Computer

• Supply system gets upgrading • in Air Force Phase IV project

by Sgt. Rich Tillman
public affairs specialist

Phase IV is underway, said Data Automation chief 1st Lt. Olen Paden, "and estimated to be complete by July 13."

The Reese Data Automation boss explains the Phase IV project as an upgrading of the base-level computer system.

During the first increment, which began today, the work load of the 64th Supply Squadron's 1050 computer is being transferred to the Sperry Corporation's 1100/60.

Data Automation received the 1100/60 in October 1983 and expected the first increment of change to begin in November, but unexpected difficulties in writing the supply software forced postponement until now.

"The 1100/60 replaces the 1050, which is 15-20 years old," the Data Automation chief said, "It's an ancient machine . . . in technological terms."

The new Sperry computer system allows computer users to get their business completed faster and it has a greatly expanded storage capability, he added.

While Reese is in the process of shifting supply's computer work, members form Air Training Command Data Automation, Sperry Corporation, and Air National Guard and Air Force Reserve headquarters' personnel will be on hand to observe.

Keesler AFB, Miss., is sending five computer experts to observe the procedure, too. Keesler is next in line for advancement in computer operations.

During the transition, "I expect only minimal, if any, impact on Reese computer operations," said Lieutenant Paden. "The second increment isn't scheduled to begin until April 1985, when the remainder of Reese computer users switch to the 1100/60."

The price tag for the Air Force project is almost half a Division gains squadron status

by A1C Ken Carlson
public affairs specialist

In an effort to improve unit effectiveness and increase morale, the 64th Security Police Division and 10 other Air Training Command divisions take on the unit designation of squadron Sunday.

Included in the list of 11 new squadrons are security police, transportation and supply divisions at 11 ATC bases.

ATC's Chief of Security Police Col. Nicholas A. Keck, believes receiving squadron status will raise morale and productivity among his people.

"They will now be able to identify with their own organization and compete as a single unit in various activities. This should also streamline the decision-making process and produce better leadership and management controls," he said.

At Reese there will be no outward change attributed to the new distinction other than the name change on stationary, and other printed matter.

The 64th Security Police Division Commander Capt. Jerry Sehon will automatically assume command of the 64th Security Police Squadron Sunday. The division is now under the jurisdiction of the 64th Air Base Group Squadron Section Commander Capt. Richard Savko.

"There will be only one boss," instead of an administrative commander and a functional commander, said Captain Sehon, thus eliminating some past confusion.

Captain Sehon stressed that the efficiency of the unit will increase due to a stronger chain of command.

