For retirement

Roberts leaves ATC in spring

Gen. John W. Roberts, commander of Air Training Command, has been nominated by President Carter to be placed on the retired list in his current grade, effective April 1. Secretary of Defense Harold Brown made the announcement Jan. 15 in Washington D.C. Gen. Roberts successor was not named.

One of only 13 Four-star generals on active duty with the Air Force, General Roberts assumed command of ATC in August, 1975, while still a Lieutenant-General. In March 1977, he was promoted to full general, at which time his position was elevated to four-star rank in recognition of ATC's role in National Defense.

Under Robert's command, ATC, in 1978, absorbed the Air University at Maxwell AFB, Ala., and assumed jurisdiction over Goodfellow AFB, Tx. The moves were designed to place all the Air Force's technical training, professional military education and cryptological training programs under single leadership.

Recognized throughout the Air Force for his interest in the welfare of his people, General Roberts manages more than 116,000 military and civilian personnel. His command ranks second only to Strategic Air Command in terms of total personnel assigned.

There are 15 installations, all of them in the United States, within ATC. There are ATC training detachments at virtually every U.S. Air Force Base in the world. Instructors at these detachments are responsible for keeping operational personnel proficient in their specialties.

General Roberts' military decorations include the Distinguished Service Medal with one oak leaf cluster, Legion of Merit with an oak leaf cluster

THE ROUNDUP is an unofficial newspaper published weekly in the interest of personnel at Reese Air Force Base of Air Training Command. It is published by Barron Publications, Inc., a private concern which is in no way connected with the department of the Air Force. Opinions expressed by publishers and writers are not to be considered an official expression by the Department of the Air Force. The appearance of advertising, including supplements and inserts, in the publication does not constitute an endorsement by the Department of the Air Force of the products of services advertised.

Efficiency — is serious business

We may not like to hear it but, doing "more and more" with "less and less" has become a way of life for those of us who manage and use Air Force resources.

Dollars authorized by Congress to pay for operating the Air Force and maintaining its facilities have actually declined over the past five years when measured in terms of purchasing power.

It's no surprise then that when we speak of Fiscal Year 1979 being an austere period when a tight money supply and an expanding mission will bring new challenges, managers react with "So what's new?" The fact that we at Reese have continued to meet our mission goals in the face of such austerity is a credit to the dedication of our people and skilled leadership of our managers.

Fiscal Year 1979 will present the same challenges to the Reese

Operations and Maintenance budget that the year will bring to our individual family budgets. Costs are increasing for everything we consume. The cost of parts we buy to keep our airplanes flying have, in some cases, increased by as much as 300 per cent. Materials purchased to maintain and repair our buildings cost more today than yesterday and will cost even more tomorrow. The cost of the utilities we consume will increase by a known $379,000. The pay raise that most agree was less than needed to offset the rising cost of living, nevertheless will add over $1,830,000 to the Reese payroll.

What does all this mean to those with a job to do and a mission to accomplish? It means we accept the challenge to increase productivity and efficiency while maintaining our high standards of quality. It means we find ways to reduce and avoid costs and then to share these cost reduction ideas with others.

I challenge each of you to join us in our search for ways of reducing costs. If you have an idea, there are a number of ways to share it. You can use the Suggestion Program and profit from the cost savings. You can submit your idea through the ATC Efficiency Scorecard Program which crossfeeds ideas among ATC bases. If you'd like to discuss an idea or need some help in developing or putting your ideas in writing, contact your supervisor or unit Resource Advisor or call the Comptroller at 3518 for assistance.

Austerity, budget cuts, tight money, more with less—all just ways of saying the same thing. Our challenge is to "Keep Costs in Line During 79."

Paper saver

I understand that the paper recycling program has been discontinued but I think it is our responsibility to make sure paper gets recycled. I would like to see the program re-enacted.

SrA Bradley F. Hallihan

Reese participated in "Operation Use It

Again Sam", the governmental recycling of high grade paper. This program was instituted as a result of a mandate by President Carter. We collected and stored paper for approximately six months; then we advertised this fact to buyers nationally through the Defense Property Disposal Office (DPDO).

There were no responses to this advertisement; therefore, after consulting with several sources to locate a local recipient in hopes of donating all or part of the paper, with equally negative results, we made the determination to dispose of the paper through the solid waste contract. This has been accomplished.

