Success of tiger preserves renews old concerns in India

EDITOR'S NOTE: Wildlife, from 1,827 to 4,000, according to cenincluding the gorgeous predators, is endangered in many parts of the world, and tigers are faring badly except in India where they enjoy the protection of special preserves. The save-the-tiger program has been widely applauded. Still, not everybody loves a tiger.

By MORT ROSENBLUM AP Special Corresponent

RANTHAMBHORE TIGER RESERVE, India — The tiger, back from the edge of extinction, has been saved so successfully in India that man-eaters and cattle-killers are again causing alarm.

After 11 years of Project Tiger India's Bengal tigers have increased sus figures just released. There were 40,000 in the 1930s.

International conservationists call the results a rare triumph in a world that is rapidly losing its wildlife to human encroachment, poaching and uncontrolled hunting.

"India has done well," says George Schaller of the New York Zoological Society, a tiger expert who once feared for their future. He recently told a reporter "There is nothing like coming up suddenly on a tiger, hearing it approach, and feeling its power and Schaller says only a rare man-eater is dangerous to humans. Most tigers attack only if threatened.

You get the real feeling of the tiger when you stand without the facial expressions, its proportions," he says. "If you take a step too close, you hear a low growl, and then you take a step back. Given any chance at all, he will give you the benefit of the doubt."

Samar Singh, joint secretary of India's Department of Environment, acknowledged that Project Tiger raised some problems, but he pronounced it a clear success.

'Tigers do kill some cattle, and attack some people, but we must not exaggerate this," he says. "After all, how many people die in traffic acci-

Authorities argue it is up to villagers and herdsmen to stay clear of the project's 15 reserves to allow tigers and other wildlife to increase

Samar Singh gave no casualty figures, but said the number was dropping. Other officials, who asked anonymity, said nearly 100 people were killed last year, and the numbers were growing.

"It's impossible to tell since every unsolved murder gets blamed on the tigers," says Mahendra Vyas, a lawyer and honorary Rajasthan State game warden. "The unofficial figure s around 125, and the actual one is probably substantial.'

With 725 million people in a country a third the size of the United States, the 9,500 square miles given over to tiger reserves have an effect.

At Ranthambhore, a ruggedly beautiful forest among ancient ruins 250 miles south of New Delhi, herders push cattle into forbidden areas to graze. Elsewhere, farmers plant cutting cane, sometimes fall to an errant tiger.

Mostly, tigers find plenty of deer and wild boar in the reserves. But an aging or outcast tiger can turn maneater. Once a tiger discovers humans run far more slowly than antelopes, he is tempted to try again.

"Sometimes prey is in short supply, and tigers stray off the reserve,' says C.B. Singh, director of Corbett Reserve in Uttar Pradesh State where 24 human deaths were blamed on tigers in 1983.

A man-eater was shot by a hunter in October in Orissa state while feasting on what local authorities said was his 40th victim.

Naturalist Arjan Singh, author of a new book "Tiger! Tiger!" notes "the turnaround in numbers that sugar up to reserve boundaries and, has been accompanied by an unprecedent outbreak of man-eating.

> Writing recently in The Observer of London, he noted the heavy pressure of expanding populations and asked: "Will the huge effort of Project Tiger...prove no more than a delaying action, a brief pause in the tiger's march toward extinction?"

Kentucky strip mine new home for geese

By DAVID McCORMICK Associated Press Writer

CENTRAL CITY, Ky. — With coal shovels towering overhead and the to leave the pits open to be filled earth trembling under trucks the size of locomotives, strip mines seem an unlikely home for 300 giant Canada geese relocated in an unusual reclamation project.

Peabody Coal Co. filled two abandoned pits with water, planted some grain around them and turned them into what U.S. Fish and Wildlife biologist Frank Boyd called an "ideal goose habitat.

Similar projects in southern Indiana and Illinois have transplanted about 1,000 geese from Chicago suburbs, where they had become tame and a nuisance to areas where they can multiply into wild flocks suitable for hunting, Boyd said.

The program, begun about three years ago, was a cooperative venture of state and federal wildlife officials and Peabody.At the time, the government was looking for a new home for the geese and Peabody was looking for cheaper ways to reclaim abandoned strip pits.

'It's just one of those things that works out so it's of benefit to both sides," Boyd said.

Ordinarily, state regulations require stripped land to be graded back to its original contours, covered with topsoil and seeded with grass or trees. But in exchange for importing the geese and maintaining the area, Peabody is allowed with water.

'There are considerable savings that can be realized by that," said Jim Coyne, Peabody's director of environmental services.

Coyne said the project also brought some welcome good publicity to the company - whose extensive strip mining in Muhlenberg County was condemned in the popular country song "Paradise," recorded in the 1970s.

'Everybody's been enthusiastic about this," he said. "I'm not aware of any negative reaction to it at all."

Giant Canada geese were believed to be extinct from the 1930s until 1962. The ones adopted by Peabody came from around Chicago's O'Hare Airport, where their numbers had increased to become a nuisance, Boyd said.

The pits here were stocked with about 250 birds last year. Since then, about 50 to 80 goslings have hatched, officials said. For a first year, it was an extremely good increase," said Randy Hedges, a state Fish and Wildlife Department field officer who supervises the project

Homeowners' group sued for 'white only' restriction

HOUSTON (AP) — A "white only" deed restriction in a Houston subdivision has been ignored for years, say residents and real estate agents, and they don't understand why the Justice Department filed suit on the issue Friday in Washington.

The Justice Department filed suit against the homeowners' association of University Oaks because a prop-erty covenant there forbids lots in the area to "ever be sold, conveyed, leased, or devised to any person or persons other than of the Caucasian

"I'm really surprised that it's happening in that area because there is a multiplicity of races in the population there," said Judson Robinson Jr., a black real estate agent who handles property all over Houston. He said his firm has leased property in Unversity Oaks to blacks and to other races for years.

University Oaks has about 150 homes, all in the $30,000 to $125,000 range, in a series of blocks adjacent to the University of Houston.

Ferris Block, a former University of Houston spokesman who lives in the subdivision, said it is a small neighborhood with an academic fla-

Kaufman County Sheriff Roy Brockway, left, is consoled by friend Larry Homer after Brockway was found guilty of violating the civil rights of a theft suspect who claimed he was beaten by the sheriff.

Sheriff found guilty

Kauiman C Sheriff Roy Brockway was found guilty Friday of violating the civil rights of a theft suspect who claimed he was beaten in the county jail, but the veteran lawman emphatically said he would refuse to

The jury failed to reach a verdict on a second misdemeanor civil rights violation count against Brockway. U.S. District Judge Joe Fish declared a mistrial and gave prosecutors seven days to decide whether to retry the second charge.

Sentencing was set for Jan. 11. Brockway, who was described by prosectors as a "bully with a badge" but defended himself as "a soldier in the war on crime" and was supported by townspeople, said he was disappointed in the guilty verdict.

'Well, that's our system," he said. Asked if he would resign, Brockway answered, "No!"

Under Texas law, Brockway will be stripped of his certification as a lawman, but could remain in his job since sheriffs are not required to be state certified lawmen.

Brockway was convicted of misdemeanor civil rights violation in the case of Timothy Barrickman, 24, who was a theft suspect in October 1983. He faces a penalty of one year in prison The panel deadlocked on the case of Jeffrey Lee McDougal, 24, who visited the Kaufman County jail in March 1981 to inquire about recovering some stolen property.

The jury began deliberating Wednesday afternoon after more than two days of testimony, and reached its verdict after resuming its deliberations Friday morning. On Wednesday, Brockway, who took the stand in his own defense, said he struck the men because they

of Houston professors, many of whom are black," said Block. "There are at least a dozen black families living there.

He said the racial restriction has not been enforced for years, but is kept on the books to protect the other deed restrictions.

Block said an attorney advised the homeowner association that if the racial restriction was removed, it would invalidate restrictions which are used to keep commercial estab-lishments from building in the neighborhood.

Houston has no zoning and residential properties are protected only by the deed restrictions, said Block, but residents have to enforce them for the restrictions to be effective. He said the association retains an attorney for that reason.

"There are blacks and Indians living there," said Block. "There are at least a dozen black families. The restriction is there, but it's just understood that it is not applicable. It's not enforcable, but it's just not worth fooling with to get it

The neighborhood association in the past has filed several suits to keep commercial developers from moving into the neighborhood. Recently, the group won suits to block two college fraternities from moving into the area.

Carter's Furniture

Block said the deed restrictions are renewed every 10 years and were last approved by the neighborhood in 1980.

enants have been held to be uncon-stitutional since 1948 and have been illegal since the passage of the Fair Housing Act of 1968. The deed restrictions for University Oaks were drawn up in 1939.

Justice Department spokesman John V. Wilson said the suits were filed after some homeowners in University Oaks complained. Named in one suit was the University Oaks Civic Club and its presi-

Racially restrictive land deed cov- dent, John Baust. The suit asks the court to order the civic club to remove the restriction from all recorded deeds and to bar the club from enforcing it.

> A second suit was filed against Harris County Clerk Anita Rodeheaver. It asks the court to order her to ensure that no racially restrictive deed is recorded and to notify the real estate industry that such deeds are invalid and cannot be recorded.

The National Weather Service forecasts snow and rain for today for the Northwestand rain for the Southwest.

Warmer temperatures in store for Permian Basin

A warm weekend is in store for the Permian Basin, with temperatures returning to the 70s after several days of cold weather. Today will be fair in the morning and increasingly cloudy this afternoon, with a high in the low 70s and winds from the south and southwest at 10-20 mph. Tonight's low will be in the low 40s, and Sunday will be partly cloudy and warmer, with a high in the mid 70s, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Friday's high of 61 was 18 degrees below the record high for the date of 79, set in 1966, while the overnight low of 25 was 10 degrees above the 1978 record low of 15.

STATE

Dry high pressure centered over the coastal bend again provided sunny skies across much of Texas Friday, as high thin clouds steaked across the mid portion of the state from the South Plains to the coastal bend area. A trough of low pressure across the Panhandle caused no significant pattern other than a wind shift, the National Weather Service said. South and southwest winds at 10 to 15 mph were noted over most of the state Friday afternoon, except along the middle and lower coast, where an easterly breeze was observed, and in the northern panhandle where the trough had shifted the winds to the northwest at 10 mph.

Temperatures near 70 in the Panhandle topped those in other parts of the state, while readings along the coast were the coolest, the weather service

Most temperatures averaged from the mid 50s to the mid 60s with extremes ranging from 52 degrees at Galveston to a mild 73 degrees at

The forecast for today called for mostly fair across West Texas, becoming partly cloudy in the afternoon with widely scattered showers in the far west. Lows should range from the upper 30s in the Panhandle to the mid 40s in the southern sections. Highs mostly should be in the low 70s.

In the rest of the state, there should be continued fair skies with a gradual warming trend today through Sunday. Lows should range from 37 in parts of North Texas to the 60s along the coast and lower Rio Grande Valley, with highs in the 60s and 70s.

NATION

Snowfall tapered off Friday over the Northeast, but cold air still blanketed the eastern half of the nation with record lows as far south as the Gulf Coast states, while the Plains had unseasonably warm weather. At Harrison, Ark., the noon temperature was 51 degrees - 43 degrees warmer than the low of 8 recorded at midnight. Early afternoon temperatures were only in the teens in the upper Ohio Valley and in the 20s over parts of New England, the mid-Atlantic states and the Great Lakes.

The cold extended all the way to Florida. At 1 p.m. EST temperatures across the state ranged from the low 40s in the northeast to the lower 60s in the extreme south. The readings in southern and eastern Florida were over 20 degrees colder than at the same time Thursday. Record lows for the date were reported from Texas to Florida. They included 33 degrees at Corpus Christi, Texas; 2 at Evansville, Ind.; 48 at Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; 15 at Huntsville, Ala.; 21 at Meridian, Miss.; 45 at Miami; 48 at Miami Beach, and 7 at Paducah, Ky. Most of the previous records were set in 1977, but Miami's earlier mark of 47 had stood since 1945.

A freeze warning was issued for the night in northern sections of the Florida Peninsula with frost warnings posted for central and south central sections of the state.

But he added he would not support reservoir construction "for an idditional half a million people that real estate developers and the chamber of commerce hope to attract" to the area over the next 30 year

Truan earlier criticized the White-Lewis-Hobby plan for not doing enough to protect bays and estuaries.

The bottom line of my opposition to the ... proposal is that it puts the cart before the horse," said Truan. "It proposes a massive scheme of water development projects, that is, dams and reservoirs, before any semblance of a self-respecting water plan is in place and given half a chance.

Sierra Club spokesman Ken Kramer also blasted the plan for putting more emphasis on water development and providing less protection for bays and estuaries than a 1983 water package which passed the Senate but died in a House committee.

"A strong bay and estuary protection bill will not put an end to reservoir construction in the state, Kramer noted, pointing out there would be a problem with the legislature directing control of funds for reservoir projects. "The system would be based on politics," he said, "rather than based on need. Kramer said the overall package reflects concessions made to water development interests. Specifically, he noted that the goal in the new plan regarding bays and estuaries is the maintenance of "ecological health," while the objective in the 1983 plan was maintenance of "the historical productivity" of bays and estuaries.

Kramer said simple maintenance of the species in bays and estuaries will not provide maintenance at the levels of production and harvest that historically have been characteristic of the fishing and shrimping industries. Henry said the TML also has concerns about the bay and estuary issue. "Since cities have a major financial stake in most existing and future reservoirs, we naturally have an interest in assuring that supplies for domestic and industrial use continue to receive priority consideration," he said. "We recognize the importance of fish and wildlife habitats, and we want to work with the legislature toward mutually-acceptable policies that meet both needs.

But Henry said the TML is "highly supportive" of the bond-financing provisions in the White-Lewis-Hobby package, adding that $600 million is not enough.

"In view of the enormous expenditures that will be necessary to meet our water requirements during the next decade and beyond, I think we all realize that the $600 million in state financial assistance that is proposed...is not enough," Henry told the committee, conceding that there obviously are political limitations on the amount of state-bond financing that the voters are willing to accept." Such a bond package would have to be approved by voters if the provision is passed by the Legisla-Whatever the amount in (in the bond provision)...it will be a giant step forward in comparison to the zero amount in water-development funding that has been approved in the past decade," Henry said.