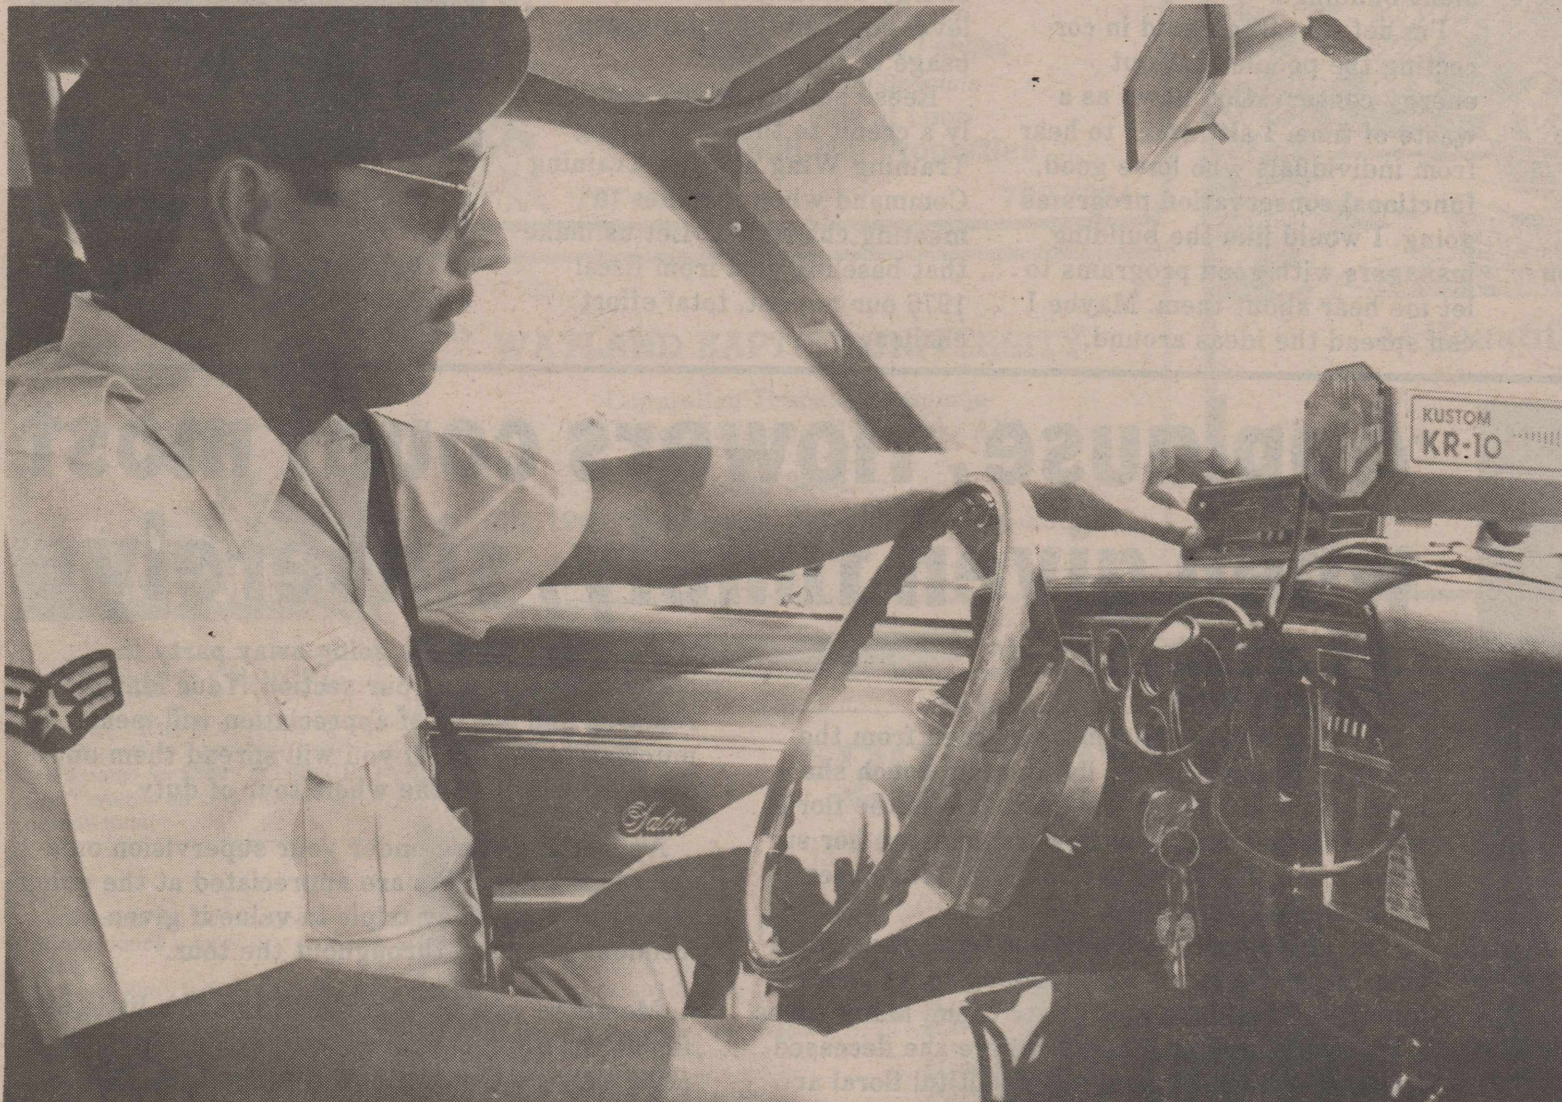

The change also puts decorations and reprimands into the hands of the functional commander, as well as leave schedules and other duties performed by a squadron commander.

The unit is "happy" about the change, according to Captain Sehon, "The morale is already good in the unit, but we'll have our own house."

"We think it's the single greatest thing that's happened this past year," Colonel Keck concluded, "This brings us in line with the SP units in the other major commands."

Beginning Sunday, all supply and security police functions within ATC will be squadrons. The 64th supply organization is already a squadron.

ATC officials say there is no more division-to-squadron moves expected in the foreseeable future.

Law Enforcement Specialist Sgt. David Flores keeps tabs on Reese motor vehicle speeds with the help of radar. Sunday Sergeant Flores and his law enforcement peers will begin working for the new 64th Security Police Squadron.