Although the program is dormant at present, when a contractor can be located who will buy paper in the amount that we generate, Reese will again institute a recycling program.

Prepared for winter?

Are you prepared for winter driving?

Here are a few tips which may assist you in this task:

- Check your windshield wiper blades and tension on the wiper arms.
- Use anti-freeze solvent in the washer system and keep it full.
- Check the battery; clean corrosion from terminals and fill if necessary.
- Flush radiator and fill with proper amount of water and anti-freeze.
- Check your brakes and have them adjusted or re-lined if necessary.
- Clear your windshield, windows and lights of ice, snow, frost or mud. You can't avoid hazards you can't see! Winter presents special problems with visibility, so you will need to take the extra care.

- Deep tread tires are good but snow tires are better. Chains are best of all for ice and snow conditions.
- Make sure your heater and defroster operate properly.
- Change to winter-weight oil if you don't use the multiviscosity type.
- Check all fluid levels: transmission and power-operated units.
- Check the entire exhaust system. Carbon monoxide kills, and a faulty exhaust system could mean disaster.

Tax advice available

by 1st Lt. Steve Headley
Income tax preparation might be simpler this year, according to Reese's Legal Office.

Capt. Felix Stalls, legal coordinator for income tax assistance, explained that "military and civilian personnel at Reese can obtain free income tax preparation assistance through the Volunteer Tax Assistance Income Program."

Initiated by the Department of Defense in cooperation with the Internal Revenue Service, VITA provides free assistance in preparing income tax returns and answering questions regarding problems unique to military and Department of Defense civilians. Also, those returns sent in through the VITA program may be processed up to 10 days earlier than individually prepared tax returns mailed in to the IRS. Squadron representatives at Reese attended a 2-day seminar last week, sponsored by the Dallas office of the IRS. The unit representatives have access to the VITA 1040 and 1040A return forms, as well as the additional schedules and special forms. For income tax assistance, contact:

Bakke ruling boosts Affirmative Actions

by TSgt. Clyde A. McDonald

Many of us have been watching the news for reactions to the Bakke case. The overall outcome appears to be a positive one in that it reaffirms the Air Force stand on Affirmative Actions Programs as being a "Quality" not a "Quota" program.

The Supreme Court decision did not bar affirmative actions but instead recognized minority status as one variable in the selection process. For example, a company that would like its work force to mirror the population from which it draws employees may screen more minority applicants until its skill requirements and standards are met. In other words, there is no lowering of standards but there is a focusing of recruiting efforts toward attaining a work force representative of the population.

In essence it would appear that Affirmative Actions has been strengthened by the Bakke decision. The following quote from a memorandum to the Heads of Executive Department and Agencies from President Carter reinforces this opinion: "I want to make certain that, in the aftermath of Bakke, you continue to develop, implement and enforce vigorously, affirmative action programs. I also want to make certain that the administrations' strong commitment to equal opportunity and affirmative action is recognized and understood by all Americans."

In this spirit, we need to pull together to promote affirmative actions. The next time you attend a briefing (Commanders Call, Human Relations Education, etc.) and you hear affirmative actions mentioned, don't tune it out. LISTEN. After all, affirmative actions is the promotion of equal opportunity for all. Isn't that what you want for yourself, your children, your spouse, your friends - - - - ?

T-38 inspections change

T-38 Talons will be rolled off the flightline and into the hanger for fewer inspections, says a maintenance spokesman here, but; each inspection will be more thorough.

According to Second Lt. William J. Schurr, chief of the Organizational Maintenance Squadron's T-38 Inspection Branch, T-38s are inspected for mechanical defects under the "periodic inspection" concept. In the past the birds would receive a periodic inspection every 400 hours with a less intensive hourly post flight inspection sandwiched between "periodic" checks.

Now, the periodic inspections are scheduled for every 300 flying hours and the hourly post flight inspection has been eliminated.

Lieutenant Schurr explained that a periodic inspection is, "... an in-depth look at the aircraft's airframe, electrical and hydraulic systems, engines and flight controls. Any defects are repaired and the aircraft is reassembled and given several more checks before being returned to the flightline. The whole process usually takes about 7 days."