The committee will be scheduling further hearings on the plan, which is to be considered next year by the 1985 Legislature.

Sen. Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso, who chairs the Joint Committee on Water Resources, said that although the White-Lewis-Hobby plan is a tentative draft proposal, it is "likely to provide the basis upon which we will try to build a comprehensive legislative program for dealing with Texas' water needs.

Haile and Luckey gained on the Monte Carlo with Compton trailing as the three chased the car north on Godfrey, where it turned left into Lehigh.

"They were going so fast that they left the roadway, went into a vacant lot and were coming back to the street," Compton testified. "Jeff (Haile) had slowed down for the turn so he's coming around right when the car was coming back.

According to Haile, the passengerside door of the suspects' car opened and Gipson fell or jumped out of the car. Haile said he struck the man with the fender of his vehicle.

Gipson then got up and ran, pursued on foot by Compton, while Haile chased Lujan in the car. Haile, who said he never had shot at a car before, testified he fired five rounds at the vehicle Asked by Assistant District Attorney Chuck Roades why Lujan finally stopped in the 3600 block of Lehigh, Haile said: "I really don't know why he stopped the car other than he had a flat rear tire and a row of mailboxes hung on his front."

Haile said Lujan, when stopped, 'kept shrugging his shoulders and acted like he didn't know what I was saying or doing. Then he put it into gear and I shot out his front tire."

Compton, meanwhile, chased after Gipson, who jumped fences and ran through yards before being stopped by Luckey. Jewelry, identified by Mrs. Hochman and Mrs. Earhart who both testified Friday, was found in the yard and on the roof, testimony indicated. Although the unmarked cars all had sirens going, Luckey's was the only one equipped with flashing lights on the grill, which he had on, Compton said. "Is this standard procedure to chase someone in an unmarked vehicle?" Shelby, who was assisted by Jim Eggleston, asked. Well, when you can't get a marked unit up there," Compton said. "It would not be standard procedure to chase someone in an unmarked unit for a traffic violation. or a misdemeanor. But felonies of this magnitude - we'd been working on this so long it'd be standard procedure.

Midland Police Department Narcotics Division detectives were placed on "special detail" in the north part of Midland the day Lujan and Gipson were arrested, Compton testified. "We were flooding the north end of Midland where we were being hit the most...My whole division was on detail because it had been their (burglars') MO (mode of operation) not to hit just once, but two to four times.'

· Jewelry reported missing in the two burglaries totaled almost $13,000, according to police reports. Mrs. Hochman said all of her jewelry was returned but Mrs. Earhart testified she was still missing a few pieces

The trial is to resume at 8:30 a.m. Monday.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Former organization will use methods feed a hungry child. workers in Sen. Gary Hart's presidential campaign have organized a a novel fund-raising method for aiding victims of famine in Ethiopia and other parts of the world.

Initially, Shore said, well-known restaurants in Washington and other cities will be asked to make tax-deductible contributions to the fund to stir interest. Later, letters will be sent to 15,000 or 20,000 of the nation's 381,000 restaurants.

A tentative draft of the letter would tell restauranteurs that as a contributor he or she would carry a certficate in the window saying, "When you buy a meal here, you

Shore said he wants to keep the effort clear of Hart's likely 1988 presidential ambitions. Hart will serve as national co-chairman, but the Senate majority leader, Republican Bob Dole of Kansas, has been asked to be the other co-chairman,

North Central Texas claims it's 'Quarter Horse Capital'

By BECKY BEELER

GAINESVILLE, Texas (AP) -Texas is quarter horse country particularly an area of North Central Texas encompassing Gainesville, Denton and Aubrey that has claimed the informal title of "Quarter Horse Capital of the World."

The Lone Star State lays claim to the majority of the nation's registered quarter horse popula-tion, with 340,755. And the North Central Texas area is home to most of them, says Bob Hender-son of the Texas Quarter Horse Association.

State District Judge Richard Sullivant, who owns Gainesville's Sullivant Ranch, estimates there are 500 horse farms between Gainesville and Denton. He estimates quarter horses make up 90 percent of the Cooke County horse industry.

"They (the farms) may be small places with just a couple of brood mares — there's no telling how many farms there are like that," Sullivant said.

"A good ranch, if run right, can generate $1 million — $2 million in annual gross revenues," Sullivant said.

But he added, gross revenues are not all profit. "...It does take a lot of money to run a ranch.

The Texas Agriculture Experimental Station estimates there are 1 million horses in the state and that they generate about a thousand times that much - $1 billion - in business each year.

QUARTER HORSES are said to be the world's most versatile horses, equally adept at short-distance racing, cattle cutting and pleasure riding.

The horses stand about five feet tall at their backs, weigh about 1,100 pounds and characteristically have well-developed muscles and strong athletic abili-

Climate is perhaps the best rea-son for the location of several prominant ranchers in the area. Texas' relatively warm winters and hot summers allow for yearround workouts for the horses, and the sandy soils in the area are not so quick to turn muddy during spring rains.

Sullivant believes Texas' rich heritage has also drawn horse people. He describes North Texas as a "hotbed" of the industry, in which the history of the Texas cowboy has made the quarter horse "so much bigger than it would have been.

Sullivant said not only can one find Texas' highest quality quar-ter horses in North Texas, but also the finest quality quarter-horse trainers and breeders. Their presence, he said, has attracted the industry.

Income in the quarter horse industry is derived from four major sources: breeding, buying and selling, training and competition prize money.

COOKE County Agriculture Extension Agent Craig Rosenbaum said most of the top quarter horse farms in the county are involved in breeding horses.

Sullivant, whose ranch began as a training, buying and selling facility, has within the last two years expanded into breeding.

He recently lost his prize stud, "Impressive Poise," to a bacterial infection. The stallion, valued between $2.5 and $3 million, could earn yearly breeding fees of up to $600,000 Sullivant said. The Sullivant Ranch hosts the biennial World Classic Sale which has, over the past four years, brought more than 1,500 people to the area for a stay of as many as four days, and netted between $1.3 and $1.8 million in sales.

"It's not unusual for a horse to bring $10,000," Sullivant said. "We had one right in this arena bring $2.5 million.

The average training fees of $400-$1,000 per month, per horse may pay for ranch operations.

But the real money is in breed-

Sullivant estimates that a good horse can guarantee its owner between $100,000 and $500,000 in stud fees alone in a year.

AND HE SAYS the horse industry can provide local economies with a trickle-down effect that can turn $100,000 into 100 times that amount in local busi-

Trapper resorts to trickery

HALIFAX, Pa. (AP) - Sometimes Bob Mayberry resorts to trickery to further his new career as "The Country Trapper."

Mayberry hung out his shingle as wildlife pest-control trapper in February, and he has already trapped 88 squirrels that had invaded people's attics and walls. But the easiest assignment he's handled so far was getting rid of a woodpecker/that was waking up a Dauphin County man bright and early every morning.

"I stapled an inflatable vinyl snake

2 feet long on the clapboard the bird was riding," said Mayberry, "and he hasn't been back since."

Unlike the mythical Pied Piper who tootled the rats - and the children - out of Hamelin, Mayberry has to go out and tangle with his prey and usually catches them alive.

He pulled a 5-foot black snake from behind a drop ceiling by hand and had to shoot a skunk that was hiding inside a house wall with only his tail showing.

Mayberry hasn't quite figured out how to handle his biggest assignment to date — rid an attic in Perry County of more than 1,000 bats.

But he's ordered a leather suit and a hood to avoid being scratched and bitten and a heavy-duty respirator to avoid the dung-laden dust and foul smell.

"I want to catch them and remove them," he said, "otherwise they'll move into somebody else's build-

Aside from squirrels, Mayberry is called to rid properties of skunks. So far, his technique in handling them has kept him from getting sprayed, although he wears a plastic raincoat and boots to move in close.

He developed the technique in his own back yard after live-trapping a skunk that was trying to get into his pheasant pen.

Peres: France could play role in Lebanon

"I think that French diplomacy can play a large role in resolving the Lebanese problem in a pragmatic, informal, but immediate way, Peres told reporters, referring to President Francois Mitterrand's recent visit to Damascus.

He said Mitterrand's impression of Syrian President Hafez Assad after the visit was "that he is not Israel's greatest friend. I agree with that."

Asked if he expected a new French initiative, the prime minister said: "I do not believe the Middle East is short of initiatives. I believe it is short of bridges. I do believe that French diplomacy can serve as an important bridge to reach over the differences that exist today between us and the Lebanese and the Syrians."

The major issue in Israel's negotia-tions with Lebanon on troop withdrawal is guaranteeing the security of Israel's northern border. Peres said Israel wanted some kind of Leb-

He said he did not oppose to the integration of the Israeli-trained Christian militia in the south with the Lebanese army as long as Israel is allowed to maintain "its special contact with it."

Peres told Le Monde that although the invasion of Lebanon had not given rise to a "moral crisis" in Israel, "the consequences are still important and we think that we must put an end to our presence there, which constitutes an obstacle

Thatcher to meet with Soviet official

LONDON (AP) - Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher on Friday urged equal concessions from the superpowers in upcoming arms control discussions and said she hoped for "realistic" talks this month with a top Soviet official, Mikhail S. Gorba-

At a year-end news conference, the Conservative prime minister also described terrorism - including the IRA's attempt to assassinate her and the prolonged coal strike as the most "devastating" events for her domestically in 1984.

On Dec. 16 in London, Mrs. Thatcher meets with Gorbachev, a member of the ruling Politburo who is considered the No. 2 man in the Kremlin. Of him, she said: "The differences between us are enormous.'

However, East and West share a common interest in preventing armed conflict, she said, "and therefore we must talk on the basis that we both have that interest."

Referring to preliminary arms talks scheduled Jan. 7-8 in Geneva, Switzerland, between U.S. and Soviet officials, she said concessions would materialize only if "they are mirrored by equal concessions from the other side - one for one, that is, on the basis of mutual respect.

However, she dismissed Soviet demands that British nuclear arms

"It is almost irrelevant," she said, maintaining Britain's Polaris missiles would equal 2.5 percent of the Soviet Union's strategic missiles.

Mrs. Thatcher, who is to meet with President Reagan on Dec. 22 in the United States, delivered her greatest praise vet of America and its role in the Atlantic alliance.

"We love America," she declared."What a fantastic role (America plays) in the world... Aren't we lucky that the leading power of the free world is such a generous country and so constructive.

The prime minister, who escaped death in an Irish Republican Army bomb blast at her Brighton hotel during the Conservative's Party annual conference in October, held out little hope of a new initiative to end the conflict in Northern Ire-

"The Irish problem has been going on for 400 years...one is very wary of raising expectations," she said. She reiterated that her government would never negotiate with the outlawed IRA, which is fighting a violent campaign to oust the British from Northern Ireland and unite the province with the Irish Repub-

However, Mrs. Thatcher said she would "consider" meeting Gerry Adams, president of the IRA's legal political front, Sinn Fein, if he takes his seat in the House of Commons.

Adams, who was elected in 1983 as one of 17 Northern Ireland members of the Commons, has refused to take his seat to protest at British policies.

"I do not talk to the IRA. I do not talk to violence," said Mrs. Thatcher... But if a person comes to take up his seat in Parliament...they could ask to see me. Whether or not I agreed to see them would be a matter for consideration.

The coal strike, which began March 12 over government plans to lose mines and cut thousands of jobs, has idled two-thirds of Britain's 174 mines and has brought the worst picket line violence in British history. Mrs. Thatcher said she did not know when it would end.

'This strike is sustained by violence," she said. "The government will never, never, never give in to

Clash erupts in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Militiamen traded machine gun and grenade fire with Lebanese army soldiers Friday, wounding four people and forcing the closure of two major road crossings between Beirut's Christian and Moslem sections.

It was the first major clash since militiamen were ordered off the streets Nov. 26 and the Lebanese army reinforced its patrols and positions along the mid-city "green line" frontier between Moslem west and Christian east Beirut.

Police and radio stations said the shootout began when gunmen fired several rocket-propelled grenades and machine guns at army positions in the old commercial center of Beirut.

One soldier who was manning a checkpoint on the eastern edge of the demarcation line suffered shrapnel wounds, and three motorists at the crossings were hit by bullets, according to the reports.

The army closed the Ring Road and Sodeco gateways to civilian traffic and then fired back, police and radio stations said.

Earlier, a six-member military council briefed militia commanders on a revised plan for the deployment of 1,200 army soldiers along a 22-mile stretch of coastal highway linking Beirut with Israel's occupation zone in south Lebanon.

The militia leaders were asked to respond to the plan by Friday eve-ning. But Druse leader Walid Jumblatt and Shiite Moslem leader Nabih Berri postponed their final decisions until today, according to military sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The original plan for the deployment of the army was vetoed by Jumblatt, who argued that it threatened Druse strongholds in the Chouf mountains overlooking the coastal road southeast of Beirut.

