done well in other talent shows too. In 1973-74, he earned first place in country music and second in folk music at the Plattsburg AFB, N.Y. contest. In 1978 Courville garnered a second place finish in the Carlswell AFB, Texas, talent contest. Last year, he was one of Reese's representatives at Air Training Command level competition, and qualified again this year.

He is assigned to the base

First runner up was Carmen Myles, an Air Force dependent. Her performance of the song "Making Love" from the movie by the same title, reflected her six years experience as a singer. Since she is a dependent, she is in-level of competition.

Second Runner up was Amn. Carlos James, who's assigned to the 64th Supply Squadron. He sang Neil Sedaka's song "Breaking Up is Hard to Do." He also eligible to compete at ATC qualified for ATC level competition.

Also qualifying for ATC level competition were AB Edgar Price and A1C Blake Stamper. Price qualified under the instrumental solo (Continued on page 8)

Strategic momentum must be sustained

By SMSgt. Mike Estrada Editor, Air Force News Service Kelly AFB, Texas

The United States is on the verge of significant modernization of key components of its strategic forces, according to the Strategic Air Command Commander in Chief.

Addressing the Senate Appropriations Committee's Subcommittee on defense earlier this month, Gen. Bennie L. Davis emphasized, "It is vital that we sustain the momentum we have worked so hard to achieve.'

General Davis is responsible for the day-to-day control of two-thirds of the nation's nuclear forces and is charged with planning for the wartime use of all of the nation's strategic forces.

"I cannot emphasize enough my full support for a program that has already produced significant improvements in our strategic retaliatory capability," the general said.

Among the improvements cited by the general were:

equipping five B-52G squadrons with air-launched cruse missiles and another squadron with harpoon antiship missiles.

· accuracy and communications improvements in the Minuteman missile force.

· Strengthening the capability of the sea-based deterrent forces through the ongoing development of Trident submarines.

Discipline—not just saying 'no'

By Chap. (Capt.) Roger S. Winburg Installation Staff Chaplain

Discipline is an interesting concept. Our thoughts on the subject differ depending on the context that the word is used in. We think of military discipline as a quick and correct response to a command. We think of discipline with our children as punishment for wrong doing. We think of self-discipline as the ability to say "no" to self.

Each of these thoughts are only partly true. Discipline involves training. Dicipline is not only the training process; it is also the desired result. Whether it be a recruit or a child, our desire is to see a disciplined individual after the course of training. Training involved much more than punishment for wrong-doing. We hope that we will not have to command every action. Our intention really is to instill self-

Anyone who wishes to instill a quality in anyone else must personally posses that quality. You can't give away what you don't have.

The actions of our lives speak much more loudly than our words do. If we live it we show others how it is done. Children copy adults, especially their parents. Even as adults we often model our lives after others who are successful.

Self-discipline plays a large part in success. Self-discipline doesn't need supervision. Selfdiscipline says no to wrong and that which is not beneficial, even if it may not be wrong. Self-discipline is willing to stand for right. It doesn't need to be told what to do; it finds out. It takes initiative and doesn't wait to be told

We can find out a lot about discipline in the book of Proverbs. This book of the Bible is the book of God's wisdom. This word wisdom used here actually means "skill in living."

Patriotic rebirth hits America

In preparation for the Summer Olympics, people from all walks of life across the nation paid large sums of money to sponsor the flaming torch's dash across the nation.

A tribute to Turbo

This is the true story of a very well-known hero. If you've been to Carswell AFB, you may have seen him at the main gate or sniffing around inside a building.

At the age of 18 months, Turbo, a beagle-basset hound, enlisted in the Air Force to become one of the first small detector dogs for the Department of Defense. His mission was to search for drugs in small areas, and he was very tray and on the floor board of good at what he did.

During his nine years at Carswell, Turbo amassed an incredible 198 drug finds that led to apprehensions and convictions.

than one month after arriving at Carswell. He was working the main gate doing vehicle Turbo went on temporary duty to Templehof Airport, Berlin. On one occasion he His first find occurred less worked with the office of special investigations in a large drug probe.