On the flightline itself, the basic post-flight inspection performed every 100 hours in the past, has been moved back to every 150 hours. This inspection supports the daily post-flight checks.

Lieutenant Schurr noted that the new system should save the Air Force money, not only because of the cost-saving value of fewer inspections, but; because aircraft that are being flown tend to develop fewer problems than those sitting in hangers.

The program was tested last year at Laughlin AFB, Tex. and was implemented comand wide the start of this year. A similar program is expected to go into effect here in February for T-37s.

Vandalism — a serious problem here by SSgt. David B. Galloway

Vandalism, as defined by Webster, is the willful or malicious destruction of public or private property. This definition perfectly fits the 17 reported incidents which occurred on base and in Reese Village last year.

These figures might not seem overpowering, but consider the facts. Damage was in excess of $1,300 and in the majority of the cases no one was apprehended. One of the main problems in stopping vandalism is the lack of witnesses. There never seems to be any. Property is recovered in less than 20 per cent of the cases. Law enforcement officials have no better luck in catching the offenders.

At Reese, broken windows, slashed tires and damaged cars top the list of incidents. Recently, damage amounting to $360 was caused by someone throwing rocks through the windows in a vacant house. A van parked in the NCO Club parking lot was damaged to the tune of $400. Vandals scratched the paint and bent the wiper blades and outside mirror.

Vandalism is hard to combat. One way is to keep your eyes open and report any acts or suspected acts of vandalism to the Security Police at extension 3400.

"Protect your property by protecting your neighbors."

VA loan guarantee increases 42 per cent

The maximum guarantee for Veterans Administration (VA) home loans has increased from $17,500 to $25,000 under the Veterans Housing Benefits Act of 1978.

The legislation also permits certain severely disabled veterans to obtain a VA grant of up to $30,000 to buy or adapt a residence to meet their special needs. VA grants for these homes were formerly limited to $25,000.

The new bill is of special benefit to an estimated 168,000 Vietnam era veterans because it reduces the length of active-duty service required for eligibility for VA home, condominium or mobile home loan guarantee benefits.

The legislation also permits VA to guarantee loans for energy-related home improvements, including installation of solar heating and cooling systems.

It also authorizes VA to guarantee loans for converted condominiums as of July 1, 1979. The agency currently is authorized to guarantee condominium loans in buildings constructed and sold as this type of dwelling.

VA's mobile home loan program was also restructured by the new law, setting a $17,500 loan maximum and extending the maximum loan term for single-wide mobile homes to 15 years, an increase of 36 months. (AFNS)

ATC lauds Civil Engineers

West says attitude key to improvement

In less than three years, the men and women in the 64th Civil Engineering Squadron have turned a sputtering program into the best the Air Training Command has to offer.

"I remember what it was like when I arrived here in late 1976," commented Maj. Hiram E. West, CE commander. "There wasn't enough communication ... not only outside of the squadron but between branch chiefs as well."

Calling a "time out" on the confusion, Major West laid out the foundation for the "new" Civil Engineering Squadron. Based on open communication and customer satisfaction the squadron has progressed so well that ATC named it the best civil engineering unit in the command for 1978.

"We have a unique situation here," continued Major West. "Sooner or later we deal with everyone on base. From the airman basic living in the dormitories right on up to the wing commander — they all need our help. And we do all we can. One of the keys for the unit's success story is that its people are willing to go that extra step to get the job done."

"In the past," explained the CE commander, "people would call in with a problem and they'd be told we have to have a written work request — which we do. Often, that would be the end of it — both the customer and CE would forget it. But now we keep track of our contacts. If we don't get a work request within a few days we call back and see what went wrong. At times our people have done everything but sign the work requests for the customer."

But customer satisfaction isn't the only thing that has turned the Civil Engineer's program around. Last year the squadron faced the pitfalls of inflation with a reduced budget and still managed to chop $160,000 off the projected figure. Doing more with less became a way of life in CE.