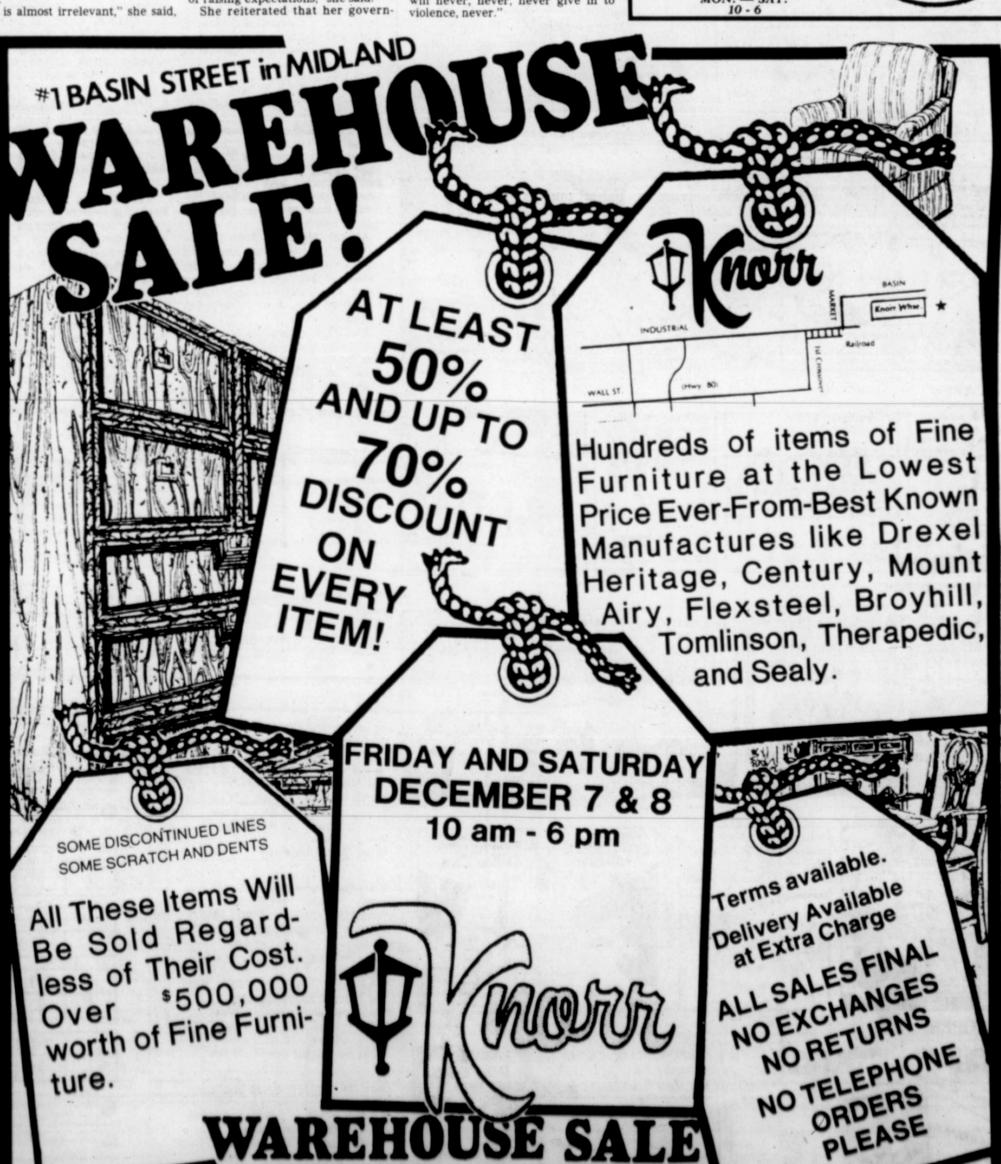

On Thursday, the Lebanese Cabinet instructed the military council to renegotiate the plan to win the backing of all militia commands.

Druse fighters battled intermittently Friday with Christian militiamen from the Lebanese Forces in the Kharroub region just north of the Israeli's Awali River defense

It was the fourth day of fighting in the Kharroub in the past week. Police said shells again fell on the power plant in Jiye, which is the main source of electricity for Beirut. The city has had major power out-ages since the plant was hit last Sun-

NEW YORK (AP) - Leontyne Price, for 23 years one of the Metropolitan Opera's leading sopranos, will announce next month that she is giving up her operatic career.

Miss Price, 57, said her singing career would continue, however, and would include a fecital at the Met in the near future.

She will make her formal farewell Jan. 3 in a film to be shown during the intermission of "Aida," her final performance at the Met, which will be broadcast on public television's "Live From the Met.

The album, due out next year, will be Jagger's first solo effort after two decades with the Rolling Stones. According to Luckman, the video is to be 55 minutes long - four times the length of Michael Jackson's "Thriller" - and will be filmed in Brazil in the next three weeks.

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) - University of Kentucky students shouldn't look for instant replays or seas of Big Blue pennants if they're signed up to take the history of Kentucky basketball next term, the professor says. "I don't have tickets to the games," conceded professor Humbert Nelli, author of the newly published book, "The Winning Tradition, a History of Kentucky Wildcat Basketball," and teacher of the three-credit history course.

"I think that UK basketball is serious," said Nelli, calling the sport "the most important traditional aspect in the state of Kentucky.

The university's history department offers such one-time courses every term, dealing with topics not covered in regular classes, said department chairman E. Rudolph Daniel. "The only thing that is different about this is that it's basketball and not some other aspect of the university," Daniel said.

Nelli, 54, is a specialist in American ethnic and urban history. He has taught at the school since 1967 and has written books about Italian immigrants. Nelli said the course's main purpose is to give students experience in methods of historical research, including use of oral history through the use of guest speakers.

"I'm taking something that's interesting, something that they like, and I'm going to teach them what a historian does in his research," he said.

'War of the crosses' renewed in Poland

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - About 100 students and two priests have renewed Poland's "war of the crosses" by staging a sit-in at a public high school where crucifixes were stripped from classroom walls, officials said Friday.

Also Friday, the country's Roman Catholic bishops warned that Communist authorities' removal of crosses from state-run schools and factories would stir "new tensions" in church-state relations following the slaying of a pro-Solidarity priest.

The protest at the 700-student vocational high school in Wloszczowa, 150 miles south of Warsaw, began Monday and classes have been suspended since Tuesday, a local government official said.

It was the first major dispute over crosses reported since March, when thousands of youths in rural Garwolin and neighboring Mietne, 40 miles south of Warsaw, protested the removal of crosses from school buildings.

Authorities, citing the separation of church and state, have forbidden the hanging of crosses in public

Describing the new protests, Stanislaw Sniecikowski, a spokesman for the provincial governor's office, said, "A group of about 100 students accompanied by two priests remains at the school" in Wloszczowa.

He said students had put up crucifixes over the weekend and they were taken down by school officials. The decision to suspend classes was made by the headmaster, Snieci-

"The youths do not want to leave the building and are demanding that the crosses be put back," Sniecikowski said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

Local government representatives were holding talks with the students and their parents, he said, adding that there has been no ultimatum from Communist authorities to end the protest.

Principal Julian Lis said about 15 percent of the 700 students were taking part in the protest, but he refused to elaborate.

In the protests last March, about 3,000 students from the Mietne cent of Poland's 37 million people school and three schools in Garwolin boycotted classes.

Classes resumed soon after in Garwolin, but the Mietne school stayed closed with authorities demanding students and parents sign statements agreeing to the crucifix

The standoff ended a month later after authorities agreed to permit one crucifix to hang at the agricultural high school. Authorities also promised there would be no reprisals against students and teachers who had joined the protest.

In their pastoral letter to be read in the country's churches on Sunday, Poland's bishops condemned the removal of crosses from places where believers study and work.

"Sometimes it seems to be a provocation," the bishops said. "We treat those acts as socially damaging." The letter raised the prospect of a renewed conflict with authorities over the removal of crosses placed in public institutions during 1980-81, before the free trade union Solidarity was outlawed. More than 90 per-

are Roman Catholic

The bishops warned that "irresponsible forces are causing new anxieties and tensions" following the October slaying of the Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko.

They reiterated their demand that crosses be allowed to remain in public buildings. "This is the stand of the nation...That is how the youth, defending crosses and seeking help in shaping their consciousness...see it," they said.

The letter was signed by Roman Catholic primate Cardinal Jozef Glemp and the bishops Thursday at the close of a three-day meeting in the southern shrine city of Czestochowa. It was released Friday by the episcopate in Warsaw

It was the first full meeting of the 84-member episcopate since Popieluszko was kidnapped Oct. 19, strangled to death and dumped in a reservoir where his body was found 11 days later.

Four secret police officers have been arrested in connection with his slaying and are expected to be formally indicted later this month.

Major Soviet newspapers, including the Communist Party daily Pravda, have carried the Tass reports.

The newspaper Sovietskaya Rossiya, in an article that did not specifically mention Union Car-bide, said: "The tragedy in Bhopal is an immediate outcome of the criminal policy of 'profit at all costs,' pursued by Western big business in the developing coun-

Reports of environmental disasters in the Soviet Union are rare. Those reported by the state-controlled press usually are attributed to natural causes. Large losses of life from plane crashes, earthquakes and other disasters within the Soviet Union are usually reported briefly, if at all.

Crop dusters really enjoy their work

EDITOR'S NOTE: You might think crop dusting is a young man's occupation, calling as it does for excellent health, sharp eyesight and quick reflexes. But a surprising lot of senior citizens are still active in aerial combat against boll weevils, grasshoppers and other pests. It seems to be a business that gets in the blood.

By HENRY S. ACKERMAN Associated Press Writer

TCHULA, Miss. - Bob Gunn throttled the Pawnee D Piper down a dusty cotton field airstrip, pulled back the joy stick and lofted his single-engine aircraft into the air

Gunn, 73, proprietor of the Bob Gunn Dusting Co. and perhaps the nation's oldest active crop duster, banked his plane sharply to the right, narrowly missing a grove of live oak trees. Then he settled down to his work.

Unlike other senior citizens who are irrevocably retired or physically incapable of similar work, Gunn was making his third of four flights that hot October morning. He was flying alone and obviously enjoying it.

His job was to defoliate a 50-acre cotton planting. It was a fraction of the 1,000 acres he would normally spray in a day.

He tends 20,000 acres he annually, sometimes with 10 sprayings each. During four passes over the field, Gunn let loose broad swaths of white mist on the plants five to eight feet below his wings as he dodged telephone poles, tree tops and a

MINUTES LATER, he taxied to a halt on the concrete slab at the end of his rented runway.

"It takes about a week to take the leaves off," Gunn says. The defoliantstrips green leaves off the plant so a mechanical picker then can harvest the already-blossoming white cotton

Gunn has been flying for a living for 49 years. He's a crop duster in an age when younger pilots call themselves aerial applicators and when many former pilots his age have taken themselves out of the skies.

George Willett, a World War II combat pilot who pioneered the spraying of cotton and other crops by night near his Huron, Calif., airstrip, may be the only active crop duster old enough to be in Gunn's league. At least that's what a number of his colleagues believe.

"I'm in the ballpark," was all Willett would admit.

Mabry Anderson, 68, executive director of the Mississippi Agricultural Aviation Association, who is writing a history of crop dusting's earliest days, suspects Gunn is the patriarch.

If so, the National Agricultural Aviation Association will be interested. The organization, comprised of 3,000 firms and based in Washington, D.C., hopes to find the oldest active crop duster and may give him an award at its convention

GUNN LEARNED to fly on his father's farm in Liberal, Kan., in 1928. In 1936, after a stint with a barnstorming group of stunt pilots called The Flying Aces, Gunn migrated to Mississippi. Using pre-World War II biplanes, he began to dust crops on the rich farmlands that flank the Mississippi for several hundred miles south of Memphis. Except for piloting bombers across the North Atlantic during World War II, Gunn has been spraying plantations and teaching others to ly ever since.

He's not getting rich. "Ain't been no money in this business since they raised the price of gasoline 10 years ago," he says.

The industry was born in 1923 when a commercial group called Huff-Daland Dusters Inc., the forerunner of Delta Air Services and Delta Airlines, paid pilots to grind chemical dust out of a hopper placed in the second seat of a biplane. The dust was spread over cotton fields in Mississippi to kill the

Today, with better equipment and chemicals, agricultural pilots annually spray 180 million acres of U.S. crops, one-sixth of all acreage in production. Operating a fleet of some 10,000 planes and helicopters and belching out high-powered, closely regulated chemicals, pilots today have better safety records and get better results than ever, says Harold Collins, executive director of the National Agricultural Aviation

Without aerial seeding and without aerial spraying of pesticides, insecticides, fodenticides, fungicides and defoliants, the United States' production of food and fiber would be $13.6 billion less each year and the country would not enjoy the commanding lead it holds in world productivity, Collins says.

The crop dusters battle against boll weevils and worms in this area, the cane borers in Louisiana's sugar cane fields, encroaching grass and grasshoppers in the north-central states and against a variety of other foes in other large crop states. In Washingon, they spray wheat and apples. In California, almost everything. In the South, from Texas to North Carolina, it's cotton, rice, sugar cane, peanuts, tobacco or cit-

IN THE MISSISSIPPI Delta, where there are as many crop dusters as in any area except in California's major valleys, Gunn was among the pioneers.

"Now they call it agricultural avia-tion," he grumbles. "A fancy name." It comes even fancier. Collins says many of the nation's 6,000 to 7,000 crop dusters in 47 states now prefer to be called "aerial applicators. While Gunn and Willett are among the few pilots who began flying in the 1930s and are still at it in an occupation that demands excellent health, eyesight, and reflexes, they are youngsters compared to Clyde Ice of Spearfish, S.D., who retired at 83. He's 95 now.

Gunn says he may sell his oneplane business in the next year or so. Willett intends to keep flying, as does Tom Doryland of Lincoln, Neb., World War II pilot who is 70.

Willet particularly enjoys his night flying. "It's the ultimate. I've flown instruments. I've flown combat. There's not nearly that pre-cision that there is in this night crop spraying," he says.

As able as the flying senior citizens are (they can keep flying so long as they pass their physical), Clyde Tounela, executive director of the NAAA's California chapter, says, "We have an aging flying population and I'm concerned about getting young blood for the business. Most of the senior pilots are in their late Os and 50s and a lot of the World War II crowd is still flying."

TOUNELA, A FORMER navy flight safety expert, esteems the crop dusters' skill. "Outside of car-rier pilots, I don't know of better aviators in the world," he says.

Their safety record has steadily improved. NAAA's Collins says that fatal accidents involving crop dusters or their ground crews dropped to 12 in 1983 from a high of 48 in 1971, the first year for which standard records are available.

In 1982, the fatal accident rate for general aviation in the United States was 1.4 per 100,000 hours of flying time, twice the 0.7 rate for agricultural aviation.

Says Gunn, who 50 years ago used to perform "dead-stick," engine-off landings at air shows:

"It's just like driving a car. Some shouldn't be driving. I really think it's safer than getting out here on a two-lane road at night.

