River.

At his military trial he cited his opposition to the exiling of local Arabs, the demolition of houses suspected of harboring terrorists, and the shooting of student rioters. He quoted from Henry David Thoreau, the U.S. apostle of civil disobedience, and the works of Israeli writers to support his case. In a country where the three-year military stint is seen as a matter of national survival, Elgazi's battle has sparked a controversy between those who think an allowance should be made for him, and the military which fears it would set a dangerous precedent.

Leading liberals such as civil rights crusader Shulamit Aloni have urged the military to consider the wishes of selective conscientious objectors like Elgazi as it does orthodox religious Jews and pacifists.

Elgazi belongs to a group of draft-age youths who have declared their opposition to serving in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, where 1.2 million Palestinians live. Some members of "Group of 27," as they call themselves, have been drafted but have not finished basic training, and others will be drafted this summer.

In their manifesto, the 27 wrote that they rejected "an occupation that turns our people into oppressors and the Palestinians into the oppressed." They said service in the captured areas "goes against our consciences and our political convictions."

Israel's military chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Raphael Eytan, recently told a group of university students that military service in the occupied territories was no different from service inside Israel itself.

"Territory captured in 1967 ... what's the difference between that land and land conquered in 1948-49?" he asked referring to the war with the Arabs after Israel became a nation. "Only time," he said.

Ironically, Elgazi might be better off if he was totally opposed to military service. He would then qualify for special treatment as a pacifist. But Elgazi says he wants very much to be a soldier.

Although he belongs to a family of rigidly pro-Soviet Communists, no one has tried to exploit Israel's anti-Soviet sentiment to silence him.

To TV viewers, Elgazi comes across as a clean-cut, likeable youth. His teachers testified in court that he was a model pupil whose only political action was a refusal to join a school hike through the West Bank. The Supreme Court says the sincerity of his struggle is unquestionable.

Although the Supreme Court rejected his appeal, it urged the army to find a solution to the problem of Israelis like Elgazi, who are believed to number no more than 100. Justice Haim Cohn suggested that Elgazi should be eager to serve in occupied territory where he could advance the cause of "peace among nations."

Shefi insists the objectors are "violating the basic element of armed forces service: that a soldier undertakes to serve and obey all orders and go anywhere his commanders send him."

Letters to Israeli newspapers have urged authorities to free Elgazi. A New York rabbi wrote to the Jerusalem Post complaining that Elgazi's punishment was as harsh as that meted out to a soldier who killed guerrillas taken prisoner during Israel's 1978 invasion of southern Lebanon.

Another reader protested that Elgazi, who was willing to serve his full three years, was "locked up like a common criminal" while women who lied to the army and said they were religious in order to win exemptions were sentenced to only three months in prison.

Prof. Akiva Ernst Simon cites biblical precedents. Newlywed men were exempted from battle in olden days, he says, as were farmers whose vineyards had yet to bear fruit.

But Simon's colleague at the Hebrew University, senior law lecturer Shimon Sheetrit, argues that it is "almost impossible to differentiate between political objection and conscientious objection." Sheetrit observes that "in most countries in the world, even in those which grant exemptions for reasons of conscience, selective conscientious objectors are not recognized."

Official Sentenced In Extortion Case

BOSTON (AP) — A judge has sentenced a former member of the Boston School Committee to 18 months in jail for trying to extort $650,000 from a school bus company.

U.S. District Judge David Nelson this week also gave 47-year-old Gerald O'Leary a three-year suspended sentence and ordered him put on two-years' probation once he is released.

Puzzle Expert Designs Degree In Enigmatology

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Question: Who is and who is not an enigmatologist? Haven't a clue? Will Shortz is. Everybody else is not. "That is correct," Will Shortz affirmed last weekend, chatting between rounds of the fourth annual American Crossword Puzzle Tournament, which he directs. "I am the only person of record in this country with a bachelor's degree in enigmatology."

Puzzle a moment over that word. There is nothing enigmatic about it. Enigmatology, clearly, is the study of enigmas. Puzzles. Will Shortz is a 14-letter word for a puzzle expert.

In all the land, across and down, there breathes no other.

"My degree is from Indiana University," he said. "I designed the course. I took it. So far, nobody else has. Why should they? I mean, how many jobs are waiting out there for an enigmatologist?"

You don't have to look in the back of the book for the answer: not many. Will Shortz, though, has managed nicely. Expertly.

He is 28, just four years out of law school, seven years out of enigmatology school, eight years out of economics school. ... But, wait, we are getting ahead of the game. Back up, to square one.

"When I was a kid growing up in Crawfordsville, Ind.," he said, "my mother limited us to one hour of television a day. Other kids watched television, I did puzzles. I did book after book of them."

"Soon I began constructing my own puzzles. It was fun. I sold my first puzzle to a magazine at age 13. When I was 15 I had a regular word-game feature in Dell's puzzle magazine."

"I used to joke that when I went to college I was going to major in puzzles. Nobody took me seriously, of course."

He was serious, all right. After three years he had completed all his requirements for an economics degree, but economics did not interest him. Puzzles did. All manner of puzzles: word puzzles, math puzzles, logic puzzles, you name it. He had constructed and worked them all.

"I also was interested in the history of puzzles. I prowled libraries. I dug up every scrap of information I could find. My own shelves now contain about 2,500 books and magazines. I believe I know as much about the history of puzzles as anyone alive."

As it happened, Indiana University had what was called an Individualized Majors Program. If the school didn't offer a major a student wanted, the student could design his own. Will Shortz told his counselor he wanted to major in puzzles. She looked at him quizzically, but agreed. "I got the chairman of the linguistics department to be my faculty adviser. He guided my research. I found a history professor to supervise my course in the history of puzzles. I found a philosophy professor for my course in logic puzzles, a math professor for math puzzles, and so on. I wrote papers on each subject.

"I did a thesis: 'The History of American Word Puzzles before 1850.' Then I found that old word, enigmatology, and dusted it off. That's my course."

Crowded Prison System Will Rely On Trailers

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — New Jersey's crowded prisons will be getting some new cell space — trailers. But corrections officials, concerned about possibly explosive tensions in the prisons, are warning the 334 new beds likely will be filled before the end of the year.

The $1.35 million purchase of 52 trailers, approved this week by Gov. Brendan T. Byrne without the need of a legislative appropriation, will create almost as much space as the 400-bed medium-security prison that Corrections Commissioner William H. Fauver asked the Legislature to approve two years ago.

However, Fauver cautioned, the trailers are only a temporary measure and probably will be filled by the end of the summer.

"I cannot stress too strongly the urgency of this situation," Fauver said in a letter to Byrne.

"Morale is low and tensions are high, a combination which, historically, has culminated in devastating consequences," Fauver wrote. "I would not wish this state to stand beside New Mexico where, in the bloody aftermath, the shameful discovery was made that many knew, but none acted."

Fauver was referring to last year's prison riot in New Mexico in which 33 inmates were killed.

"The one theme that has run through every prison disturbance throughout the country has been overcrowding," Fauver said.

There are about 7,000 juvenile and adult inmates in the state prison system, which is designed for a maximum capacity of 6,700, Fauver said.

He said he intended to increase bed space without taking away prisoners' recreation and work areas. Locking up inmates without providing such facilities is "really the key for the disturbances" in other states, he said.

The trailers could be installed by April at state prisons in Rahway, Leesburg, Jamesburg, Yardville and Bordentown, he said.

Last November, voters approved a bond issue for prison improvements, but the Legislature must decide how to appropriate the money and has not been able to choose a prison site.

Fauver's proposals to build the prison in Newark, Monroe Township, Hopewell Township, Camden and Kearny have all been rejected by the Legislature because area residents complained of dangers from prisoners and drops in property values.

Similar arguments are being made now on Fauver's latest proposed site, at the Clinton Correctional Institution for Women.

Byrne took a swipe at the Legislature for delaying a decision on a prison site while recently enacting a law that will require minimum three-year sentences for people convicted of possessing a gun during the commission of a violent crime.

"We have reached the point when state legislators must recognize that it is callous and hypocritical to pass tough sentencing laws if they are not going to provide the prisons needed to keep criminals off the street," Byrne said.

In a memo to Fauver, Byrne said the rate of incarceration in state prisons has risen by 20 percent since a tough new criminal code requiring longer jail terms went into effect Sept. 1, 1979.

Animal Lovers Rescue Horses From Torture Trail

TICONDEROGA, N.Y. (AP) — The auction of 57 ponies and horses rescued on upstate New York's "Torture Trail" was a bittersweet moment for animal lovers. They saved the animals, but had to outbid horsemeat buyers to do it.

Interstate 87, the Adirondack Northway, is the major Northeast corridor for transporting horses to Canada for slaughter. Horsemeat is sold to European and Asian markets, where as a delicacy it sells for more than $7 a pound.

The Northway gained its nickname — "Torture Trail" — not because animals were being transported to slaughter, but because they were being treated cruelly along the way.

Dr. Robert Lopez, a veterinarian and member of the North Country Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, says he became aware of the problem in 1973, when State Police apprehended the driver of a tractor-trailer van stuffed with 35 full-grown horses. The truck was designed to hold 20.

When Lopez arrived on the scene, several horses "were down," victims of neglect, freezing temperatures, exhaustion and starvation.

He believes thousands of horses are subjected to abuse traveling the "Torture Trail" to Canada each year, although there is no official estimate.

In the most recent case, in December, near the town of Schroon Lake, state troopers confiscated a vehicle after a gas-station attendant told them he had seen "the frozen head of a dead horse sticking out of the back of the truck, covered with blood." The tractor-trailer held 85 horses and ponies — 45 over its capacity.

Trooper Ed Haroff recalls that when he finally managed to open the truck, the doorway was blocked by the carcass of a frozen, mangled horse. Inside, he found four more dead horses.

The surviving animals were moaning, Lopez said. Four were so badly trampled they had to be put to sleep at the scene. Others died later.

"Some of the horses could not stand up," he recalled. "Others stood and fell down immediately. Some crawled to the snow and began eating. One horse stood, an eye dangling."

The driver was fined $300 for cruelty to animals and sent on his way. There is no state law governing the transportation of livestock.

The inhumane shipments have stirred a wave of public outrage, but the Legislature has yet to pass a law to tighten livestock transportation laws.

State Sen. Hugh T. Farley, of the Adirondack village of Niskayuna, has been introducing legislation since 1977, but it has failed to pass. He says the "bugs" have now been worked out, and he is confident it will pass this session.

The problem with earlier versions was ambiguities that would have affected families transporting a pet horse or other livestock, he said.

This year's bill would ban two-tier trucks and mandate non-slip floors, adequate ventilation, sufficient protection against the elements, compartments and doorways high enough for horses to stand tall, plus ramps for loading and unloading.

A violator could be fined up to $100 per animal. A second violation would be punishable by up to a year in jail and a fine of $500 per horse.

State police say their biggest problem is that they must spot evidence of cruelty before they can stop a truck. The new law would allow them to make spot checks "before they see the horses, bleeding and mutilated," said state Sen. Joseph Bruno of Brunswick, a co-sponsor.

Neighboring Vermont's attorney general has pledged full cooperation so shippers won't be tempted to detour through the Green Mountain State, he said.

It fell to Bruce Crammond of Ticonderoga to shelter and feed the ponies and horses confiscated in December. Crammond, the nearest livestock trader with adequate room for the animals, says most of them suffered from a stress-related virus called "shipping fever."

Lopez said the surviving ponies seemed to be mainly family pets, from 3 to 20 years old. No longer wanted, they had been auctioned to horsemeat buyers.

An auction was set after state officials were unable to contact Perfecta International, the Jasper, Fla., company that had hired the driver. Repeated telephone calls to the company by The Associated Press went unanswered.

Hundreds of buyers showed up for the auction on Feb. 26, shiny-clean horse trailers and eager children in tow.

A pair of matched chestnuts went for more than $300. A pregnant pony sold for $110. A sturdy little 5-year-old brought $75 and was led off by a grinning little boy.

The American Horse Protection Association authorized Lopez to bid freely on two of the weakest survivors. It bought two ponies — one distinguished by its gaunt appearance, the other by its missing eye. Both will be allowed to graze out their lives at a farm in Virginia.

Linda Denton and her uncle bought a string of eight — "They'll never have to do another thing in their lives," said the Upper Jay, N.Y., woman.

After all, she added, "If a man can't be kind to an animal, he certainly can't be kind to his fellow man."

Addicts Charged In Drug Sales

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — Addicts undergoing treatment at a Buffalo hospital have been charged with running a drug supermarket on the sidewalk outside the facility.

Erie County Sheriff Kenneth Braun was on his way to a dental appointment at Buffalo General Hospital four months ago when he spotted the drug operation, run by addicts in the hospital's drug program.

Braun ordered an undercover probe and this week ten addicts were arrested on charges of selling heroin, barbituates, amphetamines and other drugs.

"At the same time they were being treated for their habit, they were trafficking a variety of drugs," Braun said.

Capt. Santo Costantino of the sheriff's department said all ten were "known addicts" and ranged in age from 25 to 58. "Most of them have lengthy arrest records," he said.

Costantino said an undercover agents made more than 30 drug buys from the suspects.

Many of the suspects were arrested at the hospital after they received doses of methadone to help wean them from heroin.

U.S.' Westernmost Outpost Maintains American Way Of Life

AGANA, Guam (AP) — After almost 300 years of the Spanish sword, 80 years of U.S. Navy commissaires, three years of Japanese control and 10 years of running their own affairs, Guamanians are trying to figure out where they go from here.

"We're in limbo," Gov. Paul Calvo said in referring to the 200 square-mile island's present status as an unincorporated territory of the United States.

Guam, located 6,007 miles west of Los Angeles and 1,593 miles east of Manila, is next door to Asia but is very much American. The 35-mile-long island, which is the peak of a 40,000-foot undersea mountain, boasts it has the world's biggest McDonald's restaurant. Burger King is here, too, along with Kentucky Fried Chicken, Taco Bell, used car lots and six-lane highways.

Eight-cylinder American limousines which guzzle $1.60 a gallon gasoline at the rate of 12 miles to the gallon are used as taxis; there is no public transportation. Guam also has cable television which features week-old tapes of Los Angeles programs complete with commercials.

And the islanders, a mixture of native Chamorro-speakers, Filipinos, Koreans, Japanese and Hawaiians, and some 25,000 U.S. military personnel and their dependents, constantly remind the rest of the world they live in America's westernmost outpost. The sign at Guam Airport welcomes visitors to "Guam U.S.A. (The place where America's day begins.)"

"Guam is America," said the 47-year-old Calvo, who was born in Agaña, the capital, and educated at Peacock Military Academy in San Antonio. He graduated from Santa Clara (Calif.) University in 1958.

But the main hotels on Tumon Bay are Japanese, and so are their customers. More than 75 percent of the 300,000 tourists to Guam last year were Japanese. Japan is only three hours flying time away, compared with 10 to the United States. And it is this distance from mainland U.S.A. that is part of Guam's problem, according to Calvo.

"We are 9,000 miles from Washington. No matter how smart they are, their sensitivity to Guam will be lacking."

Although Guam has been part of the United States since it was bought from Spain in 1898 in a $20 million package deal that included the Philippines and Puerto Rico, the island is sensitive about how neighboring U.S.-administered islands are treated.

Soviet Cosmonauts Head Toward Linkup With Lab

MOSCOW (AP) — Two Soviet cosmonauts rocketed toward a linkup with the Salyut 6 orbiting laboratory as the United States continued preparations to launch its first manned space flight in six years, the shuttle Columbia.

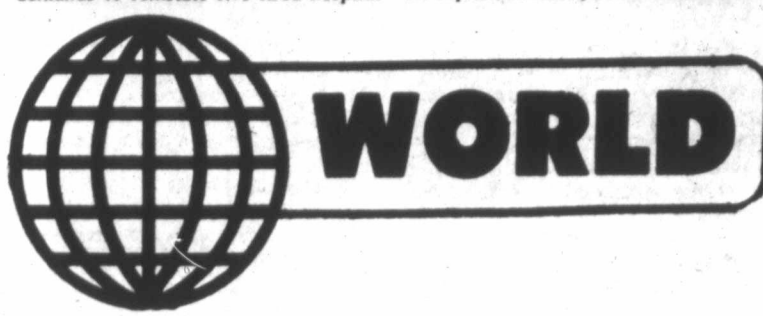

One of the cosmonauts, engineer Viktor Savinich, is the 100th person to fly in space. He and Col. Vladimir Kovalyok, the mission commander, roared into orbit Thursday aboard a Soyuz T-4 spacecraft.

The Soviet news agency Tass said all systems were functioning normally, the cosmonauts were "feeling well," and that they would do maintenance, repairs and experiments on the Salyut 6 after linkup. It did not give a date for docking or say how long the mission would last. Salyut 6 has been in orbit since Sept. 29, 1977. Linked with it is a resupply craft, Progress 12, sent aloft Jan. 26, 1981, Tass said.

The Soviet mission was the first manned space flight of 1981 and came exactly one month before the 20th anniversary of the first one ever — by Soviet cosmonaut Yuri Gagarin.

The last manned U.S. space flight was in 1975, when Apollo 18 linked up with the Soviet spaceship Soyuz 19. The next manned U.S. mission will be the launch of Columbia, set for early April.

EDWARDES' LAW: BUTTERED BREAD SHOULD STAY HOME...

Placentas Heal Burns

SELLERSVILLE, Pa. (UPI) — Debbie Diehl orders about 10 placentas each week from the Grand View Hospital delivery room. They are used as living bandages.

The nurse prepares the amniotic sacs — in which fetuses float during gestation — to be used to treat burns, skin ulcers, bed sores, or open wounds of patients at the hospital in this small Bucks County borough.

"I won't treat a burn patient with anything except amnion. It's far more superior than anything else that is available," said Dr. Andrew B. Walker, an Allentown, Pa., pediatric surgeon who received a private grant to start a bank of the fetal material for hospitals in the Lehigh Valley area.

Because amnion, the thin, transparent lining of the amniotic sac, is a living membrane, it creates a nearly normal environment over a wound that allows it to heal faster, Walker said.

"When applied to a fresh burn, amnion causes almost immediate cessation from pain and protects against protein loss and infection," Walker said. "In the pediatric age group, it minimizes the chance of scarring and the necessity of skin grafting."

Non-biological dressings often prevent the phagocytes — cells that destroy germs — from returning to the circulatory system, Walker said. The dead phagocytes form pus on the surface of the wound.

By creating a normal environment, the amnion allows the phagocytes to return to the body's circulation and the wound heals faster, Walker said.

The first medical article on such use of amnion appeared in 1911, but it wasn't until 1971 that the fetal material's value in curing burns gained national attention.

In 1979, a private Allentown trust fund awarded Walker $3,235 to set up an amnion bank so area doctors could get experience using the living bandage without cost to the patients. Last year the amnion bank received $4,961 more.

"I'm hoping that we'll be able to have the procedure worked out so that it's easy enough and available to everyone," Walker said. "If it's used it could save an enormous amount of money and suffering every year in this country."

The amnion lining is removed from the placenta, sterilized in saline and penicillin, and then is refrigerated to wait for a patient.

Burn patients treated with amnion don't need to be hospitalized as frequently, Walker said, and patients can pick up test tubes of amnion and apply it themselves. The transparent lining allows doctors to inspect the wound without disturbing the dressing.

Pig and cadaver skin, typically used to graft severe burns, are inferior to amnion because they are expensive and often produce an antibody reaction that causes the body to reject the graft, Walker said. Amnion does not produce such a reaction and unlike other grafts, it can be applied to infected skin.

Delivery rooms, of course, can supply the fetal lining. The preparation process for the amnion costs $5 per square foot — enough to treat ten patients with smaller wounds, Walker said. The amnion can be stored for six weeks.

Foreign Influence On Congress Prompts Concern

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department says its criminal division is considering whether to pursue a request that it investigate whether foreign governments have used sex and money to influence government officials. The investigation was requested by Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-Ill., after disclosure that three congressmen shared a Florida cottage with a female lobbyist who later posed nude for Playboy magazine. The office of Attorney General William French Smith released a letter Thursday in which Smith told Crane: "I share your concern at the seriousness of these allegations, which can have far-reaching effects on American society and its faith in its government." Smith said the matter was referred to his department's criminal division. John C. Keeney, acting assistant attorney general in charge of the criminal division, said, "We are analyzing it as we would any request or allegation to see what if anything should be done with it."

In a statement, Crane expressed satisfaction that the department had "responded favorably" to his request. The congressman could not be reached for further comment. His press secretary, Laura Broderick, said Thursday he was en route to Detroit.

Crane's letter to Smith on Monday requested an investigation of whether "foreign governments have employed sexual activity, money or other enticements in an attempt to compromise any officials of the U.S. government."

Miss Broderick, asked if Crane had any particular foreign governments in mind, replied: "I'm not telling you that."

On Tuesday, Crane's administrative assistant, David Allen, refused to say which if any specific foreign governments Crane wanted to know about. Allen's brother is Richard V. Allen, President Reagan's national security adviser.

Except for stories about Crane's request, news reports about the female lobbyist and the congressmen have not mentioned foreign government involvement.

Crane's office said in response to repeated calls Wednesday and Thursday that Allen was in meetings

Rep. Tom Railsback, R-Ill., one of those who shared the Atlantis City, Fla., cottage in January 1980 with lobbyist Paula Parkinson, said of Crane's request for the investigation, "It sounds to me like he's trying to clear the air. ... I intend to cooperate with whatever vehicle may be used for that purpose."

Opposition Mounts To Reagan's Proposal To Expand CIA Role

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doubts are mounting even within the CIA over the wisdom of a draft presidential order by a Reagan administration task force to allow the agency broad new power to spy inside the United States.

News leaks of the draft order earlier this week prompted administration officials to take extraordinary steps to stress that the review of existing rules for U.S. intelligence agencies had just begun and that months of debate were expected before any proposals were sent to President Reagan.

The CIA was scheduled to provide a closed briefing on the draft order today for the Senate Intelligence Committee.

Since the leak, Deputy CIA Director Bobby R. Inman has said he was fighting to block "a series of repugnant changes that might force him to resign. Attorney General William French Smith came out against one provision in the draft. Two Democratic congressmen and a former Carter administration official expressed alarm. And the American Civil Liberties Union said approval of the draft "would seriously jeopardize the civil liberties of law-abiding citizens, political organizations and business entities."

On Thursday, a top CIA official, who declined to let his name be used, said, "Everyone is going back to the drawing boards."

The draft order, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press, would allow the CIA to use break-ins, physical surveillance and infiltration to obtain information from U.S. residents and corporations even if they were not suspected of crimes or of being foreign agents.

The CIA also would be allowed to try to secretly affect the activities of some domestic groups with foreign ties. And the chiefs of various intelligence agencies rather than the attorney general would be empowered to approve such tactics.

The draft order, which would revise one issued by President Carter in January 1978, was prepared by a task force headed by CIA general counsel Daniel Silver and composed of representatives from the National Security Agency, FBI, Defense Department and other intelligence agencies.

Bolger Lists Merits Of Longer Zip Code

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Postmaster General William Bolger is trying to win over public support for his proposed nine-digit ZIP code with this selling point: You don't have to use the extra four digits unless you want to.

Bolger emphasized the volunteer aspect of his cost-saving "ZIP-plus-four" in testimony Thursday before a joint hearing of two House Post Office and Civil Service subcommittees.

"It is true many people have the impression that ZIP-plus-four will be a burdensome imposition," Bolger conceded. "If it were a mandatory program, a requirement imposed by the Postal Service, I would feel the same way."

"But the fact is that no one — I repeat, no one — no individual and no business, will be required to use ZIP-plus-four," Bolger stressed.

But the postmaster general said the present five-digit ZIP must be expanded to get full benefits from electronic visual scanners that sort mail automatically.

Incentives for large-scale business mailers to use nine digits will help save $1 billion a year when fully implemented, Bolger said.

This saving, in turn, is needed so the Postal Service can withstand several types of budget blows without reducing service, he said.

The biggest blow came last month when the Postal Rate Commission approved an 18-cent first-class postal rate instead of the 20-cent rate the Postal Service sought, Bolger said. He said this will mean a loss of $1 billion a year.

In addition, he said, the administration has proposed big cuts in the postal subsidy and the Postal Service faces new labor contract negotiations this year.

Members of both subcommittees seemed sympathetic.

Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Texas, chairman of the personnel subcommittee, said the rate commission's decision "is not cost-cutting; it is make-believe."

"On top of that," Leland said, "The Reagan administration has recommended cuts in the Postal Service subsidies that will total almost $1 billion by the end of 1982, without any serious consideration of what the possible effects will be."

Haig Reveals Talks Slated With Russia

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig revealed today that low-level talks between the Soviet Union and the United States will begin promptly, but said a summit meeting between President Reagan and Premier Leonid Brezhnev is unlikely in the near future.

Draft Plan Presented By Panel

or at the "conclusion of the academic term of college in which the individual was enrolled."

For a high school dropout, service would start within 90 days of the time he left school or at a specific age, which was not given.

At the end of the orientation phase, the youth would be offered a choice among three options: remain on active duty in the service of his choice if openings existed, join a reserve unit or go into the Individual Ready Reserve of the Army or Marine Corps, which have had the most trouble filling this mobilization manpower pool.

As is the case now, members of the Individual Ready Reserve would not be members of units that hold monthly drills, but would be required to undergo "periodic refresher training."

If a youth decided to remain on active duty, he would serve at least three years and then be obliged to enter a reserve unit or the Individual Ready Reserve for another three years.

The youth would be eligible for full veterans benefits after completing the three-year active duty tour.

In his acceptance speech at the Republican National Convention in Detroit, Reagan said last July:

"I do not favor a peacetime draft or registration, but I do favor pay and benefit levels that will attract and keep highly motivated men and women in our volunteer forces and an active reserve trained and ready for an instant call in case of an emergency."

Reagan has said nothing since his election to change that position, although there is no indication he is taking any steps toward dismantling the draft registration machinery.

The president's budget-cutting proposals spared the $35 million program and a pilot program is getting under way to recruit and train draft board members in the event the draft is revived.

Election Suit

least one and possibly three votes short in his effort to have a new election ordered.

"I feel like I won it (the election) since I was declared the winner," Whitworth said following today's meeting.

Ironically Whitworth's response to the suit was filed by attorney Elmer East, who also serves as legal counsel to the water district board.

Miller questioned whether East's legal representation of Whitworth represented a possible conflict of interest.

East said he merely filed the response for Whitworth and has not discussed with him whether he will be representing him at the hearing.

District Judge Robert Montgomery of Memphis has been appointed to hear the election contest suit, which was filed here in 72nd District Court.

cool to the idea unless the Soviets take some action to relieve tension points around the world.

Haig said the Soviets could accelerate the timing of a summit by withdrawing their 85,000 troops from Afghanistan.

Barring such a withdrawal, or a similar positive development, Haig said, "Meaningful talks at higher levels are some distance away." He said a meeting between himself and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko also is unlikely in the near future.

"What we are looking for is a reversal of Soviet illegal interventionism," Haig said.

The talks that will be held, he said, would begin in Washington and would cover a wide range of issues. Such talks could be between himself and Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin, for example, he indicated.

Meanwhile, a senior State Department official said the situation in Poland is "somewhat more tense" than it was a few weeks ago.

The official, who did not want to be identified, said there has been a "hardening line" by the Soviets on Poland. He said the United States also is concerned over upcoming Soviet-led military exercises along the Polish border involving a large number of troops.

The official said the scope of the exercises "gives Western observers pause."

"In light of recent events, the situation is somewhat more tense than it was three weeks ago," the official said.

For his part, Haig said more than 25,000 troops could be involved, but said it wasn't clear yet whether they will cross the border into Poland.

At a breakfast meeting with a small group of reporters, Haig said Reagan would respond to a letter from Brezhnev last week in which Brezhnev outlined his proposal for a summit, along with other subjects.

But Haig said consultations with U.S. allies will be conducted first to develop a coordinated response to the Brezhnev letter.

Haig said U.S. allies are behind the Reagan administration's approach to the Soviet Union, which has basically been one of insisting that the Soviets cease "interventionism" in Africa, Southeast Asia, the Persian Gulf and the Western Hemisphere.

Snow, Rain Forecast In Southwest

derstorms are forecast Sunday for the southern half of West Texas.

Temperatures will be in the low 60s today and Saturday and in the upper 30s tonight.

Winds will be northwesterly at 5 to 10 mph through Saturday.

The extended West Texas forecast calls for fair skies Monday and Tuesday following the weekend rainy weather.

Fair skies were expected over the Panhandle and far West Texas and partly cloudy skies over the rest of the region today.

No significant temperature fluctuations are expected through the weekend, but some cooling is forecast for early next week.

Temperatures will hold in the 60s through Sunday, weathermen said, but will drop into the upper 50s Tuesday.

Pre-dawn readings ranged from the 30s and 40s in West Texas to the 40s and 50s in the eastern and southern regions of the state.

It was 56 in Lubbock Thursday afternoon and 35 here this morning.

Area low temperatures included 31 at Littlefield and 32 at Abertamy, Dimmitt and Morton.

Leader Of U.S. Mayors Attacks Reagan's Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The leader of the nation's mayors says President Reagan's economic offensive is "almost a religious crusade" based on an untried theory that should be questioned now, before it is too late.

That assessment came Thursday from Richard G. Hatcher, president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors and a vice chairman of the Democratic Party.

Hatcher, who used the term "psychological magic" in his analysis, is one of the first important national leaders to make such a fundamental and critical challenge to Reagan's election mandate and the way it is being interpreted by the White House.

He said some of the budget and tax cuts Reagan is proposing don't make sense even when judged by the president's own avowed political philosophy.

"If one looks at some of these cuts, there's a kind of wonderful illogic about them," the Gary, Ind., mayor said at a news conference.

For examples, Hatcher cited elimination of the Economic Development Administration and cuts in the Urban Development Action Grants, both designed to stimulate private investment.