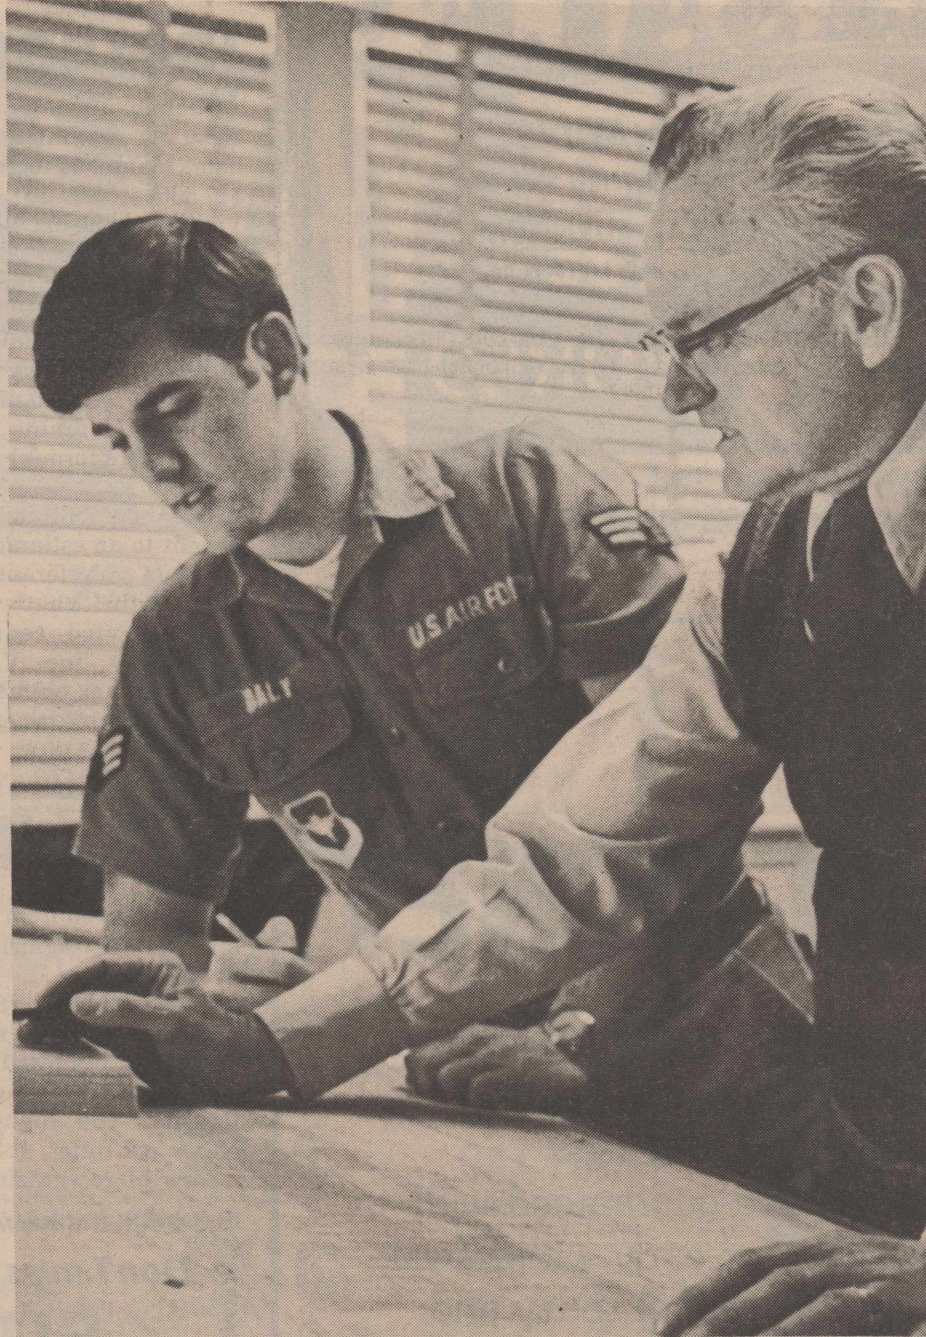

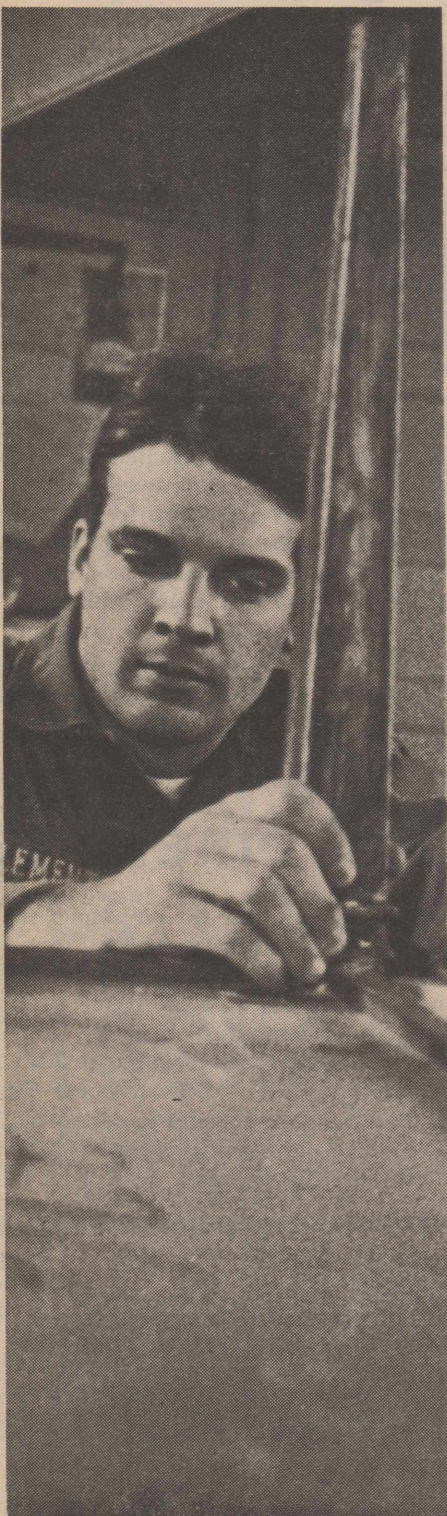

Some examples of how CE squeezed big projects out of limited funding include the construction of Pavements and Grounds facility using Prime Beef teams to erect the basic structure (estimated savings $80,000), moving and remodeling an old building instead of adding on a new facility at squadron headquarters (saved approximately $35,000) and use of Comprehensive Employee Training Act personnel to eliminate a 3,000 manhour backlog (saved nearly $119,000).

And although the improved system taxed the CE workers more than in the past, the individual was never lost in the march ahead. Personal education remains a high priority item in CE.

High work

Working together

More than 60 men and women are enrolled in the Community College of the Air Force and 34 are taking off-base studies. The list of professional military education schools attended by CE workers includes Senior NCO Academy, NCO Academy, NCO Leadership School and the Air Force Institute of Technology.

CE people are also active in community programs. Seven of the 16 volunteers that worked with the Camp Blue Yonder program last year were from CE. Others were involved throughout the year in religious activities, the scouting program, Big Brothers and a variety of other civic events.

And CE workers have not gone without recognition for their efforts. Leading up to the squadron's selection as best in ATC, the unit had four men picked as the 64th Flying Training Wing Airman of the Month, one named the Wing NCO of the Quarter and another the Wing Junior Support Officer. TSgt. Bradley Charters, the NCO of the Quarter, went on to become the Wing NCO of the Year and the ATC CE NCO of the Year. A1C David Anderson, one of the Airman of the Month winners, was selected as the Wing Airman of the Year.

And civilians received their share of awards too. Nine of the 143 civilians working in CE received cash awards for their "outstanding" job performance.

Major West pointed out that the blending of the military and civilian workforce into a cohesive unit has probably had as much to do with the unit's success as anything. He noted that this is the best CE workforce he has ever seen.

"Attitude has made the difference for us," concluded Major West. "Our people do a better job because they want to ... and that's all it takes."

If moving this year Start planning now

(An AFNS Feature)

Moving this year? If so, traffic management officials suggest you give it some serious thought.

Whether you've already gotten orders for an out-of-cycle move, just received a preassignment notice, or are just wondering if you will make a change of station move this summer, now is the time to start planning and doing things that will make your move as smooth as possible.

After you receive your orders, visit your traffic management office as soon as possible. Going early will give your personal property counselor time to adequately brief you and arrange for the moving services you will need.

"When should I move?" is often the first question people must answer. Many members arrange their schedule for a summer move, even if they must leave their family behind to do so. The usual rationale is to avoid interrupting the children's school year.