While searching a room he alerted on a closet. Turbo led investigators to a jacket that had nine foil packets of herion and five syringes, two of which had been used, inside the pockets.

During his 10 weeks in Germany, Turbo had 29 major finds which were so costly to the drug trade that two contracts were put out on his life.

Turbo's last drug find was Oct. 15, 1984, at Carswell. He found a marijuana cigarette.

Five days later he suffered a massive heart attack. To keep him from suffering and to give him the dignified end he deserved, he was put to sleep Dec. 18.

For those of us who knew Turbo, his death brings sadness, but many are happy to have had the chance to work with him. Their memories will be of a brown and white dog who was one of the best narcotics detector dogs in the Air Force. (AFNS-courtesy Carswell AFB Sentinel)

Speaking softly gets message across

By Chaplain (Capt.) Paul R. Greger Keesler AFB, Miss.

There is a story about Francis of Assisi, which illustrates that we often say things silently.

Francis, founder of the Franciscan order, promised his disciples one day that they could go with him to a nearby town to preach. The disciples followed Francis into the streets and all through the outskirts of town before ending up at the monastery where they had begun. But none of them had opened their mouths to preach.

One of the monks said, "When are we going to preach?" Francis replied, "We have been preaching all the time we were walking. We have been observed; our behavior marked; and so we delivered a morning sermon. It is of no use that we walk anywhere to preach unless we preach as we walk."

This story illustrates the truth that is important to us all. We say much of what we say without saying a word. Our clothes, our body language, our gestures, our attitudes, our patience or impatience, our tolerance or intolerance all speak adequate words about us without our even speaking an audible word.

What's your message? Is it one that you are proud of? Is it one that other people seem to like? Does it show things about you that you want other people to see? or not to source for children to make new friends. If you move during summer, your child will be faced with unfamiliar surroundings and a limited chance of making friends, Dr. Jenson says. When school does start in the fall, your child will be faced with an unfamiliar situation at a time when teachers are least able to help.

Dr. Jenson says that if you move during the school year, your child will move more easily from one social situation to another. Your child will be able to get more attention from the whole class and the teacher.

"The curriculum in most schools is flexible enough to allow for a mid-year transfer with a minimum of academic discomfort," he says. "This is particularly true during the elementary and junior high school years."

In general, Dr. Jenson says, School is the primary the key to a smooth move with children is not so much the timing, but the feeling of involvement the children experience. He suggests a few guidelines for moving.

· Let the children help. Although it is tempting to want to get children, especially preschoolers, out of the way when you are packing, most researchers agree that the extra bother is worth tolerating to let the child feel involved.

• Discuss the move. As soon as you know about the move, start preparing the children by having them discuss it with you. Allow children ample time to air their feelings and concerns.

Visit the new area. If possible, visit the new neighborhood to alleviate some of the fears your child may have about moving. If visits are not possible, try to obtain books, pamphlets, photographs and maps about the new area. The local chamber of commerce or travel council may be able to · Pack, don't discard. It may be tempting to use a move as an opportunity to throw things out. You should be sensitive, though, that an old stuffed animal or rusty tricycle may have a special meaning to your child. Allow children to take things with them that will help them feel at home in the new area.

• Be positive. If parents are optimistic and enthusiastic, children will probably feel the same. Parental time is at a premium, but it is important to openly discuss fears and expectations concerning the moves as they develop.

Surgeon general says Medical care "excellent"

The Air Force's top medical officer rejects media reports that his service's medical care is unhealthy and he insists that "overall, the quality of Air Force health care is excellent."

Air Force Surgeon General Lt. Gen. Max B. Bralliar told Air Force News Service he is "worried about the effect on the morale of competent. hard-working physicians and other health care professionals who read in the paper or see on television stories critical of military medicine."