THE ROUNDUP is an unofficial newspaper published under exclusive written agreement with the 64th Flying Training Wing Commander in the interest of personnel of Reese AFB, Texas, of Air Training Command. It is published by Barron Publications, Inc., a private firm, in no way connected with the Department of the Air Force. Opinions expressed by the publisher and writers in this publication are their own and are not to be considered an official expression of the Department of the Air Force. The appearance of advertisements, including inserts, in this publication does not constitute an endorsement by the Department of the Air Force of products or services advertised.

CARE Line

The CARE line is prepared by Col. Bob Hullender, 64th Flying Training Wing commander, on a weekly basis. All information provided to the CARE Line will be held in strict confidence. Callers are urged to give their name and duty telephone number so that a personal reply may be made; however, neither are mandatory. Callers should use the CARE Line only after all possible means to air their views or complaints through the chain of command have been exhausted. The CARE Line number is 885- (Ext.) 3273.

Kudos to the folks at the Caprock Cafe and Base Commander Col. Bob Rohatsch came in recently. I am glad to know that dining hall patrons appreciate the extra effort made by Les Majors, project manager for Cantu Services, and his staff, to make special evening meals available to patrons.

Majors enjoys providing the special meals to those personnel with meal cards. Those special meals are available every Thursday.

Colonel Rohatsch received good words from an NCO that was glad to see the base commander supporting the security police with innovative ideas like the new sign at the front gate shack.

The sign tells those coming on-base who the guard is and his or her hometown. I agree, it is a good idea. Thanks for both the calls.

Commissary policy came under fire recently as a patron phoned in to find out why children are allowed to run rampantly through the store upsetting customers.

It is commissary policy that children in the store and under five years of age must ride in the shopping cart. Other children must remain under parental supervision. There is a sign in the customer service area that makes a clear statement of this policy.

The floor managers, in the red blazers, have been told to keep a closer watch for future problems, but should they not see a problem situation, then the patrons must tell them about it immediately so corrections can be made.

Another call about the commissary dealt with rudeness among patrons. Exactly what is the policy for uniformed personnel moving to the head of checkout lines, asked the caller?

Commissary policy reads that uniformed personnel in line between 11:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. have priority in the express line, but that is it.

The policy applies only to the express line and only during the stated hours. If anyone experiences another such problem, contact one of the floor managers immediately.

Another caller wondered why she had to wait and call legal the next day to set up an appointment for legal assistance, rather than making the appointment right then.

The judge advocate's staff is limited to three attorneys and therefore, their legal duties in court and such must take priority. Recognizing the potential problem of the small staff, the Legal Office schedules appointments on Thursdays for the coming week.

However, the scheduling routine does not apply to student pilots and emergency cases; they are seen immediately. Their system works, maybe not as fast as we would all like, but it works.

Thanks for the call, I believe it may clear up many questions about the Legal Office scheduling system.

Reserved parking around Base Operations got the heat from another caller. The parking spaces he called in about were re-evaluated toward the end of May and those that were unjustifiably reserved were changed.

Barbara Hanson did the evaluations, but suggests that if anyone notices cars parked illegally, call the security police and report them. Or, if a person is not sure about the validity of a reserved parking space, contact Ms. Hanson and discuss the matter. Ms. Hanson is at Ext. 3586.

Earlier this month I got a call about the Thrift Shop, and the caller wanted to know why, when the shop is open, uniformed personnel have to wait in long lines during duty hours and if special lines, or something of that nature, could be set up.

The Thrift Shop is operated solely by volunteers, under the supervision of the officers' wives' club, and is there just to provide a service for all base personnel military and civilian.

The shop is open Tuesdays and Fridays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. To avoid the possibility of waiting in a long line to make a consignment contract, individuals with limited time are invited to call ahead to determine how busy the consignment room is. The extension number is 3154.

Currently the staffing is low, because of vacations, personnel moving, and family requirements, so service may not be what it is normally.

Anyone interested in volunteering their time and effort to the Thrift Shop should stop by during operating hours at Building 136 and sign up.

Finally, I received a note the other day from Donnie Yarbrough, the surviving spouse of the late Jeanne Yarbrough, and family; and it read like this:

"We would like to thank all the people of Reese for their cards and flowers during Jeanne's illness, and their kindness and prayers at the time of her death (June 17). Your thoughtfulness has helped us during this time of sorrow."

Conservation

Together Reese can meet the challenge

by Col. Bob Hullender wing commander

Energy conservation isn't the easiest thing to keep in mind, but I am certain all Reese employees, military and civilian, do their part.

Here at Reese we have a tough job saving energy, because Mother Nature often hands us the worst weather extremes.

Therefore, we must compensate with additional heating, or cooling,—I didn't say overcompensate!

Naturally energy conservation efforts are harder to monitor than say aircraft maintenance, but we're making the effort.

