Grant helps local school bring agriculture to the classroom

The Texas Farm Bureau's (TFB) learning from the Ground Up Garden Grant program is helping prepare local students for success no matter what field they choose.

Stratford High School is one Texas school to receive grant funding through the program.

The funds will be used for Greenhouse Operations in the Ag Dept.

"We are excited to receive these funds for use here in our community Scott Hudson, Sherman County Farm Bureau president said. "The grant program helps provide a hands-on learning experience for our students for many years to come."

The program is designed to give Texas schoolchildren the opportunity to form the connection between growing their own gardens and what farmers and ranchers do to provide food on a much larger scale.

Learning from the Ground Up grants are awarded to help schools start new gardens for Greenhouse Operations in the Ag Dept.

Hudson noted students learn real-world experiences and just how important agriculture is to all of our lives, not just farmers and ranchers.

"The moment when one of our students realizes the food on their plate is directly related to the farmers and ranchers in Texas is crucial to Texas Agriculture both right now and in the future," Hudson said. "This grant will help us show that in a fun, interactive and educational way."

Additional information on the grant program can be found on www.texasfarmbureau.org

Stratford Star will be closed Monday, May 28, for Memorial Day.

Mother's Day Fashion Show at Legacy

By Paula Nusz

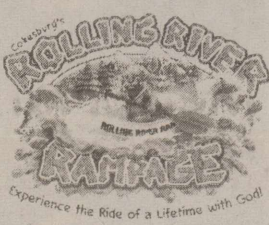

Legacy Assisted Living held a Mother's Day Fashion Show on Friday, May 11, 2018. Legacy female residents had designed Hobby Shirts, and they wore their creations for the fashion show. Hobby Shirts are making a return to casual wear this season. Hobby Shirts are generally either blue chambray or light weight denim work shirts. These shirts are then decorated with handwork of all types, appliques, stencils, fabric painting or whatever one would want. The ladies had a choice of quilt blocks (donated from area quilters), lace, ribbon, fabric, and crocheted pieces.

Eleven beautiful models walked the Legacy runway for the show. The themes of the jacket/shirts varied from cattle and horses, butterflies, flowers, New Mexico, Texas, woodlands, and patriotic. The ladies were great models and did an excellent job showing off their shirts.

The music chosen for the show was Doris Day's Greatest Hits. Legacy's Charles McClain was the music man, and he kept the songs streaming during the show and refreshment time. The refreshments were Apricot Dessert and Moji-Tea made by the Legacy food service staff. Blue floral balls sitting atop crystal pedestals and an assortment of picture frames with poems about mothers were used for the table decorations. The picture frames were given away as door prizes.

Over fifty people attended the show. That included Legacy residents, community members, family members and persons associated with the hospital district. Many hugs were shared around the room. Thank you to everyone who attended the fashion show or who donated items for the shirts. Dalhart and the area are very generous, and Legacy residents reap the benefit of your kindness. Legacy Assisted Living is located in Dalhart, Texas.

Dear Graduates

As we prepare for graduations all across our country, the anticipation builds for these students. The anticipation of the unknown. For some, it will be attempting to understand the world of college. For others, it will be joining the workforce and starting a family. Regardless of the changes ahead, they can be scary and exciting at the same time. This reminds me of faith.

When I learned who God truly was and began to try my best to live for Him, there was this feeling of uncertainty about the future. I knew God was calling me into a life that was different from anything I'd lived up to that point. It was exciting and scary at the same time. But that is how this life as a believer is uncertain. Every day presents a new opportunity to reach people with the Gospel. Every day presents a new opportunity to live out my faith so that others can know God. But every day is different. I never know who I will encounter or what God has in store for my day.

I would encourage those young graduates to remember to keep God in the forefront of your life as you journey out into this world. Realize that every day is a new day, no matter how good or bad the previous day was. Realize that God can and will use you to advance His purposes if you surrender to His will for your life. Get engaged in a local church.

I can't tell you how many people have the unbiblical worldview that they can have their relationship with God at home by reading the Bible on their own and praying to Him. I do not dispute that those are good things to do, but God calls you to be with His people in community. In the New Testament, Paul organizes local church bodies and places people in charge of them (see I Timothy 1:1, 8). Jesus also taught in the synagogues throughout His ministry, never speaking against the place of gathering for learning and spiritual growth. This indicates that Jesus Himself approves of believers gathering together to learn and grow.

Do not fall into the trap of the world, where you allow that which it tells you to dictate and shape your beliefs. Instead, read and learn God's Word and allow it to shape your life.

I will be praying for our young people as they search for God's purposes in their lives. And I can promise one thing for sure if God is at the center of your lives, bigger things are coming.

