Jesus lights the world

by Chaplain (Lt. Col.)
Arnold G. Johnson

A little snow remains on the ground as I write these few lines. It's nice and bright in most areas as we gaze out the window to see the designs the passing car lights and street lights make in dazzling reflections.

The many colored lights that outline our roof give the snow on the roof the hue of a rainbow. A neighbor's tree stands in full view of admiring eyes just inside a double picture window.

The lights twinkle and sparkle through the frost that forms on the outer pane, and the view is especially beautiful.

All the lights of the Christmas Season serve to remind me of the "Light" that came to shine in a world of darkness. Jesus said of Himself ... "I am the Light of the world".

He is the Light that makes your world and mine visible with all of it's problems. He is the Light, when lifted up, that illumines the true nature of God and His love for all of us. It's that Light which outshines all the other lights of the world ... for it tells me of God's love for me. It is the brightest of all because He tells me that He shines for the whole world ... and for me.

Boy! That's great news! It's that sort of news that re-charges my spiritual batteries better than Eveready or Duracell. It's that sort of news that makes Christmas always an event that never dims in its power for me.

I pray that this Christmas will be a blessed one for you and your loved ones. So let His light shine! MERRY CHRISTMAS!

Don't waste energy

Energy wasting mistakes can be avoided if you consider climate, local building codes and energy-efficient construction when you build or buy a home. In either case, the following energy conservation ideas should help you save on home utility costs.

Consider a square floor plan. It is usually more energy efficient than a rectangular plan.

Insulate walls and roof to the highest specifications recommended for your area.

Insulate floors, too, especially those over crawl spaces, cold basements and garages.

If the base of a house is exposed, as in the case of a mobile home, build a "skirt" around it.

Install windows you can open so you can use natural or fan-forced ventilation in moderate weather.

Place your refrigerator in coolest part of the kitchen, well away from the range and oven.

Install the water heater as close as possible to areas of major use to minimize heat loss through the pipes. (AFNS)

Holidays present danger of fires

by Bob J. Hitch
Reese fire chief

The holidays are a special time. Families and friends get together, memories are recalled and made, and gifts are given. But the last gift anyone wants is a fire. Unfortunately, many of the things that make the holidays a happy time, such as trees, lights, candles, ornaments, and gift wrappings, can lead to tragic fires.

Some reminders to help everyone have a fire-safe holiday season are:

- Cut tree base at a 45- to 60-degree angle and use a good tree stand with a holding area for water or wet sand.

- Buy a small, fresh tree, and leave it outside in water or wet sand until you're ready to decorate it. If you're using an artificial tree, make sure it is flame resistant.

- Use only electrical wiring bearing the Underwriter's Laboratory (UL) seal. Make sure electric toys and appliances bought as presents carry this same seal of approval.

- Do not use flammable decorations.

- Place tree in coolest part of room away from heaters, fireplaces, heating ducts or TV sets.

- Don't put the tree or move furniture where they will block exits or hallways leading to exits.

- Place the switch for the lights well away from the tree, and turn off all decorative lighting before retiring or leaving the house.

- Remove all gift wrappings and packing materials promptly and dispose of them outside. Don't "bonfire" them in the fireplace.

- Remove a real tree as soon as possible after Christmas, or whenever it begins to shed needles.

- Place candles well away from draperies, decorations, or other flammables. Above all, don't put them in the tree! Also keep them away from areas where they might be overturned or wherever small children play.

- Electric trains, race car sets, etc., produce sparks and should not be near the tree.

When entertaining, don't allow smoking near the tree or around decoration and wrappings. Have plenty of large, safe ashtrays available.

Buy a smoke detector as an early Christmas present for yourself and others. If your home already has one, check it frequently, especially before the start of the holiday season.

Most of all, have a fire emergency plan. If fire strikes, clear everyone out of the house and call the fire department.

Season's greetings

"Christmas and New Year remind us to thank each of you for helping to defend the peace that is so closely associated with this time of year, and to pray for the many others throughout the world for whom it is but a hope and dream.

"You who serve in the armed forces symbolize our nation's determination to sustain the high ideals that have made America a protector of freedom and a haven for the persecuted. Within your ranks thrives the spirit of patriotism and the love of country that are emblematic of our national vitality and strength.

