Night club owner who gave Nelson start selling out

WEST (AP) - The night club owner who gave country singer Willie Nelson his start back when he was a 15-year-old with slick-backed hair and a voice that cracked, is selling out after 42 years.

But Marge Lundy, who has run the Nite Owl club for four decades, said she hopes the sale will not mean the end of the Nite Owl legacy.

"That's the first thing I've told 'em," she said. "If they're planning on buying it, they should leave the name Nite Owl there. See, this is where Willie Nelson started. You'd be foolish to change the name. If vou've ever traveled up and down this I-35, everybody knows where the Nite Owl is.'

Mrs. Lundy, 63, said age, poor health and the time she spends car-ing for her invalid sister have caught up with her, forcing her to retire. She injured her back in a recent fall and she wants to move closer to "town" (West) so her sister can be close to a hospital.

"It's just gotten to where I can't do it all," she said.

So Mrs. Lundy is trying to sell the club, located off Interstate-35 just north of West, her Spanish-style, four-bedroom home which sits atop a hill just behind the Nite Owl and the surrounding 21 acres - all for the asking price of $258,000.

"This Nite Owl's a landmark here, or the old building was," Mrs. Lundy said. Actually, Nelson has never per-

Later, when the Nite Owl charged $3 to hear Nelson, Nelson told Mrs. Lundy she was crazy to think anyone would pay $3 to hear him sing.

And run it, she does. "I am the law and the gospel of this place," she said, noting with pride that she has not had to call on the law for help in at least 15 years.

"She can sure throw you out," said longtime patron Marion Webb.

And to be sure she has control of the place, Mrs. Lundy does not drink once she walks inside the club.

"If I have to throw somebody out, you can damn well be sure I'll be sober when I do," she said.

Mrs. Lundy is one person who has not had to wait for the eulogy after her death to discover how her neighbors feel about her, although very were bittersweet.

She still gets livid when she recalls the day she was charged with muri der and put on trial in a McLennan County courtroom in September 1982.

Christians claim victory over theater

WHEELER (AP) - The Battle of the Rogue is over and the Wheeler Christians are claiming victory over the lions of Hollywood.

After more than three years of feuding and a lawsuit that attracted national attention, R and PG-rated movies will no longer flicker across the screen of the Rogue Theater in this Panhandle town.

The Wheeler Christian Church. whose members decried such films as "The Blue Lagoon," is going to buy the town's only movie house. The Rev. Ricky Pfeil says the Rogue will soon be the site of gospel singalongs and community meetings.

Residents of this town of 1,500 with a taste for the usual Hollywood fare will have to go to Pampa, 45 minutes away.

"We set out to get the R and PG-rated movies off Main Street here and we've done it," Pfeil said. 'We're pleased it's all over.

The independent church agreed to buy the Rogue to settle a lawsuit by theater owner Ed Nall, who claimed he was being driven out of business and libeled by the church's protests.

Nall began showing R and PGrated films in 1981, hoping it would cut his box office losses. His attorney, Jim Fling, says the films -'The World According to Garp,' "Porky's," "Stripes" and others wouldn't have raised an eyebrow in the big city.

"They were very mild," Fling said. "You can see worse stuff on TV, at least on HBO."

But Pfeil and several of the 100 or so people in his congregation disagreed.

"I object to all R-rated movies and most PG-rated movies," Pfeil said. The church members began picketing the church whenever R and

PG-rated movies were being shown - except for Sunday and Wednesday when they were holding services Pfeil also bought ads in the local paper and wrote columns condeming the movies. "Do We Have Pornography In Our Town?" read the headline of one column.

After almost a year of steady protest, Nall filed a $500,000 lawsuit against Pfeil and the church, alleging libel and harassment. Attorneys said it could have become a landmark case because it brought up several issues of freedom of religion and First Amendment rights.

Reporters from major metropolitan newspapers and the television networks descended on this tiny West Texas town, much to the dismay of Wheeler residents.

'We'd just as soon the whole thing had never come up," said Wheeler Mayor Lewis Spas, the editor of the Wheeler Times. "It's just a mess." As the Dec. 17 trial date approached, both sides were caught in a financial crunch. Attendance at the Rogue was dropping off and the church faced huge legal costs.

With appeals we could be talking five years and up to half a million dollars." Pfeil said.

So the church offered to settle the suit by buying the theater for around $50,000 and Nall accepted. On Nov. 10, the Rogue showed its last film, the R-rated "Teachers."

Nall's lawyer says there isn't much entertainment left in Wheeler.

"I guess there are still high school football games," he said.

Lay counselors conduct services at six prisons

HUNTSVILLE (AP) - About 200 religious counselors were conducting revival services this weekend at six Texas prisons in an effort to curb rampant violence that has claimed the lives of 24 inmates so far this year.

Organizers of the three-day services had envisioned going to all 27 units, but the high number of stabbings and random assaults prompted many Texas Department of Corrections wardens to back out of the deal.

Prison officials have recorded 378 assaults this year. The 24 inmate deaths nearly tripled the nine fatal stabbings recorded in all of 1983, officials said.

officials said. But organizers said they were still optimistic the revival sessions, which began Friday and conclude Sunday, will help calm tensions at the six facilties. "We hope there will be a decrease in violence," said Bill Robinson, an ex-convict who is associate director of the Prisopers Bible Institute in Pearland. Pearland.

Professor's hobby tied to changing governments

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK

HUNTSVILLE (AP) - Sam Slick scans the newspaper each day, knowing that if he spots an article about another Latin American country changing governments it means he needs to get to work.

"I wake up and expect to find some reference to a government that has just fallen and hope that I have all the posters associated with it because I will then start out on the next one," says Slick, " who believes he has the world's largest collection of Latin American political and government posters

"I'm driving gangbusters all the time.

Slick houses the priceless 5,000 posters in a set of drawers in a corner of the geography department at Sam Houston State University, where he is an associate professor of Spanish.

"It's a personal collection," he says. "I do this all through my own pocket. I have no grant money. No university money.'

The collection started strictly as a hobby when a colleague brought him some Spanish souvenir posters in 1977 from the first free elections after the reign of Francisco Franco.

"I liked them and was going to put them on my wall," Slick says. "But then I thought, 'I don't want to stick pins in these. These are priceless kind of documents."

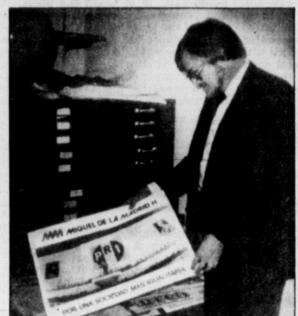

So he wrapped them in acetate and admired them. His students eventually learned of his affection for posters and brought some back from Mexico.

'So I thought I should start collecting some of these as documents," he says. "Before I knew it, in very rapid succession, it went from hobby to avocation to serious research pursuit. Now it consumes the majority of my time.

The collection is likely to result in a book plus exhibitions at universities, museums and libraries.

The posters amount to political paraphernalia like the posters and buttons collected by thousands of Americans from U.S. elections.

But in Latin America, such collections are "almost considered weird," he says. "I often have that reaction. They laugh almost.

Why would you want a poster? They don't place the same value on a poster as we do in terms of historical documents.

In the more normal course of events, once an election is complete and the poster is considered useless, they meet the ultimate fate

"When it's all over - in the trash," he says.

Other than a change in the way people are depicted — they look more modern now — the typical. Latin American poster looks little different from its counterpart of years ago, Slick says.

There has not been a noticeable change," he says. "There is a slow evolution. It does not change dramatically from decade to decade

Slick asks foreign students from Texas universities to get them from their home countries and also contacts American embassies in those countries to collect posters for him. In addition, he accepts posters mailed to his office in Huntsville and pays contributors a few dollars for their trouble

What makes a poster great? 'Graphic qualities, paper, design, color, or strictly from an aesthetic point of view. It may be great because of its timely historical value. It also may be great for its cleverness and its message. Slick says one "great" poster tial candidate in Argentina hold-ing a bottle of Coca-Cola. The retouched poster, printed by an opposition party, depicted an association "with Yankee business interests."

"That's a great poster of immense, immense value," Slick says. "This one is just wonderful."

Cuba is one of the countries that stands out for the quality of posters. "They carry it to an art level," he savs.

Panama - "some stunning posters" - and Mexico - "fine graphics" - are others, he says.

Posters from Cuba and Nicaragua are most difficult to find but he's currently involved in negotiations with the Cuban government through the Czech Embassy in Washington.

T've sent down all the required documents to Havana, to the Minister of Culture," Slick says. "I'm hoping to get examples of posters from the past 30 years.'

Slick said he would love to get his hands on posters from the government of President Fugencio Batista, who was ousted by Fidel Castro, but he doesn't expect to get them. Others he covets would be from the regime of former Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza.

WEATHER SUMMARY

The National Weather Service forecast includes showers for parts of Iowa, Missouri, Illinois, California and Nevada; rain for parts of Washington, California and Oregon; and snow in parts of Idaho, Nevada and Colorado.

Warm, slightly windy day forecast for Basin

From Staff and Wire Reports

It may not be much comfort to Midland Lee supporters, but a beautiful fall Sunday is in the offing, with fair skies and a high near 70. The winds will pick up a bit by midday, coming from the southwest and west at 10-20 mph. Tonight will be fair and mild with a low in the upper 30s and winds from the southwest at 5-10 mph, and Monday will again be fair and mild, with a high in the upper 60s, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Friday's high of 68 was 15 degrees below the record high for the date of 83, set in 1977, while the overnight low of 35 was 22 degrees above the 1978 record of 13.

STATE

Upper-level cloudiness dominated the state weather picture Saturday, but temperatures remained mild, climbing into the 60s and 70s across Texas. A high pressure system that dominated the state's weather picture last week continued to drift east over the Gulf of Mexico Saturday, while in far West Texas light rainshowers were reported.

Along the middle and lower coast, winds gusted over 20 mph. Across the rest of the state winds were 10 to 15 mph out of the southeast and southwest except in far western parts of the state where light, variable winds were reported.

Skies over South Texas will turn partly cloudy early in the week, the weather service says, and temperatures should become warmer, rising into the 60s and 70s, perhaps as high as 80 along the lower Rio Grande Valley.

NATION

The Plains states had a second day of unseasonably warm temperatures Saturday with a record-tying high as far north as Duluth, Minn., but a bubble of cold air still clung to the Southeast.

Readings in the 50s and 60s were common at midday from Texas northward to southern South Dakota. Grand Island, Neb., at 63 degrees was more than 20 degrees warmer than normal for Dec. 8.

Duluth tied its record high for the date of 38 degrees, and Marquette, Mich., had a record 42, up 4 degrees from its past record set in 1963.

At the other extreme, Tallahassee, Fla., had a low of just 22 degrees, breaking by one degree a record that had stood since 1937. Apalachicola, Fla., had a record low of 28 degrees and Miami Beach, Fla., had a record 52. record-tying 22 was recorded at Greenville-Spartanburg, S.C., and Jack sonville, Fla., tied its record of 28.

Iran's lack of action criticized

By TERENCE SMITH

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — President Rea-gan criticized the Iranian government Friday for its handling of the hijacking case in Tehran. But he stopped short of accusing Iran of complicity in the hijacking, which so far has led to the death of two Americans and two Kuwaitis

At a hastily scheduled White House news conference, the presi-dent asserted that the Iranians "have not been as helpful as they could be"

"I have no evidence that I could lay out here that there was actual collaboration of the Iranians," the president added. "I have to say, however, that they have not been as helpful as they could be in this situation, or as I think they should have been.

Earlier, Robert B. Oakley, the State Department's counterterrorism chief, said in an interview that Iran's attitude toward the hijackers showed "a great deal of sympathy, if not support and active collusion

Meanwhile, U.S. officials said there was evidence that the hijackers boarded the plane with their weapons during a stopover in Dubai in the United Arab Emirates. The flight originated in Kuwait on Tuesday and was bound for Karachi, Pakistan. The officials were unable to confirm other reports from the Middle East that the hijackers were able to bring more weapons on board the aircraft after it landed in Tehran.

Reagan said at the news conference that he had been in touch with the heads of state of several countries on the crisis and that the United States was "as much in contact as we can be" with Iran given the fact that the countries have no diplomatic relations. Relations with Iran were broken in 1980 during the 14-month hostage crisis and have not been resumed.

State Department officials said Reagan had sent messages to the leaders of Kuwait and Syria, in addition to several other countries in the region, asking their help. His message to Sheik Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah, the emir of Kuwait, reportedly expressed American support for the Kuwaiti rejection of the hijackers' demands that Kuwait release some convicted terrorists in jail there.

At the regular State Department briefing, John Hughes, the spokesman, echoed the president's criticism of Iran's response to the hijack-

'It is not usual in hijacking cases to permit hijackers the kind of access to the media that has taken place in this particular case, Hughes said. "It is not generally thought to be an efficient way of dealing with hijackers to permit photographers to board the plane and photograph corpses. These are some of the areas in which we think the procedure has not been as efficient as we would like.

Asked if the United States believed Iran should have used force to overpower the hijackers, Hughes said that was not his message

'We are saying that there are a variety of ways of handling hijackings, and it is not for us to say at what stage you assault an aircraft," he said. "However, this has been going on for some time - there have been threats to murder individuals, those murders have taken place.

"I'm not pinpointing the time in which other methods should be overtaken by military action," he said. "But certainly that is something the experts should take into account.

Hughes spoke shortly after Iran agreed to the hijackers' demand to be allowed to read a statement over the Iranian radio. In that statement, they identified two Americans they said they had killed and threatened to kill other Americans and Kuwaitis on the aircraft-unless their demands were met.

Hughes said that information relayed by the Swiss government, which represents American interests in Iran, appeared to confirm that the two dead Americans were Charles Hegner of Sterling, Va., and William Stanford. Both men were auditors for the Agency for International Development and were based in Pakistan.

Hughes refused to comment on the hijackers' assertion that they were holding another American, whom they identified as Stanley Stevers, a man they described as a diplomat and AID employee. For security reasons, officials declined to say whether such a person was employed by AID.

Hughes said the United States had received reports that the Americans and Kuwaitis had been separated from the other passengers on the plane and had been "abused and roughed up" before the killings.

Officials said Hegner apparently was the first to be separated from the rest of the group after he indentified himself as an American. He was taken to the first class section of the Airbus and killed.

Later, according to information received from the Swiss, Stanford was identified as an American and taken to the doorway of the plane. Sensing he was about to be killed, Stanford reportedly tried to push the guards away from him. He was then shot and killed.

Since late November, Mitchell, 68, has been collecting signatures by mail and in person to petition the commissioners to call an election on jail financing.

Mitchell wants the taxpayers and not the commissioners to decide if a jail is to be financed and built.

We've got a bunch of them," Mitchell said of the petitions. "We're getting about 150 a day, maybe a little under." Each mailed-in petition, clipped from newspaper advertisements, has spaces for four signatures. However, some petitions have carried six signatures, he said.

IN ADDITION, Mitchell, his wife and others have collected signatures on longer petitions at places such as Midland Park Mark, Walgreen Drug Store, M-System, Dellwood Mall and Gibson Discount Center.

At least two former county commissioners have signed the petition to force an election.

'Two of the former (Midland) mayors said they were for it," Mitchell said.

obligation do not. In either case, taxes would or could be levied to pay off any indebtedness. On the certificates-of-obligation route, the law provides that the citizens can petition the taxing body for an election and force a vote on the issue. In Midland County's case, valid signatures of 5 percent -2.735 – of the 54,699 registered would be required before the Commissioners' Court would be required to call an elec tion.

THE COMMISSIONERS' Court opted to issue certificates of obligation to speed up the jail-building process rather than to submit the issue to what they termed a costly and time-consuming bond election.

Almost two years ago, a similar bond election failed.

In April 1983, a $11.69 million bond issue to renovate the 1929-30-vintage courthouse and to build a courthouse addition, including a jail, was defeated by a 4-to-1 ratio.

The jail, which legally holds about 85 prisoners, is on the fifth floor of the courthouse; that floor was added in the early 1970s when the courthouse was renovated under a $1.95 million bond issue; all but approxiapproval of the voters. Certificates mately $375,000 of that indebtedness has been paid off. The proposed jail would have cells for 225 inmates and room for an additional 75. The jail would be built on a seven-acre tract near the Midland County Exhibit Building east of Midland.

> Because of overcrowding and violations of jail standards and the threat of more federal lawsuits filed by jail inmates, the commissioners said they have no choice but to build a new jail. The Texas Commission on Jail Standards has cited Midland County for various violations, including lack of an exercise area. poor lighting, no sight-and-sound separation of male and female prisoners, and inadequate environmental systems.

In addition to the "need" for a new jail, Brown said economic conditions currently are at the optimum for jail financing.

WE HAVE THE most favorable (91/2 to 9% percent) bond market. He (Mitchell) is getting ready to cost Midland County up to a quarter of a million dollars. He's not aware of what he's doing. He's a product of misinformation.

month to get this thing (financing) going." Further he said that it is likely 75 to 80 percent of the indebtedness incurred in building the jail would be paid off by revenue generated by the County Jail housing federal prisoners. As a result, cost to the Midland County taxpayers would be minimal, he said.

"If we have to go to a vote, that could be out. They (Mitchell and his committee) could muddy up the waters like an old catfish.

Mitchell said that there's "no doubt" he and his helpers will collect enough signatures to force an election

Whether we'll get enough for (Janeice) Builta (elections administrator) to (properly) certify is another matter," he said. "We've never had any doubt about getting that number (2,735) of signatures.

Occasionally, Mitchell said he has found some voters hesitant to sign the petition. Nevertheless, he persuaded them to sign by asking a loaded question: "Don't you believe that one of the best freedoms we've got is the right to vote?'

'Oh, yeah,' " the voter would reply, Mitchell said.

Methyl isocyanate is an intermediate product that is combined with other substances to make a family of insecticides known as carbamates. Some experts say that, as with Sevin it appears to be possible to make all carbamate pesticides without methyl isocyanate. "It's a valid question," said Karim Ahmed, a biochemist and research cdy cdy director for the Natural Resources Defense Council. On a theoretical chemical basis, he said, it appears possible to make the insecticides without making the intermediate product, although it may not be practical in all cases

Even if methyl isocyanate is neces-ary, some chemists said, it might be better to make it immediately before use, avoiding the need to store and transport huge amounts of the material. Bayer A.G., the West German chemical company, said last week that it made methyl isocyanate only in small quantities for immediate use. .

office and then made them lie quietly on a cot in her office. If she had to leave, the children would accompany her. The period of punishment with her usually lasted 15 to 20 minutes, she said.

'Are you aware that Sec. 7200 No. 2D states 'Children shall not be humiliated or subjected to abusive or profane language. Punishment shall not be associated with food or naps or toilet training'?" Ms. Lowenberg asked.

No." Ms. Richardson said.

Parents testifying said they never found their children unsupervised or with wet diapers. Ms. Richardson said the bottle found without a child's name on it by investigators had a "definitely different shape and color." and did not require labeling. She said the bat incident was simply a game which, according to testimony by parents, was not played by all of the children.

She testified she "forgot" she was only licensed for children from birth through 8-years-old when she enrolled a 9-year-old girl. She also said a hot water pipe had burst and the facility in a state of "calamity" when a child supposed to be picked up by the day care was left at an elementary school.

The room we were supposed to lock the kids in does not lock - it sticks," Mrs. Richardson said. "The reason the babies were up (when DHR investigators arrived) was because the door pops when it opens...the DHR workers shouldn't dren has always been great there,' come in during nap time.

Testimony, however, indicated the Ms. Richardson testified she spoke children slept from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. to children who were sent to her and the DHR workers arrived after 3 p.m. that day.

> "I just don't think any of these things are valid," Ms. Richardson testified. "I think they've all been blown out of proportion This whole thing has been a nightmare. I had no complaints (before the investigation). My parents (of children enrolled) have been shocked. I can't understand how a thing like this could snowball."

Ms. Richardson admitted she has 'made mistakes" but testified the non-compliances had been corrected

"I feel that it is to his benefit that Day Star Day Care stays open," Debbie Mannering testified about her son's happiness at the center. "And I also feel it's to my benefit if my child is happy.

"I believe you'll be doing some of the parents a disservice if you take the license," Don Kennedy, father of a 6-year-old enrolled at the center, testified.

'My children have learned more good things there," said Frankie Robbins, mother of two children enrolled at the center since it opened in September 1983. "They have good teachers there. They are happy with their teachers and I'm happy with their teachers."

Basile, who did not testify because of an illness in the family, said he hoped the board would give the center probation, rather than revoke the license.

"The emotional state of the chil-isocyanate might actually result in spreading the risk, rather than reducing it

Nevertheless, the chemical companies are starting to look for alternatives because of possible restrictions on the manufacture or shipping of methyl isocyanate in the future.

In addition, Union Carbide has told its plants in West Virginia. Georgia, Brazil and France to use up their remaining stocks of methyl isocyanate as quickly as possible, a pro-cess that officials said would take two to three weeks. A spokesman, Laura Malis, said Saturday that the company had not decided whether to continue to use methyl isocyanate after current stocks are gone

On the issue of alternatives, Gary L. Beeler, production manager for agrichemicals manufacturing at Du agrichemicals manufacturing at Du Pont, said, "Generally there is more than one possible chemical route to getting where you want to go to the end product." But he said that these other routes, while developed in the-ory, sometimes did not work.

best to come into compliance. I feel a lot of this may be noncommunication on both parts. I think Phyllis looks at the DHR as harassing her and I think the DHR looks at her as running a slip-shod business. Basile said he was disappointed in that it seemed the DHR was trying to provoke the director rather than be supportive and help her come into compliance. After listening to this today, I wouldn't run a day care center for all the tea in China," he said. "It's a volatile situation because of the publicity. I've had my kids in day care center for nine years and I've seen some pretty bad effects from a badly-run day care center. My kids are happy here and I'm scared it's going to be taken away from them.

'I feel very helpless," he said. "I'm disappointed in the system but I don't know what to do to make it better.

The center can remain open while Ms. Richardson continues the appeal process, according to Lonnie Duke, DHR staff attorney from San Antonio who acted as legal counsel for the advisory review board. The advisory review board will give its opinion about the disposition to the director of licensing. A three-member appeal review committee will review the opinion and make a final decision in the case within two weeks.

If the final decision is to revoke the license, Ms. Richardson must request a rehearing of the committee's decision within 15 days after receiving the final decision, according to DHR rules.

Du Pont uses methyl isocyanate to make two insecticides at a plant in La Porte, Texas. It buys the methyl isocyanate from the Union Carbide plant in Institute, W.Va., shipping it across the country in special rail cars

Methyl isocyanate is made by combining phosgene and methylamine.

Pickens: Mesa could save Phillips

TULSA, Okla. (AP) - As far as T. Boone Pickens Jr. is concerned, the takeover of Phillips Petroleum Co. by Mesa Partners may be the only way to keep Phillips from being swallowed by another firm in a hostile takeover and moved from Bartlesville

Mesa Partners, of which Pickens is president, has announced plans to initiate a cash tender offer for 23 million shares of Phillips stock at $60 a share.

Mesa Partners, before announcing plans to acquire Phillips, bought about 8.9 million shares of Phillips' 154.6 million outstanding shares for about $383 million on the open market.

Pickens said he isn't sure exactly when the offer would begin, but expects it to be over by mid-Jan-uary. He also said he believes up to 60 percent of the stock could be tendered during that period.

According to Pickens, if Phillips accepts a bid from another oil company, the operations in Bartlesville probably would be dismantled.

"I don't think it would be in the company's interest to seek a merger with another major oil company, he said. "A cross-industry merger would be more beneficial, like the DuPont-Conoco merger.

Pickens said, however, there may not be such a suitable merger part-

Phillips denies comment on bid

NEW YORK (AP) - Phillips Petroleum Co., which is resisting an unsolicited $9.1 billion takeover proposal from a group led by Texas oilman T. Boone Pickens Jr., declined comment Saturday on a report that a Nor-wegian industrial concern has expressed an interest in it.

"I can't comment on a market rumor," said Jere Smith, a spokesman at Phillips' headquar-ters in Bartlesville, Okla.

The New York Times, quoting unidentified international investment bankers, reported Saturday that Norsk Hydro has expressed an interest in negotiating with Phillips and possibly buying Phil-lips' rich holdings in the Ekofisk oil fields of the North Sea.

Phillips owns 37 percent of Ekofisk, and Norsk Hydro has a 6.7 percent interest. Other oil companies share the remaining ownership.

The Times said that officials in London believe Norsk Hydro is interested in expanding its own oil and natural gas holdings in the North Sea.

leum Co., whose president is Pickens, and of Wagner & Brown, an independent oil firm, announced on Tuesday that it was seeking control of Phillips. the nation's eighth-largest oil company

The Mesa Partners group has said it has already purchased nearly 6 percent of Phillips' stock for about $388 million. It said it would offer $60 a share for another 23 million shares to raise its stake to about 21 percent.

Pickens said he hopes to gain control of Phillips' board of directors and to arrange to buy the remaining stock at $60 a share through a leveraged buyout. In such a transaction, most of the purchase price is paid with loans that are secured by the assets and proceeds of the company being acquired.

Last week, Phillips obtained a temporary order from an Oklahoma court to block the group led by Pickens from proceeding with its bid.

OF OUR CHRISTMAS SPECIAL

Pickens said he thinks employees of Phillips have been at a disadvantage during the last few years, because of the constant threat of a hostile takeover.

"It is hoped we can end all that," he said. "I think the management of some companies have forgotten who really owns the company - the stockholders. We've let that get away from us.'

Phillips was chosen as a takeover target because it had "more plusses than any other company, it's large enough, but still something we can get our arms around," Pickens said.

Mesa is seeking authorization to buy 20.6 percent of Phillips stock and would need additional Securities and Exchange Commission approval to buy more than that.

Pickens has said that if he gets 21 percent of Phillips' stock he will attempt to gain control of Phillips' board of directors and then buy the rest of the stock at $60 a share. The purchase of the remaining 122.7 million shares would be financed by borrowings backed up by Phillips' assets and cash flow.

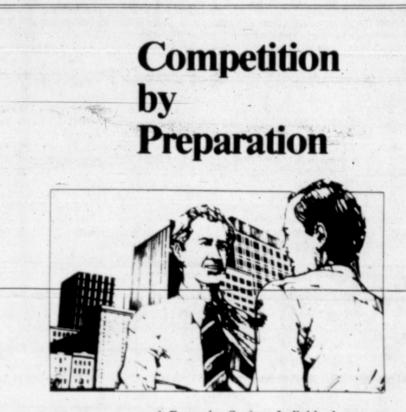

Pickens did not say if he would dismantle any of Phillips subsidiaries

We'll just have to get in there and decide," he said. "I'm sure there will be some changes, but I have no preconceived ideas."

Six men indicted on charges of oil fraud

FORT WORTH (AP) - Six men have been indicted on charges that they defrauded investors out of $5 million for a machine that purportedly turned trash into black gold

According to the indictment unsealed Friday, the six men persuaded investors, most of them from Texas and Oklahoma, to buy $30,000 limited partnerships in Gulf Resources Inc., Convertco. Inc. and New Resources Inc.

In exchange, each investor was to receive 12,000 tons of lignite, the right to have the company process and sell the oil and a share in the profits of the oil production, said the indictment, handed down Tuesday by a federal grand jury in Fort Worth

Gulf Resources was housed in offices at the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport until Dec. 20, 1982, when the operation closed, leaving no forwarding address, according to the indictment.

Investors were shown a machine that was touted as being able to convert lignite coal, tires and household oil, according to arbage into crude the indictment. The six also were alleged to have duped an independent laboratory into substantiating their claims in a report based on fraudulent information. A machine built in 1981 in Midwest City, Okla., contained a hidden compartment containing 20 to 25 gallons of oil, the indictment said. The oil was secretly drained each time the machine was operated in demonstrations to investors and to engineers from Wyle Laboratories Inc., according to the indictment.

The six reportedly siphoned $2.4 million of the $5 million investment for their personal use from 1980 to 1983, according to the indictment. The remainder of the money raised went into operating the company's offices.

The scheme was halted with a permanent injunction in 1983, barring four of the men from violating federal securities laws, according to a press release issued by the U.S. Department of Justice.

The results of a U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission investigation were then turned over to the Justice Department and FBI.

The accused men could not be reached for comment.

The six men are charged in the indictment of conspiracy to commit mail and securities fraud and violations of laws governing interstate transportation of stolen property. They are:

Dean B. Wolzen, 53, chairman of the board of directors of Gulf Resources: Richard A. Ellis, 46, president;

John David Robison, 52, vice

All are residents of the exclusive Denton County community of Trophy Club. Wolzen was under a 1980 court order to stop selling securities in the state of Arizona.

Duarte skeptical about guerrillas' desire for peace

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - El Salvador President Jose Napoleon Duarte said Saturday he would resume talks with leftist guerrillas if they were ready for a truce, but he believes the rebels "want to destroy the political system.

'If I see a little open space that they might be willing to pursue peace, I will go through that opening," said Duarte, who was here for a speech at Trinity University.

"Do they really want peace talks or is this a tactical maneuver? I have to find this out," he said. "I am not ready to be an instrument of a tactical dialogue...I don't accept any pressures from the right or left in seeking peace for my country.

Duarte, founder of the moderate Christian Democratic party, is the first civilian democratically elected leader in El Salvador in more than 50 years. Duarte said he was disappointed that the rebels rejected a Christmas truce.

"You are singing jingle bells and we are killing each other and that has to be stopped," he said."We want peace in our country next Christmas. We hope the guerrillas want the same.

Duarte appealed to the United States to continue economic and military aid to his government, despite complaints by human rights organizations over the right-wing death squads linked to the killing and torturing of civilians.

"I want to ask the United States people to understand what the government of El Salvador is doing in pursuit of peace," he said.

"What they (guerrillas) are asking is total surrender. They have asked the president to resign his post and form a new government," Duarte

"They want to destroy the politi-cal system by destroying the consti-tution. The third thing they want to do is destroy the army," he said. "They want to seize power by the use of force."

ADA says Senate slightly more liberal than in 1983

WASHINGTON (AP) - Americans for Democratic Action said Saturday that the Senate became slightly more liberal this year and moderated President Reagan's conservative policies but still failed to attend to the nation's economic problems.

The liberal organization said the Senate as a whole voted correctly on 47 percent of 20 key issues, compared with 43 percent a year earlier. Democrats had a 74 percent rating in 1984, up from 68 percent in 1983, while Republicans averaged 25 percent, compared with 22 percent a year earlier, according to the ADA's liberal ranking system.

Nine senators - all Democrats were given a perfect 100 rating, one more than in 1983. Nine senators all Republicans - scored zero, two more than last year.

Leon Shull, retiring after 21 years as the ADA's national director, praised the Senate for moving "to. uphold the letter and spirit of the Constitution" by rejecting Reagan's school-prayer amendment and his request for authority to veto parts of spending bills, and by protecting the Legal Services Corporation.

The Senate gets an F - a failing grade - for its inattention to America's economic problems,' Shull said. "Some problems perhaps are simmering below the surface. but they exist nonetheless

He pointed to Congress' inability to take significant action against the record deficit and criticized the Senate's record on unemployment.

'The Senate turned its back on the long-term unemployed, many of whom have been out of work so long that they are no longer counted in the official statistics," Shull said. "They also rejected provision of health-care benefits for workers whose lives are already shattered."

The ADA also announced Saturday that Ann F. Lewis, political director of the Democratic National Committee since 1981, will succeed Shull as national director.

Mrs. Lewis, 46, the sister of Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., said the organization will "continue to speak for the principles of economic fair-ness, human rights and equal opportunity in education."

Lewis has been active in ADA since 1975.

The ADA claims 40,000 members and 40 chapters nationwide.

Senate Democrats given 100 percent ratings by the ADA were Sens. Christopher Dodd of Connecticut, Paul Sarbanes of Maryland, Carl Levin of Michigan, Donald Riegle of Michigan, Frank Lautenberg of New Jersey, Jeff Bingaman of New Mexico, Quentin Burdick, North Dakota, Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island, and Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio.

Republicans receiving zero ratings were Sens. Jeremiah Denton of Alabama, James McClure of Idaho, Steven Symms of Idaho, Chic Hecht of Nevada, John East of North Carolina, Jesse Helms of North Carolina, Don Nickles of Oklahoma, Strom Thurmond of South Carolina and Jake Garn of Utah

Authorities identify plane crash victims

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) - Med-ical authorities identified the 13 victims of a Provincetown-Boston Airlines plane crash Saturday, as federal officials investigated why a large section of the aircraft's tail fell off.

The airline on Saturday grounded its planes of the same model as the crashed aircraft.

The crash of Flight 1039, shortly after takeoff Thursday from Jacksonville International Airport en route to Tampa, became "inevitable" after the horizontal stabilizer, a 21foot-wide section of the tail, came off, said Patricia Goldman, vice chairwoman of the National Transportation Safety Board.

"All varieties of things" could have caused the stabilizer to snap off, including metal stress, metal fatigue and maintenance error, she said

Investigators found pieces of the tail about a third of a mile from the site of the crash, which killed all 13 people on board.

American experts discuss why poor are still with us

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Two ecades after America launched its And there was insistence that the decades after America launched its war on poverty, experts from academia and government retreated to this restored colonial town to contemplate why the poor are still with us

When they broke camp Saturday after 21/2 days of talks, one message was clear: There is nothing on the horizon to propel the estimated 35.3 million poor Americans - 15.2 percent, or one in six - out of poverty.

There was little talk of expanding welfare and uncertainty over what price the poor might pay in the war the government soon must launch against the gaping federal deficit.

But there was widespread agreement that the best route out of poverty is through economic growth

Great Society welfare programs are not luring people into poverty and are not the cause of teen-age pregnancy, black joblessness or social malaise

The conference was a joint undertaking of the Institute for Research on Poverty at the University of Wisconsin and the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. Taxpayers were picking up a tab estimated at $100,000 by the institute's director, Sheldon Danziger.

The 120 participants included 50 federal officials — top poverty ana-lysts from HHS, Congress, the Office — can Social Policy 1950-1980." of Management and Budget and other agencies. Most of the academ-ics were economists, many of them duced more poor instead. We tried other agencies. Most of the academliberals who worked in the analytical trenches when the war on poverty started in the 1960s.

That was a time, said Robert Lampman, a University of Wisconsin economist, when it was felt that "if we could put a man on the moon in 10 years, we could solve the poverty problem in 10 years." Several prominent conservatives declined invitations, including Martin Anderson, the former domestic adviser to President Reagan who wrote in 1978 that the war on poverty had been won, and Charles Murray, author of a controversial

He recommends "scrapping the entire federal welfare and incomesupport structure for working-aged persons, including AFDC, Medicaid, food stamps, unemployment insurance, worker's compensation, subsidized housing, disability insurance and the rest.

Danziger, an economist who is also a professor of social work at the University of Wisconsin, said, "Government programs are much more successful than they get credit for. On the other hand, they don't solve the poverty problem. There's no simple solution.

'Myths are more important than reality," lamented Lester Thurow, a Massachusetts Institute of Technology. "What people hear is what they want to hear: 'All the social pro-grams have failed...and we shouldn't feel guilty when you cut the budgets and abolish the programs.'

Paul Starr, a Harvard sociologist on leave at the Institute for Advanced Studies in Princeton, N.J., said advances in health care for all Americans, including the poor

Infant mortality rates "were cut in half between 1968 and 1980," he said. Sociologist Christopher Jencks, whose 1972 book "Inequality" fueled the view that compensatory education did little to enhance the longterm economic prospects for the poor, agreed with Harvard sociologist Nathan Glazer that recent studies point to other gains from remedial programs, such as less delinquency or teen-age pregnancy.

Although the poverty rate grew recently, Jencks said, the poor made advances in such measures as nutrition, health and even how many have plumbing in their homes.

The Census Bureau says 19 percent of Americans were poor in 1964. The rate hit a low of 11.1 percent in 1973.

Sen. Lugar wants review of policies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The incom-ing chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee says he plans a sweeping review of "all aspects" of President Reagan's foreign policies, including human rights violations in South Africa and other nations around the world.

In an interview, Republican Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana, said he wants to restore the committee as an active, forceful influence in examining U.S. relationships with other countries.

"I am prepared to head into a full scale set of hearings on all aspects, the full totality of our foreign policy, sort of lay it out over the first few weeks of this next session, and make some judgments on what our role as a committee might be," he sald

In addition to top administration officials like Secretary of State George Shultz, administration critics will be also be asked to testify at the hearings shortly after the new Congress convenes in January.

'We will have some give and take with those who are responsible and others who are pre-eminent in American foreign policy," he said.

Nonetheless, Lugar said he plans no flashy confrontations with the Reagan administration whose policies he generally supports.

But just by having the hearings; Lugar will open the administration to critical questioning from Democratic members of the committee.

ONE OF the first items on the agenda will be South Africa where Lugar said Reagan's quiet diplomatic approach has not been enough to help avert the possibility of "an abysmal civil war that would disrupt that country and our (U.S.) inter ests.

Last week, it was disclosed that Lugar and Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., wrote a letter to Reagan urging the president to put more pressure on the South Africans to begin reforms on the apartheid policies separating blacks and whites. Lugar also was openly critical of Reagan after a meeting with the Rev. Jesse Jackson, who plans to travel to South Africa early next year.

"Our policy is kind of ambiguous in regard to South Africa," he said in the interview. "The president and those of us in Congress interested in this need to speak out more forcefully and frequently on the evils of apartheid.

Lugar noted that the president defended the administration's policies by saying that the lives of black employees of U.S. firms in South Africa have been improved and that those improvements would be jeopardized if the United States were to impose economic sanctions against the government in Johannesburg.

"But that's (blacks employed by Americans) very few people," Lugar said. Meanwhile, he said, the South African government has done far too little for the black majority there.

"IF THE relationship between South Africa and this government is to be enhanced, there really does need to be movement (toward ending apartheid)," Lugar said.

Lugar was asked if the administration should also be more aggressive in applying moral pressure on other nations with widespread human rights violations.

'Yes, I think so," he said. "Privately that was my advice to the president on South Africa in our letter. But I could have written about other things ... That may not be the last one.

In Reagan's first term when the president was criticized for not making human rights a top priority of his foreign policy, Lugar said, "He has had other things on his mind. There are areas where he could do more, and I suspect he will."

On other topics, Lugar said he will oppose any effort to cut off all CIA aid to the rightist contra guerrillas battling the Sandinista government in Nicaragua, an issue sure to come up next year.

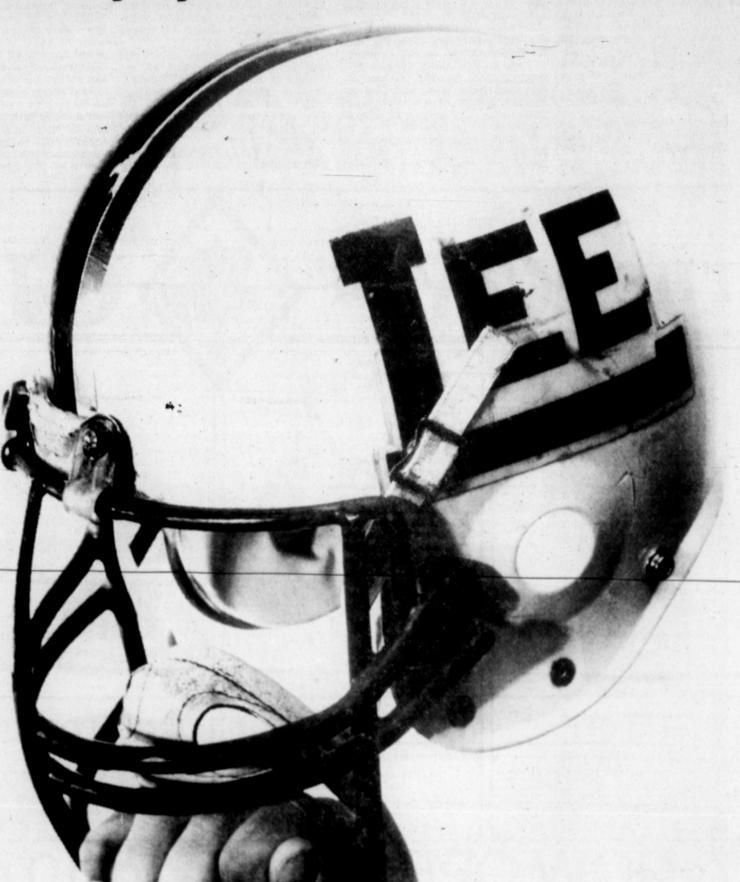

But Lugar said he wants strict observation of current law prohibiting the use of U.S. funds for overthrowing the existing government. Instead, he said, the aid should be limited to preventing the Sandin-istas from sending military help to leftists guerrillas in El Salvador or Honduras

ς

Despite growing opposition to fur-ther production of MX long-range intercontinental missiles, Lugar said he will firmly support Reagan's efforts to deploy the weapon as a mainstay of U.S. nuclear defenses.

"It really is a miracle," said Dr. Everett Lerwick, chief of surgery at Missouri Baptist Hospital in St. Louis County. This man shouldn't have lived to even get to the hospital. I've never heard of anyone surviving such a wound."

Lerwick said the blade had cut Arthur "Ben" Gross from the left rib cage through the underside of his liver, through many loops of bowel and the artery that supplies his right colon with blood, into his pelvis, through his scro-tum and into his rectum. In addition, he suffered bone, nerve and muscle damage to his right arm.

The accident occurred a week ago Saturday as Gross, of Sullivan, was cutting firewood at his son's farm, using a 30-inch circular saw powered by a belt attached to a trac-

All of a sudden, the belt ran off, and I made a grab for it," Gross recounted Friday from his hospital bed. "It was running real fast, and my son said, 'Leave it alone. I'll shut it down.' Then for some reason or other, the belt started wrapping up on the tractor pulley.

"I had a hold on it, and it pulled me into the saw." The next thing he knew was pain.

"I looked down and saw my whole side lying wide open," Gross said. "Then I saw my arm wide open and I thought to myself, 'Oh no.' The pain was so bad that I'd have just as soon have been a goner.'

Gross' son called Sullivan Memorial Hospital for an ambulance. As he waited 20 minutes for its arrival, Gross leaned against the tractor, fully conscious. His condition was stabilized at Sullivan, and he was then flown to Missouri Baptist.

"When he got here, blood was still pouring out of him," Lerwick said. "He was bleeding everywhere and screaming with pain, even though he'd been given Demerol. I don't understand why he hadn't passed out.

During seven hours of surgery, Lerwick gave Gross 14 pints of blood and removed more than four feet of bowel, along with bits of clothing, wood and other debris.

"I really can't believe his recovery. This guy is remarkable.

On Friday, Gross ate his first food since the accident and said he would not be afraid to use the saw again, with additional safety precautions.

House burns; Gunman thought to have died

COUPEVILLE, Wash. (AP) - A house where a heavily armed fugitive had barricaded himself exploded in flames after FBI agents fired flares at it Saturday night, and authorities said the gunman was presumed dead in the blaze that ended a two-day standoff.

Robert. T. Mathews, a neo-Nazi wanted for questioning in the wounding of an FBI agent, never came out of the burning house on Whidbey Island in Puget Sound that was surrounded by authorities, the FBI said.

Flames shot hundreds of feet into the air as ammunition exploded inside the house

We presume that whoever was in there must have died in the fire, because no one exited the house, FBI spokesman Oatess Archey said in a statement from Washington,

"I feel quite confident that he succumbed to the heat, flames, smoke, explosions ...," added Allen Witaker, FBI special agent-in-charge.

Earlier in the evening, a SWAT team twice stormed the house but was repulsed by automatic gunfire from inside, said FBI spokesman Joseph Smith in Seattle. That followed a barrage of tear gas from authorities that lasted more than three hours.

'At about 6:20 p.m., agents assaulted the house with illumination devices and for some reason the house caught on fire," Archey said. "They drew automatic weapons fire from the house. No one exited the house, even though it burned down. A perimeter has been set up around the premises, and there has been no attempt so far to identify the remains.

Residents of nearby homes on the 50-mile-long island had been evacuated, and for 11/2 hours Friday the Coast Guard halted vessel traffic on Admiralty Inlet, the only shipping channel to Puget Sound. The island is connected to the mainland by a bridge and two ferries.

During the night, floodlights bathyed the house on the rural island 20 miles northwest of Seattle.

Mathews, 31, has been sought for questioning since Nov. 24, when he escaped from about 20 FBI agents surrounding a Portland, Ore., motel. Agent Arthur Hensel was wounded in the knee, and Mathews was believed to have been wounded in the hand as he fled.

That incident began when agents tried to arrest Mathews' room companion, Gary Lee Yarbrough. Yarbrough, 29, was arrested on charges of assaulting federal officers in an ambush near Sandpoint, Idaho, on Oct. 18, and carrying firearms as a felon. He is to be arraigned Monday in Boise.

Mathews had been described as armed and dangerous by Assistant FBI Director Bill Baker in Washington, D.C.

A family source said Mathews has "a tendency toward being a martyr for his cause.

In his home of Metaline Falls, Mathews' wife, Debbie, said her husband was "an excellent family man" and father.

Mathews' brother, John Lee Mathews, said the shooting of the FBI agent would have been out of character for his brother, "although he's done a lot of strange things since he got mixed up with those people." Mathews broke off from the selfdescribed white separatist Aryan Nations Church in Hayden Lake, Idaho, said Larry Broadbent, undersheriff of Kootenai County in northern Idaho. Aryan Nations leader Richard Butler said his group advo-cates a "national state for white peo-

Mathews later founded a group called the White American Bastion, said Barbara Strakal of the Cult Awareness Center in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho.

Yarbrough has been affiliated with the Church of Jesus Christ Christian Aryan Nations based in Hayden Lake, Idaho. The Rev. Richard Butler, the leader of the church, said Yarbrough left the group about a year ago, but still is considered a follower.

The church describes itself as standing upon the ideals of the "preservation of the purity of the hite race."

'Free South Africa' demonstrations spread

WASHINGTON (AP) - Borrowing tactics from the civil rights movement of the 1960s, activists have turned their opposition to whiteruled South Africa into a post-election issue enveloping President Reagan and Congress.

The "Free South Africa Movement," which started with a small demonstration outside the South African Embassy Nov. 21, has spread to more than half-a-dozen U.S. cities and attracted members of Congress, celebrities, labor officials and black leaders.

At the heart of the movement are demands that the Reagan administration reshape its policy toward South Africa.

Randall Robinson, a principal movement organizer, said Saturday he and others will have a strategy session over the weekend to discuss ways of keeping the momentum growing 'We'll make some tactical decisions on strategy and expansion, said Robinson, vowing demonstrations will continue around the country "for months."

Also on the agenda for the meet-ing in District of Columbia Del. Walter Fauntroy's office is how to push through Congress some type of legislation banning new investment in South Africa, Robinson said. Such a measure passed the House last year but died in a conference committee Disinvestment legislation is opposed by many U.S. businesses with ties to South Africa, where American investment totals more than $2 billion. The Washington Post reported Saturday that a broad range of business groups, including officials from the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers, have agreed to lobby against proposals that would bar U.S. investment or make other restrictions.