The quality of physicians and medical care in the service "has never been better," the general said, relating to his more than 34-year career. Most of the problems uncovered in internal investigations, he pointed out, are administrative and not professional. And the Air Force needs more people to perform these functions. "We have requested more people and should have 141 civilians beginning to come on board late this year to do solely quality assurance administrative functions," he said.

In fiscal 1984, the Air Force Medical Service recorded more than 16 million clinic visits and more than 280,000 hospital admissions. Since 1979, Air Force malpractice claims have decreased 13 percent while civilian malpractice claims have increased more than 114 percent.

'When judged against the standards applied to civilian medicine, the Air Force fares well," said General Bralliar. "For example, the non-effective rate for Air Force people (number per 1,000 not available for duty because of illness or injury) has decreased from 16.1 per 1,000 in 1950 to 3.7 in 1984.

He also pointed out that in the Air Force:

• Physicians score higher than the national average on training and specialty board certification exams.

• Surgical mortality rates are comparable to civilian

• Maternal mortality rates for mothers are less than the national average.

• Newborn mortality rates are less than the national average.

• Surgical-related infection rates for medical centers are lower than comparable civilian medical facilities.

· X-ray exposures in medical facilities generally deliver lower radiation doses to patients than those recorded in comparable civilian set-

 And no Air Force hospital has ever failed accreditation by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals.

"These are just a few of the areas in which we stand tall,"

Current manning is about 98 percent for the Air Force's 3,700 physicians, he added. There are shortages in some specialties such as orthopedics, and gynecology.

Regarding dissatisfied customers, General Bralliar said, 'Medicine is not an exact science and sometimes no matter what you do, people don't return to normal. Often their expectations are unreal-

"When you have an organization of 50,000 people, somebody on some day is going to do something that displeases someone. But we do care and our goal is to provide quality health services. If we find that we have providers who don't measure up to our standards of performance, we'll get rid of them and also advise the pertinent civilian agencies.'

To members who are not happy with the treatment received and those with questions General Bralliar said, "Don't just sit there and smolder.

"Tell us, not your neighbor." he said, explaining that patients can talk with their doctor, patient affairs office or hospital commander.

Other than medical readiness, quality assurance is the highest priority for the threestar general, he revealed.

DOD families to be surveyed

WASHINGTON (AFNS)-Quality of life for military families is the subject of a Defense Department Survey of spouses of military members slated to begin in mid-

The "1985 Department of Defense survey of military spouses" will be mailed to wives and husbands of airmen, soldiers, sailors and marines worldwide, DOD officials said.

The survey asks for opinions on such topics as relocation, quality and availability of family support services, family separation, employment of spouses, medical and dental care, and the degree of satisfaction with family life within the military, officials said.

The survey will be mailed to spouses of service members taking part in the "1985 DOD survey of officer and enlisted personnel." The companion survey addresses economic conditions as well as quality of life issues, officials said.

Lawrence J. Korb, assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower, Installations and Logistics, said this was the first survey to be conducted by the DOD. The survey, he added, emphasizes the significance which has been placed on military family life as a factor contributing to overall retention and readiness.

He also stressed the need for maximum response of individuals who are asked to participate in order to get the maximum benefit from the

About $10 billion is presently spent annually by DOD on family programs such as housing, health care and child care.

The information obtained from the survey, officials said, will be used to evaluate the success of those and other quality of life programs as well as measure the investment in those programs. (AFNS Family News)

The second largest commissary in the Air Force opened its doors at Carswell AFB, Texas last month. The store offers more than 35,000 feet of sales area and 32 checkout stands. Air Force Commissary Service officials said the store was built entirely with money from the 5 percent surcharge added to grocery bills. They noted that this is the third store to open this year. The Air Force Commissary Service, which has resisted the policy to charge a fee for unredeemed checks, must begin doing so in accordance with public law, according to Pat Kramer, AFCOMS Comp-

The new policy, which will begin May 1, will still allow customers a chance to redeem their checks, even after the second return, and avoid the fee, he said.