Some Chinese peasants amassing great wealth

By RICK GLADSTONE Associated Press Writer

PEKING — Once considered revolutionary because they were destitute, China's peasants now are regarded as the vanguard of the Communist Party's new free-market economic reforms. Many are amassing unprecedented wealth.

Following party directives issued in 1978, most peasants have abandoned the late Chairman Mao Tsetung's people's communes, in which all got the same low pay and were banned from private business.

They have embraced the "responsibility system" promoted by Mao's moderate successor Deng Xiaoping, letting them grow what they wish on their plots of land and sell it at private markets after fulfilling a state quota — now as low as 10 percent — and paying taxes cent — and paying taxes.

Peasants sold agricultural and sideline products worth $46.8 billion last year, 53.5 percent more than in 1978 when the agricultural reforms started.

AS A RESULT:

— Bank savings are at a record high of an average 100 yuan ($38) per capita.

More than 24 million "specialized households" have appeared, families that concentrate on producing one type of commodity ranging from pigs to cotton cloth.

— At least 1 million have bought private tractors and trucks, unheard of a few years ago.

— The per-capita yearly income in the countryside reached 310 yuan ($120) in 1983, a 130 percent increase

The government has disclosed cases of peasants who make 10,000, 20,000, 50,000 and even 100,000 yuan a year, though it says the number is "extremely small."

Liu Fuwang, who grows tobacco, is an example of a peasant who has benefitted from the new reforms. He loads his tobacco on his bicycle once a week and pedals 46 miles to the Peking free market, where he says he can make a 200-yuan ($74) profit in a few days.

"We were not allowed to do this a few years ago because it was illegal," says Liu, 21.

"I want to buy a truck but I cannot afford it yet. Maybe in another three or four years. I want a new house and a color television too."

A RECENT ISSUE of Worker's Daily reported that the Henan provincial governor, He Zhukang, conferred a "millionaire" title on Zhang Changshan, a peasant who contracted with the state to manage an apple orchard and started his own cement business.

Yet, widespread areas of China remain poor and undeveloped. People still live in mud hovels and for age in fields for food. The Englishlanguage newspaper China Daily recently described "shocking" poverty in the southwest region of Guizhou and said residents barely have enough to eat.

Officials also have disclosed that most peasants capitalizing on the reforms are those with some education or government background.

The government has persistently fended off criticism that the free-market reforms, which were expanded this past October to include cities, will polarize the countryside into rich and poor, Reports in the press tell of police and troops being called out to "protect the legitimate interests" of wealthy peasants.

"The socialist principle is to pay each according to his work, so there should be differences in people's incomes," Du Runsheng, director of the party's Rural Development Research Center, told the official news agency Xinhua. "To restrict development would only result in common poverty."

JUDGING FROM ACCOUNTS in the state-run press, a complex network of small towns and peasant businesses already is beginning to take shape.

Four million peasant families now are running businesses ranging from restaurants to taxicab companies, once operated only by the government and the communes. Ten percent of China's 176 million rural households have switched from crops to other jobs.

Under new directives issued by the State Council, peasants who want to engage in their own businesses get priorities in loans, housing and food allowances.

"Peasants starting industrial, commercial and services businesses in towns will help promote their development and make the urban and rural economies prosperous," said a State Council circular issued in Octo-

In the town of Baixing in Zhejiang Province, 680 new multistory buildings recently have been constructed, with peasant families living on upper floors and running businesses upper floors and running businesses on the ground floor.

"Local people told us that the town used to be a cluster of huts with roads slippery with mud on rainy days and 'too narrow to allow the passage of a coffin when somebody died,' "Xinhua said in a report about Baixing.

IN JIANGSU PROVINCE, Xinhua said, peasants pooled 254 million yuan ($94 million) in the first seven months of the year to help start or expand 23,900 industrial projects invitages and nearby towns.

"The current trend marks the beginning of a transition from the peasants' once-traditional isolation in the Chinese countryside," Xinl.ua

The economic change has profound implications for the communists' historic restrictions against freedom of movement in this crowded country of 1.03 billion peo-

The central government has urged local authorities to quickly grant peasant applications to buy vehicles, purchase business licenses and secure permits for entering urban areas.

Rising rural incomes have spawned rising demands. No longer are peasants settling for what Chinese call the "four major pieces" — bicycles, sewing machines, radios and wristwatches.

"The demand for the new 'four major pieces' — televisions, tape recorders, washing machines, electric fans — and other houshold electrical appliances is much greater," the Communist Party newspaper People's Daily reported

People's Daily reported.
In an analysis of 20,000 rural households in 25 provinces, the newspaper said demand for machinery in the countryside has risen by as much as 82 percent this year over 1983.

"High on the list of the machines wanted are small tractors, diesel engines, fodder crushers and equipment for rural industries," the newspaper said.

THE RELENTLESS BARRAGE of official elation about peasant successes belies problems that include rotting grain surpluses and accusations that the reforms amount to capitalism.

To such accusations, leader Deng replies: "Marxism should be Marxism which is integrated with the practical reality of China. Poverty is not socialism and still less is it communism."

Many peasants are said to be no longer sending children to school but keeping them home to work, threatening China with a new generation of illiterates.

Press reports and foreign travelers say peasants are disregarding the Communist Party's one-child dictum on birth control, having two, three, four and more children—free labor to take advantage of the "get rich" decrees.

People's communes that once provided peasants with low-cost health care, primary education and social security in old age have been replaced by loosely organized "townships" that do not necessarily have such responsibilities, raising questions about the state's.

Last year when Midland Lee and Odessa Permian met in a state Class 5A quarterfinal game at Lubbock's Jones Stadium, the gross was $93,000, largest of the year, surpassing, even, the state championship game against San Antonio Judson at Irving's Texas Stadium.

Midland Schools Athletic Director Gil Bartosh predicts the take for Saturday's return meeting between the Panthers and Rebels will surpass $100,000. The interest built in the game between these two in the last two years has made it a West Texas happen-

This week the Midland athletic offices have received requests for ticket information on Saturday's game in Lubbock from as far away as New Mexico and Amarillo. If last year's crowd was 30,000 to 35,000, this year's might just go as high as 40,000.

ACTUALLY, NO one knows for sure how many saw last year's game. The gates to Texas Tech's Jones Stadium were still open as late as noon and people were pouring in for choice seats. "They may have had tickets," says Bartosh, "But there was no one collecting them, so we really don't know what the actual count

It was only last year that Lee and Midland discovered the state playoffs could represent Big Bucks, particularly if you are playing Permian along the way.

LAST YEAR Lee's take in six playoff games was $130,748.50 with $32,000 of that going toward expenses for team, pep group and band travel, buses, officials, films and various other sundries.

The Plano-Lee game at Ratliff Stadium in Odessa, "a sellout was the second largest playoff gate," said Bartosh. "The gross was $76,740." Lee's share for that one was $24,616.35. "We had to send Plano a check for $29,000, which included travel expenses.

Interestingly, Lee's take for the Permian game in Odessa in 1983 was $21,178. "That's one reason I predict the crowd in Lubbock this year will be bigger than last year. Our take at the Permian game this year, which drew the largest crowd ever in West Texas, was $33,729.73," explained Bartosh. "I think the increase in the Permian-Lee regular season game over last year indicates that the interest in the rivarly is getting bigger each year.

Although there was some grumbling last year when the game was moved to Lubbock for the playoffs and again this year, the fact is that if the game had been played in either Midland or

Matt Holten Reporter-Telegram

Odessa, there would have been a lot of unhappy fans.
"If we had won a home-and-home coin flip," illuminates Bar-"Just 3,100 adult tickets would have been available for Permian fans. That wouldn't come close to satisfying their 5,000 season ticketholders. If the game had been held in Ratliff, 6,300 adult tickets would have been available to Midland fans.

"Ratliff seats just over 19,000 and that wouldn't have been enough to meet the demand."

THE RESULT would have been another "ticket riot," either to the near panic Midland experienced last October when the teams met in a regular season

The 1,500 SRO tickets for the end zone grass area sent to Mid-land for the October game were not all that popular. Fans prefer a seat and at Jones Stadium seats will be available as long as they last with no seating limitations.

MIDLAND'S bi-district game at Lubbock last year, grossed $26,303; of which Midland took home $10,046.91, which hints at the magnitude of the later Permian-Lee game.

Midland Lee's second playoff game against El Paso Irvin in Memorial Stadium took in $35,755 and Midland kept $15,156.56.

When the Rebels played Trim-ble Tech at Fort Worth's Amon Carter Stadium on the TCU campus, the game grossed $38,961. Midland's share was $11,516 plus $7,500 for travel.

In the state title game against Judson at the home of the Dallas Cowboys, the coffers were sweetened by $8,000 in TV money. Midland's share of the $43,650 gross came to $14,058.07 plus its

TV share. 'All money we made on the playoffs went into the general fund," said Bartosh. "And our participation didn't cost the tax payer a cent.'

MHS, Lee girls rough on JVs

By TERRY WILLIAMSON Assistant Sports Editor

The Midland Lee and Midland High varsities gave their younger counterparts a basketball lesson under the "Big Top" of Chaparral Center Friday night as the two-day Tall City Invitational girl's basketball tournament got underway with some lop-sided opening round

Lee's Rebels spanked the Midland High junior varsity, 76-23, in the tournament's first game before Midland High came out for a 60-28 win over Lee's JV unit.

The other two opening round games weren't much of a contest either as El Paso Eastwood romped over Odessa High, 63-43, and Del Rio smashed Big Spring, 58-42, to end

The tournament resumes at the Chap today with the MHS JV taking on Odessa High at 8:30 a.m. and will conclude with the championship contest at 8:30 p.m.

Tina Swinney led the Lee varsity in its victory with 16 points while Becky White had 11 and Ros Eaden 10. Brenda Rodriquez led the MHS JVs with an 11-point effort. "Our kids are coming along," said

Lee varsity coach Shirley Stephenson. "We are still very inexperienced, but what we lack in that area, they are making up in hustle." Midland High's varsity turned in two career highs in its victory over the Lee JV. Denise Lanz dumped in 24 points and Laura Martin had 15, both personal bests. Diedra Knapp added 10 points. Regina Calicutt led the Lee JV with 10 points.

said Lanz. "I didn't realize I had 24. It sure didn't seem like it.

MHS coach Jane Young said, 'Denise is a very good player and is improving week by week. She had a good tournament at Amarillo last weekend. It was also a great game for Laura. That's her best.

My best was 22 points in a game,

MHS JV coach Brenda Mitchell seventh place.

and Lee JV coach Linda Caraway would have rather been eleswhere.

We played well in the first quarter, but I haven't been beaten by 30 points in eight years of coaching-I guess there is always a first time," said Mitchell.

Caraway added, "We should have been playing in the Big Spring JV tournament. We could have won Instead, Caraway had to leave after the game to head for Big are entered in place of the Lee JV.

Stephenson hung a big apple in front of the Lee varsity players during the tournament. She made arrangements to change a scheduled noon game today with Eastwood to 10:15 a.m. so her kids could make the Exodus II trip to Lubbock today.

"I told the girls they could go see Lee and Permian play if they beat Eastwood Saturday morning. If they lose, they will have to play at 6:45 p.m. and they won't be able to go.

However, Eastwood looks like no easy touch after its 20-point win over Odessa High. Shawna Carter hit for 12 points in that win while Marga Campbell and Connie Lofton both had 10 each. Odessa High got 15 points from Bunny Smith and 11 rom Nicki Graham.

Del Rio, who will meet Midland High at 1:45 p.m. today during the Exodus II game in Lubbock, got 12 points from Blanca Montova and 11 from Liliana Padilla in its win over Big Spring. Del Rio also got 10 each from Leisha Wardlaw and Anne Sellers. Big Spring, who squares off against the Lee JV at noon, got a game high 14 points from Monique Jones and 11 from Teresa Pruit.

The winners of the Eastwood-Lee and MHS-Del Rio contest will square off in the 8:30 p.m. finals with the loser facing at 6:45 p.m. for third place. The consolation championship will be held at 5 p.m. between the winners of today's Big Spring-Lee JV and OHS-MHS JV outings. The losers will play at 3:15 p.m. for Midland Lee's Regina Calicutt appears to have no place to pass the ball as Midland High's Denise Lanz (32) and Diedra Knapp (31) have her in a squeeze. However, this one gets through during play in Tall City girls tournament Friday at Cha-

GREENWOOD - If a basketball team plays good defense, outrebounds the opposition, and operates under control it should win a lot of ball games

Greenwood's Rangers have done that, and after a 47-32 dissection of the Crane Golden Cranes at the GHS gym, coach Roger Goldsmith's team

The Rangers jumped on top early and never let up against the you Cranes. Greenwood spurted to 6-2 and 11-4 leads in the first period and never trailed.

Crane was without the services of its best player, Kenny Walker. Walker, a 6-4 junior veteran, was in attendance at the game but did not play with a heel injury. While his presence would have made a difference inside, it was the Rangers who played toughest in the middle.

Most notable in the effort was Will Willmon, a power forward with no power. Although Willmon is skinny as a stick, he and post man Ken Wallace completely dominated the middle. Most of Crane's points came

All Willmon did was rap away for nine points and an astonishing 18 rebounds. Wallace, meanwhile, pounded away on the baseline or dropped in layups off of lob passes for a game-high 19 points.

JOHN GILLIAM, Greenwood's senior floor leader and top scorer, chipped in an average 14 points.

Rebs 'Ski' past Golden Tors, 66-57 By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY

Sports Writer

In the Lee Rebels' 7-2 start in boy's basketball, Brian Marczynski has played a prominent part.

A year ago, Marczynski was at best considered a one-dimensional player. Even Rebel coach Paul Stueckler couldn't find a surplus of court time for the gangly senior. Today, anybody that would label

Marczynski one-dimensional wouldn't know a Basketball Jones if it slam-dunked their face. "Ski" was again red-hot Friday night, canning 28 points in Lee's arduous 66-57 win over the class 4A Lamesa Golden Tornadoes at Lee "I'm surprised, too," said a happy Stueckler after the sensational performance by his Rebs, who bounced back from a 69-52 loss to Lubbock Coronado in their last outing. "I don't know how he does it. He plays real smart and he's spent a lot of time on his own working out. Marczynski had a workout against the Tors and their fabulous Mason brothers, Jerry and Chris. The dynamic duo chalked up 43 of Lamesa's 57 total points, with Chris getting the lion's share at 26. BUT WHEN the Rebs had to have someone deliver, Marczynski was as punctual as Federal Express.