Since Reagan took office in 1981, his aides have followed a course of "constructive engagement" - a policy of behind-the-scenes diplomacy, negotiation and friendly persuasion - to prod the five million white South Africans into allowing 22 million blacks more political and social rights.

Although Reagan says South Africa's apartheid laws are repugnant, he opposes economic or diplomatic sanctions against the strategically located ally which furnishes the United States with important minerals.

French president begins African tour amid concern about Khadafy

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — French President Francois Mitterrand leaders have complained about what they viewed as Mitterrand's policy began a week-long African tour Saturday amid growing concern among African nations over the influence of Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy in the region.

Zaire President Mobutu Sese Seko gave Mitterrand and newlyappointed French Foreign Minister Rolande Dumas a colorful welcome, complete with dancers, when they arrived in Kinshasa — the first stop of their tour.

Dumas, a personal friend and adviser of Mitterrand, was named on the eve of the four-nation African tour to replace Claude Cheysson as foreign minister.

Cheysson was named a commissioner of the European Community, and French officials stressed that his removal from the Foreign Ministry was not a disgrace.

But diplomats of moderate African nations noted privately that Cheysson was closely linked with French policy toward Khadafy in recent months and his removal was seen as an indication that Mitterrand may now listen more closely to France's African friends in dealing with Libya.

of appeasement toward Khadafy in Chad. The policy is widely seen as inspired by Cheysson.

At the 11th annual summit conference of France and her African friends, due to open Monday in neighboring Burundi, Mitterrand was expected to give a detailed account of the French decision to withdraw the 3,500-man French task force from Chad last month.

The task force was sent to Chad in August 1983 at the request of French-backed President Hissene Habre to halt the advance of Chadian rebels backed by about 5,000 Libvan regular troop

France and Libya had a year-long standoff in Chad but then announced they had agreed secretly - without Chadian participation on the simultaneous withdrawal of the armed forces of both countries from the landlocked former French colony

The French completed their withdrawal last month, but the Libyans failed to carry out their side of the bargain. According to U.S. intelligence reports, more than 2,000 Libyans equipped with heavy armor and Many of the moderate African artillery remain deployed in northern Chad supporting rebel leader Goukouni Oueddei. While awaiting Mitterrand at Kin-

shasa's Ndjili airport, Mobutu told reporters the Chad conflict would be the main problem facing the two-day summit in the Burundi capital, Bujumbura. He said he would not attend, and added that his decision was irrevocable because of his schedule.

Diplomatic sources said they saw Mobutu's absence as a response to the failure of Burundi President Jean-Baptiste Bagaza, who will chair the summit, to attend Wednesday's formal inauguration of Mobutu's third straight seven-year term as president of Zaire.

Mobutu is one of Africa's most influential moderate leaders and normally plays a key role in the annual French-African summits. He kept a task force of 2,000 Zaire paratroopers in Chad alongside the French, but recalled them following the French-Libyan withdrawal agreement

Lawmaker: Immigration bill concerns Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Mexi-can government should be consulted on alternative legislation to the Simpson-Mazzoli immigration bill, which died in the last session of Con-gress, the U.S. House Hispanic Caucus chairman said Saturday. Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M., said

President Miguel de la Madrid appeared newly "receptive" to working on an acceptable immigration bill, instead of merely opposing U.S. attempts to stem the flow of job-seeking Mexicans over the bor-

Richardson and the other four members of the congressional delegation met Friday with de la Madrid, who had voiced strong opposition to the Simpson-Mazzoli bill, which died last month in a House-Senate conference committee when Congress adjourned. "Both nations recognize this as a foreign policy problem," Richardson said in proposing that Mexican and U.S. officials form a commission to study immigration in the next three or four months.

De la Madrid and Mexican legislative leaders appeared enthusiastic over plans for a bilateral commission, suggesting it be set up in the U.S.-Mexican Interparliamentary Group, Richardson said. That group includes members of the U.S. House and Senate.

Richardson said he hoped to meet with Secretary of State George P. Shultz to argue for the need to involve Mexico in immigration control.

But "time is running out" for opponents of the failed Simpson-Mazzoli bill to write an alternative measure before Congress takes up the matter again, Richardson

Richardson and four other congressmen on a 13-day, eight-nation Latin American tour. Their next scheduled stop was Nicaragua, where they were to meet later Saturday with a representative of the leftist Sandinista junta.

While noting an alternative immigration bill is yet unwritten, Richardson said the caucus wants it to provide only "very mild" penalties against employers who knowingly hired illegal aliens.

Opponents of the Simpson-Mazzoli bill claimed its stiff sanctions against employers would have prompted discrimination against job-seekers with Hispanic names.

The caucus' bill would also address the "guest worker" section of Simpson-Mazzoli, which would have allowed Mexican laborers into the United States for limited periods Mexico was the first stop for to harvest crops. That provision had raised congressional fears of U.S. job losses and creation of a permanent Mexican population in the United States.

> The planned measure also would propose a new relationship with Mexico not only to create jobs, but to help control movement over the border," Richardson said.

> 'Simpson-Mazzoli was viewed simply as a unilateral measure" that failed to recognize Mexico's concerns about its unemployment problem, Richardson said.

Along with immigration reform, Richardson called for a border-spanning economic "free zone" in which joint U.S.-Mexican industries could operate, creating jobs that would help "reduce the flow of illegal aliens into the United States.

Juarez mayor fasts to protest electoral 'fraud'

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico -Juarez Mayor Francisco Barrio Terrazas says he is going on a hunger strike to protest what he called the latest act of electoral "fraud" by the Chihuahua State House of Representatives.

Barrio is protesting the voiding Thursday of a 1983 Juarez state rep-resentative election. If left intact, the election would have given his National Action Party, known as PAN, a crucial one-third voting block in the 14-member House of Representatives.

'I feel what they have done is very serious. We cannot let it go by unnoticed," Barrio said.

The 34-year-old mayor got permission from his 12-member city council Friday for an indefinite leave of absence while he fasts. Vice-mayor Miguel Corral Olivas will govern in his absence

Barrio said he will fast until 44,000

•signatures are collected in support of Juan Saldana, the Juarez PAN candidate for state representative. Saldana won the 1983 election by 44,000 votes.

"I don't know how long (the hunger strike) will be. It could take a while to collect that many signatures," Barrio said in an interview with the El Paso Times.

Juarez is the largest city in Mexico with a mayor that does not belong to the dominant Institutional Revolutionary Party, known as PRI. The PRI has controlled state and national government since 1929.

Five PAN party candidates for state representative in Chihuahua were declared winners in July 1983 in part of an unprecedented PAN electoral sweep that extended to mayoral races in Juarez and Chihuahua City.

The state government allowed only four of the five PAN candidates to serve in this year's Chihuahua state legislature.

Juarez District 4 candidate Saldana was not allowed to serve pending a ruling on his disputed election by a three-member committee of PRI state representatives.

On Thursday, 17 months after the election, the committee voided the election on the grounds that 46 of the 260 voting booths in District 4 had been relocated on the day of the election.

"They should have done it before this...They didn't want to annul the election before this to avoid angering the people of Juarez," Barrio said.

Barrio said there is no way to appeal the actions of the house of representatives and install Saldana as a legislator.

But he said he wanted to make the people aware of what had happened.

'The people become discouraged when these things happen. I don't think I'll let it pass unnoticed," he said

Celebrations mirror divisions in El Salvador

TEJUTEPEQUE, El Salvador (AP) El Salvador's civil war so overshadows this rebel-held town that even children are picking sides. Christmas, rather than bringing people together, mirrors the deep divisions in this country.

Children carrying images of Joseph and Mary paraded through the town Thursday afternoon in a traditional Christmas Posada ceremony recalling the arrival of the parents of Jesus in Bethlehem.

At the same time, a band of leftist guerrillas played revolutionary songs in the town square. The two celebrations started at the same time and provided a bittersweet glimpse at the degree to which five years of war have divided Salvadorans.

Barefoot pre-teen children led the rebel parade into the square, carrying a yellow-on-red guerrilla banner. Others just as young tried to pass out leaflets boasting of recent rebel victories to children in the Posada celebration, most of whom refused to accept them.

At one house the children in the religious procession sang, "In the name of heaven we ask lodging. My beloved wife cannot continue."

"This is not an inn. Be away with you. We cannot open our doors," sang those inside. The traditional verses went back and forth until those inside sang, "Well, enter then, enter," and the children did.

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - More than 100 students and two Roman Catholic priests continued their week-long sit-in at a public high school Saturday to protest the removal of crosses from the classroom walls.

The protest at the 700-pupil vocational school in Wloszczowa, 155 miles south of Warsaw, began Monday. Classes have been suspended since Tuesday.

"The situation has not changed for some time," said Stanislaw Sniecikowski, a spokesman for the provincial governor's office in Kielce.

Sniecikowski, contacted by telephone, declined further comment.

But the weekend edition of Kielce's official Communist Party newspaper, Slowo Ludu, carried an extensive report about the Wloszczowa dispute. The full text of the article was carried Saturday by the English-language service of the official Polish news agency PAP.

Slowo Ludu said about 300 students had been occupying the school during the day with about half that number staying overnight.

It claimed local priests had "inflamed the emotions" of young-sters in the town of 10,000. "The freedom of religion does not mean the freedom to manifest belief everywhere, always and at every occasion," the newspaper said. It said Polish law provides for the separation of church and state, and the nation's communist authorities had the right to ban crosses from public institutions.

Poland's Catholic bishops, in a pas-toral letter to be read in churches Sunday, said the removal of crosses was an attempt by "irresponsible forces" to stir up "new tensions" in church-state relations.

The bishops said "it was the stand of the nation" that crosses be allowed in places where "believers work and study." More than 90 per-cent of Poland's 37 million people are Catholics.

Drought warning of regional water crises, think tank says

By MATT YANCEY

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Ethiopian drought is a forewarning of widespread regional water crises in the 1990s that could rival the energy crisis of the last decade, according to a new study by a Washingtonbased resources think tank.

Falling water tables, shrinking lakes and inland seas and rivers that once flowed year round but now fade to dry beds after rainy seasons indicate a widespread overuse and mismanagement of water resources, the Worldwatch Institute said in a study released Saturday.

"No historic event is likely to trigger a worldwide restructuring of water use the way the oil price hikes did for energy," researchers said the in 65-page study. "Yet if current trends continue, fresh water may in many areas become a constraint on economic activity and food production over the coming decades."

In the United States, the study said, areas where excessive withdrawal of underground water supplies threatens its future availablity include the Colorado River basin, particularly the areas around Phoenix and Tucson; the Florida and Pacific coasts; the High Plains from Nebraska to Texas and Oklahoma; and much of California.

Intrusion of sea water from heavy pumping of coastal aquifers is occuring in Israel and Arabian Gulf nations. Heavy pumping of inland aquifers is causing large drops in the water table in northern China, India and parts of Mexico.

The report cites statistics from the U.S. Geologial Survey in which officials estimate that the giant Ogallala Aquifer, responsible for irrigating one-fifth of the nation's cropland, is now half-depleted under 2.2 million acres of Texas, New Mexico and Kansas Rising pumping costs and dimin-ishing well yields associated the depletion of the Ogallala are causing farmers in all areas of the High Plains except for Nebraska to take land out of irrigation.

Following several decades of steady growth, the amount of irrigated land dropped 20 percent in Texas, 18 percent in Oklahoma and 9 percent in New Mexico between 1978 and 1982, the study says.

Schools earn money from investments

By LAWRENCE BUDD Staff Writer

Educating students, not sound investment, is the purpose of a school district. But there is more to running a district than textbooks and teachers.

LOCAL

During the past fiscal year, the Ector County Independent School District earned almost $2.1 million by investing taxes paid to the district and funds not yet spent from past bond issues, according to an ECISD report.

The Midland Independent School District earned about $1.3 million by investing money from these two sources during the same time period, according to MISD figures.

To earn this interest, the ECISD divided nearly $78.2 million between 101 investments. Its operating budget for the year was approximately $70 million.

The MISD banked about $57.3 million in 174 interest-earning accounts. Its operating budget was about $50 million

Semi-annually, districts receive tax dollars when county appraisal districts distribute to each district its share of property taxes paid by landowners.

These revenues are placed in a construction fund, local maintenance fund and interest and sinking fund. (Both districts also invested lesser amounts from their cafeteria funds and the ECISD earned some interest from a county permanent. school fund.)

MISD Supervisor of Accounting Tony Timmons explained that these semi-annual payments leave districts with large amounts of money, all of which is to be spent gradually as expenses arise during the year. The MISD spent about $4.5 million per month in 1983-84, while the ECISD's monthly cash flow averaged about among the various funds, with the portions not needed used for investment.

"It's a way of saving the taxpayers some money," said Timmons.

Bond issues are passed by school districts to finance capital improvement projects. The MISD issued about $15 million in bonds following voter approval in 1982 and 1983. The ECISD passed a $21.6 million issue in 1980.

immediately," said Timmons, so the money not needed was invested.

MISD invested remaining bond issue and tax money ($18.53 million) from its construction fund in 34 accounts and earned $623,536. When the fiscal year ended, almost $5 million from the construction fund remained in interest-earning accounts.

The ECISD deposited $755,700 from its construction fund in 12 accounts which netted them $5,899. All but $25,000 from this fund had been spent Sept. 1, when the fiscal year ended.

The bulk of money invested by both districts came from the local maintenance fund, from which dayto-day operating expenses come.

During 1983-84, The MISD invested almost $32 million in 95 accounts and made $593,565. About $3.9 million continued to earn interest at the end of this fiscal year.

The ECISD divided $74 million between 68 accounts - which netted them nearly $2 million - with $14 million still invested Sept. 1.

Although it might sound a bit precocious, Midland elementary school students have come to realize there's more to life than the Jungle Gym, the monkey bar and the teeter totter.

'We are very pleased with our

Instead, pupils are making tentative decisions about their education, their career, their future.

With the help of teachers, parents and business leaders, students can learn the value of a positive self-concept towards career awareness, according to Dr. Mike Sampson, professor of graduate reading and language arts at East Texas State University in Commerce

Sampson visited Midland elementary schools recently to demonstrate to teachers and students the values of such a program.

Using visual aids, he stressed the importance of all work.

Eighty percent of the population focuses attention on the top jobs. But everybody can't be a doctor, a lawyer or an actress. Therefore, failure is built in when a person doesn't achieve that job," Sampson said.

Alloobs have worth and all work can be useful and meaningful," said Sampson, stressing the need to reverse the trend of the last decade which implied only certain professions are worthwhile.

"Teachers can focus in on a wide spectrum of professions in the classroom and reverse these attitudes on a day to day basis in elementary school. But it must begin there," he said. "It must be incorporated into the daily classroom routine if it is to be successful."

Sampson said educators also must work to help reverse male/female stereotypes in the workplace.

"We must overcome the sexism of the past and educate others in regards to the many jobs available for women. The chances of a woman becoming a successful pro football player are slim, but there are valuable positions available to women."

MISD's career awareness program, for children in kindergarten through sixth grade, is designed to improve student knowledge of various careers through classroom activities such as feature reading, writing, listening, speaking and thinking, according to Dr. Peggy Dildy, MISD elementary social studies coordinator.

The pilot program - funded by the state - was incorporated into the social studies program at MISD to correlate career education studies with elements outlined in House Bill acquire the following skills by the end of their elementary school career:

- A general awareness of the nature of the world of work.

- A general awareness of work values as a set of possible reasons why people work.

- A set of work values that will lead each student to achieve a positive self-concept.

- A view of the world of work from a personalized frame of reference, resulting in tentative aspirations regarding the kind of work they may someday choose to follow.

Gifted students may need better counseling

By MALCOLM RITTER AP Science Writer

DAYTON, Ohio - You can be anything you want, they told a gifted young student named Jeff Brown. Doctor, lawyer, anything.

At age 29, Jeff Brown waits in a little green booth in Dayton, Ohio, for a car to pull up. Then he slides back a plastic panel, takes a little ticket from the driver, takes some money, gives any necessary change, slides the panel closed, and starts waiting again.

Attending a parking lot is not what the guidance counselors had in mind. Brown, whose IQ had scored in the gifted range, isn't pleased says about it either.

But it shows what can happen when guidance counselors fail to understand the special needs of gifted children, according to Barb Kerr, coordinator of the gifted education program at the University of Nebraska in Lincoln.

They feel all they need to do is to tell a young person, 'you can do anything you want to,' and they've done their job," she says. The fact that many talented kids can do almost anything is often exactly the problem, she says.

'You've got so many options you just can't narrow them down," she

That can stall career planning at a time when students have to start taking the right courses and lining up tuition money for careers like medicine and law. Accelerated classes may just force the choices on them sooner, pitting career demands like a calculus class against adolescent desires like cheerleading or sports.

In addition, "we've let gifted girls just slip right by," Ms. Kerr says. Many people think it's natural for them to choose colleges close to home or boyfriends rather than for career advancement, she says. And we always let girls refuse to take math" because of peer pressure, she says.

They're doomed," Ms. Kerr says. The vast majority of higher professions require four years of high school math."

Ms. Kerr and others are trying to provide vocational guidance suitable for gifted students. In some programs, adolescents fill out vocational, personal and values questionnaires to help them narrow their choices. They visit university classes and get help from counselors in setting career goals.

GARY OTT Few actions benficial when you're stranded

I've never been very good at figur-ing out the workings of an automo-bile, but I do know that when you increase the weight of your foot on the accelerator and the speed of the car declines proportionally, you've got yourself a major-league prob-

So it was the other night with me and my beloved sports car. I put my foot to the floorboard and the car grinded to a slow halt. Having the clutch go out will do that, I'm told.

Making matters worse, we were on a lonely stretch of country road, approximately 45 miles from civiliza-tion. It was not a happy moment. In fact, I rate it right up there (or, should I say, down there) with the time a judge decreed it was I, and not my ex-wife, who ultimately would be responsible for paying off our Visa bill, a terribly unjust deci-

But back to being stranded. There are several things you can do when you find yourself in that position. Here are just four:

1) You can revert to your childhood ways and weep openly and curse a lot. (This will make you feel better for a brief moment, but it doesn't really accomplish the job at hand.)

2) You can look under the hood. (This may seem logical, but when the best you can come up with is, "Hmm, I'll be darn, there's the motor" you know, that too is a waste of time and energy.)

3) You can look around for farmhouses from which to make a phone call. (Again, this sounds perfectly logical but you must remember we are talking stranded here and to the best of my knowledge that means don't waste your time looking for a ackrabbit, much less a teleph

4) You can stick out the old thumb and mutter that familiar prayer about promising to become a priest if God will only find it in Himself to deliver you to safety once more. (It is a dandy little prayer and perso-nally I credit it for getting me through sophomore geometry.)

I also credit it for getting me a ride that fateful night, although I feel compelled to add it was after a very lengthy wait. God is obviously beginning to wise up to my prayers.

But the point I'm making (rather laboriously, I admit) is that being stranded on a lonely stretch of highway is a peculiar feeling, one full of contradictions

On the one hand, there is a sense of vulnerability, as though you are at the mercy of any half-crazed madman who might be roaming the countryside. Visions of Henry Lee Lucas, for example, kept flashing in my mind. And those of Charlie Manson, too.

Yet, at the same time, there was a feeling of freedom. Maybe there's a bit of "Easy Rider" in all of us. I kept recalling an earlier time when.

on a whim, I had decided to hitch-hike from Wichita Falls to New Orleans. I still have vivid memories of standing on a hill in East Texas and gazing out at the pine trees and wild flowers along the road. The summer air was heavy and birds could be heard chirping.

It was a marvelous feeling and the word "freedom" keeps coming back to me. There is something about being alone and lost that forces a person to develop an inner-strength.

And it changes your perspective on life, too. Suddenly, things like overdue bills and next week's history exam don't seem so important.

Instead, reality takes on a new meaning. Textbook knowledge is replaced in significance by personal experience. A desire to meet unusual people and hear their life stories becomes almost an obsession. You want to be a Man For All Sea sons, so to speak. Nothing less will suffice.

So, you might be asking, did my experience on that lonely highway last week rekindle those warm memories

Of course not. The rain ruined my new suede jacket. The sub-freezing temperatures caused me to flirt with frostbite. And, the clutch cost $300 to fix.

The world-champion milk-producing Holstein was quickly followed on the auction block by three colleagues who sold for more than $2 million total.

The multimillion-dollar auction, sponsored by Price Dairies Inc., an El Paso-based firm that raises cattle for their embryos, was a heavy mixture of Holstein hoopla and high-

Price owner Robert Price III, a fourth-generation dairyman, said bidders - who come from as far had to guarantee a mininimum line of credit of $250,000 to take part in the auction.

Prior to the sale, organizers said the total lines of credit represented $100 million.

Stephanie, owned by Long Haven Farms of Clayton, Mich., was bought by Price Partners, which included the promoters of the sale. Dr. G.W. Snider of El Paso did the bidding for Stephanie.

Price said Stephanie produced a whopping 51,000 pounds of milk last year, enough to fill 104,000 glasses.

He said cows like Stephanie can help reduce world hunger because, through embryonic transfer, she can produce 24 to 30 new calves each vear.

With cattle like that it won't be difficult to feed the world," Price said

The well-heeled crowd Saturday night was treated to a feast of smoked ham, rounds of beef and French pastries before the show and a performance by county music star

Charley Pride afterwards. The door prize was an exotic $70,000 Gatsby Cabriolet automobile.

About 800 people crowded into a large barn° at the ranch made famous by the televison show Dallas. The nervous sellers mingled with prospective buyers and women clad in glittering gowns stood next to men in cowboy boots and Stetsons.

Waitresses, who donned seethrough plastic chaps with silver trim and low-cut halter tops, mingled through the crowd serving drinks.

"This is a unique event," said Tom Neuenschwander, whose embryo bred Holstein Natasha "comes with a beautiful memory," according to the catalog.

Spotted in the crowd was Richard T. Kelley, who has nine Computerland franchises in New Mexico and West Texas. Kelley paid $505,000 last Benesh, who said he already owns a hampster and a half-interest in a dog, said he expected to pay $500,000 and $800,000 for an animal that would provide him with very good tax breaks.

Organizers said the Southfork auction, which featured 37 of the nation's prime Holstein cattle, is the first consisting entirely of top dairy cattle in the nation as ranked by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The USDA ranking is based on a complex formula that includes the animal's blood lines and milk production.

Price said whoever buys one of the cattle stands to gain, Price said, because each cow can then be used for embryonic transfers, each of which could net the owner $50,000 to

A third source from which the districts earn interest is the interest and sinking fund, which is set aside to repay debts from bond issues.

In the past fiscal year, the MISD deposited $4.829 million in bond revenues in 33 accounts and made $84,463. During the same period, the ECISD split $3.31 million among 13 accounts and earned $102,5345.

In St. Louis Park, Minn., gifted students can participate in a "values auction," in which they bid hypothetical money for things like enjoy-ing a year of good health, having hundreds of friends, being the wisest person in the nation and finding a cure for cancer — all designed to help them sort out what is important to them. They may also spend a day or two with somebody in an interesting career, or enter a longerlasting internship or mentor program

When a couple of students observed surgery with a doctor, says counselor Joel Anderson, "it was the highlight of their high school career. It turned them on."

Such programs come too late for Brown, the parking lot attendant. He eventually earned a political sci-ence degree, and later sold advertising space in convention programs and drove a truck before starting at the parking lot seven years ago. He has applied for dozens of jobs, but when his wife has a baby later this month, he'll probably still be work-ing in the little green booth.

Nobody ever said anything about goal-setting. They said, 'You-can be anything you want,' " Brown recalls. "You could be a doctor.' I remember that specifically.... I was down at the hospital the other day for our first baby class, and I thought, 'I could have been a doctor.'"

"And a one, and a two, and a three, and a four...", counts Carolyn Lindsey in a very proper tone, reminiscent of a British matron. She is a cross between Miss Marple and Jane Fonda and her students obviously adore her, as they follow her through the daily stretching routine at Midland's Hillcrest Manor.

Hillcrest Manor is one of several locations where Midland's senior citizens meet for regular exerise programs. Casa de Amigos, Midland Senior Citizen's Center and Stonebrook Care Center also hold the classes

'Everyone knows their limit and I encourage them to quit when they have reached it," said Ms. Lindsey, a former ballet instructor.

But even if they just move their hands a little, well, it's really better now isn't it?'

The view from Ms. Lindsey's vantage point at center front in the large sunlit community room would be frustrating to a healthy young physical education teacher. Some stiffly bending their bodies in the 30 minute program which would barely warm the limbs of the Jane Fonda crowd

But what that young teacher could not know is that some of those limbs did not used to bend. Toward the end of Ms. Lindsey's program, an 80-year-old man leans over and touches the floor with both palms.

"I was losing control of my left leg and right arm," said Burrel Cramer, a former Mobil Oil Corp. employee. "I was getting to where I couldn't write and I was dragging my leg. I'm more or less back to normal," he said, swinging his leg out in pleased demonstration. Cramer attends the classes with his wife Ruby Lee and his daughter, Beryline House, who fills in for Ms. Lindsey on occasion.

"They really surprise me," said Margaret Lance, an instructor for Midland Parks and Recreation. Ms. Lance leads exercises for a group of 30 people at Midland Senior Citizen Center. "They're really active. I could never guess some of their ages

stretches, progressing to more strenuous exercises and ending with "cool down" stretching. Ms. Lindsey leads her class in rowing motions to a 20-member chorus of "Row, Row, Row Your Boat." No musical ability is required in Ms. Lance's class, however. She simply pushes some buttons on the jukebox

"They like country-western and polkas," said Ms. Lance. "One of their favorite exercises is done to the Willie Nelson song, 'On the Road Again.' They do it by putting their thumb over their shoulder and pretend like they are hitch-hiking.

While enthusiasts at Midland Senior Citizen's Center prefer the country beat, Jessie Ray's exercise group at Casa de Amigos, a community center in east Midland, prefer the sound of Motown.

"They really like Smoky Robinson and the Miracles and Aretha Franklin," said Ms. Ray, an instructor for Park Center YMCA. "They really respond.

One of Ms. Ray's most ardent students finds exercise nothing new. "I'm 97 years old," said Mary people were sitting down, others matic program beginning with slow Dockett. "I picked cotton in the field, jumped ropes, jumped fences and killed rabbits with my slingshot. I've always been sort of a tomboy.' Mrs. Dockett is adamant about exercise.

"I exercise at home." she said. "If I've got something on the stove, then I kind of shake my leg or arm while I'm cooking, just to keep active."

Ms. Ray also leads the classes for Stonebrook Care Center, a nursing home. "You have to help them a little more," she said. "but I really enjoy working with them. I just like people," she said. While exercise programs for the elderly are gaining popularity, care should be taken, warns a local physical therapist.

"Each person should have a physical examination before starting on an exercise program," said Kathy Trout, of the Permian Basin Rehabilitation Center in Odessa. "If they get clearance from a doctor and if the program is not too vigorous, then I don't think there is any harm.'

'Besides," she said, summing up what almost every instructor said at one time or another, "it's better than doing nothing.

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston sub-division cited by the Justice Depart-are at least a dozen black families ment in civil rights lawsuits says living there. "whites only" in its deed restrictions, but residents and real estate agents say the requirement has been ignored for years.

The Justice Department filed suit in Washington Friday against the homeowners' association of University Oaks because a property covenant there forbids lots in the area to "ever be sold, conveyed, leased, or devised to any person or persons other than of the Caucasian Race."

"I'm really surprised that it's happening in that area because there is a multiplicity of races in the population there," said Judson Robinson Jr., a black real estate agent whose firm has leased property in University Oaks to all races for years.

University Oaks has about 150 homes — valued from $30,000 to $125,000 — in a series of blocks adjacent to the University of Houston.

Ferris Block, a former University of Houston spokesman who lives in the subdivision, said it is a small neighborhood with an academic flavor

'It's a neighborhood of University of Houston professors, many of

The racial restriction has not been enforced for years, but is kept on the books to protect the other deed restrictions, Block said.

An attorney advised the homeowner association that if the racial restriction was removed, he said, it would invalidate restrictions which are used to keep commercial establishments from building in the neighborhood.

Houston has no zoning and residential properties are protected only by the deed restrictions, Block said, but residents have to enforce them for the restrictions to be effective. He said the association retains an attorney for that reason.

There are blacks and Indians living there," said Block. "There are at least a dozen black families. The restriction is there, but it's just understood that it is not applicable. It's not enforcable, but it's just not worth fooling with to get it rescinded.

The neighborhood association in the past has filed several suits to keep commercial developers from moving into the neighborhood.

Recently, the group won suits to block two college fraternities from moving into the area.

Block said the deed restrictions are renewed every 10 years and were last approved by the neighborbood in 1980 Racially restrictive land deed covenants have been held to be unconstitutional since 1948 and have been illegal since the passage of the Fair Housing Act of 1968. The deed restrictions for University Oaks were drawn up in 1939.

Justice Department spokesman John V Wilson said the suits were filed after some homeowners in University Oaks complained.

Named in one suit was the University Oaks Civic Club and its president, John Baust. The suit asks the court to order the civic club to remove the restriction from all recorded deeds and to bar the club from enforcing it.

Baust said he was dismayed about the suit but said he hoped it will remove a deed restriction residents have been unable to change.

We welcome the court expunging that from the record," Baust said. "It seems to be an unusual way of doing it, though."

A second suit was filed against Harris County Clerk Anita Rodeheaver, asking the court to order her to ensure that no racially restrictive deed is recorded and to notify the real estate industry that such deeds are invalid and cannot be recorded.

Mrs. Rodeheaver said she is forbidden by law from expunging her records. She said the Harris County attorney will represent her in the case. But she added that racial restrictions are just paper relics.

"They are considered null and void and have no bearing at all," she said

James M. Phillips, a black real estate agent, said he comes across such restrictions in old deeds at the courthouse, but just ignores them.

"I don't know of any area in Houston that is restricted," he said. Those things are very, very old."

Robinson said he has encountered a problem just once. He said his wife handled a lease for a black family in the University Oaks area once and later received an anonymous letter pointing out the deed restriction. We just laughed about it and threw it away," he said.

People of our community who make a difference.

Because Midland is the kind of place where nobody says, We can't do it,' all kinds of things get done." says Mary Hinkle, director of Casa de Amigos. Having grown up in Midland, Mrs. Hinkle has always thought "the sky is the limit." After her senior year, her Girl Scout troop toured Europe. As high school freshmen they had set their goals high but never did consider them out of reach. The troop's attitude was a reflection of the entire community's optimism.

A few years off at college revealed to Mrs. Hinkle that such strong optimism is not the norm in every city. After college, she and her husband, also a native Midlander, choose to return to Midland and be a part of the optimistic development of this West Texas city.

Mrs. Hinkle spent many years as a volunteer making things happen. She hadn't outgrown her interest in Girl Scouts, so she served as a troop leader and as a member of the Board of the Permian Basin Girl Scout Council.

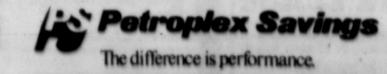

For fifteen years, she was active in the Junior League of Midland. Many kinds of projects filled the agenda and Mrs. Hinkle took a special interest in helping organize Volunteers in Midland. Though this organization is no longer in place, it served a very important purpose during its time.

The Symphony Chorale still plays a very important role in Midland and Mrs. Hinkle is proud to have been a pioneer member of the Chorale. She was able to be a part of what other optimistic citizens had brought to Midland.

Like other active Midlanders, this administrator brought some 'firsts' to Midland. One of the first church day care centers, originally Covenant Presbyterian Day Care, was organized by Mrs. Hinkle. Today, this energetic Midlander is committed to meeting the needs of many people through Casa de Amigos. Though Midland is prosperous in general and optimistic about what can be accomplished, Mrs. Hinkle points out, "a lot of teaching has to go on ... poverty is hidden ... (many) don't know it's here. Organizations such as Casa de Amigos are vehicles through which Midlanders can help each other. "We can do it," is this Midlander's slogan.

Optimism, commitment, and action are why Mary Hinkle makes a difference in Midiand.

Dawn had suffered biliary atresia, which causes a sealing off of the liver's bile ducts, since birth. The disease causes the bile, a substance that is used to digest fats in the lower intestine, to back up into the liver, damaging that organ. Her parents, Bob and Blanche Arnold, visited their daughter a half hour after surgery and said their daughter had regained consciousness but was unable to talk because she was on a respirator.

Dawn will remain in the intensive care unit for three to five days, doctors said.

The $175,000 needed for the opera-tion came from fundraising events in League City, Galveston and parts of Harris County.

Dawn and her parents flew Friday from Houston to Pittsburgh on a medically-staffed Lear jet provided by the Sun World/Circle K Foundation, which publishes the League City News and the Dickinson News.

Registration permits issued

By H.A. TUCK

Early counseling and issuance of time permits for spring semester registration begins Monday in the Midland College Office of Student Services, which is located in the Administration Building.

Persons who wish to pre-register for the spring semester should come in to take care of their paperwork and obtain a time permit as soon as possible. Time permits assign specific times to report for the two days of official registration. Since they are given out in the order in which students come in, the earlier arrivals have the best chance of gettingschedules which fit their own needs.

Hours will be from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Friday through Dec. 21.

Following the Christmas holidays, the process resumes from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Jan. 2-7. Official registration days are Jan. 9-10, with classes starting Jan. 14.

Student Senate on Wednesday presented plaques to the eight instructors chosen by student vote as "Teacher of the Semester" in each of seven instructional divisions. Those selected were: Barbara Scofield, Business Division; Dr. Pamela Howell, Communications Division; Jennifer Allison, Cultural Division; Dr. Stan Jacobs and Dr. Betty Morris, a tie in the Fine Arts Division; Terry Gilmore, Health Sciences Division; Shea Nabi, Scientific Division; and Robert Peetz, Technical Divi-

Another evening of fine entertainment comes Tuesday, when the Chaparral College/Community Band presents its fall concert at 8 p.m. in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium.

More than 40 musicians make up this group, which is directed by Walter Osadchuk. They'll perform a variety of compositions, including traditional marches, Christmas music, sacred numbers, and some medleys from "South Pacific" and John Philip Sousa's military marches.

The concert is free and open to the public.

And while you're attending one of the concerts, you also can view the Fall Student Art Show in the McCormick Gallery of the Allison Fine Arts Building. Always interesting, the Student Show includes representative works in drawing, watercolor, oils, mixed media, fiber works, jewelry, ceramics, photography...plus some presentations by architecture students. These students range from beginners to very accomplished advanced students...and many of the works are for sale.

Precipitation hampers harvest, increases feeding

Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION - Light snow in the Panhandle and South Plains along with cold, wet conditions over much of the remainder of the state this week put a damper on harvesting and increased livestock feeding.

Harvesting of cotton and grain sorghum made limited progress in the Panhandle and South Plains while sugar beet harvesting continued active, said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, in weekly report on the state's agriculture. The South Plains boasts a good cotton crop and more than half remains to be harvested.

A large amount of cotton also remains to be harvested in the Roll-ing Plains and Far West Texas although most of the crop is out in West Central Texas near San Angelo area, where acreage and yields were down sharply due to the season-long drought. A few scattered fields of cotton also are left to be harvested in North Central and Northeast Texas, Carpenter said.

Peanut harvesting is winding down in central areas but remains active in Southwest Texas near Uvalde, where a host of fall vegetables are also being harvested. In addition, vegetable and sugarcane harvesting is active in the Rio Grande Valléy. Scattered fields of soybeans are still being harvested along the Upper Coast, where adverse weather has caused some yield and quality losses, Carpenter said.

Livestock producers in many locations have started feeding hay and protein supplement, particularly since a heavy frost the past week stopped the growth of warm-season grasses. However, early planted small grains (wheat and oats) are providing good grazing over much of the state, with stocker cattle making excellent gains, Carpenter said.

Auction markets have been doing a lot of business the past week as producers are continuing to cull herds with the winter season approaching, Carpenter said.

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions. PANHANDLE: Light snow curtailed field work early in the week, including cotton and grain sorghum harvesting. The sugar beet harvest has been active, with about 85 percent of the crop out. Cold conditions have slowed wheat growth some but fields are providing good grazing. SOUTH PLAINS: Cotton harvestsoothin PLAINS: Cotton harvest-ing made good progress until damp conditions hit early this week. About 30 to 50 percent of the crop has been harvested north of Lubbock while harvesting has been limited in southern counties. A little grain sorghum also remains to be harvested. Sugar beets and peanuts are about 80 percent harvested. Wheat is making excellent progress. ROLLING PLAINS: Cotton harvesting made rapid progress last week but most of the crop is still out. Most small grains are making good growth, with a few fields still being planted. Stocker cattle are making good gains on small grains; more and more stockers are being shipped into the region. NORTH CENTRAL: Farmers need open weather to complete harvesting of cotton and peanuts. Some are also involved in baling an additional cutting of hay. Early wheat and oats are making good growth and providing grazing for livestock; some ling grazing for livestock; some planting continues. The pecan har-vest is poor. Some supplemental feeding of livestock is under way. NORTHEAST: Wet conditions are continuing to delay the completion of cotton harvesting and hay baling.

Hay supplies remain short. Wheat and winter pastures are making good growth and providing grazing for livestock. Warm-season pastures were killed by recent frost. Some cattle feeding has started with the colder weather. Harvesting of a light pecan crop continues; prices are good.

FAR WEST: Cotton harvesting continues where weather conditions permit; prolonged damp weather has caused some crop damage. Red chili harvesting continues. Livestock remain in good condition, with some feeding getting under way as grazing declines

WEST CENTRAL: Most of the cotton has been harvested; yields are low due to the season-long drought. Most wheat and oats have been planted, with early fields making good growth and providing grazing. Some hay making continues. The pecan harvest is about complete, with low yields. Most livestock are in good shape, with some supplemental feeding starting with the cold weather

CENTRAL: Peanut harvesting is about complete; irrigated yields were good but the dryland crop was short due to the drought. A lot of peanut hay has been harvested due to overall short hay supplies. Small grains are making good progress and providing grazing for stockers. EAST: A little hay is still being harvested, with damp weather caus-ing delays. Most warm-season pas-tures have gone dormant but cattle tures have gone dormant, but cattle are getting good grazing on small grains and winter pastures. Pecans range from 70 to 100 percent harvested; the crop is about half of last year's production.

UPPER COAST: Some soybean harvesting continues; yields are good but quality is poor. Most pastures have gone dormant due to the recent frost. Colder weather has slowed wheat growth. A short pecan harvest continues

SOUTH CENTRAL: Warm season grasses have gone dormant due to the past week's heavy frost, which also killed summer vegetables. Small grains continue to look good, with early planted fields providing graz-ing for livestock.

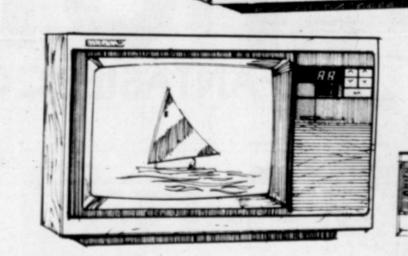

SOUTHWEST: The week's frost took care of green pastures and ranges. Small grains are offering some grazing for livestock but need moisture. Harvesting of peanuts, spinach, pickling cucumbers, broccoli and greens remains in full swing while cabbage harvesting is winding down. Disease problems are high in vegetables due to damp conditions. Hunting remains in full swing, and livestock marketing is above average as winter approaches.

Greenbugs are aphids that develop colonies on wheat. The feed mainly on leaves but also can feed on plant roots, making them difficult to locate. Symptoms are yellow spots in the field that eventually die.

When considering control for greenbugs, producers should check for parasitic wasps which may move in and control the insect without the need for insecticides.

Chemicals for controlling green-bugs include dimethoate, disulfoton, malathion and parathion.

Producers are reminded to follow all label directions and precautions when using insecticides. ...

One or two uncontrolled mustard plants per square foot in wheat or barley fields can reduce yields more than the cost of spraying. In some fields, up to 20 have been seen. The phenoxy herbicides, MCPA, 2-4-D, Banvel, and bromoxynil (Brominal R) do a good job on broadleaf weeds.

Small grain crops showing light green or yellowing effects may be ready for more nitrogren fertilizer.

Recent wet conditions have caused some losses of nitrogen that had been applied earlier. Because of this denitrification, a topdressing of nitrogen is needed on most fields. I would suggest applying at least 50 pounds of actual nitrogen per acre at this time.

Nitrogen is important on small grains because it helps develop good root systems and increases overall forage and grain production.

Homeowners can reduce the potential for pecan pests in 1985 by cleaning pecan residues now.

Walnut caterpillar and pecan wee, vil, two destructive pecan pests, overwinter (for at least part of the winter) in pecan nuts and shucks. To reduce next year's pest populations, homeowners should harvest their pecans as early and possible and then destroy all damaged pecans and shucks. Homeowners in Martin, Howard and Glasscock counties are the only counties that need to be concerned about pecan weevils, as infestations do not occur in surrounding counties.

Agriculture takes on 'city' flavor

By ED TODD Staff Writer

A brand of agriculture is moving from the confines of the city out to the open country where agriculture is at home.

The brand is the business, advisory, consulting and technical offices of the Midland County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) and the U.S. Soil Conservation Service (SCS) for Midland County.

We're moving out here primarily for the convenience of the farmers and ranchers of this community,' said Dick Hagelstein, SCS district conservationist. "Farmers and ranchers just can't get to us (in the old downtown offices), but they can now

Both offices had been housed on the ground floor of the George Mahon Federal Bulding.

The SCS is re-locating to 1348 S. Fairgrounds Road in offices adjoining the Midland County Farm Bureau. The ASCS earlier moved to the out-of-town site.

"I think we're going to have four or five times the amount of traffic than before," said Herb Sorley, county executive director for the ASCS. "And we can give better service, and that's what we're here for.

The ASCS handles the agricultural commodity programs, such as those for cotton, feed grains and small grains, including wheat, and measures acreages.

Through ASCS, farmers and ranchers can sign up for the Agricultural Conservation Program (ACP)

'Dick has the technical expertise to see that the (ACP) practices are carried out in proper fashion from start to finish," Sorley said.

The SCS provides technical assistance to carry out programs, including long-range conservation planning, of the Midland County Soil and Water Conservation District. The SCS also sets up management programs, such as cropping systems and grazing systems. "We make forage inventories," Hagelstein said. "We can do nearly anything a farmer or rancher needs on his or her land."

"It's their land," said Hagelstein, who has been in SCS work for 26 years. "We don't tell them what to do in any way, shape, form or fash-ion. They make their decisions based on the needs a particular plot of land. Hagelstein and Tomas Dominguez, SCS range conservationist, design irrigation systems, livestock pipelines, waterways, diversions, terraces and wind-strip cropping, which helps to eliminate wind erosion.

Hagelstein and Sorley work at not making their jobs laborious.

We're going to have fun with it," said Sorley, who has been in ASCS work for 20 years. "Who says you have to be sour to be happy? Dick and I sure have fun.'

Sorley said the response by farmers and ranchers to the new location has been "fantastic.

We're in a location where they can get to us. We're on their turf. We can be gotten to so handily. Sorley's office staff includes

The convenience of the ACSC and SCS offices, which are near the Midland Farmers Cooperative and within a prime agricultural area east of Midland, will encourage farmers and ranchers to use the ASCS-SCS services, Sorley and Hagelstein sug-gested. ORLANDO, Fla. - Florida's citrus industry is proving resilient despite a devastating freeze in the winter of 1983-84 and the ontinuing spread of the virulent disease citrus canker. But growers have expressed renewed concern after the discovery of the first canker in a mature grove.

Fruit from the early harvest, which began in late September and will run through March, is bringing prices above last year's levels, even though the crop is slightly larger.

The Department of Agriculture estimates that the 1984-85 season will produce 119 million boxes of citrus, about 3 million more than last season but 87 million boxes fewer than the record set in the 1979-80 season. About 2 million boxes of oranges and 4.4 million boxes of grapefruit had been picked by Nov. 24.

Penalty erases Lee TD

By BOB BRUNDAGE Sports Writer

LUBBOCK - Mojo, the black magical power that has become a legend in the Permian Basin, again was in force Saturday as Odessa Permian took advantage of a big break early in the fourth quarter and turned it into a 15-14 victory over Midland Lee in the Class 5A quarterfinal playoffs at Texas Tech's Jones Stadium.

Facing third-and-eight on the Lee 23 yard line, Rebel quarterback Dirk Bergoon hit split end Dexter Traylor on a pass route along the left side-Traylor, who was short of the first down marker when he caught the ball, ducked one tackle, spun off another and was suddenly looking at clear sailing into the end zone. He outran the Permian defenders and for a touchdown.

Well, apparent touchdown. A telltale yellow flag was left behind on the artificial surface behind the line of scrimmage. The call: illegal proce-dure against Traylor, five-yard penalty

Though the Rebels still led 14-9. they were unable to recover. Two plays later Rebel James Tom punted 32 yards to the Permian 41 and the Panthers began the fateful drive.

Of the crucial turn-around play, Permian coach John Wilkins said "I didn't see the flag. I thought it was a touchdown." It was the kind of break the Panthers needed, the kind they've turned into touchdowns countless times in the past. This was to be no different.

In six plays Permian had the score, fullback Dal Watson carried, first for eight yards, then 13, four, 10 (to break 100 yards for the game), two and finally four into the end zone for the 15-14 lead.

HAVING ALREADY missed one two-point attempt, the Panthers opted for two again. Quarterback Alton Holloway's pass fell incom-plete. With 9:05 left, there was still time. Even a field goal would do it. Lee kicker Craig Kamradt, however, never got the chance. The Rebels never got beyond their own 39.

"That penalty hurt but I'm sure it was there or the ref wouldn't have called it," said Lee head coach Jack Tayrien. "That wasn't the difference of the game. Those guys in the black jerseys were the difference. Permian is an excellent football team. We challenged them with everything we knew how and came up short. They deserve the victory and I wish them all the luck in the playoffs. We're behind them 100 percent.

CHALLENGE PERMIAN and its mystical ways Lee did, coming back from a 3-0 deficit in the first quarter to take a 14-9 lead at halftime.

The Panthers' field goal came on their second possession of the game when a 26-yard drive stalled on the Lee 12. Woody Bryant booted the 29-yarder with 4:17 left to play.

The Rebels, after an offensively troubled first period, started from a deep hole in the second when Watson's 30-yard punt rolled out of bounds at the Lee one yard line. From there, Lee mounted its longest drive of the year, moving 99 yards on 17 plays (including a 15-yard penalty against Permian) for the goahead touchdown.

Halfback Walter Jones carried six times on the drive for 32 yards, including the final four plays and 18 yards, getting the touchdown going over the top of the Permian defense. Kamradt's PAT kick made it 7-3.

PERMIAN LOCKER

ing 1984 football season came to an abrupt halt here Saturday afternoon with a lonely walk up a carpeted Jones Stadium ramp that led to the visitor's lockerroom

Exodus II ended in a "Trail of Tears" for the Rebels, who left the state playoffs with a 15-14 quarterfinal loss to District 4-5A rival Odessa Permian. Tears came easily, one point away from glory in what turned out to be the "Pay Back Bowl.

It was at this same site a year ago when Lee mashed the Permian dynasty, 20-0, but this year the table turned as did Mojo's return to dominance.