God bless,

Pastor Tim

Tales from No Man's Land Museum

A name that is especially familiar in the history of Texas and Cimarron Counties in the Oklahoma Panhandle is Boss Neff (Boss Sebastian Neff). He is often recalled as being an early rancher and settler, but as a younger man he had a daring life that included riding with Los Ciboleros. An artifact of that time is the 15" blade of a lance he found on the Coldwater Creek and gave to the No Man's Land Museum in Goodwell.

According to The Handbook of Texas Online/Texas State Historical Association, the Ciboleros were Mexican buffalo hunters who roamed the Llano Estacado for nearly two centuries (The name was derived from the Spanish Cibolo, the term for buffalo). They made an annual expedition to provide meat for their families. The Ciboleros were legendary hunters using bows and arrows and the lance. Riding to the side of the buffalo, the Cibolero hunter drove the razor-sharp lance point into his prey. A skilled lancer could bring down as many as twenty-five buffalo during a single chase.

Neff was born in Ohio in 1866, but his sense of adventure brought him west as a young man. It's known that he was 20 years old when he left his name and "1886" on Autograph Rock in Cimarron County. In the book, Some Experiences of Boss Neff in the Texas and Oklahoma Panhandle, Neff relates a truly amazing tale of joining a group of Los Ciboleros in a buffalo hunt.

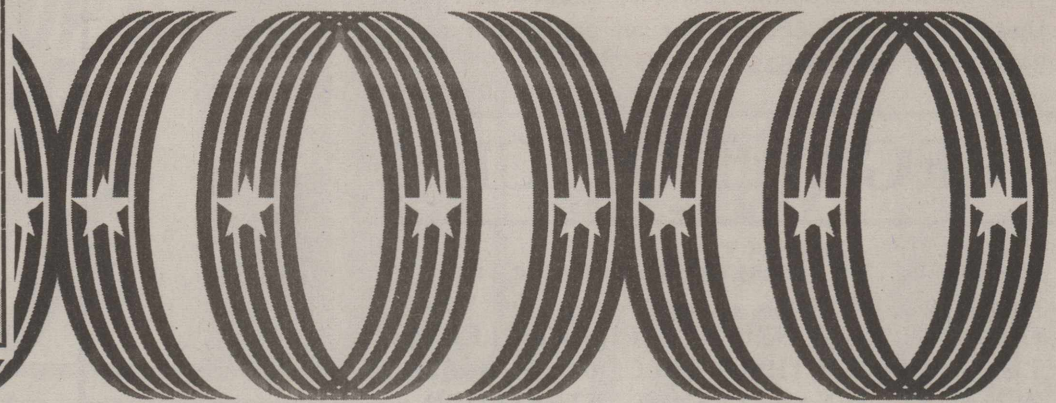

A man named Henry Ivings and Neff met Juan Trujillo and other hunters. They had lances, six shooters, and rifles and were on their way to the Texas Panhandle and No Man's Land. Neff and his friend were invited to join the hunters to help skin, stake out and flesh the hides, and cut the fleshy parts of the meat into strips for drying purposes. It was on this trip that Neff saw the lance that was carried in a scabbard. He remembered the lance as being a steel blade 12 to 14 inches long that was attached to a staff about seven feet in length. It was carried in a scabbard on the horse extended to the side and above the horse's head. Neff was impressed with the speed of the Ciboleros as they rode full speed among the buffalo and used the lance to fell the huge animals.

The Encyclopedia of Oklahoma History and Culture records that Neff and his brother Ira joined in the cattle business in 1887. In 1888, Boss Neff purchased his first cattle using the NF brand and grazed them on Hackberry Creek in present Texas County. Neff later homesteaded and helped organize Beaver County. He married Ida Eubank in 1893, and moved his family to Hooker in 1909. Boss Sebastian Neff was inducted into the Oklahoma Hall of Fame in 1937. He was 81 when he died and is buried in the Hooker Cemetery. He had the perspective of seeing the passing of the buffalo and the advancements and tragedies of the 20th Century.

Although Neff is mainly remembered today as a rancher and business man, he had a sense of history and understood the importance of saving a lance blade from a period of time that has been lost forever. The date when he and his brother began cattle ranching would indicate that the lance blade he gave to the No Man's Land Museum would be over 130 years old.

The Museum is open on Tuesday - Friday, 10 AM - 12 AM and 1 PM - 4 PM and Saturday 10 AM - 4 PM. Follow the Museum on Facebook@NoMansLand Museum. The No Man's Land Museum preserves the history of this very unique part of Oklahoma. Membership to the Society is of great importance and is open to anyone interested in history.