"Rosalynn and I send you and your families our warmest good wishes for a joyous holiday season and a satisfying and happy new year."

FROM PRESIDENT JIMMY CARTER

"The Christmas season accentuates the camaraderie and sense of purpose which are so great a part of being in the Air Force.

"Christmas is a celebration of friends and family—a time for closeness and joy.

"The new year brings an opportunity to anticipate the good that will come in succeeding months—and to reaffirm our faith in God and country.

"You have been superb in your performance and dedication. To each of you and your families, I wish a Merry Christmas and a happy New Year."

FROM AF CHIEF OF STAFF GEN. LEW ALLEN JR.

Once again the warmest holiday season of the year is upon us, the time in which our lives are enriched and renewed with family gatherings, love and fellowship, and the joy of giving. As it affects the human spirit, Christmas holds a magic found in no other holiday.

Christmas time is family time; and while we fortunate ones here at home are enjoying it to the fullest, let us be mindful of the many other members of our Air Force family who are serving abroad away from friends and loved ones.

As two proud members of that family, Mrs. Davis and I would like to extend our sincerest best wishes to every member of Air Training Command for a very Merry Christmas and a happy, safe and prosperous New Year.

FROM ATC COMMANDER GEN. B.L. DAVIS

"Instead of the usual holiday message reflecting on past accomplishments and setting new goals, I want to take this opportunity to ask you to join with me in prayer for the safe return of the Americans held hostage in Iran.

"Let our thoughts be for those held captive, their families and friends. Let our prayers be for national unity and resolve, and wisdom and courage for our Commander in Chief who bears a heavy burden.

"On behalf of my family and my staff, I wish you and yours a blessed holiday season, good health and prosperity in 1980."

A special Christmas story

*He was dressed all in nylon, from head to his toe,
And his clothes were all covered with sprinklings of snow.
A bundle of orders he had flung on his back.
Then he dropped it and paperwork spilled from his sack.*

*His eyes - how they twinkled; his left hand frostbitten!
He said with a groan, "I've forgotten my mitten!"
But his droll little mouth was all smiles back then
'Cause the beard on his face defied 35-10!*

*The stump of a pipe he held tight in his mouth;
The smoke circled once, and then headed south.
He was weighted with flab even down to his wrist,
(With a tummy like that he could never enlist!)*

*He was chubby and plump, a right jolly old man,
And I laughed when I saw him, in spite of his hand.
With a twist of his head and a wink of his eye,
He gave me to know that he wasn't a spy.*

*He spoke not a word, but went straight to his sack,
And handed us orders; (mine were to SAC)
And laying his finger aside his nose,
He used the wrong hand; which then speedily froze.*

*He sprang to his sled, jumping in with a whistle,
And took to the air like a Minuteman missile.
But I heard him exclaim, as he booked out the gate,
"I'm off now to Thule, and boy am I late!"*

*'Twas the night before Christmas and all through the base
Were "Tweets" and Talons, parked neatly in place;
The parachutes were hung in the squadron's with care;
As IPs and students had returned from the air.*

*The Colonel was nestled all snug in his bed,
While visions of IG teams zoomed in his head.
With the boss checking aircraft, and I in the shack
Had just settled down for a short midnight snack.*

*When out on the flight line there rose such a clatter;
I dashed from the shack to see what was the matter;
Away to the pickup I spun like a rotor,
Tore open the door and started the motor.*

*Tower lights on the crest of the new-fallen snow
Gave the luster of midday to objects below,
When what to my wondering eyes should appear
But a green snowmobile, I think a John Deere.*

*With a little old driver, a bag on his back:
I knew in a moment he wasn't from TAC.
More rapid than jets down the runway he banked
And whistled and shouted and called us by rank:*

*"Now colonel, now major, oh louie and cap'n!
"Oh sergeant and airman; tell me what's happenin'?"
"From the end of the ramp to the top of the tower
"Oh hurry, oh hurry, I just have one hour!"*

*As dry leaves that before the wild hurricane fly
When they meet with an obstacle, mount to the sky,
So up to the tower, his sled, how it flew,
With the bag full of paper and Chubby One too.*

*He jumped out of the sled before it had stopped.
And then in a twinkling, he'd climbed to the top,
As I drew in my head and was turning around,
Down the ventilator Chubby came with a bound.*

AF sponsors must designate guardians

Single member sponsors and military couples with dependents will have to designate who will care for their dependents in case of military duties such as no-notice deployments or recalls. This must be completed by Jan. 31, 1980.