One play will live on forever in Rebel infamy. The first play of the fourth quarter that appeared to be six points for Lee and what ulti-mately turned into six for Permian. It was a play that will be replayed in the minds of Rebel fans for a long time to come

Leading 149 at the time, Lee quarterback Dirk Bergoon hit split receiver Dexter Traylor on a short pass that busted open for a 77-yard Rebel touchdown. It was called back as Traylor was called for motion on the play. Lee was later forced to punt and Permian marched 41 yards on six carries by fullback Dal Watson to take the victory out of the hands of the stunned Rebels.

Then came that long march up that unforgiving ramp. You could see the faces of self-torture as they walked. Guard Jake Young. Linebackers Donnie Rivas and Pool Webb. Tackle Mike Little. Tears and open weeping for all. It was a tough way to exit because time - the great healer - had not had its time to do its work.

In time, these same Rebels will feel the accomplishment of another playoff foray and a 12-2 season that was only marred by two losses to the No. 1 team in the state.

EVEN THE safety of the lockerroom held little comfort. Traylor couldn't speak following the game. He was devastated. When asked if he was moving prior to the snap, he could only nod his head up and down as if to say ye Others fought back tears to explain the loss. It was a tougher assignment than blocking a bigger foe, which these Rebels did for 14 straight weeks.

"This one hurts," said halfback Tyrone Thurman. "Permian just outplayed us and you can't blame the loss on the Rebels."

Young added, "It hurts a lot. Permian captilized on our mistakes and that's why they won. They were the better team today.

Lee's defensive tackle Wayland Jenkins said, "One pointers are the toughest to lose. Overall we did a good job defensively, but they were a little bit better."

Quarterback Bergoon said through tears, "We could have beaten them, but they are good - really good." Halfback Walter Jones put the blame on the offense for the Lee loss, saying, "We just didn't execute LINEBACKER Webb was disappointed that Lee couldn't stop Permian from 41 yards out, saying, "We weren't down when the touchdown was called back because we still had the lead, but Permian used that trap play and used ball control on us to get it in. We (the defense) needed to come up with the big play and didn't get it. When Permian started ball controlling it on us, I think everyone's head dropped a little.

Lee coach Jack Tayrien, finishing his first campaign as the Rebel mentor, looked as if he had been kicked in the stomach after the game. It was tough for even him to talk.

Tayrien turned to one of the Lee boosters and said, "We just didn't get the job done. We just didn't do

He added later, "Permian got it done and we didn't. I feel bad for these kids. They've been great this year. I hate it that the season has to end on a sour note like this, but only one team can win the state championship. I guess there will always be that unsatisfied feeling after losing one like this Tayrien agreed that the phantom TD Lee lost was a crucial play in the game, but said, "They called our split receiver moving before the ball, and I'm sure he was or they wouldn't have called it. But that wasn't the only thing that decided the game. We had bad field position all day and we could only overcome that once with the 99-yard drive.

"YOU HAVE to give Permian a lot of credit. They are a solid football team. You just can't take anything away from them. We knew before the game that we couldn't make a lot of mistakes and win and we made our share.'

Lee had only 12 yards rushing on 16 carries in the second half as the Permian defense halted what was a first half Rebel machine.

Exodus II is now over. It was everything that Permian Basin fans could expect. It was worth the experience. There had to be a loser and this year it was Midland Lee. That's the nature of playoff football - but the glowing promise that this might all happen again at some future date will keep the camp fires burning until then

Saturday afternoon in Jones Stadium, the Lee-Permian rematch was the No. 1 show in Texas. That in itself will build the legend as only legends can be built in Texas.

ENMU beats LCC

In the first game Saturday night, Central State of Oklahoma led from start to finish to beat Colorado Mines 71-55 in the round-robin tourney

Lee coach Van Tom Whatley applauds a big play by his Rebel offensive team and Bryan Wurster (11) leaps for joy during quarterfinal match with Odessa Permian Saturday.

LUBBOCK- The Jones Stadium scoreboard clock was still warm as Odessa Permian's top-ranked football team clustered at midfield in the aftermath of the Panther's 15-14 Class 5A quarterfinal victory over Midland Lee.

Head coach John Wilkins accepted the quarterfinal trohpy, a shiny gold football on a pedestal that could in no way adequately represent the magnitude of what his team had done on the plastic turf.

He blankly took the trophy, but he looked lost for a moment amid the euphoria. No smile or outside show of emotion registered as he pushed the trophy on senior guard John Fuller. Fuller was more into the occasion and went slightly bats at having the coveted idol in his hands.

YET WILKINS can be forgiven his temporary state of shock. It was a common affliction among the crowd of more than 30,000. No one left the arena without understanding how well-played a football game Permian and Lee staged under the gun

"We played hard," Wilkins said in the comfort of Texas Tech's maze of athletic facilities. "I don't know how well. But it seemed like a team effort, which is what we like to have.

Team effort indeed. The Panthers were capable of making the plays theyhad to make both ways, and when offense or defense needed a lift it usually came through

While Permian's offense this year had been a double-edged sword of pass and run, tailback Dal Watson's rushing had a bludgeon-like effect on Lee. Trap plays that buried Lee defensive tackles Wayland Jenkins and Tony Brown opened gaping holes for Watson, who finished the day with a game-high 113 yards rushing on 26 carries.

The trap was effective. On Permian's winning drive, Watson ran the ball six straight times until the result was paydirt. The first two plays were straight ahead traps that netted 21 yards to the Rebel 20. "It seemed like the best play with Dal carrying," Wilkins said. Permian's offensive guard Patrick Young was a key man for Watson and Wilkins.

Pat Young, who was doing a lot of the trapping, was extremely sick. This morning he looked like death warmed over. He got only two hours of sleep last night.

Young didn't even participate in the pre-game stretching. But he did play a vital role in a big football game. And in a one-point football game, an offensive guard can be a factor.

Cooney punches out Chaplin

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Gerry Cooney stung George Chaplin with a left to the midsection and then stopped the journeyman from Baltimore with a flurry of punches in the second round Saturday night to win impressively in his second fight on the heavyweight comeback trail.

Referee Bobby Ferrara stopped the bout at 2:50 of the second round after Cooney had pummeled him with at least three dozen unanswered punches, jolting him around the ring.

Chaplin, noted as a counter-puncher, came out fast and caught Cooney with a right cross in the first round that seemed to unsettle the 6-foot-7 contender from Huntington, N.Y.

Cooney fought back and traded left jabs throughout the round, but it seemed that this would be no pushover fight. In the second round, however, Cooney scored early with a series of combinations and then smashed Chaplin with a left to the midsection that straightened him up. Cooney then pursued Chaplin with lefts and rights, mostly to the midsection, occasionally throwing uppercuts as well. Chaplin, 216, could not respond as Cooney cornered him and kept stalking his man. Finally, Ferrara jumped in, ending the fight with 10 seconds to go in the round.

For Cooney, who weighed 229½, it pushed his record to 27-1 and was his 24th knockout. Chaplin, a hospital technician who is eight days short of his 32nd birthday, is now 22-7-2.

The fight followed Cooney's four-round knockout of Phillip Brown Sept. 29 in Anchorage, Alaska. That fight was Cooney's first in 27 months after losing in 13 rounds to heavyweight champion Larry Holmes on June 11, 1982

Chaplin, a veteran who has previously lost to a number of top names including David Bey, Michael Dokes, Gerrie Coetzee and twice to Greg Page, had won his last four fights - two this year, the most recent a seven-round knockout of Tom Fisher on Sept. 6.

Chaplin was guaranteed $75,000 for Saturday's fight, while Cooney made between $400,000 and $500,000.

Chaplin has a reputation of making oppo-nents look bad because of his style, and it was thought that he might go the 10-round distance with Cooney, who had fought only 23 rounds in the past five years.

But Cooney made fast work of his man and had another early night - the trademark of his

Lee's defense came up with its biggest play of the game on Permian's next possesion when defensive back Terry Young stepped in front of Holloway's pass and was immediately hauled down at the Permian 38.

"I saw it real good and just stepped in and got it," said Young. "For a long time I thought it was going to be the big play of the game

It was big and it was worth another seven points when halfback Tyrone Thurman broke around left end five plays later on his way to a 22-yard scoring run. Kamradt again kicked the PAT with 2:08 left in the half. Kamradt's ensuing kickoff sailed through the end zone, bringing the ball back out to the 30 as stipulated by the new kickoff rule. There was enough time left for Holloway to do some damage.

Holloway, the most prolific passer in Permian history, completed a third down pass to split end Greg Anderson and followed with a 20ard run that moved the ball to Lee's 35-yard line. Watson picked up another 17 yards to the 18 and Holloway put Permian's first touchdown on the board with an 18-yard pass to Anderson. Looking to cut that extra point off Lee's lead, Permian went for two points on the conversion, missing when Holloway's pass fell incomplete.

It was score until Permian went

EXCEPT FOR Thurman's 22-yard TD run, the Panthers were able to contain Lee's deadliest weapon, the option sweep. "That was one of the big keys," said Wilkins. "We knew we couldn't stop them for no gain but we didn't want to give up the long play. We did once on third-and-10. We were thinking pass and Lee popped it outside on us.

Defensively, both teams gave up Harris, 34, has 12,120 yards rush- yardage, but neither was dominated. "I don't think either defense can Walter Payton of the Chicago Bears be called great, but each did an offensive tackle Eric Echols. "They did what they needed to in the second half. Our offense never really got untracked. Fifteen points is 15 points but we still didn't execute like we could have.

To back up Echols claim about the second half defensive effort, you have to look no farther than the statistics. Permian held Lee's rushing attack to 169 total yards, 12 coming in the final two quarters. Passing, Lee came up with only 32 yards, 11 in the second half.

To Tayrien, who ended his debut season at Lee with a 12-2 record, there was "certainly nothing to be ashamed of with the way we played. Our kids went out to try and win the ball game but didn't have enough ammo to get it done. That's how we got where we are now. These kids have big ole hearts. They're not very big but they're scrappy. "There will always be a place in my heart for them. The situation I came into, they pulled in behind me and worked hard. We were happy 12 times and sad only twice. It was a tribute to the coaching staff. We worked a lot of long hard hours for which our families had to suffer. I wouldn't trade these kids and these coaches for anything in the world."

So the Panthers huddled at the half, then came out and did what they've done all year and seemingly every year. They played their game, and they shut down Lee. Permian's black-clad wrecking crew limited Lee to a mere 14 yards rushing and a single first down in the second half.

According to Watson, Wilkins and his staff didn't get riled at halftime. 'He told the seniors that it could be our last 24 minutes of football. We're traditionally a senior-oriented ball club. It struck something deep in our hearts. We weren't going to go the field without maximum said fullback Rich Fletcher, who gained 20 yards in five totes as the only other ball-carrier besides Holloway and Watson. "I'm sore but I'm happy." Holloway didn't compare the victory with any others, saying 'They're all special. But this one adds a little bit because of last year."

Unless a person is new to the area or has spent the past 14 months hiding from the government, Lee was able to take two wins from Permian in a similar situation a year ago. Like Lee's 1984 squad, the only two losses on the year came against the effort.'

"WE CAME in wanting to run. We threw it more than I thought we would," said Alton Holloway, the quarterback. Holloway's arm is a major reason the 140 Panthers have been unbeatable. Through the course of the year he has already thrown for 30 touchdowns and well over 1,000 yards. Only Miami Dol-phin whiz Dan Marino has more TD throws this year, and Holloway's 67 percent completion average is much better than Marino's - or even Doug Flutie's

But Mojo didn't really need Holloway's passing as much as it have relied on it in the past. Holloway aired it out only 13 times, and only four of those tosses came in the second half.

"Coach Tayrien did a great job of getting their secondary ready. They just keep plugging away.

In fact, a second-period interception Holloway threw loomed large through three quarters. After Terry Young picked off the ball at the OP 38, Lee drove to it's second TD, and late in the game that was the difference.

"Our offense was shaky at times," said Watson, "But our defense played the best half of football in our school's history.

"We knew they were quick," line-backer Mike Heathington related. "They stunned us at first because of how fast they were hitting outside and how they were blocking it. Our linebacker: in general were playing too close and getting cut off. but we settled down and got everybody run-ning to the ball."

But Heathington wouldn't shoul-der responsibility for the secondhalf shutout. "Everybody did a good job. It takes everybody. Midland Lee was getting after us."

EVEN THOUGH the Lee-Permian rivalry has caused occasional bitter feelings between the neighboring schools, Permian in victory was a model of class virtually without exception. Excluding the usual onfield disputes, after the game Mojo exhibited graciousness.

"Lee, they are so awesome," Wat-son said. "They never give up. They never say die. They got after us. It's a shame we couldn't have met in the state finals, because these are the two best football teams in the state."

"It was the hardest football game I've ever played in my whole life,"

For Holloway, the win laid to rest any superstitions about Lee. "I hold nothing against Lee. If they have a heart left after this it's out on the field. They'll have a great team next year, too. Ever since I began playing Pop Warner football in the fourth grade. I've only lost two football games, and that was to Lee last year. "I knew these were the best two teams in the state."

WHAT'S NEXT? For Permian, many players and more fans viewed this game as a state championship clash. But the Panthers still have at least one game left to play, and they must win to get a chance at the state crown.

"There's always that chance," Wilkins said when asked if his team would overplay the victory. "A game like this takes a lot out of a team. We'll have to regroup mentally as much as anything. To win a game like that or to win a championship it takes some luck along the way."

Holloway opined that instead of OP losing intensity, this win pushed them past the point of no return.

"I feel like we won the state championship," he said. "I think we're going off Mt. Everest like a train. feams in our way had better look out.

'We're a damn good team."

That much is true. And the Panthers proved Saturday that they are also a great team with possibly the best still to come.

Football fans join sportswriters and coaches in ranking Brigham Young University as the nation's best college football teams, but by such a narrow margin over Boston College that the lead is statistically insignificant, a New York Times-CBS Sports Poll shows.

Twelve percent of the 774 fans interviewed considered Brigham Young best, while 11 percent chose Boston College. The interviewing was conducted Dec. 24, when publicity over Boston College's last-second, 47-45 victory over Miami Nov. 23 was at its height.

The only other football ranking in which Bos ton College places that high is The Times's computer ranking, which has Brigham Young 20th and Boston College second. Florida is first in the computer ranking and fifth in the fans' poll. behind Oklahoma and Nebraska at three and four

New England Pats adopt 'Educated Game Plan'

The Educated Game Plan By GEORGE VECSEY

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK - Wednesday is the heaviest day in pro football, the day coaches reveal the next game plan and players practice it, violently, on the scrimmage field. At the end of that day, the temptation is to collapse in the nearest corner, but for 14 New England Patriots Wednesday has been extended by two hours this season, for a college course, with an exam facing them at the end.

'You feel yourself dropping off, so you stand up and you walk around the room," says Steve Moore, a young lineman. "You know this is important, too.'

Moore is one of the Patriots enrolled in the special two-credit class at the team's base in Foxboro, Mass. The course is the first public venture of Northeastern University's Center for the Study of Sport in Society, which hopes to build a network of professional athletes gaining their elusive degrees, and at the same time counseling younger athletes to focus more on education.

THE PROGRAM at Northeastern. one of the largest private universi-ties in the country, has attracted the diverse talents of: Richard Lapchick, the activist and writer; Tom (Satch) Sanders, the former Celtic player and coach, and Brian Holloway, the Patriots' Pro Bowl offensive tackle who earned his degree from Stanford University and, as player representative, wanted to help his teammates.

Moore attended college for eight semesters but left with only five semesters' worth of credits to show for it. He says now, "It's terrible, when you think about it."

Perhaps two-thirds of the players in the National Football League do not have their degrees from college, according to Lapchick. When the average four-year career ends, the players realize that football has left them with lifelong injuries, perhaps, but not necessarily a degree or a skill for earning a living.

"I don't mean to dump dirt on my school," Moore says, "but they got what they wanted from us. We practiced from 3 to 10 p.m. every day and you couldn't exactly study when you were done. We lost only four or five games the years I was there, but The program beg I don't think more than a few of us graduated

"I'm not saying I couldn't have done it. Anything's possible. But I wouldn't get up for my 8 o'clock class. I'm not stupid. I didn't fail classes, but it was all those incompletes.

His school was Tennessee State, but it could have been most of the major football schools, too, according to Richard Lapchick, the son of the late Joe Lapchick, one of the pioneer basketball coaches.

Long active in issues such as the black athlete and the apartheid system of South Africa, Lapchick had been involved in a journal that was taken over by Northeastern. He outlined a model program for teaching athletes and was thrilled when Richard Astro, the dean of arts and sciences, volunteered to fund a sixmonth trial program.

"I see an epidemic out there among athletes," says Astro. "As an English teacher, you can't do much about it, but the nice thing about being a dean is that you can do careers.)

The program began with the fall course in the privacy of the Patriots' center, which, Lapchick says, "was very important because they didn't have to make the trip into Boston. That might have been viewed as a disruption by the staff. As it was, things have been very positive."

THE PATRIOTS have won 8 of 14 games and their coach, Ron Meyer, was dismissed recently, but despite the traumas, the organization has supported the course. Patrick Sullivan, the 32-year-old general manager and youngest son of the owner, offered to refund the tuition for all players completing this course just the way many corporations

Sullivan seems hopeful of remaining involved when some of the players enroll for full-time courses in the spring. But as Astro, the dean, points out, the players can earn most of the tuition by tutoring Boston-area athletes. (Tuition costs are a reasonable concern for most players who earn far less than the publicized six-figure salaries and who face short

"It's just as important to our program that these players go to the high schools and middle schools occasionally and remind the young men and women that only one in 12,000 can be a Brian Holloway, but that they all need to support their families," Lapchick says. Holloway, whose family has a tradition of college education going back several generations, recalls the staff at Stanford telling players: "We don't care if you go to the Rose Bowl four straight years. If you don't study, you're out.'

By taking extra courses in summer school, he was ahead of schedule by his senior year, when he was busy with football and traveling to pro camps. He understands how the system didn't work for his pro teammates

"To me, there is a grind during the season. It's a 40-hour job to com-pete at the highest level. All these players had the innate ability to focus for long periods of time, through pain and exhaustion. But after workouts and weight lifting, there is a poor quality of time for studying. The odds were stacked against them.

"I'd never tell a college player not to go for it. I'd be a fool to tell them, There's no pot of gold at the end of the rainbow.' That would be the dumbest thing I could say because there is a pot of gold. But I would say the colleges should provide an education beyond the eligibility of the player.

MOORE ADMITS he never worried about his credits slipping away while he was in college. But now he watches his older brother, Jeff, a former player with the Rams, "setting himself up for life because he invested his money wisely while he was playing." And he advises his younger brother, Vincent, a promis-ing high-school player in Memphis, to attend a college that will help him toward a degree.

Somewhere in the segments of English, finance, computer and speech classes this fall, Steve Moore decided to enroll at Northeastern next semester. He says: "I'm switching my major from physical education to sociology. I'm going to try something else this time.

'Bama ticket scalpers fined and sentenced

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) -Three Alabama men were fined $250 and given 30-day suspended sentences after pleading guilty Friday to "scalping" tickets to the Sugar Bowl, the Orange Bowl and the Sugar Bowl Basketball Tournament.

After their court appearance, District Judge Joe Keogh ordered the tickets returned to the men.

The three were arrested Thursday on charges of trying to sell undercover agents $37,-000 worth of tickets for $65,000.

The agents confiscated 648 Orange Bowl tickets, 548 Sugar Bowl tickets and 1,447 Sugar Bowl Basketball Tournament tickets. They also seized 268 tickets to the Orange Bowl Jamboree Parade, police said.

Washington and Oklahoma play in the Orange Bowl on Jan. 1. Nebraska and Louisiana State play in the Sugar Bowl on Jan. 1. Penn State, Virginia, Alabama and the University of New Orleans will play in the basketball tournament Dec. 27-28.

Samuel T. Thompson, 61, and Bill R. Nation, 53, both of Gardendale, Ala., and John S. Shugrue, 52, of Pleasant Grove, Ala., were booked into Downtown Jail on Thursday on charges of unlawful sale of tickets.

Thompson was also charged with carrying a concealed. weapon.

Keogh also ordered the men to pay $39.50 in court costs and placed them on six months unsupervised probation.

Keogh said he took into consideration that each man did not have a previous criminal record and that ticket scalping is not illegal in Alabama.

Thompson was fined $100 on the concealed weapon charge and given another suspended 30day sentence.

The men first contacted a Baton Rouge travel agency seeking to sell the tickets as a travel and game package. The agency declined the offer and notified police, reports show.

Defense attorney Nathan Fisher asked that the tickets be returned to the men, and Keogh ordered the return of all items except Thompson's gun.

Eagles' Flutie looks forward to Cotton Bowl

DALLAS (AP) - Heisman Trophywinning quarterback Doug Flutie said on Saturday he is looking forward to the Cotton Bowl New Year's Day so his Boston College Eagles can showcase Eastern foot-

"It's important that we win the Cotton Bowl for that reason," said Flutie. "That, and the fact that Boston College has lost two straight bowl games and I want to go out a winner

No. 8-ranked Boston College is the guest team in Cotton Bowl and ranks a six-point favorite over Southwest Conference co-champion Houston.

The Cougars are unranked but Flutie said he knows they can be dangerous.

"I was a little disappointed at first that we didn't get to play Texas because Texas is held in such high esteem," Flutie said. "Then I got to thinking, well, Houston is better than Texas and maybe I'd rather play Texas because it wouldn't be as tough as Houston."

He said the Cougars "can make the big play and really get rolling to the point they are unstoppable.'

Flutie added,"I understand they play a lot of zone on pass defense but they'll probably put in a lot of changeups for us. Houston has a lot of good athletes."

Since winning the Heisman Trophy. Flutie has been on a whirlwind tour that included a meeting with President Reagan.

offensive rebound and score again. The Running Rebels, meanwhile, were unable to get their patented fast-break offense in gear against the nation's top defensive team. Nevada-Las Vegas committed 21 first-half turnovers and shot 33 percent (10 of 30) in falling behind 35-24 at the intermission.

The Running Rebels' frontcourt of Ed Gatchings, Frank James and Richie Adams, proved ineffective against the 7-foot Ewing as they shot a collective 0-for-6 in the opening stanza.

Midland Lee's Denise Hatch chases loose ball in Midland Invitational Girls Basketball tournament final against Midland High Saturday night at the Chap Center.

Midland defeats Lee in finals

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY Sports Writer

Midland High had the hot shooting, the foul throw touch and all of the breaks Saturday as coach Jane Young's girls whipped Midland Lee 51-40 in the final of the Tall City Invitational basketball tournament. But even though MHS led from wire to wire, Lee's young and improving squad made a run in the fourth quarter that made things briefly interesting.

"Their press is very good," said Young of sister Shirley Stephenson's Rebels. "We didn't make too many turnovers and played a pretty controlled ball game.

Lee had pressed opponents crazy, a move to instill more aggressiveness in the rebs that paid off sometimes and got burned sometimes. But generally, MHS' superior experience and familiarity with one another took its' toll on Lee's defense

As a result, the press that has worked sporadically for the 45 Rebs didn't have much affect on MHS. The Lady Bulldogs repeatedly found open players off the press offense and canned layup after layup.

Leading the way was senior Deidra Knapp and junior Laura Martin, who both saw extensive playing time, especially after MHS leader Denise Lanz had an uncustomary off night.

Lanz' problem wasn't nearly so much the opposition as it was the zebras, who whistled her for two quick fouls in the fourth quarter's first 43 seconds. Lanz was gone on fouls before Young could substitute for her, and the Rebs sensed an opening and began to claw back into the game.

But Knapp, Martin and Tina Knight came through under pressure. Knapp wound up with a game-high 15 points, and seven of those came at the foul line.

Lee, meanwhile, continually made mistakes that young teams often correct with time · missed free throws, rushed shots, etc. Lee missed six free throw chances in the final quarter, including two bonus shots. The closest Lee could get was eight points at 39-31, but then Knapp shut the door.

Knight got the 'Dogs back under control with a baseline shot that pushed the margin back to 10. Lee's Candace Morney answered with a 16-footer with 4:08 remaining, but Knapp proceeded to go wild.

First she drilled both ends of a one-and-one after Morney fouled her. Then she did the same thing after Tina Swinney fouled her. Then she swished a pull-up jumper from the foul line for six straight points and the Rebs had their second disappointment of the day.

MHS helped its cause by shooting 18 of 34 from the floor. Lee suffered from 18 of 60 shooting, and missed 75 percent of their 16 free throw tries. The Rebs also managed only four offensive rebounds out of their total of 26.

New Mexico, Colorado...Get ready for ski rush

Texans wax up for holidays

By TED BATTLES Sports Editor

While Coloradoans ski resorts glanced anxiously at the skies as the mad holiday rush to the slopes approached, Sierra Blanca in "near by Ruidoso, N.M." appeared to be about as good a spot as any for skiers

The summer mecca for horse-racing fans boasts 49 inches of snow and is 100 per cent open, and, according to the last report, chains were needed on the road up the mountain.

Elsewhere, prospects in the Land of Enchantment were looking equally good with Santa Fe, 42 inches at midway, 90 per cent open and roads clear. Even Sandia Peak reported good conditions, 37 inches and roads clear. Angel Fire has 24 inches midway while Red River, with 18 inches, has one beginner and one intermediate slope open.

Taos Ski Valley, which requires more snow than other NM sites, was scheduled to open last Friday and had 41 inches, enough for skiing on 70 per cent of one of my favorite mountains

In Southwestern Colorado, easily accessible for Texans, Purgatory, 26 miles north of Durango, has 34 inches midway and is aided and abetted by snow-making capabilities. The big mountain is 75 per cent open, but holiday skiers still have another couple of weeks for things to get better.

Telluride has 35 inches and is 50 per cent open while Wolf Creek Pass, which annually gets more snow than any place out in the state, is 90 per cent open with 49 inches.

SINCE LAST year changes have been made, one of them is the raising of lift prices, almost universally. Beaver Creek has the highest in Colorado with $25 a day, but that's not as bad as the $28 fee at Utah's Deer Valley. One notable exception is Eldora' in Colorado, which dropped its weekend tariff $3 to $12 and went down to $8 for weekday skiing and $6 for the night owls.

New Mexico's Angel Fire was purchased last summer by a Little Rock firm for $19.5 million and further expansion can be expected. The area has grown from 24 to 47 trails in seven years and accessibility will be improved with the completion of an 8,900 foot airport runway. Next to Taos, Angel Fire offers the best powder in northern NM.

Taos has installed a new triplechair lift in the Kachina Basin. catering to advance skiers and providing access to the Long Horn and Valkyries trails. The new lift runs

Santa Fe boasts the seventh highest elevation in the nation and finally finished its winding access road. The final 3½ miles of mud was paved last summer, making the 16mile trip from Santa Fe more of a treat than a treatment.

Linfield, Augustana capture NAIA, NCCA titles

From Wire Reports

Linfield 33, NW Iowa 22 McMINNVILLE, Ore. — Sophomore David Lindley threw two TD passes as Linfield rallied from a 22-0 third-quarter deficit in the NAIA Division II championship.

Linfield, 12-0, scored all of its points in the final 18:02 of the game, played in a soft, cold rain. Lindley had a string of 12 straight completions during the comeback.

Northwestern, 11-2, the defending national champions, built a 16-0 halftime lead behind the passing of junior Jay McKinstrey. who had 170 yards through the air in the first half.

Linfield scored when John Gray kicked a 27-yard field goal with 3:02 left in the quarter. Then the fireworks began. A Linfield interception set up Lindley's oneyard scoring pass to Keith Machida. A two-point conversion made it 22-11 after three quarters.

Lindley's 37-yard scoring bomb to Randy Reason sliced the lead to 22-19 with 9:01 to play. Moments later, Scott Sattler intercepted a pass by McKinstrey at the Northwestern 23-yard line. Tim Nacrelli's eight-yard scoring run with 7:08 to play gave Lin-field its first lead at 26-23.

Yankees complete block-buster trade with for Ricky Henderson

From Wire Reports

HOUSTON - The New York Yankees Saturday completed a trade for outfielder Rickey Henderson of the Oakland A's, making the Yankees one of the big winners in baseball's 1984 winter meetings.

Terms were not announced, but it was believed to be a no-trade, fiveyear deal worth more than $8.75 million with major portions deferred over a 20- to 30-year period.

In exchange for Henderson, minor league pitcher Bert Bradley and cash, the Yankees will send to Oakland pitchers Jay Howell, Jose Rijo, Eric Plunk and Tim Birtsas and outfielder Stan Javier, son of Julian

Montana regains touch

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Joe Montana and the San Francisco 49ers' offense returned to top form - or higher - in rolling up 521 yards against the outmanned Minnesota Vikings.

"When Joe gets things into place, everything falls into place for us." Coach Bill Walsh said after his playoff-bound 49ers destroyed the Vikings 51-7 Saturday

Montana's 44-yard scoring bomb to Dwight Clark got the 49ers rolling toward their 14th victory, which ties a NFL regular-season record, and he threw for two more touchdowns before calling it a day.

The 49ers, now 14-1, raced to a 31-7 lead by halftime and let Montana and several other starters watch the rest of the mismatch in which the team registered its highest point total since 1965. The Vikings, 3-12, went down to a fifth consecutive defeat.

Montana and his offensive unit were coming off two so-so performances, however. Montana was under 200 yards passing in each of those games

What this game did for us was to get our momentum going again," said Montana, who completed 15 of 21 passes for 246 yards.

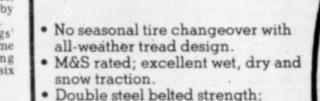

The 49ers, with an eight-game winning streak, will go after a record-breaking 15th regular season triumph when they face the Los shaken up on a sack, the first of six Angeles Rams next Friday night. registered by the 49ers' defense.

After a two-week break, San Francisco will open the playoffs as a heavy favorite to reach the Super Bowl as NFC champion.

Montana hit Clark, who broke free down the middle of the field, at the goal line eight minutes into the game to open the scoring. Later in the first period, Montana flipped a 3-yard TD pass to Solomon. In the second quarter, Renaldo Nehemiah scored on a 59-yard pass play, and Wendell Tyler ran five yards for a touchdown.

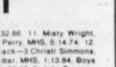

Tyler's 36 yards rushing on 13 carries gave him a club-record 1,230, breaking the mark of 1,203 set by Delvin Williams in the 1976 season. Archie Manning, the Vikings'

It may have been surprising for some that Hance quickly entrenched himself in the power structure in the Congress and mastered the give and take necessary to survive on The Hill. It didn't surprise us because we were familiar with Hance's outstanding reputation earned while a member of the Legislature in Austin. business reporter came rushing into my office. "Did you hear the news? President Reagan is leaning towards a flat tax.

"That's good." I said. What's a flat tax?" "A fair tax, balanced tax, a simple tax, and a tax that you would be proud to bring home to your mother." What's the catch?" "You may pay less of a percentage of your income to the government, but you won't be allowed to deduct anything except mortgage interest on your primary residence." "That's bad. Without second home interest deductions we can all say goodbye to Florida. Will the new tax reform plan cut down on the budget deficit?

"No, it has nothing to do with deficits. They call it 'revenue neutral.' It won't bring in any more money to the Treasury, but they claim it will be much fairer for the poor people." "That's good," I said.

"Not necessarily. The poor people depend on private charity to keep heir heads above water. Under the flat tax the first 2 percent of every one's gross income is not deductible if you make a charitable donation. Very few people give more than 2 percent of their gross to charity. So with all the cutbacks in government services that Reagan has proposed, the private sector won't be able to take up the slack to provide a safety net for the poor. Hospitals, universi ties, foundations and all cultural institutions are in the same boat."

"So much for trickle-down economics. Tell me something good about this new idea."

"Corporation loopholes will be osed. You won't be able to depreciate any of your investments and there will be no more capital gains. Everything will be considered ordinary income. "That sounds good." "Don't be too sure. If companies can't get tax benefits for investing by leading wholesale exoduses of in the economy, they might put their money in Treasury notes which the government has to issue to pay off the $210 billion deficit." "Why is that bad?" "If the companies don't build new plants or upgrade their equipment they won't be able to provide jobs for the people. Besides, without loopholes there is no incentive for venture capital, which is supposed to create the industries of tomorrow. Therefore although the flat tax is fairer, many people won't have salaries to pay it?' "There's also a provision in the reform bill that the cities and states can no longer sell certain tax-free bonds to keep public services from falling apart. If they can't raise bond money for local projects, the cities and states will have to raise taxes which are also no longer deductible from your federal form. the doings in the biennial larly about reapportionment December sessions of the before 1990.

Legislature are generally more like previews than real performances, and this year even the preview is familiar. With the exception of the question about who would become the next Democratic floor leader in the Senate, hardly one likely to shake the republic, the major leadership issues were resolved before the members returned for the session.

More important, the political uncertainties and the fund-raistions about nursing-home ing frenzy that would have accompanied reapportionment have been averted by the voters' rejection of the governor's reapportionment initiative last month; the power shifts within the nursing-home bills themthe Legislature that would have selves. followed a court order upholding the constitutionality of Proposition 24, in the unlikely event that one had been issued, will not take place, and the tremors that might have accompanied uncertainties in the leadership structure have been mooted.

And so there will be a few formalities this week, a lot of swearings-in, and at least as many parties, and then adjournment until January. By the time all the greetings are over, the members will be on their way home. What we have is pretty much the same Legislature we had before the election, minus many of its anxieties, particuregime sought to exert authority over the tribes. This stirred resentment, opposition and armed defiance by at least some elements. Then followed military suppression, forced removal of Indian villagers and the flight of thousands of refugees into neighboring Honduras and Costa Rica.

Rivera made his headquarters in Costa Rica where he allied his guerrillas with Eden Pastora, the renegade Sandinista hero. Both Rivera and Pastora have shown a certain willingness to end the bloodshed by honorable compromise; they are willing to negotiate a peaceful settlement with the Managua regime.

But Fagoth's guerrillas are based in Honduras and are allied with the CIA-backed contras. Among the contras are many former members of Somoza's National Guard. For this and other reasons, the contras will accept nothing less than the overthrow of the Sandinista regime. Fagoth takes the same hard line.

There are many now who will say character is of no consequence, that our liberated society has removed the need for displays of character. They're all wrong. Society needs dis-plays of character now more than ever. This generation is the teacher of the next generation and if character is removed from society, those values cannot be passed along.

Now's time to reduce spending, not hike taxes

If one's personal income is eroded through inflation for a number of years, one has less to spend for personal wants and needs. And he makes his spending plans according to what he has to spend. President Reagan understands this and is making an effort to cut expenditures of the national government.

Bob Bullock and other state officers do not understand this and instead of looking for places to cut spending they are looking for places to add taxes.

Since we the people provide the money through taxes for Bob Bullock and other state officers to spend, shouldn't we expect them to understand that if we have less to spend then they in turn should spend less - not more

Midland mutts ready to go to BBC's aid

A recent story in the news media tells us that the British Broadcasting Corporation is hard put to find sufficient fleas for a flea circus in a forthcoming television series. In other words, the tight little island is suffering a shortage of fleas. Devastating news indeed!

Being of Anglophile convictions the BBC's melancholy dilemma could do naught but cast a gloomy pall over my holiday season. So I resolved to do something about it and I discussed the problem with two neighbors, both mutts. Both expressed a desire to help, adding that they were on close terms with significant numbers of fleas and that the BBC could have everyone of them grates. Jolly decent of them, 1

The mutts did state, however, that none of their fleas are circus-trained but they felt that represented no great problem, there being so many fleas that certainly a few latent firstclass performers are amongst them. The mutts are now anxiously awaiting advice from the BBC's head office in London as to the next step. Rule Brittannia own $200,000 pay Hearst to set a government austerity exam-ple. He would like to eliminate many politically popular proposals that will save $34 billion next year. The president's project included a 5 per-cent pay cut for all civilian employ-ees. His views, based on the firm conviction for a need to trim the budget sharply, is certain to cause a firestorm of criticism from congres-sional adversaries. At a snap press conference Friday 'President Reagan declared that the proposal for cutting programs was "the best ever offered," adding that the process was still being studied in thorough detail.

President Reagan, let's remember, heard all the pros and cons at the beginning of his first administration when he was bequeathed a monstrosity of a fiscal situation and our economic plight was making the oviet Union shake with laughter since it doesn't account to its captive population for a kopeck spent.

OUR PRESIDENT, cognizant of unaway inflation riddling the land with its fallout of massive unemsyment and economic stagnation heard his advisers and comments from both sides of the aisle in the House and Senate. Quite a few faint-hearted types, including his budget director David Stockman, advocated going slowly and to prime the cash pump judiciously. President Reagan, let's recall, stayed the course. He insisted on bringing down the perni-cious evil of inflation, having busi-ness see that government got off its back, and generally restored confi-dence in America.

The White House has announced a "freeze" amid the welter of suggestion-counter-proposal on bringing down the national deficit. A decision on military spending won't come until late this week after administration budgeteers get through with domestic spending cuts covering $167 billion over three years. Penta gon reductions would come from Defense Secretary Caspar Wein berger, who already has declared that the military trimmed budgets during the last two years. I firmly believe, however, that with a military allocation of more than $220 billion we can make further reductions

WASTE AT the Pentagon hasn't aided the cause of the nation's defense which President Reagan went to such great efforts to rebuild. There has been unfortuna-tely a great deal of sloppiness in pro-curement and 20 percent of the Navy's air combat missiles are regarded as unusable. Then, we ive cost overruns in contracts for anti-aircraft guns and computer chips installed in B-1 bombers and our space shuttles apparently were never adequately tested. These chips may well today be defective.

These are grave problems and while we must provide our military the best and most modern for its arsenal, it must not be permitted to toss around taxpayer dollars like confetti. And how about the coffeemaker on which the military spent $7.800!

Keeping tabs on such easily checked items is an essential part of the job for the military, in this case. With cuts certain to swing on a wide variety of domestic programs, the military budget cannot escape unscathed. President Reagan will make his decisions in this important and highly controversial on his own soon after New Year's Day. He already completed decisions on other spending cuts, all of which are certain to be challenged even by stalwarts of his own party. They are already worried about congressional elections in 1986.

AS WE ALL know, gratitude is for yesterday's politics although it's highly ironic that many Republicans clinging to President Reagan managed to win because, of his historic landslide last election. Right now many of the same spear-carriers worry aloud about deficits and potential disasters at the polls in 1986. As a pragmatist, the president realizes that he must have a new tax package prepared for this congressional session or else find himself elbowed out by incumbents seeking re-election two years hence. With their minds fixed on getting re-elected, our legislators will undoubtedly be inclined to hurry through most phases of proposed domestic spending cuts now. Under a three-year plan, these spending reductions would come to a total of $167 billion with the military cuts to

Aside from the military, projected cuts to be proposed to Congress in January will total $32 billion in 1966, $60 billion in 1987 and $75 billion in 1988. The "freeze" on government spending would include, among other decisions, eliminating for one ear cost of living increases in all benefit and pension programs except for Social Security and freezing pay levels of civilian govern-ment workers. I don't think that a so-called flat tax will go anywhere either this congressional session or the near future. There probably will be more tinkering later with the tax code.

THE TARGET of total reductions is $237 billion over three years, but the strategy in achieving the net figure may well be the key to the entire process. Ours is the biggest, most resourceful economy in the world but it can't work instant miracles. Our friends, allies and enemies will all be watching closely to see if we close ranks and work together.

As the Christmas season crowds in on us, this is scarcely the cheeriest report that I can convey. Touching all bases and talking to wellinformed people I know indicate that consensus seems to be growing - for raising taxes. The questions at hand are when and how since we hand are when and how since we have an assortment of proposals for increases. At this stage, there must be no less than a dozen tax ideas. We've been in the economic dol-drums before and emerged success-fully from them. Remember, we're in far better shape today to handle these problems than the country was four years ago was four years ago.

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Dan Peterson loves to talk about American sports in any language. Fortunately for Peterson, Italians love to listen.

Peterson, one of the winningest basketball coaches in Italy, has combined his heavily accented Italian, rapidfire delivery and sometimes strange translations to become in effect the voice of American sports on Italian television.

He doesn't fit the stereotype of a TV star - pale skin, fair thinning hair and gold-rim glasses. But Peterson, 48, from Evanston, Ill., seems to be everywhere on Italy's two largest private channels, commenting on basketball, baseball, football — even the Kentucky Derby.

Since most of the sports are relatively new to Italians, Peterson not only has to explain the rules and history of the sports but invent instant translations. He records the show for later broadcast while watching a videotape of the game for the first time.

"I just translate off the top of my head," he said. "The closest thing I can come to I just throw it out."

Mistakes do happen. During an NFL football game one team went into a shotgun formation, which Peterson dubbed, "formazione di lupara."

That was technically correct, since lupara is a form of shotgun — and the favored weapon of the Sicilian Mafia. Peterson sticks to the translation.

"I make lots of mistakes," he said. Sometimes he doesn't even bother to translate exactly because the phrase sounds better in English. How else could you say, "Dr. J., house call," to describe when Julius Erving slams one home.

"The fans love it," he said. "There is a tremendous interest in anything American.

That's one reason the former history major from Northwestern sprinkles his commentary with bits of American history and deliberately speaks Italian with a heavy, Midwestern accent despite having lived in Italy for 11 years.

He got started five years ago on a tiny private TV station in Milan with a weekly show on the National Basketball Association because a friend had purchased the rights and needed someone to translate.

Peterson decided right away to just "wing it" and not to translate the American commentators — even. though their voices can be heard in the background.

"If there is a 25-point lead I'll talk about anything rather than basket-ball," he said. "I want it to be like you and I are at the game, having a conversation.

His style was a hit and the show was picked up by Italy's largest private station and now has a regular audience estimated by the station at more than 700,000.

But not all the publicity has been helpful for the man whose one fear is being considered "Mr. Jerk Television.

"I bring an unfair pressure to my team," he said, adding that fans, the press and sometimes referees give closer scrutiny to the team coached by a celebrity.

But in six years as head coach of Milan's major league team, Simac, Peterson has led the team to the national finals three times and the championship in 1982. Ironically the two defeats came at the hands of Bologna, the team Peterson coached for six years before moving to Milan.

He came to Italy via head basket-ball coaching jobs at Delaware from 1966 to 1971 and two years directing the Chilean national team.

At first glance it seem surprising that he has anything to do with basketball. He is only 5-foot-5, with tiny hands that would have trouble palming a volleyball.

"I have the benefit of not having been a great player," he said, adding that as a result he has "great patience for a guy who is slow to learn or doesn't have much talent and great respect for the super champions.

Despite his hectic schedule, Peterson has found time to write four books about basketball - all written in Italian - run basketball clinics. write numerous sports articles for American and Italian magazines and visit his wife and four children living outside Chattanooga, Tenn.

"I just like to have fun and do a good job," he said. "I have no fear of failure. If one thing doesn't work out I'll do something else.'

JIM MURRAY

Will somebody please explain vault scoring?

have to explain to me the scoring system for the Olympic (or any other) pole vault. Someone with a good grasp of the occult. Or a love of eccentricities. Lewis Carroll perhaps.

It says here that Pierre Quinon of France won the gold medal in the pole vault at L.A. Inky dinky parley voo. Allez vous en! Get outta here! It's the only sport I know of outside of rowing you can win sitting down

Consider the '84 Olympics. The qualifying height, the minimum standard for admission to the competition, was set at 17 feet 10 and 1/2 inches.

Quinon made 17-8 1/2 to qualify. Then, in the finals, he passed up, i.e., declined to jump, four successive heights. Then, he jumped. At 17-10 1/2, He missed. He jumped again. He made it.

He didn't jump again till the bar reached 18-6 1/2. He missed that once. Then, he passed up that height, too. You can, unaccountably, do this in vaulting. Miss a height, then skip it altogether. Save two jumps for the higher altitudes.

MEANWHILE, BACK in the pit America's Michael Tully, U.S. record holder and favorite for the event, had qualified at 17-10 1/2, had rejumped that height plus 18-2 1/2.

Then, he missed 18-6 1/2 as had Quinon. Only he kept jumping. He made it on his third attempt.

Got that? Well, never mind. The thrust of it is, having made the height, he was now at a disadvantage to the Frenchman, Quinon, who had tried it once and said the hell with it.

Monsieur Quinon then cleared 18-8 1/4. This forced Tully to pass that height. Even if he cleared it, the Frenchman would have won the event. On the pole vault rationale of "fewer misses at lower heights." Tully had two misses at 18-6 1/2. Quinon only had one. Never mind that Tully finally made the height. And Quinon didn't. Quinon really won the gold medal by skipping that height.

Because, when he made 18-10 1/4, Tully had no option but to pass that height, too, and try for 19-1/4, which was withing 3/4 of an inch of his best ever. "You go for the gold," he was to explain. "You don't play for a winning the heavyweight title on a foul. A case could be made that Monsieur Quinon, after all, did make the two higher heights ultimately. But the Alice In Wonderland rules of the event made it fruitless for Rival Tully to try to match those heights. The important thing to remember is that Tully did not MISS at those heights Quinon won. He ultimately missed at the same height

Quinon also missed. Tully lost

Someday, someone is going to about winning a game sitting on because of a height he MADE. And ner, it has been a foot in-the-stage-ave to explain to me the scoring your backside. Like Max Schmeling Quinon missed. The mouse won the door. cat-and-mouse game. Quinon won the pot on a hand he folded.

The difference between a gold and silver medal in the Olympics well, let's put it this way: in this case it was only 3 and 3/4 inches on the scoreboard but it was, say, the distance between Paris and Tijuana.

Lots of athletes feel they need the gold to pursue a show business career. From the days of Johnny Weissmuller to those of Bruce Jen-

But, Mike Tully's story was a switch. Mike Tully already had a theatrical career. He had already appeared in such screen classics as 'Calendar Girl Murders" and other screams in the night. He played an Army officer in "The Day After" and had appearances in the can in the TV shows "Hardcastle and McCormick" and "Matt Houston." He had to put show biz on hold for the Olympics two World Cups - between the years 1976 and 1980. He was the world indoor record holder and the American record holder in those years until the Carter boycott grounded him.

"I think I could have won the gold at Moscow," he recalls ruefully. Being a silver medalist is hardly likely to bring him parts Spencer Tracy used to play. Hollywood is not a second-place town. But if Mike Tully had had the presence of mind to murmur "Me, too," when the Gallic Quinon decided to pass up his last two jumps at 5.65 meters, well, Ronald Reagan started in sports, too. At the very' least, he'd be getting some roles where he holds the girl instead of the door.

You don't match your best-evers in an Olympics Games, either. Tully wrapped out at 19-1/4. So, as a matter of fact did Quinon. But the gold was already his.

Editor's note: While many believe "there really is no Santa Claus," children and the young-at-heart know he really does exist. We found many Santas in the city to interview for this story. Because they represent Claus, speak for him and work anonymously at Christmas, we have attributed their quotes directly to Santa himself.

his season is the busiest time of year for Santa Claus. He must supervise elves who manufacture toys and games for children throughout the world; he must round-up and groom eight tiny reindeer - and Rudolph - for the big flight on Christmas Eve; he must make sure all the gifts are properly wrapped, tagged and delivered; and hundreds of other chores which always seem to be put off until the last minute. In spite of his full schedule at the North Pole, Claus tries to give every child the opportunity to share their Christmas wishes. In Midland, Claus will visit with children at several pre-Christmas stops at shopping centers, stores and parties.