Lee jumped out on top early with torrid first-quarter shooting, but as the game entered the fourth period Lamesa found daylight and began to cut into the gap. Lee's biggest lead of the game came midway through the third period, when Marczynski dropped in 13-footer, akin to a layup for him. from just inside the right side of the foul stripe. With 2:12 to go in the third, Lee's new scorebaord favored the home team, 60-42. Ski dropped in another hoop moments later to make it 62-47, and then the Tors blew out the fire behind Lee's shooting The Rebs ended the game with a 54 percent field goal percentage, but in the fourth quarter Lamesa whittled away at their lead

Lee would score only four points in the quarter as Stueckler's delay offense was doing more harm than good to the Reb cause. While Lee vas chewing up time on the clock it wasn't able to produce any offense out of the stall. Instead of breaking for layups. Lamesa's pressure defense was stealing the ball and making its own cribs Marczynski had his only notable lapse early in the fourth when Lamesa was rallying. Twice in the first few moments he missed front standing it has tended to overends of bonus opportunities.

Meanwhile Jerry Mason was making three consecutive hoops to pull within eight at 64-56 with 3:54 to the 10-point lead, but Lamesa kept after the Rebs. When Chris mason banked in a 10-footer, the score was cut to 64-57.

Kenny Staehling missed a pass attempt to Hill, and Lamesa's suddenly hot shooters had life with 1:58

But to the rescue came none other than Marczynski. He stole a pass, but missed another bonus try. But by then the Rebs had time on their side. Ski shook loose for a fast-break layup with 51 seconds left and the Former Chap helps Lamar defeat Bowling Green

Texas Tech's Bubba Jennings goes for a 20-foot jump shot over Southern California's Larry Friend as Tech moved into the finals of the Amana-Hawkeye Classic with a 63-59 victory.

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Karl McCauley and former Midland College star Puntus Wilson took turns on hot scoring streaks Friday, each winding up with 23 points, as Lamar defeated Bowling Green 91-74 in the second game of the 1984 Carrier Classic college basketball tourna-

In the first game, guard Dwayne Washington poured in 21 points as unbeaten Syracuse dropped Maine 84-65 to advance to the championship final of the 8-year-old tournament for the eighth time in as many years. No. 12 Syracuse will play Lamar for the title Saturday night.

McCauley scored 14 points in the first half, pacing Lamar to a 46-30 advantage, but the Cardinals needed an 18-point, second-half effort by Wilson to stay ahead of Bowling

Bowling Green guard Brian Miller, who also scored 23 points, threw in four field goals and a free throw in the first six minutes after intermission to rally the Falcons, who closed to within 10 points at 58-48 on a three-point play by Tony Robinson with 12:33 remaining.

Keith Taylor of the Falcons, who added 20 points in the losing effort, sank a pair of free throws with 7:53 remaining to close the gap to 66-60. Robinson, who scored 16 points in the wide-open game, made a field goal seconds later to cut the margin to six again after a Lamar basket, and Taylor did the same at 70-64

However, Bowling Green then went three minutes without a point as the Cardinals sealed their victory with an 8-0 run.

Jerry Everett contributed 19 points to Lamar's victory, and Jim Gulley added 12.

Lamar climbed to 3-2, while Bowling Green, 2-1, lost for the first time in three games.

The Syracuse Orangemen, 3-0, dropped Maine to 1-3 with a secondhalf rally led by Washington's deft ball-handling and two quick baskets apiece by junior Rafael Addison and freshman Michael Brown. Syracuse held a slim 39-32 halftime lead, but Addison scored 10 of his 16 points in the first 12:19 of the second stanza and Brown finished with 12 points, his first double-figure performance for the Orangemen. Jeff Topliff and Jeff Wheeler each scored 12 points for the Black Bears, who fell behind 13-4 early in the game but managed to recover for a 25-25 tie with 5:00 remaining in the first half.

Addison broke the tie with 4:57 left in the period on a 12-foot jumper, and Washington tossed in a pair of field goals in the next minute the second coming off a steal at midcourt.

Applying full-court pressure, the Orangemen outscored Maine 9-2 in the first 3:30 of the second half for a 48-37 lead. Maine never got closer than nine points after that.

Louisiana Tech 73, Louisville 64 BOWLING GREEN, Ky. - Junior guard Wayne Smith scored 24 points and senior forward Willie Simmons added 20 points and seven blocked shots to lead Louisiana Tech an upset of No. 6 Louisville in the first round of the Wendy's Classic tournament.

Tech, with four starters back from last year's 26-7 team that lost in the second round of the NCAA Tournament, took the lead for good with 31 left in the first half on a baseline jumper by Smith that made it 22-21. The Bulldogs moved ahead 37-30 at intermission and led throughout the second half.

Louisville closed to within 49-47 on a three-point play by guard Jeff Hall with 11:04 left in the game, but Tech took control with an 8-2 run over the next 41/2 minutes. Louisville could get no closer than five points the rest of the way.

Illinois 72, Columbia 48 N.M. State 75, American U 69 CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Tom Schafer and Ken Norman each scored 15 points Friday night to lead seventhranked Illinois to a 72-48 victory over Columbia University in the opening game of the Illini Classic.

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Bubba Jennings scored 20 points, including a key layup and two free throws in the final 40 seconds, to lead Texas Tech to a 63-59 victory over Southern California Friday night in the first round of the Amana-Hawkeye made a bank shot, Jennings sank two free throws with 14 seconds left to secure the victory

Jennings hit four baskets to help Tech build a 22-8 lead midway through the first half and the Red Raiders led 32-17 after Dwight Phillips nailed a turnaround shot with 3:31 left. The game started sluggishly, with Western was led by Johnny Holman with 15 points, and J.D. Dykstra had 13. Western's record fell to 1-3.

Panthers blast Bulldogs in Canyon Reef tourney

SNYDER - Odessa Permian gave Midland High a stern basketball warning here Friday as the Panthers crushed the Bulldogs by a stunning 79-45 margin in a consolation bracket contest of the Canyon Reef basketball tournament

Lloyd wins Australian Open seed, while Curren outlasted No. 14 MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) -

Chris Evert Lloyd downed Czechoslovakian teen-ager Helena Sukova 6-7, 6-1, 6-3 Saturday to capture her second women's singles title at the Australian Open Tennis Championships at Kooyong.

Lloyd recorded her 16th Grand Slam singles victory, which was worth $100,000.

And she kept alive her record of having won a Grand Slam title every year since 1973. The men's singles title will be decided Sunday when defending champion Mats Wilander of Sweden, the No. 2 seed, plays ninth-seeded Kevin Curren of South Africa. Wilander easily moved into the final with a 6-1, 6-0, 6-2 victory over American Johan Kriek, the No. 4

Ben Testerman of the United States 2-6, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4.

Sukova, playing in her first Grand Slam final, started nervously by dropping her serve in the opening game, but recovered to give the 29 year-old American a tough battle.

Sukova, 19, the No. 9 seed and daughter of former Wimbledon finalist Vera Sukova, reached the final by upsetting the world topranked women's player, Martina Navratilova, in the semifinals. The lanky, but powerful teen-ager was only rarely able to recapture that form Saturday.

The No. 2-seeded Lloyd's solid baseline style proved more of an obstacle to her than Navratilova's aggressive all-court game.

San Francisco hopes to fine-tune for NFL playoffs

Associated Press

The San Francisco 49ers, already guaranteed the home field in National Conference playoff games, hope to fine-tune themselves Saturday against the Minnesota Vikings, a team headed toward the top of the National Football League draft.

"We're looking for a game in which the offense runs smoothly and the defense holds the other team to three plays and a punt occasionally," Coach Bill Walsh said. "We haven't seen that lately."

haven't seen that lately."

Nevertheless, the 49ers have the NFL's best record at 13-1, they have allowed the fewest points in the league and they have the conference's most potent offense.

The Vikings, meanwhile, are staggering along at 3-11 under Les Steckel, in his first year as their head coach. And nothing has staggered more than the once-vaunted Vikings' defense. "When you're last in the league in interceptions and sacks, it really puts a bind on your defense," Steckel said of Minnesota's four-game losing streak by scores of 45-17, 42-21, 34-3 and 31-17.

Also Saturday, the New York Jets, grounded by a six-game losing streak, entertain the Buffalo Bills, whose 2-12 record is the NFL's poorest. "I'm looking to get two wins—get some action going," Jets Coach Joe Walton said.

NFL Roundup

Eric Dickerson of the Rams, who last year set the rookie rushing record of 1,808 yards, now is just 212 shy of breaking O.J. Simpson's all-time single-season mark of 2,003—and against Houston, he's facing the league's worst defense against the rush. If he doesn't do it Sunday, he'll have another chance next Friday night at San Francisco—with Simpson on hand in the TV booth.

"The record means a lot, but I'm so tired of hearing about it," Dickerson said. "I can hardly even sleep. I've dreamed that I had 2,001 yards, and that I was going to get the record. I've talked about it so much, I'm thinking about it even when I try to take a nap — 2,000 yards, 2,000 yards ... I hope I can get it behind me, because it's bothering me."

The Rams also are in the wild rush for an NFC wild-card playoff berth. They're 9-5. So are the Redskins, Cowboys and Giants, all tied for first in the NFC East. The Bears also are 9-5, but they're already champions of the NFC Central Division, so the only effect their record will have is in whether they're at home or on the road in the playoffs.

The Giants have the inside track at the NFC East title. All they have to do is beat the Cardinals and then New Orleans and it's theirs by virtue of their record within the division. It also would be the Giants' first title of any kind since 1963.

In the American Conference, Miami, the Eastern Division champion, and Seattle, first in the West, are tied for the conference's best record at 12-2. The Seahawks hold a one-game lead over Denver. The Broncos close the season Dec. 15 at Seattle.

Dan Marino, quarterback of the Dolphins and now the holder of the NFL record for most touchdown passes in a season (40, including four he threw last Sunday against the Raiders), now goes after the all-time pro football record of 44 set this year by Jim Kelly of the Houston Gamblers of the United States Football League.

Pittsburgh, 7-7, holds a one-game lead over Cincinnati in the AFC Central Division. The Raiders, 10-4 following their victory at Miami, can clinch a wild-card berth and extinguish New England's flickering playoff hopes with a victory in their final two games, against Detroit or the Steelers.

Nobody fired in SWC's most bizarre season

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN

DALLAS — Southwest Conference football coaches made 1984 the most bizarre season in the league's long history and somehow nobody got fired. However, The Freeman File report card shows some barely passing grades over the September to December semester. The grading system largely takes into account the ability of the coach to improve his team and produce with the talent he has on hand.

Of course, the coaches are also responsible for recruiting the athletes on their team. The exceptions would be Ken Hatfield at Arkansas and Watson Brown at Rice, in their first seasons, and Jim Wacker at Texas Christian, in his second campaign.

The Report Card:

A-minus — Wacker, TCU. Wacker improved a team with a 18-2 record to 8-3. The only negative was that his team ran out of emotional gas at the end and appeared drained. Still he stopped the SWC from making jokes about Horned Frog football.

A-minus — Bill Yeoman, Houston. The silver fox who likes to call everybody "coach" did a magnificent clutch job of coaching himself. The Cougars somehow survived losses to TCU and Arkansas to earn the Cotton Bowl host team berth and a co-championship. When the pressure was there, Yeoman kept the Cougars cool.

A-minus — Bobby Collins, Southern Methodist. Despite a controversial loss to Texas and an uncalled for loss at home to Houston in a maze of turnovers, the Mustangs tied Houston for the SWC co-championship. Collins went with the wrong place-kicker for most of the season and that may have cost SMU the Texas game. He's still at the top of the SWC colors.

B — Hatfield, Arkansas. In his first year in the league, it took a 3-point loss in the last game to keep his Razorbacks out of the Cotton Bowl. A slick job with a team not overwhelmed with depth and talent.

B-minus — Grant Teaff, Baylor. Considering the Bears started with Brigham Young and Oklahoma (you see where they're ranked), it's a wonder Teaff ever got things on track. The beat-up Bears finished strong and Teaff got a new five-year contract

C — Jackie Sherrill, Texas A&M
The Aggies charged to the finish with impressive victories over TCU and Texas. But what happened in five league losses? One of the pre season favorites, the Aggies finished as a mystery team.

C — Brown, Rice. What's this? A "C" and the Owls didn't win a league game. Yep, because they played as hard as they could in everyone of them and scared Houston half to

D — Jerry Moore, Texas Tech. The Red Raiders lost four games in the fourth quarter. With one of the best defenses in the nation, the Red Raiders should have done better than that. Maybe Moore will next year because he has been given another chance.

D — Fred Akers, Texas. The 1984 Longhorns vanished like the Bison. The preseason pick opened strong with victories over Auburn, Penn State, a tie with Oklahoma, knocked off SMU and fiesty TCU, then faded like a cheap shirt in a hard rain. For some inexplicable reason, they were soundly whipped by Houston, Baylor and Texas A&M. Flogged. Not even close with the Cotton Bowl at stake. Maybe the talented 'Horns had too many big games in a row and got off their feed. Still it's up to the coach to come up with the right mix.

Dan Jenkins: Has write stuff

Although I've known him for more than 20 years, I don't suppose I've ever seen Dan Jenkins before 4 o'clock in the afternoon. I don't suppose many people have.

I know I've never seen him without a J.&B. and water in one hand and a cigarette in the other. Dan lights only one cigarette a day. The first one. The rest of them - all 60 - he lights from that one. If it doesn't have smoke around it, it's not Dan Jenkins.

Dan Jenkins and Gene Littler have one thing in common: Both have been around golf all their lives - and look as if they watched it from a cellar. I've seen mushrooms with better complexions.