For instance, if I walk into a building and find it empty, and all lights on, I want to speak to the building manager. The same is true of thermometer readings that I see above or below the federal requirements for government buildings.

I'm not just interested in correcting the people that put energy conservation down as a waste of time, I also want to hear from individuals who have good, functional conservation programs going. I would like the building managers with good programs to let me hear about them. Maybe I can spread the ideas around.

I'm not the only one watching energy conservation. Sam Lanham, my designated energy conservation manager, makes his own periodic checks of facilities, too. Together we're working to help Reese obtain its fiscal 1984 energy goal, which is to hold energy consumption down to a level equal to the total energy usage of fiscal 1975.

Reese employees are continually a credit to the 64th Flying Training Wing and Air Training Command when it comes to meeting challenges. Let us make that baseline goal from fiscal 1975 our newest, total effort challenge.

Chaplain McGraw

Applause, flowers count most when given timely, sincerely

by Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Bill McGraw installation staff chaplain

A young mother had just returned from the hospital. Resting on the living room couch she heard her son answer the door. It was the florist with a large bouquet of flowers. Imagine her surprise when she heard her son say, "Take them back, she ain't dead yet."

The above story is humorous until you realize that too often we do wait too long to let people know how much we appreciate them. Many times I have officiated at funerals where the deceased was surrounded by banks of beautiful floral arrangements. Sadly enough many of these people had rarely, if ever, received such beautiful bouquets while living.

Don't wait until the going away party to recognize people in your section. Your kind remarks and words of appreciation will mean much more to them if you will spread them out over the length of the whole tour of duty.

Appreciate those under your supervision on a daily basis. Bouquets are appreciated at the going away party but they triple in value if given at frequent intervals throughout the tour.

Members who have gone PCS have a little difficulty smelling the roses we may toss their way after they reach their new duty station. The fragrance seems much sweeter and richer if they are afforded the opportunity of smelling them here.

Inspector views coming inspections

by Maj. Tice Leonard wing inspector

More and more often I am being asked how a unit or squadron can get ready for the upcoming Mission Capability Inspection and the Management Effectiveness Inspection. It isn't that the supervisors or functional managers are unprepared, but rather they desire to excel. Many of the supervisors seek higher ratings. They are not satisfied with less than a first-rate performance when the Air Training Command Inspector General team inspects their area of responsibility. I cannot give a hard definitive answer that will guarantee an "excellent" or an "outstanding" rating from the IG. From experience I can tell you the unit commanders who succeed always say it is the super people in the unit that made it happen.

People make the difference. Nothing happens unless people make it happen. Job knowledge, good leadership, strong military bearing, and physical and personal appearance play major roles. To achieve high marks in those areas a squadron must have high morale and a good attitude. That brings us back to people. Communicating the mission and dealing with people is the foundation upon which we can build a successful inspection.

There are some basic instructions we can all follow to help prepare for the IG evaluations, and work on those important people areas.

First, always give your people the credit that is rightfully theirs. A special pride is created when you tell people they've done a good job. At the same time the attitude to succeed is being bolstered by your words of praise.

Second, always do your homework. Know the weak areas from past inspections of your unit and other inspections by the IG during this inspection cycle. Concentrate on critical areas first, then polish the programs you want to show off to the inspectors. Don't make them ask what extra programs you have or how you plan to do the job a little better than anyone else—tell them. Don't point out your weak areas, and don't offer unrequested information. When the inspectors do ask, show them everything they want to see. Use your self-inspections checklist. Be aggressive and remember repeat write-ups are killers.

Third, be honest. Never tamper with the truth. Don't hedge or try to lie your way out of a bad situation. Talk about specific actions, performance, and results on duty. Say what you mean and mean what you say. People don't like double talk. A good leader gives his people straight facts and that will carry over to the evaluation.

Fourth, be courteous. Genuine consideration for other people makes a smooth functioning organization possible. People get disenchanted with their jobs unless someone cares about what bothers them and cares to improve the situations that cause problems. The inspectors will pick up on the attitude in the unit and the wing. I am impressed with the way Reese leaders listen and care. I suspect this is our key to continued success.

Fifth, be the leader. Effective managers get the best results because they know how to get people to work with them. The leader sets the example the troops follow. The leader helps them do their best, achieve their best, and shows them how to be more productive. The IG will see the effectiveness of the unit, but more importantly the unit and the wing will be stronger because our people are doing their best work.

Top airmen doing a demanding task

by A1C Ken Carlson
public affairs specialist

In the 1940's Uncle Sam asked for America's best, and he got them. More than 40 years later, the Reese Honor Guard asked for top airmen—they got them.