However, recent studies show that young children may actually adjust better to moves made during the school year. Dr. Donald Brieland, director of the University of Illinois School of Social Work, recently said, ties say families buying a house for the first time may be able to get a good value, because lower real estate prices can often be negotiated during fall and winter months.

After you decide when you want to move, the next question is "how?"

You have a choice. The Air Force can arrange commercial moving services for you, or you can move yourself.

"I've been a consultant with moving companies for years, and I am thoroughly convinced that, by and large, it is best for a child to move during the school year. If he (or she) has at least fair academic skills, the chances are the move won't be troublesome in the classroom."

Summer moves can also mean more difficult moves.

The American Movers Conference, which represents about 1,200 movers, estimates that 60 percent of their business is during the summer. That summer congestion can cause shorthanded packing crews, scarce trucks and full storage warehouses. Pressure on carrier resources during the summer can affect service and create real hardship for families that are moving. Moves which would otherwise be routine can be lost, or damaged or late.

Because of the summer rush, people should seriously consider moving during the non-summer months. You can usually count on far better service.

There's another potential advantage to a non-summer move if you are a home buyer. Traffic management authorities say families buying a house for the first time may be able to get a good value, because lower real estate prices can often be negotiated during fall and winter months.

Using a commercial mover is most convenient. The mover will pack, inventory, load, haul, unload and unpack all of your belongings. The company must accept a minimum amount of liability for loss or damage and commercial shipment is virtually the only way to get a large amount of furniture overseas.

But, you may run the risk of damaged goods or late delivery. If you exceed your weight allowance, a mover's charge for the extra weight can be expensive.

The Do-It-Yourself alternative to commercial moving lets you move yourself within the continental United States. It's more work; you do it all. However, you and the government can share all savings gained by not using a commercial firm. Officials see this as a big advantage for junior enlisted members with small weight allowances. If you move yourself, you also know your belongings will arrive at their new home when you do.

What about damage on self-moves? Mr. Jim Konkel, Air Force manager for the Do-It-Yourself program, noted that the damage rate has been extremely low. Also, if you can verify that damage wasn't due to negligence, you can file a claim for the damage.

When? How? After you have decided, or even before for that matter, see your traffic management office staff early and give them a chance to serve you better. Your personal property counselor will make all the arrangements for you.

For more information about moving call the TMO counselors at ext. 3836.

Minuteman production ends; Air Force eyes MX system

Production of the Minuteman intercontinental ballistic missile, mainstay of the nation's land-based ICBM force, has ended.

The last missile has been completed at a U.S. Air Force facility at Hill AFB, Utah by the Boeing Aerospace Company, which received the Minuteman assembly, test and installation contract in October 1958.

Through the years, the Minuteman system has been one of the major deterrents to nuclear aggression against the United States.

Minuteman was conceived during a critical period of Cold War. The first production missiles were ready for use just six months before the Cuban missile crisis of October 1962.