Dan doesn't care. Dan doesn't have to care. Dan writes the funniest prose in the English language but no one's ever seen him do it. My theory for years was that he went out at the end of a golf tournament to this tree house in the woods where this little chorus of elves would have slaved all night with quill pens and have left these screamingly funny lines in a hole in the trunk for him.

Dan's journalistic techniques were the envy of everybody in the business. While the rest of us frantically clambered around locker rooms and into interview sessions for desperate, little, last-minute quotes, Jenkins would just sit at a corner table in the grill room upstairs where the ashtrays were clean and the drinks fresh and he would wait for the athletes to come up and tell him what really went on. Dan never made a note in his life, but whatever went into his ear came out on paper just the way he heard it. Not necessarily the way they said it, the way he

DAN JENKINS is the nearest thing to Ring Lardner this generation - or any other - has seen. No one has captured the essential lunacy of 20th Century sports — and TV — as accurately and hilariously as he has. He has an unerring eye, and ear, for the soft underbelly of pomposity that he pricks so deftly that even the victim laughs. Once, writing of his undergraduate days at TCU and the films the campus movie house was showing, Jenkins wrote: "In my day Dustin Hoffman wouldn't get the girl, in my day, Dustin Hoffman would get the lug-

His books are funnier than Sid Caesar, but they are more than just pages of yucks. Like Ring Lardner before him, he tells us more about what our sports heroes are really like by fictionalizing them than anyone else could by romanticizing them. Outlined against a blue-gray October sky are a cast of the raunchiest, bawdiest, most outrageous characters this side of the last days of Pompeii. Their one redeeming feature: They're funny. Whether they're pro golfers in "Dead Solid Perfect" or pro footballers in "Semi-Tough" or just hangers-out in a bar in Fort Worth in "Baja Oklahoma."

LIKE LARDNER, Jenkins has been accused of holding a dim, not to say jaundiced view of his fellow man. Jenkins shrugs. He takes no writes the way people talk. And that what his books are about, he says: "Hanging out."

His books are about a great deal more than that. His books are about a segment of society that will someday fascinate the archeologists as much as the road-builders and the war-makers - the "jockocracy." Jenkins understands them as few observers do and, if his view is unsentimental, it is also telling. The author quite obviously considers their way of making a living to be ridiculous, not to say meretricious, and that a society that not only puts up with it but supports it grandly has to come in for its share of contempt, which Dan dispenses cold-bloodedly, saving a little for himself in the process. The depiction of amorality is sometimes the most telling sermon against it. Not that Dan Jenkins would have any truck with that word. "Morality?" he once asked me. "What's Jenkins was in town one day last week on a promo tour for his new book, "Life Its Own Self" (Simon and Schuster), a 300-page zomp through the afterlife of the heroes of "Semi-Tough," whom the author describes as "semigrownup" in this sequel. If it hurts to laugh, don't buy it. If you're easily offended, wait for the movie. If you're squeamish, prepare to be squeamed. T.J. Lambert and his friends haven't gotten out of the X-rated category, even though they've gotten out of the NFL. "Little Women," this ain't. Jenkins lofty view of the importance of his literary service. When you ask him "I wrote what I knew about," Jen-"I wrote what I knew about," Jenkins explains. "I never been to war. So I wrote about where I have been bars and locker rooms.

After 22 years' work for Sports Illustrated, much of it anthologized, Jenkins is leaving that magazine for Playboy. A struggle with a managing editor was to blame, one of those internecine strifes in which both perished. Jenkins quit, the managing editor was moved out. "He never liked my sport," Jenkins shrugs. "Country clubs offended him."

Nothing offends Jenkins. But he knows he'll miss the give-and-take of deadline journalism. Not that he isn't distressed at some turns his sports are taking. "When you see Buffalo beat Dallas, you know these guys are taking days off from their work," he says. In his new book, one of the characters lists "things I would rather do than watch an NFL game." They include: "1. Buy a condo in Lebanon; 2. Go to a rock concert; 3. See a movie with special effects in it; 4. Join a religious cult. 5. Sit in a no-smoking area; 6. Discuss wine; 7. Watch a marathon; 8. Interview a swimmer; 9. Eat a fish head; 10. Get married again.'

Golf, he feels, "needs poor people. Nobody has to play safe any more."

The books should be even more plentiful in the new job. A new one is proposed for spring. As usual, it will be done out of sight. "How do you write it?" Jenkins is asked. "Every day," Jenkins says. "Till you get tired?" he is asked. "Till the saloons open," Dan Jenkins says.

Lawsuits posing serious threat to supply of football equipment

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) - A landslide of lawsuits over football injuries poses a serious threat to the game because manufactureres are getting out of the business of making football equipment, one company representative said Friday.

"I wonder how many people realize that at sometime in the near future, no one will want to make helmets for this game.' said Richard Lester, a lawyer for Riddell Inc., which makes many of the helmets used in the United

Lester gave his warning to about 300 physicians, trainers and others involved in sports medicine at a sports medicine symposium at the University of Iowa.

Ten years ago, 13 companies were making helmets, but now there are only three, Lester said. Most companies got out of the business because of "an onslaught" of cases that began when Riddell lost a $5.3 million

When the cases first began, only manufacturers were being sued, but that has changed in recent years as coaches, trainers and schools are made part of the costly lawsuits.

Lester gave several tips to schools trying to minimize their

- Coaches should keep a record of all programs used to teach players proper technique. Schools should keep a catalog of products bought to show why the equipment was chosen. Maintain equipment and keep records of all maintenance.

Keep films of games and statements from witnesses. Lester said some suits aren't filed for five years and by that time much of the defendant's case could be lost unless schools are careful.

Make sure trainers and coaches know what to do in case of a serious injury.

Cubs keep

BASEBALL - The Chicago Cubs, with the re-signing of Steve Trout, are now two-for-four in the free agent derby and are still chasing the big prize - ace pitcher Rick Sutcliffe. Trout, 27, a lefthander who was 13-7 with the Cubs last season, signed a five-year deal Friday reportedly worth $4.5 million. The announcement was made at baseball's winter meetings in

The Cubs, who finished atop the NL East, re-signed free agent pitcher Dennis Eckersley on Nov. 28 to a deal that reportedly will pay him nearly $3 million over the next three seasons. They are still pursuing reliever Tim Stoddard. Sutcliffe, the 1984 NL Cy Young Award winner, has narrowed his decision to the Cubs, San Diego, Kansas City and Atlanta. Sutcliffe is not expected to sign for another week or so ..

Wrigley Field, home of the Chieago Cubs and the last holdout for daytime only baseball, may soon go the way of the Polo Grounds, Forbes Field, Connie Mack Stadium and other small, old-time ballparks, says club President Jim Wrigley Field, with its ivy covered outfield walls, could be replaced by a new stadium within a decade, said Finks. "Sooner or later. the decision will have to be made where the Cubs will play 10 years from now," Finks said. "Some day, there won't be a Wrigley Field".

Free agent relief pitcher Bruce Sutter and the Atlanta Braves reached agreement Friday on a sixyear contract worth $10 million, part of which will fund deferred compensation. Part of the money paid to Sutter will fund his actual annual salary, while part will pay for the deferred compensation...

FOOTBALL - Alabama's Ray Perkins, whose Crimson Tide failed to make it to a postseason game for the first time in 25 years, made it himself Friday when he was named a South coach for the 47th Blue-Gray All-Star Football Classic. Perkins was named along with Georgia Tech's Bill Curry to coach the South, while Arizona State's Darryl Rogers was selected to direct the North along with Warren Powers, who was fired as coach at Missouri this season.

The game featuring college football seniors will be played Christmas Day in Montgomery's Cramton Bowl.

Russ Francis, the San Francisco 49ers' starting tight end before suffering a neck injury seven weeks ago, was re-activated Friday by the NFL team.

BASKETBALL — Rice baske-tabii player Dave Ramer was listed in good condition Friday at Hermann Hospital after undergoing surgery for facial injuries he sustained in a game earlier this week. Ramer, a 6-foot-5 center, was injured Monday when he was elbowed in the face during a game against Louisiana Tech. Rice lost the game 75-63 and Ramer received a fractured right eye socket.

During a two-hour operation Friday, doctors reset his right cheek-hone and drained his right sinus to remove bone fragments lodged there, a university spokesman said Ramer, who had been averaging 5.8 points per game, will be released from the hospital next week, but will miss the rest of the season, said

NATION IN BRIEF

Lloyd's honors five astronauts

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan Friday presented the Silver Medal of Lloyd's of London to the five astronauts who recovered two wayward satellites last month, saving the worldwide insurance underwriters nearly $170 million, the White House announced.

The medal, awarded for "extraordinary and meritorious efforts in rescuing and preserving property,' went to the crew of the shuttle Discovery.

The crew, including Frederick Hauck, Joseph P. Allen, Anna Lee Fisher, Dale A. Gardner and David M. Walker, successfully retrieved two satellites that had been launched during a shuttle flight in February. Both communications satellites, one owned by Indonesia and the other by Western Union International, went astray and were rendered useless as electronic relay stations, although they remained in earth orbit.

Lloyd's paid Indonesia $73.5 million for its loss and

Western Union $105 million to cover their insured losses and claimed salvage rights over the wayward

The insurance firm then paid the National Aeronautics and Space Administration $10.5 million to include the rescue attempt in its latest mission.

Disney films to be auctioned

NEW YORK (AP) - The most important collection of early Walt Disney celluloids ever put up for auction will go on sale today at Christie's, the auction house announced.

The 379 items include celluloids frames from major Disney feature films — "Snow White," "Fantasia," "Pinocchio" — as well as from nearly 100 other feature toons and several rare silk-screened theater posters. The collection was assembled by John Basmajian, who went to work for the Walt Disney Studios as an

The celluloids were expected to fetch a few hundred dollars to $1,000 apiece.

Missouri inmate found hanged

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) - An inmate was found hanged in his cell Friday at the Missouri State Penitentiary, five days after being sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of an 11-year-old girl, Warden

William Armontrout said. Charles Hatcher, 55, who already was serving a life sentence in the 1978 murder of a 4-year-old St. Joseph from the dentist's office in July 1982. Her nude and bruised body was found a day later under a pile of brush near the Missouri River.

Government to sell oil, gas leases

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) - The federal government plans to sell oil and gas leases covering more than 20 million acres off the mid-Atlantic coast, an Interior Department spokeswoman said.

The tracts are 25 and 140 miles off the coasts of Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, North Carolina, New York, New Jersey and Rhode Island, in depths ranging from 132 feet to 10,560 feet, said Marsha Polk of the department's Minerals Management Service.

Since 1978, oil companies have sunk millions of dollars into 32 tests wells in the mid-Atlantic area, but none turned up enough oil or gas deposits to make commercial drilling profitable.

Groups blast report by foundation

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Heritage Foundation's conservative strategy for changing the government was blasted as "totally unrealistic" Friday by several consumer, nutrition and military watchdog groups.

Joan Claybrook, president of Public Citizen, a Ralph Nader group, contended that some of the foundation's recommendations were "outside the framework of what most members of Congress and, in many cases, even in the administration consider to be sensible.

Ms. Claybrook, chief of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration in the Carter administration, told a news conference that the foundation's suggestions to reduce government regulation meant that it "wants to wipe out the gains we have made in the last 20 years.

"They want to return to the 'good old days' when business could pollute or make unsafe products at will," she said. The foundation, a leading source of ideas for Reagan administration policymakers, issued a lengthy report Friday suggesting 1,300 bureaucratic changes aimed at turning many government functions over to private enterprise. Parts of the report got into print in advance of the official publication.

Joining Ms. Claybrook in objecting to portions of the foundation's report was Michael Lemov, executive director of the Food and Research Council, who said suggested changes in federal food programs would hurt the needy. "If they are adopted, we will mortgage the future and will eventually pay far more in tax and health insurance dollars for this nutritional deprivation," he said. Another activist, Gordon Adams the private, non-profit Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, said the foundation's proposals on national security were a "prescription for disaster.

The report demands a defense spending program that would be nothing less than a smash-and-grab attack on the Treasury," he said.

The foundation recommended adding $6 billion to the budget request of $333.7 billion that Defense Department officials reportedly want for the upcoming 1986 fiscal

"When it comes to weapons, one wonders what the Heritage Foundation wouldn't buy," Adams said.

Foundation officials released their report earlier at a news conference, and said they hoped the White House would use it to chart policy for President Reagan's final four-year term. "It's designed to leave an indelible conservative mark on the future of this country, an indelible mark that cannot be erased by any incoming liberal administration," said Stuart Butler, the foundation's chief econo-

The report, "Mandate for Leadership II: Continuing the Conservative Revolution," is a sequel to a 1981 study given the Reagan White House to use in planning changes in government. Heritage President Edward Feulner said the 1981 report had a 62 percent success rate, putting it "in the big leagues in terms of policy recommendations" adopted by the

Still, the foundation criticized the administration for not taking stronger stands in some areas. 'Government has continued to grow and the reforms introduced are still politically fragile and incomplete," it said. "The administration, moreover, too often seems confused and without direction."

The report urged the administration to do more to turn government functions over to the private sector. "Private firms, for instance, can provide many government services either under contract or completely within the private sector much less expensively than federal workers," it said.

It said Individual Retirement Accounts, tax-deferred savings accounts that taxpayers can set up for their retirement, should be extended to replace disability, health insurance and some other penefits now provided through Social Security. Food aid, now provided through the food stamp program, should be turned over to the states, with federal costs limited to a fixed amount, the foundation said. It added that a quirement that recipients pay share of the value of the food stamps should be restored. The report suggested replacing ow-income housing programs with outhers so recipients can shop for ousing and apply the monthly alue of the voucher to the rent.

Opera house's problems unchanged since Verdi's day

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON Associated Press Writer

MILAN, Italy - Giuseppe Verdi would feel at home amid the highly charged controversies buffeting La Scala Opera House these days.

