Ballast creates burnt paper odor

by Sgt. Rich Tillman Public Affairs Specialist

SSgt. Matthew Gurley, an officers' club employee, got to work Monday only to discover an odor that "smelt like burning paper."

That burning paper was no where to be found. After a brief search of the area, Bob Baird, club assistant manager, phoned the Reese Fire Department and wheels began rolling.

Sgt. Rudy Hernandez from the 64th Security Police Division took the fire conference call and dispatched SSgt. Carl Olsen and Amn. Donald Tapp to the scene.

tion of the kitchen area "smelt the strong odors of burning wires," said Reese Fire Chief Bob Hitch.

The fire chief pointed out that "we had to check the fluorescent lights and electric motors for the major appliances with an infrared heat detector."

SrA. Paul Fillman, Reese firefighter, found that it was a bad ballast in one of the kitchen lights that had caused the smell. A ballast in fluorescent lights is basically a transformer. It controls the light's voltage and current, according to 64th Civil Engineering's Interior Electric Shop officials.

The scene at the officers' cleared the way for fire club quickly settled as the trucks and, pending their on- fire trucks and security police scene determinations, were left. Civil engineering has ready to evacuate the club replaced the defective ballast with a new one. And, things Fire fighters arrived and are back to normal in the

by Col. Donald J. McCullough Deputy Commander for Resources

The Air Force fiscal 1984 budget request for $92.9 billion identifies the funding needed to maintain the airpower necessary to meet our global responsibilities. This amount is roughly two percent of the U.S. Gross National Product and is less than our 20-year average. Our nation can afford these improvements. Concurrently with moderate growth in our GNP percentage, we must also seek avenues to conserve and reduce our costs in our daily expenditures. Additionally, one of President Ronald Reagan's stated goals is to reduce the cost of government by curbing inefficiency and eliminating marginal programs whenever and wherever they exist.

When program changes occur or mission requirements are modified, we often find that our supply of resources to accomplish our mission is affected. In some cases we have deficiencies identified that have not been met and in other situations, we often have excesses. To assist in identifying and making unused resources available to someone else that may need them, we will implement "Project Reese" — Re-utilization of Excess Equipment and Supplies Efficiently. The project will start Monday and will be coordinated through all organizational commanders and base supply.

This type of program has been used very successfully at other bases and has resulted in saving many thousands of dollars. It has also proven invaluable in identifying resources that do not appear on records or that are excess to organizational needs. These items sometimes sit year after year taking up space while another organization may need them and be unable to obtain due to funding limitations.

If Project Reese is successfully implemented, this problem area can be considerably reduced. The project will require everyone's assistance if it is to succeed. Nothing will be transferred from the base until the needs of every organization have been evaluated. The real benefit will be helping organizations obtain equipment and supplies needed, and at the same time save precious O&M dollars for Reese and the Air Force. We need your help to make it work. Look around your shops and offices and let's identify those desks, chairs, and other items that are sometimes just "in the way." If we have items of equipment that are no longer used, make them available to other organizations.

Colonel McCullough

By helping each other, we can make a valuable contribution toward resolving our funding problems.

Lighting: Are you using too much?

by Sam Lanham

Reese Energy Conservation Manager

Although heating and air conditioning our houses and work areas account for the majority of our energy usage, lighting is still responsible for over 16 percent of our total energy consumption. By reducing our energy usage for lighting, we can make great strides in our energy conservation program.

Because old habits are hard to break and it is very easy to use more light than we actually need, most Americans overlight their homes and work areas. Reese is certainly no exception in this area. Therefore, because lowering light levels is one of the easiest and quickest ways to begin to conserve energy at home and work, it behooves us as members of the federal workforce (military and civilian) to do our part to reduce energy usage wherever possible.

These tips and information on lighting will be very useful in helping us become more energy efficient in the ways we light our homes and work areas:

•Turn off lights in any room not being used even if you're only going to be gone for a short period of time.

•Light-zone your home and work area to save electricity. Concentrate lighting in reading and working areas and where it is needed for safety (stairwells, etc.). Reduce lighting in other areas, but avoid sharp con-

•To reduce overall lighting in non-working spaces, remove at least two bulbs in multiple light fixtures, and replace all other bulbs throughout the area with lower wattage energy saver bulbs.

•Consider installing solid state dimmers or hi-low switches. They make it easy to reduce lighting intensity in a room and thus save

•Use one large bulb instead of several small ones in areas where bright light is

•Use long-life incandescent lamps only in hard to reach places. They are less energy efficient than ordinary bulbs.

•Need new lamps? Consider the advantage of those with three-way switches. They make it easy to keep lighting levels low when intensive light is not necessary, thus saving electricity. Use the high switch only for reading or other activities that require brighter light.