Reese personnel officials said Air Force Regulation 35-59 requires that these two groups of people complete statements acknowledging their responsibilities to make advance arrangements for dependent care.

Commanders are also tasked to brief all unit members every October on dependent-care responsibilities.

The regulation has two purposes. First, it helps military sponsors understand the need for advance arrangements.

This is based on the belief that military people can fulfill their personal obligations to their dependents and their professional obligations to the Air Force only through adequate planning.

Second, the regulation advises supervisors of the Air Force policy. It provides general guidance for remedial action if members don't fulfill military obligations because of inadequate dependent-care arrangements.

The regulation stresses that while the Air Force will help plan dependent care, members are primarily responsible. They must ensure they're available at all times for any military duties, including short- or no-notice deployments, recalls or alerts.

A look back:

Pulling close

The Air Force pulled to within 97.9 percent of its recruiting goal for fiscal 1979. Some of the 72,000 who chose Air Force blue are members of the 3711 Basic Military Training Squadron at Lackland AFB, Texas. (U.S. Air Force photo by SSgt. Robert Shelton)

The Air Force was active on many fronts during 1979 as it received approval for the full-scale development of the MX missile, added new aircraft to the inventory, won people-oriented proposals and assisted in far-ranging humanitarian efforts.

Public debate surrounding the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty woke the nation to mounting concern about military readiness.

"The realities of the growing military threat are beginning to be recognized by the American people," said Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Lew Allen Jr.

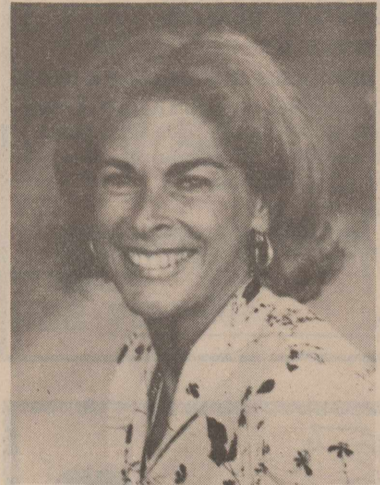

"In this regard," said Vice Chief of Staff Gen. James A. Hill, "1979 has been an important year that may well mark the beginning of a determined U.S. effort to halt this erosion of U.S. military strength vis-a-vis that of the Soviet Union.

"The most prominent factor in this regard has been the SALT II ratification debate in Congress, which has sparked a fundamental reappraisal of U.S. defense posture," General Hill noted.

In terms of strategic force, that posture was improved in 1979 with President Jimmy Carter's decision to begin full-scale engineering development of the MX mobile missile.

The year saw many changes in leadership. At the top, John C. Stetson resigned as secretary to return to private industry. Dr. Hans M. Mark replaced him and Antonia Handler Chayes became the new Air Force under secretary.

Antonia Handler Chayes

James M. McCoy came on board as chief master sergeant of the Air Force replacing retiring CMSAF Robert D. Gaylor.

AF improves inventory

America's newest intercontinental ballistic missile will be used in a system of multiple protective structures to ensure the survivability of land-based missile forces.

Other force improvements in 1979 included increased use of new aircraft. The A-10 Thunderbolt II was permanently based in Europe, beefing up NATO capabilities as that alliance marked its 30th anniversary.

As the newest fighter — the F-16 — was being introduced into Tactical Air Command, one of the service's aging war horses — the F-100 Super Sabre — was retired from the inventory. Air National Guard and Air Force Reserve units were also receiving more modern aircraft in 1979.

Fly-before-you-buy competition began in July for selection of an airframe for the Air Force's air-launched cruise missile. B-52s at Griffiss AFB, N.Y., modified with rotary launchers, will be the first to carry the cruise missile when it enters the inventory.

Airlift enhancement emerged as a theme for the coming decade as the "stretch" model C-141B Starlifter was delivered to Military Airlift Command in December, and plans for a new transport, the C-X, began to emerge.

Energy conservation received new emphasis from Air Force leaders as units throughout the force observed the first Energy Awareness Week.

People programs

Recruiting efforts paid off as the Air Force obtained 97.9 percent of the annual goal.