Charged with protecting the sanctity of split second drill, and Air Force ceremony, Honor Guard members frequently represent Reese in on- and off-base ceremonies.

What motivates someone to take on the extra duty? Pride. "The Honor Guard instills a feeling of pride," explains SSgt. Timothy Morhmann. When working with a military funeral, he says, it gives a person a good feeling to know they're part of such a meaningful ceremony.

In other off-base ceremonies the Reese Honor Guard represents the Air Force, because for many, that is as close to the military as they will ever come. "It is vitally important for the Honor Guard to make the most professional impression possible," explains Honor Guard Commander Capt. Bev Barge.

If practice makes perfect, then "we're getting close," says Captain Barge. Members spend hour after hour in group and individual practice striving to perfect their body movements, memorizing ceremony drill, and honing uniform appearance.

Having commanded the guard since May, Captain Barge "sees a really bright future for the guard; primarily due to wing commander support."

The Honor Guard team doesn't pull the load all by themselves. Like the base mission, the Honor Guard depends on continued support; especially from the duty sections.

"Most supervisors realize the Honor Guard is an additional duty, and make a dedicated effort to afford their airmen opportunities to attend practice and ceremonies," said Captain Barge.

To be a member is to take on a demanding task, because when the clock says 4:15 p.m. the members' day doesn't end. It's not uncommon that members find themselves working later, or even giving up a day off, he explains.

The Reese Honor Guard is tentatively set to perform at the Sun Bowl in El Paso, and march in the Presidential inauguration parade in Washington, D.C. Even though the events are only tentative, Captain Barge is positive that "the group we have here could do it."

As one of the benefits of being associated with the group, the Honor Guard will travel to Palo Duro Canyon, July 2, to view the festival play "Texas." It won't cost the members anything but their continued effort and support, says Captain Barge.

"It's great to work with a group of people with a common interest, who enjoy serving their country and having a good time doing it," concludes the commander.

ANG pilot best in class

Connecticut native 2nd Lt. Todd Roze is Undergraduate Pilot Training Class 84-06's "top stick" and he was so recognized June 22, during the UPT graduation ceremony at the theater.

The New England son accepted the Air Training Command Commander's trophy, the Flying Training Award, the Academic Training Award, and the distinction of Distinguished Graduate.

Lieutenant Roze will be assigned to an A-10 "Thunderbolt" unit with the Syracuse, New York Air National Guard once his familiarization training in the A-10 is complete.

Among the lieutenant's peers receiving awards were: Capt. John Jacobson, Distinguished Graduate and Leadership Award; 1st Lt. Steven Herrick, Leadership Award; 2nd Lt. Susan Ross, Distinguished Graduate and Flying Training Award; 1st Lt. Michael Drake, Distinguished Graduate; and 2nd Lt. Merrill Alligood, Distinguished Graduate.

"Don't be spoiled by Reese," warned former wing commander retired Maj. Gen. Walter Baxter III, "it's the best assignment" available. "I chose the Air Force way of life, because I felt I had a contribution to make to it. As the graduating class of aviators," General Baxter pointed to them to make their contributions by being the best of officers and pilots they could be.

Ten of the 53-strong graduating class will be meeting the general's challenge within ATC: Eight here, one at Columbus AFB, Miss., and another at Mather AFB, Calif.

Reese's returning instructor pilots include:

- In the T-37, 2nd Lts. Richard Bresette, Brad Gutierrez, Scott Poppleton and David Ross.

- In the T-38, Capt. John Jacobson, 2nd Lts. Brian Gerrity, Robert Lala and Susan Ross.

Show a friend what makes a Whataburger better.

To a lot of people a fast food hamburger is a hamburger that's wrapped and waiting under a heat lamp. If you know somebody who thinks so, you can do that somebody a big favor. You can introduce that person to a real, honest-to-goodness, made-especially-for-them hamburger.

Then you name it and we pile it on. Crispy lettuce. Thick slices of ripe tomatoes. Onions. Pickles. Mustard. Catsup. Salad dressing. All on a hot toasted bun. And anybody who does something as nice as introduce a friend to a Whataburger® deserves to be rewarded.

A Whataburger®. It's a beautiful, fresh 100% ground beef patty that doesn't go on the hot, sizzling grill until you say, "A Whataburger® please, with . . ."

So when you treat a friend to a Whataburger®, your Whataburger® will be on us. Just clip out the coupon below, and bring it in to your participating Whataburger® restaurant.

Personal financial counsel made available to everyone

by Capt. Aubrey Hendrix personal financial program manager

Personal finances can help maintain a career, or destroy it. It's the individual that makes the difference.