"This really is inconsistent with the whole notion of the private sector having an opportunity to do its own thing, so to speak, eliminating a program like UDAG that leverages four, five, or six times as much in private investment as the public investment," Hatcher said.

"It's just inconsistent, unless you assume that what we are addressing here is what amounts to an almost religious crusade to get government out of people's lives almost totally," Hatcher continued. "I mean that's the only way that you can really explain some of the cuts that are being suggested."

"Some people basically, I think, believe it is a matter of saying that there are very few things that government ought to be involved in and beyond that, the free enterprise system will have to take over and it will solve all the problems," Hatcher said.

Hatcher said former President Nixon's administration expressed similar beliefs, but was more pragmatic in actual practice.

"But I think this administration believes what it believes and believes it so strongly that even if the world comes crashing down around its ears, it still would believe that," he said.

Even the administration acknowledges that much of its economic theory is untried, he said.

"We don't believe that all of these assumptions are correct," Hatcher said on behalf of the mayors' conference. "If any one of them is wrong, if there is a single miscalculation in the administration's economic theory, then the whole thing will fall like a house of cards."

"The time is here now, maybe it's long past, but someone has to say that there's some serious questions about the whole underpinning of this particular approach," Hatcher said.

"We believe that once many members of Congress know that there is support for a different position, for not granting these cuts, it will give them a little more ability and willingness to stand up and resist them," Hatcher added.

"I do not think that the November election was a mandate for cutting more than $2 billion from the food stamp program. I don't think the most callous person would want to see people receiving — I think it works out to about $130 a day for food — to see that money taken away from them."

Census Bureau Study Discloses Third Of Households Get Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new Census Bureau study indicates more than a third of all American households qualify for at least one government aid program.

In its first look at who gets government help, the Census Bureau compiled statistics on the recipients of five programs in 1979: Medicare, Medicaid, food stamps, school lunch assistance and subsidized housing.

Of an estimated 79.1 million households at the time, the bureau found that 27.2 million were reached by one or more of the programs studied.

However, Gordon W. Green Jr., author of the study, cautioned against interpreting the numbers as an indication of wide use of poverty programs.

The survey showed Medicare covered one or more persons in 18,526,000 households in 1979 and that more than 15 million of those included someone aged 65 or older. For 13,835,000 households, about 51 percent of the 27.2 million, Medicare was the only one of the benefits studied for which someone in the household was eligible.

According to the report released Thursday, 90 percent of the people covered by Medicare were white, 9 percent black and the rest were listed as Hispanic. The bureau said it counted people covered by the program, but did not compile figures on how many of them actually received benefits during 1979.

Of the Medicare-covered individuals, 40 percent either lived alone or with people not related to them, and in 78 percent of the cases the head of the household was a woman.

The median income of households with someone covered by Medicare was $8,584, compared with $16,533 for all households in the country. However, Green noted that most Medicare recipients are over age 65 and living on retirement income.

Eligibility for Medicaid, on the other hand, is based on income. This program tries to help needy families and those with dependent children. It covered 18.1 million people in 8 million households under a complex array of rules which vary from state to state.

The median income of households with Medicaid coverage was only $5,990. Of them, 68 percent had a white household, 30 percent were black and 9 percent Hispanic.

Those totals, and some others, will add up to more than 100 percent because Hispanics are not considered a race. People of Hispanic origin may list their race as black, white or other.

Turning to food stamps, the report said about 5.9 million households re-

Arms Aid Disputed By Iraq

A-J News Services

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Iraq's defense minister said his country has not received "a single cartridge" from the Soviet Union since the Iran-Iraq war broke out but has received arms from other countries, the London-based Arabic language magazine Al Hawadess reported today.

Maj. Gen. Adnan Khairallah was also quoted as saying Iraq has not sought arms from the United States, but "when the national honor is at stake nothing is impossible. If we needed arms and then got them from the United States, we would announce that before anyone else."

"We have not gotten a single cartridge from the Soviet Union since the war erupted," the 41-year-old defense minister was quoted as saying. "The Soviet Union declared neutrality to avoid supporting either party in the conflict. But, since Iraq is the party that relies on the Soviet Union as its main arms supplier, it was Iraq's arms supplies that were affected, although we have a friendship treaty with Moscow."

Al Hawadess quoted Khairallah as saying the Iraqis have obtained spare parts and other needs for their Soviet-made weaponry from "alternative friendly sources" since the war started Sept. 22.

There have been Arab press reports that unnamed Warsaw Pact countries were supplying the Iraqis with Soviet arms and spare parts, and a Western press report said at least 100 Soviet-made tanks were shipped to Iraq through Saudi Arabia, a staunch Soviet foe.

The magazine said it asked Khairallah why Iraq and the Soviets did not comment on the Western press reports and responded:

"If we said yes, we would have wronged the Soviet Union and hurt friends (the Saudis). And if we said no, we would have been against the truth. So we opted not to comment."

In another development in Southwest Asia, Kabul's Moscow-backed regime accused the United States of "heating up the armed conflict" in Afghanistan and said President Reagan's threat to supply Moslem rebels with U.S. arms was an act of "open enmity."

Afghan premier Babrak Karmal rejected a French proposal for a negotiated Soviet troop withdrawal, saying he was against "any attempt to bring up Afghanistan's internal problems for international discussion."

In a Radio Kabul broadcast late Thursday, the Karmal regime attacked Reagan's statement.

side the city limits as it does to those inside, using the same formula to calculate the cost wouldn't be fair.

The 1976 contract offer of $1,250 was based on dividing the total cost of operating the city fire department by the total number of calls made in a year.

McAlister said the figure had increased to $1,861 per call because of inflation.

County Precinct 2 Commissioner Coy Biggs said he didn't think it would be fair for the county to pay for the same service city residents get.

"I would give you my opinion in about 10 seconds," he said today, "and it would tear down any negotiations."

A reciprocal agreement with the city might be nice to have," he said.

"It looks like some new people on the commissioners' court have been talking to some new people on the council," he added.

According to city officials, interest in revising the county fire call contract was revived when Precinct 1 Commissioner Boyd Roberts talked to members of the council.

Roberts and Precinct 3 Commissioner Franklin Dunn, both new members of the court, were out of town this morning. Precinct 4 Commissioner Alton Brazell could not be contacted for comment.

Dole Recuperating From Operation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan reports that Sen. Bob Dole is "just fine" and "up and about and doing well."

"He met me on his feet," Reagan said after visiting Dole for 20 minutes this week in his hospital room at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, where the Kansas Republican is recuperating from a kidney stone operation on Feb. 20.

Reagan told reporters that Dole, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, would meet soon with physicians to determine when he can return to his work in Congress.

Corps of Engineers that is, 250,000 acres or less.

Both also work closely with the Environmental Protection Agency in battling water pollution.

The EPA has been most visible in fighting what it calls "point source" pollution, that is, pollution originating at one place such as a factory or sewage plant.

But there is also "non-point source" pollution, and here EPA turned to the Soil Conservation Service for help. Most of this type of pollution is soil and fertilizer washing off farm fields, so the agencies work together to try and correct the problem.

EPA wants to keep soil and fertilizer out of the water. SCS wants to keep the soil and fertilizer down on the farm, so they are really both seeking the same result, just for different reasons, explained SCS spokesman Hubert W. Kelley Jr.

Other agencies are involved in water matters too, among them:

—The Rural Electrification Administration, which makes loans for hydroelectric projects.

—The Geological Survey, which monitors streamflow and ground water levels and coordinates the interstate committees regulating some rivers, such as the Delaware.

—The Department of Energy, which is involved in the use of water both at hydroelectric plants and as a coolant in nuclear facilities.

—The Department of Housing and Urban Development, which assesses flood dangers and operates the government-backed flood insurance program. This includes regulations on what type of development local authorities can allow in flood-prone areas.

—The Bureau of Indian Affairs, which administers the water rights granted Indians in the past.

—Bureau of Land Management, watching over water supplies on public lands.

—Bureau of Mines, overseeing water problems affecting mine development.

—Fish and Wildlife Service, looking into water supplies for fish hatcheries and supply for wildlife.

—National Park Service, coordinating water availability for recreational uses.

Water supply, a particularly intense topic in Western states, often involves massive projects and massive bureaucracy. Agencies working on such projects include the Water and Power Resources Service, the Corps of Engineers, the Forest Service, the Soil Conservation Service and others.

Neither the Corps of Engineers nor the Water and Power Resources Service has begun any new projects in three years because of a power struggle between the Carter administration and Congress.

Former President Carter wanted new projects reviewed by the Water Resources Council in the executive branch to determine whether they were worth the cost. Congress insisted it was responsible for such reviews.

The result has been a backlog, now at $35 billion, of planned but unfunded projects for purposes like water supply, flood control, hydroelectric power and irrigation.

Interior Secretary James G. Watt said recently that the Reagan administration is committed to developing the nation's water resources, but cannot afford to propose any new projects right now.

Increasing authority for states and decreasing authority for the federal government also may be in the cards.

"There is, even among water people in Washington, a realization that water allocation and management is basically a state responsibility," said Seinwill.

Joseph Tofani, head of the Water Resources Congress, a private, non-profit organization that describes itself as working for wise use and development of water, says: "We've got too many regulations. Quite a few could be handled better by the states, each state has its own problems."

Seinwill said he hopes the states will do a better job in the future than they did in the past in maintaining water quality.

"They didn't in the 1940s and 1950s and the federal government stepped in, but we are all a whole lot smarter now than we were then," he said.

Even Tofani concedes that some federal involvement is necessary, to help settle disputes over water supplies that cross state lines, for example.

The biggest problem, he says, may not be the laws that Congress writes, but the way they are interpreted by bureaucrats.

Tofani cites regulations to protect endangered species.

"Congress intended to save things like the bald eagle, I don't know what good the snail darter does," Tofani said, referring to the rare little fish whose threatened survival ensnared the giant Tellico Dam project in Tennessee.

"I don't believe Congress meant the legislation to stop development, but rather that endangered species should be given consideration and a balance struck between development and the environment," said Tofani.

Striking a balance also can mean striking a balance between competing governments and agencies.

Take, for example, the Colorado River.

Flowing through the water-short West it is the object of so many water users that it nearly disappears before reaching the sea, and Mexico has complained about the quality of what Colorado River water does make it to the border.

Asked if reports were accurate that agreements among the local governments and agencies has resulted in allocation, on paper, of more water than the river contains, Seinwill said: "That is, I would say, true. If all rights were exercised at the same time, it couldn't be done."

He said the allocations were based on flow records for a 30-year period that turned out to be above normal.

So far, he said, downriver states like California and Arizona have been able to use more than their share, because demand was low upriver in Colorado. Increasing development in the upriver states will mean less water for Southern California in the future.

The Associated Press erroneously reported the amount of water an average four-person household uses per day. Because of a typographical error, the figure given was 225 gallons. It should have been 25 gallons. A family which cuts consumption by 25 percent, therefore, could save about 64 gallons per day, not 56 gallons as reported by the AP.

Citibus To Test Transfer Point

By PAT GRAVES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The moving of the Citibus downtown transfer point to Broadway and Texas Avenue, effective at 5:45 a.m. Monday, is a compromise among several groups involved in the ongoing controversy.

The present transfer point (where all bus routes intersect) is at Broadway and Avenue K. That location caused problems for merchants on Broadway's north side because passengers were waiting for buses inside and in front of their stores.

So the City Council moved up the timetable for a transfer point site from 1983 to the present. Several locations have been discussed: the new transit facility under construction at Eighth Street and Texas Avenue, Broadway and Avenue J (with a blocked-off area extending to Main Street); the former John Halsey Drug Store at Broadway and Avenue K; the corner across from that building; the block of Broadway between Texas Avenue and Avenue H; and the final choice — the intersection of Broadway and Texas Avenue.

today he plans to resubmit his original proposal, that of buying the former John Halsey Drug Store, at the transit board's Tuesday meeting. The council previously expressed misgivings about the cost, which Wilson estimates at $45,000-$50,000.

In the meantime, he said the temporary transfer point is a good compromise. The transit staff likes it, he noted, because it will require no route changes, cost increases or significant bus driving time to implement.

Wilson also said fewer parking spaces will be taken than if the point were farther east on Broadway toward Avenue H. He said Monday's change will eliminate six spaces adjacent to the federal building and five along the County Courthouse. Citibus already has spaces on the northwest corner of Broadway and Texas, but a few spaces will be taken on the southwest corner in front of the Mental Health-Mental Retardation offices.

MH-MR is glad to have the transfer point there, Wilson said, because 30-40 of its patrons ride Citibus. County Judge Rod Shaw said Feb. 27 he foresaw no significant problems with the parking loss. Undoubtedly the Broadway merchants two blocks west, who may have a few parking spaces returned, will welcome the change.

Motorists trying to park near the square may feel differently, however, but Citibus drivers should like the new location because they will have longer spaces in which to stop. The council at least has taken some action on the problem, while the transit board has given itself more time to find a permanent solution.

And bus passengers, at least those whose buses stop on the corners adjacent to the courthouse and federal building, will have benches to sit on and a more open area in which to wait. Wilson predicted the council will approve buying two temporary shelters with revenue sharing funds for the site.

The council is to decide which projects will be included in revenue sharing funding March 26. Wilson said the three-sided shelters could be erected within 90 days of approval. He said they will be located in the areas of the highest passenger concentration.

Wilson acknowledged the Broadway merchants' displeasure with the present transfer point and the council's desire for a speedy solution were the primary reasons for the change at this time. Extra curb space for the buses, the official reason, was also a factor, he said.

He expects a smooth transition next week, noting the change will affect 80 percent of the bus riders who use the transfer point, which sometimes means up to 100 persons at a time. Transit department supervisors will be present at Broadway and Texas and Avenue K, which will remain a bus stop, to assist passengers Monday and Tuesday.

New benches and signs indicating bus routes are to be installed at Broadway and Texas this weekend.

In the meantime, the search for another compromise on a permanent transfer point continues.

NEW TRANSFER POINT — As this map indicates, the Citibus downtown transfer point will move east Monday morning to the intersection of Broadway and Texas Avenue. Westbound routes 3 and 15 will board on Broadway next to the courthouse, and eastbound routes 1, 10 and 14 will board on Broadway next to the federal building. Eastbound and southbound routes 2, 6, 7 and 9 will board on Broadway in front of the MH-MR building. Westbound routes 5, 8, 12 and 13 will board across the street to the north next to the parking lot at Texas Avenue.

Suspect's Employer Provides Description Of Small Pickup

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Authorities now believe a Bible-toting man, who attempted to rob two Lubbock women Sunday morning, drove off in a bright yellow Luv pickup just minutes before his alleged accomplice reportedly barricaded himself in a house and briefly held off police with an arsenal of weapons.

And, in another development, the purported accomplice, Franklin H. Payne, lost a bid in 140th District Court this morning to have bail set. Bail had been denied by Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy at the suspect's arraignment and Judge William Shaver upheld that action.

Lubbock County Jail officials were told Thursday that Payne, 41, who eventually left a 36th Street residence and surrendered, drove off from his place of employment in Dallas a week ago in the pickup, which has a ladder rack on the cab and a tool box attached to the side of the bed.

The vehicle's license plate number, according to Payne's employer, is RF-9644, and the serial number is CLN-14A8234467.

Lawmen have been looking for such a pickup, first described as faded red or orange in color, since the bizarre attempted holdup of Betty Jean Hensley, 56, and her 20-year-old daughter, Lisa, at their 3506 37th St. home about 10 a.m. Sunday.

The man who remained at large today reportedly was seen leaving the area in the pickup. Police say Payne, his alleged accomplice, attempted to force his way into the Hensley residence moments later and then broke into a 36th Street house after reportedly firing a machine gun at a pursuing police officer.

Payne, who refuses to identify the second man, eventually gave up and was taken into custody. Police found the man heavily armed and confiscated additional weapons inside the house in which he was holed up.

Payne's employer, J.D. Whitlock, owner of the Dallas-based Quick Fill Corp., said the accused man left work in the company pickup about 5 p.m. Friday. He said he did not learn of the electrician's arrest here until Monday when the man failed to show for work and company officials contacted his mother in Dallas.

Whitlock said he had hoped the arrest would lead to the discovery of his pickup. Whitlock said Payne went to Lubbock several months ago because "he said he had some sick relatives to see." He said Payne, described as a quiet type, once approached a co-worker and asked, "Do you know of any poker games we could rob?"

Payne had been employed with the company, which maintains numerous service stations and convenience stores, for about 1 1/2 years. He lives in Forney, about 25 miles north of Dallas.

At Payne's bond hearing this morning, Assistant District Attorney Mary Ann Wiley questioned several police officers about the circumstances of Payne's arrest. She also introduced into evidence two previous Dallas felony convictions against Payne, one for attempted robbery with a firearm in 1973 and another for burglary in 1982.

Defense attorney Jack Martin argued that no evidence of attempted capital murder had been introduced against his client, saying the shots fired may have been merely a warning, not an attempt to kill.

Payne remained in the county jail today on charges of attempted capital murder, attempted aggravated robbery, burglary of a habitation and unlawful possession of a firearm by a felon.

His accomplice, about whom police have little information, is described as an attractive, well-groomed white man with a dark beard.

Record Divorce Action Back In Court

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The largest divorce action in history, a $2.5 billion divorce suit involving Arab billionaire Adnan Khashoggi and British-born beauty Soraya Khashoggi, was going back to court today after a year-long delay.

After months of filing documents, attorneys were to present arguments on the case's most crucial question — do California courts have jurisdiction to hear the sensational action or must the trial be held elsewhere?

"The documents we have filed are stacked up about 2 feet high now," says celebrity lawyer Marvin Mitchelson, who represents Mrs. Khashoggi. "No matter what decision is made, whoever loses will appeal. It could go up to the United States Supreme Court and it probably will be a monumental appellate decision concerning jurisdiction."

Mitchelson gained fame for winning the landmark appellate decision in the case of Michelle Triola Marvin against actor Lee Marvin. That case established that unmarried couples who lived together could sue for property division when the relationship ended.

Mitchelson argues that Mrs. Khashoggi, who married the Saudi Arabian arms dealer in 1961 and bore him five children, is a resident of Los Angeles and is entitled to have her case tried here.

He notes that Khashoggi, who went to

Small Crowd Attends Judy Funeral Service

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Convicted killer Steven T. Judy, whose troubled life ended in Indiana's electric chair, nearly went to his grave without getting one of his final wishes — burial with a half-pint of bourbon, relatives say.

His foster father forgot about the bottle until shortly before burial services began.

"I had to send someone out to get it at the last minute," Robert R. Carr said Thursday after Judy was buried at Floral Park Cemetery. He said a friend delivered the bottle of Early Times just minutes before the services started.

Judy was buried after a simple service attended by only a handful of people, most of them family members and reporters. Sprays of flowers framed Judy's open casket — one of them from Jeanne Timms, an ex-girlfriend who now lives in Texas and who was one of the last people to talk to Judy before his execution early Monday.

The cemetery is located only about four miles from the spot on Interstate 465 where Judy abducted Terry L. Chasteen and her three children and later killed them.

Three blocks from the cemetery is Central State Hospital, where Judy received psychiatric treatment before being released in the custody of the Carr family at age 14 following a vicious attack on a woman.

Judy's execution was the first in Indiana in 20 years. The 24-year-old killer said he preferred death to life in prison.

Psychic To Join Search For Corpse

AMARILLO (UPI) — A California psychic has arrived in Texas to assist law enforcement officers in a search for the body of an Oklahoma man believed killed near the Texas Panhandle-New Mexico border.

The psychic, a woman whose name is being withheld by authorities, joined police detectives from Oklahoma City, Amarillo and Stanton, Calif., Thursday in an area that she earlier had described during a seance.

The woman tipped police two weeks ago that a man was murdered near the state line on Interstate 40. She said he had fought for his life and had scratched information into hard dirt before he died. Officers located the message in the dirt late last week.

Authorities are searching for Tom Corbett, 28, of Bartlesville, Okla. Corbett last was seen Dec. 27, when he left his home for a vacation trip to Vancouver,

J.W. Grace

ROCKY FORD, Colo. (Special) — Services for J.W. Grace, 78, of Rocky Ford, Colo., and formerly of Hale Center, will be at 10 a.m. Monday in Rocky Ford.

Burial arrangements are pending with Ustick Funeral Home of Rocky Ford.

Grace died Thursday in his home after a sudden illness.

He was a former Hale Center resident who moved to Colorado in 1957.

Survivors include his wife, Marie; a daughter, Betty Ruth Fox of Reno, Nev.; two brothers, Elmer of Shallowater and Acie of Bakersfield, Calif.; two sisters, Mrs. Tom Gregory of Lorenzo and Mrs. Ike Baker of Idalou; and two grandchildren.

Man Regains Sight In Accident

MOUNT AIRY, N.C. (AP) — A man who tripped over a dog and hit his head on a wall says the accident has given him something he thought lost forever — his sight.

"I'm finally able to see my five-year-old daughter and my two boys and my wife," an ecstatic Joseph Sardler said Thursday.

The 32-year-old Sardler lost the sight in one eye because of optic nerve atrophy when he was 14 months old. He became blind in the other eye about six years ago.

For years, he could see only light and dark patches.

On Wednesday night, Sardler said he went to the basement to wash some clothes for his wife, tripped over a dog and hit his head on a wall.

When he came to, he said, he could see the furnace. He yelled out to his family, "I can see."

The family telephoned the rescue squad, which took him to a local hospital. Doctors told him he was hyperventilating and almost in a state of shock from being able to see again with one eye.

State May Take Back Land From Elderly Texan

JEWETT (UPI) — An elderly Texas farmer may lose land he has worked more than 50 years because of the greed or miscalculations of a soldier who guarded baggage during a battle for Texas' independence.

And because the property is part of an area rich in oil and lignite coal, 81-year-old Jesse Johnson cannot purchase the land he believed was his for 53 years.

The tangled web threatening Johnson's home began in 1836, when Thornton P. Kuykendall was awarded 640 acres for guarding baggage at the Battle of San Jacinto, which led to the Republic of Texas' independence from Mexico.

Kuykendall first located in 1853 and filed a claim for 320 acres in Leon County. A patent, or title, to that land was issued in 1857, along with a certificate for the unused balance.

Kuykendall eventually filed for patents to the entire 640 acres. Then, either through greed or miscalculation, he filed for patents to additional land in Leon County. Because Kuykendall already had filed on 640 acres, the land office did not issue a patent for the property.

Kuykendall apparently never realized a patent was not issued for his last claim, and he identified the land as patented property in later bills of sale.

In 1900, the Texas Legislature banned further issue of patents, giving all remaining public land to the state's public schools.

Johnson bought 120 acres of the Leon County property in 1928. He built a home on the land, and farmed it to feed his wife and nine children while he worked for the railroads.

In 1978, Johnson was notified the land belonged not to him, but to the state. And, as one land office spokesman said, the state had to be compensated.

"Title has never passed from the state," said land office spokesman Herman Forbes. "Unfortunately, the people (Johnson and his wife, Malissie, 76) didn't go through an attorney when they bought the land. He could have told them they couldn't get good title to it. We're sympathetic with the plight of the people, but we can't give away state land."

"That (eviction) is what it will amount to if things get stirred up. It looks like we might be forced to take action to collect some rent or something. He can obtain agriculture leases or grazing lease. Of course, we may decide to put it up for auction for minerals."

Houston attorney Coy Spawn contends title to the land became an issue only after oil was discovered near the east Texas farm.

"Two years ago, some people came upon Johnson's property and asked to lease or purchase it. Johnson said no," the attorney said. "Not long after that he got a letter from the General Land Office telling him to vacate."

"It is unfair for him to buy and pay for the land in 1928, and 50 years later the state tells him to get off it," he said. "Why couldn't they have told him 50 years ago?"

Johnson maintains the land is his by virtue of the 1928 purchase.

"They say I ain't got no land," Johnson said. "I paid taxes on it all the time. I bought it in 1928 and paid for it. It's mine. It's unfair."

Rep. Senfronia Thompson, D-Houston, has sponsored a bill that would give Johnson clear title to the land. But Thompson concedes the proposal faces a tough battle, and a land office spokeswoman said such action may be illegal.

"We're real sorry," said Sara Speight, spokeswoman for Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong. "The constitution tells us what we're supposed to do ... and it says the Legislature shall not pass any laws favorable to one single purchaser."

"The laws say we can't sell it (the land) except at market value, and the Legislature can't make an exception for Mr. Johnson," she said. "The law also says we can't sell anything within five miles of oil production, which Mr. Johnson's land is, so we can't even sell it to him at market value."

Spawn maintains a way could be found for Johnson to keep the property.

"He's going to be kicked off his land on the basis of a theoretical technicality," Spawn said. "He's being taken unfair advantage of."

"He's not important to anybody, so nobody cares. It has to become politically expedient to help the underdogs. It's a dirty deal."

The state land office has no immediate plans to evict Johnson, Speight said, and welcomes Mrs. Thompson's efforts to find a legal loophole the elderly farmer can slip through.

"We don't want to throw anybody off something he lived on all his life," she said, "although legally we're supposed to be making money off the land."

"I don't know what we'll do," the retired railroad worker said. "That's what's been puzzling me. I bought the land for a home. I wanted to stay here for the rest of my life."

City To Purchase More Well Water

By MARC FLAKE
Avalanche-Journal Staff
The Lubbock City Council has contracted to purchase water from nine more wells in Bailey County although only three months ago Muleshoe city officials lashed out with concern that their reserve water supplies are being drained by Lubbock's water demands.

Following a closed session Thursday, the council approved the contract which will give Lubbock at least 325,851 gallons of water annually and probably more, said Sam Wahl, director of water utilities. The contract will last for 10 years.

However, because the contract is for the delivery of 3,258,510 gallons, it will not expire until the city receives the full amount, Wahl said.

"The city just can't pass up water which is available at a reasonable cost," he said.

The water will come from wells on a 1,500-acre Bailey County farm adjacent to water wells used by Muleshoe, he said. One of four owners of the farm, John Addink of Lincoln, Neb., told Wahl the water the city will receive will be about the same as if the farm were being irrigated for agricultural purposes, Wahl said.

According to the contract, one well next to a Muleshoe well will be limited to produce only as much water as is normally used for irrigation purposes, Wahl said.

He admitted the selling of the water may offend many people in Muleshoe who recently objected to the drilling of 12 Lubbock water wells in the county.

The city decided to drill the additional wells late last year after the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority cut Lubbock's allowance of water from Lake Meredith from 90 percent to 80 percent of the original allocation.

Lubbock faced a loss of 1.35 billion gallons of water annually because of the cut.

Wahl has said the city will need 10 million to 12 million gallons a day from Bailey County to meet peak demands this summer.

At a December public hearing, Muleshoe officials expressed concern that their reserve water supplies may be diminished by Lubbock's water demands.

Muleshoe Mayor Charles Bratcher said the latest drain on Bailey County water supplies surprised him.

"Considering the amount of land area water rights Lubbock is entitled to, now they want more," he said. "It's quite an asset to them isn't it?"

Wahl said the nine wells could begin serving Lubbock by August, with the water costing the city about 31 cents per 1,000 gallons.

Although the contract lists a minimum 1,350 acre feet annually, it lists no maximum except for the well which can produce only as much as normal irrigation procedures require, said Wahl.

"Bailey County has less rainfall than other areas like Lubbock," Wahl said. "Farmers there have to irrigate considerably."

Cavazos Discusses Problems At Tech

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff
The persistent issues of faculty morale, evaluation and salaries came up again Thursday when Texas Tech President Lauro Cavazos addressed journalists from across the region at Tech's annual News Day.

Meanwhile Thursday, the Executive Committee of the Faculty Council at Tech's Health Sciences Center had a "lengthy discussion" about Cavazos' proposed faculty evaluation plan. David Potter, chairman of the group, said Cavazos will be asked to speak before the group at its April 9 meeting.

Potter said the group also wants the president to respond with a "written clarification" on the proposed system which was first described earlier this week in an Avalanche-Journal article.

Despite all the hot issues, Cavazos said he is grateful for media interest in the university and that he values freedom of the press.

Before honoring four Texas newspapers with certificates, Cavazos noted that he began his college career as an English and journalism major.

The Abilene Reporter-News, El Paso Herald-Post, El Paso Times and San Antonio Light were recognized for celebrating their 100th anniversaries this year. Cavazos noted that a plaque bearing the names of all Texas newspapers 100 years old or older will be displayed in the Mass Communications building at Texas Tech.

In describing his first year in office as president of his alma mater, Cavazos noted that he was "somewhat surprised" by just how big a job it is to be president of a university, as well as its Health Sciences Center.

After a year of learning about Texas Tech, trying to understand its mission

Air Force Plans Area Hearings On Alternative MX Locations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force will hold public hearings next month in seven cities on alternative proposals to locate the MX missile system in West Texas and eastern New Mexico.

The Texas-New Mexico hearings will follow a series to be held March 30 through April 9 in Nevada and Utah, the area identified by the Air Force as its preferred location for the massive mobile missile system.

The hearings were scheduled to collect public comment on the draft environmental impact statement the Air Force released in December.

The first is scheduled April 13 in Santa Fe, N.M., followed by hearings in Austin, April 14-15; Lubbock, April 16; Amarillo, April 20; Dalhart, April 21; Clovis, N.M., April 22; and Roswell, N.M., April 23.

The Air Force has scheduled afternoon and evening sessions in each city on the same day, except in Austin where an evening hearing is scheduled April 14 followed by an afternoon session the next day.

The exact time and locations for the hearings will be announced at a later date.

Six of the eight possible choices outlined in the draft environmental impact statement would locate the entire system of 200 missiles and 4,600 shelters in Utah and Nevada.

The seventh alternative would place the entire system in eastern New Mexico and West Texas, with support bases at Clovis and Dalhart. Under the eighth choice, half of the system would be in Utah-Nevada while the other half would be located in eastern New Mexico with its base at Clovis.

