

DOPMA vote awaits Senate action

by 2nd Lt. Queenie Byars,
ATC Office of Information

DOPMA—the acronym stands for the Defense Officer Personnel Management Act, legislation developed to update and standardize officer personnel management among the military services.

Although it may seem like only yesterday to some, DOPMA has been around in some form or another for about ten years, and has been considered by four Congresses, including the present one.

Actually, DOPMA has been resoundingly passed twice by the House of Representatives, but it has continually run into strong headwinds in the Senate. The latest DOPMA legislation is no exception. This year the House has decided to wait for the Senate to vote on the bill before taking action.

The current House version is similar to the one originally submitted by the Department of Defense.

It calls for:

- An all regular career force.
- A single permanent promotion system to replace the dual (temporary/permanent) system.
- Common controls on career progression, including mandatory separation and retirement points.

- Permanent grade tables for majors, lieutenant colonels and colonels.

The permanent grade tables are viewed as especially critical. According to Air Force officials, without DOPMA or emergency

Work starts soon on center

Construction on Reese's new family shopping center is expected to begin before the end of the year, according to Base Exchange and Commissary officials.

The multi-million dollar project, when completed, will house a new Main Exchange, several Exchange concessions and a renovated Commissary.

Exchange officials estimate construction on the "mall" portion of the facility will start sometime in November. A Civil Engineers spokesman indicated that the renovation of Warehouse 535 (site of the new Commissary) is expected to start in mid-December.

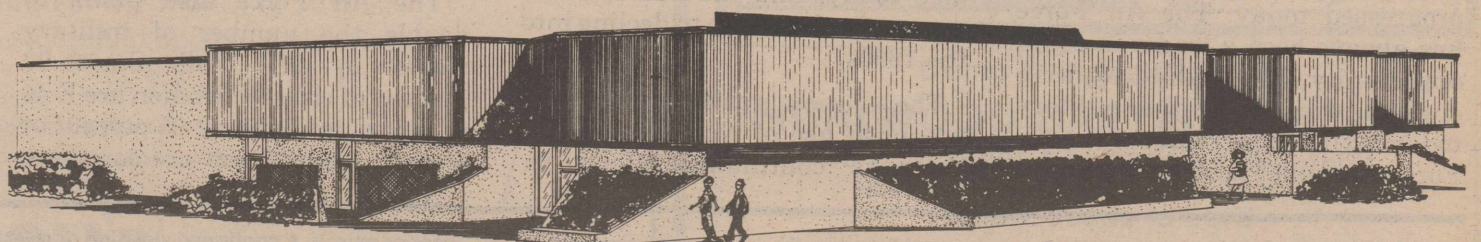

Although the Commissary and Exchange will be combined into one shopping center, the facilities are being constructed by two different agencies. Commissary Service is handling the commissary project while the Army and Air Force Exchange Service is building the new Exchange.

If the weather doesn't slow construction (builders will begin outdoor work during winter months) the entire complex should be completed by the end of next year.

Artist's views

Viewed from above, the new family shopping center will be something like this artist's conception (top) of the combined Commissary and Base Exchange facility to be built here. Construction on the multi-million dollar facility is expected to begin late this year and be completed by the end of 1980. The Commissary (frontal view above), will be in renovated Warehouse 535 while the new Base Exchange (frontal view below) will be built only a few yards away. # Brotherston reports on Operations

by Col. Joseph H. Brotherston
deputy commander for Operations

The one question that is most often asked is, "Are we ahead or behind the flying schedule?"

I think this is healthy because it shows interest in how all of us are doing our job. Although our position ahead or behind the time line is a quick indicator of how things are going, I think it is worthwhile to explain how our status is calculated so that we are all talking on the same frequency.

Basically, we are given 49 weeks to train a student pilot. This is a hard and fast constraint which we cannot adjust locally. In managing the students' training, we develop a Training Forecast Schedule (TFS) for each class which essentially pro-rates all of the training activities that students must accomplish each work day within the 49 week period. On any given day, we can calculate how each student, each class, and the entire student body is doing in comparison to the TFS, expressed in days ahead or behind.