The Reese Personal Financial Management Program is there to help individuals in financial hot water, and those heading for bad times. It's for those wanting to make their pay checks go a little farther, too.

The voluntary money management program is designed to help people get on their financial feet and stay there. It is in no way a get rich quick program.

The program gets those involved information, education and counseling in money management, says Counselor Sgt. Wanda Jackson. "It can also help people find solutions to money problems they may have now."

Program attendees get general money managing information through pamphlets on subjects ranging from checkbook maintenance to budgeting and credit buying. In all, ways to make an individual's money go further.

All airman basics through sergeants get the personal financial management education at their first permanent duty assignment.

They find out what the program is and can offer if they need it.

Each new arrival gets the program education during the accounting and finance in-processing period. By educating the supervisors, finance staffers are ensured that supervisors know of the program, what it's about, and how they can help those working for them.

Confidential counseling (one-on-one) is the largest part of the program. The counselors can help a person with a big problem just as easy as an individual with a small one.

Reese's financial counselors help identify financial problems, develop budgets to fit the requestor's needs, and work out a financial plan to help a person to financial freedom. "Best of all, the counselor can help a person get over their financial worries," said Sergeant Jackson.

"It is totally confidential, and it is free. The Personal Financial Management Program can help," she stressed.

Supervisors and managers should encourage those having financial problems to call the program manager at Ext. 3432.

"Taking advantage of this free program now will serve a person better than when his or her career is already scarred."

Now in Stock — New 1985 Suzuki GV 700&1200 Madura V-Engine - Low Rider

High Power. High Profile.

Suzuki's new Madura 1200 is more than a pavement-scorching V-4 muscle bike. More than a high-style custom highway machine.

The Madura 1200 is, in fact, the first truly successful combination of classic styling and open class high performance. With nearly 75 cubic inches of liquid-cooled V-4 power for incredible acceleration. And hydraulic valve adjusters and clean, quiet shaft drive for low maintenance.

And then, there's the look.

A look you can only experience with Suzuki.

We will begin closing Saturdays, beginning July 7th, and be staying open until 7:30 p.m. on Thursdays.

Recordreview

by Bill Merrill
music critic

Has Bruce Springsteen let success go to his head? Did the seriousness of his last record, "Nebraska," weaken his commitment to rock 'n' roll? Does he still possess the fire and drive that made him "a legend in his own time?" These questions are all answered (yes, yes, and no, respectively) by the new Bruce Springsteen album, "Born In The USA."

Springsteen is currently in the middle of an important transition phase of his musical career. His last two records, "Nebraska" and "The River," are not quite as successful as expected. "Nebraska" in particular was an austere solo effort that alienated even his hard core fans. "Born In The USA" reunites Springsteen with his E Street Band. It is a more clearly focused record than "Nebraska," and it is tighter and better integrated than "The River." Nonetheless, there is an indefinable weakness to the album, an absence of true emotion or enthusiasm that draws attention to unoriginal songwriting and uninspired performances.

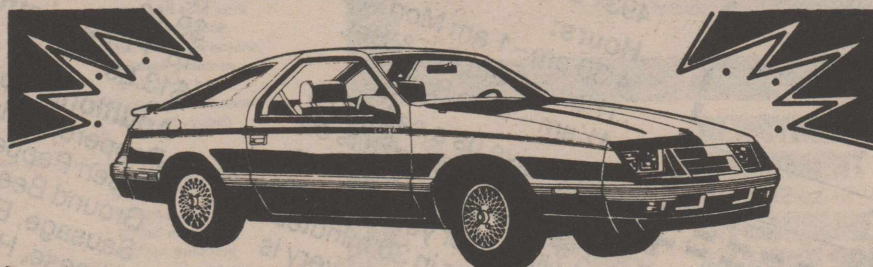

If "Born In The USA" had been made by some of Springsteen's contemporaries and imitators such as Bob Seger or John Cougar, it would not be subject to as much criticism. But the painful truth is that this album doesn't even compare to recent efforts by those imitators. One song ("Darlington County") even copies the style of Seger's "You'll Accompany Me."

Part of this malaise may be due to changes taking place in the E Street Band. Several members, including Steve Van Zandt and Clarence Clemons, have launched solo careers of their own. Although their performances on "Born In The USA" are polished on a technical level, their hearts seem to lie elsewhere. Their professional lethargy sums up the general air of boredom that runs through the whole album.

Military, DOD civilians face political limits

Government employees, including military members, who contribute to the Reagan-Bush campaign committee may be violating federal law.