Texas congressmen and officials have predicted it will be highly unlikely for the missiles to be located in the state, in large part because of land costs.

The Air Force's format for the hearing calls for a 30 minute briefing on the MX system, about one and one-half hours for a question-answer session and two hours for public comments.

A representative of a group will have five minutes to speak while an individual will be able to spend three minutes at the microphone. Speaking order will be determined by a random drawing.

Written comments can be submitted for the official record.

The Air Force schedule was made available to reporters by the office of Rep. Kent Hance, a Lubbock Democrat.

GAO Doubts Credibility Of Missile Report

WASHINGTON (AP) — Numerous flaws reduce the credibility of an Air Force report that says the expected effects of the planned MX mobile missile system on the environment of Nevada and Utah "certainly are manageable."

7-Year-Old Boy Kills Friend During Game

BAYTOWN (UPI) — A 7-year-old boy playing cops and robbers accidentally shot and killed an 11-year-old playmate, a sheriff's investigator said today.

Phillip O'Neal Simmons was shot in the face and killed about 4:30 p.m. Thursday with a .243-caliber hunting rifle. Harris County Sheriff's Detective W.R. Harper said.

Harper said a 7-year-old boy and Simmons were in the younger boy's apartment "watching TV and playing cops and robbers like kids do." He said the boys found the rifle inside a leather case in a closet and used it in their play.

Harper said a clip containing bullets was in the gun at the time. One of the boys cocked the bolt-action rifle, putting a life round in the firing chamber. The gun subsequently went off and the bullet fatally wounded the victim.

says the auditing agency of Congress. Hugh J. Wessinger of the General Accounting Office testified Thursday about the draft environmental impact statement the Air Force released in December.

"The Air Force did not implement an adequate system of internal controls to ensure that the data in the draft (statement) was reasonably accurate, complete and supportable," Wessinger said.

The Air Force's statement had said that although the effects on the natural resources and residents of the desert valleys where the MX would be based "are not negligible, they certainly are manageable."

Wessinger, associate director of the Community and Economic Development

Division of the GAO, also told the House interior subcommittee on public lands that the 1,900-page, $20 million report "is voluminous and difficult to review and understand."

He added that "such length may be warranted considering the magnitude of the MX program."

Also, Wessinger questioned the Air Force report's assumption that the MX program would involve some 200 missiles moved among 4,600 shelters in "shell game" fashion. He said a GAO report last month reported that more missiles and shelters may be needed for an effective system. And that, he said, would increase the environmental effects.

Another assumption questioned by Wessinger was that sufficient water would be available in the arid region.

He also questioned the report's estimate of an 85,000 population growth, saying it was too low. And he disputed the report's contention that wilderness study areas would not be touched.

The Air Force hopes to begin deploying the MX system in 1986.

The GAO, however, said last month that that goal would be difficult to meet, partly because the draft environmental report was issued seven months behind schedule. A final impact statement by the Air Force is expected in mid-June.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

If you are under ten years old, there are three things you cannot relate to:

A day without denim.

Real money.

A home-cooked meal.

Last year, in a typical household in this country, everyone in it ate out 6.4 times a week (mainly the main meal) at a cost of $25.86 per week per household.

It should be obvious to everyone that Moms have not kept pace with the competition. While fast-food emporiums were developing secret sauces; mopping floors to music, hiding prize-winning numbers under the lettuce and putting apple pie under a red spotlight. Moms were pushing the same tired well-balanced meals.

Face it! Food is show biz! You have to have pizzazz to keep kids eating at home. When was the last time you saw your mother standing under Golden Arches singing about hamburgers? When was the last time she wore a derby hat and tap-danced with a cane while serving you pizza? Or cooked Chinese food at your table while juggling two meat cleavers?

I don't excuse myself. I was one of the mothers who thought home-cooked meals would go on forever. I became sloppy, careless and took the family for granted. Then I realized we were eating out all the time.

I said to my children one night, "How would you like to stay in this evening and have a home-cooked meal?"

"What's a home-cooked meal?" they asked.

"It's where we stay at home and Mommy cooks dinner."

My son propped my mouth open with a fork and said, "I'll have two burgers, three fries and a chocolate malted."

"No, no, dear," I said, removing the fork. You don't understand. Mommy cooks whatever she wants and serves it. Later as I spooned beef stew generously on their plates, I saw them heading toward the car. "Where are you going?" I asked.

"To the car, and how do you eat this stuff with your fingers?"

"You don't. You use silverware and you eat at the kitchen table."

"What's silverware and where's the little flag on the table that we raise for more catsup and more to drink and seconds on the chips?"

"You get up and get the stuff yourself."

Afterward, as I washed and dried dishes into the night, I couldn't help but wonder if the home-cooked meal didn't deserve to die.

Country Talks Diet With Mouth Full

SAN ANTONIO (Special) — The public's concern over food safety is equalled only by its obsession with dieting.

Weight control is a common thread interwoven throughout all proposals for nutrition policy, according to Philip White, who directs the Department of Food and Nutrition for the American Medical Association. Yet, to talk about weight loss while gaining weight is not only acceptable but fashionable behavior in our society. White told those who attended the Sixth Annual Nutrition Press Symposium, co-sponsored by Dairy Council, Inc., and Texas Cattle Feeders Association.

"We live in a country where discussion of dieting, diet books and spas is conversation at calorie-laden cocktail parties and heavy dinners," he said, "where it is chic to be thin but more chic to be on the way to thinness."

White's belief that more dollars are spent on worthless cures for obesity than on all medical research is supported by statistics. Recent estimates show that the diet industry accounts for $10 billion of the Gross National Product.

White accused the authors of the latest four best-selling diet books of publicly advocating their weight control plans without first exposing them to the critical review of their colleagues.

Popularized diets fail in the long run because they cannot provide the appropriate and highly personal motivation and instruction required for successful adherence, White said.

In his opinion, obesity prevention is better than 100 pounds of cure, no matter which diet is chosen. Prevention should emphasize personal dietary control and exercise more than federal control through policies regulating food components such as cholesterol, sodium and sugar.

SUGAR LAND — Pecans, from the state tree of Texas, are very nutritious and, when stored properly, retain their fresh flavor for very long periods. While some enjoy pecans straight from the shell, more and more people are using pecans in recipes like this luscious "Praline Pecan Loaf." Developed by home economists, the recipe is a rich, moist, cinnamon-swirl loaf cake flecked with chopped pecans inside and topped with pecan halves and a chewy brown sugar streusel.

Pecans, Brown Sugar Add Smiles To Family Desserts

SUGARLAND (Special) — Nothing is better than cracking pecans in front of a warm, cozy fire. Nothing better, that is, unless it is slicing into a moist streusel cake sprinkled with chopped pecans and laced with swirls of cinnamon and brown sugar.

If you are looking for an interesting new dessert to serve the family or use for company, try this recipe and see how pecans and brown sugar combine to add crunch, flavor, eye appeal — and smiles.

The loaf:
 1 pkg. dry yeast
 1/4 cup warm water
 2 1/4 cups sifted flour
 2 tbsps. granulated sugar
 1 1/2 tps. cinnamon
 2 tps. baking powder
 1/2 tsp. salt
 1/3 cup butter or margarine
 1/3 cup milk, scalded, cooled
 1 egg

Dissolve yeast in warm water. Set aside. Sift flour, granulated sugar, cinnamon, baking powder, salt together into mixing bowl; cut in butter or margarine until mixture resembles fine crumbs. Combine yeast with milk, beaten egg and stir into bowl and beat well. Knead about 5 minutes on floured surface until dough is no longer sticky. Roll out to 15x10-inch rectangle. Sprinkle with streusel mixture and roll up from short side (like a jelly roll). Cut into three equal pieces and place in loaf pan, (cut sides up), press lightly. Cover with oiled plastic wrap and let rise in warm place 1 1/2 to 2 hours or until even with top of pan. Bake in preheated 350 degree oven on middle rack about 30 minutes. Remove from pan onto rack to cool. Serves 8-10.

Pecans being very nutritious, are excellent sources of protein, carbohydrates, calcium, iron, vitamin A, ascorbic acid as well as small quantities of thiamine, riboflavin and niacin. And the pecan's oil is one of the most polyunsaturated fats known. Pecans can be used to add flavor and texture to foods in low sodium diets because the amount of sodium in pecans is too low to be measured.

When properly stored, pecans retain high quality, good taste and flavor for very long periods. Whether you buy a five pound bag of unshelled pecans or a small cellophane package of shelled pecans, the best place to store them is in the freezer. Pecans can spoil quickly in warm temperatures, but they'll keep a full year at 32 degrees.

Unless you have lots of time, buying shelled pecans in cellophane bags may be more practical and more efficient than buying whole, unshelled pecans. The valuable time required for shelling and picking the meat from the shells could easily make buying shelled pecans worth the higher price.

DEAR ABBY

Daughter's Action Thought Wise

DEAR ABBY: My mother is an invalid, close to 80. She has live-in help to look after her, and she changes help very often. With so many strangers coming and going, a problem has come up.

Several years ago, when Mother first became ill, we agreed that I would place her jewelry (which is very valuable) in a bank vault. Now she wants me to bring all her jewelry home.

I told her that I would be glad to take out special pieces for her to wear on special occasions, but this doesn't seem to please her. She wants all her jewelry at home.

I am so afraid it will be stolen. It's her jewelry, Abby. What to do?
WORRIED DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: One of the most controversial issues people must deal with is, "How much can one properly do for somebody else's own good?"

Your reluctance to let your mother keep her valuable jewelry at home is understandable, and very wise indeed. It may be her jewelry, but you are her daughter and responsible for her welfare.

Bring all the jewelry home for Mother to see and handle, and then return it to the bank for permanent safekeeping. Continue to reassure your mother that it's much safer there. And keep reassuring her. And reassuring her.

DEAR ABBY: I am 11 years old and have a big problem. My mom and dad fight at night, and last night they had a big one. There was loud yelling and I woke up scared and sick, I started to cry and my dad came into my room and gave me a glass of water. I asked him why they had to argue all the time, and he said, "Your mother is not well."

Abby, they act like children. My mom puts my dad down, and I don't like to listen to it. Please print this to let them know that I love them both, but I sure wish they wouldn't argue so loud. Thank you, Abby.

PROBLEM CHILD

DEAR CHILD: I am printing this letter because you aren't the only child with this problem. I hope all parents will realize that little pitchers have big ears. And are easily shattered.

DEAR ABBY: I went to a shower for an acquaintance. The hostess was a lady I had met only once before. We played a game and I won a darling stuffed animal. I was delighted, and planned to give it to my youngest child.

In the hustle and bustle of leaving, I left my prize behind. The next day when I went to pick it up, the hostess told me that she had given it to the guest of honor. She said it was customary that all prizes be turned over to the honored guest! She said she assumed that my leaving my prize behind meant that I wanted her to have it.

I thought this was rather presumptuous and felt quite annoyed that she didn't leave that decision to me. Am I wrong for feeling that way? And are prizes won at a party traditionally turned over to the guest of honor?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Some prize-winners do give their prizes to the guest of honor, but it is not traditional. Your hostess should not have assumed that because you left the toy behind she had the right to dispose of it.

The bidding:
 North East South West
 Pass Pass 3NT Pass Pass Pass
 Opening Lead: Five of ♣.

"Aces were made to capture kings" is an old bridge adage. South helped his opponents achieve that objective on today's hand, yet they were strangely unappreciative.

South had a classic three no trump opening bid—25 points and a perfectly balanced distribution. Since North's original pass had already been something of an overbid, he had nothing further to contribute.

West led his fourth-best spade and, before playing to the first trick, South paused to consider the possibilities. The opening lead assured him of seven tricks, and diamonds was the obvious suit to develop for two more. If the suit divided evenly, it would always produce three tricks. But in the event of the more likely 4-2 division, declarer would need to take two diamond finesses. Unfortunately, there was only one sure entry to the table.

Declarer found a neat solution to his problem. At trick one, he played the ten of spades from dummy. When East took the ace, declarer jettisoned his king under it! Since West held the queen of spades, dummy's jack was now an entry.

No matter what the defenders did, the contract could no longer be beaten.

Declarer used the ten of spades as an entry for one diamond finesse, and the queen of clubs to repeat the finesse. Since East held the king of diamonds, declarer came to one spade trick, two hearts, three diamonds and three clubs.

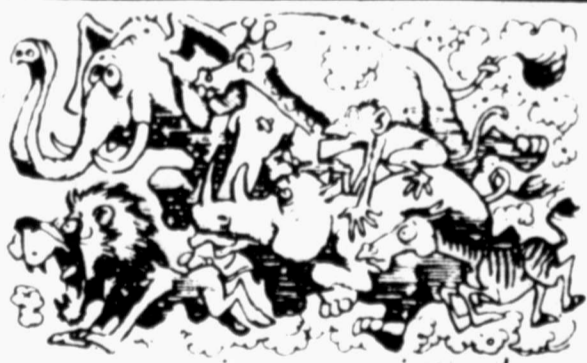

As the cards lie, there is a double-dummy line that will enable declarer to make his contract even if he does not unblock the king of spades under the ace. He wins the spade return, enters dummy with the queen of clubs and takes the diamond finesse. Now declarer cashes his remaining winners in clubs and hearts, then exits with a heart. East must win and, at the end, lead a diamond from the king to give declarer a second finesse. But that line would fail if West started with three or more hearts.

School Subsidies Affect Potent Lobby

By WALTER R. MEARS
WASHINGTON (AP) — On one budget-cutting issue, President Reagan and Jimmy Carter are in solid agreement. So were Presidents Ford, Nixon, Johnson, Kennedy, Eisenhower and Truman before them.

But that unanimous lineup hardly budgeted Congress, which has invariably renewed — and often increased — school subsidies to what are called federally affected areas, communities with concentrations of government employees whose children attend public schools.

The program now sends federal aid to more than 4,300 school districts, one out of every four in the nation. More to the point, some of the money goes to schools in more than 400 of the 435 congressional districts.

That's a potent lobby, and impact aid is likely to be one of the most difficult targets on Reagan's list of budget cut proposals.

It has withstood the insistence of presidents past and present, Republican and Democratic, that the program has become something it wasn't supposed to be.

The original idea, 30 years ago, was to compensate school districts that educate the children but cannot collect taxes either from federal employees or on government property.

But the present program provides some aid whatever the tax status of the parents. There is aid for pupils who live in federally subsidized public housing. In some cases, school districts get to count the children of people who work in government buildings, whether they are on the federal payroll or not.

Advocates of the program say that's only fair, since the federal presence does indeed have an impact on local school costs. Reagan and his predecessors say otherwise.

In his farewell budget, Carter proposed a drastic cut in impact aid, from an estimated $932 million now to about $457 million next year.

He said aid should be maintained only for school districts where at least 20 percent of the pupils actually live on federal property, which isn't subject to local taxes. He recommended that the balance of the program be sharply curtailed.

Under Carter's formula, which now is Reagan's, aid would go to 323 school districts, to compensate for about 168,500 pupils in 1982.

Under the current program, impact aid covers more than 2.3 million pupils under one or another of 23 different formulas for payments.

In his budget proposals, Reagan said that in a time of austerity, the government can no longer provide the aid simply because of the residence pattern of federal employees.

"With the exception of the tiny fraction of federal employees who are exempt from income taxes in the District of Columbia by virtue of employment with a congressman from their home state, all other federal employees pay state income, real property and personal property taxes in the jurisdictions in which they live in a manner no different than other citizens," the Reagan message said.

"To the extent that well-paid federal employees augment the tax base of the regions in which they live, there is no justification for additional federal payments to the schools to which they send their children solely on the grounds of residence."

His administration, like all the others that have tried to cut the program, said the current system sends aid to some of the wealthiest school districts in the country.

That includes the school districts of the Washington suburbs, with their heavy population of government employees.

Reagan said that should end, that state and local governments should "assume total responsibility," save in those districts with major concentrations of families who both live and work on federal property.

It's not a huge program, but it will take a major battle to win the cuts Reagan wants — or even a portion of them. And it will be a major victory if he succeeds where seven presidents have tried and failed.

Police Suspended After Prison Death

DETROIT (AP) — Two officers who were in charge of the city's 2nd Precinct when a prisoner was killed there have been suspended by a police trial board. A third officer was found innocent of departmental charges.

Lt. Harrell Stone received a 30-day suspension, and Sgt. Donald Marlow, a 20-day suspension, department Cmdr. Henry Majeski said this week. Stone will lose about $4,200 in pay and Marlow, $2,400.

The suspensions stem from the death of Edgar Smith, also known as Fred Warren, 13 months ago. Former Officer John Pawlak was found guilty of involuntary manslaughter for striking Smith with a blackjack. Investigators were told that a battery-operated cattle prod was used in an effort to revive Smith, but no prod was found.

Roundup Of Snakes Begins

SWEETWATER (UPI) — Snakes alive. That's what hundreds of hunters will be seeking when they take to the hills in the rolling prairie county of Nolan this weekend for the annual Sweetwater Rattlesnake Roundup.

The event, which begins today under sponsorship of the Sweetwater Jaycees, is in its 23rd year and is expected to attract 500 hunters and 2,500 spectators, Jaycees President Bill Clark said Wednesday.

Hopes are high that some really prized serpents can be taken to the Nolan County Coliseum for the judging Sunday, the high point of the three-day hunt said to be the world's oldest and largest.

Though hunters will be dealing with deadly quarry, the chances of snakebite are relatively slim if a few precautions are taken, Clark said.

"We haven't had a bite at all in nine years or so," he continued. "We think that one of the secrets of the success of our hunt is our concentration on the safety aspect and the educational aspect of it."

He said most of the hunters already are experts at the game, but for those who aren't, how-to-do-it-safely demonstrations are given.

"We have a bus tour where we will take hunters or anyone else who wants to know how to do it properly. We put on a demonstration for them out in the wild."

Hibernating snakes — the Western Diamondback variety — are driven from their dens by a quantity of gasoline squirted into the lairs.

"The gasoline fumes irritate the skin and they come out," Clark said.

This year, the Jaycees will pay hunters a minimum of $4 per pound for snakes. Venom is milked from the vipers and donated to a non-profit laboratory to be used in research.

Then the snakes are slaughtered for meat, which is sold both cooked and raw during the roundup and used in the rattlesnake-eating contest that concludes the hunt. Leftovers are sold live to snake dealers but must never be entered in competition again.

Prizes are awarded for the longest and smallest snakes.

Clark predicted that 4,500 pounds of rattlesnakes will be taken during this year's hunt.

"We go by pounds, rather than individual snakes," he said. "But for 100 pounds of snake, you will have about 100 snakes, because of the various sizes."

For those inclined only to stand and wait, there are several snake exhibits and shows, including demonstrations by Sweetwater's Bill Ransberger, an employee of the Santa Fe Railroad, who devotes his spare time to studying the rattlesnake.

Friends Entertained By Tongue Twisters

By SHARI LEWIS

If Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers, who cares? Well, somebody must care, because last week I put a couple of tongue twisters in my column, and since then, pounds of people have popped peculiar tongue twisters in the mail to me!

Once upon a time, before there was a television set in almost every home, people had to amuse themselves in the evening, and they found that tongue twisters were fun to say when they had run out of all other conversation.

You and your friends might like to twist your tongue around some tongue twisters, too — they make wonderful Kids-Only Club secret passwords.

Say each one of these three times fast!

Double bubble gum, bubbles double.

A noise annoys an oyster.

Rubber baby buggy bumper.

Greek grape leaves.

Slick super sleuth.

Good blood, bad blood.

The sun shines on the shop signs.

Some of these oldies but goodies describe activities and jobs that aren't as common today as they used to be.

For example, years ago, if you were going to keep warm, someone had to get out and saw wood. That led to the ever-popular "Of all the saws I ever saw, I never saw a saw saw like that saw saws."

In those days, people were close to nature, and the woodchuck was a familiar friend — which is how kids started asking, "How much wood would a woodchuck chuck if a woodchuck could chuck wood?"

Priest Admits To Molestation

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (UPI) — A Roman Catholic priest, who admitted illegal sexual conduct with three boys, will be allowed to conduct religious services until he is sentenced next month for his crimes.

The Rev. Donald Patrick Roemer, 36, pleaded guilty this week to making sexual advances in an agreement with prosecutors who in exchange dropped several similar charges. He will be sentenced April 14.

Roemer, assistant pastor at St. Paschal Baylon Catholic Church, was arrested Jan. 26 and charged with making sexual advances to a 7-year-old boy. He later was accused of committing sexual acts with nine boys between 7 and 13 years old last year.

Superior Court Judge Robert Shaw ordered a psychiatric examination of the priest before he pronounces sentence. Roemer will remain free on his own recognizance and will be allowed to conduct religious services, but he will not be permitted to perform counseling duties.

He could be sentenced to 10 years in prison.

STEPPING OUT — President Reagan steps lightly toward a waiting helicopter Thursday for a flight to Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Bethesda, Md., to visit Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., who is recovering from recent surgery. (AP Laserphoto)

Recommended Pay Hike Rejected By Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly everyone from President Reagan to congressional leaders to a presidential commission agree that more than 37,500 top government officials — and probably House and Senate members — deserve a hefty pay raise.

But as Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker has said, these are not "normal times." And so Congress resoundingly turned back Thursday a recommendation for a 16.8 percent increase in salaries.

Sen. William Roth, R-Del., chairman of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, said the additional $182 million the increases would have cost are "just a drop in the bucket" compared with the rest of the federal budget.

But he said any pay increase — no matter the — "would be highly inappropriate at this time."

Similarly, in the House, Majority Leader Jim Wright said when Congress is preparing to reduce spending for programs like food stamps, "this is not the time to be raising salaries for members of Congress."

Both houses of Congress voted overwhelmingly to reject the scaled-down recommendation from the Quadrennial Commission on Executive, Legislative and Judicial Salaries.

The commission said last year there was a "quiet crisis" in government because top officials were being drawn to private industry by the lure of higher pay.

The nine-member panel suggested a 40 percent pay increase, a recommendation cut to 16.8 percent by former President Carter.

Top government managers now may receive at most $50,112 annually, while members of Congress get $60,063 and Cabinet secretaries are paid $69,630.

Had the Carter recommendation been approved, those salaries would have gone up to about $60,000 for top federal employees, nearly $71,000 for members of Congress and $84,000 for Cabinet members.

Since Congress has linked all three pay scales, the politically troublesome effort of raising the pay of House and Senate members also has kept down compensation for top federal executives, who have been permitted only one raise of 3.5 percent over the past four years.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, a major proponent of higher salaries, said the salary ceiling was hitting especially hard among senior military officers. As the salaries of medium-level officers are permitted to rise, he said, generals will be paid the same as colonels.

When there was a similar debate on the pay issue last December, President-elect Reagan said he supported the increase, in part to encourage the recruitment of talented executives from private industry to join his administration.

But the president has reversed himself and now opposes the increases. His revised 1982 budget proposal said increases should be delayed because of "current economic conditions."

The president remains "deeply concerned" about the drain of high-level executives and will seek new pay increases before the presidential commission makes a new recommendation in 1984, the budget document said.

Official Opposes Dairy Support Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Deputy Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng says the government's dairy price support program may go down the drain if Congress fails to scrap an April 1 increase in the supports.

Describing the administration's proposal as "a matter of considerable urgency," Lyng said Thursday the government could save $147 million this fiscal year by skipping the scheduled April 1 adjustment.

"It is a beginning," he said, "a way to get this program under control. If not, the whole dairy price support program may be threatened because of these high costs."

Skipping the increase, the administration says, would slow the rise in government purchases of dairy products and the decline in milk consumption. The government buys butter, cheese and non-fat dry milk at rates that will enable the processor to pay the farmer no less than the support price.

Lyng made his appeal to the House Agriculture subcommittee on livestock, dairy and poultry the same day Common Cause said members of the Agriculture Committee received $353,800 from the dairy industry for their political campaigns in 1978 and 1980.

Rep. Ed Jones, D-Tenn., a subcommittee member, received more than any other Agriculture Committee member — a total of $31,000 for his 1978 and 1980 campaigns, said Common Cause, a Washington-based, self-styled citizens' lobby.

The dairy industry contributed a total of $22,000 to the recent campaign of Rep. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, the new subcommittee chairman, Common Cause said.

Common Cause said the money was contributed to the congressmen's campaign by the political action committees of the Associated Milk Producers Inc., Mid-America Dairymen Inc. and Dairymen Inc.

Golden Fleece Awarded To Capitol Architect

WASHINGTON (AP) — Plans for $500 million worth of new congressional office buildings have been developed by architectural planners at a cost to taxpayers of $450,000, Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said today.

Proxmire said the plans will be made public this spring.

Officials at the office of the Architect of the Capitol could not be reached for comment. The officials were said by their secretaries to be attending meetings and were not available to return phone calls.

Proxmire gave his tongue-in-cheek "Golden Fleece" award for March to the office for developing building plans that he said would eventually lead to "one office building for every member of Congress."

Proxmire said, "It is vital that these plans be killed now, at the very beginning, before the money has been committed, construction has begun and it is too late to turn back."

The still-secret plans call for up to six new buildings for members of the House and Senate, Proxmire said. He said the plans had been turned over to the Government Printing Office to be distributed in May or June.

The plans are based on anticipated growth in the size of congressional staffs, Proxmire said.

Weather Office Staff Will Be Reduced By Eight

By NEAL FARMER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Proposals to reduce the National Weather Service budget will not affect the Lubbock office's state, zone and local forecasting capabilities and will reduce the number of employees here by only eight, according to Don Richards, aide to U.S. Rep. Kent Hance.

The reduction of the Lubbock station to a Weather Service Office with no forecasting authority and a staff probably no larger than eight.

Thursday, however, the National Weather Service in Washington released to Hance's office a new budget proposal which will cut the number of Lubbock employees from 27 to 19, five of whom will be full-time meteorologists, Richards said.

"Under the realignment of responsibilities, the weather office in Lubbock will continue to provide forecasts to the people of the 17-counties within its area of responsibility," Richards said.

"They have assured up that the cut-backs are only going to be eight out of the Lubbock office and Lubbock will retain all its vital forecasting responsibilities," he added.

But, Richards said, forecast and support services for agriculture, aviation and environmental air quality will be removed from the Lubbock offices under the new plan and divided between NWS offices in San Antonio and Fort Worth.

"Lubbock currently prepares eight aviation forecasts three times a day for the airports at Amarillo, Childress, Del-hart, El Paso, Lubbock, Midland, San Angelo and Wink. These forecast responsibilities will be divided between the Fort Worth and San Antonio Weather Service Forecasting Offices," Richards said.

Of the eight staff positions cut in the Lubbock NWS, he explained, two will be transferred to different weather offices — one to San Antonio and one to Fort Worth — to help the offices take up the added work.

proposals, but Washington weather officials feel they will be passed by Congress. "If they hold up, these cuts will probably go into effect about September or October," he said.

Nationwide, 40 positions in eight weather stations will be reduced for a saving of $836,000, Richards said. All eight of the weather service forecasting offices are approximately in the same category as the Lubbock office, he added.

Included in the cuts are Juneau, Alaska; Reno, Nev.; Cheyenne, Milwaukee, Portland, Ore.; Albany, N.Y., and San Juan, P.R.

Tax Appraisal District Preparing Budget

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Plans for the Lubbock County Tax Appraisal District to become autonomous by next year have created a few new headaches for the officials in charge of developing the agency's 1982 budget.

Before budget figures can be hammered out, decisions must be made on personnel policies and support services, Chief Appraiser Jim Kilchenstein advised district board members Thursday.

The board must decide on employees' benefits and pay grades, Kilchenstein said, as well as determine how routine purchases such as gasoline should be handled and how to take care of building maintenance.

Appraisal district officials find themselves in somewhat of a unique situation. Although the district is more than a year old, it has not had to function independently.

For the past year, the district has operated under the city's protective wing. The district could concentrate on systems development to meet its legislated objective of providing appraisals on all property here by 1982, while city hall provided all necessary support services.

However, city officials only agreed to contract with the appraisal district during its developmental phase. That contract will terminate at the end of this year.

Developing a realistic budget for the soon-to-be independent agency "is just like starting over from scratch," Kilchenstein said.

Most of the employees at the appraisal district are "basically tax people," Kilchenstein said. When the contract ends with the city, he said, the district also will need support personnel.

The chief support areas needing coverage are purchasing, personnel management, auditing and building maintenance, Kilchenstein said. Those areas may be handled by one individual with staffs working under him or by four different managers, he said.

Kilchenstein also told the board the appraisal district will need to develop its own retirement programs for employees.

Unless legislation is passed, employees of appraisal districts cannot qualify for retirement through the Texas Municipal League's program, he said. Kilchenstein noted some longtime employees could lose some of the retirement benefits they earned while on the city's payroll.

Creating another problem in the budgeting process is the appraisal district's plan to provide a tax collection service for participating taxing jurisdictions.

The collection service will not be made available until October 1982, according to district board chairman Joe Horkey.

He instructed Kilchenstein to determine how many of the local taxing entities will use the appraisal district's collection system. "We're hoping for 100 percent participation," Horkey said.

The more taxing units that participate in the appraisal district's collection system, the more savings there should be, the chairman added.

Appraisal district officials need to have their budget worked out in time to provide the local tax units the information on each unit's prorated share, Kilchenstein noted. Under the legislation that created the district, participating entities must contribute to its support.

Kilchenstein said he expects the district to begin work on its budget next month, about the same time the city begins its budgeting process.

The appraisal district's 1981 budget totaled about $1.2 million. So far, there have been no indications regarding how much money the district will require to operate next year.

"But we're trying to work out a Re-

Cavazos Comments On Faculty Controversy During News Day and the mission of the health centers, and "meeting a lot of people," Cavazos says it's clear that quality is the key to the future.

Although he emphasized that Tech already is a "good school," he added that there is "not one human endeavor that can't be better."

He noted that there are a "variety of ways to achieve" quality in a university and that faculty evaluation is merely one of those. He admitted that "people may be apprehensive," about evaluation but he said it is a necessary item.