Actions taken in 1979 to streamline Air Force operations included inactivating Aerospace Defense Command. At year's end the Air Force was realigning ADCOM resources under TAC, Strategic Air Command and Air Force Communications Command.

In terms of entitlements, 1979 saw debate over a pay raise for Air Force people and a new retirement plan. Air Force Secretary Hans M. Mark and General Allen fought for — and helped win — a seven percent raise.

A new retirement plan was approved by Defense Department leaders and sent to Congress for its consideration. The plan may change the retirement system significantly, but Air Force leaders have pledged that members would have the right to choose between the old and new retirement programs if the new plan is enacted.

Military leaders also spoke on behalf of Air Force people against a parking-fee plan at government installations. When it was finally implemented, only four Air Force installations outside the capital were affected.

AF offers aid

The total force also performed disaster relief and humanitarian missions during the year. Military members provided vital weather information to the National Weather Service when Hurricanes David and Frederic threatened the American coast.

Bluesuit assistance also followed tornadoes near Sheppard AFB, Texas, and F.E. Warren AFB, Wyo. Reese people joined in the relief efforts for those stricken by the Wichita Falls tornado.

The Air Force assisted in evacuating Americans from Iran early in the year. Later, during the crisis at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, the Air Force helped transport 13 hostages freed in November.

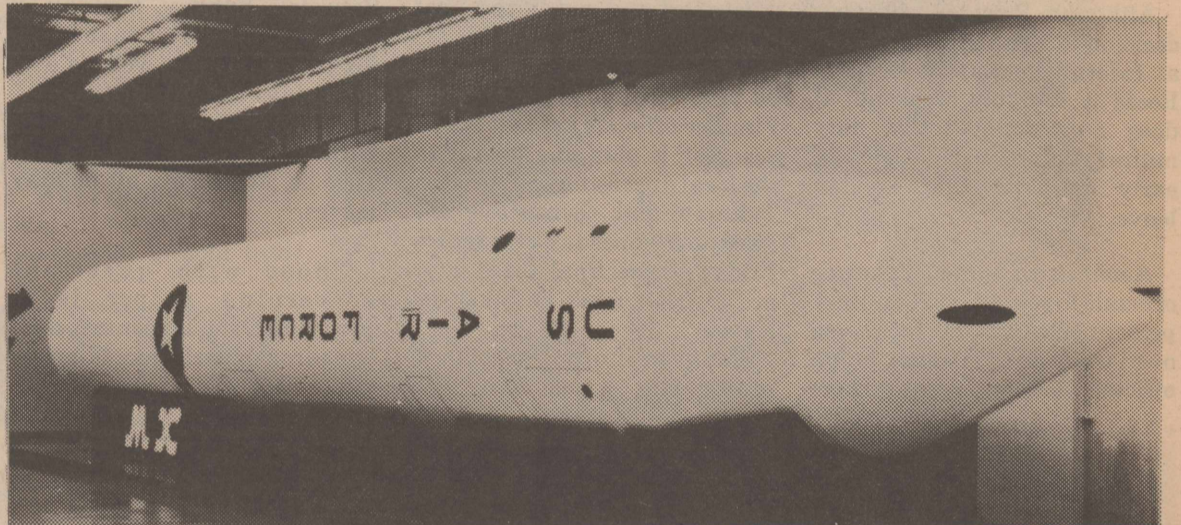

The Air National Guard and Air Force Reserve were active as units airlifted American citizens from Nicaragua and provided help to civilian authorities in Chicago following the crash of a civilian DC-10 in civil aviation's worst single aircraft disaster.

Trackers at the North American Air Defense Command helped keep the world informed when Skylab fell from space in the summer. NORAD radar scopes followed the spacecraft until it touched down in unpopulated Western Australia.

Sixteen officers at Reese earn regular O-3 status

Selections were approved by the Regular Captain Board which met at the Air Force Manpower and Personnel Center in September.

Heading the list were Byron E. Beal, Samuel A. Blanchard, James W. Fletcher Jr., James A.

Hawkins, Ford H. McCormack and Robert E. Moran Jr. from the 54th Flying Training Squadron.

Also included were Michael E. Dendinger, Ronald D. Ryan, Peter F. Volkert and Guy A. Woolman of the 35th Flying Training Squadron.