Although this sounds pretty simple, there are many variables that affect our ability to stay on the TFS schedule, many of which we cannot control locally. Obviously, weather has the biggest influence on our flying program. Other key factors are the availability of aircraft and instructor pilots, the number of daylight hours, the capacity of our airfield and training airspace, and the number of flying hours that we are allocated by ATC Headquarters (which, by the way, is used to determine our budget, manning, and facility requirements).

Putting all of the parts of the puzzle together, it is not always true to simply say that being ahead is great and being behind is a disaster. For example, we try to stay slightly ahead of the time line during the summer months in order to have a pad going into the winter months when the daylight hours are shorter and the flying weather is generally worse. Being behind or even right on the time line today could cause us serious problems going into the months ahead. Stated another way, we have to view our position on the time line relative to our prospects of maintaining a good position in future.

We are currently in great shape due entirely to the outstanding work being accomplished by both flightline and support personnel. However, I must caution everyone that there are some rather tough challenges ahead. With the increased student population and the requirement for a higher utilization rate on our limited number of aircraft, we will have to manage our resources very carefully. I strongly encourage all of you to keep close track of our position on the time line. It's the best way I know of keeping everyone informed on how well things are going.

Colonel Brotherston

No cool air

I would like to complain about the lack of air conditioning in the nursery. Something needs to be done as soon as possible.

Dear Air Conditioned Nursery:

The nursery was originally designed for evaporative cooling which is effective during the average day in this area; however, on rainy days, the effectiveness is reduced.

We have also had some mechanical problems with the system which have since been fixed. The real answer to the problem is to install refrigerated air. This would however require extensive construction such as new insulated interior walls, additional ceiling insulation, storm windows and doors, and a new air distribution system, all of which is cost prohibitive at this time.

I might add that this requirement, in conjunction with the need for additional nursery space, is being considered in the justification for a new facility. We are currently in the process of planning a more modern and spacious base nursery, so please bear with us.

Dryers broke again

A week doesn't go by without one or more of the dryers or washing machines in Barracks 420 not working.

This week all three dryers are not working while all three washers are working. It makes it tough to do your laundry and I feel that they should be kept up a little better.

Dear Washers and Dryers:

I can sympathize with you, however, the solution rests with the users, or more correctly the abusers, of the machines.

Things such as broken lint screens, removed knobs, pointers and other pieces which render the machines inoperative are the real problem. The contractor has been very responsive and has not failed to meet his end of the contract.

Even though he makes any repairs necessary, he is not liable for damage due to vandalism or intentional abuse as we are experiencing. This results in repair bills above and beyond the contract.

If those of you who enjoy using the washers and dryers will put on a little peer pressure and report anyone you suspect of damaging our equipment, the problem will be solved.

With your help Reese can be an even better place to live and work.

Sunday marks Federal Women's Day

Federal Women's Day, Aug. 26, commemorates the contributions of working women.

It should be more than a day to look back on past accomplishments, many as there have been. Women have worked for the government — and the military — since this country was a loose collection of colonies.

It should be more than a day to measure how far women have progressed today. The Air Force has always been a leader in equal opportunity. The highest ranking civilian woman in the military today is Under Secretary of the Air Force Antonia Handler Chayes.

Federal Women's Day should be a day to reaffirm the goals of our country and government to provide a chance for everyone to work, to succeed or fail on one's individual abilities.

We are entering a time when the young adults from the baby boom of the 1950s are being replaced by those from the dwindling birth rate of the 1960s. There are fewer young men today, and the numbers are expected to continue to decline into the 1980s.

The solution is at hand, however: expanded use of women. The Air Force is continuing efforts to increase the numbers of its civilian and military women.

Presently, 32 percent of civilian employees are women. The majority of them work in general-schedule fields, most in grades 1 through 4, in secretarial or clerical jobs. Historically, few women have pursued careers in the wage-grade area. Wage-grade jobs are now being emphasized to women.