Although Cavazos did not agree that there necessarily is a low faculty morale at Tech, he did admit, "I recognize some people feel there are problems between the faculty and administration."

But he added that he does not shy away from controversial discussions, saying, "I'm glad to sit down and talk to anybody."

He noted that he has been quoted as saying that salary is not the number one factor in morale, but he clarified today that, "Certainly pay is a factor in morale."

But once again, he said salary issues "won't change overnight." He explained that funding formulas used by the state legislature as well as the fact that 55 percent of Tech faculty members hold the rank of full or associate professor are two of the factors which must be considered when viewing the complex issue of salaries.

He also pointed to "tremendous pressure" in the fields of engineering, business and law to increase faculty salaries or lose those teachers to private enterprise.

Cavazos said some problems arise because of a lack of communication and added that he welcomes advice on how to improve that.

When asked about discussion at Wednesday's Faculty Senate meeting which indicated some senators believe the administration ignores the group's resolutions, Cavazos noted that there are some 1200 faculty members at Tech and he wondered what proportion of the entire faculty body the Senate represents.

Faculty Senate officers met late Thursday afternoon to name delegates to meet with Cavazos regarding the recent resignations of all five members of the Tenure and Privilege Committee. The group resigned over a dispute with the administration involving different interpretations of policy regarding that committee's jurisdiction.

Cavazos told reporters Thursday that he won't deal with tenure issues on a piecemeal basis, but that instead he has asked the academic affairs office to review the tenure policy "in totality."

Lawmen Rule Out Suspect As South Plains Rapist

A-J News Services

Fort Worth police say that they have "for all practical purposes" ruled out Wade Burleson, 33, as the man wanted across West Texas as the "traveling rapist."

Police say the former traveling salesman has admitted to 10 rapes — including four in Irving and one in Dallas — but is no longer a suspect in as many as 15 rapes across several other West Texas towns.

Fort Worth lawmen were originally optimistic that their suspect might be the same man responsible for rapes in the South Plains area. The file on the West Texas "traveling rapist" was begun in 1979 and by last September included the case histories of 15 rapes in Fort Worth, Abilene, Wichita Falls, Amarillo and Lubbock.

Fort Worth police earlier invited investigators from other West Texas towns to question their suspect, thinking perhaps Burleson was connected to some of the other rapes. But he was ruled out as the man responsible for the rapes in this area when it was found his sales territory does not include the South Plains.

A check of his credit cards also showed no purchases in the areas where the other rapes occurred.

Fort Worth officers said there are still several unsolved attacks on women in their area — including at least two fatal ones they declined to specify — in which Burleson remains a suspect.

Burleson was arrested Feb. 24 after allegedly raping a woman in Fort Worth and holding her hostage for four hours in her apartment laundry room before police arrived at the scene.

Defendant Pleads Guilty To Aggravated Assault

A 14th District Court jury which apparently could not reach a verdict was called out of deliberation Thursday afternoon to be told that aggravated robbery suspect Humberto Lara would plead guilty to the lesser offense of aggravated assault under an agreement between the defense and the state.

Lara, 35, had been on trial since Wednesday for allegedly pulling a gun on his former employer in a dispute over wages allegedly owed the farm worker. The jury had been deliberating his fate for several hours and could not reach a unanimous verdict when Presiding Judge William Shaver instructed them that Lara would plead guilty to the lesser charge.

Shaver sentenced Lara, who has no criminal record, to a 10-year probated sentence for the third-degree felony assault charge.

Farmer Buddy Winter testified that he had reprimanded Lara, then his employee, because he had allowed water to run out of his irrigation system and into a neighbor's field. Lara allegedly quit his job as a result of that criticism.

But when Lara quit, he demanded a full week's wages though he was leaving his job on a Monday, Winter testified. He demanded $130 for his own work and $6 for field work his wife had done, Winter testified.

Winter told the court that he offered to pay Lara for two days wages — $47 — but that his employee refused to accept it and pulled a gun on him. He forced Winter to write out a check for $136, the farmer testified.

Bullock Predicts More Revenue

AUSTIN (UPI) — Comptroller Bob Bullock has eased the financial crunch facing Texas lawmakers with his estimate the state will take in $377.4 million more in revenue during the next 30 months than he had earlier anticipated.

But the new revenue is not enough to completely resolve the financial problem because the spending bill proposed by the Legislative Budget Board, coupled with emergency appropriation bills already passed by the Legislature, is $134 million more than the amount of money the state will have available to spend during the 1982-83 budget period.

Bullock said statistics on tax collections for the first six months of the current fiscal year prompted him to revise his earlier estimates of the amount of revenue available during the next two years.

"The result of these revisions is to increase my estimate of funds available for certification by $137.9 million this year and an additional $339.5 million during the 1982-83 biennium," Bullock said.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby was pleased with Bullock's new estimate, but said more revenue is needed.

"Even with this significant increase in major fund revenues, the recommendations of the Legislative Budget Board are $134 million over the revenue estimate," Hobby said.

"This revenue estimate does not provide the basis for the passage of any significant spending or revenue reduction bills without major and severe budget cuts."

In legislative action Thursday, the House gave its final approval to a bill strengthening state licensing requirements and regulations over low level radioactive waste storage facilities.

The Senate passed a slightly different version of the bill, and the measure now must go back to the Senate for consideration of House changes.

The House approved and sent to the governor a bill thwarting union organizing efforts among state employees. The bill requires approval of the Legislature before any deductions — such as union dues — can be taken from the paychecks of state employees.

"We are taking the harshest and cruelest step we've taken this entire session by saying 'the government says you can't do this,'" said Rep. Smith Gilley.

Ethics Reform Bill Has 'Brilab Clause'

AUSTIN (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton's campaign finance reform bill has a section that, had it been enacted during the last legislative session, would have prevented Clayton's indictment and trial on Brillab charges.

The section provides that a politician need not report contributions that aren't "accepted" — even if they are "received." The decision to accept a payment must be made before it is time to report the donation. Money that isn't "accepted" must be returned.

That section concurs with the explanation Clayton gave at his federal bribery, fraud and racketeering trial last year in Houston.

He was indicted after accepting $5,000 cash from a Houston labor leader while an FBI informant secretly recorded the deal. Clayton did not report the payment because, he said, he thought it was a campaign donation and he meant to give it back. He was acquitted.

"I came in touch with the reality of what happens when you don't have clear and distinct guidelines to go by," he said this week.

Other features in the bill Clayton introduced Thursday include a cap of $100 on cash contributions, and a ban on lawmakers accepting donations during the legislative session, and 30 days before and after it.

That difference — which will top $1.3 billion in 1984-85 — has to be made up from the state's general revenues.

At the request of Speaker Bill Clayton, Taylor on Thursday reported to TENRAC on the effects of raising the gas tax.

Taylor's charts showed that a one-cent increase would give the state an additional $70 million a year for road building and maintenance — barely a dent in the $950 million drain on general revenues.

The council, chaired by Gov. Bill Clements, took no action on the gasoline tax. Clements said he, Clayton and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby have talked about the tax and the wisdom of raising it. Clayton and Hobby are on TENRAC, but were presiding over their respective houses when Taylor made his report.

Taylor had no recommendation on whether the tax should be raised. He offered a system which would tie the tax to inflation factors, raising it as prices jump.

Clayton has said raising the gasoline tax could become a major issue before the regular legislative session ends June 1.

"It's a continuing problem and it will get worse as inflation continues and gas demand falls off," Taylor said after the meeting.

Projections show gas demand in Texas will drop about 1 percent a year through 1990, he said.

Panel Suggests 11-Cent Gas Tax To Cover Highway Repair Costs

AUSTIN (AP) — It would take an 11-cent per gallon gasoline tax to cover the increasing costs of building and fixing Texas highways during the next biennium, according to a state energy panel staff report.

Texas' gasoline tax is five cents a gallon, the lowest in the nation. Three-fourths of the money is spent on highways, one-fourth on public schools.

The problem is inflation: motorists are buying more efficient cars in order to skirt the rising gas prices. Less gas used means less gas tax collected. Meanwhile, the cost of highway construction is rising.

In the 1982-83 biennium, the difference between the motor fuels tax and the amount needed for highways will be $950 million, according to Ted Taylor, director of the policy analysis division for the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council.

Man Charged In Murders Prefers Death To Prison

DALLAS (UPI) — A 25-year-old homosexual drifter charged with three murders and suspected of four other murders in Dallas and San Antonio said he preferred to be executed than go to prison.

"I would rather die than spend the rest of my life in prison," David Villarreal said in a WFAA-TV news report. "I know I'll never get out of I go down there (to the state prison at Huntsville)."

Police Thursday filed three murder charges against Villarreal, a man they say they have sought for two years. He was jailed under $90,000 bond for the 1979 slayings of three Hispanics.

He was suspected of another slaying in Dallas and police in San Antonio said they hoped to file their charges on three murders against Villarreal in a few days.

Villarreal said he wanted to be executed and "that's why I confessed to all those murders." He said he felt no remorse and was brutal when he killed men because he wanted to make certain they were dead.

The seven slayings to which Villarreal is linked were marked by their brutality and homosexual overtones, investigators said.

"They (the four killings in Dallas and three in San Antonio) were similar in the type of people that were killed and the brutality of the assaults," said Dallas homicide investigator Gerald Robinson.

Sgt. Bill Parker said the slayings "have sexual overtones all over them — especially the ones here."

"Any time you have a gross overkill, multiple injuries, mutilation of the body and do anything with fire to the body ... you have a strong indication of a sexually-related murder," he said.

Another Dallas investigator attributed Villarreal's motive in the deaths to a personal enjoyment of killing.

City Man Held On Attempted Murder Charge

A man who is suspected of barging into two Lubbock residences Wednesday, firing a pistol into a bathroom where he had left his victims and then fleeing was charged Thursday with two counts each of attempted capital murder and aggravated robbery.

Danni Keith Sanders, 21, was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Charles Smith, who set a combined bond of $250,000 for the felony charges.

No one was injured in the Wednesday night incident and Sanders, of 5102 46th St. was arrested a short time afterward when officers said they spotted him attempting to break down the door to a woman's Brownfield Road apartment.

Police said he was carrying a .357 magnum revolver when he was arrested.

Scott Tracy Marsh, 18, of 4110 17th St. Apt. 510, told police the bandit was sticking a gun in his face when he awoke in his bed about 11:15 p.m. Marsh said the intruder threatened to shoot him if he did not turn over all his money.

Marsh apparently thought the gunman was joking until the bandit fired a round into the bedroom wall, missing Marsh's ear by inches. Marsh said he was robbed of a $10 bill and 25 pennies before the gunman ordered him to take him to another man's apartment.

The gunman awakened Frank Charles Snare, 51, in a second-floor apartment about 11:25 p.m. Snare said he opened his front door and saw Marsh being held at gunpoint.

Snare slammed the door but the gunman allegedly kicked it open, robbed Snare of a money clip containing $800 and led the two men back to Marsh's apartment, where he placed the two men in Marsh's bathroom. Leaving the bathroom, the gunman then fired a blast through the bathroom door, narrowly missing both men.

The police were called after the gunman fled and a man answering the description of the suspect was arrested in front of the Moonflower Apartments at 5437 Brownfield Road.

Superbolts Seen In Flat Lands

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Factories, power plants and other buildings situated on flat lands could receive jolts they are unprepared to take — super lightning bolts, government researchers say.

Scientists with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said this week these rare lightning bolts, never before noted in flat land areas, have been reported in Oklahoma prairie storms.

This, they warned, could indicate that buildings designed with the assumption such destructive bolts never occur in flat areas might be unsafe if struck by the positive-charged, cloud-to-ground flashes.

These superbolts once were thought to strike only when tripped by a mountaintop or a tall structure or, in rare cases, at the end of a storm, said researchers at NOAA's National Severe Storms Laboratory in Norman, Okla.

"Most storms never produce this kind of lightning," said Dr. David Rust. "In a few storms, there may be one positive bolt, just as the storm is dissipating — sort of the last gasp of the storm."

Rust said researchers know the bolts do not occur in typical thunderstorms and are trying to determine if they are linked to storm severity.

Research indicates a typical lightning bolt discharges about 350 kilowatt-hours of electricity — a month's supply for a small apartment in which natural gas is used for heating and cooking.

But the electrical energy in some bolts for a brief instant can reach a peak of a billion kilowatts and current peaks can reach as much as 200,000 amperes or more, research has shown.

Lightning often travels from cloud to ground, but can go from cloud to cloud and sometimes from ground to cloud if a high structure is involved.

In contrast to the rare supercharged bolts slamming to the ground from a positive-charged cloud base, the typical lightning bolt begins at the negative-charged base of a cloud and edges toward the positive-charged ground. When it nears the ground, streamers up from the earth complete the circuit, providing a path for the current to travel.

Lightning's brilliant flash generally is a return stroke from the ground to the cloud. Then the process repeats itself until the opposing electrical charges are dissipated or the path cut through the air has been broken up by air movement. The entire process takes only a small fraction of a second.

Measure Would Require Consent From Husband Before Abortion

AUSTIN (UPI) — A Dallas legislator says abortions are easier to come by than a trip to the dentist and has introduced a bill requiring married women to have written consent from their husbands before having an abortion.

Sen. John Leedom, R-Dallas, said his bill will slow down the "permissive" rate of abortions by requiring a married woman living with her husband to give a physician written assurance that she has talked the decision over with her husband.

"It's much easier to get an abortion than to get your teeth filled," Leedom says. "This might give cause to reconsider, to face up to it. What we're really talking about is life beginning at conception, and who has the right to take a life."

Leedom says if his bill is approved, a physician failing to get a written statement from the woman would be committing a second-degree felony. The married woman would be committing the same offense if she knowingly makes a false statement about her husband's consent.

Leedom, who is authoring several anti-abortion bills this session, said he knows this particular bill has no guarantees. If the woman says her husband gave his consent and he did not, Leedom said, "It's one liar's word against another."

"There's no penalty if she doesn't want to tell the truth, but it takes care of the woman who hasn't talked it over with her husband, even if she's one out of 10," he said. "The purpose is to keep the physician from taking advantage of someone who comes in in an emotional state."

Leedom estimated 1,500,000 abortions are performed a year. He said the heavy commercialization of abortions — with billboards and other types of advertisements — offers little deterrent for women considering an abortion.

"A little restraint will be significant," Leedom said.

"Some women when they get pregnant find they get panicked by it, perhaps by the financial strain. If they respond to the advertisement's appeal and not talk it over with their husband they may go ahead and do it."

A conservative protestant who has six children, Leedom said he is a firm believer in honest marriages.

"Marriage itself is so delicate," he said. "The more they can share with each other the better."

State Board To Consider Air Conditioning Request

BROWNSVILLE (UPI) — A paralyzed boy whose body is incapable of regulating its own temperature could be confined to a 5-foot air-conditioned plexiglass cubicle for most of his time in school unless officials agree to cool his classroom.

The Texas Board of Education in Austin is scheduled Saturday to consider whether to require the Brownsville Board of Education to air-condition Raul Espino Jr.'s first-grade classroom.

Young Espino, 7, was paralyzed from injuries sustained in an automobile accident and his body is incapable of regulating its own temperature. He now must retreat to the cubicle, equipped with a portable air conditioner, whenever the weather gets warm or suffer heat prostration.

His parents, Raul and Anna Espino Sr., appealed to the board after a hearing examiner ruled that the public school district was satisfying their son's needs.

"I don't expect a favorable decision," said attorney Jerry Garcia, who has been representing the boy. "The school board has never had a chance to meet with the parents or myself to hear our side of the story."

"It might be worthwhile to present our case that putting a boy in a box is never sound educational policy," he said.

Mrs. Espino said her family may go to federal court to force the school system to air-condition her son's classroom. She says the air-conditioned cubicle, in an unsuitable environment for a youngster attending school.

Garcia said the Brownsville school system is required by federal law to provide "the least restrictive appropriate environment for handicapped children."

Despite its warm climate, the city

Study Indicates High Vitamin C Doses No Help

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — High doses of Vitamin C, touted as a relief for the common cold, are of no help in controlling allergies and can deplete the body's minerals, a study by Army physicians concludes.

Noting that Vitamin C, contained in tomatoes, potatoes and many fresh fruits, is "very difficult to avoid in your diet," the doctors at Fitzsimons Army Medical Center in Aurora, Colo., found that in relatively small doses — up to 2 grams a day — the vitamin is probably not harmful.

Doses over 4 grams a day, however, can deplete minerals in the body and have other adverse effects, they said in the study released this week at a session of the American Academy of Allergy's 37th annual meeting.

"The belief that ascorbic acid is useful in preventing or modulating a variety of ailments — including allergies — is widely accepted in the general population," they said.

Although Vitamin C is a $100 million-a-year industry in the United States with more than 28 million pounds retailed annually, there had been no definitive investigation of the vitamin's effect on allergies before the recent study, Dr. Bryant R. Fortner said.

"Individuals were coming to us and asking if they should be taking vitamins," he said.

The army doctors, who tested allergic reactions to ragweed and junce grass, said previous medical literature provided nothing to back up claims — based on studies with gorillas and rats — that ascorbic acid helped to suppress allergic reactions.

Their experiments using adults with histories of seasonal allergic rhinitis demonstrated that ascorbic acid "in relatively high doses would have no beneficial effects on symptoms resulting from allergen exposure and (ascorbic acid) in doses of up to 4 grams-a-day will not suppress the histamine skin response."

along the U.S.-Mexico border has no air-conditioned elementary schools.

School officials designed the cubicle following a special committee recommendation that the youngster could be transferred to a regular school if his environment were air-conditioned.

At first, Espino could not hear his teacher, so officials later installed an intercom system.

Brownsville school officials have said that providing air-conditioning for one classroom would bring complaints from students, their parents and teachers.

Officials Score Major Drug Bust

MIAMI (AP) — Authorities who candidly acknowledge they were outgunned in the past by wily drug traffickers have arrested more than 120 people and seized $1 billion in drugs in what they are calling the nation's largest marijuana-smuggling crackdown.

U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration estimated Thursday that the arrests and seizures effectively stopped the flow of about a third of the controlled substances used in the United States.

"This will put them out of operation temporarily. We hope ultimately it will mean an elimination of them," said Vernon D. Meyer, southeast regional director for the DEA.

Federal officials said they had rounded up 122 of an estimated 155 "high level managers" named in indictments stemming from the investigation dubbed "Operation Grouper." More suspects were being sought today.

DON'T WANT GUARDIAN ANGELS — An unidentified woman at right tells members of New York's Guardian Angels to leave a housing project area Thursday in Atlanta. Atlanta Detectives Recommend Boy's Case To Special Team

ATLANTA (UPI) — Detectives in the police-missing persons bureau have recommended that the disappearance of a 15-year-old boy be turned over to the special police task force investigating the murders and disappearances of 21 black children.

Sources said investigators have turned up nothing to support reports that Joseph Bell, last seen March 2, was spotted last week, and foul play is suspected.

Doris Bell, the youth's mother, says her son has never run away before and she is prepared for the worst.

However, officials refused to say today if the detectives' recommendation to turn Bell's case over to the task force will be followed.

Authorities also reported evidence found on the body of Curtis Walker, the most recent of the city's 20 murdered children, bolsters the theory the last seven youths died at the hands of the same person.

DeKalb County Medical Examiner Joe Burton said Thursday that Walker was suffocated in the manner an FBI profile has ascribed to a "gentle killer."

"I think we found some things that tend to link him with other cases," Burton told the Atlanta Constitution.

Burton agreed with a theory that groups the last seven of the killings, all of which involved death by suffocation or strangulation. He said all seven of the children — Clifford Jones, Charles Stevens, Aaron Jackson, Lubie Geter, Terry Pae, Patrick Baltazar and Walker — were killed in a "non-mutilating" manner.

"It seems that this person is doing just enough to kill the child," Burton said.

Burton said there were "some indications of minimal trauma" to Walker's neck, and marks on his nose indicating he was suffocated with something other than fabric — perhaps with a bare hand.

He said the boy's assailant may have grabbed him from behind in a one-armed chokehold, and used the other hand to suffocate him.

He said the same fibrous matter that investigators say link some of the earlier slayings with some — but not all — of the last seven were also found on the body, which had been in the South River for as many as 14 days when it was discovered.

But Burton said "the fibers alone are not enough for me to tie the cases." He would not identify them, but he said that "if you pulled 100 people from outside, you'd find that two or three of them have fibers on them that match."

Walker's body was found March 6, fifteen days after he disappeared. He was the fourth black male child to be suffocated.

President Reagan extended his "personal commendation" to the agents involved, said Attorney General William French Smith.

"It's just remarkable that all these seizures could take place, and our men never were caught," said Peter Gruden, chief of the DEA office in Miami.

Federal grand juries in Florida, Louisiana and Georgia returned indictments Thursday charging defendants with one or more counts of possession with intent to distribute a controlled substance, conspiracy to possess with intent to distribute a controlled substance and participating in a continuing criminal enterprise.

DEA Administrator Peter Bensinger said in Washington the 22-month investigation resulted in the seizure of 1.2 million pounds of marijuana, 831 pounds of cocaine, 3 million doses of methaqualone, 30 ocean-going ships used to smuggle drugs, two airplanes and $1 million in cash.

He placed the value of the drugs at more than $1 billion and said the crackdown dismantled 14 drug rings responsible for $22 billion in retail drug sales annually.

He said "Operation Grouper" was "the single largest enforcement activity ever domestically against the marijuana trade."

Three defendants, Jose Fernandez, 36, of Vero Beach, Fla.; Reuben Perez, 37, of Miami; and Paul Hinderling, were being held on $20 million bond or more.

School Board Considers Ending Busing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — School board members say they may end mandatory busing in Los Angeles as early as April 19 in the wake of a state Supreme Court decision upholding the constitutionality of the anti-busing amendment, Proposition 1.

But the judge who originally ordered busing of 23,000 students to integrate grades 1 through 9 claims the district could lose millions of dollars in state aid because of the Supreme Court ruling.

Six board members, who met behind closed doors for almost two hours, told reporters a final decision on dismantling the busing program would not be made until their regular meeting Monday.

But three board members said Thursday they favor allowing parents to choose between having their children complete the school year at their current school or transfer in mid-semester, following the Easter vacation, to a neighborhood school.

Two others said they supported an end to forced busing after this school year but were concerned that allowing mid-semester transfers would have a disruptive effect on the children's education.

Meanwhile, state Superior Court Judge Paul Egly, who has been overseeing the board's integration efforts for the past five years, appeared to wash his hands of the case, saying the high court's decision left him with no jurisdiction.

The Supreme Court on Wednesday refused to hear an American Civil Liberties Union appeal of a lower court ruling upholding the constitutionality of Proposition 1.

Proposition 1, approved overwhelmingly by voters in 1979, says mandatory busing can be required only to integrate schools in districts where segregation results from deliberate discrimination in pupil assignments rather than from housing patterns.

At a meeting with lawyers for the parties involved in the 18-year-old integration case, Egly said the Supreme Court's action effectively had scrapped his July 7 order directing the board to implement the current part-mandatory, part-voluntary plan.

The state supplied a major share of the $163 million the board budgeted for integration this year. However, only $26 million of that went for the mandatory part of the program.

Three Receive Teen's Organs

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Three people have received transplanted organs from a teen-ager killed in an auto crash. Officials at Presbyterian University Hospital said this week a 17-year-old girl from British Columbia who received the youth's liver in a rare transplant operation was listed in "fair" condition. Two other persons, a 24-year-old woman and a 41-year-old man from Western Pennsylvania, each received one of his kidneys and were reported in "good" condition. The donor was David Shields, 17, of Irwin, Pa., who died this week from injuries received in a March 4 auto accident.

Jury Finds Lubbockite Guilty In Attempted Murder Of Clerk

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff
A 27-year-old Lubbock man was found guilty of attempted murder Thursday for a Sept. 20 attack on a 7-Eleven clerk and was assessed a 16-year prison sentence by presiding Judge Deniz Bevers.

Sherman Ray Morrison was judged guilty after the 72nd District Court jury deliberated two and a half hours on testimony that the defendant stabbed clerk Roy Harrison Lamon and turned his knife on several others as well. In deciding on the attempted murder verdict, the jury cast aside other charges of aggravated assault and assault, opting for the more serious charge. Prosecutors Hollis Browning and Jerry Ward argued that Morrison, 25, fully intended to kill Lamon, even though he interrupted his attack on the clerk to knife several other people. "The defendant created a night of terror for those people," Miss Ward argued. "He created it, orchestrated it and carried it through."

She added that every person who attempted to come between Morrison and Lamon was stabbed. Defense attorney Phil Gamble, however, argued that his client had passed out on the way to the hospital for treatment of his own wounds and that police officers who had escorted him questioned whether he was drunk. He asked the jury to question whether the state had proved the intent to murder in this case and added, "It's not up to us to disprove anything." Browning countered Gamble's explanation that Morrison was intoxicated by advising the jury that they would not find anything in the court's charge that said being intoxicated makes you less responsible for your own actions. And he added that the only thing which kept Morrison from killing Lamon was that the clerk escaped behind the relative safety of the closed doors of the 7-Eleven store. Browning called Texas Tech University sophomore Suzette Stubblefield Wednesday to explain what may have set off the stabbing incident. Miss Stubblefield testified that she and three friends had stopped at the 19th Street 7-Eleven about 11 p.m. before heading for a party. When she got out of the car, Miss Stubblefield said, her car door struck the door of the car next to her as it also was being opened. Morrison got out of the other car, she said, and asked her "what she was trying to do."

A woman in the back seat of Morrison's car told her Morrison was drunk. Miss Stubblefield testified, and advised her not to worry about it. Miss Stubblefield said she got out of the car, stepping under Morrison's arm which was resting on her car, and walked in to the 7-Eleven.

A few minutes later one of her friends came into the convenience store screaming, she testified. Miss Stubblefield's companion, Troy Lowden, told the court he was in the car when Morrison spoke to Miss Stubblefield. After she went inside the store, Lowden said, Morrison jumped into the front seat.

Lowden told the court that when he asked Morrison what he was doing in Miss Stubblefield's car, Morrison reached over the back seat and put a knife to his side. The two men struggled and, according to Lowden's testimony, from their mother. During Thursday's proceedings, Emison said attorneys must get his approval before asking prospective jurors about the circumstances of Daniel's death or the prominence of the Daniel family locally. Price Daniel Sr. is a former governor, state supreme court justice and U.S. Senator from Texas. The limitations were imposed so "people don't blurt out inadmissible evidence," said Zeke Zbrank, an attorney for Mrs. Murph. "That would be like throwing a skunk into the jury box and then instructing the jurors not to smell the stink." Mrs. Daniel's lawyers had sought postpone the trial until Monday because lead attorney Richard "Racehorse"

City Police Disarm Man At Woman's Residence

A man armed with a rifle and threatening to shoot the first police officer he saw was arrested about 8:30 p.m. Thursday without injury to anyone, according to reports. The 29-year-old man put down his loaded weapon and was arrested for allegedly making terroristic threats after police surrounded him in the 2300-block of 21st Street. The suspect's former girlfriend said the man came to her house Wednesday night, struck her and threatened to rape her in front of her son. The man returned to her residence Thursday evening and when she refused to let him in he allegedly threatened to shoot her and her son. When the woman said she was going to call police, he reportedly replied that he would shoot the first officer on the scene. The first policeman to arrive said he saw the man standing on the woman's porch with a rifle. The officer said he told the man to drop the gun but that he refused. The man, after being ordered to put down the weapon a second time, reportedly said, "Go ahead and shoot, that's what I want."

However, when additional officers arrived on the scene, the man put down the rifle and was taken into custody. In other activity, Lubbock police, Lubbock County sheriff's deputies and Texas Rangers, armed with a search warrant, converged on a 28th Street residence about 1 a.m. today and recovered rifles, shotguns and a .357-magnum revolver, all reportedly stolen in burglaries in three counties and two states.

The 43-year-old resident reportedly had a chrome-plated pistol in his hand when he opened the door. However, the man put the gun down when lawmen identified themselves and said they had a search warrant, signed by Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack. The weapons and a welder were allegedly taken in break-ins in Lubbock, Crosby and Washita, Okla., counties. The man was jailed on suspicion of theft over $200.

A Lubbock woman said two men identifying themselves as employees of a local bonding company broke down her back door about 7:15 p.m. Thursday looking for a man who apparently had jumped bail.

Police said the woman, who lives in South Lubbock, refused to voluntarily let the men in after they reportedly began banging on her front and back doors. The woman said that moments later the intruders tore open the back entrance, causing an undetermined amount of damage, and began looking through the residence.

When the woman told the men they had no right to be in her house, one of the suspects reportedly handed her a bonding company business card and replied, "That gives me the right."

Reports state the victim was told who the men were looking for and that she said she knew him but that he did not live with her. She said the men fled when she went to call police. Authorities said a fire which destroyed a car early this morning may be the work of an arsonist.

Francis Hill, 34, of Lubbock said her daughter-in-law discovered the fire about 3:45 a.m. Firemen told police at the scene the blaze may have been started intentionally, although no container of flammable liquid was found in the area.

The daughter-in-law told police she saw a person at her bedroom window, heard someone scream for help and then looked out to see the vehicle ablaze.

A 27-year-old Lubbock woman told police her former husband sexually assaulted her about 10:15 p.m. Thursday after he came to her house to pick up their children.

The woman said her ex-spouse pushed her down on the floor, partially disrobed her and fondled her.

Reyes C. Villarreal of 2608 E. Coigate St. said his house was burglarized between 7 p.m. and 10:45 p.m. Thursday, resulting in a loss of about $1,000 in property, including a television, stereo equipment, typewriter and watch.

A stereo system and color television set valued at $1,500 was stolen from a Lubbock home while its tenant was out of town for a month, according to police reports.

Leanna Swanson of 4313 16th St. told police she left Lubbock at noon Feb. 14, returning at 11:30 a.m. Thursday to find her electronic equipment missing.