Representing the 64th Student Squadron were Ronald R. Emenheiser, Douglas E. Ferlin, Douglas W. Knutsen, James R. McDonald, and John W. Shishoff.

The single representative from 64th Air Base Group was Dolores D. Fox.

The board reviewed the records of 3,485 officers and selected 99.5 percent of them for permanent promotion.

Eligibles included officers with a permanent grade date of rank of 1976 or earlier.

Officials warn

Be sure of holiday leaves

Although President Carter's decision to make Christmas Eve a federal holiday does give Reese a four-day weekend, it does not entitle active duty military personnel to get an early start on that holiday leave.

Accounting and Finance officials here warn that military personnel leaving the local area over the holidays must be on official leave and that leave must start and end in the local area.

Many Reese bluesuiters will be taking all of next week off. Finance officials explain that if a person is planning to stay in the local area Saturday through Tuesday and then leave the area on Wednesday and return Friday, those final three days are all that must be taken as leave.

However, if members plan to leave the local area on Saturday, Sunday, Monday or Tuesday they must take leave for those days as well as any other days they will be gone.

Finance officials note that the Office of Special Investigations may be monitoring all holiday leaves.

Those with questions concerning proper leave procedures should contact their squadron orderly rooms before going on leave.

At Reese

Two earn O-6 nod

Two Reese lieutenant colonels joined a list 697 Air Force wide who have been selected for promotion by the calendar year 1979 central temporary colonel board which met at Randolph AFB, Texas, in October.

Lt. Col. James W. Chapman II, currently serving as Assistant Deputy Commander for Operations, and Lt. Col. James W. McIntyre, commander of the 54th Flying Training Squadron, are the two local selectees.

Colonel McIntyre, a Vietnam veteran with 3,000 hours of flying time, came to Reese after serving as Chief of the Analysis Branch of the Personnel Analysis Division at the Military Personnel Center at Randolph AFB, Texas.

In Vietnam he served on an HH-53 Super Jolly Green flying night rescue missions. He has earned the Silver Star and Distinguished Flying Cross in addition to numerous Air Medals.

Colonel Chapman, who served as an instructor pilot with the 54th before assuming his current position, came to Reese from the Pentagon where he was a special assistant to the Secretary of the Air Force.

He served in Vietnam as a flight commander with the 558 Tactical Fighter Squadron at Cam Rahn Bay in 1969.

Santa Claus finds way with help from Nav-aid

Roundup special

Tiny tots here can be sure that Santa Claus will have no trouble finding his way to Reese, thanks to the professional efforts of the 1958th Communications Squadron Navigational Aids workcenter.

The same men and electronic guidance equipment that daily handle one of the most active undergraduate flying training missions in the Air Training Command stand ready to guide Santa to a safe landing.

Operating a network of eight electronic guidance units, the five crewmen in the Navigational Aids workcenter are able to create two ten-mile long electronic corridors that will lead St. Nick straight down Reese's center runway.

The sophisticated operation ensures that Santa, and all properly equipped aircraft, are able to make a safe landing no matter what the weather conditions.

The workcenter is split into two crews. Handling the north end of Reese are SrA Bret McIntire and A1C Mark Hunt. A1C Keith Blake, Amn. Robert Spurlock and Sgt. Kevin Schaller form the south crew. So, yes Virginia — thanks to the Navigational Aids crew — Santa Claus will find his way to Reese again this year.

Air Force increases training of women

Reese can expect to see more women in training here during Fiscal Year 1980 as Air Training Command expands its undergraduate pilot and navigator training for women.

The FY 80 goal for women entries into UPT is 122 and 29 for UNT. This is a substantial increase over the FY 79 entries of 15 in UPT and seven in UNT. Reese currently has 10 women in training with 12 more total between Vance AFB, Okla., and Williams AFB, Ariz. Nine women are in navigator training at Mather AFB, Calif.

Entry sources for women into both programs will be from the Air Force Academy, extended active duty (cross-trainees), Officer Training School, Reserve Officers' Training Corps, Air National Guard and the Air Force Reserve.

Since the pilot training test program for women began in August 1976, 31 women have graduated and been assigned to a variety of aircraft in non-combat roles. Among them are six ATC instructor pilots at various bases and one T-43 pilot at Mather AFB. The first UPT class with women graduated in September 1977.