•Always turn three-way bulbs down to the lowest lighting level when watching television. You'll reduce the glare and use less

•Try 50-watt reflector floodlights in directional lamps (such as pole or spot lamps or any recessed lights). These floodlights provide about the same amount of light as the standard 100-watt bulbs, but at half the wattage.

•Use fluorescent lights whenever possible; they give out more lumens per watt. For example, a 40-watt fluorescent lamp gives off 80 lumens per watt while a 60-watt incandescent gives off only 14.7 lumens per watt. The 40-watt fluorescent lamp would save about 140 watts of electricity over a seven hour period. These savings, over a period of time, could more than pay for the fixtures you would need to use fluorescent lighting.

•Keep all lamps and lighting fixtures clean. Dirt absorbs light.

•You can save on lighting energy through decorating. Remember, light colors for walls, rugs, draperies, and upholstery reflect light and therefore reduce the amount of artificial light required.

•Have decorative outside gas lights turned off, unless they are essential for safety. Keeping just eight gas lamps burning yearround uses as much natural gas as it takes to heat an average size house for a winter heating season.

•Use outdoor lights only when they are needed. One way to make sure they are off during daylight hours is to put them on a photocell unit or timer that will turn them off automatically.

CARE Line

The CARE Line is prepared by Col. Richard E. Hearne, 64th Flying Training Wing commander. All information provided to the CARE Line will be held in strict confidence. Callers are urged to give their name and duty number so that a personal reply may be made; however, neither are mandatory. Callers are urged to use the CARE Line only after all possible means to air complaints through the chain of command have been exhausted. The CARE Line Ext. 3273.

AN OPTOMETRY PATIENT had difficulty recently when he showed up late for an appointment just as the person on duty was leaving for lunch. The patient was seen, however, was instructed to return after — giving his eyes time to dilate. Upon returning, the optometrist was sitting his child which inconvenienced his patients.

Optometry clinic personnel have been briefed that any patient arriving at the clinic prior to it being closed for lunch will be seen regardless of the time required to treat the patient. The clinic has also been briefed on dependent care responsibilities. Thank you for your call.

A CALLER WANTED TO KNOW why the civil engineers cut off heating in the housing area, even when the temperature falls below freez-

Since the caller did not leave a name or address, we could not determine what happened in this case, however, the civil engineers do not shut down heating systems in Reese Village. Heating is controlled by individual residents and this problem may have been a utility outage or a maintenance problem. In the future, if residents have problems of this nature, they should call the Housing Maintenance Contractor at 885-4900 during duty hours, or 796-8180 after duty hours or for emergencies.

ANOTHER CALLER TOOK his car to the base service station for a state inspection. His car failed because of a faulty muffler, so he had the muffler patched and returned to the base station, which failed him again. He then took the car to another place downtown which passed the car. He now wonders why he cannot get a refund of the $5 fee he paid to the base service station for the failed inspections.

The $5 is a charge for inspecting all areas of the vehicle, including such systems as wipers, lights, brakes, and exhaust.

Texas law calls for the "inspector to check the exhaust system for holes, leaking seams or patches on the muffler, resonators or exhaust tail pipe." Each inspector interprets the state standards and makes decisions based on his or her knowledge and experience.

The base service station inspector determined that this person's muffler did not meet the state standard and required it to be repaired. The $5 charge was not solely for the sticker but also paid for the labor to do the inspection. If the caller had repaired the muffler and took the carb back to the base station, the sticker would have been installed at no extra charge.

HOSPITAL APPOINT-MENTS was the subject of another call. A caller complained that Pediatrics appointments have to be made too far in advance and when a call is made the waiting time to talk to the clerk is much too long.

Because of the large demand for pediatrics services, it is not unusual to wait 10 to 12 days for a routine appointment. However, the clinic reserves acute care appointments daily for children who must be seen, owing to the nature of their illnesses or injuries.

Persons who feel their children need immediate care can use the emergency room to get an evaluation of their children's medical problems. Keeping in mind that patients are seen in the order of the severity of their illnesses — delays may occur.

We apologize for any inconvenience stemming from the phone system, but we currently have only one person who books appointments for all clinics. She places incoming calls on hold automatically as they are received and, it is the caller's advantage to stay on the line.

Another provider has been assigned to the pediatrics clinic to help with the patient load, so we hope this will alleviate the problem.

A COMMISSARY PATRON bought three half-gallons of milk recently and they turned sour before the date marked on the cartons. She returned the milk for a refund but, stated its very inconvenient to return to the base. She further added that this is not the first time and wondered if this had happened to other people.