The owner of the home, who lived three houses away, told police he entered the home two weeks ago to repair a water leak. He said he noticed the kitchen window open, but he didn't notice a stereo or television set.

Police said the house showed no sign of forced entry.

A 28-year-old east Lubbock man told police he has been harassed lately, apparently because of an argument he had with another man concerning a girl.

John Henry Thomas told police the other man called him twice at work Saturday, then came to the store at 1719 Parkway Drive. When Thomas confronted the man, he reached in his pocket as if he had a weapon, reports state.

Thomas said the other man also called Thomas' boss, accusing the employee of stealing from his employer. Thomas said the man told his boss that he wanted to "get even with Mr. Thomas."

Also Thursday, police were searching for a suspect believed to have passed $1,672 worth of bad checks.

Ralph Armenta, 46, manager of Jewell Box at South Plains Mall, told police he suspected a check received by his store was worthless. The check was made for $317.77 and drawn on First National Bank here, according to police.

Police said they suspect a man, now a fugitive, who also was arrested and bonded out here last September on similar charges. The $317 check was dated for fingerprints, investigators said, adding they believe the prints found match those of the suspect.

Police also believe the same suspect is responsible for passing checks issued to the same fictitious company in several West Texas cities and Abilene and Midland. The handwriting on the checks totaling $1,672.32 appears to be the same where signed and endorsed, reports state.

Specifics Of Budget Cutting Produce Conflicts

By JOHN CUNNIFF
 NEW YORK (AP) — In general, budget cutting — personal, corporate and governmental — is as attractive as dieting. Its the specifics — what to cut, when to cut and how much to cut — that produce the conflicts.

For four years President Carter promised to balance the budget, but the specifics forced him to concede that with 75 percent of the budget "uncontrollable," budget balancing had to wait for another term.

That term went instead to Ronald Reagan and, viewing his mandate, the new president concluded that the specifics must be dealt with. The public demands cut, he said. And now it will be learned just how much.

When, for example, the National Small Business Administration asked members how they would end inflation, they answered: "cut government spending, reduce the size of government, and decrease regulation."

But the specific, a proposed cut in Small Business Administration loans by $45 million this year and $116 million next year, as well as other reductions, probably made some respondents think again.

Whenever members of the big-business community were asked the same question they gave much the same response. Now some of that tribe are claiming the national interest is endangered because the president seeks to cut $2.9 billion earmarked for five synthetic fuel projects.

The battle is on, and members of every social and economic group faced with cuts are writing congressmen and testifying before them, claiming that their interests are national — and only incidentally self-serving.

There is no backing off. Unlike Carter, who viewed budget cutting as desirable but not essential, Reagan's entire program depends on cuts. Without them, nothing else can work. In fact, he warns, disaster awaits if the government isn't slimmed down and the private sector rebuilt.

As he views it, the economy is a boat adrift in a wild stream, with the roar of the falls growing louder. If the motor isn't restarted, he suggests, the boat and its occupants will go over the falls together.

In such a dire situation, he says, forget "politics as usual." Return to "economic sanity." Get the motor started.

Though there may be strong support for cutting, not everyone in Congress is likely to view the predicament with the same urgency as Reagan, whose attitude is seen by some as the "perils of Ronald."

If this is a battle of one-issue interests, it is said, then Reagan's has to be included. His one-issue is across-the-board cuts, one as important to him as clean air is to environmentalists.

If it comes to a vote they conceivably could be less supportive of his one major issue than they are about serving their many single-issue clients, if those clients make up a large part of their constituency.

In brief, the temptations are like deserts put before the dieter, who succumbs after rationalizing that just one more won't hurt. Historically, it's the sort of conduct that has made politicians fat. But for President Reagan, such behavior is intolerable because it can undermine his entire program of trimming government. He needs the cuts. They are the efficiencies that can make all else possible.

He is, in effect, the biggest, most prominent and potentially still the most successful of the single-issue advocates.

LISTENING INTENTLY — Comedian Carol Burnett listens as her attorneys make an opening statement in Miss Burnett's $10 million lawsuit against the National Enquirer in a Los Angeles courtroom Thursday. (AP Laserphoto)

Report In Enquirer Refuted By Witness

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The first witness in Carol Burnett's $10 million libel suit against the National Enquirer says Miss Burnett and Henry Kissinger had a chat about jobs and Washington — not an argument — the night they met in a restaurant.

The Enquirer had reported that the two argued.

Peter Matz, musical director of Miss Burnett's TV show for many years, said Thursday that he dined with Miss Burnett, her husband, Joe Hamilton, and two other friends at the Rive Gauche restaurant in Washington after Miss Burnett performed at a White House state dinner on Jan. 26, 1976.

At another table, he said, sat former Secretary of State Kissinger. But there was no argument between Kissinger and Miss Burnett, he said.

"On our way out, we stopped by the table of Lew Wasserman (chairman of the board of MCA Corp.) who was with Dr. Henry Kissinger," Matz recalled.

"Mr. Kissinger asked Miss Burnett if she was enjoying Washington. Miss Burnett said, 'I always have a good time in Washington.' Mr. Kissinger said, 'You wouldn't if you had my job,'" said Matz, adding, "He was gloomy that night."

Matz testified that during the evening, Miss Burnett offered a bite of her dessert, a Grand Marnier soufflé, to a couple celebrating an anniversary at the next table. But he denied she "traipsed around offering everyone a bite of her dessert," as the Enquirer reported.

The Enquirer later retracted the gossip column article, which was published March 2, 1976. As displayed by Miss Burnett's attorney, Ed Bronson, the retraction had no headline and was printed at the bottom of the same writer's gossip column.

Bronson told the jury that he would prove the article was false and was printed by the Enquirer either knowing it was false or "with reckless disregard" for its accuracy.

"We will prove that there are only two facts in the article that are true," said Bronson, "that Carol Burnett was at a restaurant and Henry Kissinger was at the same restaurant. The rest is false."

Nevada Sheriff Denies Charges

YERINGTON, Nev. (AP) — A Nevada sheriff says "it isn't so" to allegations that he set up a 1979 bank robbery to boost his reputation and then lied to a grand jury about the heist.

Lyon County Sheriff E.L. "Red" Kingsley turned himself in Thursday after being indicted by a grand jury on charges of felony perjury in connection with the robbery in nearby Fernley. A former subordinate, ex-Sgt. August Victor "Bud" Dreeson, was arrested on the same charge the night before.

Kingsley, who was released on his own recognizance pending arraignment Monday, said of the allegations, "It isn't so."

Dreeson's lawyer, Ron Holbert, declined to let his client comment but said, "The charges are not founded on any reasonable facts. We're going to fight it all the way."

Kidnapped Baby Returned To Parents

Columbia, Tenn. (UPI) — A teenage couple has been reunited with their newborn baby, kidnapped for two days by a woman unable to have children who concocted an elaborate ruse to convince her boyfriend the infant was really theirs, police say.

Police said Linda Wright, 29, who allegedly donned a wig and posed as a nurse to kidnap Clint Smithson Tuesday, was charged Thursday with child kidnapping and held on $20,000 bond.

Police apprehended Miss Wright Thursday afternoon as she pulled into her driveway with the baby and her boyfriend, used car dealer Raymond Cates.

Police Chief Edward Holton said Cates was released after questioning Clint, born Sunday, was rushed to Mauzy County Hospital for an examination and a reunion with his joyful parents, Jeff and Sarah Smithson, both 18.

"We're glad we got him back," said the father as his wife, sobbing for joy, cradled the infant in her arms. "The woman didn't do anything to him."

Investigators, acting on a tip, had staked out the Wright home when the arrest was made.

Police Lt. Howard Allen said Miss Wright told authorities she had given birth to the baby at a Nashville hospital and was bringing it home.

"She cried several times and said, 'That's my baby. I had it. What are you going to do with my baby?'" Allen said.

The officer said Miss Wright had told Cates and her friends during the past two months that she was pregnant and that Cates was the father, but hospital officials said the woman has had a hysterectomy and is unable to have children.

"Cates told us he believed her," Allen said.

The woman allegedly called Cates from Nashville and told him she had given birth at Vanderbilt hospital and instructed Cates to pick them up.

Polish Life Continues Despite Months Of Crisis

By RUTH E. GRUBER
GDANSK, Poland (UPI) — It was Sunday afternoon and there on Polish television was New Jersey's own Gloria Gaynor singing her hit disco single "I Will Survive" before a Polish concert audience.

"Will you survive?" Gloria shouted. "Yes!" roared the crowd.

In these still unsettled days, it seemed a fitting way to end the program. Through months of crisis, Polish society has been rocked and shocked from so many sides and on so many levels — under such close international scrutiny — that the fact life determinedly goes on sometimes is lost in the shuffle.

"I was very touched," one Polish official said privately. "that so many of my friends abroad have been phoning to ask me if we were all right."

Such quantities of food packages and other gifts have flooded in that customs laws have had to be changed. Now food parcels enter duty free and processing has been speeded by not examining package contents.

There are still serious food shortages here, but supplies seem to have improved in the past two months, at least in the major cities. Long lines for meat and other basic items have been an unfortunate tradition in Poland for years.

Poles welcome an expected lull in the labor-state crisis following an appeal by the labor prime minister, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, for a three-month moratorium on strikes.

From activists in the independent Solidarity labor union right around to the other end of the political spectrum, the general's appointment looks like a good thing. "In Poland a uniform always had a certain amount of prestige," confided a top Solidarity figure.

In Gdansk, the Baltic seaport whose 18-day shipyard strike was the focus of last summer's labor revolt, Solidarity's rise as a national force for democratic rights is most noticeable.

The city, with its sprawling port and shipyard and beautiful old town — rebuilt stone by stone after World War II — remains Solidarity's national headquarters and the most militant stronghold of labor activism.

The headquarters in the shabby Morski hotel bustles with local and national meetings and other business relating to the operation of an organization that now numbers as many as 10 million members.

Bulletin boards are covered with posters and notices, including where to buy badges, signs and banners.

It seems everyone wears the red and white Solidarity badge. Posters and signs are plastered on walls or propped up in windows.

Outside the Lenin Shipyard gate rises

GREAT PYRAMID
The Great Pyramid of Khufu (Cheops), ca. 2550 B.C., was built on a square base, with an area of 13 acres, or seven average-sized city blocks. The six million tons of material used in the construction would, as Napoleon figured in 1798, standard-sized bricks and laid end-to-end, the Great Pyramid would reach from the Earth to the moon.

the stark monument to the workers killed by police and soldiers during bloody food price riots in December 1970.

The erection of such a monument, marking a national tragedy that was officially ignored for a decade, was one of the first concessions won by the strikers. It has become a symbol of national unity.

The base of the monument's three 135-foot crosses is always covered by flowers. Convenient kiosks sell wreaths a few minutes away.

One fallout from the social transformation is more freedom of expression, especially in the media. Deputy Prime Minister Mieczyslaw Rakowski said it has "broken the sound barrier."

Western visitors are surprised at the Western programs on Polish TV, from the Muppets to "Charlie's Angels." But this is not where the changes have come.

People line up to buy newspapers that now carry real news, including interviews with disgruntled workers and critical commentaries on government policy.

Poles joke that their entire schedule is thrown off now that they actually read morning papers instead of skimming the headlines.

Poland has long had innovative theater and films but the latest productions break new barriers.

A brilliantly staged musical, "Night of Carols," in the coastal city of Gdynia is a stark protest against the poor conditions and government offers of false hope. The internationally respected movie director Andrzej Wajda has begun shooting a film, "Man of Iron," about the Gdansk shipyard. Wajda now sports a Solidarity badge.

Cabaret, biting satiric, sometimes anti-Soviet, flourishes in Warsaw and other cities. One recent performance featured a tiny Lenin in a bird cage.

Mind your own business.

Tech Delegation Seeks Ag Plant Appropriations

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Trying to get funding for a new project in an era of budget cuts isn't the easiest thing to do in Washington, D.C., right now, but a Texas Tech University delegation started that process this week.

President Lauro Cavazos and Dr. Samuel Curl, dean of Tech's College of Agricultural Sciences, visited with Texas Congressmen in the nation's capital as well as with Secretary of Agriculture John Block.

Increasing the reliability of agricultural production on the Great Plains, including development of drought-resistant grain and fiber crops, is the goal of a proposed multi-million dollar U.S. Department of Agriculture Soil Moisture and Plant Stress Laboratory.

If funded by Congress, the plant would be built at Texas Tech and Curl says it would be "the national focal point" for such research.

This week's trip to Washington was more of a get-acquainted tour, while the review of the project is scheduled for either late this month or early April. That's when Curl will testify before subcommittees in both the house and senate.

The agriculture dean says he will emphasize "the importance of this work and the urgent need to support this kind of research." He pointed out it is the only proposed project of its kind in the nation and knowledge learned at such a lab would aid not only West Texas farmers, but also consumers across America.

American Cancer Society Begins Local Fund-Raising Campaign

By DEBBI STALTER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

In a time when 700,000 new cases of cancer are being diagnosed each year, research on the cause of the disease is sparking new hope of finding a cure, a local physician told American Cancer Society fund drive participants Thursday.

Dr. Gerald Woolam, past president of the cancer society's Texas division and a delegate to its national board, addressed a kickoff luncheon for the local organization's special gifts division campaign.

"This is the most exciting time that has ever occurred for cancer research," he told the group.

He detailed work in hybrid cell production, interferon treatment and research and cell-splicing as focal points of laboratory work now. At the same time, though, Woolam warned that prevention methods such as giving up cigarettes are still on the priority lists of ways to overcome the disease.

With the thousands of new cases diagnosed yearly come the economic consequences, which Woolam described as "staggering."

He noted studies have shown cancer is the most expensive medical cost to the public at $25 billion per year. He explained reports state $6 billion of that figure is attributed to the actual treatment, while the remaining $19 billion is tagged needed to treat cancer patients with the naturally-produced protein that attacks viruses.

The protein does not work in all cases, he said, because some impurities in the substance still exist. But, he said, interferon may be the single, most effective agent in treating malignant melanoma and has brought some results in cancer of the breast, bone, ovaries and skin.

Woolam was quick to note, however, that the prevention aspect is still important. He said 80 to 90 percent of all cancers are induced by the environment and 50 percent of those are caused by elements over which individuals have control — cigarette smoke, sunlight and carcinogens, for example.

He noted an 8 percent increase in lung cancer in females since 1978, attributed to the fact that more women are taking up smoking. Their habits will have more of an effect on them health-wise than the harm caused by exposure to asbestos, saccharin, nuclear plants and chemical waste dumps, he said.

Woolam pointed out that the American Cancer Society donated $47 million to cancer research last year and handed over $12 million to set up interferon studies in the United States after it was first introduced by a scientist in Finland.

Woolam said $30,000 per patient is

Housing Authority Told To Update Contracts

By PAT GRAVES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock Housing Authority Board instructed the LHA staff Thursday to revise its lease-purchase homebuyers contract to avoid future legal problems with disgruntled tenants.

LHA Director D.C. Fair explained that tenants have been challenging, with the aid of West Texas Legal Services, enforcement of the agreement's provisions regarding relocation.

Board Chairman Julian Simpson said the problems are arising because not all the federal regulations the LHA follows in its relocation procedures are stated in the contract. The board's action is designed to make the agreement clearer and more closely conformed to Department of Housing and Urban Development guidelines.

"We can't evict anyone," Fair pointed out. "But some of these people are unwilling to pay higher rent when their income increases, so then they go to legal services and we've got a problem."

Another matter which board members discussed was a recent notice from HUD directing the LHA to rescind their Jan. 8 decision to raise tenants' utility allowances. The action, itself a response to a HUD directive, gave tenants an average of about 50 percent more money to spend on utilities.

The panel was told Thursday HUD felt the allowances are not high enough, but was unwilling to subsidize the authority for the desired increase. Fair also said HUD officials are not happy that LHA computed the revised allowances based on cost increase figures from local utilities.

Assistant Director Mary Myers pointed out the LHA already has a $7,000 operating budget deficit incurred because HUD is recouping subsidy overages from past years' budgets out of the 1980-81 budget.

When he was hesitant to speculate as to what HUD might do if the board did not rescind their decision, board vice chairman Al Cavell said, "Maybe it's time we find out just what they will do."

Board member Vernon Behner accused HUD officials of talking out of both sides of their mouths and announced he would vote against rescission, but the board opted instead to table the matter until Fair returned from a consultation with HUD officials in Dallas.

"Tell 'em you've got a couple of Bolsheviks on your board," Behner quipped.

In other action, the authority was given a clean bill of health by the CPA firm of James Teague & Co., which just completed a three-year audit.

The board also accepted $5,500 in Community Development funds to continue security patrols through May at Greenfair Manor Apartments.

India Official Emphasizes Policy Of Non-Alignment

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The government of India wants to maintain friendly relations with all the major powers of the world, including the Soviet Union, a representative of the Indian government said Thursday in Lubbock.

K.S. Sandanam, an Indian representative in charge of promoting Indian tourism in the southern portion of the United States and in Mexico, told a luncheon crowd at Lubbock Christian College that India does not foresee a threat from the Soviet Union.

Sandanam said his country follows a foreign policy of non-alignment. "We want to be friendly with everybody."

The Dallas-based Indian official, who gave several addresses at the local college on Indian history, tourism and current events, also said his government is "doing a lot" to raise the standard of living in India, known for its extreme poverty and illiteracy.

Sandanam said compulsory education has been introduced to help raise the literacy rate, which is at 37 percent. By 1983, he said, the government hopes to up the rate to 60 percent. One of the primary tasks of the Indian government is to provide education for "everybody," Sandanam told the audience.

He also acknowledged the poverty of his country, but said steps have been taken that already have helped to eliminate some of the problem.

"I'm not ashamed to admit we have poverty," Sandanam said, but he added that with the aid of the United States, India has become self-sufficient and even exports products to other countries. The United States introduced in the early 1970s a grain hybrid that is credited with generating a massive increase in grain yields in India.

Sandanam also touched on the problem of begging — an integral part of the image many hold of India. He said begging is outlawed in his country and said he puts the blame for the problem "squarely on the religions."

He said that the different religions of the country all support almsgiving and that has encouraged a proliferation of the problem.

But Sandanam had only kind words for one prominent religious figure in India — Mother Teresa. The Catholic nun who recently received a Nobel Peace Prize for her missionary work, particularly in India, is regarded as a saint in his country, he said.

Sandanam said India, with a population of 650 million in an area one third the size of the United States, has achieved "quite a lot." He noted that medical care is good yet inexpensive by United States standards and also mentioned India's growing industry, including tourism, for which Indian officials have relaxed visa regulations to encourage visitors to the country, he said.

COMPOSTING SEEN AS SOLUTION

Cotton Waste Causes Major Problems For Ginners

GOOD FOR SOIL — Earl Stiles, owner and manager of the S & M Gin Co. in Aubrey, Ark., says a composted product made from cotton gin trash is a good addition to the soil. "Anytime you've added organic matter to the soil the plant grows better and combats disease better," he said.

For each bale of cotton a ginner processes, some 200 pounds of waste are left over. It costs him money to haul off the waste and some state laws say he can't burn it.

So what's the answer? Some researchers, including those at Cotton Inc., believe composting is a solution.

Composting is a fairly simple process. It has been done many times with leaves and grass clippings. All that is necessary is to put the waste in a pile, wet it down, turn it from time to time, and wait. In a few months it turns into rich, black usable fertilizer.

"Composting helps solve the pollution problem in gin communities and turns an otherwise useless by-product into valuable fertilizer and mulch, which can be returned to the cotton fields to grow even more cotton," says Dr. William F. Lalor, director of processing research for Cotton Inc.

Lalor says the mounting up of waste around the gin is a big problem.

"You have quite a disposal problem, especially in Texas and other areas where strippers are used. You have 750 to 800 pounds per bale that have to be disposed of," he said. "This waste contains insects, verticillium wilt and weed seeds, so it can be bad stuff to be putting on the fields. One of the reasons why ginners ought to look at composting is because it kills verticillium wilt and weed seeds."

Lalor and Cotton Inc. have worked with many ginners in starting composting programs. One of them is Gerry Finch in Huron, Calif.

Finch, manager of the Huron Gin, explained why he began composting: "We were getting a tremendous accumulation of raw trash, thousands of tons of it were piled up a round here. Our growers would not accept the raw material back onto the field because of the weed seed and the wilt."

Finch knew that trying to haul off the waste would not be feasible because of the high cost of freight. And pollution laws in California prohibit him from burning the waste.

So this left him with only one alternative — start a composting program. "In our company alone we composted 30,000 to 40,000 tons in the last few years and it's all been redistributed back to the farm," he said.

During composting, micro-organisms digest vegetative matter in a heat-releasing process. This high heat is what kills the weed seed and the verticillium wilt. The temperatures can get as high as 160 to 180 degrees.

To ready gin trash for composting, you simply stack it in wind rows, piles about 40 feet long, 10 feet wide and four feet high. The material must be kept at about 60 percent moisture, which requires a weekly sprinkling. The material should be totally composted in two or three months.

Lalor said ginners who compost their waste might have a salable product. "I feel quite sure that, with proper guidance from soil scientists, good compost potting mixtures would sell through gardening outlets in suburban areas. These sort of mixtures could be made using gin waste as the main ingredient."

You need to have the guidance of a soil scientist, Lalor continued, "because you can very easily upset the carbon-nitrogen ratios, especially in potting soil and the plants won't do very well."

One problem associated with composting is residual arsenic acid in gin waste. About the only way this acid can get into the waste is if it was used as a defoliant on the crop while in the field.

Lalor said Cotton Inc. is concerned about the possibility of contamination but is not sure that the levels of arsenic acid in compost would ever cause a problem.

Bob Curley, extension agricultural engineer at the University of California at Davis, said, "Composting doesn't have too much effect on chemical residues, but I think it's a viable way to dispose of gin trash."

Curley and Dr. Dave Hills, professor of agricultural engineering at Davis, have been working on a composting project for the past three years. It began on a small scale in a laboratory but now they are composting a 300-ton pile of gin trash near Corcoran in the San Joaquin Valley.

"We wanted to investigate composting on a much larger scale," Hills said. "If you want to remove weed seed and wilt, then it's a good process."

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

NO GREAT SURPRISES IN THE REAGAN administration's proposals for the 1981 farm bill are foreseen by Deputy Secretary of Agriculture Richard Lyng.

"We will not break any bold new ground," Lyng told members of the Commodity Club of Washington at a luncheon meeting this week. Secretary of Agriculture John Block and the administration generally have specified their proposals for the four-year bill, Lyng said. But he said there may be "one or two small surprises."

Block has proposed a modest increase in loan rates, possible phasing out of the target price concept and disaster payment program, and continuation of the farmer-held grain reserve under the current general framework.

When asked about automatic embargo protection legislation, Lyng said: "We do not want an embargo protection revision in the act which would cost the treasury tens of billions of dollars."

SEVERAL MAJOR FARM ORGANIZATIONS and congressmen have proposed an automatic increase in loan rates in the event of an embargo for any reason. Current law automatically raises the loan rate only in a short-supply embargo.

Diverting from automatic legislative protection from embargoes for farmers, Lyng reiterated Block's desire to lift the partial embargo on grain sales to the Soviet Union.

"That is a point we are making in very high places at this time," he said. Lyng also maintained the administration's stance against the proliferation of bilateral grain agreements.

In addition, international commodity agreements in general have only "minimal value," Lyng said, because pacts with stringent requirements are not likely to be agreed upon.

Lyng also said the administration will continue to work toward reducing government regulation. He told the meeting of mostly interest group representatives that they should be working on proposals to change costly regulation of their respective industries.

THE 1981 FARM BILL SHOULD INCLUDE a separate section for soybeans and a soybean loan rate that is based on an average market price, says the American Soybean Association.

Association president Frank Ray said the ASA is asking for a special section devoted to soybeans because of the importance of oilseeds and products in international trade and the escalating production of soybeans in the United States.

The ASA proposes that the soybean loan rate be set at a level equal to 75 percent of the average Chicago quoted cash price for No. 1 yellow soybeans for each of the preceding five marketing years, excluding the high and low value years.

However, the ASA proposal stipulates that in no event would the loan rate drop below $5.02 per bushel, the current level. The ASA plan would put the 1981-82 loan rate at $5.22 per bushel.

The association also remains against implementation of a target price for soybeans or formation of a farmer-held grain reserve system such as the program currently in use for feed grains and wheat.

THE ASA ALSO REMAINS AGAINST producer eligibility for loans under a farm storage facility loan program and against production controls.

A mechanism to "control the proliferation of bilateral agreements" also is being proposed by the ASA, said John Baize, the association's Washington representative.

This proposal includes a policy objective that the United States not seek bilateral agreements, that producer groups be contacted before negotiations are begun, and that Congress be given authority to veto any agreement up to 60 days after it is signed.

The ASA has proposed formation of a revolving fund for Commodity Credit Corp. direct export credits and has asked for an increase in CCC all-risk assurance loans to $4 billion from the current $2 billion.

Baize said the ASA is asking that Title I of the farm bill be devoted to international trade. The first emphasis on the farm bill should be to try to get as much as possible out of the international marketplace, he said.

COTTON FUTURES CLOSED A FAIRLY QUIET session Thursday near the middle to bottom end of the day's trading range.

Spot May was up one point at 87 1/2 cents, July gained 17 points at 87 1/2 cents and December was up 25 points at 82 1/2 cents. Estimated volume was 7,500 contracts.

Analysts said the market had lost as much as 42 points on commission house and local selling, which triggered downside stops near 87 cents in near May. But prices recovered on late local and commission house buying in quiet conditions, they said.

The market opened 33 points higher in nearby as light buying by a large Chicago-based commission house encouraged locals to take long positions, brokers said.

However, it was quickly apparent that support was lacking and locals liquidated their long positions to send prices lower, they said.

"The locals controlled things for most of the day as they along with commission houses were on both sides of the market," one analyst said. "The trade was fairly quiet."

THERE HAVE BEEN REPORTS OF A MAJOR mill having bought 30,000-plus bales in the last two days of Memphis, Texas and California cottons for shipments all the way from May through September, the analyst said. A couple of other mills also were inquiring, he said.

The net increase in upland cotton sales for delivery this marketing year amounted to 88,600 running bales during the week ended March 5, the USDA reported after the close, with major purchases by South Korea, Taiwan, Japan and Thailand.

Sales of American Pima cotton totaled 2,200 running bales, mainly to Poland and Japan.

A net increase of 29,700 running bales of upland cotton was recorded for delivery in the 1981-82 season, boosting the new-crop total to 131,000 bales.

The 1980-81 export commitment — shipments plus undelivered sales — totaled 5,441,900 running bales, including undelivered sales of 1,880,300 running bales.

SHIPMENTS DURING THE WEEK AMOUNTED to 154,200 bales, with 7 percent destined for Europe and 87 percent to Asia, including 29,200 running bales to China.

"We consider the export figures to be constructive," one analyst said. Cotton movement from High Plains warehouses and compresses improved during the past week, movement sources said, and no major problems are expected in the near future.

Guatemala is expected to produce 520,000 bales (500 pounds) in 1981-82, down from 600,000 this season, according to a U.S. agricultural attache there.

Trading on Telcot Thursday rose to the highest volume since Feb. 20 on a turnover of 13,376 bales. A major Memphis-based merchant was guesstimated to have accounted for more than one-fourth of the total, although a wide variety of merchants participated.

The average price was 67.17 cents, an average of 2,797 points well up on the market difference was up 50 points but merchants were paying over the loan on that for selected lots.

Tech Planning Seminar On Evaluation Of Meat

The different aspects of show animals and market animals will be the purpose of a Meat Animal Evaluation Seminar March 23 and 24 at the Texas Tech University livestock pavilion.

Sponsored by the Livestock Industry Committee of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, the seminar will include independent evaluations by top breeders, packer-buyers and show judges for cattle, swine and sheep live and on the hook.

Registration will begin at 8 a.m. at the livestock pavilion and the first session, Principles of Meat Animal Evaluation, will begin at 9 a.m. with general instructions on evaluating any species directed by Dr. Bob Long, Texas Tech University animal science professor.

The sessions will intensify when beef cattle evaluations start at 10 a.m. Doug Bennett of the Lone Star Hereford ranch in Henrietta, cattle judge Dr. Calvin Drake of the Kansas State University animal science department and Al Lorkovic of Iowa Beef Processors, Inc. of Garden City, Kansas, will independently study about five animals, place them and give reasons to the participants.

Following a noon luncheon, which will be served by the Saddle and Siron Club of Tech students, three industry men will likewise place five sheep from 1 p.m. until 3 p.m.

Sheep producer Harlan Miller of Seagraves, judge Bennie Doan of the Cameron University agriculture department at Lawton, Okla., and packer-buyer Bill Weatherby of Montfort of Colorado's San Angelo office will evaluate the sheep.

The swine evaluation beginning at 3 p.m. will be done by breeder Sam Sparger of Grapevine, judge Dr. Robert Hines of the Kansas State University animal science department and Don Bunch of Swift Independent Packing Company in San Antonio.

The animals which will include champions from the San Angelo show and an assortment of other animals, will be slaughtered following evaluations.

On Tuesday, participants will return to the pavilion for additional comments from the evaluators before going to the Tech Meats Lab to view the carcasses and attend a session on the principles of carcass evaluation by Dr. C. B. Ramsey, Texas Tech University animal science professor.

The cost of the seminar, which is expecting participants from across Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico, is $10 which includes the noon meal on March 23. Students will be admitted to the courses free of charge, but may buy a lunch ticket for $4.

Religious Groups Seek Low-Power TV Stations

By PAT GRAVES
A-J Religion Writer

Imagine coming home from work, plopping down in your favorite chair, punching your remote TV control and seeing the vacation Bible school from the church around the corner appear on the screen.

Although far-fetched, this is an example of what could happen if churches, religious organizations and individuals are able to avail themselves of the Federal Communication Commission's television expansion plan known as "low power TV."