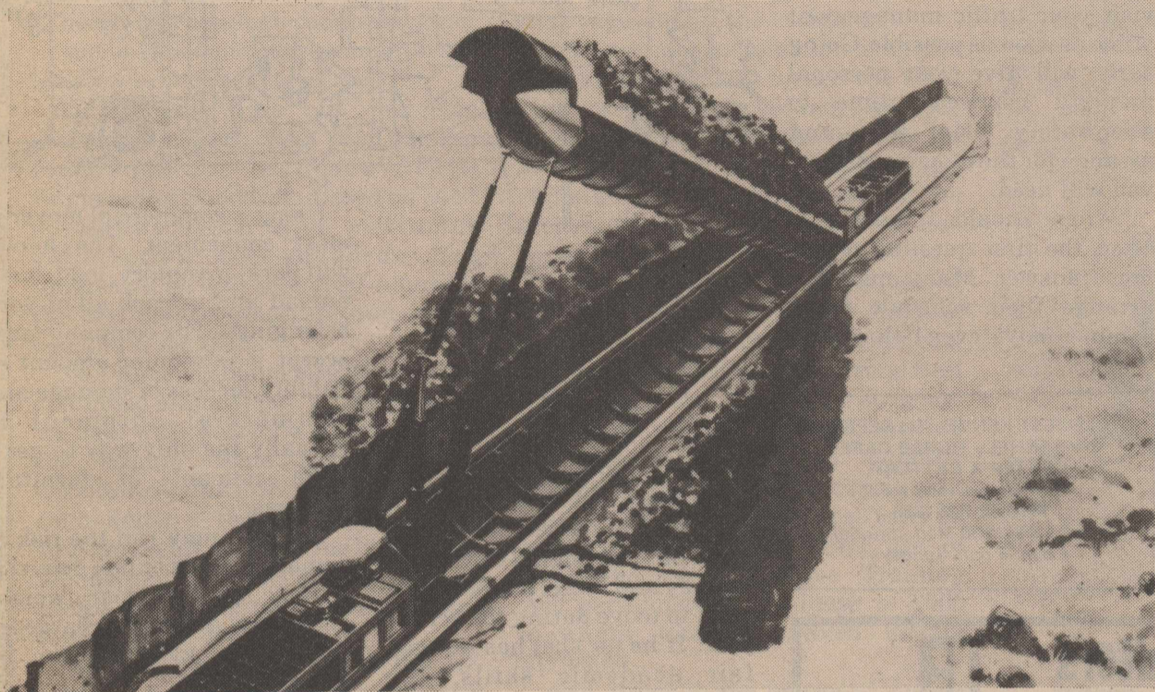

Since 1967, 1,000 missiles have stood on silent alert in underground silos at six Air Force bases from Montana to Missouri. The nuclear armed missiles can reach targets more than 6,000 miles away. Their silos are dispersed over hundreds of square miles to enhance their survivability.

Despite improvements to the Minuteman system over the years, there is concern that by the mid-1980s the fixed location of the silos could make the missiles vulnerable to attack.

The Air Force has proposed an advanced ICBM called missile X, or MX, as a follow-on to Minuteman. An option under the MX concept is that a missile would be moved among a number of launch sites to confuse enemy targeting.

A decision to develop and deploy such a system, officials said, has not yet been made. Meanwhile, the Minuteman force continues as a major element. (AFNS)

Missile system

Pictured is an artist's concept of the new MX missile system. Air Force officials are taking a long hard look at the system as a possible replacement for the Minuteman as the workhorse of our missile defense system. (U.S. Air Force artwork)

Local acts get ready for base talent show

by SSgt R. Monson
Bring on the dancing bear!
The excitement of the base level talent contest is only a few weeks away and local entertainers are getting their acts together for the big show.

Bob McFall, Mathis Recreation Center program director and the coordinator of Feb. 15 talent show, explains that this year's contest will be split into three main divisions. The first is includes male vocalist unaccompanied, female vocalist unaccompanied, vocalist self-accompanied and vocal group.

The second division contains instrumental, instrumental solo and instrumental group (maximum of seven members). The final division includes classical, dramatics, comedy, dance, master of ceremonies and potpourri.

McFall pointed out that last year's contestants were confused about what winning the local contest earned them. "Winning here doesn't necessarily mean a trip to the Air Training Command contest," says the program director. "A committee will select the acts to advance on merit. The emphasis will be on quality."

Topping the list of entrants expected for this year's show will be SSgt. Orin Guthrie, 1958th Communications Squadron. The soft spoken singer won male vocalist honors at the world-wide competition last year and should be a strong contender for Tops in Blue this season.

Rehearsals for the base contest start on Feb. 12 with deadline for sign-up set at 5 p.m. on Feb. 9.

For more information contact McFall at extension 3787 or 3722.

Good guys

For their work on Jan. 17, the guys and gals of Maintenance deserve pats on the back. On that day, they kept the planes in the air for a combined T-38 and T-37 total of 344 sorties. This outstanding effort helped the Wing gain over one-half day in flying time. Congratulations on the fine job.

(Editor's Note: If you know of anybody going out of their way to help someone or of anybody doing an outstanding job, call the Roundup at 3236 and let us know.)

Women swimmers, cagers flash unblemished records

The Air Force Academy Women's basketball squad sported a 4-0 record heading into action last week, behind an aggressive and balanced Falcon attack.

Forward Pat Swanke leads the squad with a 18.5 point average. She is followed in double figures by guard Michelle Johnson (17.7), center Stacy Brodzik (12.2) and Jeanne Muetzel (10.5).