"Checks are returned from the bank for several reasons," Mr. Kramer said, "Including administrative errors such as a missing signature, differences between the written and numeric amounts and illegible entries. These errors are easily corrected and the checks are redeposited.

"Dishonored checks are returned because there's no account or a closed account or because of insufficient funds. Most of these checks are redeposited and many of them clear. The rest are returned to the commissary to be collected from the patron."

Under the new program, checks still will be run through the bank or financial institution twice before they aer classified as dishonored, Mr. Kramer said.

"At that point we still won't charge $15 to patrons who redeem their checks within two days of when we notify them, provided that's within five work days of when the check was finally returned to us," said Mr. Kramer. "This way, we'll comply with the law and still give our customers every chance to avoid extra charge."

Air Force eases housing liability rules military housing occupants who damage assigned quarters changed March7. The rules apply to people assigned to dormitories, family housing and bachelor's quarters.

Occupant liability will now be limited to one month's base pay, unless gross negligence or willful misconduct is involved, according to Lt. Col. Matt Bristol, chief of the Preventive Law and Legal Aid Group, Office of the Judge Advocate General.

The new provisions - which also apply to uncollected claims arising under previous,

Financial liability rules for unlimited law-should put to rest concerns that members will be liable for full replacement cost of quarters damaged through simple negligence or carelessness, he said.

The guidelines were prompted by a change to public law in August that gave military services new flexibility in determining financial claims.

Colonel Bristol said the new rules mean, "people who take reasonable care of assigned quarters don't have to worry about major financial losses. They can make a mistake and the Air Force will treat them fairly.

"On the other hand, people don't care-and if it's clear they don't care - should know that nobody is lining up to let them off the hook," he said. In brief, the policy states:

· Occupants can be held liable to the Air Force when assigned quarters or government-issued furnishings or appliances are damaged or lost as a result of negligence, intentional misconduct, or deliberate unauthorized use by themselves, their dependents,

• Liability will be limited to an amount equal to one month's base pay - computed on their salary at the time of the incident - unless the damage or loss was caused by intentional misconduct or gross negli-

• Also, a claim may be made for more than a month's base pay if the member knowingly permits a dependent or guest to damage quarters through gross negligence or willful misconduct.

'This strikes a balance between the need to protect valuable resources and the equally important need to treat our people fairly," said Colonel

Claims will be determined through the reports of survey system that considers the views of the occupant and housing authority.

An important aspect of the new housing liability rules, Colonel Bristol added, is waiver authority being grannted to commanders who approve reports of survey. A waiver for claims, similar to forgiveness of debt, can now be granted, even when the occupant is technically liable. the colonel said.

"Just because a member is legally liable doesn't always mean that collection is in the best interest of the Air Force," he said. "The circumstances of each case are unique.

Contestants do not have to win in overall competition or in a particular category to qualify for ATC level competition. Also, those who do win may not qualify for ATC competition.

Twelve contestants competed for first place in seven categories. In addition to Sergeant Courville's win in the Music Vocalist-Self Accompanied category, Carmen Myles' win in the Female Vocalist-Not Self Accompanied category and Airman James' win in the Male Vocalist-Not Self Accompanied category, Reese Civilian employee Raymond Santiago took first in the Potpourri category, with a ven-triloquist act. Sgt. Darcie Pope took first in the Comedy category with her portrayal of "Edith Ann," a character originated by Lilly Tomlin. Airmen Price and Stamper took first in the Musical Potpourri category. The top spot in the Instrumental Solo category went to Reggie Mitchell, for his performance of an original song entitled "Somethin' Tough" on the base guitar.

The theme of this year's contest was "The Rising Stars of 1985."

Contest judges were Nancy Huenergardt, a Texas Tech senior majoring in Music Education; Judith Struggs, a teacher at Jackson Elementary in Lubbock; and Catrinnia Williamson, the recreation supervisor for the Lubbock Parks and Recreation Depart-

Housing inspection

Inspections will be conducted each Tuesday beginning April 2, by the 64th Air Base Group Squadron Commander.