The FCC announced in September 1980, it was simplifying rules to permit at least 3,000 new TV stations across the U.S. They would broadcast on channels between existing UHF and VHF stations, mostly within a 20-mile radius.

The small range (or low power) stations also could operate on full channels if they did not interfere with full service stations.

But the prospect of producing their own programs is what has such groups as the Southern Baptist Radio & Television Commission, the Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship International and broadcasting consultant Gary Bayer of Quality Media, a religious broadcasting technical firm, scrambling for applications.

What the FCC is doing is permitting translator stations, which in the past relayed programming from "mother" stations to remote areas, to originate their own signals, or rebroadcast from sources other than licensed TV stations.

Current examples are cable systems and Home Box Office and other programming sources which are not TV stations.

FCC attorney Molly Pauker said low power TV was created to satisfy the demand from all segments of society for more television outlets and greater diversity of sources for program matter. She said the investment for "neighborhood TV" is relatively small and would allow less affluent groups to get involved.

Miss Pauker added there was some risk in applying for a translator license, and the necessary waiver to originate programming instead of simply rebroadcasting, because FCC criteria on low power TV is not final.

But she admitted cancellation of the proposed program is unlikely since more than 3,000 applications already have been received. And an executive with a Texas firm that has filed 27 applications said the low power rules will become a reality, perhaps as soon as 2-3 weeks.

John Bird, vice president of Presidio Enterprises of Austin, said his company has applied for low power channels in almost every Texas city over 100,000 population, including Lubbock. He said about six companies have applied for Lubbock channels.

To his knowledge, no churches or religious groups have applied as yet. Pauker said most of the applicants are large organizations, financial consortiums and commercial interests.

These include Neighborhood TV, owned by Sears and Allstate; TV and baseball entrepreneur Ted Turner, who has filed 40 applications; Presidio Enterprises, a movie theater and real estate company; and Graphic Scanning, a Delaware-based computerized information transfer corporation.

Each of these concerns, except Turner, have filed for Lubbock channels. Although Bayer is leading something of a one-man crusade to get local churches and civic groups to realize the potential of low power TV, no such organizations have filed for Lubbock.

Miss Pauker said citizen groups are in the minority among applicants. Although the FCC is planning to limit common ownership to 15 stations, she predicted the larger owners would outnumber the smaller ones.

The Southern Baptist Radio & Television Commission has applied for 100 channels around the U.S., including San Antonio, Houston, Fort Worth and Albuquerque, N.M. Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship International has applied in Indiana and Illinois.

Other lesser known religious groups also have expressed an interest in low power TV. These include Davar Ministries, which applied in Beaumont, Christian Telecommunications, Inc., which applied in San Antonio, and Christian Communications, Inc., which applied in Albuquerque, N.M.

Bird said his firm is considering numerous programming options and remaining flexible. Although Presidio has established no specific goals, he said their low power stations would be commercial, not non-profit or public service.

He estimated Lubbock probably would not have a low power station in less than three years, but one could begin here as soon as six months from now.

In instances where two applicants are competing for the same area, Miss Pauker said the FCC will defer a ruling until the final criteria are completed, which could take another year. She indicated minority-owned firms and non-commercial groups would have the best chance in such situations.

"We would give preference to non-commercial, non-profit groups serving the general interest," Miss Pauker explained. "There is some question as to whether that might exclude religious groups."

She added low power TV would provide an opportunity for interested parties to take some of the control of TV away from the national networks, which she described as having "somewhat of a stranglehold" on programming.

That's where Gary Bayer comes in. The 29-year-old former psychologist has called the neighborhood TV concept "the most revolutionary development in broadcasting since the creation of the FM band." He is trying to organize grass roots applications so corporations, commercial interests, pornographers and organized crime do not gain control first. Bayer sees low power TV as an avenue to ensure wholesome programming through local control, instead of by "a few people in New York." Urging groups to act quickly, Bayer emphasizes the capital and technology required are not as great as some may think.

He puts the figure for FCC-required paperwork at $8,500, a VHF transmitter at $15,000, a UHF transmitter at $80,000 and a studio at $45,000. Bird and Miss Pauker said his estimates are perhaps a bit low but still close.

"If you want origination as well as re-broadcast capabilities, as we do, then $250,000 is the minimum," Bird pointed out. "If you want a less sophisticated studio, you can get by for much less."

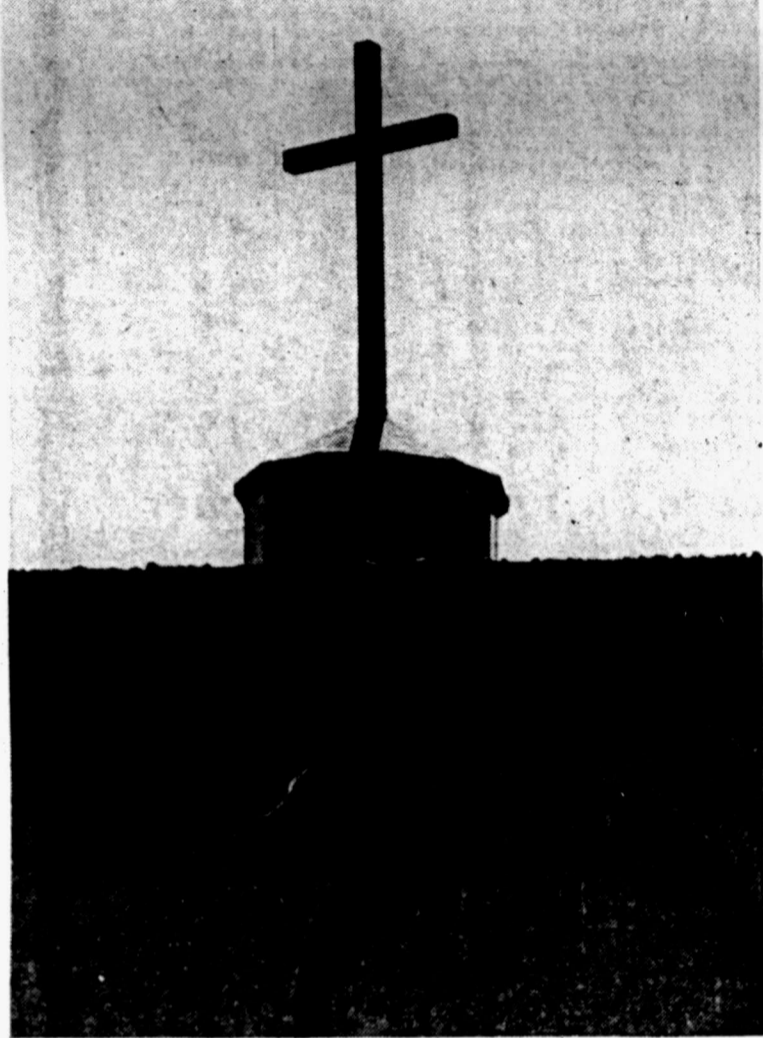

Although he said he was unfamiliar with Bayer, Bird said there is a tendency toward over-simplification among some low power TV proponents, who overlook many expenses incurred in doing the job well.

"So many people are promoting themselves as low power gurus, that many well-intentioned people are going to have their feelings and their pocket-books hurt."

Nevertheless, Bayer is travelling the country speaking and appearing at conventions. Ironically, just last month in Fort Worth acting FCC Chairman Robert E. Lee told Southern Baptist Radio & Television Commission members at an awards ceremony they were a creditable to the people and to God for their use of broadcasting.

He said the technological expansion of broadcast is a gift from God to provide the "word of all lands, but a word that is not to be so enamored of its power that they forget its purpose."

Whether his encouraging words are more rhetoric or what, low power TV remains an instrument for neighborhood religious programming that will be answered in the courts and in the marketplace. Stay tuned.

EAST MEETS WEST — This rooftop cross stands above a filled archway in a wall of Trinity Church, South Loop 289 and Canton Avenue. The scene could be taken to resemble a similar site thousands of miles away in Jerusalem. There in one wall of the old city stands the closed-in arches of the Eastern Gate. Bible prophecy indicates Christ's return to Earth will involve an entrance at that location, far different from His "triumphal entry" on a donkey which we recall each Easter. Roger Staubach To Speak At Education Conference

ABILENE (Special) — Former Dallas Cowboy quarterback Roger Staubach will be among four distinguished keynote speakers at the National Christian Education Conference July 17-19 at Abilene Christian University.

Other speakers for the ACU-sponsored event will be U.S. Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah; Abner McCall, former president and chancellor of Baylor University; and Dr. William S. Banowsky, president of the University of Oklahoma.

The conference is designed to allow educators in all major areas of Christian education to meet with each other and discuss specific areas of special interest, according to Dr. J.D. Thomas, conference director and ACU Bible professor.

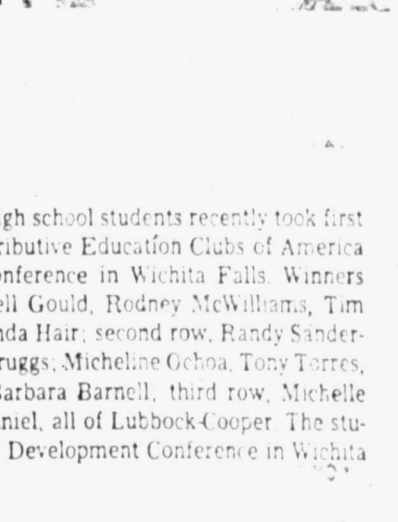

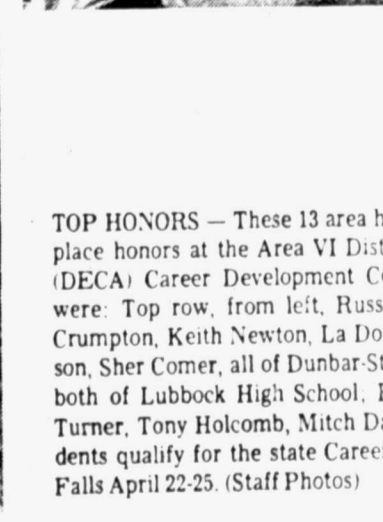

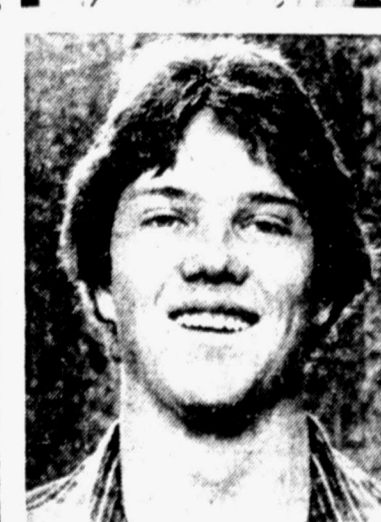

McCall will open the sessions July 17 speaking on "Independent Higher Education." Sen. Hatch will speak on "Education and the American Way" at noon July 18. Staubach will be the featured speaker at the July 18 dinner and will address the topic "Character Building and America's Future."

Banowsky will discuss "Confronting the Moral Issues" at noon July 19. His speech will close the conference and open the four-day Bible Teachers' Workshop, a series of classes and presentations conducted annually on the ACU campus.

A panel discussion concerning federally-funded tuition grants for private school students also will be held. Additional information about the conference is available from Thomas at ACU Station, Box 7768, Abilene, 79699, or at (915) 677-1911.

The three-day meeting officially will conclude a year-long celebration of ACU's 75th anniversary. Several events have been conducted since Sept. 1, 1980, to mark the school's founding in 1906 as Childers Classical Institute.

MR. AND MRS. GLENN CANTU
Couple To Lead Music Festival

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Cantu of Rotan will lead a regional Hispanic music festival at Arnett-Benson Baptist Church from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday.

The festival, part of the centennial celebration of organized Spanish Baptist work in Texas, is expected to attract about 200 choir members from Spanish-speaking churches around the South Plains.

Cantu, music minister at First Baptist Church in Rotan, will also lead a choir and provide training for participants. Mrs. Arnette Benson, pastor of Alpha Omega Baptist Church in Lubbock, will be the emcee.

Mr. and Mrs. Cantu are graduates of the School of Church Music at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth.

Church Sets Celebration

ROPEVILLE (Special) — Like the original article, which began nearly 2,000 years ago with a handful of believers, the First Baptist Church of Ropesville has grown significantly in the six decades since its founding by charter members.

The congregation will celebrate its 60th anniversary April 12 with a day of special activities in addition to 9:30 a.m. Sunday School and 11 a.m. worship. Dinner will be served at noon, and at 2:30 p.m. there will be singing, guest speakers and a presentation on the history of the church.

Refreshments will be served at 4:30 p.m. All present and former members and friends of First Baptist, Ropesville, are invited to attend the anniversary celebration. For more information contact the church office at 562-3911.

Bro. O.P. Morrison was the first pastor of the congregation, which was founded April 10, 1921. The Rev. Greg Deering has been pastor since Oct. 1980. The current membership is approximately 500.

Lubbock Pianist To Give Concert

Pianist Kathy Bell Harris will present a sacred music concert at 9:30 a.m. Sunday at First Nazarene Church, 46th Street and Avenue Q.

She is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. James Bell, who pastored the congregation from 1963 to 1969.

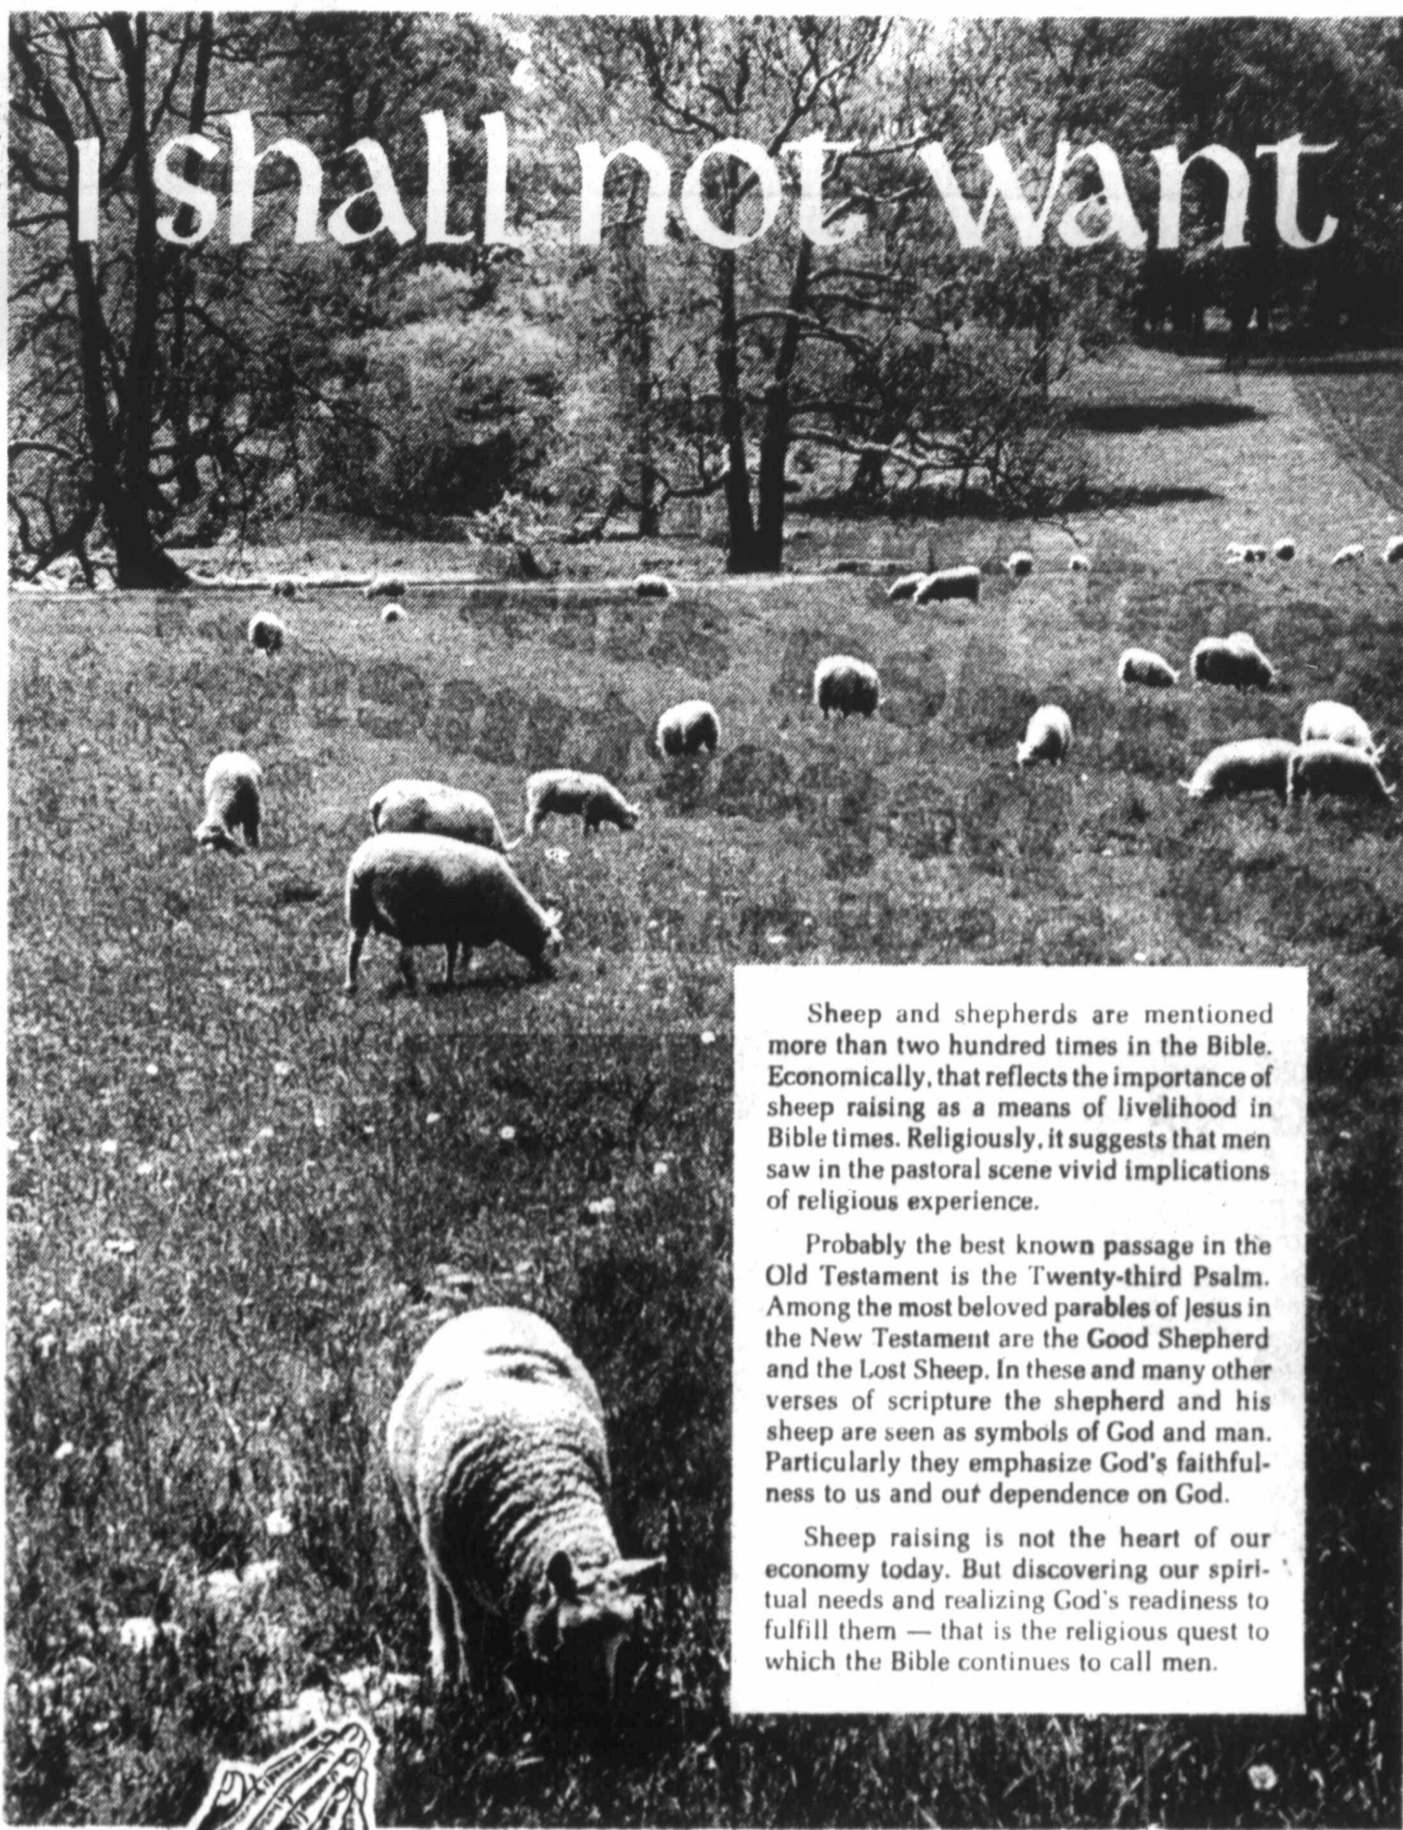

Mrs. Harris, a 1969 Monterey High School graduate, earned a degree in piano performance from Oklahoma City University in 1977.

She has performed in churches throughout the U.S. Presently she and her husband live in Downingtown, Pa., where she is organist of First United Methodist Church.

First Nazarene Pastor Jerome Hancock said the public is invited to the concert.

FIND STRENGTH FOR YOUR LIFE — ATTEND CHURCH

I shall not want

Sheep and shepherds are mentioned more than two hundred times in the Bible. Economically, that reflects the importance of sheep raising as a means of livelihood in Bible times. Religiously, it suggests that men saw in the pastoral scene vivid implications of religious experience.

Probably the best known passage in the Old Testament is the Twenty-third Psalm. Among the most beloved parables of Jesus in the New Testament are the Good Shepherd and the Lost Sheep. In these and many other verses of scripture the shepherd and his sheep are seen as symbols of God and man. Particularly they emphasize God's faithfulness to us and our dependence on God.

Sheep raising is not the heart of our economy today. But discovering our spiritual needs and realizing God's readiness to fulfill them — that is the religious quest to which the Bible continues to call men.

Lamar Stops Missouri; Arkansas Wins

By The Associated Press
Back in December, the Missouri Tigers thrashed the Lamar Cardinals in the "Show Me Classic."

Thursday night, it was the Cardinals' turn to show the Tigers.

Getting revenge for a 92-70 rout in the holiday tournament, the Cardinals upset the Tigers 71-67 in the NCAA basketball tournament and headed for a second-round game of the Midwest playoffs Saturday.

"We wanted the game real bad," said Lamar coach Pat Foster. "I think we had an advantage coming into the game with Missouri having beaten us as bad as they did the first time."

With center B.B. Davis of the Southland Conference champions in foul trouble, the Cardinals played at a deliberate pace most of the game. And it paid off.

"We had to get deliberate," said Foster. "We didn't feel we could run with Missouri. The first time we tried to run with them, they blew us out."

A 25-point performance by Mike Oliver led the Cardinals, who pulled off their second upset in as many years in the NCAA playoffs. Last season, they knocked off Pac-10 winner Oregon State in an early round. The Cardinals advance to the second round Saturday against No. 4 Louisiana State.

In Thursday night's other Midwest game at Austin, 20th-ranked Arkansas held off upset-minded Mercer 73-67. Darrell Walker came off the bench to score 19 points for the Razorbacks, who advanced to a meeting Saturday with Louisville.

Atrocious free-throw shooting by the Razorbacks helped keep the 13-point underdog Bears in the game. Arkansas hit only 19-of-40 free-throw attempts and Walker could hit just 3-for-13.

"I guess I'll have to hire me a new free-throw shooting coach," Arkansas coach Eddie Sutton said. "That's the worst I ever had a team shoot at the line."

Sutton also noted the hostile fans of the SuperDrum. They repeatedly booed the Razorbacks and Sutton, who has a rivalry going with Texas coach Abe Lemons. "They were more vicious tonight than we come in and play the Longhorns," he said. "I couldn't believe it."

But the Razorbacks just had too much depth for Mercer, which finished third in the Trans America Conference but won the post-season tournament.

In other tournament play, Linton Townes led James Madison on a nine-point run midway in the second half, and the Dukes held on to beat Georgetown 61-55 in the first round of the East Regionals at Providence, R.I. The victory sent the Dukes into a Saturday game with seventh-ranked Notre Dame.

Danny Ainge scored 21 points and Brigham Young University solved Princeton's deliberate offense in the second half to beat the Tigers 60-51 in the other first-round East game. The 16th-ranked Cougars will face 10th-ranked UCLA Saturday.

"It's not as big a surprise as some thing," said James Madison coach Lou Campanelli of the upset. "I know a lot of people will pick up their newspapers and be pretty surprised, but we thought all along that we could beat Georgetown."

"This is the best victory ever for our basketball program. To have the opportunity to compete against Notre Dame Saturday on television will be a tremendous thrill."

Tony Costner's 14 second-half points, including two free throws with three seconds left, rallied St. Joseph's of Pennsylvania to a 59-57 victory over Creighton in NCAA Midwest Regionals.

Costner finished with 18 points and John Smith added 20 for the Hawks in the game at the University of Dayton Arena. Kevin McKenna had 18 points for Creighton and George Morrow added 17.

St. Joseph's, the East Coast Conference champion, moved into Saturday's second-round game against DePaul.

Albert King scored 25 points to lead Maryland to a come-from-behind 81-69 victory over Tennessee-Chattanooga in the night's second game. The Terps, of the Atlantic Coast Conference, will meet No. 9 Indiana Saturday.

Held in check most of the way, Rolando Blackman put Kansas State ahead to stay with 2:19 remaining as the Wildcats rallied for a 64-60 victory over San Francisco in the West Regionals at Los Angeles. Randy Reed led the Wildcats with 24 points.

The Wildcats moved into Saturday's second round against second-ranked Oregon State.

"I never got loose during the whole game," said Blackman, who finished with just eight points. "In fact, I never even got into the game. My last four points were just a matter of being at the right place at the right time."

Kansas State coach Jack Hartman, whose team trailed by as many as 12 points early in the second half, praised the Dons of the West Coast Athletic Conference, calling them "a very fine and talented team."

"I feel very good to have won," said Hartman. "We were very fortunate. It takes a lot of poise to show patience and not try to catch up in a brief period of time. I thought our players did a good job of controlling that urge."

Charles Bradley and Bill Garnett combined for 38 points as 17th-ranked Wyoming crushed Howard University 78-43 in the nightcap of the West doubleheader. Wyoming will face 19th-ranked Illinois Saturday.

First-round action continues tonight at other sites in the four regions. In the East at Charlotte, N.C., it's Virginia Commonwealth vs. Long Island and Houston against Villanova. In the Mideast at Tuscaloosa, Ala., Ball State faces Boston College and Alabama-Birmingham meets Western Kentucky.

In the Midwest at Wichita, Kan., it's Kansas vs. Mississippi and Southern University against Wichita State. And in the West Regional at El Paso, Idaho takes on Pittsburgh and Fresno State tackles Northeastern.

There's No Place Like Road: NIT Gives Proof

By The Associated Press
Holy Cross, Alabama, Temple and Connecticut began their march toward the National Invitation Tournament title the hard way — posting first-round victories on the road.

Reserve forward Dave Mulquin took a pass from Ed Thurman and sank a 10-foot baseline jumper at the buzzer Thursday night as Holy Cross nipped Southern Mississippi 56-54. In another close game, Alabama reeled off the first six points of the overtime period and defeated St. John's 73-69.

Guard Keith Parham scored 25 points to lead Temple to a 90-82 decision over Clemson. Bob Dulin's 16 points led five Connecticut players in double figures as the Huskies topped South Florida 65-55.

In other first-round games Thursday night, Michigan beat Duquesne 74-58, Purdue topped Rhode Island 84-58 and Duke defeated North Carolina A&T 79-69.

Those winners join Georgia, Toledo, Minnesota, South Alabama, Texas-El Paso and Dayton in the second round. The remaining spots will be filled tonight with the final three first-round games: Marquette, 20-10, at Syracuse, 18-11; Penn, 20-7, at West Virginia, 20-8, and Pan American, 18-10, at Tulsa, 21-7.

Southern Mississippi's Eddie Jiles had tied the score at 54-54 with a free throw with 23 seconds left before Thurman set up Mulquin's game-winning shot for Holy Cross.

"I was thinking, 'Get loose, throw it up soft,'" said Mulquin, who was carried off the court on the shoulders of his Holy Cross teammates after his clutch basket.

Holy Cross, 20-9, will face the Marquette-Syracuse winner in the second round.

Wayne McKay's basket for St. John's with 52 seconds left sent the game into overtime, but baskets by Mike Davis and Ken Johnson and two free throws by Eddie Adams at the start of the extra period put Alabama in command.

Tech's Mays Set To Run

DETROIT (AP) — Texas Tech All-American James Mays begins his bid for the title in the 880-yard run today in the NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships at Joe Louis Arena in a meet featuring a large number of outstanding foreign athletes.

Mays, who finished third in the event last year and has been competing in outdoor events for Tech recently, will face strong competition in SMU's Sammy Koskie and UTEP's Peter Lemashon. Koskie has the top collegiate time in the 880 this season while Lemashon finished third in the event a year ago.

"It's good to have a couple of outdoor meets before the individual (indoor championships)," Mays said, explaining the lag between the end of the indoor season and the national meet. "Lots of times you lose confidence indoors but you can gain it back in outdoor meets."

"My goals are to finish in the top six in the 880 and, secondly, to be an All-American," he said.

The University of Texas-El Paso, heavily laden with foreigners and spiced with a smattering of Americans, used this same formula to win last year's team title with a record 76 points.