The Air Force also plans to double the number of military women by 1984. While almost 90 percent of enlisted women are E-4s or below, and almost 95 percent of women line officers are company grade, the numbers of higher ranking women are expected to increase.

This isn't just a numerical increase. The number of jobs open to women include all officers' career fields and all but four enlisted specialties. Today there are more enlisted women in aircraft maintenance than in personnel and twice as many women in avionics as there are dental assistants.

Increasing opportunities for women are not just a matter of supporting equal treatment. It's sound business.

DOPMA vote pending

grade relief legislation by Sept. 30 promotion cuts, and possibly demotions, would have to be made.

In late July, the Senate Armed Services Sub-committee on Manpower and Personnel cleared DOPMA, but only after making significant revisions.

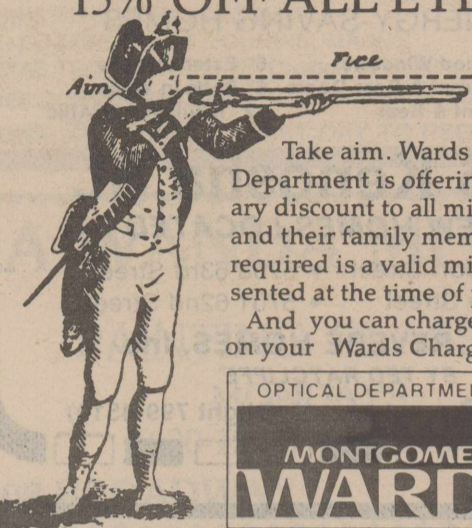

The sub-committee version reportedly would:

- Cut about 25 percent in the number of field grade officers over ten years.
- Selectively continue captains twice passed over for major until retirement eligible.
- Require two years service prior to tenure of a regular commission.
- Provide for annual Congressional authorization of total active duty officer strength.

- Authorize retention of reserve officers past 11 years and maintain the limit on the number of regulars.
- DOPMA must now pass the full Senate Armed Services Committee, the Senate and the House. A joint conference committee would be convened to work out any compromises on a single version. Final action would take place sometime this fall.

Davis urges involvement

by Gen. B.L. Davis
Commander Air Training Command

"When Congress reconvenes in September, it will consider an unusually high number of legislative proposals directly affecting the quality of Air Force life. These proposals cover a broad range of issues that will have an impact on all of us if and when passed.

"It's important, then, that we as individuals, and as Air Force members, understand the issues and the implications of the pending legislation.

"Beginning this week, the Roundup features the first in a series of "Quality of Life" articles dealing with the current legislative program. I hope that you'll take the time to read these articles, reflect on them, do your own related research, and, if so inclined, exercise your rights as a citizen to communicate your views to your elected representatives."

Joyce Russell, secretary for the 64th Flying Training Wing commander, recently received one of the highest awards given to civilians. Last week Russell was presented the Civilian Meritorious Service Award. The award covers her work as a wing commander's secretary at Reese since 1962. In the letter nominating her for the award she was described as the "right arm" of wing commanders. She is only the third civilian at Reese to receive the award in 30 years. Russell retires today.

Air Force chapels help 'boat people'

Chapels throughout the Air Force, including Reese's, are responding to an urgent appeal from the Air Force chief of chaplains office to support relief for the Vietnamese "boat people."

Catholic parishoners at Reese recently donated $319.41 to the relief effort, according to Installation Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Arnold G. Johnson. A designated offering will also be taken at a Protestant service in the near future. Chaplain Johnson mentioned that those who wish to donate but cannot attend services may send a check to the chapel office.

"Chapel community help is needed now to begin dealing in a responsible and unified way with one of the great moral problems of our generation," the message from the chief of chaplains office stated. "At this moment tens of thousands of refugees from Southeast Asia face a future with nothing to sustain them but a hope of freedom. Hope for them is critical."