One such stop will be at K. Mart's "Breakfast with Santa," from 9-10 a.m. Saturday and Dec. 21-22. Before visitng K-Mart, Claus told the Reporter-Telegram he has seen toy fads come and go. "Last year Michael Jackson Tshirts" were popular with older children, he said, while younger children were less specific. "You name it, they ask for it ... Most will take anything, they don't really care. They want it all but will be happy with a $2 item. It's just the fact of getting something." Claus said even though today's Christmas celebrations are described as "too commercial," that aspect of the holidays may not be as negative as many believe. "We need Santa, we need to give gifts. Sure some people take advantage, but we can't let those people take away from Christmas. The majority may be too commercial, but ... if we're overdoing it, at least we're doing something. ... At least we still celebrate (Christmas). Look at Halloween - there is no Halloween anymore. We can't let that happen with Christmas."

Christmas charities in which people donate food and other items to those in need are worthwhile, Claus believes. "If that's commercialism then we need more of it," he said.

'Christmas comes once a year - if it could be like that all year we would have it made.

SANTA WAS THE special quest at the recent "Lunch With Santa," program sponsored by the American Association of University Women.

"It's really fun," Claus said, because those kids have absolute love, and they are so excited - they love Santa Claus."

This yearly visit is a quick one, he said. Two programs are offered and about 400 children and adults attend each one.

Although he tries to greet each child, he doesn't have the opportunity for extended talks.

Because the "Lunch With Santa" program is quick, the children are invited to make a list of their Christmas wishes and place these lists in the special Santa's Mailbox provided at the lunch.

His unusual appearance, with his bright red suit and flowing white beard, occasionally frightens children.

"I try to shake hands with each child," he said. "Once I reached out to shake hands and the kid got scared. I said, 'Don't be afraid, you don't have to shake hands but if you change your mind come and get me.'

Pretty soon here he came. He gave me a big hug, too."

Mrs. Claus participates in the program each year by getting Claus "suited up." She said it's a big responsibility, making sure the suit is clean and pressed and ready to go.

Claus said he enjoys the luncheon and plans to continue going "as long as they want me to. It's a good organization and a good function. It's well done and very well attended."

CLAUS ALSO talked to the Reporter-Telegram when he visited Midland's Sorority Sampler, the annual Christmas bazaar sponsored by 16 sorority alumnae chapters.

This year Claus arrived at the sampler amid the eager faces and sparkling eyes of the many children who were waiting for him. While mothers and grandmothers snapped pictures, Claus greeted each child with a handshake and a hug, and listened attentively to each request.

He said this year children are "not asking for multiple things, and most have asked for a brother or sister. I ask them if they mean a baby doll and they say 'no, a real baby.'

Children are also asking for traditional gifts including dolls, bikes and trains, he said.

Claus said sometimes a child will ask if Santa received the letter and picture he sent. "I tell them, 'Mrs. Claus keeps all the letters and I haven't seen that one yet, but I will be sure to look for it when I get back to the North Pole.

Claus loves his job. "The gratification comes in the form of: just the kids ... when their eyes light up. Maybe this is part of the world where they can still believe what they want to believe.

Parents enjoy Claus' visits, too, he said, and can feel some of the child's wonder at Christmastime

"Believe it or not, I am not a myth. I exist whether I have my coat on or not. And he occasionally does take his coat off. "Santa lives at the North Pole because his suit is so hot!" he said

CLAUS PLANS to visit with many youngsters. He will be listening to children's wishes through Christmas Eve at Midland Park Mall. Although he always listens carefully to children's requests, some wishes are memorable, such as when "someone asks for something for someone other than for themselves," he said. "Usually it's for a brother or sister. One little girl asked if her sister could come home for Christmas - her sister was in the hospital."

Claus said he has noticed changing trends in which toys children want. Wishes have "gone from guns, and dolls to hand-held video games,' he said. "Kids' tastes are getting. more expensive. They have gone from regular bikes to mopeds and mini-bikes.

"Littler kids still like dolls and guns," but "they want bigger guns at younger ages.

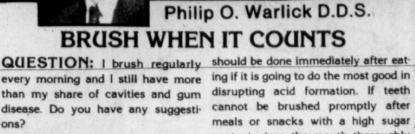

Children's television seems to affect children's wants, he said. Whatever Saturday morning comics are pushing is what the requests are ... Santa has to watch Saturday morning cartoons to keep up with these things." A puppy in a Christmas stocking isn't a common request. "Maybe two children out of every season" request some kind of pet, he said. Although Claus has been at the same job for many years, he said he has no intention of quitting. "There's too much joy visible in the eyes of little kids for someone not to want to be Santa.

When asked what he wants for Christmas, Claus said, "Good health and God's blessing. There's not much more a person could really

What shape and size Christmas tree you want to buy for your holi-day decor depends on where you plan to place it, and your ceiling height. Some people want a slender tree; others prefer a full, more compact specimen. Still others like more open space for ample decoration.

Although most people prefer a well-rounded and shapely tree, you may find it more practical and economical to buy one that is somewhat flat or sparsely branched on one side so that it fits into the corner or against a wall.

Regardless of the type of tree you purchase, you'll need to give it proper care to ensure that it remains fresh and safe throughout the holiday season.

Keep a cut tree in a bucket of water in acaded area sheltered from the wind until you are ready to set it up. Just before putting the tree in its stand, cut an inch or two off the butt end.

Once the tree is set up, immediately fill the tree stand with water to help prevent needles from dropping and to maximize the tree's fire resistance. Fresh trees take up water at a very fast rate - sometimes a quart or more daily. You should check the water level in the stand every two first to make sure it stave above the bottom of the tree's trunk Later, check the water level at least once daily. For safety's sake, don't decorate trees with cotton, paper or other materials that burn readily. Check lights and wiring for worn spots and cracks. Take care not to overload electrical circuits. With a ball-and-burlap tree, move it into an unheated, protected enclosure, such as a garage, carport or basement, fo several days prior to use in the home. This conditioning process will help lessen the physiological effects of rapid changes in temperature and humidity the tree would otherwise experience. Once the tree is inside, place the burlap ball in a washtub or similar waterproof container. Use sand to fill in around the root ball to help support the tree. Keep the ball moist, but avoid using too much water and creating standing water. It's best to limit the tree's stay indoors to a week - no longer than 10 days. In colder climates, it's wise to have your planting site selected and the hole dug before the holidays. Place the fill dirt in an area where it will not freeze, and keep the hole open by filling it with mulch. Generally, if temperatures are above 20 dregrees F., you should plant the tree immediately after removal from the home. If immediate planting is not possible, place the tree in a sheltered area away from the wind and keep the ball moist During planting, water the tree well to eliminate air pockets in the soil. Thereafter, give it a good soaking twice a week. Use mulch to help stablize the soil temperature and maintain moisture. You should also stake the tree during its first year. Now that you know how to choose a tree, here are some suggestions on how to trim it. Begin with lights, then the garland (if desired), ornaments, tree top and skirts. How many decorations do you need? It depends on the size of the tree.

McKNIGHT HARRISON

Longtime Midlander Mabel Shaw was honored on her 80th birthday last weekend with a lovely cocktail buffet hosted by her children. Held in the home of Pat and Bill Shaw, the party also was given by Bobbie Ann and Henry Shaw Jr. of Midland and Sandra (Mrs. Ed) Voorhees of Tulsa

The serving table centerpiece featured a photograph of Mabel as a young woman atop a stack of beautifully bound antique books. The arrangement was flanked by blue tapers in tall copper and brass Art Deco candlesticks and edged with red roses. The beautiful floral bouquet on the coffee table and Mabel's orchid corsage were gifts from her. brother, Paul Bundy of Houston, and his family. Many old and dear friends from her various club and church groups were on hand to celebrate this lovely lady's milestone birthday. Among them were Patsy (Mrs. Arthur) Yeager, May Simmons, Eleanor Wheeler, Frances Kerr, Alva and John P. Butler, Sybil and Bob Tucker, Edna Pryor, Mary and Dick Anderson, Annie Laurie Chancellor, Janell Rhodes, Marion Culbertson, French and Roy Prescott, Laulie LaForce and Harriet and Harvey Herd. Also present were Mabel's Midland grandchildren and spouses, Kim and Tony Shaw, Page and Maner Shaw and Kelly Shaw. Sending greetings via long distance were Sandra's husband, Ed Voorhees, and daughters, Valerie and Shawna, from Tulsa and Mabel's grandson, Stuart Shaw and his wife, Christy, from Lafavette, La.

Mabel was born on Dec. 2, 1904, in Pine Bluff, Ark., but was reared in Wichita Falls. She and Henry Shaw Sr. were married in 1924. In 1932, they moved to Midland, where he was an independent oilman. They were among the early members of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity. and Mabel was a longtime member of the Thursday Club, one of the first bridge clubs to be organized in Midland.

SOME 250 PERSONS enjoyed the West Texas Geological Society's annual Christmas dance last weekend at the Midland Country Club. They danced to the fabulous music of the Ron Fink Orchestra of Denton and enjoyed a buffet breakfast at eleven o'clock. Preceding the dance, WTGS president Dan Kozak and his wife, Marjorie, entertained the organization's officers and committee chairmen with a cocktail party in their home.

A touch of New Mexico was provided by the smell of pinon burning in the fireplace and the front door wreath made of strings of chilies, Indian corn, gourds, goldenrod and seed pods. Luminarias lined the pathway to the home. Poinsettia plants in salmon pink and burgundy were used throughout the party rooms, and those colors were repeated in the serving table decor.

Among the guests were WTGS president-elect Bruce Pearson and his wife, Mignon; immediate past president Bob Swanson and wife, Marsha; dance chairman Vic Frigon and wife, Barbara; MoMo and Harry Miller, Betty and Dick Jons, Carolyn and Raymond Nicholas, Peggy and Bill Thorsen, Dorothy and Hugh Frenzel, Marie Bellomy, executive director of the WTGS, and

Like the joke, there's good news and then there's bad news. The good news is that women are getting into the work force. You can tell by their ambitions. According to a Family Circle magazine survey, this is the first time in history that parents are planning the same educational and career goals for their daughters as for their sons. That's a clue to a great revolution's occurrence.

In higher education, young women are making their presence felt. They are making up half the numbers in dentistry, engineering, business and journalism schools. While their professors and deans don't come even close to that percentage, these young and returning women are getting placed in major corporations, according to college career counselors.

But what about their progress once they are hired? The prognosis is good. Women have been promoted to mid-levels in record numbers. They are well into the ranks of professional firms, such as account-

And the bad news? There's so few women at the top that there are practically no role models. The percentage of women at the top of professions (other than nursing) is less than one percent. In other words, you can count them, profession by profession, practically on one hand.

In the film industry, only a handful of women have made it to the top behind the camera. And in front of it, well, just think of the process. Young male actors start their careers portraying young men army privates, young priests, gofers in big business. At the peak and end of their careers they play mature men — generals, popes, presidents, wheeler-dealers. Yet young women still play sexy roles even as working women. But the correlation doesn't hold.

Sex-based jokes from some chau-vinists spread within an hour of the announcement. Yet across the country, women sobbed watching the televised announcement. And in speech after speech, women rose to applaud her for 10 minutes at a time with tears rolling down their faces. That recognition of a woman leader comes long and hard.

The great hope for women's rise lies in part in those parents that Family Circle surveyed. When parents invest in their daughter's college and career dreams and coach Actresses don't play more suc- their success, they become advo-

The hope lies in the daughters themselves, with or without their parents' help. For it is they who have to direct themselves to be excellent and push into an as-yet unwelcoming top of the power pyramid. In the recent past, too many excellent women have been more than discouraged in a male system and have been forced to strike out on their own as entrepreneurs. In the near future, perhaps there will be more choices and profits, less prejudice and pain.

A book-lined dining room can have a cosy, clubby air that is quite in keeping with a relaxed atmosphere desired for dining. A conservative approach would use dark toned walls and book shelves that have been stained a deep mahogany. Or, quite another feeling can be achieved that is lighter and brighter while still making the books look right at home in the dining room. The room can be painted white. The books can then be the most important decorating element, particularly if there are many hard-covered volumes or sets of classics in elegant bindings. PLANTS IN THE HOME Some houseplants bear fruit

Mrs. John Frederick McMann

By ELVIN McDONALD

Without meaning to alliterate, it can be said that we grow house plants for foliage, flowers,- fragrance, fruit and sometimes flavor, as from citrus or the spiciness of basil leaves. Those with colorful fruit are most plentiful in autumn and early winter; some will be brief visitors, others can give decades of pleasure.

Christmas pepper and Jerusalem cherry are commercial plants grown from spring-sown seeds and carried through summer in lath- or Sarancovered houses, even in open-air beds. Weeks or months before the holidays the fruit turns bright orange, red or purple. Getting it to stay attractive for as long as possible requires moist soil, half sun or fluorescent light, moderate temperatures (60-75F.) and some fresh air.

Since Christmas pepper and Jerusalem cherry grow quickly in warm weather when production costs are less, they also command relatively low prices. Think of them as longlasting bouquets, not permanent investments.

Your Christmas tree will be center stage at your holiday celebrations. Whether you cut it yourself or buy it from the corner retail lot, here are some tips on selecting the right tree, courtesy of the Forest Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

To make sure you get as fresh a tree as possible, apply a few simple tests before making your purchase. First, bend a needle to check its resilience. If it doesn't break, but springs back into position, the tree is

Store sells both best, most bizarre

Associated Press

The King of Morocco bought his couscous pans there, the Duchess of Windsor wouldn't buy hairnets anywhere else, and it's where J. Edgar Hoover picked up his elephant gong.

The store that boasts it offers both the best and the bizarre is New York City's Hammacher Schlemmer, and according to an article in the December issue of Town & Country, it also has a clientele straight from the pages of "Who's Who."

Morocco's King Hassan's couscous pans were part of a six-figure order that included jet-propelled surfboards.

Not only did the Duchess of Windsor buy hairnets there, but the Duke had a standing order for every new flashlight that came in.

Ronald Reagan's whiskey decanter on Air Force I reportedly came from there, as did the mushroom-head clock on his desk in the Oval Office. The wife of the president of Mexico reportedly sent her private jet to New York to pick up a Nickelodeon with bass drum, cymbals and triangle that plays "Making Whoopee." The popularity of Hammacher Schlemmer is not a matter of snob appeal - the store doesn't stamp its log on anything it sells. "We never put our own name on our goods," said Richard W. Tinberg, store president, "because we do not want a proprietary interest in them. If they are no longer the best of their type or unique, we will drop them.'

Some items are expensive - the portable spotlight that can be seen for 30 miles and is brighter than the landing lights of a 747 aircraft sells for $899.50. But the store sells the world's only shower radio for $29.50. Hammacher Schlemmer was founded 136 years ago as a hardware store, a line it dropped in 1944 - but.

not before Alexander Calder stocked up on piano wire for his mobiles

Today the store is owned by J. Roderick "Rod" MacArthur, son of the late and eccentric billionaire John D. MacArthur.

With an estimated $20 million in sales, 1984 will be the first profitable year since 1980 when MacArthur paid $4.8 million for Hammacher Schlemmer.

"We are renovating our store with new paneling to set off the products," Tinberg told Town & Country, "but don't expect any high-powered, high-tech displays. The products are the stars at Hammacher Schlemmer. If you find things curiously juxtasposed, bear in mind that we don't carry lines of products; we carry the only and the best."

Franklin D. Roosevelt thought so - he liked their jelly molds. Richard Nixon bought the motorized revolving coat racks.

Handicapped inmates pose problems

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) - Meeting the needs of the physically handicapped in Ohio prisons presents special non-security problems for corrections officers because there are so few of them.

Of the 18,000 men and women in state correctional facilities, about 20 are paraplegics and a few more are amputees, according to Lou Ann Smith, nursing director of the Limited Duty Unit at the Orient Correctional Institution, just outside Columbus.

"In a minimum- or maximumsecurity setting, the handicapped prisoner tends to get a lot of assistance from the well inmates.

who seem to have a little sympathy for them and their problems. You don't get a lot of hostil-ity from what I have observed," she said.

One problem, she said, is that paraplegics must be taught to be as self-sufficient as possible. Another is that some prisons aren't equipped to accommodate the handicapped. "The community is much more in tune to their needs," she said.

Only a few paraplegics are housed in regular inmate facilities, she said.

At the Southern Ohio Correctional Facility, the state's maxi-

At the 150-bed Limited Duty Unit, Ms. Smith said, "We are trying to teach people with chronic illnesses and problems how to get through their daily activities in a prison setting in a comfortable way." The unit's shift from medical care to teaching self-sufficiency to handicapped inmates began about two years ago, she said.

But the 5-year-old Japanese pianist is no prodigy; she's a typical product of the Suzuki method of teaching music.

She appeared at Carnegie Hall recently with other Suzuki students, the oldest of them 14, to celebrate the 20th anniversary of the method.

Aki began her piano lessons at age 21/2 and she now plays Bach's Partita in B-minor "quite well," according to the leader of the tour, Masaaki Honda.

"In fact, she is a typical Suzuki student who has responded well to our system of providing young children with a favorable environment for learning music," said Honda, a protege of Shinichi Suzuki, who founded the school with the belief that "man is a product of his environment.

About 20,000 youngsters study the Suzuki system in Japan, and as many as 400,000 students are enrolled in the United States.

Similar to the techniques used to teach foreign languages to the very young, the Suzuki method relies on the child's ability to quickly and eagerly absorb tremendous amounts of knowledge.

The method also requires the active participation of parents "who need not be musical

The three sides of the triangular YMCA emblem represent spirit, mind and body. Whereas the body seems to take precedence in the United States and spirit in West Germany, Japanese are more concerned with developing the mind. That's not surprising, given Japan's fascination with and devotion to education. Established in Tokyo in 1880, the Japanese Young Men's Christian in 1890. Books preceded barbells, as Association Union of Japan, now the Y opened its first gym and swim-called the National Council of the ming pool 27 years later.

It now has 27 city and 29 campus chapters across the nation, and oper-ates two hotels, in Tokyo and Kobe. It ranks fifth in size in the world alliance of YMCAs based in Geneva, Kobayashi said.

With a student enrollment of more than 2,000, the Tokyo YMCA offers more than just English. It operates several vocational schools: the International Hotel School, Institute of Design and Architecture and, of course, the College of Physical Education.

The Y does no evangelical work in this largely Buddhist nation, although, with its stress on education, it does offer Bible studies.

Associated Press

Saturday night at the movies no longer has to mean driving, parking and standing in line to pay $4 or $5 a person to see the only good movie in town. Home is the showplace, when you've got a video cassette recorder, says Changing Times magazine.

Prices now start at less than $300 and range to at least $1,000 for the "ultra" models.

But don't be drawn into buying lots of extra features you'll end up never using. The basic models provide plenty of features, which is one reason why certain low-cost models could be in short supply this Christmas.

What might prove less popular are the new video cassette players, which may sell for $50 to $100 less than a VCR but can't record TV

VCRs use two standard recording formats of comparable quality, Beta and VHS. Both use 1/2-inch-wide recording tape, but cassettes aren't interchangeable. Selecting the same format that your friends have allows you to share and exchange tapes. Beta machines are sold by Sony, Toshiba, NEC and Sanyo. Close to 20 companies sell VHS models, for which there are only about seven actual manufacturers, including Matsushita, JVC and Hitachi.

With VHS you're likely to find a wider selection of models, features and accessories, as well as a broader selection of cassettes at most shops. But a VHS model can sell for $100 more than a comparable Beta model.

Before you buy a Beta machine, make sure you'll have access to enough prerecorded cassettes. Although every title is recorded in both formats, most stores carry a greater number of VHS titles. Some no longer carry Beta titles.

When you go looking at various machines, Changing Times magazine suggests that you consider the following features: — Belt drive or direct drive: Machines with belt drive often cost less than direct-drive models, but expect to pay $125-200 every two to three years for belt replacement.

- Tape loading: Most recent models load in front instead of the top. This makes for more convenient placement of the unit, but frontloaders can be more prone to breakdown from tapes getting stuck inside

- Programmability: Basic models let you set the timer at least three days in advance to record a TV program. Higher-priced units let you record two or more events on different channels and set the timer more than a week or so in advance.

Cable-ready: To preprogram a VCR to record more than one scrambled cable TV program, you normally have to rent special equipment from your cable company. You might not have to if your VCR is cable-ready, for an extra $10 or so. But the cable-ready feature only works on some cable systems and it doesn't work on premium channels like HBO. Ask your cable company about it.

- Remote control: This feature is found even on low-priced models, such as the Sony SL-2300 ($500 suggested retail; less than $350 discounted).

- Scanning and special effects: Visible fast forward and reverse (search) locate any spot you want on a tape and make it easier to skip over commercials. Many of the lowest-priced machines now offer this feature. You have to pay more to get freeze frame, slow motion and rapid motion.

To the Japanese carmakers, visions of higher profit margins have meant upgrading of their mix to include more luxury machines.

The European makers are offering more engine refinements and more sophisticated electronics. Saab is offering a new four-cylinder, 16valve, turbocharged engine that promises better operating efficiency. Other European manufacturers have added turbocharged engines to their lines. Volkswagen and Volvo have added new models to their lineups.

The '85 cars, as a group, offer the widest selection of cars in years. Chrysler, Ford, General Motors, Nissan and Toyota are each selling at least one new midsize sedan. Mitsubishi, Subaru and Isuzu are all bringing classy new sedans to the U.S. market.

Most of the new American and Japanese models carry suggested retail prices at several hundred to several thousand dollars less than the European models they are frankly aping. Many offer comfort comparable to their European counterparts and tighter steering and stiffer suspensions than the traditional American soft-ride standard. Other highlights of the '85 cars:

- In general, dashboards are easier to read, controls are more accessible, seats are more comfortable, and interior space is better designed.

- Ford and Mercedes Benz have introduced antilock brakes that let you stop a car quickly in rain, snow or on ice without skidding

On the average, introductory prices on American cars are 3.2 percent ($184 per car) higher than last year for AMC-Renault, 2.3 percent $292) for GM models, 1.3 percent ($153) for Ford products and 1.2 per-cent ($125) for Chrysler cars. Despite the dollar's strength, prices on European and Japanese imports have moved up somewhat less than 3 percent.

It is not likely there will be any mid-year price hikes later. "We see a softer market in 1985 and, under those circumstances, it would be inappropriate for the manufacturers to raise their prices," says John Hammond, an analyst for Data Resources, Inc. "In fact, by the end of 1985 we may see a return of some discount promotions to keep sales up." To find out what the dealer paid for the car he is tryng to sell you, consult the December issue of Changing Times magazine, which lists the vital statistics on every new model, domestic and imported.

A detailed printout of information on dealer cost and markup can also be brought from Nationwide Auto Brokers (Southfield, Mich.; phone 800-521-7257). Price information costs $5.95 for one car, $8.95 for two, $10.95 for three.

The best buys this year may be the small, fuel-efficient American cars, particularly those from Ford and

GM. Ford has already reduced or held steady the suggested retail prices of almost all its small cars, but you'll pay premium prices for the big cars. While Mustang's most fuel-sparing model dropped $850, the big LTD Crown Victoria went up $671.

This Christmas season the new fashion is to buy American -American caviar, that is. Culinary experts are pushing aside beluga and sevruga from Russia and Iran, according to an article in the December issue of Harper's Bazaar, and instead serving American caviar with their champagne.

The grand opening of the YO Ranch is believed to be the biggest reunion of western stars since the Golden Era of Hollywood.

he Hill Country's colorful Schreiner family opened its new YO Hilton Hotel in Kerrville this week with a grandiose flare borrowed straight from the pages of the classic novel Giant.

For the hotel dedication, a small army of movie stars, rodeo stars and Texas rich descended upon this picturesque resort town in a caravan of limousines that seemed to stretch half-way to San Antonio. It was a field day for autograph hounds, and for Kerrville, probably the biggest party ever for this town of 15,000 — maybe one of the biggest for Texas.

Those who planned the party billed it as the biggest reunion ever of western movie stars for any single event since the "Golden Era" of fabulous studio parties. The menu of starfare was 50 names long and included nearly the entire cast of such TV cowboy shows as "The Virginian," "Gunsmoke," "Sugarfoot" and other popular, by-gone series. Other notables included June Lockhart of the old "Lassie" series, with current stars such as Denver Pyle from "Dukes of Hazzard," and Claude Akin and Mills Watson of "Sheriff Lobo." Oscar nominee Richard Farnsworth and academy award winner Ben Johnson, two cowboys-turned-actors were also among those who flew in for the party and charity ball to benefit the Lion's Club Children's Home in the Hill County.

Most of the credit for the western star turnout goes to Robert Totten, who produced "Gunsmoke" for 10 years and his wife Mikki. The pair spent the last two months contacting their actor friends about the event.

Festivities began with the contingent of stars herding Longhorn cattle through the middle of town Saturday morning, peaked with an old west costume charity ball Saturday night, and ended Sunday with a Texas-style barbecue at the ledgendary YO ranch near Kerrville.

Gourmets with a passion for the exotic were able to fill their plates with such treats as wine-poached escargot, rattlesnake pate, smothered antelope and oyster's Bienville. Banquet tables were loaded with Western, Southern, Spanish, Mexican, French and Texan foods to honor the diverse culinary heritage of Texas and its six flags. Free liquor flowed from bars throughout the hotel and one almost expected at any moment to see Jett Rink, among the rest of the Texas-looking crowd, staggering through the lobby of the YO Hilton.

The purely Texas extravaganza was the brainchild of Charles Schreiner III, (known simply to friends as "three") and his four sons Charles IV, Gus, Water and Louis. Together they still run the 80 square-mile, 50,000-acre working YO ranch, which has produced a sizable fortune for the family despite the fact that it pumps no oil or gas.

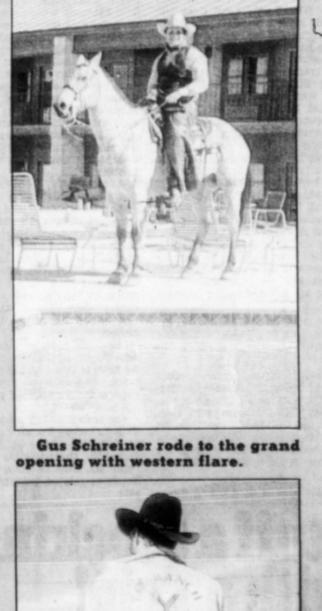

Founded 104 years ago by Captain Charles Schreiner, a Texas Ranger, banker, Confederate soldier, who made his fortune by driving Longhorn cattle along the Western Trail to Dodge City, the ranch is now the largest private hunting preserve of its type in the world — larger even than some of the famous hunting preserves of India and Africa. The working ranch is also home to the world's largest herd of Longhorn cattle and some of the nation's top quarter horse stock.

The Texas tradition runs deep in the Schreiner family so when they got ready to open their new hotel to go with their college, bank, department store, saddle store and other assorted businesses, it was no surprise the theme would be purely western right down to the rawhide ribbon cutting ceremony.

The western theme is continued right through the 200 room YO Hilton which is constructed solely from native limestone and has 32 foot ceilings to give the "great hall" appearance in the lobby. Trophy class mounts adorn the lobby, along with furniture covered in Longhorn hides, leather couches, five 11-foot chandeliers made of 350 branding irons used on the Chisom trail, and a seven-foot original Dahlberg bronze entitled "Rough Men and Tough Times."

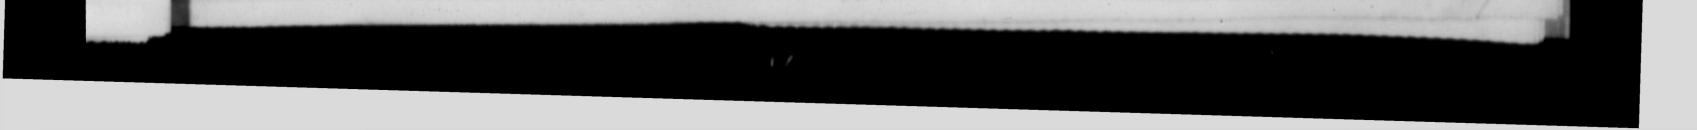

There is also the Remington Suite, Texas Ranger Suite, Winchester Suite, American Indian Suite, Texas Suite, Sam Colt Suite, YO Suite and Ace Reid Suite, all decorated with antiques and memorabilia appropriate to the name.

"Kerrvile needed a first class hotel," said Three Schreiner. "I am hoping the YO Hilton will be the catalyst for making a lot more good things happen in Kerrville."

The YO brand emblasened on this cowbey's jacket is also seen on the ranch's flag.

The building of a $71 million conthe exclusive playground of wealthy, influential sun worshipers vention center and the addition of 3,000 hotel rooms cannot escape Shielded from the daily grind by notice. "We like to think of it as the the San Jacinto Mountains and miles renaissance of Palm Springs," said of scrubby desert, Palm Springs Michael Fife, director of marketing bloomed with golf courses, tennis for the Convention and Visitors courts, and swimming pools into a Bureau.

Others say the new era is more like the Dark Ages. "There was nothing here when we bought this 40 years ago," said Myrtle M. Gross, who owns a small motel on the north end of town. "I don't see why they have to build all those big fancy hotels, but I guess I'll just sit in my rocker and watch the progress until I fall over."

Shopkeepers complain that the mall, which will house I. Magnin and Saks Fifth Avenue, will drive smaller businesses away. "If all these little stores go out of business, the city will lose its charm," said Mary Aaroe, gesturing toward the construction site across the street from her silversmith's store.

Mayor Frank Bogert, who first came to Palm Springs in 1927, can remember when he held horse races down the city's unpaved main street. The convention center and new hotels will attract as many as 225,000 conventioneers annually, he said, in addition to the year-round population of 37,000 and the seasonal influx of snowbirds escaping East Coast and Canadian winters.

The city has struggled to keep its resort aura by dictating anything "No matter what we do, this place from the color of paint used on is going to get bigger," Bogert said. "The best we can do is to control it, and control those conventioneers with their funny hats and badges." For homosexuals, the upsurge in smokewood abound, and even the business has provided a low-key way local link in the national Motel 6 of making their presence known. Over the past few years, bars, discotheques, restaurants, hair salons, and other establishments in Palm Srings and nearby cities have been bought or opened by homosexuals, and a condominium complex is nearing completion.

The relationship between the city and the new entrepreneurs has been described as amicable by both sides, and the atmosphere has inspired the Desert Business Association, a homosexual chamber of commerce that boasts 147 members, to promote Palm Springs nationally as a vacation spot.

'This is a sophisticated community with excellent hotels and services," said Ron Christenson, president of the association. "The whole area has grown tremendously, and so has the homosexual community." In addition to the businesses, visiting homosexuals have access to two churches, two magazines, and counseling services.

"All you need here are swim trunks and dancing shoes," said one homosexual on his first trip to Palm Springs. "Next to this, L.A. and San Francisco are a pit.'

In addition to being a tourist spot, Palm Springs has long been a mecca for the ailing. The city once harbored a tuberculosis sanitarium, and people suffering from asthma; arthritis, and other diseases have sought relief in the dry desert air and natural mineral baths.

Fred Hardt, owner of a hotel that caters to homosexuals, is planning to capitalize on the healing values of the desert by converting his establishment to a resort for victims of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, AIDS.

Mexico pushes for tourists

SAN JOSE DEL CABO, Mexico (AP) - Where only sand fleas and sea gulls once prevailed, the Mexican government is building vacation resorts in hopes of drawing U.S. tourist crowds and their dollars.

The transformation of this quiet fishing village at the tip of Baja Cali-fornia was started in 1978 by the National Trust Fund for Tourism Development, or Fonatur, with a 20year development plan for the Los Cabos area.

Currently, there is a new international airport outside the city and three beachfront hotels with 11 more planned. In coming years, plans call for condominiums, a shopping center and golf course - all aimed at American tourists.

'The United States is the main market of tourism and the number of tourists is up about 20 percent over last year," said Carlos Kennedy, Fonatur marketing director here.

He said Fonatur is developing the area with "Old World charm" because "we don't want tall buildings and high rises all along the beachfront.

Tourism is second only to petro-leum in producing income for Mexico and brings in about $1.5 billion annually. With the price of oil dropping on the world market, Mexico is hoping tourism can take up some of the slack and help pull it from the economic crisis it has faced since 1982.

Fonatur also is developing other resort areas, often carving them out of wilderness where studies showed tourist would go - areas with beach fronts, natural surroundings and an air of tranquillity.

Its first venture was Cancun, an island off Mexico's Caribbean coast that boasts some of the best scuba diving areas around and the site of Mayan ruins, according to Fonatur spokesman Carlos Zugasti Islas. On the Pacific shore, Fonatur

developed Ixtapa into an area of beachfront hotels, golf courses and boating

Additionally, Fonatur is devel-oping Loreto, 210 miles north of Laz Paz on the eastern coast of Baja California, and plans to further promote Puerto Escondido in the southern state of Oaxaca and a still-to-bestarted resort further south on the Pacific near Puerto Angel.

Zugasti said employment generated by the resorts is a benefit in a nation where 40 percent of the pop-ulation is either jobless or underemployed. "Because most of the places we develop do not have many people, we have to bring in the personnel to work, and this, of course, helps reduce the number of people without jobs," he said.

For instance, 114 people lived on Cancun before Fonatur developed it in 1974. Now it has 54 resort hotels and more than 100,000 permanent residents, most of them working in hotels or related industries, Zugasti said.

XIAN, China — During the Ming dynasty six centuries ago, the ancient city of Xian threw up massive earthen ramparts to protect itself from invader

Founded in the 11th century B.C., the city served as capital of 11 dynasties and grew larger than ancient Rome. But its prestige as the gate-way to the old Silk Road declined after the Tang dynasty, when subse-quent emperors made their capitals elsewhere.

New walls were built from 1374 to 1378. In 1568 they were faced with gray brick, and the fortifications grew more intricate. Double towers rose above the four major gates. A moat was dug and deepened.

For all such defenses, the eastern gate was breached by new conquerors. The wall deteriorated, despite repairs made during the Qing dynasty in 1781. Now a new effort is under way to restore the 8.5 miles of walls to their original 40-feet-high splendor. The project has attracted national interest because only Xian, of China's six historical capitals, kept its walls basically intact. Peking and other cities tore down their walls to make way for modern boulevards and buildings after the Communists seized power in 1949. The restoration reflects a belated concern over the architectural treasures sacrificed for such urban progress.

Although the government declared Xian's walls a protected historic site in 1961, no steps were taken for 12 years, said Zhang Jingfei, the project engineer, who is dep-uty director of Xian's City Wall Construction Commission.

"Because of the wall's terrible condition, we realized that something had to be done," he said. The wall was honeycombed with almost 1,200 miles of tunnels and holes dug by residents when the Jap-anese bombed Xian in 1937 and 1938. More recently, some of the heavy bricks were pilfered for building materials. When repairs got-under way in April 1983, about 200,000 square feet of brick facing was missing or damaged and part of the wall's earthen core had collapsed. Zhang conceded that the work had not gone easily. For example, the original earth had become so compacted over the centuries that new material added as filler would not bind, and crumbled away.

"You just cannot do it in one small spot like patching clothes," Zhang said

The dredging of the surrounding moat has had a more practical purpose. Over the years, factories dumped waste into it and residents added garbage, so that sections almost disappeared. This blocked the drainage of the heavy rains that whip Xian every summer. The northeastern neighborhoods were flooded when the moat overflowed in 1981 and 1982.

To defray the cost of restoration, which he estimated at nearly $40 million, each of Xian's citizens has been urged to donate several days of labor. Zhang estimated that volunteers were doing up to 80 percent of the work.

Enough has already been done to let residents promenade along the 40-foot-wide brick top. The plan is to complete the wall by the end of next year and then start working on the towers housing.

Museum takes to the air New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON - No longer satisfied with calling itself the "most popular" tourist attraction in the world, the National Air and Space Museum is launching even more superlatives these days. The museum, part of the Smith-sonian Institution, already displays anything from kites to lunar craft and draws more than 12 million visitors a year. But, according to its director, Walter J. Boyne, the museum is now doing these things:

"No matter what we do, this place is going to get bigger," Bogert said. "The best we can do is to control it, and control those conventioneers with their funny hats and badges." For homosexuals, the upsurge in business has provided a low-key w of making their presence know Over the past few years, bars, dis theques, restaurants, hair salon and other establishments in Pal Srings and nearby cities have be bought or opened by homosexua and a condominium complex in nearing completion.

The relationship between the city and the new entrepreneurs has bee described as amicable by both side and the atmosphere has inspired the Desert Business Association, a home sexual chamber of commerce that boasts 147 members, to promote Palm Springs nationally as a vaca tion spot.

"This is a sophisticated commu nity with excellent hotels and ser vices," said Ron Christenson, presi dent of the association. "The whole area has grown tremendously, and so has the homosexual community. In addition to the businesses, visiting homosexuals have access to two churches, two magazines, and coun seling services.

'All you need here are swim trunks and dancing shoes," said one homosexual on his first trip to Palm Springs. "Next to this, L.A. and San Francisco are a pit."

In addition to being a tourist spot, Palm Springs has long been a mecca for the ailing. The city once harbored a tuberculosis sanitarium, and people suffering from asthma, arthritis, and other diseases have sought relief in the dry desert air and natural mineral baths.

Fred Hardt, owner of a hotel that caters to homosexuals, is planning to capitalize on the healing values of the desert by converting his establishment to a resort for victims of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, AIDS.

Safety concerns ease for travelers to India, Mexico

By MORRIS D. ROSENBERG Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON - Concerns raised recently by the U.S. government about the safety of American travelers in India and Mexico have been eased.

India is recovering from the riot-ing that followed the assassination of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi on Oct. 31.

U.S. tour operators report that some group departures to India were canceled because of the turmoil, but others left as scheduled after clients were given the option

Immediately following the state funeral last month, many tourists who did decide to abort their trips sought new bookings on departures set for early next year, said one major operator. Another firm, however, has been experiencing reduced demand for its 1985 India packages. The Mexican government, with a less serious problem, has stepped up efforts to police its highways and increase visitor security.

This program was outlined last month, following word in October that the U.S. Embassy in Mexico City intended to ask the State Department to warn Americans about the danger of being attacked while driving on certain roads. (As a result of of dropping out and receiving a full Mexico's action, the embassy shelved that long-distance telephone calls ment's Citizens Emergency Center the request for a travel advisory.) have been difficult to make, and at 202-632-5225.

There was no subsequent drop in U.S. tourism to Mexico, where the important winter high season has just begun.

Canceling travel advisories on India issued earlier, the State Department said it no longer advises against travel to New Delhi and northern India and noted that the atmosphere in the capital is "much improved.

A curfew has been in effect in most parts of New Delhi from 11 p.m. to 4 a.m. Buses and taxis have been available.

"Americans should continue to exercise caution, avoid crowds and observe the curfew where imposed.' the State Department said. It added scheduled transportation between cities outside the capital is subject to delays

Visitors who arrive in New Delhi by air during the curfew should contact the police post at Palam Airport for a pass. If a pass cannot be obtained, a passport and airline ticket probably will permit passage to and from the airport, according to the State Department.

U.S. citizens should register upon arrival with the American Embassy in New Delhi or with the American Consulate in Bombay, Calcutta or Madras, the State Department says.

Kanta Thakur, regional director of the India Government Travel Office in New York, is optimistic about the future: "Travel from the U.S. to India had been increasing each year, especially in the last three years, with a 20 percent rise during the first five months of 1984.

We still feel that India has been established in this country as one of the major popular travel destinations." She sees the current period as a "purely temporary setback," and feels that group business will pick up during the next two months.

For up-to-date information on current conditions, call the depart- ism announced that a 24-hour emergency telephone hotline would go radio-equipped and linked with 42 velers needing guidance. This sup-plements the teams of "Green Angels" who continue to patrol the country's highways.

They provide free, basic automobile repairs for stranded tourists, communications assistance and emergency medical aid. The hotline number is 5-250-01-23.

Jorge Gleesen, head of the greenuniformed "Angels," was quickly sent on a good-will tour of the West and Southwest, the two U.S. areas from which most motorists enter Mexico.

The Green Angels now include MEXICO'S MINISTRY of Tour- more than 1,000 staff members and operate 260 vehicles, most of them

Mexico pushes for tourists

SAN JOSE DEL CABO, Mexico (AP) - Where only sand fleas and sea gulls once prevailed, the Mexican government is building vacation resorts in hopes of drawing U.S. tourist crowds and their dollars.

The transformation of this quiet fishing village at the tip of Baja California was started in 1978 by the National Trust Fund for Tourism Development, or Fonatur, with a 20year development plan for the Los Cabos area.

Currently, there is a new international airport outside the city and three beachfront hotels with 11 more planned. In coming years, plans call for condominiums, a shopping center and golf course - all aimed at American tourists.

The United States is the main market of tourism and the number of tourists is up about 20 percent over last year," said Carlos Kennedy, Fonatur marketing director here.

He said Fonatur is developing the area with "Old World charm' because "we don't want tall buildings and high rises all along the beachfront.

Tourism is second only to petro-leum in producing income for Mex-ico and brings in about $1.5 billion annually. With the price of oil dropping on the world market, Mexico is hoping tourism can take up some of the slack and help pull it from the economic crisis it has faced since

resort areas, often carving them out of wilderness where studies showed tourist would go - areas with beach fronts, natural surroundings and an air of tranquillity

Its first venture was Cancun, an island off Mexico's Caribbean coast that boasts some of the best scuba diving areas around and the site of Mayan ruins, according to Fonatur spokesman Carlos Zugasti Islas. On the Pacific shore, Fonatur developed Ixtapa into an area of beachfront hotels, golf courses and boating.

Additionally, Fonatur is devel-oping Loreto, 210 miles north of Laz Paz on the eastern coast of Baja California, and plans to further promote Puerto Escondido in the southern state of Oaxaca and a still-to-bestarted resort further south on the Pacific near Puerto Angel.

Zugasti said employment generated by the resorts is a benefit in a nation where 40 percent of the pop-ulation is either jobless or underemployed. "Because most of the places we develop do not have many people, we have to bring in the personnel to work, and this, of course, helps reduce the number of people without jobs," he said.

For instance, 114 people lived on Cancun before Fonatur developed it in 1974. Now it has 54 resort hotels and more than 100,000 permanent residents, most of them working in hotels or related industries, Zugasti

XIAN, China - During the Ming dynasty six centuries ago, the ancient city of Xian threw up massive earthen ramparts to protect itself from invaders.

Founded in the 11th century B.C., the city served as capital of 11 dyn-asties and grew larger than ancient Rome. But its prestige as the gate-way to the old Silk Road declined after the Tang dynasty, when subse-quent emperors made their capitals elsewhere.

New walls were built from 1374 to 1378. In 1568 they were faced with gray brick, and the fortifications grew more intricate. Double towers rose above the four major gates. A moat was dug and deepened. For all such defenses, the eastern gate was breached by new conquerors. The wall deteriorated, despite repairs made during the Qing dynasty in 1781. Now a new effort is under way to restore the 8.5 miles of walls to their original 40-feet-high anese bombed Xian in 1937 and 1938. splendor.

The project has attracted national interest because only Xian, of China's six historical capitals, kept its walls basically intact. Peking and other cities tore down their walls to make way for modern boulevards and buildings after the Communists seized power in 1949. The restoration reflects a belated concern over the architectural treasures sacrificed for such urban progress.

Although the government declared Xian's walls a protected historic site in 1961, no steps were taken for 12 years, said Zhang Jingfei, the project engineer, who is deputy director of Xian's City Wall Construction Commission.

Because of the wall's terrible condition, we realized that something had to be done," he said. The wall was honeycombed with

More recently, some of the heavy bricks were pilfered for building materials. When repairs got under way in April 1983, about 200,000 square feet of brick facing was missing or damaged and part of the wall's earthen core had collapsed. Zhang conceded that the work had not gone easily. For example, the original earth had become so compacted over the centuries that new material added as filler would not bind, and crumbled away.

"You just cannot do it in one small spot like patching clothes," Zhang

3308 W. Illinois

The dredging of the surrounding moat has had a more practical purpose. Over the years, factories dumped waste into it and residents added garbage, so that sections almost disappeared. This blocked the drainage of the heavy rains that whip Xian every summer. The northeastern neighborhoods were flooded when the most overflowed in 1981 and 1982.

To defray the cost of restoration, which he estimated at nearly $40 million, each of Xian's citizens has been urged to donate several days of labor. Zhang estimated that volun-teers were doing up to 80 percent of the work.

Enough has already been done to let residents promenade along the 40-foot-wide brick top. The plan is to complete the wall by the end of next year and then start working on the towers

Xian's preservationists have lost a battle, too. Even as the restoration of the city wall got under way last year, officials in the provincial bureaucracy ordered another 14th-century gate of the old city within Xian knocked down to make way for housing.

Here at the new 200-acre North Peak addition to the Keystone Resort, 75 miles west of Denver, the Forest Service working with the resort operators, used the computer technology to design 15 new advanced and expert runs.

For example, resort areas are being required to vary the widths of their trails, add occassional islands of trees, and thin the trees out along the edges of the trails to create a more natural appearance. These steps, which the computer program devises, help screen the trails from view

"The main consideration in the past was the skiing, so we had slopes with straight lines and straight edges," said Mittmann, the landscape architect. "Now we are considering the landscapes in addition to ski quality and we're trying to integrate the runs as much as possible into the mountains.'

As the number of skiers increases, Western ski resorts, most of which lie of land administered by the Forest Service, are under growing pressure to provide more trails. The half-million lift tickets sold in Colorado in 1962 have grown to more than eight million in 1982, according to the Forest Service, and lately much of the growth has been accompanied by a demand for more challenging slopes. The Forest Service has been

CDC seeks more tests on zeranol

ATLANTA (AP) - More tests are needed to prove any link between a chemical used to stimulate growth in beef cattle and breast development in very young girls, according to the national Centers for Disease Control.

Several hundred cases of premature thelarche, or breast development, have been reported in Puerto Rican girls every year since 1982, when the CDC began investigating the problem, Dr. Godfrey Oakley, chief of the CDC's birth defects branch, said Tuesday.

Tests in Atlanta found the chemical, zeranol, in four of 19 blood samples from the girls ages 1 to 8, Oakley said. Zeranol is fed to beef cattle to stimulate growth, but normally does not affect humans who have eaten the beef, he said.

Only one other laboratory test has reported finding zeranol in the children's blood, Oakley said. That test, conducted in France, involved blood samples from six girls who suffered from premature thelarche and found zeranol in five of them. But a retest came up negative, he said.

Another test conducted at the University of Minnesota found no zeranol in 10 blood samples from Puerto Rican girls who had the condition, he added.

Oakley said the latest test involved some samples "that were obtained as long as 21/2 years ago and had been sitting in a freezer.

DEAR ABBY: Six months ago I met a charming gentleman through mutual friends. He's 49 and recently divorced for the second time. He's semiretired and quite well-off. I'm a 47-year-old widow in comfortable circumstances. He calls me every day, comes over in the evening to watch TV, play cards, have coffee and talk, but he has never taken me out. I stopped inviting him to dinner because he never reciprocated. We see each other only during the week never on the weekend. He says he doesn't like to "make plans" meaning for dinner or a movie; he prefers to do things on the spur of the moment.