Every effort is made to insure that milk is properly cared for at the commissary. Upon delivery, the milk is immediately taken into a holding room where the temperature is monitored three times daily. The veterinary office also monitors this storage procedure. We're aware of the inconvenience of returning items for a refund, and will continually work to serve you with quality products.

What constitutes mis is "any unauthorized use of a vehicle. A vehicle must be used for official purposes only" (AFR 77-4). Official use of a vehicle is that which pertains only to government business (not personal).

Government vehicles are not authorized for transporting any personnel (military or civilian) between their homes and their place of employment (except in cases of persons TDY where on-base lodging is not available), nor are they to be used for lunch at the Talon Inn, officers' and NCO clubs; the base exchange, banks, etc. A person cannot catch a ride "in a government vehicle (when it is being used for official business) and be dropped-off on the way, to complete personal business (bank, credit union, etc.). The easiest way to determine if a vehicle is being misused is to ask the question "Is the reason I am here. to accomplish something that pertains to my government duties?" If not, you are misusing the government vehicle that you are in.

An article from TIG Brief #17 indicated:

"Reports of alleged misuse of government vehicles continue to be received at all levels of command. The reports, many from the general public, involve Air Force-owned as well as General Services Administration and commercial rental vehicles.

ment vehicle for personal con- misuse. If in doubt-don't do venience or unofficial purposes is a violation of public law and the responsible individual, military or civilian, will be subject to disciplinary or administrative action.

The majority of reports are not substantiated as misuse, but are the result of a perception that the vehicle was inappropriately used. In too many cases, the perceived "misuse" was the result of responsible individuals not being aware, or concerned, with how their legitimate use of the vehicle appeared to the public. For example, parking vehicles at, or adjacent to, public restaurants is frequently reported as possible misuse. Although use of the vehicle for transportation to a place to eat under certain circumstances is "official use," frequently reported cases indicate poor judgement in terms of selection of a place to eat and a place to park the government vehicle.

Air Force Manual 77-310, Volume I, and the Joint Travel Regulations provide information and guidance concerning what constitutes official use.

In addition, the local vehicle management branch, or GSA office, can provide assistance to determine if a particular trip or use of a vehicle is authorized. In all cases, the individual is expected to use the vehicle for official purposes is 'here for you' in '83, providing emergency assistance to Air Force personnel and their families. This assistance is primarily in the area of essentials for daily living, including rent, food, utilities, funeral expenses, dental work and many other needs.

AFAS 'here for you

In 1982 the AFAS helped 251 people with loans and grants from $25 to $3,500 and a greater need is expected in 1983. You can help this worthy project this year by contributing to the Air Force Assistance Fund campaign.

The AFAS also provides educational assistance for spouses and dependents attending vocational or undergraduate schools. Two programs have been developed to help with these needs. The first is the Gen. Henry H. Arnold program, which is available to dependent children. The Gen. George S. Brown Senior Loan program is available to Air Force members and their spouses. Both programs provide student loans at nine percent interest and repayments

The Air Force Aid Society need not start until 6 months after graduation.

At Reese the AFAS provided over $90,000 to Air Force personnel and their families in 1982. This was an increase of over 270 percent since 1981. Interest free loans of $88,760 went to 248 people, while $1,246 in grants went to three people.

If you are in need of emergency financial assistance or are interested in educational loans stop by CBPO customer service and pick up an application. Then make an appointment with an AFAS representative. If you have any questions, call CBPO during normal duty hours at Exts. 3643 or 3482.

Three key positions change personnel

Three key positions changed hands March 1, as Lt. Col. Peter P. Cerrow became the new Reese inspector general.

Colonel Cerrow's former position as commander of the 64th Student Squadron was turned over to Lt. Col. David R. Lloyd.

In order for Colonel Lloyd to accept the new position he had to give up his position as the chief of the Reese Standardization and Evaluation Division.

Lt. Col. Elvy Pettit Jr. has filled the stan eval chief's position.

threatening weather such as the path of tornadoes were told to thunderstorms and tornadoes.

The meterorological definition of severe weather is:

Thunderstorms with wind speeds greater than 49 knots and three quarters of an inch or larger hail.

Or, a tornado.

Lightening and heavy rains may also be associated with thunderstorms.

"Stay away from windows when a tornado is imminent," warns the Air Weather Service Library. And, that advice was issued the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration following a Texas Tech University study on tornadoes two years

For a number of years those in go to the side of the house away from the tornado and open a window to alert people to seek shelter sooner if one approached. The open window was to equalize atmospheric pressure in and out of the house in an effort to avert an explosive effect on the house.