Alabama coach Wimp Sanderson. "I told our kids to be patient, run our offense and let them foul us — and that's what happened."

Temple, 20-7, turned back two second-half rallies to beat Clemson despite 34 points by the Tigers' Larry Nance. Temple moves into a second-round match against the winner of tonight's Penn-West Virginia first-round game.

Connecticut, 20-8, went without scoring for eight minutes of the second half but still had enough to beat South Florida and advance to a second-round game against Minnesota.

Mike McGee, the Big Ten Conference's all-time leading scorer, posted 20 of his game-high 26 points in the second half as Michigan beat Duquesne. The Wolverines, 18-10, will play Toledo in the second round.

"McGee does the best job of anyone I've seen in leaving the defensive end to get downcourt," said Duquesne coach Mike Rice. "You can't let him get behind you because, if he gets free, he has no hesitation about shooting."

Purdue outscored Rhode Island 10-0 from the foul line in the first half to take a 32-22 lead, stretched that advantage to 17 points shortly after intermission and coasted past the Rams. Keith Edmonson scored 27 points, Drake Morris 20 and Russell Cross 15 for the Boilermakers, 18-10, who will face Dayton in the second round.

Duke got 18 points from guard Vince Taylor and 17 from forward Kenny Denard in beating North Carolina A&T. Forward Gene Banks of Duke suffered a wrist injury midway through the first half and sat out the rest of the game.

Beavers' Miller Earns Award

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ralph Miller, whose Oregon State Beavers executed with cold precision en route to a near-perfect season, has been named United Press International's 1980-81 Coach of the Year.

Miller, a 60-year-old chainsmoker with more than 30 years of coaching experience, was a runaway choice in the nationwide balloting of 204 sports writers and broadcasters released Thursday.

Winning by a more than a 4-to-1 margin, Miller collected 99 votes. Terry Holland of Virginia was second with 23 and Dale Brown of Louisiana State was third with 20.

"This team has let it be known... that it wants to win a championship," Miller says. "To do that we have to be a cold-blooded group of people who play 40 minutes every game. We put full-court pressure on the whole game for one reason because other people don't like it." It is a formula that carried the Beavers to a 26-1 record during the regular season and is not about to be abandoned as Oregon State prepares for Saturday's NCAA tournament game against Kansas State.

"I'm an old dog," he says, "but the system is exciting." Miller has won 512 games and is the third winningest major active coach. Only Ray Meyer of DePaul and Marv Harshman of Washington have won more.

Before coming to Oregon State in 1971, Miller coached at Iowa and Wichita State. And since joining the Beavers he has averaged nearly 18 victories a year, including the Pacific-10 title the last two seasons. He has been named Coach of the Year in three conferences: Missouri Valley, Big Ten and Pac-10.

Not since UCLA ruled the game in the '60s and '70s has a team from the West emerged as powerful and well-balanced as Oregon State. Miller, however, insists his success is attributed to the same fundamentals he stressed when first beginning.

"We play along team concepts I first developed back in 1945 when I was still a high school coach in Kansas," he says. "We apply pressure both offensively and defensively and create a fatigue factor among the opposition. It's not a gambling type of play. Rather, it's based on conservative principles."

This season, behind 6-foot-11 center Steve Johnson and 6-4 guards Ray Blume and Mark Radford, the principles translated into victories.

Following last year's early knockout by Lamar in the NCAA tournament, the Beavers returned to win their first 26 games this season. They occupied the No. 1 ranking for eight straight weeks and only an 87-67 loss to Arizona State in the final game of the regular season prevented a perfect year. Oregon State finished No. 2 in the national rankings, overtaken by DePaul in the last week of voting.

Miller, who lets his assistants do the recruiting, this season assembled a winning blend of speed, finesse, diligence and power.

'Monterey Opens Defense Of Midland Championship

The Monterey Plainsmen will be gunning for their third consecutive Midland Tournament of Champions title while Lubbock High will host Permian and Estacado visits Odessa Ector in single games in city baseball action today.

The Plainsmen, owners of a 6-0 record, opened the prestigious event today at 10 a.m. against Midland High, the team MHS drilled 9-0 18-2 in a double-header at Lowrey Field last Saturday.

Other teams in the tournament will be Amarillo Tascosa, Midland Lee and Carrollton's R.L. Turner. Five games per day have been scheduled for the tourney which concludes Saturday with the 5-30 p.m. finals.

Thursday's scheduled Estacado-Ector game was rained out. The Mats will try it again when they travel to Ector for a 4 p.m. start.

It's very conceivable Monterey coach Bobby Moegle will win his 600th career game this weekend should the Plainsmen continue their winning streak. In the two-day tourney, the Plainsmen could be involved in six games.

The Westerners, who had a rescheduled game against Palo Duro rained out Wednesday, will try again at home against Permian today at 4 p.m. at MacKenzie Park.

The Westerners will be out to improve on their disappointing 1-3 record. Coach Bart Hernandez is trying to find the best fielding combination with his youngsters but has not had much help from Mother Nature — rain has forced cancellation of two games so far this season.

In Tuesday's game against Brownfield, LHS jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the third inning, but was shut out the rest of the game.

Dissatisfied Bench Threatens Abrupt Retirement

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — Frustrated and stalemated as he has never been before, Johnny Bench is considering "The Big Decision."

"I'm very close to quitting," he said Thursday at the Cincinnati Reds' training camp.

"There's life after baseball and I want to enjoy it," Bench went on. "I still haven't lived half my life. On top of all the injuries I've had before, my elbow bothers me right now. The way things are going, I feel like some kind of fish out of water. I don't even know whether I belong or not."

Ordinarily, when a ballplayer talks like that, nobody listens. Nine times out of 10 they don't hang up their gloves.

There have been exceptions. Sandy Koufax was one. He retired prematurely because he didn't wish to risk permanent injury to his arm. Dave McNally was another. He simply didn't think he was helping his ball club anymore. Johnny Bench could be a third, or he eventually may wind up being traded.

Unable to reach any meeting of the minds with his employers of the past 16 years over what position he will play and how many games, the husky veteran of four World Series and 13 All-Star games talks like a man who might pack it in even though his $450,000-a-year contract has two years to go.

Bench doesn't want to catch anymore. He'd like to play first base, third base or the outfield. Without wanting to tell the Reds what to do, Bench's old boss, Sparky Anderson, now managing the Detroit Tigers, believes Bench would consent to catch if he were shown he was appreciated more. Some say for $1 million a year, Bench would gladly keep catching.

Not true, says Bench. While they don't come out and say so openly, the Reds seem to share the belief more money would settle the whole matter.

"They think if they give me more money it'll take care of everything," Bench says. "But if I had arthritis, a bad back and bad knees 10 years from now, I'd pay a million dollars to get rid of that. They couldn't pay me enough to catch every day. Is there anything more important than health? I don't think so."

"I said I was willing to catch a couple of days a week at first. I really wanted to give up catching altogether."

Dick Wagner, the Reds' president and chief executive officer, has one hard rule. He doesn't renegotiate anyone's contract, and it should be remembered he is the same fellow who let go both Pete Rose and Anderson. They were plenty popular, too.

Wagner and Bench have had several talks. The Reds' boss has a great personal regard for the Oklahoma-born long-baller. He feels, nonetheless, in all justice to manager John McNamara, who likes Bench personally, he can't accede to Bench's wishes with regard to choosing the position he plays.

That goes even if Bench decides to quit, Wagner says. "We think the guy is important in our picture and I hope he continues to play," says the Reds' prey. "I also hope he plays for us. We've made no move to try to trade his contract. We've had people come to us asking about him and we've said no."

"John said he didn't want to catch in more than two games a week and I agreed to that. It was a rather hybrid decision, if I can use such a word. But he also wants to play 70 or 80 games at another position, and I didn't want to tie John McNamara's hands by agreeing to that."

McNamara doesn't want to lose

Bench. By the same token, he doesn't want to lose the rest of his team by giving in to him.

Left-fielder George Foster already has said he isn't going to move over for Bench. First baseman Dan Driessen and third baseman Ray Knight also are disinclined to give up the turf they've worked hard to win.

Meanwhile, there are a number of people who can see Bench's point. Gary Carter, the Montreal Expos' superb catcher, is among those who do. He's 100 percent behind Bench in his present situation.

"Johnny Bench is a Hall of Famer," says the Expos' receiver. "People come out to see him and how many players do you really have like that? If he doesn't want to catch so much anymore because his back and legs are hurting him, nobody understands that more than I do. I'm sure John doesn't want it to reach the point where he gets up in the morning and finds out he's having trouble standing on his legs. That's what catching does to you."

Phils' Buyers Show Strength

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — Bill Giles, executive vice president of the Philadelphia Phillies, says he has about 30 parties lined up who are interested in joining him in buying the National League franchise.

"The money is around, but whether it's enough or the right kind is questionable," Giles said Thursday after returning here from Philadelphia, where he spent most of the week.

Club owner Ruly Carpenter announced plans March 6 to unload the world champion Phillies because of escalating salaries, labor problems and philosophical differences with his fellow owners as to how the game should be run.

Giles would be the managing partner in a group to buy the team, since he admits he doesn't have the kind of money it would take to complete the deal.

"Ruly doesn't know what the team is worth. He's waiting to see what people think it's worth," said Giles, who plans to return to Philadelphia again Sunday.

Asked how many people had expressed interest to the Carpenter family for purchase of the club, Giles replied, "I would guess that means 20 to 40."

Giles said he has a number of people who have the big money necessary to key the purchase of the Phillies, but he admitted he wasn't sure these people wanted to put up that much themselves.

Giles declined to name the 30 interested parties, adding that the people he's talked to want to remain anonymous.

NFL TO TOUR

NEW YORK (AP) — An NFL contingent of players, including offensive lineman Dave Dalby and defensive back Mike Davis of the Super Bowl champion Oakland Raiders, will tour Asia and Indian Ocean countries beginning April 10, the league announced Wednesday. The first stop on the annual tour on behalf of the USO and the Department of Defense, will be Seoul, Korea. The 1981 group, which also includes kicker Efen Herrera of the Seattle Seahawks and guard Doug Wilkerson of the San Diego Chargers, will visit United States military installations in the Philippines and the Indian Ocean area on its 21-day tour.

Mavericks Win, Motta Bubbles

By The Associated Press

Their record is only 12-61, but Dallas coach Dick Motta likes the way the expansion Mavericks are finishing their first National Basketball Association season.

"I'm happy we're on an upbeat," said Motta after the Mavericks trounced the Golden State Warriors 120-118 Thursday night. "This team has had a thousand opportunities to just play-act out the rest of the season, but we're going to finish strong."

"I don't know how many games we're gonna win, but this will make our preparation for next fall much easier. And it will make our players' vacation a lot nicer."

Tom LaGarde converted a missed shot by teammate Jim Spanarkel into a three-point play with three seconds left to give Dallas its second straight victory and nullify a 45-point outburst by the Warriors' Purvis Short.

Short hit 18 of 30 field-goal attempts.

Hearns Contracts For Title Match

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Tommy Hearns, the World Boxing Association's welterweight champion, said Thursday that he will defend his title April 25 against Randy Shields in Veterans Memorial Coliseum.

Hearns, with 28 knockouts in his 32-bout undefeated pro career, told a news conference he doesn't know too much about Shields.

"I'm going to fight my own fight anyway," he said.

Hearns said the opponent he really wants is Sugar Ray Leonard, who holds the World Boxing Council version of the title.

including a pair of three-pointers, and made all seven of his foul shots in the highest-scoring game of his career, but fouled out with 7:26 to play.

Golden State outscored Dallas 14-2 in 2:50 to take a 117-113 lead with 1:53 but was unable to hang on.

"Dallas just keeps coming after you," said Warriors' coach Al Attles. "They improve each time out. They must have our number because they've beaten us twice."

Spanarkel led the Mavericks with 26 points. Bill Robinson scored 22 and Brad Davis contributed 18 points and 14 assists.

Bucks 131, Nuggets 113
Mickey Johnson scored 12 of his 22 points in a 42-point third quarter as the Bucks dealt Denver its third straight loss. The Nuggets led 59-54 at halftime before behind outscored 42-19 in the decisive third period.

Milwaukee outbounded Denver 67-53 and shut down the Nuggets' running game.

"When you play bad defense you get outrun, and we were just awful on defense," said Nuggets' coach Doug Moe.

"When the other team scores every time down the floor, you can't run because there are no rebounds. We can't outrun anybody if we don't play defense."

Pacers 114, Bullets 107

Washington fell 2½ games behind Chicago in their race for the final Eastern Conference playoff berth as the Pacers pulled away with an 8-2 burst early in the fourth quarter. George McGinnis, back in the starting lineup because of an injury to Mike Bantom, led Indiana with 24 points.

Lakers 122, Clippers 116
Jamaal Wilkes scored 29 points and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar added 26 for the Lakers, who took control with a 10-2 spurt to start the second half and never let San Diego catch up. Earvin "Magic" Johnson scored 26 points, his high since returning to action last month following knee surgery, and added nine rebounds and seven assists for the Lakers.

Segrist Points To Pitching As Crucial, Tech Visits Longhorns

By RAY GLASS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
 It's your basic underdog-giant story. You know, of the Jack and his beanstalk, David and his slingshot variety. Label it Kal and his question mark.
 Kal Segrist, Texas Tech's baseball coach, leads his hearty band of adventurers into Austin today. It's real giant territory: home of the Texas Longhorns, perennial Southwest Conference hardball champions.
 Kal's young bunch stands a good chance of matching the Longhorns hit for hit but offense doesn't worry Segrist. It's the Raiders' pitching that is the big question mark in the SWC opener for both teams.
 Tech, 12-2 this season, and Texas, 15-2-1 and the defending conference champions, began the three-game set with a single nine-inning game today at 3 p.m. at Disch-Falk Field.
 The series concludes Saturday with a 1 p.m. double-header — a seven-inning game followed by a nine-inning contest.
 Other league series this weekend include Arkansas at Texas Christian, Houston at Baylor and Texas A&M at Rice.
 "Texas has outstanding personnel," Segrist said. "Going down their lineup, we match up with them. We can compete with them. It all comes down to pitching. The team that's up for the game and gets the pitching is the team that's going to come out with the victory."
 The "pitching factor" aside, the Raiders may be walking into a giant's den without a way out. Texas has won 53 championships in the last 65 years and is 28-6 against Tech in 13 seasons.
 Add to that the fact that the artificial surface in Austin has a history of being hard on Tech; the Red Raiders have never, as in not once, won at Disch-Falk Field.
 Throw in the infamous Texas fans, regarded as the best in the conference and possibly in the nation, and you have nice situation — for the home squad.
 "It's going to be tough," Tech pitching ace Kyle Fahrenthold said earlier this week. "There's a lot of pressure on you down there (in Austin). They have a good crowd and a lot of good support. But I think we're ready for them."
 A Tech victory in any one of the games rides on the shoulders, and arms, of Segrist's pitching staff.
 "It's hard to say with a young club how we'll react to the pressure," said Segrist, who is entering his 14th season at the Raider helm. "I'd like to have had 10 more ball games for our pitching. Hopefully we'll get a little more distance out of our starters."
 Slated to take the mound for Tech in today's opener is junior college transfer David Carroll. The right-hander is 3-0 with a pair of seven-inning complete games and a 3.67 ERA.
 Saturday's scheduled starters are the left-handed Fahrenthold (4-0, 3.12 ERA) and either righty Gene Segrest (1-0, 6.32) or lefty Robert Bryant (1-0, 3.08).
 The Raiders' top relievers are Matt Dean (1-0, 3.60 ERA in five innings) and Derek Hatfield (2-0, 3.86 in nine and a third innings).

The Longhorns will likely counter with a trio of right-handers. Today's starter is Tony Arnold (4-0, 2.08). Mike Withrow (2-0, 1.47) and Tim Reynolds (3-0, 0.51) will likely begin Saturday.
 Tech's offense, averaging nearly nine runs each game this season, is the least of Segrist's worries as the Raiders open a 10-day stretch in which they play 11 games.
 "With such a young club, I don't really know yet how good this club can be," he said. "They've done better than I expected as far as scoring. We've been consistently getting six to eight runs a game but I don't know if we'll be able to keep scoring that many runs. But we do have power all through the lineup."
 Zachry, a sophomore, pounded out 13 hits in 24 at bats during this week's six-game series with Lubbock Christian College. Dawson leads the Raiders in hits with 23 while center fielder Rusty Laughlin has three home runs and left fielder Bobby Kohler has driven in 20 runs in 13 games.

 The patient Longhorns — a team built around speed, walks and timely hits — have eight of nine starters batting above .300. The lone exception is sophomore second baseman Bryan Burrows, a replacement for all-SWC performer Dean David out for the season with a leg injury.

 "Texas is a patient club," Segrist said. "They are coached (by Cliff Gustafson) like that. They take a lot of pitches and definitely make you pitch to them."
 "We feel we need to win three out of our first six (SWC) games," he said. "If we are 3-3 after the Texas and Baylor series, we feel we'll be in a position to make a run at it (the post-season league tournament). We'd like to be at least no less than 3-3 after those series."

After Austin, the Raiders travel to Edinburg for games against Pan American, Kansas and Missouri next week.

Tech Women Begin Tourney

AUSTIN (Special) — The Texas Tech women's golf team opens competition here in the Betsy Ralls Invitational today at the Great Hills Golf Course. More than 15 universities representing nine states will compete in this high-caliber event that runs through Sunday.
 The University of Tulsa, SMU, Arizona State and Florida State head the list of nationally ranked teams competing for top honors. The Raider women are fresh off a disappointing eighth place finish in the 12-team Texas A&M Futur Pro Invitational held on Mar. 1-3.

High School Star Selects Alabama

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — A highly recruited high school basketball player who left Montgomery to play in California says he will sign with the University of Alabama.
 Ken Johnson, a 6-foot-9 forward, led LaJolla High School to the state 2A championship, and many college recruiters assumed he would sign with San Diego State. But Johnson had other ideas.
 "I saw great potential at Alabama," particularly with the recruits the team is seeking, Johnson said in a telephone interview. "Believe it or not, I got to know the coaches better than I would have if I'd still been there."
 Johnson moved to San Diego after going to San Diego State on a recruiting trip. The recruiting trip came early in Johnson's senior year at Carver High School in Montgomery. He had just found out he lived in another school district and was going to have to transfer to Lanier High School. But if he transferred, he would be ineligible to play.
 A judge in San Diego offered him a place to live, and he moved.
 "Finally, I just decided Alabama was the place for me."
 But, he said, he's going to the University of Southern California this weekend for a visit.

Gay, Chapman Expect Stiff Competition When MHS, DHS Run

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
 They're headed in different directions, but both Bob Gay and Stan Chapman expect to find the same things when they arrive.

Gay, track coach for the Monterey Plainsmen, will take his club south to compete in the West Texas Relays in Odessa today and Saturday while Dunbar and coach Chapman go north to a meet in Hereford.

Both teams were bridesmaids in last weekend's Lubbock Invitational, Monterey taking second in the Class 5A division and Dunbar going third in the 4As, and both coaches see little chance of improving that team finish this weekend.

In other track action involving city teams, Lubbock will enter the Amarillo Invitational while Estacado joins Monterey in Odessa and Coronado keeps Dunbar company in Hereford.

In girls' meets, Monterey, Lubbock and Estacado will compete at Hereford while Coronado and Dunbar will try their luck at Amarillo.

"I think our kids performed about as well as I think they can; they ran pretty well," said Gay, whose club trailed champion Amarillo Tascosa by 15 points.

"They ran pretty well but we don't have much depth."

Chapman echoed Gay's sentiments. "We'll be up there with the big boys this weekend," he said. "Plainview, Hereford, Coronado.

"We don't really expect to win the thing but hopefully we'll hold our own. There's just no way to win it, we don't have enough depth."

Gay's Plainsmen scored 138 points in the Lubbock Invitational, despite taking wins in only three events. Charles Dent won the 110 high hurdles, Ian Hyslop won the high jump and the Plainsmen got first-place points from their mile relay team.

"We got lots of seconds," explained the coach. "We had seconds in the quarter (Marty Bubany), in the intermediate hurdles (Steve David), in the half (Gordon Burns), in the mile (Al Rodriguez) and in the two-mile (David Stanz)."

The Panthers finished second in the Class 4A division, but were almost 50 points behind meet-winning Estacado, which claimed eight individual championships.

Dunbar got event wins from Ignacio Davila in the mile and Ken Idom in the pole vault. But Chapman says a couple of cogs in the Dunbar machine weren't there last Saturday.

"I think we turned out pretty well, considering," he said. "We've got a couple of improvements to make, we didn't have a couple of guys who could've helped us. It's hard to say, but I bet both of them would have made maybe 12 points that early in the season."

The two who missed the Lubbock Invite were Barry Pillow, who runs in the 100, the mile relay and the sprint relay, and Fabian Garcia, who competes in the half-mile and the mile relay.

"That really hurts us, because we're young anyway," Chapman said. "We've only got two seniors. Hopefully we'll be pretty good next year. This year we're just trying to stay in the meets and improve as we go along."

Fidrych Finds Trouble In Mound Effort

By The Associated Press
 Mark Fidrych, who has had almost nothing but disappointment since he captured the imagination of baseball fans in 1976, had more of the same Thursday.

"The Bird" was clipped for six runs in the first inning, including a home run by Russ Kuntz, as the Chicago White Sox downed the Detroit Tigers 13-5 in a

Phillies' Drug Case Closes

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — State investigators have concluded that although several Philadelphia Phillies players probably lied when they denied receiving amphetamines from a Reading doctor, there is insufficient evidence to warrant prosecuting them for perjury. The Bulletin reported today.

The newspaper, which quoted unnamed law enforcement sources, said a final decision on further prosecutions is up to state Attorney General LeRoy Zimmerman.

The sources said, however, it is "a reasonable assumption" that no more action would be taken against the players or Dr. Patrick A. Mazza, a physician for the Phillies' farm club at Reading.

Charges against Mazza, 56, and two other Reading men — Robert Leon Masley, 54, and his son, Robert M. Masley, 24 — were dismissed Feb. 4 by a district magistrate after former Phillies' pitcher Randy Lerch confirmed that he had received some drugs from Mazza.

Investigators had found prescriptions written by Mazza in the names of Lerch, first baseman Pete Rose, pitcher Larry Christenson, Phillie broadcaster Tim McCarver, pitcher Steve Carlton, left fielder Greg Luzinski and his wife, Jean, and Sheena Bowa, wife of shortstop Larry Bowa.

Rose, Christenson and McCarver denied receiving drugs prescribed in their names by Mazza at the doctor's preliminary hearing. Carlton denied receiving the drugs in a statement given to investigators, the newspaper said.

After the charges were dismissed, Zimmerman ordered a review of the case to determine if perjury charges should be filed against any of the players, or if charges should be refilled against Mazza, who admitted prescribing drugs for the players without examining them.

Disgruntled Coach Hears Boos, Quits

PASCO, Wash. (AP) — Pasco High School basketball coach Dick King said when the Bulldog fans booed after he put his son into the lineup, it was the last straw.

Saving he is a father first and a coach second, King resigned his coaching post Tuesday night at a Pasco School Board meeting.

King, who had two sons on the Pasco varsity and another on the junior varsity this season, said fan pressure made it impossible "to coach my own sons with the same objectivity that I've been able to give to everyone else's sons."

King said the criticism from fans started when his eldest son, Richard — a member of the No. 2 State AAA tourney team in 1979 — made the Bulldog squad as a sophomore in 1977.

King, who has a 75-53 record in five years at Pasco, said he decided to quit after a recent game with Richland. When he put his son Jeff into the fray, a chorus of boos greeted the senior. After the game, Jeff quit the team.

"That was the point, as far as I'm concerned, when I made up my mind what I was going to do," King said. He will remain as the school's athletic director.

REAGAN TO 'PITCH'

CINCINNATI (AP) — President Reagan officially will open the 1981 major league baseball season by throwing out the first ball at the Cincinnati Reds' traditional season opener, the National League club announced Thursday.

A Reds' spokesman said the club had been notified by Gov. James Rhodes' office that Reagan has accepted an invitation to perform the opening ceremony at the game April 8 between the Reds and the World Champion Philadelphia Phillies.

Fidrych, Rookie of the Year with a 19-9 record in 1976 but injury-plagued since then, gave up six earned runs on five hits and two walks.

Elsewhere in Florida and Arizona, rookie Reid Nichols hit a grand slam homer with two outs in the 12th inning to lift the Boston Red Sox to a 9-5 decision over the Minnesota Twins.

Jeff Newman cracked a two-run homer and pitchers Rick Langford, Ernie Camacho and David Beard combined on a three-hitter as the Oakland A's blanked the Milwaukee Brewers 2-0.

Larry Parrish's three-run homer highlighted a five-run sixth inning that carried the Montreal Expos to a 5-1 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Danny Heep overcame Toronto's 2-1 lead with a two-run double in the sixth inning, giving the Houston Astros a 3-2 victory over the Blue Jays.

Wayne Garland allowed only two hits in four scoreless innings and Alan Bannister and Pat Kelly collected three hits apiece as the Cleveland Indians bombed the Seattle Mariners 7-2.

Claudell Washington, Chris Chambliss and Bob Horner knocked in two runs apiece to lead the Atlanta Braves to an 8-2 triumph over the New York Yankees.

Bowden Jumps To Defense Of Accused Gridders

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — "I know what I did, I know it was wrong," says Ken Lanier, one of six Florida State University football players who have been charged with buying stolen televisions and stereos.

Lanier, 21, an Associated Press second-team All America offensive tackle, issued the written statement Thursday night to the Tallahassee Democrat with the consent of his lawyer, Murray Wadsworth.

The senior from Columbus, Ohio, said his conscience compelled him to make a public statement.

"All I can say now is that I made a terrible mistake which I will always deeply regret, and I have made a personal commitment to somehow, some day, some way make it up to you all," Lanier wrote.

"To the FSU fans and supporters, I beg you to please not condemn the truly great Seminole athletic program because of the mistakes of a few."

Meanwhile, Florida State coach Bobby Bowden went to bat for the six arrested players after hearing their side of the story.

"I'm more opinionated about it now," Bowden said Thursday after talking to the arrested players, including All-American noseguard Ron Simmons. He initially had said little other than the fact he was "disappointed."

"I feel much better about them and I feel I'd like to fight for them if I could," Bowden said.

The coach, whose Seminoles have been ranked among the nation's top six teams the past two seasons, also charged that the news media have blown the arrests out of proportion.

Simmons, 21, a senior from Warner Robins, Ga., Lanier and four other players were charged Wednesday with being accessories after the fact to grand theft. Police say the players loaded the stereos and televisions into a car from a department store loading dock.

The coach said Simmons has always been a model player.

"He's never been a discipline case here. So he bought a television set at a good bargain? When I was at that age I might have made the same mistake," Bowden told The Associated Press.

A seventh person, Robert Harris, 19, a former player, was charged with the more serious crimes of grand theft and dealing and trafficking in stolen property.

Police charged that Harris stole $27,000 worth of merchandise from a Maas Brothers department store where he worked in Tallahassee and sold some of the items to the players. He lived in the same apartment complex as the team.

Besides Simmons and Lanier, accessory charges were filed against Sam Platt, 22, a senior from Jacksonville who set two team rushing records last season with 188 yards in a single game and six 100-yard games in a year; Eric Riley, 18, a freshman wide receiver from Fort Myers tabbed as a future star; Herbert Harp, a sophomore defensive tackle from Winter Garden, and Tommy Young, a junior running back from Lake City.

Bowden charged that the press has overplayed the story, in effect convicting the players without a trial.

He specifically complained about a news report that he said implied that Simmons had been put in jail and was responsible for the full $27,000 worth of stolen merchandise.

All of the players were released on their own recognizance and police said they recovered about $10,000 in merchandise from the apartments of Harris and the players.

Platt and Harp mistakenly went to the Leon County Courthouse on Thursday where they reacted angrily to attempts by news photographers to take their picture. State Attorney Don Modesitt said the players won't be arraigned until March 23 at the earliest.

New Boston Hurler Tanana Adjusts Style

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — Once a feared flame-thrower, southpaw Frank Tanana is looking forward to a new "career" as a pitcher with the Boston Red Sox as he approaches his 28th birthday.

"He's a real pitcher out there now, no longer just a thrower," Boston manager Ralph Houk said Thursday after Tanana blanked the Minnesota Twins on three singles for three innings in his 1981 debut.

"I used to think I had to strike everybody out, but now I know I just have to get them out," said Tanana, who went to three balls on just one batter while throwing only 36 pitches.

Blessed with better than average control, Tanana has accepted the fact that arm and shoulder problems, first encountered in 1977, no longer permit him the luxury of regular use of a blazing fast ball, which enabled him to become a strikeout king.

"Every now and then I can still bring it a little when I get into a jam, but now I'm mixing up my pitches more," said Tanana, a seven-year veteran acquired by the Red Sox in the deal which sent slugger Fred Lynn to the California Angels in January.

"I remember him when he'd just blow the ball by hitters," Houk said.

"Now he sets them up, popping one by them every now and then. He's a real pitcher now because he sets up the hitters with varying speeds on his other pitches."

"I had to make a decision last year," Tanana said. "I got off to a bad (2-6) start, so I started going to my other pitches."

"It's definitely more work. You have to work harder to set up the hitters."

"You can't make a mistake and get away with it, like when I was throwing hard consistently. It's living more dangerously. But when I threw hard, I didn't have my good stuff in the ninth inning.

This way, I've got the same stuff in the ninth as I have in the first."

After abandoning fulltime use of his fast ball with the Angels last June, Tanana went on to compile a 9-6 record and a 3.33 earned run average the rest of the way, finishing 11-12 with a 4.15 ERA.

Tanana, who has earned a great deal of money in real estate investments in southern California, has only one year on his contract acquired by the Red Sox. He earns much less than major-league counterparts, although above the $200,000 salary mark.