Navigator training for women began in March 1977, and since then, 12 have graduated from UNT.

With the expansion program, women will not be restricted to training at a few selected bases. Under the new guidelines, women may be entered into all flying training classes including helicopter training at all flying training bases.

Reese couple enjoys working on old clocks

by Sgt. Steven D. Holmes

With the New Year only days away, Father Time is foremost in many peoples' minds. This seems a fitting time to explore the field of horology.

This field, practiced by one Reese couple, is unique in that it encompasses both art and science. In fact, horology is defined as the science of measuring time and the art of constructing instruments for indicating time.

TSgt. Wayne Powell and his wife Carol cover both aspects of the art/science.

Their interest began in 1971 while stationed in England. Wayne and Carol wanted a grandfather clock and found a rare one-handed clock which they purchased and brought home. Two hours after arriving home, their new prize stopped running.

With no previous experience in working on clocks, Wayne made the decision to try and clean the works in an attempt to get it running. Predictably, he pulled the wrong pin and the entire assembly fell apart. Undaunted, Wayne spent the next two or three days putting the timepiece back together. Since that time he has restored or repaired dozens of clocks, mostly antique.

Carol's artistic talents are put to work restoring the faces of the often badly battered clocks they acquire. Sanding, repainting numbers and often creating whole new scenes to make an antique clock look not new, but cared for, has given Carol more business than she can handle. She is currently restoring a batch of faces sent to her by an antique dealer in Louisiana.

Makes repairs

According to Wayne, only one university in the United States offers studies in horology, making it necessary for most aspiring clockmakers to earn their wings the way he did, through apprenticeship. He has studied under two masters of the craft; Kirk Richards, a German-born horologist he met while stationed in England, and Ben Carter of Alexandria, La.

Wayne hopes to become a certified horologist and open a clock shop in Silver Springs, Fla., upon his retirement from the Air Force.

Carol, like Wayne, has had little formal training for her part of the job. Although she did work for the art director of an advertising agency in Miami for a time, she depends largely on native ability. Her artistic talent has also resulted in the sale of prints of a T-38 breaking through the barbed wire fence that, according to one old story, separates the North Pole from the Texas Panhandle.

Wayne and Carol seldom modify their clocks, preferring to restore them to their original design. One exception to this is a wall clock that Wayne drilled through the face slightly above the junction of the hands and fitted a shaft to the escapement wheel (gear that drives the minute hand). Carol painted a windmill, without a blade, on the face. Wayne then attached a handmade blade to the shaft. The result is a windmill moving in the wind to the precise ticking of the unusual timepiece.

Constructing hand-made parts is not unusual in this sometimes tedious hobby. Wayne is forced by lack of replacement parts to occasionally fashion parts as minute as one tooth of a gear.

This necessary attention to detail, and the hours it requires, constitutes the most serious drawback to horology; finding the time.

Paints dial

Guidas attends advisor meeting

CMSgt. Frank T. Guidas, wing senior enlisted advisor, joined 19 others last week at Randolph AFB, Texas for Air Training Command's Senior Enlisted Advisors Conference.

Eighteen ATC wings and centers were represented at the two-day conference along with representatives from the Reserve Officers' Training Crops and Civil Air Patrol.

CMSgt. Emory Walker, ATC senior enlisted advisor, was host for the event that was called to discuss and work personnel problems and other matters requiring command or Air Force-wide attention.

One major problem discussed was the inadequate on-base quarters for single enlisted troops brought about by the large and rapid increase in ATC's training commitment. One recommended solution was to billet junior enlisted personnel downtown with a cost-of-living allowance over the standard Basic Allowance for Quarters.

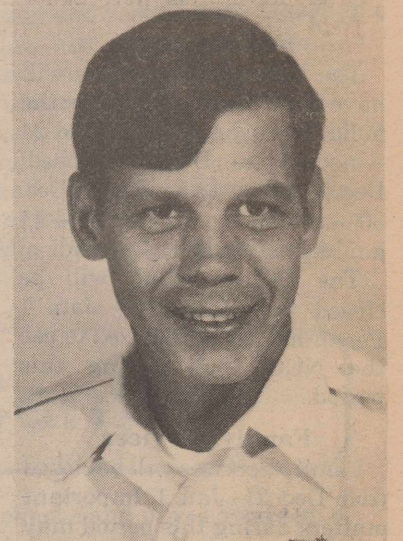

Also in the area of quarters, a change from the now standard ranch oak motif in dormitory rooms to a modular furniture design was discussed.