He loves to garden and is very handy at fixing things. He sprayed my front and backyard for weeds and worked on my Kimball organ. I do not chase after him. I never call him and never ask him what he does when he's not with me. He acts like he's very fond of me, and I think I'm falling in love with him. I love being with him, but I want to go somewhere

He told me his second wife wants him back, so he's probably seeing her on the weekends. (I never ask.) Abby, do you see any future in our relationship? Why do you think he's never taken me anywhere? And how can I find out where I stand with him? - PUZZLED IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR PUZZLED: If there's a future in your relationship, it's not in the immediate future. He doesn't take you anywhere because he's either too cheap to spend the money, or he has a commitment with someone else, which is probably why you never see him on the weekends.

Don't be available for coffee, conversation and cards every evening. Be "busy." and if he keeps calling, pin him down for a dinner date or a movie, and see what happens.

DEAR ABBY: A charitable organization I have worked for is honoring me at a dinner in recognition of me. my many years of service. I have one son. He is over 50, married onl and has a nice family. I invited him to come to the dinner, but he refused, saying, "No. Those affairs bore me.

He lives very near to where the dinner is being held, so I told him he could skip the dinner and just come for the presentation. He refused.

The chairman of the dinner committee called my son and asked if he would please come and say a few words in my behalf. He was also turned down with, "No. Those affairs bore me." The man was shocked, as he knows how generous I have been to my son and his family over the years.

All my friends and relatives are coming. What should I say when they ask me why my son didn't come to see me honored? - HURT IN LOS ANGELES

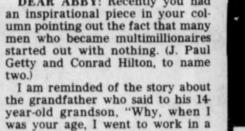

DEAR HURT: Look them straight in the eye and say, "He was invited,

From Staff Reports

As the temperature falls below freezing and snow begins to dot the country, these survival tips for cold weather may help in keeping warm and comfortable this winter:

Wear two or more loosely-fitting layers of clothing under coats. Staying warm is easier under several lavers of thin clothing instead of one thick laver because each laver adds insulation around the body.

Always wear hat, scarf and gloves when outside. At least 50 per-cent of the body's heat escapes through extremities such as head, hands and neck.

- Watch out for frostbite and hypothermia. Frostbite causes a loss of feeling and a white or pale appearance in such extremities as fingers or toes. Hypothermia occurs when the body loses heat faster than it can be produced. The best remedy is to gradually re-warm the body and to seek medical aid if prolonged freezing occurs.

DR. KURIANSKY Forgetfulness may be symptom of deeper problems

By DR. JUDITH KURIANSKY

Q. A while ago I rushed to the gynogist because I was staining and it wasn't time for my period. He found a contraceptive sponge that I had forgotten about and had left in for about a week. I was very embarrassed about being so careless. I was also scared because he told me I was so raw from the infection that something serious could have happened.

It cleared up with medication, but I didn't have sex for a long time after that, until last night. It hurt a little but I continued. I'm frightened again. Why is all this happening to me? I keep thinking it's a sign that I shouldn't have sex.

Ask yourself: Am I guilty about being sexual? Why do I need to punish myself for being sexual by ending up with pain?

"Forgetting" is one way to defend ourselves from facing a conflict about something we are doing. Another defense is to develop a body symptom which symbolizes the conflict. It expresses how we feel, yet at the same time hides the frightening feelings from our full conscious awareness

Mid-Plains profits by once waste gas

By JOHN PAUL PITTS Business-Oil Editor

Putrid, trash gas that once was vented to foul the air around Post, Texas is now going into a pipeline, and everyone is happier for it.

Garza County is happy because the air smells better, as is the Texas Railroad Commission, Texas Air Quality Board, and Environmental Protection Agency, who were never too happy with the situation. The operators who, after 20 years, have finally found a market for their associated gas, are happy and so is Mid-Plains Inc. which is now selling about $6,000 per day of the former waste gas and expects to double that by 1985.

"It was one of those deals where everybody came out a winner," said Richard S. Gaddy, chairman of the board of Mid-Plains, the Midlandbased firm which was created specifically to put together a plan to profitably market the discarded gas.

The low volumes of associated gas produced in the Garza County fields of a San Andres-Glorieta trend that stretches from Post to Lubbock, have been a problem for the past 20 years in which the gas has either been vented or flared.

THE AVERAGE oil well in the area produced only 5 mcfd of gas, which made it hardly economical to gather from the well site. To get a volume of gas equivalent to one Spraberry well in Martin or Midland County, one would have had to lay pipe to five wells in Garza County. To boot, the very small volumes of gas required much expensive treat-

The associated gas had a hydrogen sulphide content of 1 percent and a 4.5 carbon dioxide content, which required complex treatment and constant monitoring, and since it was designated for residential use the high 1,400 BTU had to be dropped to 1,050 BTU.

Others had eyed the millions of Mcf of gas flying away over the rugged West Texas terrain and thought there must be a way to make them nomic parameters of the time there was simply no way. Several had tried and failed, and the skeleton of an abandoned gas plant built by George R. Brown of Brown & Root Inc. lingered as a grim reminder of just how uneconomical the situation was.

"Prices were just too low, the capital investment and operating expenses too high for it to be profitable for anyone previously," said Gaddy. "The thing that turned the economics around was unitization.

IN THE PAST three years many of the fields in the trend area have been unitized, meaning that gas could now be gathered from a single tank battery instead of individual wells

Dick Milam, a landman from Lubbock and now vice president of Mid-Plains was first to suspect that unitization might have made the situation economical. After discussions with an engineer for Wheeler Properties, operator of the Sunnyland field, Milam concluded it was time to take a second look at the economics of gathering gas from the fields. He offered the idea to Gaddy, who agreed, and gas testing equipment was purchased and testing begun by Milam. The tests proved promising. providing information on volumes and treating costs. Texas reports steady November unemployment rate

DALLAS (AP) - Unemployment in Texas held steady in November at 5.7 percent as the state reflected the national economy, Labor Department officials said today.

The Texas unemployment rate has been at either 5.7 percent or 5.6 percent since August, reflecting both the state's strong economy, with pockets of problems, and the slowdown in the nation's economy.

"It's very obvious that we've been following the national pattern for four months," said Labor Department economist Nic Santangelo in Dallas.

On the national level, civilian joblessness fell to 7.2 percent last month - the first drop since June. "Even though the national numbers did do a little drop, there has been a slow-up and Texas has been stengths," Santangelo said.

Hiring for the Christmas shopping season usually is reflected in December figures since the Labor Department's survey takes place in the first half of each month, he said.

"A lot of business takes place normally after the survey period," Santangelo said. "We may miss some of feeling part of that despite our that gearing up of hiring, and that's more apt to show up in the December figures."

> One year ago, unemployment in Texas stood at 7 percent, he said.

"There's been a gain of over the year of something like over 300,000 people into the labor force, and a decline of about 79,000 unemployed people," Santangelo said.

Keeping the boss happy for fun and profit

In the world of business-or in the world period-one of the biggest problems we face is keeping the boss happy. It seems to be a task essential to the well-being of practically all.

About the only ones who might be exempt are the jet-setter, trust fund babies, who like to dress down, and pretend to be artists, writers and antique dealers, for want of anything productive to do. Otherwise, just about everyone has to answer to a boss. Chairmen of the board, CEO's and presidents most usually have to answer to the ultimate bosses which are sharehold ers and consumers. Even the President of the United States must answer to the voters. But for most of us, keeping the boss happy is usually no more than pleas-ing the guy down the hall that signs the paycheck. So, If like myself, you have found that keeping the boss happy is easier on the metabolism than having him mad, and you want to move forward in your career, you might want to consider some of the follow-ing advice.

THE GOODRICH & Sherwood Co., a New York pub-lic relations firm, that consults on employee relations, advises that the relationship with the boss can affect one's emotional and physical health as well as his effectiveness, career growth and long-term success, and for that reason boss-relations must be practiced daily.

"Power emanates from the top down, and you must keep your power line 'plugged in' to the source," says Andrew Sherwood, President, Goodrich & Sherwood.

One way to stay plugged in is to daily ask yourself questions. For example: What does the boss want me to do today? Remember, things continually change, so stay in touch. Also, what are my boss's objectives? It's a good idea to find out what they are and give support to achieve them. It is possible to give support to objectives without being a sickening "yes" man. Other advice offered is to avoid buildup of suspicions and frustration by keeping in touch with your boss regularly with either written or oral communications to let him know what you are doing. And, when in the process of delivering communications or proposals determine the time (time of day, day of week) when he is most receptive to avoid irritating interruptions and tums. Turn your ideas over to the boss for digestion. correction and acceptance.

One of the most important steps to having harmonious relations with the boss is to study his achievement pattern and cater to it in a spirit of partnership, complementing each others strentgths, rather than compensating for each others weakness. Another is to always protect the boss against mistakes graciously and defend his reputation. A back-biting spirit is quickly detected and seldom tolerated. Remember: It is true, that the boss is always the boss-right or wrong. While office politics and coffee-preak character assassination are sometimes tempting pastimes, don't indulge. Always foster compatibility and avoid a build up of hostility by being courteous, forgiving, percep-tive and loyal, and use the "yes-but" technique to avoid altercations. Always keep the boss on a pedestal with honest recognition-and appreciation and be depend-able and truthful and prepared at all times for new

THIS SUGGESTION certainly will not fly with the unions and union-types, but the consulting firm also recommends that one be willing to put in 20 percent voluntary overtime by arriving early and leaving when the day's work is done.

Additionally, an employee should guard against giving away too much information to possible competitors within the company, and he should study the organizational chart and develop a mutual strategy for operation and career advancement.

One should also be prepared to toot his own horn, by keeping track of his achievements. He should be ready to show how both he and the job have grown, and rewrite the job description as the job grows. Hope-fully this will prove to the boss that you are a team member, and earn a raise.

Most people, according to Sherwood, lose sight of the fact that they really work for their boss first; the company second. He adds that more than being bri-liant and aggressive, building a relationship of trust by serving your boss loyally and faithfully and taking care of your boss, comes in way ahead of anything else one can do in the race to the top.

Diamond power

Diesel engine camshafts are checked at General Motors' Electro- generator units, the sole source of power for the newly-developed Motive Division plant in LaGrange, III. The assemblies will be used in Argyle diamond mine some 1,200 miles south of Perth, Australia.

Mid-Plains

We talked to ARCO and Conoco and some of the larger producers in the area and they didn't throw us out of the office when we threw some prices at them. Instead, they urged us to go for it, and signed a contract to sell us their gas," said Charles E. Long III, president Mid-Plains. Other large producers, who had rather sell than vent, also signed and the project was underway.

SINCE THE initial contracts Mid-Plains has put under contract or option most of the other larger producers along the trend.

To make the plan work, a tight and highly experienced team with expertise in applicable areas was formed.

Richard Gaddy, chairman of the board, took on the financial angle, and helped obtain the $4 million financing for the project from First City Energy Financial Corp in Houston. William Long, president, a for-mer vice president for Intertex came on board to handle purchasing and contracts, while Johnny Warren, one of the builders of Compressor Systems Inc. loaned his expertise in the area of finance and compression. Wayne Jones, a former vice president with Perry Gas Systems is regarded as one of the top gas treating and processing authorities in the nation. L.E. Sawyer would act as legal counsel and Dick Milam a former Conoco landman, pur chased pipeline right-of-way and supervised pipeline construction.

THE PIPELINE system now con sists of 108 miles of economical plas tic pipeline connecting 275 wells in Garza, Lubbock, Lamb and Crosby counties. The system is delivering 2.5 million cubic foot of gas daily to the firm's recently expanded gas plant near Post, which drops 10,000 gallons of natural gas liquids from ethane to heptanes for delivery by truck to United LPG, near Sweetwater. The gas is delivered to West Star, a gas transmission company which serves Energas.

"We are pleased with the project," said Gaddy. "This is a long range investment, as most of our cash flow is being plowed back into expansion of the pipeline system and gas plants.

President, Charles Long, says that Mid-Plains has only scratched the surface of the potential for the area. There are about 6,000 wells along the San Andres-Glorieta trend and a large portion of them might even-tually be tied into the system. Also, drilling activity continues high in Garza County and more wells are being added to the inventory each day." He said expansion could call for at least two to three more plants to be built in the area.

Bankers see no effect on border from recent peso devaluation

EL PASO, Texas (AP) - U.S. bankers and analysis say businesses on the border should feel little to no effect from Mexico's decision to devalue the peso at a higher daily rate.

"It was a very unobtrusive change. I don't anticipate any effect on the peso rates or on how business is con-ducted on the border," said Don Shuffstall, international banking officer at El Paso's MBank. "It could change the market, but I really don't see that happening." Mexico's Finance Ministry announced the new rate of devaluation for its currency late Wednesday.

Under the latest devaluation schedule, the peso will be reduced in value at a rate of 17 centavos per day

Since September 1983, after the ailing peso had gone through several devaluations, the Mexican government established a slide rate for the peso of 13 centavos daily.

There are 100 centavos to a peso.

The change to the 17-centavo-per-day slide rate was the first in the peso devaluation since 1983.

Wayne MCClintock, an independent consultant on Mexico's economy, said Thursday the new slide may der probably would remain "as they are now or at least in the same range.'

On Thursday, MBank was buying pesos at 215 to the dollar and selling at 211 to the dollar.

In other border cities, the rates were similar.

The Union National Bank in Laredo was buying pesos Thursday at 217 to the dollar and selling at 213.50 to one.

In Brownsville, across the border from Matamoros, Texas Commerce Bank was selling at 212 to the dollar.

"It's been near 200 to one or over 200 for several months, so you can see that the slide change yesterday hasn't had a dramatic effect on what we're doing, Shuffstall said.

He and MCClintock both said altering the slide rate was necessary, and both predicted it would have to be done again next year.

"They need to slide it at least to 23 centavos a day," MCClintock said. "But they way they're doing it slowly - is good. It's slow and therefore, there will be no dramatic overnight effects."

Shuffstall said that changing the slide rate a little at a time "is psychologically calming to the people and probably the best way to do it.

UNIQUE and PROGRESSIVE

The Permian Basin depends on the Oil and Gas Industry for its vitality. Home Savings recognizes this and has expanded its Downtown Midland Branch Office to help fuel that vitality.

This NEW facility is unique in that it will meet the needs of the Independent Oil Industry through progressive programs and knowledgeable personnel by providing Energy Financing such as . . .

prevent low-income Mexicans from coming across the border to shop in this country.

"But, I don't see it affecting the middle or upper-class," he said. "The lower strata, they may not be able to afford to shop over here any more. That's prob-ably the only effect we'll see on the border and that's a minimal one

Most U.S. banks have had high exchange rates for the peso since May, when speculation began that a slide change was imminent.

Shuffstall said exchange rates on this side of the bor-

"This change definitely was needed," he said. "It was a good thing. Perhaps more is needed and it could occur.

Mexico's Finance Ministry said the higher daily devaluation rate was made in an attempt to bolster sale of Mexican goods abroad, to increase tourism and to fight inflation

A lower exchange rate is applied to imports and pay ment of foreign debts, and that also is affected by the daily slide. The so-called controlled rate for imports was pegged at 188.08 pesos to the dollar Wednesday.

Europe's economic recovery gaining momentum slowly

By ROBERT BURNS Associated Press Writer

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) - Like an airplane rolling too slowly to take off, the European economic recovery is gaining momentum but still lacks the thrust to propel the region onto a path of sustained growth.

The risk is another recession, per-haps as early as 1986, some economists say.

Norbert Walter, an economist at West Germany's Kiel Institute, does not expect a classic recession in which the region's economy fails to grow at all - as it did between 1980 and 1982.

Instead, economic growth will continue at this year's modest pace but will not be enough to prevent unemployment from rising further, he said.

This "growth recession," as economists call it, "could last until the end of the decade," unless labor costs in Western Europe are put closer in line with those in the United States and Japan, Walter said.

He is not alone in that gloomy view

"Virtually all research institutes agree that there is no prospect whatagree that there is no prospect what-soever of economic growth acce-lerating strongly in the (European) community in the foreseeable future," Belgium's finance minister, Willy De Clercq, told a recent Lon-don economic conference.

Most forecasts say economic growth in the 10 countries of the European Economic Community, or Common Market, will edge up to about 2.3 percent next year from an expected 2.2 percent rate this year.

'That's not enough to lead to a substantial drop in unemployment," said John Evans, an economist at the European Trade Union Institute.

In fact, he and other economists say the unemployment rate in the Common Market will actually increase next year for the sixth straight year - even as it goes down again in the United States.

Nearly 13 million people - about 11 percent of the labor force - are listed on the unemployment rolls of the 10 Common Market countries. Some parts of Western Europe are performing better than others.

Front-runner West Germany is expected to fare much better next year than most of its Continental partners, with economic growth possibly hitting 3 percent and the job-less rate holding at 8.5 percent.

By contrast, forecasters say Belgium will do well to eke out a 1 percent gain in economic growth next year and keep its unemployment rate at 13.4 percent - one of the highest in the region.

Europe's inability to create jobs is perhaps the most dramatic sign of the widening gap in economic performance between this region and its American and Japanese competitors on the world market.

From 1973 to 1983, total employ-ment in the Common Market countries fell by 2 million, while the United States gained more than 15 million jobs, according to the Common Market's Executive Commis-

The gap continues to widen. This ear, the unemployment rate in the Common Market has risen to 11 percent from 10.6 percent last year, while the U.S. jobless rate has dropped to 7.4 percent from 9.6 percent.

Evans, of the European Trade Union Institute, said that if the U.S. economy slows down as expected in 1985, Western Europe will see an end to the boom in U.S. imports that accounted for perhaps one-seventh of the Common Market's total economic growth this year.

"If that happens, the limited growth we have now will disappear," he said. That could mean a recession by the end of next year, he added.

Earlier this fall, the beginning of a new decline in world oil prices raised hopes in Europe that lower energy costs would provide the boost that the region's economy needs to shake it out of the doldrums.

But the drop in oil prices has not yet spread to Europe's largest source of imported oil, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Hardly a meeting of European economic and political thinkers goes by these days without mention of a perceived shift in American attention toward the booming Far East. John Yochelson, director of international business and economics at Georgetown University's Institute for Strategic and International Studies in Washington, told a recent conference on economic change and the NATO alliance that Europe may be missing the boat.

"If current trends continue," he said, "American policies and perspectives will be increasingly influenced by a U.S.-East Asian dynamic over which Europe has lit-tle control."

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Natural Gas Corp. nnounced today it had completed the $390 million urchase of Transwestern Pipeline Co. from Texas

Eastern Corp. HNG and Texas Eastern announced an agreement on Nov. 5 for the purchase of Transwestern, a pipeline firm that delivered 279 billion cubic feet of natural gas from West Texas to customers in Califor-nia and Okiahoms in 1963. Transwestern owns 4,396

Language of SAC-proposed legislation is being reviewed

By Bill Kidd

AUSTIN-Air Control Board and Sunset Advisory Commission staff members are reviewing language of SAC-proposed legislation dealing with ACB permitting practices and other air quality matters.

SAC approved a proposal calling for creation of a special committee to examine questions relating to permitting of existing or "grandfath-ered" facilities not previously required to have permits, renewal and periodic review of permits, and regulation of emissions from ships.

The permit issue has been a matter of dispute between the ACB and industries over the years, with the question of fees for permits--as authorized by the Legislature-resulting in a prolonged controversy before adoption of the current fee schedule.

Legislators, in their search for additional revenues, have been looking at increasing fees charged regulated industries, and the SAC staff has argued such industries should be required to pay one-quarter to one-half the cost of regulation. Industry officials had opposed the fees partly on grounds that there would be calls to increase them to cover more of the cost of ACB's operations--while saying that sincethe benefits of such regulation go to the public, public revenues are the appropriate source for funding that regulation.

At an earlier session this fall, SAC staff proposed that the special committee be appointed by the governor, lieutenant governor and speaker, with representatives of industry and environmental groups, and that the panel report back to the 1987 Legislature.

Commissioner Sam Kelley, Office of the Consumer Credit Commissioner, has asked the State Finance Commission to support a request to the 1985 Legislature for clarification of the OCCC's role in interpreting interest rate legislation

Kelley notes the 1981 Legislature, in HB 1228, apparently gave such authority to the OCCC, but says the language isn't clear.

Kelley has been issuing interpretations of the law for use by borrowers and lenders, and says the OCCC proposes to continue making such interpretations under any new legislation.

But, he says, after having "talked with a great many lenders and their lawyers over the past three years,' he feels all parties "would feel more comfortable if there were some statutory revisions" to make clear the authority of the OCCC.

"As far as I can tell," Kelley adds, the proposal would not cost anyone any money, would not harm or jeopardize anyone ... and would be of benefit particularly to lenders and their lawyers and this office.

The State Finance Commission is to consider the request later this vear.

pregnancy expenses of dependent minors, unless complications requiring hospitalization occur.

SBI was requested to investigate the feasibility of requiring private insurers to provide optional coverage for prenatal, delivery, and pregnancy complication costs for dependent minor children of policyholders.

SBI staffers also have completed the draft of a report, called for by the Senate, on establishment of an assigned risk pool or similar plan for diabetics.

The Senate, in its resolution, said investigation by a special committee indicated persons with diabetes have great difficulty obtaining health and hospitalization coverage.

Such insurance also rarely covers patient education and training programs, the resolution noted-and it called on SBI to work with insurers and to encourage third-party reimbursement of patient education service at pilot projects instituted by the Texas Diabetes Council.

Public Utility Commission Chairman Phil Ricketts says the PUC is continuing development of its legislative proposals for 1985, but that the request will be "a fairly limited package.

PUC is considering asking for additional time for making decisions in rate cases, "because cases have become more complex and lengthier." Ricketts says.

'It's pretty apparent to us that the The study was called for by the the deadlines may not be adequate," he says

Large oil discoveries necessary to replace declining production

WASHINGTON D.C .- Large new domestic oil discoveries will be required to replace declining production from old fields if current oil production in the United States is to be maintained. The Federal Offshore, Alaska North Slope, and other relatively unexplored areas offer the greatest potential for yielding these important new oil fields.

That conclusion is reached in a new study by the Energy Informa-tion Administration (EIA). EIA's report, Impact of Surveillance Fields on Crude Oil Production in the United States, focuses on declining production from 1,606 old, large oil fields that accounted for about three-quarters of U.S. production in 1982. Old fields are defined by EIA as those that produced oil before 1974. the EIA study covers trends from 1974 through 1982. About 11 percent of U.S. oil production 1982 came form the 6,315 new fields that began producing after 1973. Most of these fields were quite small. The report says that small fields will likely continue to be found in the mature producing areas of the United States. However, the EIA report concludes that domestic crude oil production will decline unless major new discoveries and significant advances in oil recovery techniques Calhoun and Kleberg counties; are added. The Federal Offshore, the Alaska North Slope and other relatively unexplored areas offer the best potential for themajor oil discoveries needed by the United States, according to the study.

Total U.S. production has varied less than one percent since the end of 1979 and is currently increasing slightly. Oil fields in the Alaska Norh Slope and the Federal Offshore areas have furnished the most substantial increases in crude oil production necessary to maintain this rate of production for the United States during the past few drilled than in any previous threeyear period. Nonetheless, this oil production continued to decline, but at reduce annual decline rates, from 5.3 percent in 1979 to one percent in 1981, 1.8 percent in 1982, and 1.3 percent in 1983.

The old fields had a composite annual production-decline rate of about three percent for 1980 through 1982. Without production from accelerated in-fill well drilling which generally reserves), production-decline rates for the old fields would have been greater. Production from the old fields is expected to continue declining.

Rig counts unchanged this week

Working rig counts in both the Permian Basin and United States remained virtually unchanged this week.

The Permian Basin count was 376 for the week. Last week the count was 380 and a year ago the total was 360.

Andrews County saw the largest drop for the week - down six to 25. In New Mexico, Eddy and Lea counties lost two rigs each, making their totals 21 and 42 respectively.

Mitchell County lost its two rigs from last week and does not report having any this week.

However, gaining four rigs was Borden County, making its count 9. Glasscock gained three, pushing its number to 17. Terry County reported two new rigs, also. Its total this week is 8.

Nationally, the count was 2686 this week, compared to last week's 2682.

Texas dropped 24 rigs this week, lowering its total from 944 to 920. Utah lost eight rigs, making its total 40 for the week. Also, Kasas lost three rigs, dropping its total from 141 to 138.

Canada showed an increase of 24 rigs, boosting its total from 290 to 314.

Membrane technology makes landfill gas recovery economical

By NICHOLAS D. KRISTOF N.Y. Times News Service

OREGON CITY - Ignoring the mud on his wingtip shoes, John Van Bladeren crouched and flicked a match toward a bubbling pool of water. A small fire danced amid the mud and water, fueled by natural gas percolating up from garbage below

That gas escaped, but much of the methane created from garbage in the landfill does not. It is caught in trenches and pipelines, and nology that proponents say will nomically from landfills all over the nation

Natural gas is already being recovered from about 30 garbage landfills around the country, but until now the purification process has been very expensive. The industry has searched for a way to use membranes that could separate the elements in the gas, and it is at this drab site near Portland that the new

(The Northwest Natural Gas Co. opened the site in September, and pumps the gas directly into its system. The landfill now provides enough methane to heat 3,700 homes, the company says, and it is compiling a list of landfills around the country where the technology could also be used. We had looked at landfill recovery previously, but concluded that it wasn't economical until this technology became available," Ronald T. Miller, the company's president, said in an interview. "Now we think it "cleaned" by a new membrane tech- could be very successful commercially. We're looking over the next allow companies to recover gas eco- five years at investing maybe $60 million, at up to 50 different locations.

It is the natural gas, primarily methane, produced by decomposing garbage that is to blame for the nauseous odor that clings to landfills. Often it is dangerous: A house near Akron, Ohio, exploded in March when gas from a neighboring landfill seeped inside.

Gas companies have sought for technology is being used for the first years to tap this source of methane. but it has been a technological struggle to separate the desired methane from the carbon dioxide that is also present in the gas. Two common methods, liquid chemicals that wash out the carbon dioxide and solids that absorb it, are expensive.

Membranes - which are thin films that look like sandwich wrap and often clutter high school chemistry labs - offered greater promise. They allow the carbon dioxide to pass through and escape while retaining the methane. A small, experimental plant uses membranes at a landfill near Florence, Ala., but it has encountered problems because of temperature differences in the incoming gas.

Northwest Natural Gas avoided that problem by heating the gas to a constant temperature, and it says the gas produced is of very high quality - about 950 British thermal units per cubic foot, compared with the 1,000 BTU's generally obtained from gas in natural wells. Some of the gas is fed back to run the separation plant while the rest is pumped into the company's distribution system.

whole industry has been waiting for a successful method of membrane separation," said Eugene H. Luntley, chairman and chief executive of the Brooklyn Union Gas Co. "We did a lot of work in this area a few years ago, and our impression was that it wasn't ready yet. We'll be watching these results very closely."

Brooklyn Union now operates, with Getty Synthetic Fuels, what is probably the largest landfill recovery operation in the United States, at the Fresh Kills Landfill on Staten Island. Its capacity is 5 million cubic feet a day, five times that of the Oregon plant, but it cost $22 million to build, compared with $1.4 million for the Oregon facility.

The operators declined to disclose the cost of production at the Staten Island plant, but Brooklyn Union pays $5.50 per million BTU's for the - presumably a markup. Northgas west Natural Gas says its production cost from the landfill is $2.50 per million BTU's. The first step in recovering the

"There is no question that the contain trash such as paper and it so that it could be used commerwood instead of concrete or toxic wastes. Radioactive materials or chemicals could contaminate the gas and enter a home through a distribution system, according to Van Bladeren, an engineer who is vice president for operations at Northwest.

Wells are dug in the landfill, and sometimes trenches as well, with perforated pipes that the gas can enter. Decomposing garbage prod-uces gas immediately and continues to do so for decades.

Compressors draw the gas along the pipes to an unmanned processing station. Water is drained from the pipes, while two carbon-activated filters extract most trace contaminants. Then the gas, which is about 45 percent carbon dioxide, enters a bulwark of cylinders containing the acetate membranes. The gas runs through the membranes, which are made by the Separex Corp. of Houston, up to three times to reduce the carbon dioxide levels to a tolerable 10 to 15 percent.

The carbon dioxide is then gas is to find a suitable landfill. It released into the atmosphere, but should be deep with garbage and Northwest is considering purifying

Oilmen split over flat tax issue at political convention

Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON - At the Republican National Convention in Dallas last August, Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., met with a group of independent oilmen, a powerful force in GOP politics. All were wearing "flattax" buttons.

Dole, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, told the group he was surprised to see such altruism.

He asked if they knew that a flat tax would mean killing the oil depletion allowance, a $1.1 billion-peryear tax break, not to mention eliminating another $2.2 billion-peryear provision allowing a one-year writeoff for oil-exploration and development costs.

By the end of the session, the flattax buttons had disappeared.

The ambivalence of the oilmen is an early indication of what may prove to be the most difficult issue before the 99th Congress next year - major alteration of the federal income-tax system.

The business community is deeply split on proposals for a flat tax. which would do away with most tax deductions and preferences in favor of a lower overall tax rate.

Businesses with high effective tax rates love the idea; capital-intensive businesses, such as heavy industry with numerous preferences that result in their paying low or no taxes are gearing up for a free-forlar tax breaks. Tax-revision organizations, such as Citizens for Tax Justice, have jumped into the fray, hoping to take advantage of the business community's division to do away with preferences. The insurance industry was one of the first groups to begin a full-scale public-relations campaign to protect key tax preferences.

The American Council of Life Insurance and the Health Insurance Association of America each have ponied up $700,000 to finance television commercials designed to boost public support for the largest tax preference, $56.3 billion for the exclusion from income tax of pension contributions, and the $20.2 billion exclusion for employer contributions to employe medical coverage.

Administration sources said top Treasury Department officials have recommended, as part of the administration's plan to revamp the tax code, the elimination of the accelerated depreciation schedule for business, the Accelerated Cost Recovery System.

Charls Walker, a lobbyist whose capital-intensive clients want to protect such big-ticket tax preferences, dismisses "pure" flat-tax proposals as political dead horses.

They talk about eliminating pension exclusions, including IRAs. That's retirement. Then there's mortgage deductions. That's home.

all to protect their multibillion-dol- Then there's medical-insurance but profitable - companies as Genexclusions. That's health. You add mother, and you get the damnedest backfield since the Four Horsemen of Notre Dame," he said.

But Dirk Van Dongen, executive vice president of the National Association of Wholesaler-Distributors, said, "Our interest (in major tax revision) is a positive one. Our industry has an effective tax rate of 36 percent, which is one of the highest.

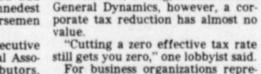

Van Dongen and Walker have been allies in past tax battles, but this year there is the potential for a bloodletting within the business the whole package and the impact community

Walker and Van Dongen represent what could prove to be the fundamental split within the business community between "low-tax" and "high-tax" corporations, between firms that benefit from a system of numerous special preferences, and those that do not.

The growing awareness of the wide range of tax rates paid by U.S. corporations has produced a new Coalition to Reduce High Effective Tax Rates, which includes such firms as IBM, 3M, Dart and Kraft, General Foods, General Mills, the American Business Conference, the Grocery Manufacturers and the American Apparel Manufacturers. For these companies and groups, there is a major advantage to a tax "reform" that trades cutbacks in tax preferences for an overall reduction in tax rates.

For such low- or non-tax-paying - senting a broad cross section of corporations, there is no clear way to resolve the conflict. We have not endorsed any particular proposal," said Richard Rahn, chief economist for the Chamber of Commerce. "We would have to see on capital formation. For the moment, the business community generally has avoided public divisions on the low-tax-hightax corporate split.

There also is a substantial public conflict over a second basic question: Should taxes be hiked to reduce the deficit?

The old-guard Committee for Economic Development, an organization of 200 corporate presidents and chairmen, has called for a combination of spending cuts and tax hikes, including a tax surcharge on individuals and corporations.

Bankruptcy court judge extends deadlines for Storage Technology

By DANIEL A. BEUCKE The Denver Post

DENVER - A bankruptcy court judge has granted extra time for Storage Technology Corp. to file voluminous lists of stockholders, contracts, assets, liabilities and other items.

Meanwhile, an attorney representing a committee of Stora geTek's creditors said that an announcement on a line of credit, which had been expected Tuesday, should come Wednesday.

"We're making Mountain Bell rich," Carl Eklund, the Denver-based counsel for the creditors committee said of the telephone company. "I've never been on so many conference calls in my life.

Eklund said that the loan agreement, reportedly worth $80 million or more to the Louisville, Colo-based company, is "a complex deal" that "has to be read to be understood." As of Tuesday evening, he said, creditors had not fully approved the agreement.

StorageTek's extension for filing schedules was approved Monday by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Jay Gueck here. StorageTek, noting that it has "thousands " will he executo contracts allowed to file a statement of affairs on Dec. 10; schedules of liabilities and lists of stockholders on Jan. 10; a schedule of assets, Feb. 10; and lists of contracts, March 10. The company filed for bankruptcy protection Oct.

In a deal with its foreign banks, StorageTek also asked the court to subordinate debts owed to the company by its European subsidiaries behind claims of those banks. The foreign banks could accelerate loan payments, which might lead to liquidation of the subsidiaries in Great Britain, France, Italy and elsewhere, or to criminal proceedings against StorageTek managers.

Pending the court's approval, StorageTek agreed to have accounts payable and long-term debt owed to it by the subsidiaries subordinated to loans made by the banks to the subsidiaries.

The banks agreed to withdraw their demands for immediate payment, giving StorageTek time to evaluate how the subsidiaries figure into its reorganization plans. That evaluation won't be completed until midthe company said

West's first energy boom left radioactive uranium

By IVER PETERSON N.Y. Times News Service

DENVER - The West's first modern energy boom was in uranium, an industry in deep recession nowadays that has left a legacy of hundreds of mounds of radioactive uranium mill tailings scattered from New Mexico to Wyoming.

Now there is evidence that the region's latest energy boom, in oil and gas development, may be leav-ing its own pollution legacy in the form of contaminated ground water.

The nonprofit Southwest Research and Information Center, in its new quarterly report, surveyed state records and several oil and natural gas installations in New Mexico, and found eight whose nearby ground water was contaminated with petroleum extraction and refining products. The problem, according to the report, may be sharpest in parts of the West but it exists nationally.

"Liquid and solid wastes from the oil and natural gas industry - the largest industry in the U.S. and the world - contain some of the most toxic chemicals known to science, wrote Chris Shuey in the report of the center, which is a nonprofit environmental and social research group. "The evidence is mounting that those substances are making their way into underground supplies of drinking water at an alarming rate, and that the impacts on ground water are occurring in both urban and rural areas."

The report, which focused on New Mexico, said the polluted ground water was in some instances responsible for illnesses in humans. The report, in the October-December issue of the quarterly, Workbook, attributed the leukemia of a longtime refinary worker in Prewitt, N.M., to benzene contamination of his well water, for example.

Ground water contamination is an emerging political issue in the West and Southwest, where many cities depend on deep wells for municipal water. Nationally, about half of all Americans get their drinking water from underground sources.

Most of the power to enforce ground water cleanliness laws lies with state governments, and in recent years conflicts over ground water pollution have arisen, among others, between New Mexico and Arizona, because of differing enforcement standards.

Of all of Denver's assets, its glassy skyline, sunny skies, its football team, the city is proudest of the oldest: its view of the Rocky Mountains

The rolling range of sharp snowcovered peaks surrounding Mount Evans's high crest has probably appeared on more travel brochures and postcards home than any other view of the city

Now the the right to enjoy Mount Evans and the lesser peaks has been affirmed in a first court test of the city's little-used Mountain View Law, which stipulates that no building may block the westward view from any city park. It was only a limited skirmish in the continuing tussle between stability and growth in one of the country's fastest growing metropolitan areas, and the homeowners who temporarily hit on the Mountain View law in their efforts to block a new development may have won only a temporary victory Builders in Denver's booming southern reaches have already cut several housing developments off from the view with a thickening graphline of high-rise apartments and offices. Homeowners in the Southmoor Park development, when faced with the same prospect, first fought the complex with traditional objections to increased density and congestion. When these failed, the homeowners hit upon the 16-yearold Mountain View Law, which was passed before the city's boom of the last decade. A state court upheld the homeowners.

The developers argued that the little-used law was only seized upon by the homeowners as a pretext to keep apartments away from their single-family homes, and is appealing the ruling

But Felicia Muftic, president of the Southmoor Park East Homeowners Association, replied that there was something larger at stake. The view of the mountains, she said, is what makes Denver different from Cleveland.

A yurt census is under way in Teton County, Wyo., where some residents have begun to object to having neighbors live in yurts, the circular tents, usually of felt, favored by nomadic Mongols.

After a shaky start, a coalition of tent-dwellers appears to have blunted efforts to ban the yurts outright, however.

Yurts and another inexpensive shelter, the teepee, began appearing recently just below Yellowstone National Park as more and more oung people moved to Wyoming's northwest corner in search of breathtaking scenery and solitude. A cluster of more than a dozen yurts and teepees also appeared near Kelly, adjoining the National Elk Refuge.

They prompted a complaint that the camps violated county ordinances against permanent tent dwellings, an ordinance passed in

Finally a committee was formed, first to find out how many yurts, tepees and the like there really were, and then to find out whether the customs of the Gobi Desert and of the Northern Plains could be made to match the standards of the nodern West

Many Americans will move to London easily, prominently

LONDON (AP) - Many American businessmen and esswomen will come to London for work and will return home three, four or five years later - back to the land of efficient telephones, relatively docile trade unions and cold beer.

But there are other Americans who settle into Lon-don more or less permanently. Some stay because they like the city's ambiance, its civility, its sophistication, its rich social and cultural life. Some remain because they find exceptional opportunities here. And some stay in England simply by chance. They tend to lead thoroughly British lives; their employees and most of their friends are British. And they look down a little, although they wouldn't admit it, on their compatriots who spend the bulk of their time in Britain surrounded by Americans at work and play.

The American colony in London is probably the largest in Europe, and some of its members play highly prominent roles in British life, enjoying a fame that American expatriates don't often attain elsewhere abroad. The common language certainly has something to do with their ascendency, and the pro-business cli-mate engendered by the Tory government has not hurt.

Here are the stories of two of the most prominent American executives who make their homes today near the banks of the Thames:

The Manager

Richard V. Giordano got a promotion the other day. Already the chief executive officer of the BOC Group once known as the British Oxygen Corp., and now active in industrial gases, health care and other fields - he was named chairman as well. But he is best known to the British public by another, less official title: Britain's Highest-Paid Executive. He made 521,500 pounds last year, which even with the slump in sterling amounted to $625,800, twice as much as any other top British executive earned and equal, someone calculated not long ago, to the combined annual emolument of 38 archbishops

The British, as a people, are consumed with jealousy about other people's pay, but Giordano has gotten off lightly; one newspaper headline said the 50year-old executive was "cheap at the price."

Why? Because Giordano, a lanky, articulate first-generation American, the son of Italian immigrants to New Jersey, has delivered the goods. He came here with his wife and three children in 1979, shortly after he had lost a bruising fight with BOC: as president of an American competitor called Airco, he tried to resist a BOC takeover bid, lost, and was asked to head the combined operation. He found, he said recently, "too many people and too much diversification" at BOC.

Giordano sold off operations that he considered illsuited to the group, such as pizza factories and fish farms. But he acquired others in BOC's principal fields, including new home health care operations in the United States. And he trimmed the BOC staff from 22,000 to fewer than 11,000. After a small hiccup, sales have risen from $1.46 billion in 1979 to $2.04 billion last year and in the same five years profits have gone up, too, to $66 million from $44 million.

To gain BOC some publicity, Giordano turned to his own hobby, sailing. The company sponsored one of the more epic yacht races in history, Newport in Rhode Island to Capetown in South Africa to Sydney in Australia to Rio de Janeiro in Brazil and then back to Newport, with 16 intrepid solo sailors competing.

Although Giordano conceded that he "wouldn't want to mine coal here." he said he thought Britain was "undersold" as a place to do business. He commented: The truth is that there has been a lot of progress in labor relations. It's now easier to get rid of surplus employees in this country than in France or Germany.

If I had to build a new European plant tomorrow. I'd build it in Britain for sure." He also sees new blood flowing into commerce and industry. "Once you had to sound as if you went to Oxbridge, but now it's almost fashionable to have a Yorkshire accent," said Giordano, himself a graduate of Harvard and Columbia University Law School.

The Researcher

In search of fame and fortune, he had gotten as far as an advertising agency in Omaha when he and his first wife decided they would rather be in Washington, Princeton, San Francisco or London. He made it to London - where he now commands a paneled office overlooking St. James's Park, a house in Belgravia and a 15th-century hideaway in Kent - and, after a divorce, she made it to San Francisco.

He owns 80 percent of Market and Opinion Research International, the successor to the London branch of the Opinion Research Corp. that he set up in 1969. MORI (the acronym has become almost as well-known in Britain as MP or RAF) is the largest company of its kind in the country; it does more polls on more questions for more clients than any of its competitors.

Bullock says low oil prices hurt budget

AUSTIN-State comptroller Bob Legislature. Bullock has said Texans can expect worse budget problems ahead if the been selling for less than a gallon of price of oil on world spot markets ontinues to drop.

Bullock warned Legislators and other state leader, "I am very fearful that if the price of oil keeps plunging. I'm going to be forced to reduce my estimate of revenues available for the January session of the State

"I am told a gallon of gasoline has unrefined crude oil on the spot market. This might be good news for consumers, but it will be bad news for Texas state budget writers who are already facing a $640 million revenue shortage.

'My staff is watching developments in the world oil market hour by hour but it will be until some time next spring before anybody will be able to say just, how far the price of oil might fall.

'A cold snap in the Northestern United States might drive up demand and the price of Texas oil. But if it doesn't, the Legislature can expect a hot time next January. It's beginning to look a lot like 1983.

NEW YORK (AP) — Investing in the volatile airline stocks is seldom for the fainthearted, and despite sharp gains in airline earnings this year, the outlook for the shares again shows it helps to have steely nerves

There certainly was cause for the jitters over the past 18 months. In the summer of 1983, many of the stocks nosedived, only to pull up sharply in the fall. They sank again early in 1984, then rebounded again in the third quarter.

So far this year, the airline stocks tracked by Standard & Poor's Corp. still trail the performance of S&P's composite index of 500 stocks, a key market gauge.

The third-quarter upswing came as evidence mounted that the airlines would record one of their best aggregate earnings years since being deregulated in 1978.

Now, however, there are signs the upward profit trend might be flattening, raising questions as to whether the stocks also have peaked, some analysts said.

"For some time the market has been putting a discounted (priceearnings) multiple on very strong 1984 earnings, and to me that's an indication that it's recognized the earnings cycle is maturing," said Alfred Norling of Kidder, Peabody & Co.

"Airlines are highly cyclical, they pay practically no dividends, so the only thing that moves the stocks is the expectation of higher earnings or a very strong market," he said.

Airline stocks are beholden to economic cycles, and most obervers. expect much slower economic growth in 1985 relative to this year. But some Wall Streeters see room for 1985 earnings gains, given favorable developments in the industry. Fuel costs, the airlines' second largest expense behind labor, are down. Selected carriers have achieved labor concessions. Passenger traffic has picked up from its sluggish pace early this year. The lower fuel costs also contributes to lower inflation. That raises consumers' disposable income. which could be used for traveling. noted Ron Moreno of Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co.

But there is a key area of concern yield, which in airline parlance is the amount of money an airline receives for flying one passenger one mile.

If an airline lowers fares, it can fly the same number of people to the same locations at the same cost as it did a year earlier, but its yield will fall

In the early 1980s, indiscriminate fare wars devastated income statements. The price battles have abated somewhat this year, helping to lift yields and bolster earnings.

However, UAL Inc. Chairman Richard J. Ferris told analysts last week that United Airline's yield already was softening and that yields industrywide "will remain under pressure" in 1985.

The industry, he said, "will have quite a challenge recording meaningful revenue gains in 1985.

The reason: Even though some low-cost competitors have retrenched, such as Braniff Inc., or have stopped flying, such as Capitol Air, other rivals will continue to spark fare-cutting in certain markets, to which United and others must often respond in order to protect market share.

Continental Airlines, a unit of Texas Air Corp., and People Express Airlines are the two competitors that United fears will try to expand their cost-cutting ways, Ferris said.

United and other major carriers have tried responses that limit their vield erosion, namely by requiring advance ticket purchases or otherwise restricting the lower fares, or by raising fares elsewhere.

Regardless, "in two-thirds of our markets, we have lowered ticket prices because of fare reductions by competitors," Ferris said. Hence, even though United's third-quarter passenger traffic rose 7 percent from a year earlier, its yield edged up only 2 percent, he said.

Ferris concluded by telling the analysts their 1985 earnings estimates for the industry were "a little high," and the stocks responded as might be expected, with UAL, AMR Corp. and Delta Air Lines all losing more than a point that day.

Investors also must consider whether the recent runup in the stocks' prices means the issues have peaked for the near term, analysts said "There don't appear to be any car-riers undervalued relative to their group," Moreno said.

Analysts said individual selection is particularly important in the airline sector, which is one of the most debt-laden in the market.

In addition to a carrier's debt load, the state of its aircraft, its passenger mix, competition on its routes and the prospect of fare wars on those routes are among the factors that must be evaluated.

For example, about two-thirds of USAir's passengers are business travelers, "who are less price-sensitive than other carriers' customers, typically a 50-50 mix of business and pleasure riders," Mark Daugherty of Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. recently wrote. For that reason, USAir "is uniquely positioned to prosper even when fare wars erupt," he said.

NEW YORK (AP) - The nation's toy manufacturers are gleefully predicting record-breaking fourth-quarter sales as consumers display hearty yuletide spirit for buying traditional toys, Standard & Poor's Corp. said Sunday.

Paul Valentine, toy industry analyst for the business reporting company, said toy sales during the final three-month period will climb at least 25 percent over last year's strong results, despite a grinch-like market for video games, whose sales declined 60 percent from last year's slump.

Standard & Poor's said consumers are using the money they would have spent on video games two years ago, to buy more traditional toys such as dolls, action figures, robots and board games, setting industry sales records.

Sales of Trivial Pursuit, the cash crop of board games, will surge to $750 million by year end, jumping nearly four-fold compared with sales for all board games last year, S&P said.

Toys that transform into fantastic robot creations from ordinary-looking first place in toy sales, Standard & Poor's said. The competition is lead by Tonka Corp.'s "GoBots" and Hasbro Bradley Inc.'s "Transformers," it said.

Valentine said the use of sophisticated marketing techniques and the use of fantasy as a key selling factor is behind the hotest sales.

"Nearly every top-selling toy comes with its own pre-packaged fantasy," he said adding that advertisers have developed television shows around many of the toys. 'And while some have suggested that these television shows are little more than extended commercials, there's no questioning their effectiveness as marketing tools. "As far as the toy industry is concerned, I think the principle is a sim-ple one," he said. "If you can stimulate a kid's imagination, then you can usually stimulate their parents to open up their wallets."