He is reluctant to discuss his impending free agency.

"I'm not going to think about it," he said. "I want to show what I can do. After the season, we'll think about a new contract. I'm just looking forward to pitching in Boston. The future will take care of itself."

Regina Hillier's Bowling Wins Bluebonnet Crown

By JAN BACON
A-J Bowling Correspondent

Regina Hillier of Amarillo recaptured the Bluebonnet Queens Tournament title in Austin last Sunday. The 23-year-old right-hander averaged 207.9 in the final 14 head-to-head matches to emerge as a repeat winner in the prestigious scratch tourney.

The Queens, the premier tournament for the state of Texas, fielded 207 entrants on Saturday for the eight-game qualifying round. The field was cut to 36 for the semifinals on Saturday night with the 14 finalists taking the lanes Sunday. The women bowled continuously for six hours, and the eventual winner wasn't decided until the final match.

Gloria Alderman, of Fort Worth, last year's Queen titlist, finished in second place and Kathy LaCroy, also of Fort Worth, the leader during most of the final day, slipped to third place during the final round.

Mrs. Hillier captured the Queens' crown in 1979 when Lubbock hosted the tournament. Her maturity played a deciding factor this year as she kept a steady pace through the finals, winning 11 of her 14 matches.

She finished the 1979-80 season with a 213 average, ranking her first among women in Texas and sixth nationally. Mrs. Hillier works part time at Amarillo Bowl while she is completing her work on her Masters degree in history at West Texas State. And with her bowling credentials of the past year, she is a prime candidate for the Texas Woman Bowler of the Year.

Lubbock had eight entrants competing in Austin. They were Lubbock WBA's All-Events champion Betty Payne, Emma Ward, Brenda Snook, Billie White, Mary Lee Galey, Robbie Sexton, Jan Woolsey and Jan Bacon.

The Lubbock Women's Bowling Association will have 158 team entries into their city tournament. There will be 317 sets of doubles, 634 singles and 569 all-events entrants to compete for city titles. Those numbers make a record turnout in these categories. The handicapped and classed tourney will begin March 28.

Sports In Brief

Tech Sends Trio To AIAW

POCATELLO, Idaho (Special) — Three members of the Texas Tech track and field team will be among the competitors gathered here for the AIAW Indoor National Championships today and Saturday.

Veronica Flowers will compete in the 60-yard hurdles, Faecia Freeman will run the 200-yard dash and Sharon Moultrie will try for the long jump title.

Miss Flowers recorded her best time of the year in 8.14 in the hurdles earlier in the year while Miss Freeman's 200 best is a 35.3. Miss Moultrie vaulted 19-2 for her long jump best.

"This will be the first time that I've taken a group of athletes to nationals," said coach Jarvis Scott. "I'm looking forward to them doing a good job individually. They will have to stand on their own this time, because they won't have the relay teams to back them up."

Tracy Caulkins Picks School

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Sullivan Award-winning swimmer Tracy Caulkins says she will attend the University of Florida, where she will enroll as a freshman.

Caulkins, 18, said Thursday she will continue to swim during the summer with the Nashville Aquatic Club but will join her sister, Amy, at Florida this fall.

Earlier, Caulkins had announced that she was considering three schools: Texas, Stanford and Florida.

Raiders To Dive In NCAAs

LINCOLN, Neb. (Special) — Texas Tech divers Richie O'Neill and Gregg Carson will compete in the NCAA Regional Qualifying Meet that begins today at the University of Nebraska.

O'Neill qualified in both the one-and three-meter events, while Carson will compete in the one-meter diving.

O'Neill finished ninth last year in the three-meter event.

The top eight divers from the regional meet will go on to Austin March 26-29 for the NCAA Championships.

LCC Baseball Begins Stand

The Lubbock Christian College baseball team began a heavily-weighted homestand with a double-header against Cameron State at 3 p.m. today at Chaparral Stadium.

The Chaparrals, 9-14, recently lost five of six games to Texas Tech. A return to a majority of NAIA opponents should help coach Larry Hays' downtrodden pitching staff, which is giving up an average of almost eight earned runs per game.

LCC also plays Cameron in a double-header beginning at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Those four games launch a stretch in which LCC plays 30 games in 20 days, all in Chaparral Stadium.

Other teams set to visit the Chaps are William Jewell (Mo.), Dallas Baptist, Southeastern Oklahoma, Mary Hardin Baylor, Greenville (Ill.) and Texas-El Paso.

Local Scorekeepers To Meet

Persons interested in keeping score at City of Lubbock league and tournament softball games are invited to attend an organizational meeting March 23 at 7:30 p.m. at Hodges Community Center, located at 41st and University.

The meeting will cover local rules, regulations and procedures involved in a scorekeeper's duties.

For more information concerning softball scorekeeping contact the Parks and Recreation office at 762-6411, ext. 2669 or 2670.

Odessa Schedules Softball

ODESSA (Special) — The Country Burger Restaurant here in Odessa will sponsor a Class C Softball tournament on March 28-29. The entry fee is $75 per team with trophies going to the first through fourth place teams. In addition, individual trophies will go to the players on the top three finishing teams.

Interested players should contact Arthur Molina at (915) 333-2459 or Don Coates at (915) 366-0945 after 6 p.m. Ten players will be named to the all-tournament team, an MVP trophy will be awarded and there will be a home run derby. For more details contact the Country Burger in Odessa at (915) 333-5907.

Davidson Hires Cage Coach

DAVIDSON, N.C. (AP) — Davidson College named John Kresse as its head basketball coach Thursday, giving him a five-year contract on a promise to put the Wildcats' recruiting program on a national basis.

Kresse, a 37-year-old Brooklyn native, led the College of Charleston to a 25-5 record this year. He has acquired a reputation as a good salesman for his program as head coach at Charleston and as an assistant to St. John's Lou Carne-secca.

Kresse succeeds Eddie Biedenbach, who was fired after Davidson lost a first-round game in the Southern Conference post-season tournament. The Wildcats, 13-14 for the season, had finished in a three-way tie for first place during the conference season.

"I like shirt-to-shirt, man-to-man basketball," Kresse said. "You'll see us playing that at least 25 to 30 minutes every game. I like fast break, but I also want our players so attuned to our offense that we know who's gonna get the shot and when. I'm a disciplinarian. I take no baloney."

Regional Events Include Area Entries

If the boys' basketball teams on the South Plains are going to follow their girl counterparts' example and win four of the five state championships, they're going to have to first make it through the regional tournaments which start today.

The Region I Class 5A tournament will be held at Midland College; the 3A and 2A tournaments are being played at Coronado High School; and the Texan Dome on the campus of South Plains College in Levelland will serve as the site for the Class 1A event.

District 1-4A winner Canyon, which slipped past Snyder 58-56 Tuesday night in bi-district action, will play Cleburne; a 62-43 winner over Iowa Park, at 8 p.m. tonight at Wichita Falls Rider High School for a berth in the state 4A tournament.

In the Class 5A tournament, Midland will take on Fort Worth Dunbar at 6:30 p.m. and the battle between Pampa and El Paso Eastwood will follow at 8:30 p.m. The finals begin at 2 p.m. Saturday.

Midland, 32-4, defeated Denton 67-53 in bi-district play to earn a regional berth, while Dunbar, also 32-4, got by Arlington 57-54. In that Midland victory, Herb Johnson poured in a game-high 31 points.

Pampa nipped District 4-5A champion Plainview 53-52 in Canyon Tuesday night for its chance to play Eastwood in the semifinals. Eastwood was also a one-point winner in bi-district, taking a 31-30 victory over rival Burges. Pampa enters the game with a 23-11 record.

The semifinal battle between Coahoma and Slaton at 8 p.m. Friday will open the Class 3A tourney in Lubbock. Perryton will play Coleman in the other semifinal game at 9:30 p.m.

Coahoma, the District 6-3A champion, defeated Kermit 68-53 in bi-district to run its record to 21-9. Slaton knocked off seventh-ranked Childress 65-61 Monday night for its first regional tourney berth. The Tigers have a 20-11 record.

In a battle of the top two teams in the state rankings Monday, No. 1 Perryton squeezed by second-ranked Dimmitt 59-58. Perryton will take its 29-4 record into today's semifinal contest. Coleman, 33-1 with its only loss coming to Sweetwater, whipped Wylie 50-37 in bi-district play. Finals start at 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

Tech Women Split Games

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (Special) — Left fielder Kim Mauzy singled home two runs to cap a six-run sixth inning Thursday as Texas Tech downed host New Mexico State 7-4 in the first day of the Aggies' Roadrunner Invitational Softball Tournament.

Tech is now 2-3 in the spring half of its schedule and 11-22 overall.

Morton, ranked fourth in the state rankings, will take its 28-10 record into today's Class 2A tourney opener. The Indians clipped Marfa 61-60 in bi-district Tuesday.

Shallowater, which knocked off third-ranked Vega in bi-district, will tangle with Crowell, a 77-63 victor over Winters.

NBC Trying To Regain Audience

By PETER J. BOYER
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — Johnny Carson has rejected a request from NBC to extend his "Tonight Show" to 90 minutes to counter the growing success of "Fridays," network sources say.
 NBC's request was an attempt to rebuild its competitive standing in the lucrative late-night programming arena. Carson's refusal, not entirely unexpected, led NBC to develop a new late-Friday program to compete with "Fridays."
 "Midnight Special," in its eighth year on NBC, will be canceled.
 The new NBC program, designed to attract the coveted 18-to-34-year-old crowd now going to "Fridays," probably will be unveiled for NBC affiliates over the weekend, said the sources, who asked not to be identified. Affiliates will be in New York for the National Association of Television Programming Executives convention.
 Ironically, the show NBC is launching will counter an ABC program that was invented to siphon off some of the popularity of an NBC show, "Saturday Night Live."
 Further, "Saturday Night Live" isn't even on the air now except in repeat, having taken a month off to recuperate and rebuild after a disastrous start this season.

 This peculiar scenario would have seemed untenable to NBC two years ago, when its "Saturday Night Live" was the prince of late-night weekend television, virtually unchallenged in its grip on the valuable but elusive youth audience.
 It still would have seemed an unlikely circumstance to NBC bosses last year, when ABC forwarded "Fridays," which was dismissed as a cheap imitation of "Saturday Night Live." "SNL," while tiring a bit from an aficionado's view, was more broadly popular than ever.
 But "SNL" creator Lorne Michaels and the entire cast quit the show after last season. His successor, Jean Doumanian, delivered what critics considered an inferior version, and "SNL" began to fade.
 Miss Doumanian quit the show this week and was replaced by Dick Ebersol, who helped develop the original "Saturday Night Live."
 In the meantime, "Fridays" has grown, in quality and audience level. Last month, for the first time, "Fridays" surpassed "Saturday Night Live" in the ratings.
 Even though the two shows aren't in head-to-head competition, they do compete for advertisers. It's reported that advertisers seeking to reach the younger, late-night audiences are now spending their money on "Fridays."

 "Saturday Night Live" has reportedly slashed its commercial rates in half, dropping rates from $60,000 to $30,000 per half-minute.
 Thus, the restructuring of "Saturday Night Live."
 In the meantime, NBC wanted a program that could compete directly with "Fridays." The network's first impulse was to ask Carson to extend his Friday night show by 30 minutes.
 Carson's attorney, Henry Bushkin, told NBC that Carson would not go back to 90 minutes on Friday because he feared "it would confuse his audience," an NBC source said. It may be remembered that Carson spent more than a year in intense negotiation with NBC to reduce "The Tonight Show" to 60 minutes, a hard-fought point he eventually won.
 NBC has been trying to broaden the appeal of "Midnight Special," a rock 'n' roll show that followed Carson on Fridays. Various new formats were tried and considered, finally leading the show's host, Wolfman Jack, to quit the show last week.
 "Midnight Special" may remain on air until the new NBC Friday series, as yet untitled, is ready for broadcast this spring. Ebersol, meanwhile, will be trying to find the old magic for "Saturday Night Live," and is to be attempting to convince some of the original cast members — who have had varying degrees of success since leaving the show — to return to the fold, though not necessarily in on-camera roles.

Free Radios Increase In Belgium

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The last time anyone counted, there were 130 private radio stations operating in this nation of 10 million people — a remarkable number in a country where private broadcasting is illegal.
 "Because the government won't act, we are headed for anarchy in the airwaves," Frans Grootjans, a Conservative legislator, complained the other day.
 He has introduced a bill to legalize the private broadcasters — or "free radios" as they're known here — formally ending a state monopoly the government has defended tooth and nail.
 As recently as 1979, private radio broadcasting was only for those quick enough to elude the law or brave enough to risk confiscation of their transmitting equipment. Police used to regularly raid private radio stations — usually located in unmarked homes and offices — cart away all the equipment and fine anyone in sight.
 "There has been a growing tendency at the political level in this country to legalize the free radios," said a spokesman for Communications Minister Freddy Willockx, explaining the sudden end to the raids.
 Although the government apparently is willing to change the current legislation, it has taken no formal steps in that direction. In the meantime, starting up still illegal private radio stations has become something of a growth industry.
 Today, police will act only if a station interferes with air traffic control or police radio, and often officers simply will ask station operators to adjust their transmitters or use another frequency.
 Nowhere is the pirating of the government-owned airwaves more evident than in Brussels, a city of about 1.1 million, where at last count 30 private broadcasters are crowding the unused area on the FM band.
 Those stations, and others elsewhere in the country, broadcast up to 24 hours a day in Flemish and French, two official languages in Belgium. At least two stations feature shows in English.
 Topics range from open line talk shows to high-octane punk music, from interviews to lengthy local newscasts.
 Most of the stations have limited transmitting power — in some cases reaching only about seven miles. Two stations can be heard throughout the country.
 "We provide counter information," said a spokesman for Radio Scorpio in Leuven, a university town 14 miles east of Brussels. The comment reflects the general dissatisfaction among private broadcasters with the quality of programming on the state-run BRT-RTBF network.
 All pirate broadcasters shun commercials — which are illegal on all Belgian radio and television — although some eventually would like to have them as a source of revenue. "There's no point in being masochistic," commented one.
 So far, the country's private stations have been able to operate with the help of donations and fund-raising events. Some stations, like Radio Contact — Belgium's largest pirate station — "plug" records. "This yields up to 100,000 francs ($3,000) a month," said Georges Neuckens, a former Radio Contact disc jockey.
 The sudden boom in free enterprise broadcasting has drowned out American Forces Network radio, which broadcasts from Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe or SHAPE, 40 miles south of Brussels.
 A favorite with thousands of Americans and countless other foreigners in Belgium, AFN offers U.S. radio news reports and entertainment round the clock. But in the past year, the station has been swamped with letters from listeners complaining they can't receive it anymore because of the many pirate stations competing for space on or near the frequency AFN-SHAPE has been using since 1967.
 The private radio stations have taken a big bite out of the BRT-RTBF listenership. According to a recent poll, almost 20 percent of Belgians listen to the private stations. In the 18-24 age group, this figure is almost 40 percent, the poll showed.

Little On Cleveland's Hit List

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Rich Little, who zapped the city of Cleveland during President Reagan's Inaugural Gala, is catching hell and puts the blame on his writers and Bob Hope, a former Cleveland resident.

As one of the stars of the Jan. 19 nationally telecast gala, Little delivered the fateful line: "Mr. President, how do you plan to keep Russia from invading Poland? I would rename it Cleveland. Nobody wants to go there."

The response from that fair city on the banks of Lake Erie was immediate and unanimous. Comedian Little became No. 1 on the municipality's hit list. Little absorbed the impact of his irreverent words the following night at the Kennedy Center inaugural ball. He ducked into a reception room for a drink and to escape autograph hounds.

"I no sooner got in the door," Little said, "When the people fell on me like a plague of locusts. It turned out to be the Ohio hospitality room. The place was full of Cleveland people."

"The wife of Cleveland's mayor was there. So was Cleveland's congresswoman, Mary Okar. I thought she was going to give me a judo chop to the neck."

Little was flailed by the Cleveland media. The city's letter writers buried Little under 15,000 indignant missives.

A Cleveland named Jeffrey Dean sent Little a letter, co-signed by a couple of radio station representatives comprising the "Make It Up To Cleveland, Rich Little Committee," demanding more than a simple apology.

They want Little to give a benefit in Ohio's largest city.

Last week Little apologized to Cleveland on the Johnny Carson show. Before going on the air, NBC told him that if he planned to abuse Cleveland again, the network's affiliate there would pull the Carson show off the air.

Little said, "People of Cleveland, I'm sorry. It was just a joke."

Then he added that he would like to appear there again if he could get a 21-gun salute with assurances the guns wouldn't be aimed at him.

"I've played The Front Row Theater in Cleveland a couple of times and packed the house," Little said. "It's a gorgeous theater and I like the town. But for some reason, Cleveland always manages to get a laugh."

"Maybe Bob Hope is responsible for it. He grew up in Cleveland and used to make jokes about it. And if you researched it, you'd discover that Cleveland is the favorite target of comedy writers — which happened in my case."

"If it were up to me, I'd have used Buffalo or Burbank. Both those cities take a beating from comedians. Carson hardly lets a week go by without ringing Burbank about something because that's where the show comes from.

"Some communities, like Burbank, bask in the attention, even if it is negative. It's better than not being mentioned at all."

"When a comedian comes to a town he asks about the local civic disgrace and it always get a laugh — the red light district, lovers lane or municipal dump."

"I've been in a lot worse cities than Cleveland. But I guess the citizens finally said, 'I'm mad as hell and I'm not going to take it anymore.'"

Little is amazed at the depth of civic pride in America. No matter what is mentioned on a talk show, for instance, there is a smattering of applause from the audience.

"The minute you walk off a plane, even before you've seen a place, the natives want to know how you like their city," he said. "People take pride in their community no matter where it is or how bad it is."

"Most people have a great sense of humor unless the joke is leveled at them. If you insult their city it's like insulting their wives."

"I don't burst with pride over my native city, Ottawa, Canada. But I don't want to get Ottawa mad at me too. It's a beautiful place, I just wouldn't want to live there. Nobody ever mentions Ottawa on comedy shows."

Philadelphia bore up under the abuse of civic jokes for years, thanks in no small part to native son W. C. Fields who said he'd like his epitaph to read: "All in all, I'd rather be in Philadelphia."

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Nominations for Some Good and Not So Good Guys.

Rose Bigman for remembering, with an annual memoir notice in "Variety" the passing of her former boss, Walter Winchell, in 1972. To those of you who no longer are younger than springtime, Miss Bigman was known as "My Girl Friday" to the daddy of the Broadway columnists — our idol and friend. If every entertainer, chorus girl, producer, athlete and assorted good, bad, famous and unknown guys and gals for whom Walter ever did a favor remembered Winchell as Rose does, "Variety" each Feb. 20th would be thicker than the Congressional Record — and better read!

Another of the Good guys is popular actor Burt Reynolds, who, Mayor Maynard Jackson of Atlanta acknowledges, turned over a personal check for $10,000 to a fund devoted to intensifying the investigation of the murder so some 20 black children.

Add to the Good Guys 80-year-old Congressman Claude Pepper — still going like 60 — speaking for the beleaguered Senior Citizens Society for suggesting to Washington that President Reagan declare the birthdate of Cuban hero Jose Marti (the George Washington of Cuba) a national holiday. This would pour gallons of glue to mend some badly tangled and broken bonds between the Yankee and Latin segments of our population. If such a law is written, the dedication might be staged on the hallowed steps of the nation's Capitol with photographs showing Reagan shaking hands with another veteran, movie star Cesar Romero — who happens to be the grandson of Jose Marti!

Now Here Is a Nomination for the Bad Guy Department: Exiled Ugandan dictator Idi Amin, who, according to a report in Jet magazine stated, from Saudi Arabia: "I must regain Uganda or die." Whether that's a threat or a promise, even the constituents he liquidated would rise from their shallow graves and vote to welcome him unanimously back to their midst six feet under in East Africa.

Let's conclude with a hurrah for Good Guy Lawrence Welk, who, in the last nine years of his "own" TV network, has made more than twice the world's population (10,300,000,000 people) happier people playing his melodies!

Send your questions to Hy Gardner, "Glad You Asked That," care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 19620, Irvine, Calif. 92714. Marilyn and Hy Gardner will answer as many questions as they can in their column, but the volume of mail makes personal replies impossible.

Listener Hits Announcer

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (UPI) — A religious radio broadcast on WPCE was suddenly interrupted by cries for help from the announcer who said he was being attacked by an angry listener opposed to the programming.

Police, alerted by listeners, arrived at the station this week and charged Wilson Williams Jr., 27, of Newport News, with destroying public property and assaulting announcer Byron Sneed.

Police said Sneed, 24, was on the air when Wilson apparently became violent because the announcer refused to air a paid tape broadcast that dealt with alternative religions. Authorities were summoned by listeners who heard Sneed's cry for help.

"He wanted me to stop the broadcast that was on the air," Sneed said. "I told him I couldn't take it off and put his on. I told him calmly, but he wouldn't listen. He wasn't rational at all."

Sneed said he tried to call police, but the suspect yanked the telephone from the wall and attacked him with it. He said he blocked most of the blows with his arm. But unable to call police, Sneed broadcast a plea for help.

"I had to be rather slick about it," Sneed said. "I kept talking to him and I told him all the people listening would call the police and have them come to 1400 Columbus Ave. in Portsmouth if he didn't stop."

Escaped Bull Roams Campus

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Michigan State University is nicknamed "Moo U" because of its extensive dairy programs, but that didn't stop a home-sick, half-ton bull from catching students and school officials unprepared.

Ah Angus bull went on a 1 1/2-hour rampage this week on the MSU campus, and it smashed a police car, bowled over a student and wrought general havoc until harried security officers turned cow-pokes and corralled him.

The rambunctious, 1,100-lb. bull — valued at $5,000 — was on the MSU campus for an Angus Show and Sale planned for this weekend.

He escaped while being transferred from one trailer to another, dragging a herdsman 60 feet and beginning a wild odyssey that took him around the entire campus, police said.

At one point, the bull knocked down a female student who saw him but was apparently too startled to move. The unidentified student was not hurt, authorities said.

Other students coming out of classes ran around the bull, hampering efforts to tail the animal and find a place to trap him.

East Lansing police and campus security, not used to such roundups, finally cornered the wayward bull near tennis courts by employing cruisers and a school tow truck.

Undaunted, the bull leaped over two campus squad cars and caused several hundred dollars in damage.

Gerontologist Defends Needs Of Aged

NEW YORK (UPI) — Look who's up at bat for millions of aging Americans: No less than Dr. Alex Comfort, internationally known gerontologist and author of "The Joy Of Sex."

"Old people become crazy for three reasons — because they were crazy when young, because they have an illness, or because we drive them crazy," Comfort said at a medical meeting attended by more than 7,000 doctors in New Orleans. Speaking at the annual scientific assembly of the American Academy of Family Physicians and the World Conference on Family Medicine, Comfort claimed misconceptions American society imposes on the elderly account for 75 percent of the "aging" seen in the nation.

And the remaining 25 percent? He alluded that is related to physical aging. As he sizes up the scene, misconceptions lead to imaginary or imposed aging. He attributed the misconceptions to folklore and prejudices.

In his report, "Ageism and Healthy Age," Comfort said:

"If we insist that there is a group of people who, on a fixed calendar basis, cease to be people and become unintelligent, asexual, unemployable and crazy, the people so designated will be under pressure to be unintelligent, asexual, unemployable and crazy."

To fend off the ageism and its harmful stereotyping, Comfort said society must fix up its attitude toward the elderly — while the medical profession does a little homework in geriatrics.

"Once the attitudinal change has been made and ill health in old age is seen to require diagnostic explanation, there is no mystique about geriatrics," he told fellow doctors.

Comfort said they will start being looked on as they are — intelligent, employable, sane human beings who are captivated by a wide-range of pursuits, including sexual ones.

To fellow doctors, Comfort said: "Much of the neglect of geriatrics arises from unspoken ageism — feelings that the old are naturally infirm, their infirmities biologically ordained, their intelligence shares in the decline and they are naturally uninteresting to doctors."

"And, until Medicare, they were judged financially unprofitable."

Comfort is consultant, geriatric psychiatry, Brentwood VA hospital and associate professor at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Formerly he was head of the Medical Research Council, Research on Aging group at University College, London.

In a related exhibit at the conference, treatment of psychiatric illness in the elderly came in for some criticism.

Dr. Alvin J. Levinson, exhibitor, said many of the illnesses can be treated successfully with appropriate medication.

However, he claimed in practice the medications frequently are used to "control rather than cure" mentally ill elderly people.

He said this "suboptimal practice" produces insignificant clinical improvements and unnecessary adverse reactions. He said this is largely due to gaps in physician education.

Levinson is associate professor and chief of the section on geriatric psychiatry at the University of Texas Health Science Center, Houston. He also is a lecturer in psychopharmacology and aging, Baylor College of Medicine.

U.S. Exporting Technology To Japan

RANCHO CORDOVA, Calif. (UPI) — When Japanese engineers fired a satellite into orbit last month there were loud cheers, not just in Tokyo, but from people 5,000 miles away in Rancho Cordova, Calif.

The Californians were cheering for their jobs.

About 100 employees of Aerojet Services Co. and Aerojet Liquid Rocket Co. in Sacramento County built the second stage propulsion system that helped toss the satellite into the sky from Tanegashima Island off the southeast coast of Japan.

The Japanese have orbited more than 20 satellites in the last decade for peaceful uses like broadcasting, weather prediction and space research.

Since 1975 they have combined Japanese and American knowhow, with Japan buying the American input under a unique agreement the two countries reached in 1969.

For the United States, the deal has created jobs whose number is hard to estimate and tens of millions of dollars in exports.

Since 1969, Japan has spent about $2.9 billion on space. The government's annual budget for it grows yearly. It reached $445 million in the 1980-81 Japanese fiscal year ending last March 31.

Almost half the money is spent on satellites and launch vehicles, and a substantial share of this goes to the United States.

Besides Aerojet, Thiokol Corp., of Ogden, Utah, and McDonnell Douglas of Huntington Beach, Calif., work with the Japanese on design and building of launch vehicles.

General Electric, Ford Aerospace of Palo Alto, Calif., and Hughes of Long Beach, Calif. figure in satellite construction and design.

The parts business filters down to a wide range of subcontractors.

It all would have been unthinkable at the end of World War II but within a few years, the former enemies had become allies, and Washington no longer feared a Japanese military revival.

In the late 1960s, the Nixon administration perked up its ears at reports that scientists at Tokyo University were trying to put tiny satellites into orbit, and offered help.

Scallop Producer Angry At Bureaucracy

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — scallop sneis on a federal "wetland," Florida's largest producer of scallops says he's leaving.

"They're playing God and putting people out of jobs," said Bill Lambert of the order from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Southern Seafood Inc., which does a $7 million-a-year business, has been threatened with a $50,000-a-day fine unless it stops polluting the "waters of the United States" with scallop shells.

The Corps says Lambert's dumping ground, which borders the Banana River, is a federally protected wetland. Lambert says there's no water on it.

"The dad-blamed bureaucrats want me to roll over and play dead, but I'm not about to," said Lambert, who has sent 5 of his 16 boats to another of his plants in North Carolina. He will finish moving next week, he says.

Last year, his company processed 70 percent of the 1.8 million pounds of calico scallops harvested in Florida.

To show his disdain for the order, Lambert posted a sign on the sand at the dumping ground which reads: "Waters of The United States. Fishing $1."

Rats Give Clues About Epilepsy

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — Membrane destruction found near the brain cells of epileptic rats may provide a clue to the cause — and possibly prevention — of the baffling nervous system disease of epilepsy, says an Argentine scientist.

Dr. Nicholas G. Bazan, director of the Institute for Biochemical Research in Argentina, said this week the membrane damage, never pinpointed before, could be the first step in the development of epilepsy.

The chronic nervous system disease is characterized by convulsions and, often, bouts of unconsciousness.

"If we can prevent breakage of the membrane, we have a better way of controlling epilepsy and preventing brain damage," said Bazan.

"It is very specific, selective damage that leaves everything else about the cells intact. That is one of the most exciting aspects of the findings. This membrane change is specific."

The damage was first detected in epileptic rats in the Argentinian laboratories in June 1980.

Young Science Winners Also Play Instruments

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International Writer
What has one bugle, nine pianos, two guitars, two violins, one flute, two French horns, one madrigal singer and, for good measure, one composer and organist?

Some new musical group called the odd-balls? Wrong.

It's the high school science wizards — the winners in the 40th Westinghouse Science Talent Search. It turns out that a big 40 percent of the science brains are also good at music — with the talents listed at the start of this story.

Some of the young scientists play two instruments or three. One, a French horn player, toured Europe last summer, concerting with a group.

The music-science-and-math combo doesn't come as a shock to educators. The most obvious proof of a link in this century came from the man who gave the world the theory of relativity — Albert Einstein spoke the universal language of music via a violin.

A space theme, incidentally, won for one young scientist who also happens to be a musician.

John Scott Penberthy, the French horn player who toured Europe, won by inventing a galactic battle game. It demonstrated something almost as impossible to understand as Einstein's theory of relativity. That is: "interterminal interactive computer systems providing simultaneous access."

Penberthy, 15, from Mielothian, Va., says the complex computer game "might have some practical application in science and business information systems."

Other winning projects from gifted high school science students who also happen to be musicians included:

— Composer, guitarist Michael F. Reids, 18, of Springfield, Va., performed experiments to determine how plasma membrane ATPase transports molecules and particles across living cell surface boundaries. The musician-scientist, who plays football at West Springfield High, is headed for Yale and biochemistry or medicine.

— Pianist and flutist Kori Ellen Koplowitz, 17, of Hewlets, N.Y., won with a project in microbial genetics. She also is an award-winning puppeteer, headed for Harvard.

— Trombonist William Shelton Chitwood, 17, of Moulton, Ala., won by looking into how red light stimulates root growth in lettuce seeds.