Finally, on the same subject, the matter of allowing junior enlisted married personnel priority for on-base quarters was examined.

Good news for women in uniform was announced at the conference. The women's utility uniform will be available in the field in February.

One area of discussion which may foreshadow a major change in the military justice area was commanders' prerogatives when giving an Article 15. The new policy, now under study, would allow commanders the leeway to give an Article 15 without creating an Unfavorable Information File and without withholding an assignment.

Chief Guidas' comment on the conference characterized it as "very productive" and called for a greater interchange of ideas and information among ATC senior enlisted advisors.

President backs letters

President Carter has endorsed the suggestion made by several members of Congress and the Attorney General that Americans write the Iranian mission at the United Nations to demand release of the hostages held in Iran.

He also endorsed a suggestion made by the American Charge d'Affaires in Iran, Bruce Laingen, who is being held at the foreign mission, that church bells be rung each noon until the hostages are released.

The White House said recently that it is of overriding importance that Iranian authorities understand Americans are united in their determination not to yield to blackmail and in the demand for the safe return of the hostages.

The address of the Iranian mission to the United Nations is 622 Third Ave., Thirty-fourth floor, New York, N.Y., 10017.

F-16 names

Judges for the Air Training Command "Name the F-16 Contest" passed up a name that conjures up visions of a fast moving object in favor of one connoting the deadly sting the aircraft is capable of delivering. "Scorpion," the name submitted by Capt. William S. Herlehy, 3450th Technical Training Group, Lowry AFB, Colo., was selected as the command's first choice.

Finishing second was "Starstreak" entered by Amn. Rohan Piyadasa, 47th Organizational Maintenance Squadron, Laughlin AFB, Texas. Third place was shared by members of two other commands: 2nd Lt. James Thorstad, Strategic Air Command's 320th Field Maintenance Squadron, Mather AFB, Calif., and SSgt. Juan Ortiz, Jr., Air Force System Command's Wilford Hall USAF Hospital, Lackland AFB, Texas. Both submitted "Enforcer" for consideration.

Commissary schedule

The commissary will be closed Christmas Day and reopen on Wednesday. It will also close Jan. 1 in observance of New Year's Day and reopen on Jan. 2.

Reese volunteers help with 'Goodfellow' project

Several Reese people have joined the "Goodfellows" in their annual Christmas project for underprivileged children in the Lubbock area.

Reese volunteers helped the Goodfellows package special gift packs that will be distributed to area youth on Christmas morning. Approximately 10,000 children are expected to receive snacks and toys in this the 45th year of the annual community project.

More volunteers are still needed to help distribute the packages on Christmas morning. Those interested in participating in the program should be at the East Broadway entrance of the South Plains Fairgrounds (corner of Ave. A and E. Broadway) at 4 a.m. Tuesday.

Lubbock's "Goodfellows"

project isn't the only Christmas campaign for disadvantaged children that Reese has supported. More than 1,000 new and good used toys were donated by base personnel for the annual Toys for Tots campaign.

The drive, an off shoot of the Lubbock Marine Corps drive, was sponsored on base by the 1958th Communication Squadron.

Clovis, Denver City nab Christmas Classic titles

Led by all-American guard Bubba Jennings's record setting performance, Clovis, N.M. swept through the President's Division last weekend while Denver City was ending El Paso Cathedral's three-year rein in the Commander's Division of the Reese Christmas Classic.