The 206-year-old temple of bel canto is plagued by many of the same problems that bedeviled the theater when the composer was producing his masterpieces more than 100 years ago. Another year of budget deficits has forced a relatively lean program, the irrepressible Italian opera critics are flinging charges of mismanagement and the temperamental performers are preparing to face one of the world's most demanding

Except for modern-day labor only an eleventh-hour settlement with the orchestra allowed the opening night to go on this season - the atmosphere isn't all that changed from Verdi's day, when he railed at the critics and threatened to block the premiere of his "Macbeth" unless the management changed its ways.

The theater, considered an acoustical gem, is a cultural landmark in the center of this northern financial capital. Across Piazza della Scala is famed arcade where elegant Milanese go to see and be seen; down the street is the city's Gothic cathedral.

But the problems of money and planning have raised concern about the future of La Scala as a magnet for talent and innovation, especially in light of increased competition from U.S. opera houses to sign big Carlo Mazzonis, La Scala's artistic director, says that the money demands of the artists, often in dollars, "have reached unbearable levels." He has called for a united stand by Europe's leading theaters against costly contracts.

Many Italian critics agree, but also say the theater's management has to bear responsibility for lack of longterm planning. 'In this business you have to plan four or five years in advance. The Met is the Met but now Los Angeles and Dallas are going after the big voices," said Guido Vergani, a critic for the newspaper La Repubblica. This year's gala opening on Dec. 7, the traditional opening date on the feast day of Milan's patron saint, fea-, tures Claudio Abbado conducting

Georges Bizet's "Carmen," starring American soprano Shirley Verrett and Spanish tenor Placido Domingo. But it is one of the few new productions of the year, and the two stars were signed for only five of the nine performances. Other big names signed this season include Frederica von Stade. Agnes Baltsa, Jose Carreras, Yoko Watanabe, Olivia Stapp, Eva Marton and Sylvia Greenberg. And in one of the few new works, Soviet expatriate Yuri Ljubimov will direct the La Scala company in June in a version of Johann Sebastian Bach's "The Passion According to St. Matthew

Missing for a second straight year, however, is Luciano Pavarotti, the popular Italian tenor, whose last appearance at La Scala drew a chorus of catcalls from the demanding gallery when he suffered voice

The 1984-85 program is still not completed. Carlo Maria Badini, who has run La Scala since 1977, said this is because the government failed to disclose the exact amount of La Scala's subsidy and management doesn't know how much money will be available in 1985. La Scala and Italy's 12 other leading opera houses are financially dependent on the government's slow-moving bureacracy to offset the ever-increasing costs of opera productions For this year, the state allocated $150 million, with La Scala receiving

$18 million, the largest single chunk. The financial situation was especially bleak from the mid-1970s until two years ago, when Badini embarked on an "austerity plan," reducing the number of new productions to make use of available sets and costumes and seeking new sources of revenue.

Commercial sponsors now have their trademarks in the program despite opposition from "purists"; an insurance company partially financed opening night and a washing machine company is sponsoring the ballet season.

Thus Badini was recently able to report that La Scala's projected deficit will be cut to $600,000 this season, to be made up by bank borrowing.

If it's any consolation for the current management, the theater was already running in the red only a decade after it opened its doors in 1778. Performers and composers throughout its history have complained about the poor reception given works that were applauded in theaters abroad.

Early this century, La Scala went into serious decline until rescued by the iron hand of Arturo Toscanini. "I am La Scala," the conductor often proclaimed.

"In the past there were many great directors and among the few good ones of today there is nobody who can compete on both an organizational and artistic level as those of the past at La Scala," wrote Paolo Isotta, music critic of Milan's leading Corriere della Sera.

Despite the problems, the theater's 2,015 seats are often filled even with constantly rising ticket prices. The best seats now go for $87.50 while orchestra tickets for opening night cost $308.

What is the SIGN of Christmas? A lovely Christmas tree? Sparkling snow? Tinseled and multicolored decorations? Santa Claus? None of these! Not even the star that guided the Wise Men nor the angelic host that sang to the shepherds. The sign was a babe (Luke 2:12). Proclaim O-D '81

Referring to South Africa's Department of Plural Affairs, an agency to regulate black people, the black bishop says its name suggests that "one of us would be a singular Plural. If he lived out of town, I suppose he'd be a rural Plural."

Such touches of humor, mingled with indignation at restrictions on blacks in his homeland, are hallmarks of South African Bishop Desmond Tutu, winner of the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize and elected last month as the Anglican bishop of Johannesburg.

He is the first black to hold that influential post in the strongly white branch of the worldwide Anglican communion, magnifying his position as a forthright opponent of South Africa's racial separation laws at a time of rising American protests against them.

'We shall be free, about that there can be no doubt," he says, emphasizing his conviction that God is involved in the situation and that his purposes of justice will prevail.

"For goodness' sake, don't mope," he recently advised a group of U.S. church people. Despite the present sufferings of blacks in his country, he said, "Don't feel sorry for us. We are going to win. Of that, we can be certain because God is going to

That firm confidnece radiates steadily from the blocky bishop of 53, along with his bent for laughter, his sense of the absurd in compartmentalizing races and his banked outrage at the dehumanizing effects

About that, he admits he himself sometimes gets despondent. "Sometimes I feel so low I could crawl under a snake." South Africa's whites "are trying to defend the indefensible," he says, adding his typically charitable note, "They are not demons. They are human beings who are scared." He notes that whites are only one in five of South Africa's population, and, arching his brows, adds perplexedly man, gesturing expansively, clap-ping his hands, scratching the back of his neck as he speaks, puckering his lips, sometimes breaking into high-pitched, infectious chuckles, his eyes lighting with impish mirth.

"What I do has nothing to do with courage," he says. "It has everything to do with belonging to the church of God. When God takes you by the scruff of the neck, you've had it."

At present a visiting professor at the Episcopal General Theological Seminary in New York, he since 1979 has been general secretary of the South African Council of Churches, his country's biggest ecumenical organization, including whites. He is expected to take over the bishopric of Johannesburg early next year.

With American demonstrations surging this week outside the South African Embassy in Washington and cities, charging that Reagan Administration policy props up South Africa's apartheid system, Tutu assailed that policy.

It is "immoral, evil and totally un-Christian," he told a House panel, and is encouraging "an escalating intransigence and repression" by the white South African govern-

The U.S. administration, while condemning apartheid, has inisted on dealing with South Africa through diplomatic channels under a policy called "constructive engage-ment," rather than applying economic sanctions as critics demand. At St. Luke's Episcopal Church in Darien, Conn., Tutu recently offered graphic, distressing accounts of black families being uprooted and broken up, of their homes being destroyed, of children begging for food or scrounging for it in garbage cans, of confining "pass" laws and detentions without charges.

"I wish to remind those who are involved economically in South Africa that whether they like it or not, whether you wish it to be so or not, you are buttressing a system such as this one," he was quoted in the National Catholic Reporter. However, he opposes violence. will never tell someone to pick up a gun," he once told an interviewer. But I will pray for the man who picks up a gun, pray that he will be less cruel than he might otherwise have been.'

Although pulling no punches, Tutu guards his words, realizing the persistent government efforts to discredit him, including repeated investigations of the church council he has led, and revocations of his passport. Stiffer action probably has been deterred only by his international stature.

The dashes of humor also may help. Recalling his youth, he says black students were housed in circular huts since "living in rectangular buildings was Western and, I suppose, not good for our black psy-

POSITIVE THINKING

Have we cut tap roots?

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Sometime ago in California I went to see the big trees. I saw two great stands of them. One in the Muir Woods, the other in a forest in the Sequoia National Park. Those giant redwood trees are magnificent specimens. They soar to great height seeming to scrape the sky. Some of them were old when Christ was born enormous trees with huge girths. One of them is so big you can drive a car right through a roadway cut into it. It does one's soul good to walk among such big trees.

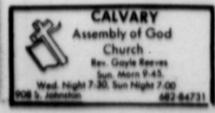

Following this inspiring experi-ence I visited at San Francisco a horticultural exhibit where they featured a Japanese creation in the form of a wonderful miniature landscape, with tiny streams, little bridges, and woods - woods complete with miniature trees and with ferns and moss. I asked the Japanese artist who had made it, "Are those imitation trees or real ones?

He answered, "Oh, yes, they are real trees, just small examples of big

I wouldn't say that if you want to do this it is wrong. Personally, though, I don't want any part of it, because it seems to me it is violating the nature of the tree - a tree meant to be a giant, meant for birds to nest in, for snow to lie on, meant to tussle with the wind. I thought, "I wonder if I have cut my own person-made myself small fry when God meant me to be big and to handle life victoriously?" That is the big question any of us might ask - what are you doing with yourself? Are you accepting smallness as being all you are capable of?

Author lives with subject's problems

By JOHN BARBOUR Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK - Susan Sheehan agrees that to an extent she has lived a lot of other people's lives, but then she has second thoughts. "No, not really lived them because you have to bear in mind, I can get out of prison," she says. "I'm not on welfare. I don't have five or six children by different men. I'm not 81 years old and trying to get on Medicaid. I'm not a schizophrenic. So, no, but I have lived more of those sort of lives than other people

Indeed she has lived the life of a welfare mother, an inmate at a maximum security prison and a schizophrenic woman enduring some 15 years of mostly useless treatment. In her latest book, "Kate Quinlan's Days," she tells the story of a feisty woman in her 80s facing a society that wants to do things with the rest of her life that she can't quite agree

Mrs. Sheehan's book, "Is There No Place On Earth For Me," won Mrs. Sheehan a Pulitzer Prize last year. All four of her books are examples of what might be called "close up" journalism, focusing on social problems by looking deeply into the lives of those who live with those prob-jects off and on for long periods. A book about Sylvia Frumkin, a schizophrenic, took two and a half years to research. The story on Kate Quinlan took a year and a half. It's a matter of total immersion. She slept at the Creedmore psychiatric facility in New York State when she was interviewing Sylvia.

"I was there sometimes 24 hours, but usually I kept it to 16. You don't get enough done in eight hours when you're working on something like that. I come up for a week every three weeks if I'm writing on a New York subject. That's all the subjects can bear of your presence. You wear them out.

"I don't run. I'm the only one in the world who doesn't jog. But what I train for is interviewing people. I can go 16 hours. That's what I've done all my life — ask questions. But other people can't answer questions for periods like that.'

She lives in Washington, D.C., with her husband, Neil, a former New York Times reporter now working on a book about Vietnam. They and their two teen-age daughters have adjusted their lives to accommodate the demands of writing and researching.

They are home from their two desks at the Library of Congress by dinnertime, so they can spend the early evening hours with the children. Then, when the kids go to bed, they work through the night, have breakfast with their daughters and send them off to school. Then they sleep during the day, until it's time to go to the Library of Congress

For her the research is fun, the writing agony, although that is not apparent in the clarity and leanness of her style. She takes shorthand notes and distrusts tape recorders. She types her notes every night, until not too long ago on a manual typewriter. She honed her talents with The New Yorker, where she began doing "Talk of The Town" pieces, and the New York Times, where she wrote for the Sunday magazine.

She walks a tender line with her subjects, taking care not to distort the reality of their situation with her presence. Easier said than done.

"I'm really with Kate Quinlan and her daughter and their world for a year or more. So you become a friend. And sometimes it may seem like a waste of time when you're drinking tea...but you're noticing the phone calls or how she likes her tea or whether she's eager to watch the news...how she does her grocery shopping. There's a lot you don't have to ask when you're observing." Very little escapes her eye, whether it's Kate Quinlan's sore throat or her swollen feet or the fact that her eyes keep surveying the prison her hospital room has become, always focusing finally on the clock in the hall, every two minutes. Kate Quinlan's boredom and frustration become palpable through the detail of Susan Sheehan's description.

It's hard to picture this mother of two in amaximum security prison for men, sleeping when she has to on a cot in the women's room, walking the endless corridors with men who have records of violence.

"That was a happy year...safer than a New York subway," she says. A young-looking woman in her forties, Mrs. Sheehan has a remarkable energy and balance. One would think that such intimacy with others would be draining and boggling to the mind. Quite the contrary, she says: "I can always keep my head in what others consider the abnormal situations, but I couldn't keep my head going to Elaine's (a popular writer-celebrity restaurant in New York City).

"I find that the most boring thing on earth...writers talking about who's doing what to whom. I'm just no good at small talk and cocktail parties...I really love to work and love being home with my family.

Texas-Israel exchange program announced

AUSTIN (AP) - Texas and the Israel will share ideas and projects nation of Israel, which officials say share many common qualities, will begin an exchange program unique to both, it was announced Friday.

Texas and Israel share much more than the same parallel on the map," said Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.

'We share such common denominators as climate and soil...a pragmatic and innovative agricultural industry, a can-do entrepreneurial spirit and a deep and rich cultural pride. There is ample reason to extend our hands across 8,000 miles to form such a partnership, so we're

The program will be called the Texas-Israeli Exchange. Through it, government officials, academic leaders and businessmen from Texas and in a number of areas.

"It's really going to be a catalyst to develop projects between Israeli interests and Texas interests," Hightower said. He said he expects the efforts to include projects on water conservation, research, agricultural crops and direct Texas-

The program will be run under the auspices of the Texas Department of Agriculture, although it will be privately funded, Hightower said. As an example, he pointed to cooperation between the state General Land Office and Israelis who are studying state-owned lands in West Texas to see whether Israeli techniques of low-water agriculture might be used in the region.

That effort is particularly appealing, said two members of the new exchange committee, state Sen. John Montford of Lubbock and County Judge Pat O'Rourke of El

"We see this as a tremendous opportunity to learn." O'Rourke said. "The Israelis have really pioneered this area of irrigation in an arid area. We need that help.

Montford said the Israelis have develped "some of the very best ideas" in water conservation and technology.

Hightower said the exchange between Texas and Israel is the first time a U.S. state has formed such a link with another country. He also said similar agreements are being worked out between Texas and some states of Mexico.

'There is no other state in the United States that has this level of a formal relationship with Israel,' Hightower said.

'It is one of our efforts to move our state...directly into the international sphere. There's no need for us to wait and see what the (U.S.) State Department has on its mind. Weecan get out there and mix and mingle on our own," he said.