If a holiday falls on a Monday the inspection will be made that following Wednesday. If the holiday falls on a Tuesday the inspection will be made on Thursday.

The areas to be inspected are: edging along the base of the house, curbs and sidewalk' grass cut and watered both front and back; shrubbery trimmed with a shapely contour; no grass or weeds growing in the sidewalks or parking areas; spider webs and bird nests removed from the exterior of the building; lights turned off during daylight hours in the carports and porches.

If you have any doubts on your areas of responsibility, review the map titled "area of policing responsibilities Reese Village" located in the on-base housing office, Building 6100.

Each week the housing in- ficers Open Mess. spector will select the best officer and enlisted home of the week.

Special Olympics

Volunteers are needed for the 1985 Special Olympics at Estacado High School, May 4. At least 400 volunteers are needed for the competition which will be held from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. that day.

Volunteers may act as timers, huggers, judges and general assistants.

In previous years, keeping children occupied between athletic events has been a problem due to their short attention span. This year, a special area full of games and activities will be set up to keep the children busy during waiting times.

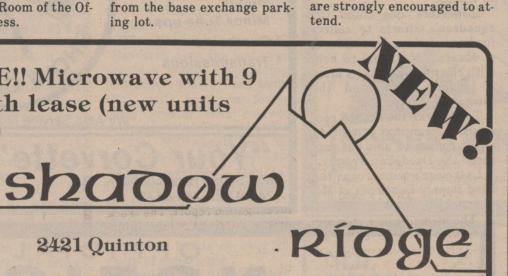

Transporation for the volunteers will be provided from the base exchange parking lot.

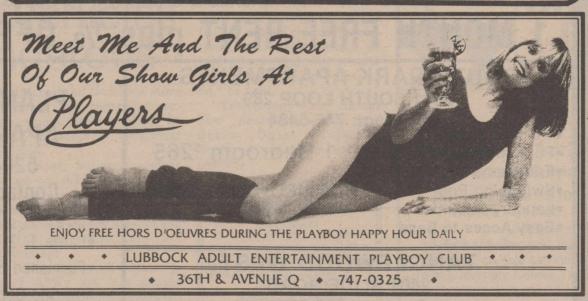

To volunteer, contact one of the following individuals: 1st Lt. Barry Brannon, 54th Flying Training Squadron; 1st Lt. Chuck Elliot, 35th Flying Training Squadron; 1st Lt. Robert Cayton or 1st Lt. I am frequently asked questions by my patients on a wide and varying range of subjects dealing with dentistry. Through this colum I will attempt to answer many of those questions.

One of the most frequently asked questions is "why should baby teeth be saved"? Primary (baby) teeth are extremely essential for proper growth and development of the dental arches and the face. A child normally will have twenty primary teeth (ten upper and ten lower), the first erupting about six months after birth, and the last to be shed as late as about 12 years of age. Primary teeth should have spaces between the teeth (closely placed primary teeth are a good indication of future orthodontic problems!)

As the child grows the muscles in and around the mouth (especially the tongue) exert pressure on the teeth. This pressure is then transmitted to the supporting bone, thus influencing the pattern of growth of the dental arches. I'm sure you have noticed that a child's permanent lower incisor teeth erupt behind the primary lower incisors. The tongue then pushes this tooth forward thus forcing the bone in this area to grow, allowing space for the remainder of the incisors to erupt. The lip muscles then halt the forward movement of the teeth thus setting up a balance.

Early loss of primary teeth will therefore adversely affect the proper growth but also the teeth on either side of this space will drift into the space, thus causing even less space into which the permanent teeth may erupt. This is the reason why many adults will have one or two teeth which will erupt out of line with the remaining teeth.

Unfortunately some children do lose primary teeth. It is important therefore to have a "space maintainer" placed in this area. A space maintainer is a device which holds in place teeth on either side of the space thus providing room for the eruption of the permanent space:

Should you have any questions or problems my staff and I will be happy to help you. Please feel welcome to call us. Our office treats children and adults and all phases of dentistry (including orthodontics).