A decline in world oil prices and a depressed domestic natural gas market have halted the escalation of severance tax receipts. When oil prices soared after the 1973 Arab oil embargo, state governments became increasingly dependent upon the petroleum industry as a source of tax revenues. It should now be recognized that state and local governments must achieve a responsible fiscal balance through some alternative'

California, fourth in oil and seventh in gas production, does not have a severance tax as such. Equivalent taxes are paid through a county-administered ad valorem system, with variable rates. Kansas did not have a severance tax until May of 1983.

Reagan administration labor strategy questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) - In his second administration, President Reagan "must rid his staff of their inor-dinate fear of union leadership," says an influential conservative organization.

In a still unpublished analysis of labor policies during the president's first term, the Heritage Foundation asserted that "perhaps the key Rea-gan administration failure was the lack of a genuine labor policy."

The chapter on labor, part of the foundation's 600-page report entitled "Mandate for Leadership II," said that Reagan "proved himself quite proficient in speaking directly to the interests of union members despite the different agenda of the union

A copy of the chapter on labor policy in the second Reagan administration was obtained by The Associated Press. The report is scheduled to be released publicly late this month.

"No official at the White House seemed to understand labor relations or the need for a cohesive labor policy," the report said.

Douglas Riggs, a presidential labor adviser, did not return telephone calls seeking his views on the foundation's conclusions.

Post to acquire Kaplan centers

By PHILLIP H. WIGGINS N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK - The Washington Post Co. announced Tuesday that it had agreed in principle to acquire the privately held Stanley H. Kaplan Educational Centers from the owners, Stanley H. Kaplan and mem-bers of his family.

Financial terms of the transaction

Financial terms of the transaction were not disclosed. Kaplan will become a subsidiary of the Washington Post Co. and retain its current management. The New York City-based company, which is the largest in its field, oper-ates more than 120 permanent and many temporary educational cen-ters across the country. It has a proters across the country. It has a pro-jected enrollment of 95,000 students in 1984.

Kaplan prepares students for a broad range of admissions tests and licensing examinations, including Scholastic Aptitude Tests and legal and medical tests.

"There has been a lot publicity — both good and bad — on the advantages of training centers recently, said Richard Atorino, publishing analyst at Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co.

Almost since the Scholastic Apptitude Test was first given to students applying to colleges and universities in 1926, educators have been debating whether studying for the test helps at all. The validity of training centers such as Kaplan, however, was bolstered by a 1978 report by the Federal Trade Commission that showed that both math and verbal scores could be raised an average of 25 points through preparation. Per-fect scores on each of the tests is

The Kaplan centers also offer such courses as speed reading and English as a second language.

Guyon Knight, a spokesman for the Washington Post Co., said of Kaplan, "It's an excellent business that provides a valuable service, and we're always on the lookout for such enterprises.

The Washington Post Co. is pri-marily engaged in publishing The Washington Post, the principal newspaper in the Washington, D.C. area, and Newsweek magazine. The company also operates four television stations and has expanded into the cellular radio telephone field and into regional sports program-ming for the pay cable and subscription TV markets.

Atorino of Smith Barney commented that the company had "a portfolio of ventures none of which seem to tie together but all have some promise.

MIDLAND REPORTER-TELEGRAM, SUN. DEC. 9, 1984

LTV Corp. finds way to save half-million dollars each year

By FRED R. BLEAKLEY N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK - George H. Simon, director of benefits accounting and administration for the LTV Corp., recently found a way to save $500,000, or more, each year.

He told the dozen money management firms that invest $1 billion of LTV's pension assets in the stock market to direct, whenever possible, some of their brokerage business to Rochdale Securities. Rochdale and other similar "conduit" brokers, in turn, direct some of the commissions to pay for other outside services used by the plan, including record keeping and actuarial work. This allows LTV, in effect, to recapture some of the money it was paying in brokerage.

Simple as it may seem, the growing use of this practice - which hundreds of corporations follow or are actively considering - has touched off a raging controversy on Wall Street and in the money management world. Moreover, experts say, it could well become the catalyst for changes in the securities business even more far-reaching than those that followed the negotiation of institutional commission rates in 1975.

"This issue has wide ramifications," noted Jack Pope, chief financial officer of American Airlines, who is currently questioning his outside money managers on how they allocate the $5 million to $10 million in annual stock commissions generated on behalf of his company's pension and profit-sharing plan.

Until now, the money managers themselves have been able to use some of the extra funds to pay for research they buy from outside analysts. To the extent they lose this flexibility, they may have to pay for more research themselves, or cut back.

Other losers are likely to be the Wall Street houses. Pension funds' efforts to recapture commissions could pare brokerage revenues at a time when the slow pace of trading is already taking its toll.

The money managers are not sitting idle in this battle over commissions. Some of them are trying to resist the pressure from their pension clients to steer commissions. Recently, for instance, a major West Coast money management firm, the Capital Guardian Trust Co., told a number of brokers it would pay only 5 cents a share for easy trades (those that do not require capital committment by a broker), rather then the going 8 to 10 cents.

This, in turn, puts pressure on the conduit brokers who had been splitting their commissions with the pension funds. Since Capital said it was also willing to pay a higher rate than normal for difficult trades, the ones the conduit brokers rarely see, major Wall Street firms say that, for now, they do not intend to compete for Capital's 5-cents-a-share business. As everyone jockeys for position, there is universal agreement that something has to give. Ultimately, industry experts say, the result may be a commission rate war leading to an entirely different pricing system: one in which brokers would charge more, or less, for varying degrees of trading difficulty. For many brokers, especially those without the stomach to commit their own capital to attract the difficult trades, the fate of the research they provide and jobs of the analysts who produce it — would be in jeopardy unless they could command a cash fee in the open market.

In essence, a sleeping giant has awakened. Altogether, there are about $500 billion of pension fund assets earmarked for the stock market. Those assets could generate about $2 billion a year in brokerage commissions to Wall Street. Now, many pension plans, such as that of sions, after all, come out of pension the Consolidated Foods Corp., are plan assets, he added. Some finan-trade. own funds to facilitate a tough than the circuitous method of recap-ture she now employs. expecting their money managers to divert up to 40 percent of commis-sons to help defray plan expenses. It was the bull market that began in August 1982 that set the stage for what is now going on. With trading volume surging to well over 100 million shares a day, commissions gushed like never before. Money managers found they could afford to divert some of the brokerage commmissions away from traditional firms, which offered large trading desks as well as research, to a dozen or so small, specialized brokerage firms that had contracts with independent research vendors.

Called "third-party research", these outside vendors include Chase Econometrics, an economic consulting firm, and a number of quantitative and technical analysis firms which provide new, and often esoteric, ways of analyzing stocks and historical trends in the market. The purchase, with commissions, of this third-party research blossomed, with brokerage commitments this year estimated at more than $400 million.

Pension administrators then decided they, too, should have a piece of the action. For one thing, the proliferation of commission-paid third-party research put a price tag on the portion of the commission that supported the execution of the easy orders and the portion that could be used for other purposes. In addition, administrators heard stories about some of the uses of commission dollars. Jesup & Lamont Securities, for instance, recently whisked money managers to Europe for an "investment seminar" paid for with $15,000 in commissions. What the pension administrators realized, said Pope of American Airlines, was that "there is a lot of money being spent that may not be of a lot of benefit to us." Commiscial experts also question whether all of the research being purchased is needed.

Not all pension administrators are jumping on the bandwagon. Some say the diversion of commissions away from the major Wall Street bouses might result in poorer execution of trades. As David Feldman, investment manager of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co.'s $35 billion pension plan, said: "It's penny wise and pound foolish to save 4 or 5 cents per share in commissions and lose an eighth of a point, 121/2 cents, on the trade.'

Nonetheless, Feldman said he still might opt to recapture business, and it is clear that pension-directed commission business is growing fast. James Balog, an executive at Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., predicts that by mid-1985, there will be as much in pension-directed business as there is in third-party research. But at the same time, steps are being taken to halt the incursion.

Some major brokers, despite their declared intent to hold the line on rates, in recent weeks have been calling upon money managers, including the investment subsidiary of the Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. and the Pacific Investment Management Co. If prevailing commissions are lowered for the easy trades that now flow to the third-party conduit firms, the brokers (whose names the money managers would not disclose) are wondering if they will get the business back.

These brokers have been hurt because they have lost some of the easy orders to third-party firms. Previously, this business had compensated them for the research they provided, and for the losses they incurred, when committing their

Even if the brokers themselves do not start a rate war, some pension funds may do it for them. Pope of American Airlines, and a number of pension administrators, including Feldman of AT&T, said the best system may well an unbundled one, in which each investment service is priced competitively on its own merits. Martha Binzel, manager of Treasury investments for Consolided Foods, said she, too, would prefer an unbundled approach, because her pension plan would then benefit from lower commissions - rather

Pope said that pension plans such as his might start the ball rolling by instructing their money managers to negotiate an unbundled rate structure for trading. If that results in savings for the pension plan, he said he would be willing to funnel it back to the money managers to allow them to pay cash for the extra research services that will directly benefit the plan.

Pope said that within the next few months he may well try that approach, which he termed "a micro answer to a macro problem."

NEW YORK - The Securities and Exchange Commission is in the midst of the largest insider trading investigation ever conducted by the agency, "both in terms of the number of securities traded and the amount of possibly illegal profits involved," the agency has disclosed in a court filing.

The investigation centers on a Swiss brokerage firm, Ellis A.G., and on "many individuals" residing in the Borough Park section of Brooklyn who traded in the same U.S. securities as Ellis before takeover announcements, between November 1981 and the first half of this year, the SEC said.

The investigation came to light in the press last July, but the SEC did not confirm the reports at the time. Previous accounts in the press have said that as much as $40 million in profits may be involved in the SEC investigation.

The commission disclosed the investigation in documents filed Monday in Federal District Court in New York City as a response to an attempt by two individuals, Berel and Sarah Light, to keep the SEC from receiving information about their bank accounts. The court ruled Tuesday that the SEC had the right to the information Ellis A.G., an affiliate of a major Swiss bank, A. Sarasin & Cie. of Basel, "purchased for its own account or for customer accounts common stock and call options in more than 40 U.S. companies which were subsequently the subject of public announcements of merger, takeover attempts or other changes in corpo-rate control," the commission said in the court papers. The companies whose securities were purchased include the Hanna Mining Co., the Marathon Oil Co. and Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. Berel Light, who the SEC said resided in Fair Lawn, N.J., formerly lived in Borough Park and currently owned a home in Brooklyn, was described in the court papers as "an active securities trader who maintains numerous securities brokerage accounts.

On at least 10 occasions since June 1983, Light and Ellis purchased the securities of the same companies before takeover announcements, including Carter Hawley Hale Stores Inc. and the Jewel Cos. this year, the SEC said. Gary Lynch, the associate director of enforcement for the SEC, declined to comment Wednesday on whether any of Light's trades had been conducted through Ellis A.G.

The phone number listed for Light was busy for several hours Wednesday afternoon and his lawyer. Bruce Schaeffler of Townley & Updike, New York City, did not return a phone call. A secretary for the lawyer in New York representing Ellis A.G. said the lawyer was out of the office and could not be reached. The SEC indicated in its court filing that Swiss bank secrecy laws had hindered its investigation. Nonetheless, the agency's investigation has disclosed that many individuals residing in Brooklyn, particularly in the Borough Park section, "have traded in the same securities prior to successful takeover announcements during the same approximate time period as Ellis on numerous occasions," the SEC said

Ellis was also mentioned Wednesday in connection with another prominent insider trading case, one involving the former manager of office services of Sullivan & Cromwell, a New York law firm. In September, Alan Ihne, office services manager, and several other individuals were indicted in a case involving insider trading violations and the dissemination of information about corporate takeovers.

Wednesday, the U.S. attorney's office filed a superseding indictment naming for the first time David Rapaport, a former partner of the New York brokerage firm of Paul L. Forchheimer & Co.

TI introduces powerful, portable computer

Staff Reports

AUSTIN-Pro-Lite, reportedly the most powerful and versatile briefcase-size personal computer on the market, has been announced by Texas Instruments. The Pro-Lite computer offers new opportunities for highly mobile professionals - such as salespeople, insurance agents, auditors and consultants - to be more productive. Pro-Lite is compatible allowing to run a large selection of best selling software along with vertical market software developed for a small business or a Fortune 1000 sales force.

Depending on the industry application, data that can increase productivity may take the form of inventory status reports, marketing data, order/shipment status or customer reports and presentations. Timely data provided by Pro-Lite can increase the effectiviness of an on-site customer or sales call.

According to Eric Jones, president of TI's Data Systems Group, "True portability is a key requirement for many mobile professionals. TI pioneered the portable computer terminal 15 years ago and has been a leader in this market ever since with our Silent 700 family of products. The TI Pro-Lite represents a very neutral convergence of our portable terminal and professional computer products, and thus is a very important extension of our overall strategy." Jones predicted that the advance features of Pro-Lite will attract many new users whose needs for portability and performance requirements can now be met.

The TI Pro-Lite computer features a 12-inch liquid crystal display that shows 80 columns by 25 lines - the same line capacity as typical desktop prsonal computer displays. The high resolution LCD screen can display either characters or complex graphics. An external color or monochrome video display monitor will be offered as an option.

With up to 768,000 bytes of Random Access Memory, the Pro-Lite can easily accomodate complex integrated software packages such as Ashton-Tate's Framework. The large-memory capacity will allow Pro-Lite to take advantage of future expert system and natural language products that are currently emerging from TI's work in artificial inteligence.

The entry-level configuration of the Pro-Lite computer includes 256,000 bytes of memory. Its central processing unit consists of a 16-bit 80C88 microprocessor, with an 80C87 numeric co-processor available as an

The 10.5 pound Pro-Lite has a sinle, industry-standard 3.5 inch floppy disk drive. Diskette storage capacity is 720,000 bytes - about twice the capacity of most desktop PC diskettes. With a unique PC interface cable, Pro-Lite can exchange data files with other members of the TI Professional Computer family and the IBM PC product line.

> The modular design of the Pro-Lite computer allows users to easily configure a system that meets their needs. Through an expansion box that attaches to the back of the Pro-Lite, either a second disk drive or battery pack - or both - can be added. In addition, an internal 300 baud modem is available as an option

The Pro-Lite modem plugs is not one of the tow internal option slots. The remaining option slot can accomodate one of the following: an RS-232 synch/asynch interface, an external monitor (color or monochrome) interface, or programmable Solid State Software modules for application-specific needs.

An external parallel prot for conncting a printer comes with the basic unit as standard. The TI Pro-

Lite computer has an optional 45 character-per-second thermal transfer printer that uses either plain or thermal paper. Pro-Lite is also compatible with most other leading printers, including the OMNI 800 series of microprinters.

The keyboard has 79 full-size, fulltravel keys in a typewriter-style lay-out. It includes 12 programmable function keys and an embedded numeric keypad for use with calculator, spreadsheet, and database management sofware.

With 256K bytes of Random Access Memory (RAM) and one diskette drive, TI's suggested list price is $2,995.

Texas bankers join Mattox in opposing "non-banks"

AUSTIN-John Shivers, president nf the Independent Bankers Association Texas, was issued a statement supporting Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox's decision to put U.S. Comptroller of the Currency C. Todd Conover on notice that the State of Texas would file suit to prevent any "non-bank" bank from opening its doors in Texas. Conover, last week, advised applicants for these "non-bank" banks to rush to establish such operations as soon as they receive approval, and that the applicants should pay no attention to the commitment of the chairmen of the U.S. Senate and House Banking Committees to act early next year to close this loophole to U.S. Banking law retroactive to July 1, 1983. The Attorney General stated in a letter to Conover that Texas does not wish to see any "non-bank" bank open its doors in our state. The State of Texas has never exercisedits right, delegated to it by Congress, to permit any deposit-taking

y out-of-state banks within our borders. Shivers stated that the comptroller's decision to circumvent Congressional intent was a flagrant abuse of "regulatroy authority," and that Texas does not want deposits taken out of our state by giant banks from New York, California, and other larger banking states that have a history of making "uncollectable" loans to developing and third world countries. Shivers said the 'non-bank" banks are just trying to attempt to use our "good" dollars to cover their "bad" debt. There are at least 30 "non-bank" bank aplications for Texas locations that have been submitted by 18 separate bank holding companies headquartered outside of Texas. Mattox told the comptroller that he would seek immediate judicial redress to block the opening of "non-bank" banks within Texas.

Shivers stated that the presence of any "non-bank" bank was a serious threat to the sound banking system that we are privileged to have in Texas and that a relatively unregulated financial institution such as a 'non-bank" bank posed a serious threat to the consumer of Texas.

OSHA's action is effective immediately.

Under the agency's targeting sys-tem for routine safety inspections in the manufacturing sector, OSHA visits firms in high-hazard industries and conducts walkaround inspections at those workplaces with worse-than-average lost workday

"This program enables OSHA to target its resources effectively in the manufacturing sector," he said. Business and Industry pages offer unique advertising format a

Changes are being made

Every business has a story to or taking the pictures, themtell and the Business and Industry pages in the Midland Reporter-Telegram is the place to tell it.

The Business and Industry pages offer advertisers a unique format. The articles and pictures on the pages let readers know what various businesses have to offer.

The pages are not just for one type of business. In fact, the pages feature consumer businesses, as well as commerciallyoriented companies. There are furniture stores, charter services. travel agencies, restaurants, frame shops, temporary services, hobby shops, property management companies and more that take advantage of this format.

Both advertisers who offer services and those who are selling a product have been very satisfied with the response they have received by advertising on the Business and Industry pages.

All it takes to begin advertising on the page is a call to the retail advertising department at 682-5311. It is set up on a contract basis. The number of articles and pictures an advertiser gets is determined by the size of the ad that is run each week on the pages. The advertiser pays only for the ad, thereby spreading the cost out over a 13 or 26 week period.

Advertisers do not have to worry about writing the articles selves. The Midland Reporter-Telegram's advertising feature writer, Julie Wiseman, will take care of that. When possible Julie will coordinate the articles with special events, such as grand openings and seasonal sales, at the advertiser's business.

The growth of the Business and Industry Pages this year is allowing the newspaper to make some very positive format changes. All new contracts and renewals for the pages are part of the Tuesday Business/Industry page. All current Sunday contracts will be fulfilled. Eventually, however, this new format will allow the phasing out of the Sunday pages. The goal is to build Tuesday's pages to a full four page section. This format will offer a number of benefits: 1) By having a Business/Industry section on Tuesday there will be room for expansion and thus less waiting time for articles.

2) By having the articles in Tuesday's paper, which is a smaller edition than Sunday, advertisers will have greater exposure.

3) Periodically, the paper will be able to use spot color to draw attention to the Business/Industry pages.

To tell your story on the Business/Industry pages just call 682-5311 and ask for Julie or an account representative.

Energy Reserves Group to merge with BHP Holdings

WICHITA, Kansas - Energy Reserves Group, Inc., (ERG) and Utah International, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of The Broken Hill Proprietary Company Ltd. (BHP), an Australian company, have jointly announced that ERG and BHP Holdings (USA), Inc. (BHP Holdings), a wholly owned subsidiary of BHP, have entered into a definitive merger agreement. The boards of directors of ERG and BHP Holdings have unanimously approved the transaction.

Pursuant to the merger agreement, BHP Holdings will promptly commence a tender offer for all outstanding shares of common stock of ERG at a price of $6.10 per share, net to the seller in cash. The offer is conditioned upon a minimum of 23,000,000 shares being properly tendered and not withdrawn prior to the expiration of the tender offer.

In the merger to occur following consummation of the tender offer, each share of ERG common stock outstanding and not tendered pursuant to the tender offer will be converted into the right to receive $6.10 in cash.

In connection with the merger agreement, ERG has granted BHP Holdings an option to purchase 20,000,000 shares of ERG common stock at $6.10 per share. If such option were exercised, the shares so acquired would represent approximately 32 percent of the then out-standing shares. There are currently approximately 42,000,000 shares of ERG common stock outstanding.

The ERG common stock is quoted on the National Association of Securities Dealers Automated Quotation System (NASDAQ) and the last bid and asked quotations of the common stock reported were $4-3/8 bid and $4-7/16 asked.

BHP Holdings currently expects that the necessary filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission in connection with the tender offer will be made later t his week and that offer documents will be mailed to ERG shareholders promptly thereafter. Kidder, Peabody & Co., Inc. will act as dealer manager of the tender offer.

TRC approves temporary reductions in gas contracts

AUSTIN-The Railroad Commis- ings to Lone Star and its customers sion has temporarily approved natural gas contract changes which would reduce rates to Lone Star Gas Co., Intratex Gas Co., and Valero Transmission Co. and their gas customers by almost $1.03 million.

Further analysis of the proposed rates is needed before permanent Commission approval is given. How-ever, Chairman Mack Wallace and Commissioner James E. (Jim) Nugent approved the rates on a temporary basis during the study period because of the cost reductions to be realized by gas consumers.

Customers of Lone Star, Intratex, and Valero will all benefit from lower gas costs under the contract changes since the companies must pass the reduced costs directly to customers using previously approved automatic adjustment clause

Intrastate Gas Transmission, Inc. proposes to change rates to Lone Star under the specified contract from $3.37 per MMBtu to $3.10 per MMBtu (million Britis h thermal units), effective Oct. 10. Annual savare estimated at $38,500.

Producers's Gas Co. proposes to change rates to Intratex under six contracts and Lone Star under three contracts. Current rates under the contracts range from $3.30 per MMBtu to $3.90 per MMBtu. The new rate would be $3.25 per MMBtu, representing an annual savings of $261,300 to Intratex and $162,400 to Lone Star and their customers.

The remaining gas contract changes temporarily approved by the Commission involved gas rates charged by Delhi Gas Pipeline Corp. to Valero Transmission Co. under five contracts. The rates would drop from a range of $3.16 to $3.90 per MMBtu to a range of $3.07 to $3.79 per MMBtu. Effective for the period Oct. 10, 1984 through Aug. 31, 1985, the new rates are expected to save Valero and its customers $564,523.

The Commission temporarily approved contract rate reductions totalling more than $4.7 million on Nov. 5. Companies to realize those savings are Valero, Texas Utilities Fuel Co., and Houston Lighting and Power Co.

ARCO appoints Bowlin new vice president

DALLAS-Atlantic Richfield Co. has named Michael R. Bowlin senior vice president of the newly-formed ARCO Resources Administration in Dallas, effective Jan. 1, 1985.

At the time of his new appointment, the Atlantic Richfield board also elected Bowlin a vice president of the corporation, effective immediately. A native of Amarillo, Texas, Bowlin joined Atlantic Richfield in 1969 following graduation from North Texas State University with bachelor's and master's degrees in Business Administration.

Geolograph Pioneer bought by partnership

Travis W. Brown and the Brown family of Oklahoma City and the John Wood PLC Group of Aberdeen, Scotland have purchased Geolograph Pioneer, Inc. Geolograph Pioneer had been a wholly-owned subsidiary of Moorco International, Inc. since May 31, 1984, and prior to that time was an operating division of Geosource, Inc.

The Geolograph Co. of Oklahoma City was originally founded in 1937 and introduced the first depth and penetration recording device for the oil and gas drilling industry. During this same time period, the Pioneer Centrifuging Co. of Houston pioneered the introduction of hydrocycloning of drilling solids material from drilling fluids. Subsequent acquisitions and the merger of these two companies by Geosource, Inc. in 1978 structured the business as it is today.

Pioneer Corp. records third quarter gains

AMARILLO-Pioneer Corp. has announced that the company earned $106.1 million or $3.03 per share for the three months ended Sept. 30, 1984, including a gain of $123.1 million or $3.52 per share on the sale of its gas transmission operations.

The third quarter results also contained a charge of $12.5 million before taxes for losses on operating assets. That charge provides for estimated losses on the sale of certain operating assets that the company intends to dispose of and for losses related to certain limited partnerships in which the company is a general partner. Pioneer's revenues from continuing operations in the third quarter amounted to $100.8 million.

LAFAYETTE, La.-Dr. Asadollah Hayatdavoudi of the University of Southwestern Louisiana Petroleum Engineering Department has devised a new, high-efficiency drilling technique that reduces the cost of drilling per

Essentially, the method involves a twin nozzle system that operates on the the bore hole interface with the bit, increasing the penetration rate of the principle of a lawn sprinkler. This creates a lower pressure at the center of The new system has been field tested with full success not only as a dramatically reduces the cost of cementing the casing, especially in the Gulf cost-effective method but in substantially cleaner stabilizers. Overhauling taxes could spur growth

By LEONARD SILK N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Assuming that the Treasury's plan for overhauling the federal income tax system is adopted in essentially its proposed form by President Reagan and Congress — which, at this point, is a risky assumption — what would be the effects on business and the economy?

The proposal is a radical one in that it gets to the heart of what is most wrong now: The existing tax system is encrusted with an incredible amount of barnacles, tax breaks, loopholes, deductions and exemptions, accumulated over the past 70 years. These distort the decisionmaking process in the quest for tax advantages and are grossly inequitable as among different individuals and industries.

Hence, the first great effect of overhauling the tax system would be to increase economic efficiency. As Joseph A. Pechman of the Brookings Institution says in a forthcoming book, "A Citizen's Guide to the New Tax Reforms," although it is impossible to know in advance precisely how much the increase would be, "lower tax rates would increase incentives to work, save and invest and reduce the incentive to cheat.' The distortions arising from differ-ent tax rates on different investments would be eliminated; uneconomic investments that yield only an after-tax profit would be wiped out. So productivity would improve.

The nation would in all probability benefit from a gain in real economic growth. Stronger economic growth not only is a good in itself, representing an increase in output and income, but also it would help to reduce the federal budget deficit and its distorting effects on interest rates, the international value of the dollar and the nation's trade deficit. Once again, one must stress that the gain in economic growth cannot be predicted precisely. It is almost certain to be less than the supply-side economists advertise, but it will be important, and the constructive effects on growth should not be long delayed.

The proposed tax changes should reduce real interest rates — nominal rates, adjusted for inflation. This should result from a lowering of incentives for businessmen to borrow to pay for new plant and equipment and from a lowering of incentives for investors or individuals to borrow to acquire real estate, river barges, pleasure boats or other goods bought on credit. The new system should also reduce incentives for borrowing to finance huge takeover deals with little or no economic merit.

MIDLAND REPORTER-TELEGRAM, SUN. DEC. 9, 1984

We Know Oil&Gas."

finance at the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania, said in an interview, "A major reason for high real rates of interest was the Reagan tax-cut package of 1981, which boosted the demand for funds and raised the benefits for the borrower far above the costs."

But now the Treasury is proposing to eliminate the investment tax credit, a tax break that will cost it $32 billion this year in lost tax revenues. The Treasury's plan would also knock out accelerated depreciation, the 1981 tax break that lets industries write off plant, equipment and real estate faster than their expected useful lives — which this year is costing the Treasury $27 billion.

In response to those proposed changes, capital-intensive industries (including iron and steel, electrical manufacturing, chemicals and oldline "smokestack" industries) are likely to behave like angry bulls. They have billions at stake and will expect their lobbies to fight to the last Congressman.

But the Treasury is proposing to partly offset the elimination of these corporate tax breaks by reducing the corporate income tax to 33 percent from 46 percent. That would represent an enormous gain in the way different industries are treated, removing the bias against service and other labor-intensive industries and very likely stimulating net real investment. When the need for revenue is less, there could be further reduction in the corporate income tax, with greatly reduced discrimination among different industries.

The Treasury's tax plan would also encourage personal and business investment by permitting nominal capital gains to be corrected for inflation from the time the investment was made. This should help free up the capital markets and encourage a more rational allocation of funds.

The proposed changes in the individual income tax would greatly increase equity among taxpayers, with more equal taxation of people receiving the same income. This should keep a great many people from thinking they are being ripped off.

The modified flat tax, assuming it achieves the degree of simplicity implied by the Treasury's approach, would greatly reduce the army of tax accountants and tax lawyers, and it would cut down the costs and time that taxpayers spend trying to minimize and avoid taxes. It might wipe out part of the underground economy of tax evaders.

But will all this come to pass? Soundings with Senators and Representatives suggest that Congress will approve such a plan only if the president asks for it and fights for it. "We will not take the rap; he must come across and get behind it" that is the common line among legislators on both sides of the aisle.

However, if the president does fight for and get this comprehensive tax revision, it could be the crowning achievement of his administration. It's now up to him. IV Idland is an oil town. To

S he is still shy. Still vulnerable. But she has the ability to make her own decisions, listen to her own "voice" and has a streak of daring deep inside her. Priscilla Presley, playing Jenna Wade, Bobby Ewing's girlfriend on "Dallas," has survived her first year in the big time and has accepted critical kudos with a grain of salt.

"I know I still have lots to learn. This is a growing time for me both personally and professionally; compliments can be destructive if they give you a sense of fake security." She isn't a bit intimidated and knows she has been accepted as part of the team.

"This show is a team effort," says Ms. Presley. "Everybody's working toward making it a good show, wanting to maintain its great success. I'm not saying everyone's in love with everyone; but the conflicts are minor. I haven't seen a single blow-up, not a single confrontation worth worrying about.

On instinct, I had to feel how I would handle situations were I in her place.

"I wanted her to be intelligent. I wanted her not to fall under the guise of the old-fashioned traditional woman. I, too, had lived in Europe. I have a daughter; she has a daughter — that's what keeps Jenna straight. Ms. Presley continues, "Personally, I think I'm a little more rebellious than Jenna. I wouldn't be as patient. If Priscilla were this character, she'd have put a little fire under Bobby long ago. I wouldn't be hanging on this long. Where we are most alike is that she is very sensitive and cares so much. I can identify with that, and I want her to be her own woman — which I am."

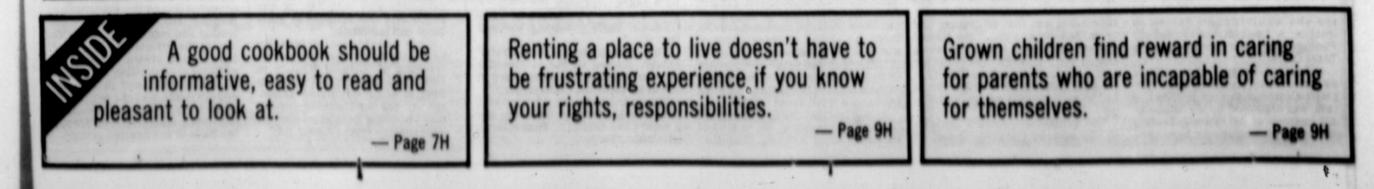

WHAT A CHANGE from last year when this delicate beauty with frightened eyes arrived in Texas for her first day's work on CBS's toprated series. It was a Friday. She had been hired the day before, and on Saturday was to film three major scenes.

"I had never met anyone in the cast," she remembers now, shaking her light silken hair. "I was very hesitant about Patrick Duffy who plays Bobby because I'd heard he was quick, glib, funny and had no mercy for newcomers. "That was all quite true. He's turned out to be very pleasant. I think what it taught me was to welcome newcomers and try to put them at ease. Starting immediately like that I had so much thrown at me. It was a lot to get used to; and I really hadn't had that much acting experience."

She'd only started acting lessons four years before and only then as a way to overcome her shyness when, as national spokeswoman for Wella-Balsam shampoo, she found her contract included making public appearances in classrooms where the latest hair styles were demonstrated.

"I have never liked being in the public eye, had always all my life kept in the background; so this was difficult. I started studying with a well-known coach and he used to tease me because it took me so long to volunteer to do scenes."

BETWEEN THE LINES

Q. Could you give me a little formation about Howie Mandel, from "St. Elsewhere."

Pensacola, Fla.

A. He's 28, was born and raised in Toronto, and has always been something of a cut-up. He was thrown out of four high schools in a row because of his hijinks, one of which entailed hiring contractors to build an addition to the school library; when they showed up, he was thrown off campus.

He decided at that point to become a millionaire instead, so he opened a carpet store which became most profitable. Then he opened a novelty store, which also did well, especially after he became Canadian distributor for a notorious little item, the 'Flasher doll.'

doing now?

Business flourished so that he had to go to other cities in search of new novelties and on one such trip, to L.A., he happened to visit the nightclub, The Comedy Store.

Friends pushed him onstage, he was a hit, and was promptly signed up by a member of the audience, the producer of the syndicated series "Make Me Laugh." That led to a stretch on the Showtime series, "Bizarre," a stint as opening act for Diana Ross in Las Vegas, then "St. Elsewhere."

Now his career is really taking off: He'll have a half-hour special on cable TV in January; an hour special on cable at the end of next year and is currently negotiating both a record deal and a deal with MTV. And in February, he starts filming a remake of the Laurel and Hardy romp, "The Music Box" with Ted Danson.

Q. I think Jaclyn Smith is gorgeous. Can you tell me if she's married and what she's appearing in next?

A Big Fan

Laredo, Texas A. She's married to British cinematographer Tony Richmond, her third husband, and they have a son, Gaston, 2. Professionally, she's doing quite a bit: She has a TV movie, "Santa Claus," due on ABC this month; a feature film, "Deja Vu," which her husband directed, ready for release; and she is shooting another TV movie, "Florence Nightingale," in England now with a tentative airdate on NBC next spring.

If that's not enough, for those who want to look like her, there will soon be a beauty book; for those who want to dress like her, a line of clothing at K-Mart.

Q. I am interested in Bette Midler. Please tell me about her and what she's doing now.

V.R. Rafuse Mississauga, Ont. A. She's 40, one of four children of a house painter who moved his family from Paterson, N.J., to Honolulu, and a show business-minded mother who named her daughter after Bette Davis.

Being the only Jewish girl in a Samoan neighborhood created great material for her comedy performances later on, but at the time, she's admitted, it was hard indeed. After putting in one year at the University of Hawaii, she decided, in 1965, to leave Hawaii and move to New York.

She got a job on Broadway in the chorus of "Fiddler on the Roof," eventually moving up to one of the leads, Tevye's oldest daughter.

Her career really skyrocketed, though, when she began to perform at the Continental Baths to a predominantly gay audience. The album "The Divine Miss M.," sold-out concerts and a regular invitation to drop in on "The Tonight Show" followed.

All that was left was a movie role, and in 1979, she got that: the Janis Joplinesque singer in "The Rose" that earned her an Oscar nomination.

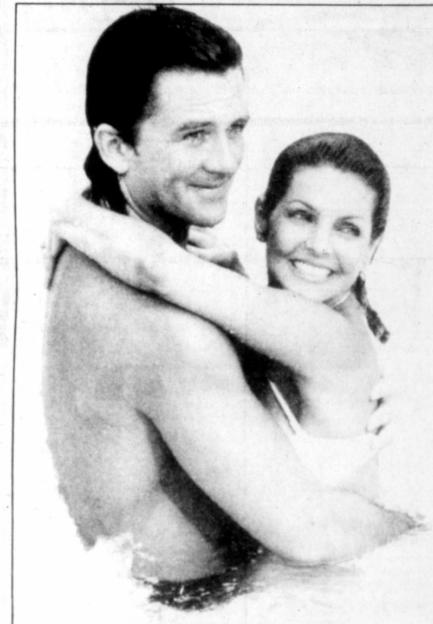

In contrast, her second film, "Jinxed," drove her to a complete nervous breakdown. She still wants to do other films, however, and while a few are in the talking stage, nothing has been decided Instead, what she's currently doing is recording an album.

When she arrived for her debut on "Dallas," her screen credits were limited to co-hosting ABC's "Those Amazing Animals," one guest-star-ring stint on "The Fall Guy" and her lead with Michael Landon in "Comeback," much of which landed on the cutting-room floor.

And it wasn't, she knew, as if the powers-that-be were dying to have her on the series. They had, in fact, turned down her agent when he originally suggested her name.

"SO MUCH FOR a famous name," says today's Presley, 38. (Priscilla Beaulieu met Elvis Presley when she was a young teen-ager in Weisbaden, Germany, and he was with the American Forces there. She first visited Graceland, his home in Memknow the city of Dallas a little more her father after their divorce. than I did last year. I was so petrified last year just getting my lines and making sure they were right. This year I leased a car, visited museums and met people I liked very much.

"I have a policy with myself. It's so easy to just stay with your own work group, and I have a hunger to get out a little more with people who are not in the industry in which I have spent so much of my life. I met some doctors and some people who owned thoroughbreds.

'I've always had such curiosity about people, all kinds of people. Something I could indulge as a young teen-ager when, growing up in Weisbaden, Germany (her father was an Air Force captain), I went to school with kids from all over the world.

The child, then 9, was spending a summer vacation with him at Graceland when he died in 1977, and it is for Lisa Marie - for all of them that Ms. Presley is writing the story of her life with Elvis which will probably be published next fall. "There have now been five drafts, and I've grown a great deal during the rewriting. it no longer seems important to correct this statement or that. What is important is to tell the truth about our life: the beauty, the wonder and the sorrow

"I had the same motivation in opening Graceland to the public and in filming the television special which we start next month to air in January coinciding with the 50th anniversary of Elvis's birth. And let me tell you, the most difficult decision I ever made was that of turning Graceland into took me five years to make that you are committed and Unless know what your joint goals and purposes are, you don't have a chance with a relationship," she says thoughtfully. "You don't create a safe place for each other. I suppose I shouldn't be saying this because I'm in the same situation. The young man in her life is Michael Edwards, a talented actor who just finished a segment of 'Paper Dolls" and played one of Crawford's lovers in "Mommy Dearest. "Sooner or later I'm going to have to make that decision. It's taking me a while, but I do know that once you have the commitment, you make a future. It's so important that two people grow together. Until you make that commitment, your attention and energy goes into the relationship instead of into creating a world. She's come a long way this year. She's learned to trust herself on decisions. "Women are not so dumb!" She's overcome the stigma of being a model and wants people to take her at face value.

"The opening of Graceland was a very memorble day in my life. I guess you could say it was the ending of an era of which my own past was a part. Having to cut that line, make that detachment, was the most difficult thing for me to do. It was my home. Our home. Now it's everybody's home.

"On the television special we'll visit Graceland, and everyone can see it. I feel I made the right decision, and that pleases me. You can listen to all the opinions in the world, but, in the end, I have to make up my own mind."

In a way, it has been a decision which enables Ms. Presley to lead her own life for the first time since she's been a grownup. "And I have a lot of growing to do still." You ask her if she will ever marry again and she says she hopes she will.

Madonna: Brash, sexy, ambitious

By ROBERT HILBURN Los Angeles Times-

Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK - After the smashing box-office success of Prince's "Purple Rain," movie execs are racing around after another rock 'n' roll soap opera.

So how about this scenario? I've even got someone in mind to play the lead.

- A young Michigan girl moves to New York City with $35 in her pocket and stardom in her eyes. She works at a doughnut shop near Times Square until she wins a dance scholarship to study with Alvin Ailey. She rebels against the rigidity of the dance world and heads to Paris in search of a singing career.

 Some rich promoters introduce her to the glamorous life (fancy digs, stylish clothes), but the closest she gets to the spotlight is singing backing vocals for Patrick Hernandez. best known in this country for his disco hit "Born to Be Alive." Our heroine returns to the U.S. and joins a band before setting out on her own

- A disc jockey at a famous disco hears her demo tape and helps her land a record contract. She has does in her bare-midriff publicity three hit singles and becomes an MTV favorite. Her debut album sells nearly 2 million copies and she ends up on the cover of Rolling Stone.

Our star? Madonna, the 24-yearold sex kitten whose new album, teasingly is titled "Like a Virgin." Why Madonna? Well, she's got genuine star quality. And after all, 's her story. Madonna - whose last name is Ciccone - also has many of the traits associated with Prince. She's brash, sexy and hugely ambitious.

Asked if she identifies with Prince, she responded, "Sure, I can relate to him because he has a chip on his shoulder. He's competitive, from the Midwest ... a screwed-up home and he has something to prove. I can relate to all that totally.

Madonna likes to provoke.

When she performed "Like a Vir-gin" on MTV's recent video awards show, she prowled about the stage so suggestively in her Hollywood Boulevard lingerie that parents must have thought their kids were watching an adult channel.

For a recent afternoon interview, she appeared as provocative as she photos. She wore a black T-shirt, black bicycling pants and several religious symbols - lots of crucifixes and one Star of David around her neck.

'I've always worn crucifixes," Madonna said, curled up in a chair in a conference room at Warner Bros. Records offices here. "I went to Catholic schools all my life and I had this thing about nuns and crucifixes. It appeals to me; there's something very mysterious and alluring about it. So I kind of adapted it in my own bastardized way.'

As she talked, she seemed totally in control - confident enough to walk into a cage of tigers and stare them down, not to mention deal with anything the mere mortals in the pop world could throw at her.

I know I may give that impression and I am pretty tough now, but it wasn't always that way,' she said, twisting a strand of hair. "The first couple of years in New York were torture for me. The whole place was so intimidating. I didn't know anyone. I had no money. I'd go to Lincoln Center, sit by the fountain and just cry. I'd write in my little journal and pray to have even one friend.

"Even in the dance school, most of the kids on scholarship were innercity kids who had a much different temperament than I did. I was kind of off to myself in a little corner. I had been used to being the big fish in the little pond (in Michigan) and all of a sudden I was a nobody. I longed for that familiarity and being on top of everything. But never once did it occur to me to go back home ...

Madonna was born into a middleclass family. Her father was a Chrysler engineer and things were swell until her mother (also named Madonna) died when Madonna was still a child. Though she felt alienated when her father remarried, she was comforted by the belief that she was someone special.

never.'

"By the time I was around 5, I knew that I was going to have a spe-cial life," she said, matter-of-factly. My father was always angry with me. He wanted me to have more humility, more modesty. I was very loud and gregarious and aggressive and a showoff

"I'm sure a lot of it stems from insecurity. I had lots of brothers and sisters and I was constantly fighting for attention after my mother died."

An exhibition called "South of Winter: Scenes from the Aransas Refuge" is hanging at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum through Dec. 31.

The Aransas National Wildlife Refuge lies on the Gulf Coast of Texas near Corpus Christi and is probably best known as the win-ter home of the whooping crane. However, this area of ecological richness, beaches, bays, estuaries, savannas and marshes, is also home to a vast number of other birds and mammals

This exhibition, originally organized by the American Museum of Natural History in New York where it was shown in. 1963, is being circulated nation-ally by the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service with support from Conoco, Inc.

Wildlife photographers Steve Wilson and Karen Hayden have captured scenes of quiet beauty. natural drama and startling humor in the exhibition's 63 color photographs. From delicate butterflies to lumbering alligators, they portray the lives of the residents of Aransas.

In the late 19th century major threats to wildlife in this region occurred due to the expansion of farming, land drainage, egg col-lecting and hunting. In the 1930s, due to the efforts of J.N. "Ding" Darling and others, there was a growing conservation movement growing conservation movement in this country, and in 1937, the government purchased 47,000 acres from a San Antonio bank-ing family. Hanging at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., are the exhibitions "American Images: A Look at Contemporary Photographs" and "Contemporary Texas Crafts.

"American Images," the result of an American Telephone and Tele-graph Company project initiated in 1978, was organized by the Minneap-olis Institute of Art. Twenty leading American photographers were commissioned to create new works America's landscape and people, depicting American life. The only stipulation was that all images had to be taken in and about the United States. REVIEWS

On one occasion when he was upset over an actor's inadequacies, George S Kaufman sent the player a telegram: "I am watching your performance from the last row.

Wish you Georgia Temple were here.

Kaufman, who died June 2, 1961, spent the years 1930 to 1940, turning out hit Broadway plays, such as "Once in a Lifetime." "The Man Who Came to Dinner," "George Washington Slept Here" You Can't Take it With and You," with collaborator Moss Hart. Hart, 15 years Kaufman'sjunior, died a bare six months later on Dec. 20, 1961. When Midland Community Theatre's production of "You Can't Take it With You" opened Friday for a 10-performance run. this reviewer thought about Kaufman's quick, dry and often sardonic wit. Known as the gloomy dean of Broadway hits. Kaufman was often regarded by others as viewing most people as incompetent and seeing the world around him as a crazy mess. Others, such as former New York Times drama critic Brooks Atkinson, saw him as "even-tempered, amusingly sardonic, pleasant and obliging, thoght never exactly cordial.

What Kaufman may have lacked in warmth and spontaneity, he found in Hart. Raised in poverty and a high school drop out at age 14, Hart spent money on himself, family and friends, after the successful run of their first collaboration "Once in a Lifetime," with the eager lavishness of a man who once had none. Drama was something he lived as well as wrote. The plays of this team are not known for their plots, themes or passionate adventures of the heart. Instead, the story lines serve as housing for the rapid, fire exercising of these two wits, particuliarly when they are attacking some form of stupidity or absurdity.

Take for example the following excerpts from the exchange between IRS agent Henderson (Mykel Mengert) and Grandpa Martin Vanderhof (Pat Baskin):

"According to our records, Mr. Venderhof, you have never paid an income tax," Henderson says.

'That's right. 'Why not?' "I don't believe in it."

At this point, there is a spontaneous applause from Friday's audience. It is the evening's only such applause. The conversation continues with Henderson beginning to threaten Grandpa, when Grandpa asks, "Suppose I pay you this money - mind you, I don't say I'm going to - but just for the sake of argument - what's the government going to do with it?" 'How do you mean?"

"Well, what do I get for my money? If I go into Macy's and buy something, there it is -I see it. What will the government give me?

Henderson has more than some difficulty answering this question intelligently. The more he tries, the angrier he gets, the more illogical his comments, and the more stupid he sounds.

However, this scene has a twoedged blade. It is likely that when the play opened Dec. 14, 1936, during the Great Depression, the scene evoked the same audience response (And seats were filled at every one of the 837 New York performances for the next two years). The American public is still applauding and reacting spontaneously 48 years later to a situation which has only continued to deteriorate. Thus, who is the joke on - the IRS agent who sounds dumb or audiences who applaud in the safety of a theater house questions and actions they perhaps secretly yearn to take but are afraid to exercise in real life?

The same holds true for the play's central idea. Lived by Grandpa, his daughter and one of his granddaughters, it can be summed up thus - "You can't take it with you so trust and thank God and enjoy life in the present time

Although many see the sense in doing just that, they have bought the American competitive dream. This type of fall guy is epitomized in "You Can't Take it With You" by Mr. Kirby (Tom McKeown). He doesn't know how to quit. By pushing himself and squashing others, he has ground out a living on Wall Street and is financially rich. However, stress is his marriage and business partner. The conflicting philosophy between Mr. Kirby and Grandpa forms the basis of much of the action in the play. In its resolution lies the happy ending.

Here Kaufman and Hart failed to convince this reviewer that they lived up to their abilities. It's not possible to have either explain why, however, the following can be surmised.

The three-act play, which MCT stages with one 10-minute intermission, is staged in a comfortable length of time to hold an audience's attention.

Also, Kaufman and Hart usually knew who they wanted to play the roles in their plays by the time the play was written (this play was written in five weeks). Perhaps the actors they had in mind were able to draw every bit of energy out of the existing lines to convince an audience of Mr. Kirby's change of heart.

On opening night, MCT's were not. The dynamics between McKeown, Mark Wilkins as his son, Tony, and Baskin didn't sell this reviewer.

Although it was a relatively smooth moving opening night production, individual cast members were still anticipating the next line or action. There existed a great discrepancy in those who believed what they are doing onstage and those who didn't.