Nearly 40 Texans will serve on the exchange committee, including Perry Adkisson, deputy chancellor of Texas A&M University; George Christian of Austin, former aide to President Lyndon Johnson; Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace; state Land Commissioner Garry Mauro; Pan American University president Miguel Nevarez; and state Rep. Robert Saunders of LaGrange.

The final decision on interpretations of the public school reform bill passed by the summer legislative session will be made by the full 15member state board today.

Other committees of the state board worked Friday on the formula for disributing $1.2 billion in state public education money and on proposed rules for setting up a "career adder" for public school teachers.

The votes taken today by the 15 members of the state board will be the first official interpretation of how the new public school reform law will be put into effect by local school districts.

Chinese have their children smuggled into Hong Kong

HONG KONG (AP) — Crammed into rickety boats and sometimes drugged, children are being smuggled into Hong Kong from China in increasing numbers and under conditions that local officials describe as inhu-

Most are the offspring of Chinese who immigrated illegally to this British colony years ago and who have now turned to smuggling racketeers — called "snakeheads" in Chinese — to bring their children here to join them.

In November, 43 smuggled children were intercepted by police, compared with a previous monthly average of 10, government figures show. And in the first four days of December, more than 70 children were caught. Officials said 464 other child "illegals" turned themselves in voluntarily to authorities last month.

Two children drowned and two others were reported missing after a smugglers' speedboat collided with an army patrol boat last week, police reported. Police rescued 22 other children in the incident and arrested three smugglers.

Hours before the collision, marine police spotted another speedboat covered with a canvas sheet in Hong Kong harbor. When the officers flipped open the cover, they found 30 hungry and terrified children inside the vessel.

A police officer said the speedboat was designed to carry only seven people.

"These children would have drowned if the boat had capsized because there were no lifejackets aboard the vessel," he added. The illegal immigrants, aged 4 to 15, had been abandoned by their smugglers, police said.
Officials said the children would be repatriated to China despite the appeals of their parents, most of whom have established residence in the colony.

In October 1980, when the average number of illegal immigrants from China reached more than 1,500 daily, the government decreed an amnesty for those who arrived here illegally from China before Oct. 23 of that year. They were issued identity cards giving them resident status, but those who arrived after that date were to be repatriated if caught.

Police said many of these adults are now paying up to 10,000 Hong Kong dollars per child — the equivalent of 1,282 U.S. dollars — to have smugglers bring their families here.

The trafficking in children prompted Hong Kong's police commissioner, Roy Henry, to appeal to parents not to take the risks of "scarring your child for the rest of his life, going through the hell of being smuggled into Hong Kong" into Hong Kong.

He said there were legal ways for the parents to bring their children here.

"I have seen some of these children being picked up, tucked under the floor boards of a leaking sampan, frightened out of their lives and in some cases drugged so that they won't make a noise and be detected," he

But tens of thousands of Chinese are waiting to emigrate legally to Hong Kong, and parents are unwilling to wait years for their children.

Officials said the latest upsurge in illegal immigration was believed to have been touched off by rumors that the Hong Kong government is planning to grant an amnesty to illegal immigrants because of the recently concluded Chinese-British agreement establishing towards which the colors will recently concluded. lishing terms under which the colony will revert to Chinese control in 1997.

Regina Ip, principal assistant secretary of security, ruled out any new amnesty for illegal immigrants—"adults or children."

She said the children caught this month came from the southeastern Chinese province of Fujian, where rumors of an impending amnesty were said to be rife.

The chief secretary of the Hong Kong administra-tion, Sir Philip Haddon-Cave, said the Chinese government shared the concern of the Hong Kong authorities over what he described as the "inhuman and dangerous practice" of child smuggling.

its

NEW YORK - The calls come into Dr. Selna Kaplan's office nearly every day, from anxious parents, from athletes, from people who want to be taller or stronger.

The callers are seeking human growth hormone. Ms. Kaplan, a pediatrician at the University of California in San Francisco, explains that the drug is scarce and must be reserved for children whose own growth hormone is lacking.

Early next year, however, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration is expected to approve the use of genetically engineered human growth hormone. The supply will then become limitless.

When that happens, doctors will face a difficult ethical and medical dilemma: Should growth hormone be freely prescribed to normal, healthy children who are short?

DEMAND FOR GROWTH hormone treatment is expected to be overwhelming, even though the treatment is painful, may not work in many children and could even be dangerous.

"The pressure to treat will be enormous," says Dr. Jennifer Bell, a pediatrician and growth hormone specialist at Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center in New York. "The criteria of our society are that a kid should be 5 foot 9, and if he's 6 foot 4, all the better.

Like many of her colleagues, she is concerned that doctors will too easily give in to that pressure. In the face of studies that show how important height is to success, she worries how she herself will react.

"I've been burying my head in the sand, saying I want to know if it's safe before I make that decision," she said. "If it's found to be safe, I hope I would have the strength to limit it. How can you say that a child will be happier shorter or taller?"

Dr. Paul Saenger, who treats growth hormone-deficient children at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York, noted that safety is not the only question. Much remains to be learned about whether the hormone will do anything in normal children who are short.

'There is no evidence that growth hormone treatment will indeed affect the final height of these children who are making a normal amount of growth hormone but are short," Saenger says. "It will take many years for physicians to learn whether treatment can affect their

"Until this information is in, widespread use should be curtailed, because it may be potentially dangerous," he said. High blood pressure, diabetes and heart disease are all possible side effects, Saenger

MORE RECENTLY, demand for human growth hormone has come from athletes who are led to believe that it might build up muscle mass, even though, Saenger says, there is no evidence the hormone will accomplish that.

Official concern about the possible abuse of the hormone has been growing. Last November, the director of the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development convened 50 experts to talk about that potential problem.

In December, the American Academy of Pediatrics took an official position, concluding that the hormone "should not be used indiscriminately" because its safety in normal children "has not been established.

"In selecting patients for (growth hormone) trials," the academy concluded, "the wise physician might adhere to the old adage, 'If it ain't broke, don't fix it."

That kind of caution may be lost on aggressive, affluent parents "who think height is something you can buy," says Saenger, one of the authors of an article on growth hormone that appeared recently in The Hastings Center Report, published by the Hastings Center, a bioethics think tank in Hastings-upon-Hudson,

"A parent who feels disadvantaged or even discriminated against because of height or who remembers being teased by taller classmates in adolescence may be willing to go to great trouble and expense to give his or her child a different experience," the authors concluded.

To such parents, growth hormone treatment can seem as important as sending a child to the best private schools, or to the most sought-after orthodontist.

AND GROWTH HORMONE treatment will be fully as expensive. The availability of a genetically engineered hormone manufactured by Genentech of South San Francisco, Calif., is expected to do little to lower the annual treatment cost of from $5,000 to as much as $20,000. Also, as Saenger and colleagues write in The Hastings Center Report, "Medicaid or most private insurers would not be likely to pay the bill."

Genentech says it has not yet decided how to price its synthetic hormone, but because it will be the sole supplier, it is expected to charge what the market will bear—something close to the price for natural growth hormones.

Whatever the cost, the fears of some parents that their children will be hampered by short stature are largely supported by scientific stu-

"There's a fair amount of evidence to suggest that in this society being tall is more acceptable and seems to turn into being more successful," says Brian Stabler, a psychologist at the University of North Carolina School of Medicine, who has studied short children and their families.

His studies have demonstrated, among other things, that shortness

"may mean more to the people that live with a short person rather than to the short person himself."

STABLER CAUTIONED that growth hormone treatment could create expectations - in both children and their parents — that cannot be met. Children and parents are frequently disappointed with the treatment because the children's height gain is often less than had height gain is often less than had been hoped for, Stabler says.

"The practice of treating short stature is incomplete unless there is a psychological component to it," he says. "Our concern is that when the product (growth hormone) gets to the open market that won't be the

Martin Benjamin, a Michigan State University philosophy profes-sor and one of Saenger's co-authors on the article in The Hastings Center Report cites a variety of studies showing how important height is.

In one such study, 72 percent of employment recruiters preferred a hypothetical 6-foot-1 candidate over an equally qualified 5-foot-5 candi-

IN OTHER STUDIES, taller library science graduates were found to earn more than shorter graduates. Men between 5 feet 6 inches and 5 feet 7 inches tall had salaries $2,500 lower than comparably trained colleagues who were 6 feet or 6 feet 1 inch tall. A check of U.S. presidential candidates shows that the taller candidate has defeated his shorter opponent in 80 percent of the elections held since

"Doctors ought not just dismiss parents," Benjamin says. "I don't think doctors should give them human growth hormone, but you shouldn't put them off. If the doctor puts them off, they'll just keep going until they find somebody who will do what they want."

Some 2,500 U.S. children are currently receiving human growth hor-mone, now obtained exclusively from cadavers. The lion's share of the hormone is controlled by the federal government's National Hormone and Pituitary Program, which provides the drug without charge to children who are clearly deficient in growth hormone and who are participating in research studies.

Human growth hormone also is available from two commercial sources in the United States.

Growth hormone treatment may last 10 years or more, beginning when the growth hormone defi-ciency is detected and ending by the ages of 15-17, when longitudinal bone growth stops, Saenger says. A complete course of treatment could, therefore, easily cost $100,000, excluding doctors' fees.

In addition to being expensive, the treatment is also painful, requiring several injections per week, usually administered at home by parents, Saenger said.

'Sun Also Rises' stylish, visually appealing TV

By TOM JORY

NEW YORK (AP) - "The Sun Also Rises," in two parts starting Sunday night on NBC, is stylish, visually appealing and occasionally dramatic television, but it is not what Papa

While Robert L. Joseph sought with appreciable success to maintain the spirit of Ernest Hemingway's 1926 novel in his adaptation, one minor character from the book is made the central figure in a gratuitous scene of violence that does not belong in "The Sun Also Rises."

There are other less climactic events written into the four-hour miniseries, for theatrical effect, that likewise do not appear in the Hemingway version.

In one, Jake Barnes, Hemingway's protagonist played by Hart Bochner, attends a silly, overly sentimental funeral for a prostitute he knew before the war, and in another, Barnes' friend, Bill Gorton (Zeljko Ivanek), dies of injuries suffered in a plane crash while on a daredevil flight.

They neither contribute significantly to, nor particularly detract from, the production.

Joseph, on the other hand, emphasized what he calls the anti-war aspect of the story, which Heming-way only suggested, by including a battlefield scene in which Barnes is rendered impotent by an exploding grenade - something that occurs before Hemingway's story begins and another vignette not drawn from the novel in which a wartime friend kills himself rather than face life with a grotesquely disfigured

When Hemingway wrote the book," the screenwriter said, "the streets of Europe were littered with those wounded in World War I, and he felt he did not have to call attention to that in any graphic sense. The anti-war feeling in the book is tacit. I felt it had to be expanded."

Tampering with classic books for the sake of an audience that cannot reconsider a passage from the book to learn the author's meaning or intention is not new to Hollywood.

A 1957 motion-picture version of "The Sun Also Rises," starring Tyrone Power and Ava Gardner, was more faithful to the novel, but was a critical, and box-office, flop.

One thing seems clear here: Joseph has damaged neither Hemingway nor "The Sun Also Rises" with his dramatization, and the resulting production is more than acceptable.

"You can't approach it as changing the book, rather as adapting it to another medium," Joseph said. "When you take something like "The Sun Also Rises,' really an impressionistic novella, you can't simply photograph a work like that."

The cast is, on the whole, adept, particularly Jane Seymour, the Brit-ish-born actress who was in the 1981 ABC production of another American classic, John Steinbeck's "East of Eden," as Lady Brett Ashley, and Ian Charleson ("Chariots of Fire") as the drunken Scotsman, Mike Campbell, whom she plans to marry.

Robert Carradine, however, is unconvincing as Robert Cohn, Barnes' prizefighter-friend from Princeton who falls irretrievably in love with Lady Brett, while Leonard Nimoy as the shadowy Count Mippopolous is fine in a role that has been broadened to excess for the TV pro-

Bochner, with his matinee-idol looks (he is co-starring in the current theatrical film "Supergirl"), is certainly appropriate as Barnes from a physical standpoint, but he seems at times to regard his disability and its effect on his relationship with Lady Brett in an ironic rather than anguished way.

Credit NBC for attempting a dramatization that might have been more at home on public TV's "American Playhouse."

Israeli choreographer inspired by deaf dancers

By JACKIE HYMAN

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Half of his dancers are deaf, but Israeli chore-ographer Moshe Efrati isn't baffled.

'Music belongs to the hearing dancers," said the expressive Efrati, backstage at UCLA's Royce Hall. "The nonhearing dancers come with silence; they belong to the vibra-

Efrati founded the 18-member Kol Demama dance company in 1978. Its name means sound and silence in Hebrew. The troupe recently concluded an American tour, including performances in Los Angeles, New

A combination of rhythmic vibrations and subtle visual cues allow the deaf dancers to hold their own in the much-praised Israeli modern dance company, which also has toured to France, Belgium, West Germany, Finland and Mexico.

Backstage, Efrati beats a wooden stick against the floor, creating vibrations that help cue the non-hearing performers. The movements of hearing dancers provide additional reinforcement.

The dancers with normal hearing have to accommodate a subtle signal routine built into the choreography and designed specifically to cue the deaf dancers. It could be nudging or an extra foot stomp.

Music is used in all numbers, but it is not conventional scoring. The choreographer pioneered his Efrati trains deaf dancers himself after selecting them for physical form and a sense of rhythm.

GRAND PRAIRIE (AP) - Texas is a Crime Stoppers haven, officials say, with about one-fifth of the grass roots crime fighting organization's chapters based in the Lone Star State.

Strong support for the program, which pays rewards for information about felony crimes, has led Crime Stoppers officials to use the state as a testing ground for an advanced program, according to Crime Stoppers founder Greg MacA-

Beginning in January, MacAleese said, Texas Crime Stoppers will begin a statewide crime-ofthe month program, based on the theory that "a lot of crimes are transient-related.'

In addition, the program will have a Texas most-wanted listed, featuring pictures of fugi-

"The ultimate goal is to return to the fundamental values where a guy can call up and say: 'I'm Joe Blow. I know about a crime, and I'd like to tell you about it," MacAleese said.