If you have a topic of you would like to have discussed let me know. You'll probably find that many of your friends have the same questions.

Where will we PCS ... and when?

By Judi Critton Family News Service

It's my theory that at any given time half the Air Force is dreading orders, 44 percent are anxiously awaiting change of station and 5 percent are still recovering from their last move. The remaining 1 percent includes people like our friend Frank, the mobile training instructor, who has to be reminded daily which time zone he's in.

While we've enjoyed our three-plus years at Keesler, I have to admit it wasn't the first choice for Buffalonians with recruiter-induced dreams of Deutschland. At this point in our lives, the three most beautiful words in the English language are no longer "income tax refund," but, "base of preference."

At first glance at the list of possible bases, we were like kids in a candy store. The continental United States was the list to about a dozen dolph and McGuire rounded our oyster. Having both Buffalo and Biloxi wardrobes, climate was no consideration.

Even before we let the grandparents give their opinions, bases started dropping from the list faster than the famous continuously shedding pine needles in our yard.

I wanted a community with a newspaper large enough that I stood a chance of being able to put 'reporter' on my college's annual alumni inquiry form again. Checking the bases against a newssurefire winners. I naively assumed that all Air Force bases had radar in need of Greg's repair skills.

Once he eliminated those without flightlines or radar, three remained. I boosted the total up to four by convincing myself that all Southern California women couldn't possibly be 18-year-old blondes in bikinis and added March AFB, Calif., to the list. Even if they are, I can always commute to Los Angeles and sooth my ego by winning a fortune from game shows, I paper directory, I narrowed rationalized. Lowry, Ran- not be that bad after all.

out the quartet, which we submitted in early December.

Opening presents and making Christmas cookies were a little more complex with our fingers crossed, but we're taking no chances. Any one of the bases would be a great place for us to anticipate that longsought overseas tour. I've made a solemn vow this new year that if any of them come through, I am going to keep and live by all the New Year's resolutions I've ever broken.

On the other hand, another few years at Keesler might

Pope AFB wins

The 317th Supply Squadron from Pope AFB, N.C., has been selected the best supply unit in the Air Force and will receive the 1984 Daedalian Runners-up were the 832nd Supply Squadron at Luke AFB, Ariz., and the 64th Supply Squadron here.

The award is sponsored annually by the order of the Daedalians, an organization founded by world war I pilots. Selection is based on inspection results from Major Command and Air Force Teams.

In selecting the 317th Supply squadron, Inspectors looked at statistical data, readiness and management effectiveness inspection ratings, base and community involvement and on-site evaluations by logistics officials.

Inspectors highlighted the squadron's role in the Grenada Resuce operations, during which members ensured that mission essential assetseverything from aircraft fuel to flak vests-were available to troops.

Inspectors also noted the squadron's efforts to collect food and clothing for residents of Maxton, N.C., and to help with cleanup operations after a tornado devastated the

This marks the second consecutive year that a military airlift command unit has captured the Daedalian Trophy.

Last year's winner was the 62nd Supply Squadron at Mc-Chord AFB, Wash.

Strategic momentum

these accomplishments are only the beginning. "It is absolutely essential that we continue this effort to modernize our strategic forces-all three legs of the Triad," he said.

The Triad refers to the three components of the nation's strategic forces: landbased intercontinental Ballistic missiles, sea-based ICBMs and manned bombers.

General Davis told the subcommittee that effective command, control and communications systems are vital.

"We are pursuing programs to ensure that the capability of our command, control and communications network is commensurate with that of the modernized forces we will soon deploy," he said.

The capability to detect and defend against attack is also being upgraded according to the general.

"Modernization of tactical warning systems and Air Defense is certainly vital, especially in light of Soviet efforts to deploy an expanded, fully modernized long-range bomber force complemented by air-and-sea-launched cruise missiles," he said.

He also applauded strategic defense initiative research that "could yield new opportunities to enhance deterrence.'