That decision comes from President Reagan's legal counsel and Air Force Judge Advocate officials.

A provision of the United States code makes it a felony for an employee of the United States government to make any contribution to a person who is the employer, or employing authority, of the person making the contribution.

A contribution to the committee would be considered a contribution to the president himself, judge advocate officials say. They note this interpretation applies only to federal employees, and not to their family members.

Contributions made to the presidential election campaign fund, by checking the box on the federal income tax form, are not affected by the provision. Money from that fund is distributed to all qualified presidential candidates, not just the incumbent president, officials said.

Pentagon leaders have taken great care to keep the DOD-sponsored voting program non-partisan, according to officials.

Pentagon officials have asked commanders to encourage their people to vote and to provide information on how to register and obtain ballots. But it is the responsibility of the voter to gather information about the candidates and issues, they say.

Federal Employees, both military and civilian, can:

- Register, vote and assist in voter registration drives.

- Express personal opinions on candidates or issues as an individual citizen, but not as an Air Force representative.

- Donate money to a political party or organization or attend a political fund raising function.

- Attend partisan or non-partisan political gatherings as a spectator in civilian clothing.

- Join a political party or club.

- Campaign for or against referendum questions, municipal ordinances and other non-partisan causes.

- And, sign nominating petitions.

They may not:

- Work to register voters for one particular party nor poll members of the armed forces to determine the nature of their vote.

- Campaign or solicit votes for partisan candidates or political parties, speak before partisan political gatherings, or take part in radio, television or group discussions as an advocate or a candidate or party.

- Solicit funds for a party, organization, political cause or candidate.

- Organize or manage political rallies or meetings or march or ride in a partisan political parade.

- Serve as an officer in a political organization or party or become involved in party conventions.

- Work in any campaign which promotes partisan political causes.

- Circulate nominating petitions.

- Distribute badges, buttons or campaign literature for a particular candidate or party or display large political signs or posters on private vehicles. (AFNS)

Inflation hits movie pass

Movie buffs... the cost for silver screen passes available at the Mathis Recreation Center will climb 50 cents Sunday to $3 per pass.

Recreation officials here attribute the cost increase to rising prices at theater box offices. The theaters immediately affected by the price hike are the Fox and Mann Slide Road Theaters.

Did you know

Slow down before entering a curve... not halfway through it. This time-tested rule for driving could save drivers a lot of grief.

News briefs

Reese, ATC officers' course set

The first Air Training Command officership course, for permanent party lieutenants and captains, class meets Tuesday in Room 118 of CBPO. Class begins at 8 a.m.
 Additional classes are set for July 17 and 31.

Ceremony recognizes new squadron

The assumption of command ceremony for the security police, accompanies their new designation as a squadron, is Monday at division headquarters at 10 a.m.

Hospital provides physicals

School and sports physicals for dependent youth of active duty and retired military personnel will be available July 17-19, at U.S.A.F. Hospital Reese. For an appointment contact 885-3285.

The physicals are required by schools for admission and extracurricular sports activities. Appointments should be made as soon as possible. And, the parent, or legal guardian, of the child must report to the Physical Exams Section 45 minutes prior to their appointment. Have the child's shot record present, too.

For those unable to schedule appointments in July, there will be a make up physical time scheduled in August.

Block dance Tuesday night

There will be a country and western block dance at 8 p.m. at the base picnic grounds. The dance will feature Susie Deveraux and the Nashville Express. The enlisted club-sponsored event is open to everyone.

Commissary closes Wednesday

The commissary will close its doors Wednesday in observance of Independence Day 1984. The food store will reopen on schedule Thursday.

Exchange to change number

The customer service telephone number for the Reese Exchange will change Monday to 885-4581 and 885-4582.

Upcoming meetings

•The next Junior Officers' Council meeting is July 11, at 4:30 p.m. at the officers' club. All company grade officers are invited to attend.
 •The Commissary Advisory Council meets Tuesday in the Wing Conference Room (Building 800) at 1:30 p.m.

House movers coming for T-1

Building T-1 is sold and soon to be hauled away, according to Ray Baldwin, Reese's real estate property manager.

The building, located between Building 800 and the water tower, was bought by K.D. Maxwell House Movers in Roswell, N.M.

The two immediate concerns of Reese officials are the sidewalk behind T-1 and the parking area directly in front of the building.

The sidewalk is now in a designated hard hat area. For safety reasons, no one may use the sidewalk until the building is completely gone; sometime in November-December.

The parking area can be used until the barriers advising otherwise are put up, said Baldwin. Once the barriers are up no one may park there, because the equipment the contractor will use to move the building is so large and difficult to maneuver.