For example, John Phillips was totally convincing in his portrayal of Paul Sycamore, the father, especially when he was trying to decide if he has done the right thing by his daughter, Alice. Mengert's timing was perfect in his scene with Grandpa. Michael Stannard as Boris Kolenkov was a convincing high energy, Russian dance teacher.

Others were quite good, but not vet as consistent in their portrayals, such as Harland "Skip' Johnson as Mr. De Pinna, who lost his accent at times and Loree Fitzgerald as Penelope Sycamore. who moved in and out of character. She was very funny, however, she was Penny at times and on other occasions she was other characters she's played onstage.

Baskin moved into the role of Grandpa as Act I progressed. Once he arrived in character, he did a remarkable job of playing the laid-back, contented Grandpa, who is impossible to incite to anger xylophone and she danced her brand of ballet.

Lisa Barker as Alice and Mark Wilkins as Tony Kirby were most delightful in their scene together when they had just returned from the ballet. The scene was one of the highpoints of Friday's performance because it was so real, so tender.

Another highpoint was Fausto Beato's walk across the living room as he scurried for groceries. And Veronica Ann Floyd did a good job of playing the straight in this family where the rule is -"Do what you want, no questions asked.

McKeown did not seem to know quite what to do with himself onstage. And, at times, Wilkins suffered the same problem. Both had problems with their hands.

Others members of the cast are Enid Phillips as Mrs. Kirby; Marilyn Allen as Gay Wellington; Jerry Green, Jeffrey McDonald and Neal Allen as G-men; and Ann Perkins as Olga. The production is directed by guest director Don Toner. As was true in "Tomran," David Layman's set is stunning

Friday I enjoyed watching the antics of this wacky family. I hope by Wednesday, when the play is back onstage in Theatre One, and the cast has had two. night onstage, that some of the rough spots, including actors relaxing into their roles, will have been worked out.

The play was awarded the Pulitzer prize in the spring of 1937 and the film rights were purchased for a then unheard of amount, $200,000. The film wonthe Academy Award for the most outstanding film of 1938.

The success of such plays as 'Once in a Lifetime," "You Can't Take it With You" and "The Man Who came to Dinner" is explained thus by Atkinson, "All those comedies added to the gaiety of the nation during a period, incidentially, when gaiety was not unconfined and the theater was declining in scope and originality Audience response is a guage in comedy. During MCT's production it was apparent that this play still speaks to American audiences because the laughter was there opening night.

Murphy best thing about 'Cop' cated police officer in Detroit. An old friend of his is killed while visiting Murphy, and the angry cop traces the killers to Beverly Hills, Calif.

His superiors refuse to let Murphy handle the case, so he uses his vacation time to drive to Beverly Hills in search of the murderers.

The murder mystery plot is really not much of a mystery and has no original twists. The basic, unimaginative story could have been easily lifted from some onehour police series on television.

The only feature of "Beverly Hills Cop" that saves it from becoming a bore is its heavy emphasis on comedy, which is Murphy's true forte.

In Beverly Hills, Murphy becomes sort of a lively but lowlife Everyman, laughing at the trendy fashions, puzzled by the eccentric Californians and in awe of the obvious wealth around him.

In many ways, his role seems like the puzzled rags-to-riches character he played in "Trading Places" opposite Dan Aykroyd, mixed with a lightweight reprise of the part he had alongside Nick Nolte in "48 HRS."

Murphy's hip humor, his humorous laugh and his ability to slip in and out of different characters serves him very well in all three films.

The biggest difference between this film and his earlier ones is that in "Beverly Hills Cop' Murphy isn't sharing the limelight with another major star like Nolte, Aykroyd or Dudley Moore (who was Murphy's co-star in this summer's disasterous "Best Defense"),

There is a good supporting cast surrounding Murphy, however. Judge Reinhold, perhaps best known to date as the somewhat nerdy older brother in "Fast Times at Ridgemont High." is especially memorable as a mildmannered California cop.

Martin Brest's direction is slick and brisk, carefully focusing on Murphy's strong points, although it is not exceptionally inspired or suspenseful. Although it certainly could have used a better-constructed and more imaginative storyline. Beverly Hills Cop" should easily live up to the expectations of Eddie Murphy fans as well as the glowing financial predictions made for it.

"Beverly Hills Cop," rated R for strong language, violence and brief nudity, is now showing at the UA Cine IV.

Rat" is the Mississippi River. The central character of "River Rat" is Jonsy, played by young Martha Plimpton in her film debut, a teen-aged tomboy living along the banks of Mississippi.

Jonsy's father, played by Tommy Lee Jones, was sent to prison before she was even born and her mother abandoned her at a very young age. Jonsy was raised by her grandmother, who runs a ramshackle fishing bait and fresh catfish emporium by the river.

Jonsy is the sort of girl who takes a boat out on the river to check her trotlines in the morning before going to school. Her pet project after school is trying to restore an old decrepit motor-boat called "The River Rat."

Abruptly Jonsy's father, who had been serving a life sentence, is unexpectedly paroled and returns home. The father and child meet for the first time and find an immense gap of time and experience between them. Jones plays the father rather coolly in the film's early scenes. His eyes are always fixed at some point far out in space.

Once, when his daughter touches his arm examining a tatoo, Jones snaps, "Don't touch me. I don't like to be touched."

For her part, Jonsy tries to get to know her father, although she seems driven by curiosity as much as affection. Ingenuously, she asks highly personal ques-tions without the slightest hesitation.

"You ever stick a knife in some body?" she asks her father out of the blue. "I'm just curious about stuff like that."

Surprisingly, Miss Plimpton manages to be neither cloying or obnoxious in her precocious role. She exudes a natural tomboy personality. As the father and daughter Sinster undercurrents in the plot begin to tug at Jones, however. A corrupt prison official named Dr. Cole, played by Brian Dennehy, is convinced that Jones is going after a very large sum of money hidden somewhere along the river and Cole is determined to get it for himself.

At the same time, Jones' past surfaces in a flashback reminiscent of William Faulkner's Gothic story "A Rose for Miss Emily," when he commits a terrible crime in a moldering Southern plantation house.

As the tension builds, Tom Rickman, who wrote and directed "River Rat," makes excellent use of the geography and mythos of the Mississippi

ODESSA — An exhibition of works by Fritz Scholder is hanging through Dec. 14 in The University of Texas of the Permian Basin's art gallerv.

Scholder's work has been exhi-bited at the National Museum of Modern Art, Tokoyo; the Museum of Chinese History, Beijing; and the last three Salon d'Autumne exhibitions at the Grand Palais, Paris. He has had one-man shows in New York, California, New Mexico, Ari-zona, Colorado and Minnesota.

Last year, Scholder was one of the first Americans to be voted into the Salon d'Autumne as a life-time Societaire and will exhibit yearly at the Grand Palais in Paris. The artist was also presented with an honorary doctorate of fine arts degree from Ripon College, Wisconsin.

The exhibition, "Fritz Scholder: Paintings, Monotypes, Lithographs, Etchings, Bronzes, 1980-1984," offers an overview of his activities over the last four years. Half of the 40 works on display come from the artist's personal collection. They have been selected as key examples of the vari-ous series on which he has concentrated during the period. As well as the consistent serial method of working, Scholder painted a range of other subjects, such as, women, cats, dogs, bulls, chairs, flowers and landscapes. All are included in the

CHECKING OUT THE LIBRARY Books make special gifts

By JOHN W. DEATS

Go on, confess it. Few presents which you as an adult receive give you half as much pleasure as those from childhood. How exciting can a new tie, bottle of cologne, or other knick-knack be? An alternative to this transitory type of gift is the well-chosen book, which can be read and re-read, passed along to friends and relatives, and has lasting value. The right book for the right person can rekindle some of the excitement we experienced as children when a new toy opened up a whole new world for us.

In this spirit, the following books are offered as exceptionally appro-priate for many people. Or, if none of these will do, why not visit your libraries and bookstores for gift giving ideas for the people on your list who deserve something special?

Louis L'Amour is one of four of the bestselling living novelists in the world, famous for his portrayal of the West and the pioneer spirit. In his first work of nonfiction, FRONTIER, (Bantam Books, $29.95), L'Amour teams with veteran nature photographer David Muench to offer a stunning series of full color landscapes from the Maine islands to the pacific coast. L'Amour's newly written essays are succint and pithy statements about the land, its people, and its history.

A good gift for any aspiring cook is THE NEW REVISED AND UPDATED McCALLS'S COOKBOOK (Random House, $17.95). A standard cookbook for many years, the last major revision appeared in 1973, and many changes have now been incorporated, for instance, more emphasis on international cuisine, the use of food processors, and microwave cooking

Of special interest to many businessmen might be the excellent, if lengthy, JOHN DEERE'S COMPANY (Doubleday, $24.95), a mammoth, yet readable, corporate history. The history of the firm is followed from the emigration of a bankrupt blacksmith, John Deere, who left his family in Hancock, Vt., to seek better fortune in the tiny Grand Detour, Ill., in 1837. Deere's steel plow was, in truth, only one of many versions, but was better produced and marketed and so gave impetus to his fledgling plow and harrow company. The business acumen of Charles Deere brought the company through near disaster during a panic of 1857, and served the growing corporation well until after the turn of the century. Author Wayne Broehl weaves a fascinating story of the technological developments, the industry's flirtations with unions, and the battle of corporate giants at work to influence the American agricultural economy.

GREAT RIVERS OF THE WORLD (Little, Brown, and Co. $24.95) is a distinctive book which grew out of a series in London's "Observer Magazine." The editors chose 11 of the world's most legendary rivers, then By ED HUTSHING subsidized trips by some of the best travel writers, Paul Theroux, Bruce Chatwin, Ronald Fraser and others. Photographer Colin Jones has captured the essence of many of these rivers dramatically. Aside from predictable rivers such as the Danube, the Volga, the Amazon, the Nile, and the Mississippi, others such as the Zambezi, the Zaire, the Yangtze, and the Ganges are explored. And how about taking the road to Prome in a Toyota, in order to cruise from mandalay to Rangoon, on the Irrawaddy?

Another Royal Family book? Surely not! But ON THE ROYAL ROAD, (Little, Brown and Co., $19.95) by Tim Graham, is one of the very best of its kind. Graham has pursued the Royal Family with Nikon in hand for over a decade, capturing some of the most inspired, and at times, informal photographs of Prince Charles, Lady Diana, the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh, and others. Three times the winner of the Martini award for the best chills and chases in "The Discovery" royal photograph of the year, Graham includes his favorite photographs to make the inevitable motion pic taken during official ceremonies, tours, sporting days, scenes of family life, ture. and interesting off-guard moments.

Other fine gift books include FIREWORKS, (Doubleday, $25) by George Plimpton, THE NORTH AMERICAN ANIMAL ALMANAC, (Stewart, Tabori, and Chang, $14.95), by Darryl Stewart, THE SUPERWOMAN SYNDROME (Warner, $17.50), by Marjorie Hansen Shaevitz, and THE BRAIN (Bantam Books, $24.95), by Richard M. Restak, M.D.

'Slow Fade's' characters opaque

"Slow Fade," by Rudolph Wur-litzer. 211 pages. Alfred A. Knopf. ter — Wurlitzer is apparently still $13.95

By MICHIKO KAKUTANI New York Times Service

"You get a smooth story," says a character in "Slow Fade," "with the right emotional payoffs in the right places and then build up the images." This description of screenwriting might easily apply to "Slow Fade" as well, except that its emotional payoffs are few, and almost always misplaced. Otherwise, Rudolph Wurlitzer's new novel has the sketchy, compacted feel of a screenplay — or more accurately, of a first-draft treatment for a television movie.

Its characters are Hollywood trendies, who sling around phrases like "dash for cash" and "play for pay," and its action, which cuts cinematically from one point-of-view to another, involves no less than two attempted hangings, one death by snakebite, one by pneumonia, several accidental woundings - one character's eyeball is knocked out by a stray arrow — and assorted freakouts both here and abroad.

Although he has largely abandoned his earlier penchant for experimental narrative techniques - his first two novels, "Nog" and with motives or other psychological As for Wesley's relationships, they are singularly boring — perhaps preoccupied with the same themes he examined in his previous books, namely, the disintegration of the American dream, and our inability to connect either with our inner selves or with each other.

The backdrop of "Slow Fade" the wasteland of southern California, that final outpost of the frontier spirit - bears a decided resemblance to the menacing, Beckettian landscape of "Flats," and the novel's characters suffer from the same anomie that afflicted other Wurlitzer heroes. They may not undergo the bizarre personality transforma-tions (reminiscent of those found in Sam Shepard's early plays) that their predecessors experienced. But they, too, are late heirs to the pioneer legacy of individualism and possibility, who have inherited only rootlessness and meaningless change. "This is America," says a character named A.D., trying to renegotiate a deal. 'You're allowed to change horses in midstream. That's what the brochure says and that's what I'm going to do. In "Nog" and "Flats," Wurlitzer attempted to mirror the fragmentation of modern life by eschewing such traditional narrative conventions as causality and plot, and by refusing to endow his characters

Fade" are similarly opaque, but in this case, they are stranded in a naturalistic story. As a result, they tend, simply, to come across as poorly developed sketches - character descriptions in a script who need an actor to infuse them with depth and passion

The novel's hero, Wesley Hardin, for instance, is supposed to be a film director of mythic proportions, an avatar of American ambition, who suddenly undergoes a spiritual crisis in his 70th year. As written by Wurlitzer, however, Wesley simply emerges as a crotchety old man, unable to complete his latest western and unable to communicate with his children. We are told that Wesley, in his prime, ranked with Ford and Hawks, but we are never given enough details about his career to appreciate his achievement or understand his artistic dilemma. His personal problems, too, seem peculiarly dim. About all ve get are vague statements about his deteriorating mental health such as, Wesley is "incapable of directing a film, not to mention his own life," or Wesley "has more fear than we do." "You can smell it on him.

because the people in his life are as cynical as he is, or so shot up with emotional Novocain that they have ceased to care or think. There is his estranged son, Walker — a spoiled refugee from the 60s, who is trying to write a screenplay about his attempts to find his blissed-out sister, Clementine, who's run away to India to find her real self. And there is A.D., a sleazy, small-time hustler, intent on turning a lawsuit against Wesley into a lucrative movie deal.

Deals, in the end, are all that the characters in "Slow Fade" care about. "You want to know what I'm up to?" Walker asks his father. "How I can serve you in terms of a story? What my back story is and how you can transfer your children into one-dimensional images? Fine." Wurlitzer's people are willing to lie and manipulate their families and friends for the sake of a deal; and they are even willing to exploit the pivotal emotional events in their lives to make a sensationalistic film.

In many ways, the morally seedy atmosphere of modern Hollywood, purveyed by "Slow Fade," recalls that of David Rabe's recent play, "Hurlyburly." Unfortunately, Wurlitzer does not share Rabe's gift for language or for character; and while he comes up with some acerbic and often amusing - observations about the movie world, they are not enough to infuse "Slow Fade" with the vitality it needs.

Novel based on mind-boggling idea

"The Discovery," by Steve Shagan; William Morrow; A Perigord Press Book; prologue; 355 pages; $15.95.

What do Moses, the Los Angeles Police Department, the CIA, Rome University, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Mossad and Syria have in common?

According to the scripture of Steve Shagan, the last word of God is the connection between them. And if that is not enough to hook the reader, there are enough thrills, University to help decipher the newly found tablets and the web of the plot begins to spin. In Bel Air, a police lieutenant is called in when his ex-wife is found murdered in her home. Bent on vengeance as well as justice, the lieutenant starts his manhunt for the killer or killers. And during his search, he encounters the beautiful professor.

Shagan has several elements going for him in this suspense novel. Is there really a tablet, or is this just some bit of whimsy on the part of Old Testament characters conceived by Shagan? And why is there a trail of blood across several continents?

Is the police lieutenant, Jack Raines, biting off more than he can chew . when he crosses the path of a very special branch of the CIA? And Raines, who is a good cop, really has not too much in common with the beautiful professor, Gabriella Bercovici, who is rather close to being a genius.

But the predominant, increasingly urgent question is: What could the tablet have to say that caused Moses to defy Yahweh in order to keep it from mankind?

You will be delighted with the now-and-then frisson that travels up and down your spine when you speed from one taut situation to another and ultimately learn just what "The Discovery" is all about.

The Knave of Clubs was talking strike. It was his contention that the knaves were being discriminated against. About the only task they were given was the simple finesse, while the classic plays were awarded to the rest of the court cards.

The Knave of Clubs, his dander rising, would have none of this. "The finesse is a thing of beauty and a joy forever," he averred. "I'm not talking about those everyday situations where you have the ace-queen in one hand and you simply lead toward that hand and hope the king is in the right place. I am thinking more of those delicate situations where the finesse might not even be obvious. They occur at the most unlikely times.

Why, just the other day I was involved in one such case. We were playing rubber bridge at the club, and our side was soon in four hearts despite some competition. West led the king of diamonds and, in response to an enthusiastic signal from his partner, continued with the ace of diamonds and another. East won the third round with the queen and shifted to the ten of spades.

"Now most of you would think the success or failure of the hand hinged on a simple finesse. I would be the hook, and on the location of the queen this hand would stand or fall. Not so - the location of the queen was obvious!

"In first seat, not vulnerable, West had passed and he had already shown up with the ace-king of diamonds. The bidding and play suggested strongly that he had five spades headed by the queen-jack. Had he held the queen of clubs as well, he would almost surely have opened the bidding.

"Since the finesse was due to fail, there was no point to taking it. Our declarer unhesitatingly found the best line. He won the ace of spades, drew three rounds of trumps ending on the board, and led me!

"East covered, declarer won the ace, then continued with a club to the king. When West produced the nine, the desired position had been reached. The eight-six of clubs were equal with the ten. The eight was led for a ruffing finesse. East covered and declarer ruffed. He got back to dummy with the king of spades, and the six of clubs provided a parking place for the losing spade.

When you first looked at this hand, would you have thought that declarer would take two finesses in the club suit?"

Three recently published cook-books are intended to be used, consulted, called upon for inspiration and diagnosis - real workhorse reference volumes. Within their respective scopes, they fill most of the above criteria. Each has its strengths and weaknesses, but for almost everything you ever wanted to know about the subjects of international cooking, pies or bread, here goes.

The best of the lot is Easy Basics for International Cooking by the edi-tors of Sunset Books and Sunset Magazine (Sunset Books, $16.95). Like its predecessor, "Easy Basics for Good Cooking," it is a remarkably clear, organized and easy-to-follow collection of recipes and instruction in techniques.

However, this one has something else - creative flair. Somehow, from the huge number of nationalities represented in this truly international cookbook, the most delicious dishes have been chosen. And they're not always the ones you'd expect either. Almost without exception they're not difficult to prepare, for the original recipes have been simplified, adapted to our needs. A rigid purist might not approve of this. I do.

When something a bit tricky appears, it is often accompanied by color step-by-step photographs that guide you along — as in the case of Japanese shabu shabu, Filipino lumpia. Moroccan bastilla or Swedish paper-wrapped fish. Much less intimidating this way - simplified but not simplistic.

The curious cook with an adventurous palate will really have fun with this cookbook. I haven't ever seen so many excellent recipes (375) from so many cuisines (64) collected in one book. They're organized by topic: appetizers, soups, meats, poultry and so on.

The photos are serviceable, the spiral design assures that the pages lie flat and the format is excellent. One minor complaint: too many filled pastry, turnover and dumpling-like recipes.

One of the pies in "Easy as Pie": Frozen Strawberry Fluff Pie.

The "fluff" in the title is the real surprise in this recipe. I admit when I first heard the procedure for making it from a friend in Vermont, I did not think it would work. I had to try it to believe that egg whites containing so much fruit at the start would whip this high, but they do and then some.

To prepare the filling, wash, hull and mash up the strawberries, to make about 1½ cups mashed fruit. Don't worry about the size of the pieces; the beater will whip them smaller. Add the sugar and stir well. In the large bowl of an electric mixer, combine the egg whites, lemon juice and mashed and sweetened berries. Whip on medium (not high) speed until stiff peaks form. This may take 10 minutes or more with small beaters, or 5 minutes at speed No. 6 on a Kitchenaid fitted with a balloon beater. (Note: Speed is not the important thing here; just whip slowly and steadily until the volume mounts). It will surprise you how high the volume will rise. Stop when the peaks are really stiff, but not dry.

In a chilled bowl with a chilled beater, whip the cream until nearly stiff. Fold this, little by little, into the strawberry fluff. The volume will decrease somewhat at this point. Turn the mixture into the prepared meringue shell, top with plastic wrap, then wrap it airtight in foil

Purdy (Atheneum, $19.95) has a completely different set of strengths. Organization is not one of them, unfortunately. In the course of making almost any recipe in this book, you will be referred to another page for part of it - the crust, the filling, a topping. The poor cook winds up flipping back and forth through the book to put together one pie.

In many cases the directions are too long-winded, and they seldom are self-contained on one page or even on a two-page spread. A minor annoyance, granted, but one that is indicative of this book's layout. Visually, it just does't have the cook in mind. And it certainly isn't a coffee-table cookbook - there are practically no illustrations.

The contents are something else, though. Here you will find a pastry recipe collection that is varied and complete, along with recipes for every kind of pie imaginable.

The book, in general, is a complete and informative guide to piemaking - for the novice or the experienced cook. Once again, an excellent reference volume. She didn't miss a single classic of the pie world.

Whole-grain breadmaking is the subject of "The Laurel's Kitchen Bread Book" by Laurel Robertson with Carol Flinders and Bronwen Godfrey (Random House, $19.95) Premise: Whole-grain bread is unparalleled for taste and nutrition, but many claim they don't have the time and expertise necessary to make it. This is where Ms. Robertson steps in with her 15 years of breadbaking experience to prove these folks wrong. She succeeds - partially.

Will there ever be enough time for Christmas plans?

By DOREEN T. HANSBURY King Features Syndicate

Did someone speed up the calen-dar? Starting my Christmas plan-ning late in October, I thought I would have loads of time to shop, mail cards, cook and host an open house before the holiday season was over for another year. Wrong.

A trip to my favorite department store made it clear I was running on "hold" while the rest of the world operated in high gear.

A November shopping trip started like this. With list finally in hand, I headed for the logical first item — Christmas cards. The card counter looked well-bedecked in red, and moving in that general direction I wondered whether to choose a scene with jolly Santas (that the kids would like), squirrels decorating a tiny tree in the snow (that I'd like) or a vivid gold "Merry Christmas" on red velvet (that my husband would like).

When I asked the salesgirl for cards, she shriveled me with a glance, and informed me Christmas cards had been sold out two weeks ago. Putting my glasses on, I realized the red counter decorations were Valentine hearts.

Not to worry, I thought - you can always make your own cards with a potato stencil. Still, a feeling deep inside made me fear I had something to dread. Had I missed Christmas shopping?

A quick run through the store bake and freeze Christmas cookies be cheered to find someone else who confirmed it. The glove department featured golf gloves, and sportswear was given over to bathing suits and shorts. There were some great men's school.' shirts — if your husband likes short With sleeves in December.

But the toy department was the worst of all. The remains of Santa's beard and a crushed Cabbage Patch doll were being swept away to make room for a display of tennis rackets. I walked the store in a daze. Was it possible I had missed Christmas shopping before we had finished the Thanksgiving turkey? I went home to see if friends were making plum puddings or planting spring gardens. Obviously, I needed help. So 1 turned to Agnes The Organized. (You know someone is organized when she irons her bras.)

It was a foregone conclusion Agnes would have Christmas all wrapped up and stored in a closet. But surely, even she still would be making cookies, or fashioning a pine cone door decoration!

I begged for answers. How could I be ready for Christmas, when the stores were working on February? She wasn't reassuring.

"I always shop in July," she bub-ed. "That's the best time for a bled. good selection of mittens, scarves and cross-country skis. Of course, I wrap as I shop because I found my cards, paper and ribbon at last year's after-Christmas sales. Naturally, I all year long. I put together the hors d'oeuvres for our Christmas party the first day the kids are back in

With lunch-box leftovers, I wondered?

'I don't send cards," Agnes bubbled on, "just wish friends Merry Christmas when I see them. The money saved pays for phone greet-ings to out-of-towners." She sighed happily, "It all saves so much time and trouble.'

The coffee she poured didn't revive my wilted Christmas spirit. I knew I'd already blown it. But, how could I explain to my husband and the kids?

He already was wearing deeper grooves in our Bing Crosby "White Christmas" record. The kids had been cutting tree decorations out of their math notebooks for weeks. The disco beat I heard in the background when they came home from school was now accompanied by the sound of shaking piggy banks. There was no way I could ignore Christmas.

postponed Christmas shopping until early November. No such luck. Mona was, if possible, better pre-pared for the holiday than Agnes. She had thumbed through the Neiman-Marcus catalog early in October and her gifts were winging their way from Texas, gift wrapped. Her artificial tree, still carefully decorated, was stored in a closet, needing only to be moved to the living room and plugged in the week before Christmas. A caterer took care of food for her holiday parties, and her husband's secretary had signed and mailed their cards a week ago. Mona gaily gurgled she had nothing left to do but decide which gowns to choose for the round of holiday parties.

With a Scroogian scowl, and a mind full of "Bah, Humbugs," I left Mona's and trailed home, more discouraged than ever.

Determined to be on time for something, I started doodling the menu for the Fourth of July picnic. After crossing potato salad out and switching with baked beans four times, I threw the Fourth of July menu in the wastebasket and called Olivia. Perhaps she would invite me over for a cup of her bracing camomile tea. That would set things right again.

Olivia's penchant for anything green and growing is fulfilled at the holiday season. Every corner of her house is crammed with pine boughs, holly and poinsettias, and includes a pot-planted Christmas tree, upstairs and down. When I complained I was too late to buy gifts, she said she had no problems.

'I've been taking cuttings of my plants for months, and only yesterday they were decorated with little red bows all ready to give. Then too, I've made mint and sage jelly, and packets of herb seeds are ready to mail for out-of-town gifts.

Lucky Olivia's gifts had sprouted forth from her garden along with the cabbages. Wait until next year, I fumed inwardly.

Mimeographed

By ELISE BELL King Features Syndicate

One of the fixtures of the Christmas season is the mimeographed letter enclosed in a Christmas card. This usually comes from someone you haven't seen for years, but who feels compelled to keep you abreast of everything that has been happening in the past year. even if nothing has.

I have mixed feelings about mimeographed letters. On the one hand, I like to hear of all the activities the writer has been involved in. On the other hand, I find they often tell me more than I want to know.

I have made a study of mimeographed letters in Christmas cards and have come to the conclusion that they fit roughly into five general categories as follows.

The Perfect Family. This account of all social events since last Christmas, can be boring but it can sometimes be enjoyable.

Last year, we received a long mimeographed letter from a friend who lives in Illinois. We hadn't seen her for years. She enclosed a copy of an article which had appeared in the local paper describing her 35th highschool reunion. We didn't know any of the people in the article but we sure would like to. It must have been quite a class.

According to the article, there was "Sis McCann who raised a passel of sons and then followed a Guru into retreat," and then, there was my favorite, "Skidgee-Skodj.

I kid you not, that is his name. At this reunion. Skidgee retold stories of his "escapades in the school's ventilating system." Unfortunately, this tantalizing bit of information was and I gue will never know what Skidgee Skodj acutally did in the ventilating system. Perhaps it's better that way, because the article went on to say that "Anne Mufson married her beloved Skidgee, the class clown, who became head of the town Chamber of Commerce. It's good to know that Skidgee's somewhat colorful past didn't stand in the way of his future success. The Politician/Salesman. This is a broad category which includes those who list names of organizations such as the Rotary, various boards, clubs and products associated with the writer. In the politician's case, he is the product. He always sends Christmas cards with a picture of his family, which invariably consists of an equal number of boys and girls and at least one dog. all dressed in red and green. The Philosopher. There is something about preparing a mimeographed letter for a Christmas card that brings out the philosopher in a lot of people. It's the one time you're given the opportunity to expound your wisdom and express your feelings about life to a captive audience. There is one more category. This includes the witty, informative and interesting mimeographed letters. Who writes those? You and me, of ably the most popular letter of this genre. Usually written by mother, it relates in glowing terms the many achievements of the family. The children are all honor students. The daughter has not only won a beauty contest but a scholarship to college. The son is not only a top scholar but captain of the football team and the father is always being promoted to an even higher position.

Nobody is ever sick, drunk or failing. And mother manages to get across her admirable accomplishments as a superwoman, with all due modesty.

This can all be pretty depressing, particularly if your son has just totaled your car, your daughter has dropped out of school to elope with an unemployed balloonist and your husband has lost his job. The Soap Opera. This is the oppo-site extreme of the category described above. In this letter, the writer pours out all the anguishes she has suffered during the past year. She describes operations in detail, lists illnesses and accidents and dwells on the misery not only of her family, but her friends and relatives. She credits a lot of her troubles to her age, and, as she is the same age as you, this is not conducive to cheering you up. The Social Butterfly. This category, which entails a blow-by-blow

I have worked in a nursing home and have seen many types of elderly patients. Actually, they are people like us. They are pleasant or nasty, dependent or independent, slow or quick learners, rich or poor. Some contribute to life and some isolate themselves from others; some are healthy and others sickly.

By the year 2000, it is estimated that there will be at least 28 million Americans 65 years of age or older. Most of these elderly folks want to take care of themselves in their own homes. Unfortunately, large numbers of elderly are failing mentally or physically and have to be institutionalized for financial or physical reasons and never leave till liberated by death.

When our family of 10 children had to consider the possibility of placing our elderly parents in an institution, we came to the common conclusion that since they had struggled to provide for us all those years, they now deserved our help.

On July 10, 1981, our father had a stroke that impaired some of his vision and memory. Since Mom is physically incapable of caring for Pop, the four brothers and six sisters (ranging from age 60 to 42) have worked out a system of "24-Hour

The six girls, Anita, Jannetta, Mary Alice, Dorothy, Gladys and I have Monday through Saturday and are responsible for laundry, shop-ping and household chores; the four boys, Lester, Paul, Carl and David, have Sundays and are responsible for yard work and mechanical chores. Fortunately, commuting for our family has not been a problem; we all live within a radius of 50 miles of our parents.

Our first step was to procure a large calendar on which our schedule is posted each month. A small bulletin board is attached to the wall opposite the calendar, where we can post requests for schedule changes needed because of vacations, sick days, etc.

A record chart is kept daily on medication so that each of us administers the correct pill or dosage. Doctor appointments, church and social visits for Mom are usually solved by one of the daughters "Pop-sitting" while another drives Mom to her needed away-from-home excursions.

Meals often are brought along, or a sister-in-law visiting over the dinner hour will bring the meal. At times, Mom still likes to cook and serve the meal or "treat" at a local restaurant.

At home, we've found Pop does best with a rounded soup bowl and a bathes in a sitting position. Shaving spoon to scoop food into his mouth. .When ordering a meal at a restaurant for Pop, we order hamburger. french fries or a sandwich because it's easier for him to handle.

At first, bathing was hard for most of us, but we've become accustomed to the task. We found a sitting position on the bathtub floor unsafe for him when he tried to raise himself. We now have a small board propped across the ledges of the tub to make a seat near the faucet. And Pop now Taking care of Pop has not always been a pleasant task with Pop awakening numerous times during the night for talking or pottying. Mom sleeps in a room by herself and a cot is placed in the same room as Pop for the person staying over.

If Pop has weak spells, the potty chair is used in the bedroom rather than the bathroom way down the hall. His constant nightly bathroom trips have brought us to the conclusion that he deliberately keeps us awake to get even with us for our naughtiness when we were children.

We've all become well versed in psychology, because Pop's mind conjures some strange rituals in the process of preparing to go to sleep and we do our best to give him peace of mind.

Much enjoyment is gained in watching Pop wander around the yard, talking to the neighbor's dog or just sitting by the window observing the rain or snowfall in winter.

Pop has a proud smile of accomplishment when he is able to remember our names or his own. One of our proudest moments is when we teasingly ask him, "Who was the naughtiest of your children?" and he remembers the name of the questioner.

We've taught him to write his name, and to our surprise it is legible. He loves seeing it displayed on Pop's memory is like a TV screen the bulletin board. We keep his mind active by giving him cards and asking what he sees on the picture, or he places game pieces back into the box. He tells jokes and then winks. It's such a good feeling, to see your father smile so much.

With all of us for company, the days and evenings have been much less taxing for Mother. We've laughed, cried and shared many deep feelings with her; it gives us a sense of accomplishment to help each other through a valley in our lives. There have been some discrepancies in the kitchen, with Mom having to contend with 10 different personalities misplacing her utensils or moving dishes.

Our cherished memories have been kept in a diary titled "Pop's Diary" in which we log our tender loving care each day. We look forward to reading the pages on each of our visits. Like school children once again, we rib, joke and play pranks on each other in our daily writing in "Pop's Diary." Our experience has brought this family closer and we've gained new insights concerning the older generation

Apartment, house renters have certain rights, responsibilities

By LIN GRENSING King Features Syndicate

Renting...say the word and fullgrown men and women become sniveling cowards. Yet, finding a new place to live can be an exciting experience - if you're aware of the pitfalls and know your rights and responsibilities.

Each year thousands of people change their residence; with the rising cost of real estate and home mortgages, most of these people rent.

If you're a renter, you know how frustrating the search for a place to live can be. To ease the frustration, you should be aware of certain things: How to make the best selection based on your needs and income, what to expect from your lease, your landlord's rights and responsibilities and your responsibilities as a tenant.

Before you even begin to look for a place to live, there are a few questions you have to answer:

- How much can I afford to pay each month for rent? What is the best location for

Would I rather live in an apartment, a detached home, a duplex or a mobile home?

How much closet and storage space do I need?

Always insist upon inspecting the place you intend to rent. Be as thorough as you would be if you were purchasing the property.

One thing that most renters don't consider is the opportunity to negotiate rental amounts. If you're renting in an area with many vacancies, you'll find your landlord is very flexible with the rent amount.

One landlord with several rental properties says, "I've had tenants ask for less rent often and I'll say OK. I don't want to keep showing the place - it's worth that little bit less a month to rent to somebody I think will be a good tenant and who'll really take good care of the place.

It may also be helpful to establish limits for rent increases at the end of a lease period. And don't overlook utility costs. Find out exactly what you will be responsible for. If you assume your landlord is paying for heat and electricity, you may be in for an expensive surprise.

After you've chosen a place you'd like to live in, you need to consider the three types of rental agreements

- The lease gives you the most protection. It is a written agreement which records the contract between the owner and the renter.

A written agreement is shorter and more informal. It often permits month-to-month tenancy, but may not offer you the legal safety provided by a formal lease.

An oral agreement offers you the least amount of protection. In the event of a misunderstanding. you will have no recourse.

Chances are you'll decide that a lease is best, but before you sign on the dotted line, be sure the following points are included:

A property description;

A time duration for tenancy; Names of landlord and tenant;

The due date for rent and amount of rent:

Your responsibility for maintenance of the unit;

Notice requirements for terminating occupancy;

 The landlord's rules and regulations;

Your rights and responsibilities Kathy Golden, a realtor in Eau Claire, Wisc., suggests that you go through with the landlord and list any pre-existing damage. Before you move out, have the landlord come back again and refer to the list you made previously.

When signing a lease, Ms. Golden suggests that tenants consider any possible changes in their situations that may cause problems in the future. She states that the job change is classic. "The tenant should always try and see what might change during the lease period and allow some leeway. Add a clause to cover 'unplanned for' situations. I have a clause at the place I'm renting for changing or transferring jobs or buying a house. You might also want a clause for getting married.

Rental clauses can't:

any future disputes with your landlord or stipulate that you pay your landlord's fees in any legal action taken against you;

Permit your landlord to exert unfair leverage under false pretenses or unproven evidence;

- Permit your landlord to assume possession of your personal property for lack of rent payment;

- Free your landlord from responsibility for negligence in causing you or your guests injury: Permit retaliation against you by eviction, shutting off your water or heat or padlocking your doors;

Permit your landlord to charge you rent for a dwelling that has been gutted by fire, tornado or other disaster.

Although these clauses are unlawful, if they're included in your lease you may still have to go to court if problems develop; make sure you strike these clauses before you sign. If your landlord promises to make repairs, get it in writing. Although some states have "repair and deduct" laws allowing tenants to deduct the cost of minor repairs from their rent, you shouldn't assume that you can do this.

Have a clear understanding of what is involved in making improvements. Who's going to do them, how are they doing to be paid for, and what can and cannot be done? If you wish to withhold rent, don't simply stop paying. Establish a special savings or escrow account, but first find out what protections the law provides in your state or municipal-

The security deposit can also cause problems. Theoretically, if you've inspected the apartment with your landlord before you move in and before you move out - and there has been no damage - you should expect to receive your deposit immediately.

In reality, the chances are you'll wait a while before your check is mailed to you. Golden suggests that you leave a forwarding address. "If you don't get your money back within 15 days, write a letter - in another 15 days, consider something more drastic."

To increase your chances of an enjoyable and satisfactory stay in your house or apartment:

- Report all problems when they occur - even when you're at fault: - Pay rent and utility bills promptly Provide proper and legal notice

Doctor 'makes rounds' on 30-mile-long trap line

BRADFORD, Pa. (AP) — For Dr. Larry Feltman, making the rounds it Bradford Hospital, in this town ust south of the New York-Pennylvania border, to look in on patients is a common practice with an uncommon twist.

This 32-year-old emergency service doctor also makes "the rounds" on a trap line, not once a month or on weekends, but for six straight months, in the Rocky Mountains of Utah, Colorado, Montana and southern Idaho. Half a year he mends bumps, bruises, cuts and broken bones and fights to save lives. The rest of the time he's busy setting trap lines of 30 miles or more; tanning his mink, raccoon, fox, muskrat, badger, coyote, beaver and bobcat pelts; sustaining himself on the meat of some of those catches; and clothing himself those catches; and clothing himself with his own hand-sewn furs to ward off the bitter cold. Feltman admits that people openly question how someone who "can save lives on a daily basis" can turn around in an instant and seal the fate of nature's furry creatures. It's not cruel to trap animals, he asserts. "I've been out there," seeing how the carnivorous food chain Explaining his lifestyle, he says, "I'm doing it to be true to my principles on the way life ought to be lived. My goal is to feel alive as a person. Money, social prestige and fame don't mean that much to me. It's the quality of life."

This Christmas Give

Snaring what he claims to be the best of both worlds came about in 1981. He went to a hospital in Salt Lake City, Utah, to begin surgical residency training because he "needed to be close to nature" and the mountains that were just a turn of a head away.

 Born on a farm in the small Michia gan town of Shephard, Feltman knew about hunting and trapping as a young boy, though he never actually did any. From then into his adult years, he said he quietly pined for the outdoors.

Three years ago, in the fall, Feltman took an adult education course on trapping taught by a man named Chuck Streeper, who lived as a trapper with his wife.

That class and his instructor's vivid tales were about all it took. He was hooked. Suddenly he found something that gave him so much satisfaction that he decided to leave his surgical residency, while nearly

U.S., U.S.S.R. talks won't allay fears

An Analysis

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Getting them to talk was no mean trick, but now that the United States and the Soviet Union are set to meet next month, the question is whether they can do much to allay mankind's nuclear fears.

At best, the Jan. 7-8 session in Geneva will be an icebreaker — cutting through the distrust that has frozen negotiations to reduce U.S. and Soviet nuclear weapons for more than a year.

It could be argued that the Soviets had no option but to propose the talks once President Reagan was reelected. Otherwise, the deadlock would remain, with the onus on Moscow for causing the breakdown by walking out in the first place.

Soviet President Konstantin U. Chernenko sent the message to the White House in mid-November that reopened the dialogue. The Soviet leader also had taken two major initiatives a few months earlier by proposing space talks and sending Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko here to meet with Reagan and Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

And yet, less than a month before the Shultz-Gromyko meeting, neither side seems prepared for the kind of concessions that could lead to an early accord. Their goals are too dissimilar at this point.

The Soviets, for instance, are determined to block the administration's Star Wars research program on missile defenses, while the United States refuses to declare a moratorium on anti-satellite tests or to delay the deployment of new missiles in Western Europe.

(and in Paris)

The Soviet edge in warheads apparently is increasing. According to figures released earlier this week by the State Department, Moscow has 387 mobile SS-20s deployed, and at least 10 new missile bases under construction.

The United States has installed 91 Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Britain, Italy and West Germany in a year. NATO's idea in authorizing the deployment in 1979 was to balance the Soviet SS-20 arsenal, but that has more than doubled since the decision was made.

So, unless an agreement can materialize, the Reagan administration has every incentive to keep going until all 572 missiles are in place. The Soviets, meanwhile, won't sit still.

The futile competition escalates, and an arms control agreement is shunted aside in the process.

A treaty slashing arms arsenals clearly will not come out of the talks between Shultz and Gromyko. Their job is to construct — in Reagan's phrase — a "framework" for understanding.

But having Paul H. Nitze, the veteran U.S. negotiator, at Shultz's side gives the Geneva meeting additional significance.

The 77-year-old conservative Democrat brought a hard-liner's reputation with him to the Reagan administration. But his "walk in the woods" with Soviet negotiator Yuli Kvitsinsky in 1982 brought the two sides closer than they ever have been to an accord.

Instead of insisting the Soviets dismantle all their SS-20s, it would have had them scale down to 300 warheads and held the U.S. deployment to an equal level — with the potent Pershings kept out of Europe.

His appointment as special adviser — and his readiness to meet with a Soviet counterpart after Shultz and Gromyko are done — is an overture that will not be lost on the Kremlin. He is there to demonstrate U.S. flexibility.

How the Soviets choose to respond is not clear.

Chernenko, in a letter published Wednesday, said he hoped the Shultz-Gromyko meeting would lead to "mutually acceptable understandings" on nuclear and space weapons.

ings" on nuclear and space weapons. The conciliation was tempered, however, by Chernenko's reference to "the entire set of questions related to nuclear and space weap-

That is a tall order, and leaves plenty of room for posturing and public relations. It also means the talks could bog down on an almost infinite number of issues. Chernenko told visiting American industrialist Armand Hammer on Treacher it would be "desirable"

Chernenko told visiting American industrialist Armand Hammer on Tuesday that it would be "desirable" for the United States and NATO to commit themselves not to be first to use nuclear arms.

That, in the diplomatic jargon, is a non-starter.

The Western allies have declined to make a formal commitment for years on the ground it would be meaningless. The United Nations Charter already implicitly rules out firm use. Lafayette's remarks led to establishment of college

By MARGARET REGAN

EASTON (AP) - In 1824, a delegation of 200 Eastonians rowed down the Delaware River to Philadelphia to get a glimpse of the Marquis de Lafayette.

The old soldier was making a triumphal tour through the United States, and he was greeted everywhere with parades and pageantry as the hero of the American Revolution. Amateur songwriters penned lyrics in his praise and artists vied for the privilege of painting his portrait.

One of the Eastonians, James Madison Porter, managed to meet him.

"Porter, Porter, I remember that name," Lafayette mused. "I fought with a Captain Porter at the Battle of Brandywine." Delighted, Porter said the captain was his father, and his uncle, a Mr. Parker, had also fought with them. "Ah, they were good soldiers," Lafayette recalled. "They were very kind to me when I was wounded." Dazzled, the younger Porter returned home. Shortly afterward, he and some friends conceived the idea of creating a college in their hometown, and Porter could think of no better name for the new school than that of the defender of liberty. So Lafayette College was born in 1826.

It is now 150 years since Lafayette's death in 1834 and the college has honored him by staging a month-long commemoration for the Frenchman who came to America in its time of need.

An art show called "Images of a Hero: Lafayette in Paintings, Prints and Sculpture" was the first exhibition of the school year. A collection of memorabilia, including swords, letters from Lafayette to American Revolutionary leaders and hundreds of prints were also on display.

The high point of the celebration was a symposium in which scholars from France and America met to debate Lafayette's legacy.

Who was this ususual man who decided on his own to aid a revolution in a foreign country?

Gilbert du Motier Lafayette was a wealthy aristocrat, born into a noble family and allied through marriage with another family of wealth and title. But Lafayette, evidently the Enlightenment, opposed the position of privilege held by the nobility in pre-Revolutionary France

He favored a constitutional monarchy for his country, opposed slavery, and all his life supported national revolutions, in the United States, France, Poland and Latin America.

Though scholars today debate his importance in the American Revolution, there is no question that his presence was an electrifying uplift for the embattled colonists.

He was only 19 years old, a 6-foot redhead, when he arrived in the United States in 1777 to offer his services to Gen. George Washington. By all accounts, the two men struck up influenced by the philosophers of a close friendship that lasted all the Battle of Yorktown, the site of the Enlightenment, opposed the their lives. Lafayette, whose father the British surrender. had died when the boy was 2, considered the older man his adoptive father and he later named his own son George Washington Lafayette. Lafayette was given a command with the American troops, was wounded at the battle of Brandywine and passed the long winter of hardship at Valley Forge. But he rendered possibly his most valuable service by returning to France in 1779 and persuading the king, Louis XVI, to help the Americans do battle with England, France's traditional enemy. Louis dispatched men, ships, supplies and food.

Lafayette returned in 1780 and took command of an army in Virginia, where he had a major part in

When he returned home, Lafayette played a major role in the Revolution of 1789 in his own country. He wrote the first drafts of the "Declaration of the Rights of Man," which was heavily influenced by the American Bill of Rights. Lafayette later fell into disfavor during the Terror, and he ended up spending five years in a prison in Austria.

After the defeat of Napoleon and the restoration of the monarchy, Lafayette remained a symbol of the opposition to unbridled royal power. Though his reputation was somewhat sullied in France after the revolution, in the United States, he remained an untarnished hero.

USS Torsk, a World War II-vintage submarine, lies at her berth in Baltimore's Inner Harbor. City officials and veterans' groups are at odds about how best to show the sub to tourists.

Veterans fight City Hall over sub's fate

By PAUL VALENTINE Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

BALTIMORE - Like a charlady in a harem, the gaunt black hull of the USS Torsk, a World War II-vintage submarine, sits amid the toney shops and splashy ambiance of the Inner Harbor here.

Nobody's quite sure why, but either because of, or in spite of, its forbidding outward appearance, it draws 140,000 paying visitors a year, $2.50 each for adults, a buck for kids. Inside is the brightly lit miniaturized world of submarine dials, switches, torpedos, berths and narrow passageways.

chart, a retired structural iron worker who saw action in the Pacific on the submarine Bicuna four decades ago. Several other vets, all members of the Delmarva chapter of the 7,000-member U.S. Submarine Veterans of World War II, grumbled in agreement.

Art Zilio, assistant director of the Baltimore Maritime Museum, a city agency that runs the Torsk show, said, "It's not that simple. The guided tours were nice, but they created huge backups" in the lines of tourists waiting to board the Torsk, causing many to leave in exasperation.

"Some of the vets were taking almost an hour to take a group through," Zilio said. "Other people would have to wait in line in the hot sun and would get pretty impatient." The city was losing revenue and gaining ill will, he said, and 'something had to give.' With or without the tours, the Torsk is a moneymaker. In the fiscal year that ended June 30, it took in $230,000 and had $50,000 left over after expenditures, including $8,000 earmarked for a submarine veterans' scholarship fund, according to city figures.

land. With its bow painted in a perpetual shark's tooth grin, the 311foot Torsk recently has become the object of a polite squabble between Mayor William D. Schaefer's savvy tourism strategists and a band of nostalgic World War II submarine veterans over how best to showcase the boat for the public.