General Davis said modernization of the bomber force is "progressing well." He cited plans to modify the B-52Hs to carry air-launched cruise missiles and the two-bomber program to develop deploy the B-1B and advanced technology bomber.

"Together, the B-1B and ATB will present a for-midable challenge to Soviet air defenses well into the 21st century," he said.

Summarizing the nation's modernization efforts, the general said, "Our strategic modernization program is generally well on track.

"We have made much progress since program initiation four years ago and are now on the verge of achieving significant goals established in our overall objective to modernize the key components of our strategic deterrent force."

Warning the senators that this momentum must be sustained, General Davis said the MX deployment must be carried out.

"We face a highly destabilizing situation," he said. 'The Soviets can significantly threaten our ICBM force while we have only a limited capability to place their ICBMs and other key hardened assets at risk.

'This Soviet advantage, more than any other factor in the current strategic situation, undermines stability and threatens peace," he said.

"If not redressed, it may lead the soviets to believe their political objectives can be successfully attained through the use of coercion or force.'

The general believes the MX is the best solution to the present imbalance.

"Deployment of 100 MX missiles with 10 warheads each raises doubts in the minds of Soviet war planners as to the success of their initiating an attack," he said.

"However, it does not represent a destabilizing pre-emptive potential because the proposed deployment cannot place the majority of highvalue Soviet targets at risk," he explained.

"Still," he added, "MX will convincingly threaten enough of these targets to deter."

Turning to the issue of vulnerability, General Davis noted that much of the debate about the MX deployment since 1976 has focused on survivability. The general told the senators that the situation has changed. "Individual missile survivability is better than we projected and can be further enhanced," he stated.

He said improved and survivable warning systems now provide a more timely attack analysis, while improvements in command, control and communications provide a high level of confidence that communications links with alert crews will survive an attack.

The general also said that a better understanding of the geological characteristics at F.E. Warren AFB, Wyo., where the MX missiles are to be deployed, has shown that existing silos are harder than originally thought.

'Furthermore," he said, "Research over the last year provides highly encouraging indications that we can build silos with hardness levels much greater than current designs.

"The MX should not be seen as a revolutionary new weapon system," General Davis said. "It should be viewed for what it is-logical, modern ICBM complement for the aging minuteman force that builds on over 20 years of experience.'

General Davis believes that cancelling the MX and concentrating on the small ICBM would be a mistake.

"While research on a small ICBM must certainly continue, the nation cannot afford to wait years for promising technologies to be realized," he said.

"Technology - no matter how promising-does not deter. Only a visible, deployed capability deters."

Air Force aids local Airman

By A1C Ken Carlson Public Affairs Specialist

The Air Force Aid Society helped a 64th Civil Engineering airman after he lost everyweekend.

Air Force Aid Officer MSgt. John Broussard said a $300 grant was presented to A1C Ronald L. Stanford within 11 hours of the tragedy. · The grant will not have to be repaid.

The 12:11 a.m. fire Saturday destroyed Airman Stanford's home at 18th Street and Viola in Lubbock. The family escaped uninjured.

The loss was estimated at around $30,000. "If not totaled, the house was very close to it," said a Lubbock Fire Department spokesman. Firefighters cited a gas leak due to a mechanical malfunction as the cause of the fire.

Fourteen Lubbock firefighters resonded to the blaze.

AAFES recalls dog collars

Exchange Service has issued a second recall of two studded dog collars manufactured by the Harper Leather Goods Manufacturing Company.

In September, technicians in AAFES' Quality Assurance Laboratory confirmed reports that the pointed studs on the collars came loose easily. Recent examination of new collars in stock proved that the manufacturer had not corrected the problem.

While no injuries have been reported, AAFES technicians say that the studs could be swallowed by a child or pet or could injure someone if stepped on.

AAFES is recalling the fund.

The Army and Air Force 3/4-inch-wide CD-600 collar, which sells for $2.85, and the 1-inch-wide CD-800 collar, which sells for $4.