The message included an appeal from Terrence Cardinal Cooke: "This is the first time I have ever appealed to you in this fashion. I take this extraordinary step because my experience has been that there is no limit to the generosity of our military people when they recognize that a situation is critical and lives are at stake."

Money contributed in the effort will be channeled to appropriate relief agencies through the chaplains' funds.

Entertainers booked for the Sept. 22-29 event include Charley Pride, The Statler Brothers, Tom T. Hall and Tammy Wynette.

Duty hours change

Most Reese people will get to sleep in a half hour later starting Sept. 1.

That's the day that the 64th Flying Training Wing reverts to its normal duty schedule, 8 a.m. to 4:45 p.m.

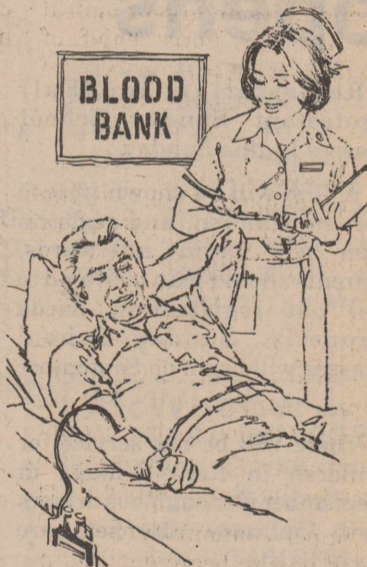

During the summer, most wing personnel work an earlier shift to help save energy. By ending the workday at 4:15 during the hot summer months, Reese reduces its air conditioning costs.

Pre-school shots

Reese Hospital is urging parents to check their children's shots prior to school registration.

Texas State law requires a diptheria, pertussis, tetanus booster and a polio booster since the age of four and a combined measles, mumps, rubella shot at around age 15 months.

Shot clinic hours are 7:30-

Muppet show?

Sgt. Steven Soles looks like he's practicing for a "muppet show" on the Reese flightline, but; in reality the 64th Organizational Maintenance Squadron worker is giving hand signals to the crew of a T-37 getting ready to depart on a training flight. Sergeant Soles and the rest of the T-37 branch flightline crews have been working extra hard to keep up with the increased student load despite being undermanned. MSgt. Thomas E. Bell, day line chief, cited his troops for being able to maintain a satisfactory Maintenance Standardization Evaluation Program rating while pulling extra duty. "The troops are doing a super job for the wing," says Sergeant Bell. "Each one of them is a credit to Reese."

Youth Center requests continued parental help

Citing the success of parental involvement with summer sports programs, Youth Center officials are asking for increased support from parents for the fall activities.

Don Hutchins, Youth Center director, says that parents helped make the bowling and baseball programs here very successful.

"We hope to continue providing quality recreational programs this fall," notes Hutchins, "But, we need parental support."

Two areas that are in immediate need of that support are the flag football and soccer programs. Hutchins says that the Center needs someone to volunteer to handle the organization of both leagues.

In addition, volunteers are needed as coaches, snack bar operators, grounds keepers, scorekeepers, etc. for football, soccer and fall bowling.

Parents interested in helping the Center should contact Hutchins at Ext. 3820 or stop by the Youth Center.

Skeet range

Joseph Brotherston takes his turn on the Reese skeet range during opening ceremonies held recently. The range is open to Rod and Gun Club Members and their guests. (U.S. Air Force photo)

Rod, Gun Club adds skeet range

With several hunting seasons coming up, Reese people can get their shooting touch on target at the base's new skeet range.

The facility was opened during Reese's recent Open House.

Rod and Gun Club members and their guests are eligible to use the range. Membership in the Rod and Gun Club runs $12 per year. People who use the range must have their own guns, but ammunition and instruction is available through the club.

For more information about becoming a Rod and Gun Club member, call Art Christie at Ext. 3841 or Eric Wertz at Ext. 3354.

Dove, quail, pheasant and duck seasons are coming soon. Rod and Gun Club officials are trying to gain a nearby dove and quail hunting lease.

Club officials advise checking waders for leaks in preparation for duck season.