Tech researchers discovered that opening a window is dangerous because of the risk injury from flying glass or debris if an object should hit the windows as you are trying to open it. And, while the open window does ease pressure on the roof, it adds pressure to the walls facing the storm.

Researchers found that most buildings, commercial and private, have enough ventilation to handle the rapid pressure change brought on by a tornadoe.

Finally, the researchers concluded that if natural venting was not enough, the winds and debris would probably do a good job "opening" the house to a far greater degree than any single open window would.

Along with the "stay away from windows" warning, the NOAA added that in small buildings go to the basement or the inner-most and lowest level of the building (closets, bathrooms and hallways are best.).

Once there get under a sturdy piece of furniture (workbench or mattress) and cover your face with a pillow if the twister

In high-rise buildings, move to interior small rooms or hallways. In a mobile home or car, leave for the nearest substantial shelter. If you are caught in an open space then get in the nearest ditch or ravine and lay down flat covering your face with your hands.

Tornadoes usually move eratically. This makes their paths unpredictable so when the warning siren sounds or an emergency broadcast says move to safety do not hesitate. There may be only seconds before it strikes.

Do not look for the funnel cloud or try to out drive it just get to shelter immediately. If you are outside remember to take cover in a ditch, but not under an overhanging roof (aircraft hanger,

Saturday, Goodfellow redeemed themselves beating Reese 17-15 and 15-13. In the second set against Laughlin, Reese won 15-7, but lost the second game 12-15.

Reese split its second set with Lackland too. Reese beat Lackland 15-12 and then Lackland came back against Reese 15-12.

As the final games of the ATC Central District Men's volleyball play neared an end

Reese again met Randolph. Randolph held Reese to a 15-6 first game, but a determined Reese squad came back to push Randolph the distance for their second win 16-14. Two Reese players were picked to play for the ATC Central District championship team. Larry Keene and Tony Kuni represented Reese at the ATC championships this week at Williams.

Ace believes 'Murphy'

Project Warrior

by Lt. Col. Ken White ATC Office of Public Affairs Murphy's Law: What can go wrong, will. Murphy's First Corollary: When it goes wrong, it will do so in the worst possible way at the worst possible time.

In June 1944, Col. Francis "Gabby" Gabreski was America's leading fighter ace in Europe, certainly not the victim of Murphy's Law. The 31 German aircraft he and his P-47 Thunderbolt had scratched from the Luftwaffe inventory during his 21-month combat tour had been subjected, however, to Murphy's First Cor-

Now it was nearly time for a well deserved rest for Gabreski. He had faced everything Hermann Goering could point at him and had emerged the clear victor. In a few months he would return to a hero's welcome in the U.S. and marry the lovely lady he met and had to leave in Hawaii days after the infamous Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

On July 20, 1944, returning from a bomber escort mission, Gabreski spotted a covey of Luftwaffe fighters parked nearly on a German airfield far below. The target was simply too tempting to ignore. Experience had taught Gabreski that ME-109s and FW-190s were much easier to deal with on the ground than in the air. So he nudged his Thunderbolt over and began preparations for the attack.

The P-47 built up a good head of steam as it plummeted downward. Gabreski would closely observe the first rule of attacking a German airfield: come in low and fast to avoid intense and highly accurate anti-aircraft fire.

Like an avenging angel, Gabreski roared in low over the airfield, all guns blazing. German fighters began to disintegrate before him.

Noting that he was overshooting a particularly appealing target, he dropped the nose of the Thunderbolt slightly to bring the German airplane into his gun-

Corollary. The intensity and target concentration that had served Gabreski so well in the past backfired in a diabolical way. The props of his Thunderbolt struck the ground. Instantly, the P-47 went wild. The engine and airframe shook violently and oil sprayed back over the canopy to block Gabreski's vision.

He knew his number was up. Fighting to keep the bucking Thunderbolt airborne — just above the ground and below the effective envelope of German anti-aircraft guns - Gabreski sought to trade airspeed for distance. When flight became impossible, he let the P-47 settle heavily to the ground and hung on as the fighter plowed through the underbrush.

When the Thunderbolt finally stopped sliding, Gabreski leaped from the cockpit to a heated rifle and machine gun reception from German ground troops. He ran for cover and took evasive steps. But his efforts were in vain. Four days later he was captured and spent the remainder of the war in a German prison camp.

After World War II ended, Gabreski returned to the U.S., his Hawaiian married sweetheart, and assumed command of Selfridge AFB, Mich. When war broke out in Korea in 1950, he returned to aerial combat to down six North Korean MiG-15s with his F-86 Sabre.

Colonel Gabreski

Gabreski, America's top living fighter ace, is now retired from the Air Force and lives and works on Long Island, N.Y.

He is a firm believer in Murphy's Law.