During the original recall in September, a 1/2-inch-wide collar was also recalled. However, recent examination has not revealed a problem with the 1/2-inch collar.

AAFES has pulled the 3/4-inch and 1-inch Harper leather Collars from its shelves and will no longer carry them in its stock assortment. At the same time, Exchange Service management encourages customers who purchased the collars after August 1, to return them to the local exchange for a re35TH def. COMM 15-2, STUS #4 def. Chanute overthrew Lackland 15-11, 15-13 in the final playoffs of the Air Training Command Women's Volleyball Championship at Laughlin AFB, Texas, Sunday.

"We did very well for the amount of practice we had," said Irene Van Frankfort, player and coach for the Chanute team. "We only had seven days to prepare."

The Lackland team had two months to make sure they were ready for the championships. "My philosophy is team Championship was round-robin work," Patti Keaton, player and coach for the Lackland team said. "We were a very well-practiced team."

For third place, Columbus volleyed over Lowery 15-9, 15-10. Williams and Laughlin settled for fifth and sixth place, respectively Chanute's undefeated lead to victory meant squeaking past Laughlin 17-15, 15-13, then Lowry in a tie-breaking 15-13 game.

Spring presents fire hazards

Spring officially arrived at 10:41 a.m. Wednesday, and with it grass cutting duties, back-yard barbeques, and the potential for fires.

According to the Base Fire Department's Fire Prevention Section, this is a good time to check for fire hazards.

They suggest taking a few minutes to check closets and storage areas for an over abundance of combustible materials collected during the harsh winter weather.

Gardening and lawn care equipment should be checked before using, especially power tools. Check the edgers, weedeaters and hedge trimmers for cracks and frays in the cords, and general good repair.

Lawnmowers can present a great fire hazard, they said and suggest that users let the engine cool a bit before refueling it.

All gasoline and flammable liquids should be stored in approved safety containers in outside containers.

When you finish work, and decide to relax, they say not to relax the fire safety at-

Should a backyard cookout fit your mood, remember to use only approved charcoal lighter on the charcoal grills, and never add lighter fluid after the fire has started. Keep the grills well clear of exterior walls, overhanging roofs and tree branches.

Most important, they say, take care to see that the children don't get burned by getting too close to hot charcoal grills.

Firefighters here say they are looking forward to a firefree year, and want to work with all base persons to make it happen.

Persons having any questions concerning fire safety, or need assistance should call the Fire Department's Fire Prevention section at Ext.

Red Cross training available

What would you do if you were the first person on the scene of an accident? If a friend chokes or a relative has a heart attack, could you save their life?

Red Cross training will prepare you for a variety of emergencies. The courses also serve as good introductions to a number of health and safety careers, ranging from service on the National Ski Patrol to the practice of Emergency Medicine.

Courses available through the South Plains Regional quired for members of the Na-

Red Cross include First Aid and CPR training. These classes are eight hours in length and are held several times each month at the Red Cross Office at 2201 Avenue X. The fee for the First Aid course is $12.50 and for the CPR course is $10. These courses are open to anyone 13 or older.

Upon completion of CPR and First Aid Training, those who are 17 or older are eligible to take Red Cross Advanced First Aid, the course re-tional Ski Patrol and by certain other emergency care groups. Basic training, along with meeting other requirements, will also make students eligible for membership on Red Cross First Aid or Disaster Action Teams.

In addition to the first aid classes, registration is now underway for a Red Cross Water Safety Instructor course to be held at the Texas Tech Aquatic Center beginning April 1. The course, which trains instructors for all Red Cross courses from Beginning Swimming through Advanced Life Saving, will take place in nine Saturday sessions.

Class requirements include current certification in Advanced Lifesaving and the Red Cross Swimmer Designation. The swimmer certificate may be waived upon completion of swimming skills test. Minimum age for participation is 17.

The fee for the Water Safety Instructor course is $31.95. This includes the pool use fee and all training materials.

To register for any of the courses, contact the American Red Cross Office at 765-8534, in Lubbock.