The mayor's men want quick inand-out crowds to stream unhindered through the submarine and generate additional revenues for the city. The vets want to continue what they used to do: taking groups of 15 or 18 people at a time and guiding them with a long walk through narrative spliced with personal yarns and a question-and-answer session.

The tours, conducted by volunteer vets, were cut out last summer by the city. The vets are limited to standing on the pier outside the Torsk and answering questions for passing tourists.

Meenwhile, the warring factions, including high-ranking officials from the city's Recreation and Parks Department, so far have failed to settle the dispute over the submarine, which is owned by the state of Maryland.

The Navy, which retains the right to inspect retired ships even after they have been turned over to other agencies, plans to pay the Torsk a visit in a few weeks to see if it is being displayed in an authentic and "dignified" manner, a Navy spokes-man said. Some vets have complained that, since their guided tours were eliminated, the boat has fallen prey to vandals and souvenir hunters roaming unattended inside the boat. Baltimore city officials say the complaint is greatly exaggerated.

We had a class act going," said John H. Reichart, 59, a sub vet describing the guided tours as he stood by the Torsk recently in his distinctive plumed campaign hat and beribboned blue-and-yellow guide's vest.

'They're just trying to ... cram more people through now," said Rej-

The surplus will be used for bigticket maintenance projects, Zilio said.

What the city has now gained in efficient tour lines, it has lost in personal touch, say the vets.

"People like to ask questions," says Jim Woomer, 60, the crew-cut commander of the vets' Delmarva chapter. " 'How long does it take for a sub to dive?' 'How do you feed an 82-man crew on such a small boat?' Things like that ... We can answer those questions because we served on those boats.

Zilio, 38, who served four years in the Army, acknowledges the vets "are a living, breathing part of this boat...I'm not saying they're wrong. I'm saying you gotta look at my

Sure, "the guided tours...were much more personal, but at the same time, it's not personal when you're hot and standing in line for an hour" waiting to get on the sub, he said.

Another sore point with some of the vets is that the bulk of the revenues generated by the Torsk named after a fish of the cod family - goes to the upkeep of the Chesa-peake lightship, one of the ships formerly used to mark the channels along the Atlantic Coast.

True, says Zilio, but the Chesapeake is a sea-going vessel used for goodwill tours to other East Coast cities. As such, it must be kept in operating order and meet U.S. Coast Guard inspection standards. The Torsk, by contrast, is permanently moored and requires less upkeep. Zilio savs.

Teen-ager's pocketknife unearths prehistoric camel

ST. JOHNS, Ariz. (AP) — A 16-year-old's pocketknife and keen eyes have unearthed the remains of a prehistoric camel which roamed the shore of an ancient lake a million years ago in what's now northern Arizon

Last June, Darin Nielsen of St. Johns spotted a piece of broken bone on his parents' property in Richville Valley, in south St. Johns. He subsequently found more bone, but it was deposited in the earth in a vertical position.

Using his pocketknife. Darin began a 20-hour job of scraping and removing the encrusted sediment

the front arm of a Tyrannosaur, a carnivorous dinosaur that walked on two legs.

But, what he unearthed were the remains of an extinct giant camel that dates into prehistory about 11/2 to 21/2 million years ago.

What makes it significant is that it is the first camel of its kind identified in northern Arizona, and only the second found in the state.

The youth contacted Northern Arizona University geology profes-sor Larry Agenbroad, who identified. the animal as the genus Titanoty-lopus, a single-humped camel stand-ing 11% feet high. The only other such camel was found near Reding-ton in Pima County.

San Antonio's La Meri looks back on her career

By KERI GUTEN

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - She sits in her easy chair in suburban San Antonio and through a veil of cigarette smoke that somehow enhances the illusion, brings alive the far reaches of the world of the 1930s and '40s.

Her memory is flawless. Her hands dance and her eyes flash with remembrance as she conjures images of serene Japanese gardens, solemn yet magnificent Buddhist temples, Argentinian gauchos herding cattle through the middle of a sleepy town, Mexican plazas bursting with color and crowded with people conducting business.

Her name is Russell Meriwether Hughes Jr., but she was known throughout the world as La Meri - a simple enough calling card to pack childhood. some of the most famous (and infamous) theaters in the world for her elaborate solo, ethnic-dance performances "New York dance critic Walter Terry called her 'the greatest ethnic dancer of our time.' She was a gutsy thing who took on the art dance of the world and prospered," says John Igo, former arts critic and an English professor at San Antonio College. "She had a staggering gift, and that was the ability to mimic the experts.

blond, blue-eyed American lady who picked up native dances with the speed of light," but her dancing days are over, and she's moved back home to San Antonio, the city of her but I miss my energy.

At 86, she fights retirement. Her first attempt, starting 10 years ago in Cape Cod, failed miserably. Tired of showing dogs, she was lured out of retirement by members of a local theater. She taught dance and also helped start an annual, summer, ethnic-arts festival

She's hoping to make her retire-ment stick this time, but she has her doubts

It's plain and simple — she misses dancing.

"If I had the physical capabilities and could find a good dance part-LA MERI was once the "big, ner, I'd go dancing every night," she saids with a smile that dimpled her cheeks. "I don't really miss these things because I had them when I was young enough to enjoy them,

"I don't feel old on the inside — not at all. But I get up and skip across the room and tumble over a dog, and it's ridiculous. I am continually astonished and irritated to death at getting old."

SHE LOOKS much younger than she thinks she does, and she blames her performer's vanity for her critical eye. Her hair is snowy, her voice gravelly from too many years of smoking cigarettes, her mind amazingly quick and sharp. A dancer's trimness persists, and she still carries herself with a dancer's poise back straight, neck arched, hands punctuating her words.

"I always thought dancers who died in their 40s were damn lucky because they're finally resting," she said, exhaling a big puff of smoke.

"This drive is a blessing and a curse. forming in a series of recitals in San It's not tragic, but it's an incubus on your back

"It's tough to just cut it off. My brain works just fine; it's a pity you can't transplant brains," she mused. "I would like to give all I've learned to someone young enought to enjoy

La Meri was born to dance, despite the pronouncement by her first dance teacher that "this 10year-old was hopelessly awkward." La Meri didn't believe it, and by age 12, she choreographed her first dance solo for a San Antonio church show.

From this success, she continued with her dance lessons, adding Spanish as her first ethnic dance and perAntonio

OTHER LESSONS in voice, violin and acting gave her the foundation needed to launch her career. The Texas Rio Grande Valley was her first conquest, then the world, starting with South America in 1928, Africa and Arabia in 1929, Europe in 1930, Australia and New Zealand in 1936, India and the Orient in 1937.

La Meri's repertoire includes traditional dances from India, Java, Burma, Thailand, Arabia, Morocco, China, Japan, Spain, Mexico, the West Indies, Peru, Ecuador, Panama, Chile, Argentina, Venezuela, Colombia, Hawaii, Tahiti, Samoa, Maori and the Philippines as well as American Indian dances.

Tower jovial, ready to retire after 24 years

By KATHRYN BAKER

WASHINGTON (AP) - John Tower is uncharacteristically jovial these days, now that Congress has adjourned and the election is over. He motions helplessly around his Senate office, its shelves still halffilled with books and mementos.

"Now I'm busy trying to figure out what to do with all this stuff I've accumluated over 24 years and trying to find a place to put it," he said. What the once little-known teacher from Wichita Falls accumulated in his years in Washington was the respect of colleagues and a reputation as an effective player in backroom maneuvering.

But Tower, 59, is packing up these days and leaving at the height of his power. Growing tired of the Senate and eager to build a "second career," he chose not to run for reelection, and instead chaired President Reagan's re-election campaign in Texas.

The rumors about Tower succeeding Caspar Weinberger as Secretary of Defense in a second Reagan term have died down since Weinberger announced that he plans to stay.

"Nobody's talked to me or anything," Tower said. "Quite frankly, I don't expect to do anything, unless they ask me to be on some advisory commission or board or something of that sort, and so far nobody's talked with me about anything, so I'm just making my plans to go back in private life."

TOWER'S only announced new occupation is visiting professor at Southern Methodist University in Dallas. He says he also plans to enter off until he is out of the Senate and free from any possible conflict of interest.

When Tower announced in August 1983 that he was leaving the Senate, he said he simply wanted a change.

He maintained he was certain of re-election, even though as Texas' only Republican senator since Reconstruction, his seat has always been high on the Democrats' shopping list. In 1978, he spent $4 million and won by only a percentage point over former Congressman Robert Krueger.

But some colleagues wondered why he would leave only three years after finally getting some real power as head of the Armed Services Committee?

Colleague Sam Nunn, D-Ga., ranking minority member on Armed Services, said he was not surprised by Tower's decision and accepted Tower's public explanation.

"He's been here for a number of years, and I really think that the strain of the office, plus the strain of going back and forth in an airplane year-round ... That's a terrible dilemma on a daily basis," Nunn said.

"It's not like the old days," Nunn said, when senators came to Washington for a few months, then lived at home full-time the rest of the year. "Now we're trying to live two lives. People aren't going to stay as long as they used to.

"WHEN HE told me he was not going to run again, at first I was a little bit shook up," said Tower's friend and expected successor as Armed Services chairman, Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz.

"But then I got to thinking about it. I think he's, oh, about 55 to 60. If a man's going to get out of this rat-trap up here and make any money for himself, he's got to do it by that age." Goldwater first met Tower when the 35-year-old college teacher was running for Lyndon Johnson's U.S. Senate seat. Goldwater was chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee.

"Naturally, I thought, here's an awfully small fella to be running in a state like Texas," Goldwater said.

"My name is John Tower - but you can see that I don't," the 5-foot-6 candidate would sometimes joke to warm up the crowds.

Tower had run for office before, getting "waxed" in a 1954 try for the egislature.

"But in 1960, the party felt we had a moral obligation to run somebody against Lyndon Johnson," Tower said. "Well, the older, more mature and wiser people weren't going to touch that with a barge pole, so they said, 'Well, Tower's kind of a bright oung schoolteacher and articulates party line pretty well, we'll just run him

TOWER WAS beaten in 1960, but the seat was open after Johnson became vice president. (The Legisla-ture had enacted a law to let John-son run for both offices.)

Library of Congress data to be computerized

By KEN RINGLE

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON - The Library of Congress, that elegant bastion of the book in an age of elec-tronic images, has been infiltrated — some say seized — by computer people, and not every-one is happy about it.

While the library's scholars have been preoccupied with weighty philosophical questions of the ages, critics say a subver-sive army of technicians has been quietly turning its intellectual treasures into so many electronic bytes, accessible only to those fluent in the language of Radio Shack. Traditionalists in the Thomas Jefferson reading room mutter darkly of civilization in decline.

"Downright insanity!" protests Ferdinand Stibi, a retired Army historian now stalking the fields of genealogy. "A tremendous blunder."

"A great regret," says historian Barbara Tuchman, envisioning the dehumanization of scholarly research

Immediate focus of their distress is the computerization of the library's card catalogue, a task of dizzying vastness, under way in one form or another since 1968 and scheduled for completion - except for editing before the end of the year.

Library officials say that the operation is long overdue - that the card catalogue has been obsolete as both a system and a catalogue for nearly two decades.

"BUT TO some people, it's an icon," sighed Bob Zich, the library's director of planning and development. "It's like a religion.

Launched in 1901 when the library moved into its greendomed building across from the Capitol, the card catalogue is the world's largest: a bibliographer's dream of 60 million index cards, each precisely 75 by 125 millimeters in size, listing every book in the library by title, author and subject.

It overflows the halls and alcoves east of the main reading room in the Thomas Jefferson Building, and to generations of college students and professional researchers its massive wooden cabinets, well-thumbed cards and chest-high writing tables have exuded the very essence of scholarship > social loss that dismays traditionalists in the reading room, however, but the possible loss of something more - a conceptual transformation of the library itself from a center of literature and thought into an immense data bank.

"The problem with that damn computer is that it will only give you exactly what you ask for,' said Arnold Compton of Arling ton, Va., a graying, retired school teacher reading up on medieval weaponry. "The real joy of scholarly research is serendipity - discovering something valuable in the process of looking for something else.

Browsing through a tray of catalogue cards, you often have your mind tickled by a title or author that has nothing at all to do with what you're looking for. That can get you thinking about your subject in a whole new way.

"You can't do that in a computer, or at least I haven't figured out how. Without that quality of thought, book titles are just so much data."

Library of Congress officials, while not exactly dismissing such objections, say they are made by only a recalcitrant minority of library patrons, most of whom are refusing to deal with the library world as it is and necessarily must now be.

THE INFORMATION explosion of the last 25 years, the officials say, has left major libraries no choice but to deal with the storage and "accessing" of information via methods more efficient than books.

For nearly two decades, librarians here and elsewhere have been far less concerned with books per se than with things like electronic cataloguing, data storage and retrieval and optical discs.

Not only has it become physically impossible to contain and house the yearly incoming flood of new books and manuscripts, they say, but the acid content of most paper manufactured in the last century is already crumbling entire libraries to dust.

Science has found a way to stop that deterioration, and the Library of Congress is building a $12.5 million facility at the Army's former biological warfare center at Fort Detrich, Md., to deacidify books using diethyl zinc gas.

But so immense is the library's collection that at the treatment rate of 500,000 books a year, it will take 20 years just to treat the books it has. And all the while the library's whirlwind acquisition program is adding books at the rate of two volumes every second.

Thus, the library is racing against time as well as space, to preserve its information in less perishable as well as more compact form.

THE computerization of the card catalogue is only the most visible aspect of a multimilliondollar revolution in what the Library of Congress is and will become Already humming away in the basement of the library's James Madison Building is a state of the art data retrieval "jukebox" on which the equivalent of 1.5 million pages of print are stored for virtually instant computer retrieval on laser-etched optical discs.

Deputy librarian W.J. Welsh says the jukebox, part of a three-year, $2.1 million pilot program, is the face of the bibliographical future - one that could shrink the library's entire 80 million item collection into one of the library's three existing building.

The revolution is so far-reaching that Librarian of Congress Daniel J. Boorstin named a special committee of high-tech heavy thinkers to ponder the very "Future of the Book." And there's more.

Bob Zich, the library's bespectacled director of planning and development, speaks fondly of the day near the year 2000 when the library will be a single enormous information center "possibly under a mountain somewhere," to which citizens will dial long distance to read information they want via a video screen the size of a pocket calculator.

WELSH AND Zich speak of such changes as "hospitable technology."

ARDMORE, Okla. (AP) - There's a library at 104 H Street NE in Ardmore. But there aren't any books in

In fact, it doesn't have any of the things one would expect to find in a library. There are no soft chairs, no magazines, no records or tapes or soft lighting, no newspapers and no books.

And, being one of only two in Oklahoma, it's proven valuable to geologists, oil producers, drillers and investors who extract valuable oil from the depths underneath Oklahoma and Texas.

J. Elbert King, who is approaching a half-century of operating the Ardmore Sample Cut and Library, says the samples stored in his library date back to statehood and provide valuable geological information for prospective drillers.

King maintains a library of samples from some 75,000 oil and gas wells, most drilled in Oklahoma over the years but some drilled in Texas. In addition to the samples stored in the library, King has processed well samples from 48 states, offshore drilling sites, the Middle East, and Spain.

These are the actual samples from the well, King explained as he conducted a tour of the library.

Soil samples are taken at 10-foot depths while a well is being drilled, so a well 2,000 feet deep could produce 200 samples. Each sample is brought into the Sample Cut in a small cloth bag, where it's washed, dried and placed in a tiny paper sack.

Samples that are to be filed at the library are then cataloged according to a variety of information.

Well samples for which library cataloging is not requested are returned to the producer or geolo-

King says that the soil samples can be examined through a microscope, and that a geologist can gain a great deal of information through such examination

He explains that soil samples taken from wells surrounding a drilling site can be examined for comparison, in order for the geologist to determine what the prospects are for oil at a particular site. No method of predetermination is fool-proof, but King says a close look at the soil samples is helpful.

Although electronic techniques such as seismology have come into being during the past two decades, King says microscopic examination of soil samples is still a valuable tool in the search for oil.

King's library mainly serves south-west and southeast Oklahoma, but samples have come in from all sec-tions of the state. Additionally, close tons of the state. Additionally, close to 4,000 samples from Texas drilling sites are stored in the library. King joined the Sample Cut in 1935, a year after his brother, Frank King, started the business. Jury still out on consultants' effectiveness

EDITOR'S NOTE - Picking a jury may be the most important part of a trial, and for that reason lawyers in recent years have been employing profes-sional jury analysts, social scientists and psychologists, to help screen the candidates and provide other services. The John De Lorean drug trafficking trial was a case in point.

By JEFF BARKER Associated Press Writer

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. - When automaker John De Lorean went on trail on charges of trafficking in cocaine, his lawyer hired a jury consultant to conduct a national public opinion survey.

When Pennslyvania attorney William Costopoulos was asked to defend a top state official charged with bribery, he sought professional help in picking a

"I've been doing the work for 10½ years," says jury consultant Cathy Bennett of Houston. "Back then there were a handul of us. Today, I get 25 to 30 calls a month from people who want to know how to get into the profession."

Trained in humanistic psychology, she said one of her main jobs "to get lawyers to ask better questions and teach them to talk less like a lawyer and more like a person.

When Costopoulos and his client, John Kerr, took a seat at the defense table in a Harrisburg courtroom for jury selection last June 18, they were joined by Arthur Patterson, a social psychologist who specializes in analyzing juries.

THE SELECTION of a jury took two days in the trial of Kerr, a top aide to Pennsylvania Auditor General Al Benedict charged with directing a $200,000 job-selling scheme.

Before Patterson ever got to the courtroom, he knew the ages and occupations of each of 200 prospective jurors. Patterson, who is president of Jury Analysts, Inc., of State College, also knew what their homes looked like, whether they were Democrat or Republican, and whether they were familiar with Kerr's case.

People like Bennett and Patterson are in demand because of "hidden prejudices" that lurk in all of us, says attorney Stanley Prospective jurors, above, trials for 35 years, routinely uses social researchers to aid his defense

The jury process mandates that judges disqualify candidates who admit to a bias preventing them from fairly weighing the evidence. Attorneys also are permitted to reject a designated number of jury pool members without stating the reason.

But would-be jurors often have prejudices that most lawyers were never trained to detect, Preiser says.

"There is no way a judge or lawyer can make a person admit they're prejudiced if a person doesn't know it himself," he says.

to move the trial, and De Lorean was subsequently cleared of the charges which grew out of an alleged $25 million cocaine deal.

But Weitzman did not use a jury analyst inside the courtroom. "I prefer to pick a jury based on my experience and background," he says.

In the Kerr trial, Patterson's groundwork included finding juror candidates' political affiliations through voter registration records, and compiling a questionnaire asking, among other things, whether they had heard of the case.

potential jurors' homes.

'You can makes guesses about a person by the kind of neighborhood they live in," Patterson says. "Sometimes people mark their homes in ways that convey cer-tain attitudes — for example with big American flags.'

WHILE EACH case is different, there are personality types that Patterson tends to counsel a client against accepting for a jury. "For example, people who are authoritarian in nature tend to be conviction-prone," he says. "They are very high on obeying the rules and doing what they are told.

"If you ask them if the fact that the prosecution went through the trouble to bring someone to trial means they are probably guilty, they will often answer, 'Yeah, probably.

Patterson, an associate profes-sor of administration of justice at Pennsylvania State University, directs a staff of five at Jury Analysts. He says he keeps no "batting average" on cases won and lost

He also says he was not optimistic about the Kerr jury. His research had indicated that it would be difficult finding panelists capable of sympathy for a politician accused of a white-collar crime.

Kerr was convicted on June 30 on 139 counts of bribery and other charges, but was acquitted on 77 additional counts that also included bribery.

"I firmly believe that if John" Kerr were the officer of a company - a John De Lorean doing something like this, he would have been acquitted," Patterson says. "The evidence was not that strong.

But prosecutor Lawrence Claus said the verdict spoke for itself.

"THE FACT that the defense utilized those individuals (the consultants) didn't affect our part in the jury selection at all," he said

Patterson concedes his company is perceived by some as unfairly stacking the legal pro-cess in favor of defendants who can afford such services.

'My response is that first, I'm sitting right there in the courtroom so nothing is hidden," Patterson said. "And we don't select juries or pack juries, we only challenge jurors who would be biased, and I believe we are serving the trial process.

Patterson uses the hypothetical example of a murder case in which the defense attorney fails to hire the best available chemist to prove that blood stains are not the victim's. "In the same way, when an attorney gets a consultant to help him understand the King Kong dying of heat prostration?

CHICAGO (AP) — Look! Up there! It's King Kong, climbing the Empire State Building.

But what's this? He's dying of heat prostration.

And over there, the giant octopus of "It Came from Beneath the Sea" is coiling one of its tentacles around the Golden Gate Bridge!

But wait - now it's exploding like a kernel of popcorn.

The giant grasshoppers marching down Chicago's Magnificent Mile are having problems, too. They're collapsing because their joints aren't lined with diamonds - the only substance strong enough to support the 12-foot creatures.

With lighthearted cynicism, University of Chicago anatomy profes-sor Michael LaBarbera debunks these and other gargantuan myths dominating monster flicks like "King Kong" and "Attack of the Giant Leeches.

LaBarbera uses monster movie slides to help students understand anatomy and the ways it restricts animals' activities.

He says students find his monster lectures hilarious - and they remember principles better, which "gives me an excuse to let the class have a little fun."

He hasn't advised screenwriters of his skepticism, but says: "These guys have made just about every mistake you can make when it comes to biol-

"Indeed, if King Kong tried to do anything very energetic, he'd probably pass out from heat prostration," he said. "He certainly wouldn't have been running around New York and climbing the Empire State Building." He also "would not be leaping from tree to tree or jumping off a building" because, like other huge animals, he would be "terribly vulnerable to a fall," LaBarbera said. If King Kong fell a foot, his legs would shatter.

"You can't simply take an animal and scale it up in size without making (physiological) changes, or it won't work," he said. "This is half the fun of the monster movies because they let me look at situations where the producers think they've made a working creature

Small shop trades on the past

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — It's not a museum, but "Marty's" trades on the past - the ancient past.

In his small shop at Seal Rock, which is about six miles south of Newport on U.S. Highway 101, a col-lector can buy a 140-million-year-old petrified dinosaur bone for $85. Or a huge, rough, uncut amethyst from Canada priced at $400.

If those don't fill the bill, how about a murex axocronis: a delicate, fragile-looking, snail-like shell in a display case along the wall - behind an island of shelves loaded with agates and minerals, and an old turtle priced at $25.

This shop specializes in fossils, shells and minerals. It's Eldon Martin's dream, and an unlikely dream at that. He opened two years ago, he said, when many small businesses were failing, when his chances of making it were "about 10,000 to 1."

But within six months, he had recouped his initial investment.He succeeded, he said, because he greeted customers with a smile, offered them quality merchandise at a fair price — and he preached a message people are beginning to listen to.

"Save the Earth" is what it boils down to. With the fossils, the shells and minerals displayed in his shop he explains how they relate to the environment — how they help main-tain the fragile ecological balance that he points out is so important.

Earth science, he believes, should be taught in all schools. He thinks students in the first through third grades should be made aware of the dangers created by pollution and the toxic wastes that are poisoning the atmosphere.

Natural catastrophes, he said, contribute something to the environment. Floods distribute silt, and silica spread by erupting volcanoes enriches the land on which it fails.

But man has had a disastrous effect upon the Earth, he said, and it has not been given a chance "to heal tself.

To understand the world we live in — to manage the future as it should be — he believes people must understand the past, which can be learned from the fossils he collects. He began studying them seriously after he thought he had struck gold in California nearly 20 years ago, but the gold was a form of mica. From then on he began looking back upon the past with new respect. He began collecting fomils, shells and minerals. To understand the world we live

Jewish and Arab high school students talk during a seminar in the village of Neve Shalom, Israel, where Arab and Jews live together and hold workshops where the students get to know the other's culture.

Israelis, Arabs live in 'Oasis of Peace'

By NICOLAS B. TATRO

NEVE SHALOM, Israel (AP) - On a rocky hilltop overlooking biblical battlefields in the Ayalon valley, 10 Israeli families have built up a small but vigorous settlement they call the Oasis of Peace.

What makes this village unique is that the 60 or so residents are both Israeli Jews and Arabs, trying to make their life together a model for a society in which the two communities live apart with deeply rooted hostility and mistrust.

The 100 acres of land leased from the nearby Trappist monastery at Latrun is located in what was a "noman's land" between the West Bank and Israel before the 1967 Arab-Israeli war. There are a dozen singlestory white houses, a sheep-pen, beehives, an olive grove and two small schoolhouses.

Life in Neve Shalom, Hebrew for Oasis of Peace, centers on the school where four-day workshops are held three times a month for Jewish and Arab high school students.

We started the School for Peace because we realized it was not enough to gather a group of people who live together." said Jacob physicist and Israeli army reserve good relations here. But when it officer who is one of the original settiers.

"JUST LIVING together does not have any influence outside," he said. We decided that somehow we had to disseminate the idea.

Since 1980, about 5,000 Arab and Jewish students have attended the workshops, including 1,500 this year. The workshops are handled like encounter groups; students talk freely about their impressions of each other and such sensitive subjects as sex and politics.

Lectures are also given on the Arab-Israeli conflict, a subject offered only to high school seniors as an elective course in the public school curriculum.

For Elizabeth Tahan, 16, a Palestinian Christian from Jaffa, mixing ing students. with Jewish teen-agers was not a new experience. "I have Jewish friends at home, and we talk together about everything. But I met some new friends here and we agreed to keep in touch."

But for Shirley Singer, 15 from Tel Aviv, it was a new and somewhat disconcerting experience.

comes to discussing politics, it's as if we didn't know each other at all," said Miss Singer.

THE GOAL Sonnenschein said, is not assimilation or integration of the two ethnic groups but getting to know and respect each other's cul-ture, traditions and religious beliefs. For example, he said, that meant learning to appreciate Arab music "which I couldn't stand to listen to for more than five minutes at a time

Despite their efforts at equality, the Israeli culture appears to dominate. Even though the population is evenly divided. Hebrew is the language spoken among the Arab and Jewish residents as well as the visit-

"Today we tend to view the prob-lem more on a national basis than a religious basis, more as one between Palestinians and Israelis than between the three religions," said ldi, a graduate of Hebrew University in Jerusalem. "Our message is that the problem can be dealt with through education, in a non-violent way, so there can be co-existence."

LIKE THE pre-state settlers who founded kibbutz collective farms in Israel, the first residents of Neve Shalom lived in tents without electricity, running water, telephones and other utilities. The community still lacks an adequate sewage system and paved roads.

We have had many difficulties," said Sonnenschein, interviewed in his home overlooking the monastery near the Jerusalem-Tel Aviv highway. "First and foremost, we have not been recognized by the authorities in Israel as a village.

Official recognition means more than winning acceptance. It means financial help for an infrastucture such as roads and utilities that is afforded to most communities in Israel and the West Bank.

New Mexicans find oil in water wells not the way residents of this southeastern New Mexico hamlet had hoped to discover oil.

But in mid-September, the thick gooey black substance slowly was seeping into one of the village's two New Mexico. water wells

The oil never made it through residents' home faucets but "strong gas vapors" drifted into houses and "we knew we had a problem." Monument Water Users Association president W.E. Copeland recalled recently.

The problem Monument residents detected Sept. 14 turned out to be crude petroleum containing "explosive levels of hydrocarbons." said Dennis McQuillan, a water resource specialist with the New Mexico Environmental Improvement Division in Santa Fe.

No serious health problems resulted from the Monument water contamination, but McQuillan and other state officials said "historical practices" in oil-rich southeastern New Mexico raise concerns over whether similar accidents could occur within the area.

"There is evidence of contamination throughout the area." McQuillan said. "That doesn't mean the

BECAUSE THEY are aware of Holliand said problems such as the recent ones in Monument are not common, adding that the chances of contamination are reduced greatly in areas where possible contaminators have been established since

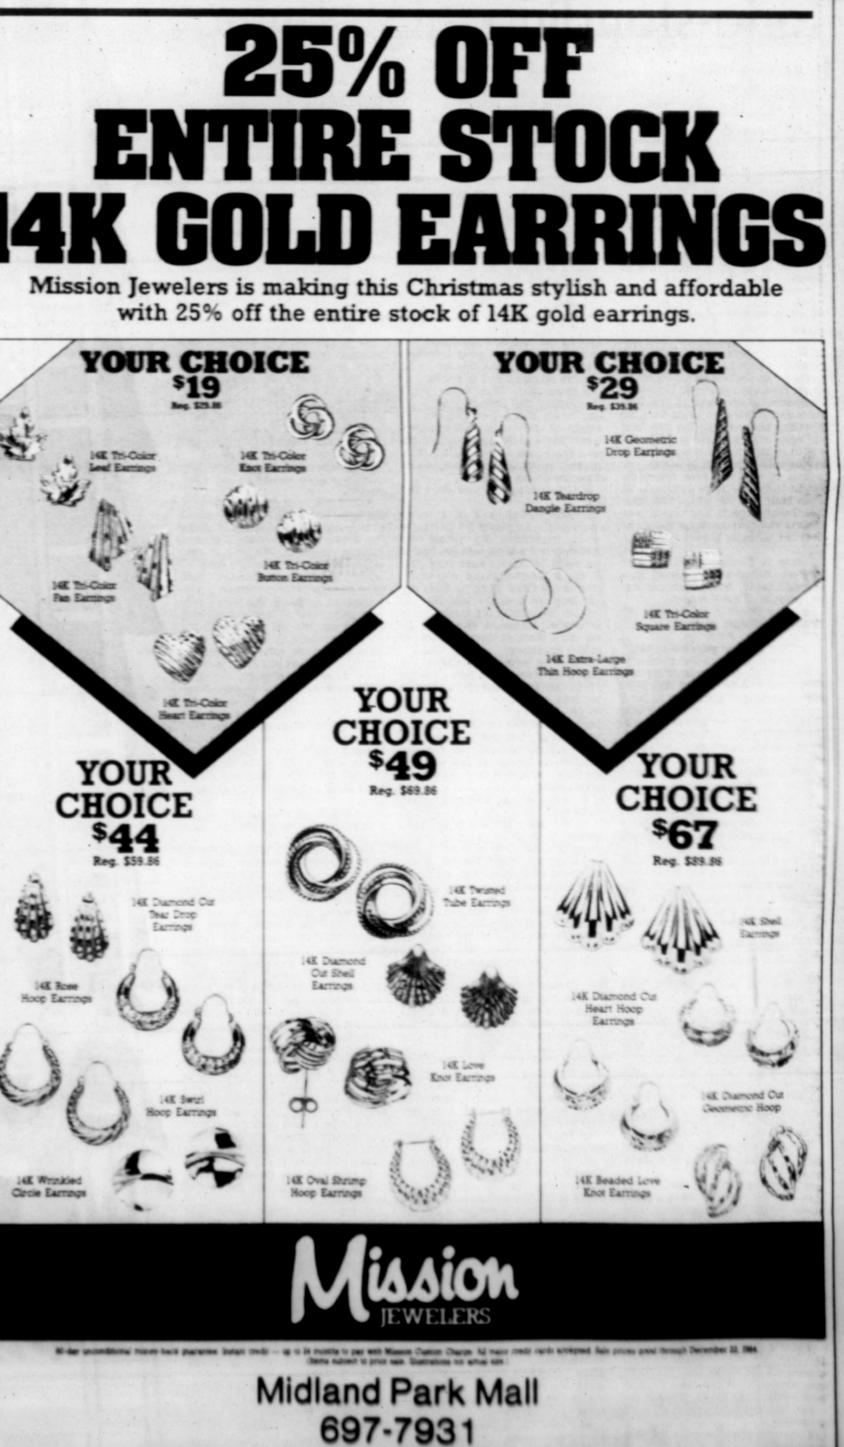

Since then, "we've had a statewide regulatory program to control discharges to ground water, whatever the source," he said.

Possible contaminators such as wastewater treatment systems and uranium mines must be licensed and we look closely at whether we think contamination is possible." he said

The regulations have been "very effective with new operations," Holland said.

· But the cause for concern grows where the possible contaminators have been around for decades, such as the old southeastern New Mexico wells, Holland said water will become infilitrated with the crude, but we are watching the situation closely."

Richard Holland, EID deputy director in Santa Fe, said ground water contamination by hydrocar bons is possible in any area that has "that much oil and that much drilling activity where it has been going on for over the past 30 years."

IN MONUMENT, the affected water well slightly north of the village was shut down as soon as the problem was discovered. Holland said.

National Guard troops initially provided clean drinking water for the 72 families served by the well. which, along with one other willage well, was operated by the Water Users Association

The second well, aided by a dormant well reactiviated after the accident, currently is providing water to Monument residents. Holland said. Those wells "remain clean to this date," he said.

But a new well must be built quickly and must be placed "clearly outside of the area where there is petroleum product contamination to guard against a repeat of the September problem, Holland said.

McQuillan said officials believe a break in an oil pipeline owned by Texas-New Mexico Pipeline Co. partially was responsible for the recent contamination

A Sept. 18 sampling of water from the tainted well showed it contained 7.2 milligrams per liter of benzine, a "known carcinogenic," McQuillan said. He said state health standards allow for only 0.01 milligrams per liter of benzine, which has been known to cause leukemia.

"THERE WERE explosive levels of hydrocarbons in that water well's casing," McQuillan said, adding that a more recent sampling revealed benzine levels of 2.5 milligrams per liter

Other contamination in the area is possible, he said, because "there are hydrocarbons in the ground wate about 120 feet away from the well (currently in use)."

That, coupled with past ground water contamination, probably means the pipeline break was not the only contributing factor to the recent problem, McQuillan said.

"These problems are not unique to Monument," he said, explaining that in the 1950s, several oil well casing leaks occurred in the area.

A similar problem also occurred in western Hobbs. 13 miles northeast of Monument, shortly after World War II, McQuillan said. Area residents discovered oil floating atop their water table - the oil apparently from oil well casing leaks, he said.

"The people got smart one day and started pumping out the oil and selling it - just skimming it off the he said "That's how the Wind-Oil Co. got started, and from skimming off the oil, the com-has gotten 335,000 barreis of mill tion We're probably doing as good a job as feasible with the program. Sexton said.

Top priority in the Monument area currently is the building of the new well, officials agreed.

In late November, the New Mexico Community Development Council approved an $85,000 emergency grant for the new well and officials from EID, the Oil Conservation Division. Texas-New Mexico Pipeline Co. and Monument have been working out planning details

David Boyer of the Oil Conservation Division's Santa Fe office said the new well needs to be deeper than the previous one.

Monument has a shallow aquifer that is "very susceptible to contamination." he said.

One of the two wells currently in use has a water depth of between 18 and 20 feet, Boyer said.

THE NEW WELL should have a water depth of at least 50 feet, he said. "If there's contamination from the surface, it's better to have the wells deeper." he explained

Plans for the new well call for it to be north of the old well, away from the petroleum-contaminated area. Boyer said.

Meanwhile, he said. Texas-New Mexico Pipeline is in the process of cleaning up the contaminated well. The process is time-consuming and expensive and includes recovering the oil by skimming it off the water and attempting to purge the dissolved chemicals from the water. he said.

'It's not just a matter of taking the oil off, the dissolved chemicals are in the water and they're hard to get out," he said. "What took a short time to get in takes a long time to get out.

None of the officials would specu late on whether the affected well would be usable in the future. But Holland said, "It doesn't show good signs of cleaning itself out." Monument residents, meanwhile, "are holding on." Copeland said. "We're aware of the problems. We're just hoping to get the new well built quickly, just holding on right new." right now.

Pilots Dick Rutan and Jeana Yeager pose in hangar. They hope to fly around the world withfront of their aircraft Voyager in a Mojave Desert out landing or refueling.

California man's plans long-standing, high-flying

By BARBARA KRAFT Los Angeles Times-Washington Pust News Service

Dick Rutan, 46, wants to become the first man to fly around the world without landing or refueling.

A California native, Rutan got his pilot's license on his 16th birthday. After high school he joined the Air Force, where he rose to lieutenant colonel. He flew 325 combat missions in Vietnam in the F-100 Super Sabre. Rutan's decorations include the Silver Star, five Distinguished Flying Crosses, 16 Air Medals and a Purple Heart.

After leaving the Air Force in 1978, Rutan joined his aircraftdesigner brother, Burt Rutan, at Rutan Aircraft in the Mojave desert, where Dick Rutan is the chief test pilot. Two years ago he asked his brother, who is noted for his radical designs in lightweight aircraft, about creating a plane to fly round the world on one tank of gas. Two years and 22,000 man-hours later, he is testing and refining the resulting Voyager aircraft. Made of lightweight composites, and no metal, it only 1858 pour carries more than five times its weight in fuel - 1,489 gallons in 16 tanks built into the wings and fuselage. Rutan expects it to take almost 12 days to circumnavigate the globe next fall, when he hopes to make the flight and rat race and do aerobatics. Very lively and responsive and quick. That is fun flying. But this airplane flies so slow. It's very difficult to fly. It takes a long time to turn it. Very difficult to land. It has to land at exactly the right attitude. If you land it faster, you hit the nose wheel and it bounces you in the air again. If you land slower, you hit the tail booms. Q: Obviously you are in love with flying. A: Oh yeah. There is a poem, "I have slipped the surly bonds of earth and danced the skies on laughter's silvered wings " It's a sense of freedom. Sometimes you get all balled up with problems and the world's pressing in on you. That's when you get up on your airplane and fly up to 5 or 6 thousand feet and look down at your problem from below and you can see so far and it's so clean and beautiful and you think that, "Why in the world am I letting that little tiny dot problem down there feel like it's the weight of the world on your shoulders?" It's very therapeutic. You can get a fresh look at everything. It's a three-dimensional freedom that a lot of people don't experience. Q: How young did you start flying? A: My brother and I were interested in airplanes for as long as we can remember. My mother says that they were born with jet fuel in our veins. When we were very little it was a little airplane you drove around the floor. Then we'd get bigger and we'd make 'em fly. My brother was designing model radiocontrolled airplanes way back. He set some distance records, even in model airplanes. When we were 15 we started taking flying lessons. We both soloed at 16. In fact I went out and soloed on my 16th birthday - still too young to get a driver's license! I was a flight instructor at 17 and then a commercial pilot and then went in the Air Force and did pilot training and flew all the operational jet fighters they had at that time. Had a real good career Q: Is this the last aviation record to be set? A: We call it the last plum to be picked in aviation records. Something that hasn't been done - like breaking the sound barrier. Lindbergh set a record nobody can break ever. Chuck Yaeger went up and broke the sound barrier. Nobody can take that away from him. This is a similar type thing. No body's ever flown around the world non-stop unrefuelled. Q: What's the greatest danger? A: Weather and mechanical failure, probably. The biggest challenge is trying to operate as a crew in a small area for 12 days under conditions of noise and confinement. We did design the airplane (so) that there is one crew duty position. The on-duty crew member has a seat and they fly the airplane, do all the management of the engines, communication, navigation. But the other area is not a cockpit or a seat, it's a bin. One will fly and one will sleep.

wings up and dive through a canyon where we don't have all this bad weather. And it keeps us out of the politics. (Over) the ocean, you have the freedom to deviate thousands of miles left and right off course and nobody's going to say anything. But if you're flying over Syria and Egypt and India and China, boy they want you right on a certain route, a certain altitude. You have no flexibility. Besides having some yo-yo shoot you down be cause he didn't know what you were.

Q: Jeana is also going to fly with you, isn't she?

A: Yes. It's a two-person airplane. Q: What was the reason for choosing a woman?

A: Jeana's a hot-shot little pilot. Holder of a lot of records. Weight is very critical

Q: How much does she weigh? A: A few pounds under a 100. Another thing, she doesn't eat very much compared to what I would eat. We found her water consumption, her fuel consumption, are very low. We flew an evaluation at 27,000. She took less than half the oxygen that I took. There again, is a really tremendous savings. Almost every nook and cranny of the airplane is fuel.

Rutan is divorced and has two teen-age daughters. He lives with Jeana Yeager, who is his partner and co-pilot of the Voyager.

He was interviewed by Barbara Kraft, a California journalist.

Q: Why are you guys doing this? A: People seem to be motivated when they're doing something that hasn't been done before. It's a lot more interesting than bolting fenders on cars. I don't mind working hard as long as I don't have to do the same thing over and over again. I'll do the dirtiest, rottenest job, sweep the floors, do the hard work of building an airplane, as long as I only have to do it once.

Q: You and Jeana and the four people who worked for your brother's company, all literally built this plane. How many hours a day did you work on it?

A: Oh, I don't know. It was one of those things that you work until you can't work anymore. You start making mistakes. Then you go home and you go to sleep, and when you wake up you come back and go to work again

Q: And you've done that for almost two years now? A: Yes.

Q: How did the Voyager project get started?

A: My brother Burt is a very innovative, creative designer. But his ability to produce airplanes is a lot slower than a lot of airplanes that run around in his head. I was kind of itching to get out on my own and start our own corporation, take one of his airplanes that's in his head and produce it. Every so often, he would mention this fly-around-theworld-non-stop-non-refuel. I didn't take it too seriously. He said, "We'll take six months, handful of dollars, it's kind of an easy thing.

Q: That was in what year?

A: 1981. He came up with a prelimiary design for the airplane, and Jeana Yeager, my partner, and I would build or manage the program for him

Q: What is the difference between flying a plane like the Voyager and flying the fighter

A: It couldn't be more different from a high-performance, respon-sive jet fighter to a very gangly lowpowered, almost-no-response Voyger aircraft. The Voyager aircraft is designed for range only. It's "mis sion adequate." It can take off, and turn adequately to fly around the world. Obviously, you don't do a lot of turning

Q: So this plane is only for this

nything else. Q: Is if fun to fly? A: No. I don't look forward to fly-ng the airplane. The jet fighters or he sport planes are very responsive. have a lot of power. Roll the

Q: What are the biggest physical stress factors?

A: It's a noisy environment. There's a certain amount of anxiety about being that far out over the ocean and being surrounded by that much fuel held together with that light a structure. Mechanical failure, communications failures. My biggest fear is the weather. Flying that airplane into some thunderstorm or being in an area where there is turbulence or heavy rain.

There's high-sea survival equipment. We'll be fairly close to the tropics most of the time, so we won't have to prepare for ocean stay times in a very cold environment. We will be tracked by satellite so that they'll know exactly where we are. If we go wn we don't have to wait weeks while they search thousands of miles of ocean iguari

Q: What time of the year are you planning to make this trip? A: The weather people tell me the best time to go is in the winter because of the South Africa crossing. From California, if you draw a line around the world, you go around South Africa, the Indian Ocean and Australia. And that's neat. It keeps us over the ocean

Q: How are you going about try ing to raise money for this project?

A: Did you ever hear the story of the little red hen? Nobody wanted to help her pick the grain or make the bread but everybody's around wanting to eat it. We built it ourselves without anybody's help other than the manufacturer that gave us some of the materials.

Support, sponsors, volunteers, contributions. A lot of Burt's employees worked for him all day and they'd crawl over here at night and work 'til midnight for us, just to get the thing done because they were excited about the project.

We started this VIP club. Voyager's Impressive People. We'll take any contributions. I have people come up and hand me $10. For $100 or more, we'll put their name in the logbook. We'll carry it around the world, enshrine it in the Smithsonian Air and Space Museum. We'll have a VIP party and we're going to have a special launch area. They'll have a button and a card and a plaque on the wall that they can show people.

Boeing through the Air Force built a long range bomber supposed to fly a long ways. The best they could come up with was 12,000 miles. The salary that they pay all their engineering staff alone for one day would do this whole project. Us sneaky little guys down here in the desert with a little innovation and hard work - we went and used some of their material and fabricated an airplane that will fly twice the distance that theirs will. We think! I'll be able to brag a lot more about it after we've done it.

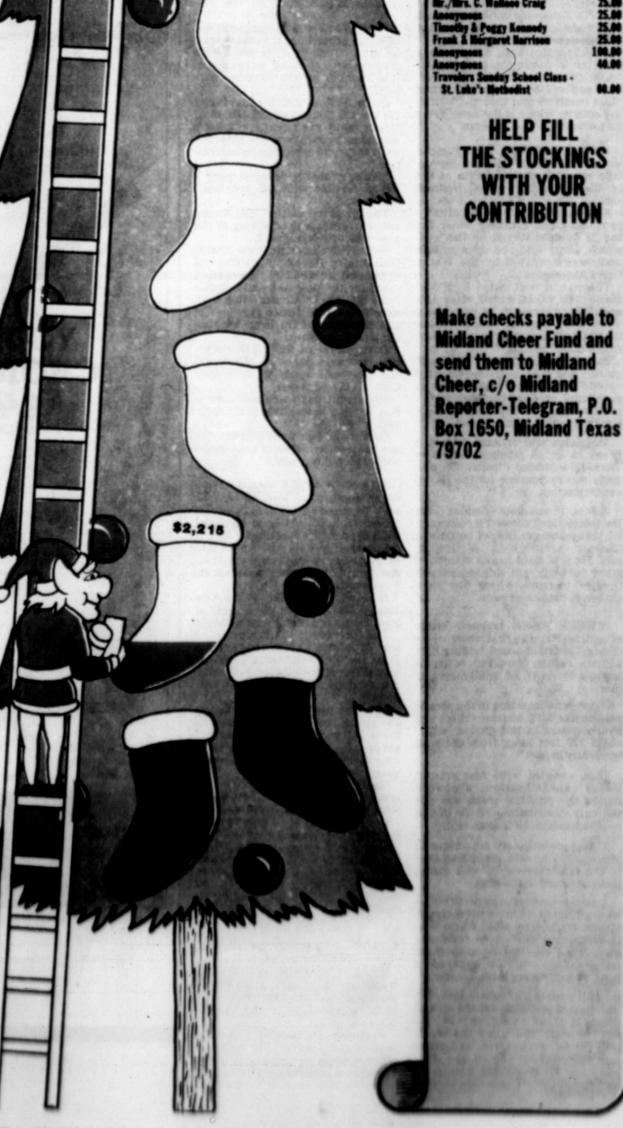

But the airplane flies, and it meets its performance estimates. It wasn't done by NASA or some other government-funded thing, it was done with the American spirit. There are people who have donated spark plugs and little valves and radios and headsets that that we couldn't afford to go out and buy. Just to say that they had a part of it. And that's what we're really proud of.

Q: Can you see yourself doing any thing else than this the rest of

A: Oh, no. I don't know that there's anything else to do. It's the only thing I know. It's the only thing I know how to talk about. Sometimes you find yourself in a group of people that have absolutely nothing to do with aviation and you have a hard time holding a conversation with them. Around Mojave there isn't a whole lot of people and the only people that I see are aviation le. That's all there is to do here at Mojave. There's not a lot of dis

Q: Do you like living out here?

A: Mojave's an excellent place for what we do. We're not rich people. Our buildings are modest and we tend to scrounge a lot. We have the whole desert, we don't bother about failing on anybody. We can take off, raise the landing gear and not climb another inch and fly for miles and never hit a power line or a pole or a mountain or a house or anything You can do a lot of creative thing here