Swanke is hitting .547 from the field and averaging 6.2 rebounds per game. Brodzik leads the club in rebounding with a 9.5 average.

Women swimmers

Also unbeaten this season is the women's swim team. The women have won eight straight meets, including a 90-41 victory two weeks ago against Wyoming University, the last team to beat the swimmers. Topping this year's squad are Kim Hillen, freshman Sandra Maloney and Gayle Johnson. Six swimmers have qualified for the A.I.A.W. Division II Nationals in Reno, Nev., March 8-10.

NCAA wrestling

Wayne Baughman, the AFA wrestling coach has been named to the NCAA wrestling committee. Baughman, who coached the 1976 Olympic freestyle team, begins his three-year term in September.

Ice hockey

The Falcon hockey team upset nationally ranked Merrimack College two weeks ago behind the sparkling net play of goalie Tom Talbot. The senior defender logged 44 saves in the win while teammates Bill Lukkonen and Robin Robideaux provided the team scoring in the 2-1 win.

February 2, 3, and 4, 1979 in the LUBBOCK MEMORIAL CIVIC CENTER

Showing "everything in the world of recreational vehicles (RVs), boats, vans, and sports equipment", West Texas' largest and third annual show of its type is full speed ahead for presentation February 2, 3, and 4.

Special features and exhibits include:

- (1) A free trip for two persons to Las Vegas: 3 trips one each night Friday, Saturday, & Sunday
- (2) Hundreds of dollars in other prizes to be awarded by sponsors and exhibitors:
- (3) A special exhibit of racing cars on the Pedestrian Mall of the $16 million Civic Center:
- (4) Numerous recreational areas will have exhibits (from area points and from more distant Texas lakes, etc.):
- (5) The Texas Parks & Wildlife exhibit is an added feature.

Dealers and merchants from Lubbock and throughout the South Plains area are participating in the event, with the many exhibits to include even sailboats, motor boats, accessories, van conversion, sports wheels, and more.

For Three Days

Show hours are 10 a.m. until 10 p.m., Friday and Saturday, February 2, 3; and from 1 p.m. until 8 p.m., Sunday, February 4.

It is recognized that an unusually high percentage of RV & Camper Units are bought and licensed in Lubbock County and the surrounding region. And for boats . . . one boat is registered for every 43 people in Lubbock County.

So . . . a rare treat has again been arranged for outdoor sports enthusiasts of the region, with the highly-developed, well-planned RV, Boat, Van and Sport Show '79 set for early February.

Don't miss the tremendous number of quality exhibits in the 40,000 sq. ft. column-free exhibit hall in the other areas of the big Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. The dates: February 2, 3, and 4.

54th continues march toward IM tournament

The 54th Flying Training Squadron title express continued to roll toward the post-season playoffs with a 54-29 drubbing of Sturon-1.

The win, paced by Jeff Stieg's 14 points and Pat Moran's 15 counters, raised the 54th's season mark to 9-0. The victory assured the 54th of a first-round by in the February tournament.

But the big news in last week's action was the 51-45 upset of Resource Management by the Youth Center. H. Shomper's 21 points led the youth squad to only its third win of the season. Resource Management was all alone in second place with a sparkling 7-1 mark before the upset. The loss drops them to third in the standings, one-half game behind Air Base Group.

Group depended on Willie Rogers to keep them in the game against Sturon-2 last week. Rogers 13 points came at critical times during the tight contest and sparked the playoff bound cagers to a 41-34 win. The victory boosted Group to 8-2 on the year.

In other loop action, Organizational Maintenance was upset by the "up and down" 35th FTS, 51-39. Although claiming only three league victories all year, at times the 35th has played as well as any team on the circuit. The Medics posted their third win by slipping past the hapless Civil Engineers, 43-39. Supply scored 65 points to down the 1958th Communications Squadron by 13.

Rounding out league play, Resource Management beat Supply, 54-50; the Medics bombed Comm., 48-27 and Sturon-1 lost to squadron rival Sturon-2, 52-43.

Youth soccer

The Youth Center is trying to form a soccer league for youths 6 to 18-years-old. The team will compete in the Lubbock Soccer association and all games will be played in Lubbock. Coaches for the team have already been selected. Players have until Feb. 7 to register. A parent or guardian must accompany the player when registering. For more information call extension 3820.