The start date could be as early as Saturday for the project, but that depends upon the contractor, said Baldwin. No matter when it begins, people are not to be walking on the sidewalk behind T-1.

1983's top supply superintendent...

Maintenance Complex Superintendent SMSgt. Luis M.C. DoRego scans the complex supply account. Sergeant DoRego's knowledge of the supply system, and his dedication to the supply task earned him 64th Flying Training Wing Supply Superintendent of the Year for 1983 honors. Deputy Commander for Maintenance Col. Robert Dale and Wing Commander Col. Bob Hullender praised Sergeant DoRego earlier this month for the achievement. "Professionalism and profound leadership" in working with supply helped eliminate deficiencies in aircraft support.

Watering schedule

The watering schedule for the base and Reese Village is:

- Persons living on the north side of Mitchell Boulevard, in Reese Village, water on Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays.
- Persons living in Reese Village on the south of Mitchell Boulevard water their lawns Tuesdays, Thursdays and Sundays.
- Persons in Reese Village may water their lawns between 5-10 a.m. and 7-10 p.m. on their respective days.
- On-base buildings and areas north of Main Street will water on Mondays and Thursdays.
- Buildings and areas on-base south of Main Street will water on Tuesdays and Fridays.
- Watering for buildings or areas on-base will be done between 7-10 a.m. and 7-10 p.m. on their assigned days.
- Absolutely no watering will be done on-base, or in Reese Village for three days after a rainfall of one inch or more.

Questions about the watering schedule should be directed to 2nd Lt. Pete Pattis at Ext. 3916. (The map to the right should help clear some of the confusion.)

Exercise swimming caution

Courtesy of Wing Safety

As the temperature rises, it encourages an increase in swimming in nearby lakes. Use of common sense and good judgment when swimming, can prevent an accident. Almost 7,000 lose their lives by drowning in this country.

The playa lakes in the area are a source of more than their share of mishaps. Rivers and creeks you may visit this weekend are other areas that have been placed in this category. These have been surveyed and found to be unsafe either through excessive bacteria, shallow and stagnant water, or debris below the water level.

Swimming when overtired or overheated, or when you have just finished eating, or after having consumed alcoholic beverages also takes its toll.

Distance over water is misleading. Be prepared to return to a point of safety at all times.

The lack of common sense can set the stage for disaster.

Camp counselors sought

Highly motivated counselors are needed to work with children during Camp Blue Yonder Aug. 6-10 (boys) and 13-17 (girls) here. Counselors will be asked to work full-time, and will be required to get their commander's approval for permissive temporary duty.

Camp Blue Yonder is for socio-economically disadvantaged children who wouldn't otherwise have the opportunity to attend a summer camp. Scheduled highlights during the camp include field trips to a TV station and Palo Duro Canyon.

Interested persons should contact Capt. John Paterson at Ext. 3660, or 2nd Lt. Marcy Barnes at Ext. 3714.

CE splits doubleheader

"Even in failure, there can be nobility, but failing to try brings only shame," said new CE Coach Buck Cockren; as his team lost the second game of the doubleheader to ABG 14-4.

CE won their first game 7-2 over Comm as the Trojans pounded out 16 hits. The Trojans, now 5-11, take on FMS, Hospital and Comm this week in an effort to stem the poorest start of perhaps the base's greatest team.

Asked about his team's chance for a playoff berth, Coach Cockren stated, "The turn around has already begun. For while others battle with victory in sight, CE still strives when all hope is gone."

Second session registration

Registration for the second session of Red Cross swimming lessons began today at the enlisted pool. The registration will continue through July 7.

The fee is $12 per student. The swimming pretest is July 7, at 9 a.m., and formal swimming lessons begin July 9. For more information contact Ext. 3371.

Swim-a-cross applications

Applications for the July 4, swim-a-cross, Red Cross sponsored, at the Reese Youth Center and Mathis Recreation Center. There will be individual and team events.

Golf championship on line

The July 4, Reese Golf Championships have been moved to this weekend, June 30-July 1.

Golfers will shoot 27 holes each of the two days and the winners (military) qualify to represent Reese in the Air Training Command golfing championships this August.

The tournament fee is $5, and the event is open to both civilian and military. To sign up call Ext. 3819.

Eagle ST White Letter Radials

- Competition-style raised white letters—a look borrowed from Goodyear's famous racing Eagles
- Low profile, wide tread, big bold footprint—all designed for fast action
- Under the tread, two stiff belts force the Eagle ST into flat road contact shoulder to shoulder, to build in traction and wear
- White letter sizes available to fit many vans and RVs as well as most standard cars