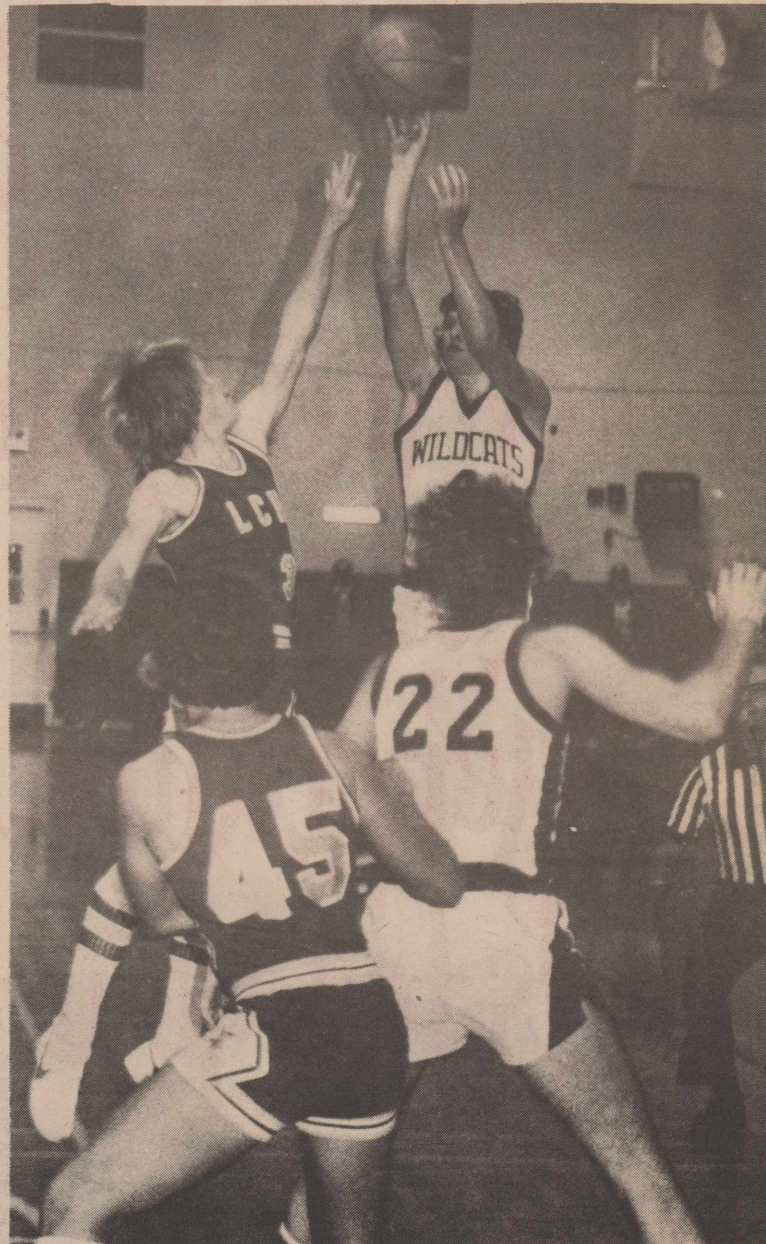

Jennings, a 5 foot 9 ball handling wizard with an outside touch, averaged just over 27 points per game in the three-day tourney, a feat unmatched in the classic's five year history. His heady play earned him the President's Division Most Valuable Player award and his team its first Reese title.

But Jennings wasn't the only Clovis player to earn post tourney honors. Teammate John Robbins, the 6 foot 5 pivot man, was also named to the all-tournament team. Rounding out the all-tourney squad were Tim Perrin, LCHS; Sam Law, Coronado; and Jerry Alaniz, Andrews.

Clovis, the top cage squad in New Mexico last year, blew past Andrews 107-66, edged Lubbock Coronado, 63-60 and routed Lubbock Christian 91-63 enroute to the crown.

Second place in the tourney went to Lubbock Christian with Lubbock Coronado beating Dunbar 66-50 for third place.

A disappointment in the tourney was Abilene Cooper. The touted squad was expected to battle Clovis for the title but the team arrived without suspended Woody Martin, a 6 foot 9 prep all-American. Without the "aircraft carrier" in

Commander's Division

For the first time since 1976, there is a new champion in the Commander's Division.

Denver City shocked El Paso Cathedral, 58-55, to nab the title in a see-saw battle. The Mustangs won the game at the charity stripe connecting on 24 or 31 attempts while Cathedral shot a dismal 13 of 28 from the line.

Mark Ivie, the small school's MVP, controlled the game for Denver City, hitting 12 points. Serapio Arguijo, who scored 13 in the finals, also made the all-tournament team.

All-tourney selections from other schools were: Sam Govea, Cathedral; Dennis Green, Idalou; Kerry Lassiter, Olney; and Joe Bob Wynn, Morton.

Morton defeated Boys Ranch, 74-47, for third place and Olney dumped Idalou, 71-56, for fifth.
