Q—Where are county commissioners in the process of redistricting? I've read about other area counties that have already started.

A—County commissioners have sent 1990 census data to an Austin law firm for evaluation. Representatives from the firm are expected to meet county officials in the next few weeks with a recommendation.

In Brief

Fatal collision

CAMDEN, Tenn. (AP) — A dump truck apparently struck a car and then rolled on top of a Texas church van returning from a Tennessee youth conference, fatally crushing six teenagers and leaving nine other people injured, authorities said.

"As I understand it, their van was hit by a car and rolled the van, and then a gravel truck went over the top of them," said Paul Cook, pastor of the 300-member Elmira Chapel-Cumberland Presbyterian in Longview, Texas.

'Best of Texas' to return again

Over $2,000 in top prize money will be awarded to grand champion and reserve winners of the Best of Texas Steer and Lamb Show, scheduled July 26-28 at Scurry County Coliseum. Event organizers have announced over 200 pre-entries and anticipate that an additional 300 entries are possible as the show date draws nearer. Last year, almost 400 head of livestock were showcased.

Animals will begin arriving at the ag annex on Friday, July 26, with the lamb show, featuring both prospect and progress lambs, beginning at 10 a.m. Saturday. Progress and prospect steers will begin to be shown at 8 a.m. Sunday.

Lamb and steer showmanship competitions will be open to all participants and will be held following their respective shows. A junior and senior competitor in both the steer and lamb showmanship competitions will be recognized.

The grand champion steer winner will receive a $1,000 cash prize with the reserve champion receiving $500. The grand champion lamb winner gets $500 while the reserve winner will receive $250. Prize money will also be awarded to the top six or eight places in each class. The number of places recognized and the amount of award will depend on the number of entries in the class, organizers said.

Other prizes include belt buckles for breed champion winners and showmanship honors. Ribbons and banners will also be awarded.

"The show is open to all Texas FFA and 4-H members," said Mike Morrow, county agriculture agent. Morrow noted participants are traveling from as far as the Corpus Christi area for the event. Participants will be treated to a swimming party Saturday afternoon, sponsored by Western Texas College.

Aycock departs

Dr. Tom Aycock, general surgeon serving Cogdell Memorial Hospital, has closed his practice to move to Paris, Tex.

Dr. Aycock sent a memo to local medical personnel last week saying that he would no longer be available for consultation, selective surgery or emergency room.

Tim Lancaster, CEO for Cogdell Hospital, said the (see AYCOCK, page 12A)

Leaders 'hanging in there' as rodeo enters final show

Lubbockites Kenneth McKee and Karen Smith had a lot of challengers but no takers during Friday's second night of the annual Scurry County Rodeo here.

McKee's top score of 71 in the bull riding and Smith's 3.6-second clocking in the breakaway roping stood tall as the stock again stumped the performers. Of 11 bull riders and six breakaway ropers entered Friday, not a one managed a successful run.

New leaders were established in other events Friday, however, and the marks set by McKee and Smith were still subject to be beaten as the 56th version of the rodeo moved into its final performance Saturday evening.

Ken Berry of Carlsbad, N.M., took over the lead in the bareback event with a 72 Friday. He pushed former leader Cole Tindol of Allison into second place. Tindol scored a 70. Jim Martin of Canadian is a close 69 for third.

Another New Mexico cowboy, Sylvester Mayfield of Clovis, set a new pace in the tie-down calf roping event with a 9.025-second time. Juan Flores of Iraan moved into second place with a 10.046.

Also setting a new pace was Tammy Mulanax of Midland, who posted a quick 17.365 in the barrel race. Her effort moved (see FINAL, page 12A)

Absentee voting begins Monday

Absentee balloting for the Aug. 10 elections to allow voters within a county education district to provide a personal property tax and certain exemptions from ad valorem tax will begin Monday in the county courthouse and school administration building.

Absentee voting continues through Aug. 6.

Voters should be aware there are two separate elections.

Ballots at the county courthouse will ask citizens to vote for or against two constitutional amendments. Proposition No. 1 is an amendment to allow the voters of a county education district to adopt certain exemptions from the district's ad valorem taxation for residence homesteads and to provide for the taxation of certain tangible personal property. Proposition No. 2 is an amendment providing for the issuance of general obligation bonds to provide educational loans to students.

The election taking place at the school is directly related to Proposition 1 on the county ballot.

Simply put, a "yes" vote for Proposition 1 on the county ballot gives the state the constitutional right to adopt certain exemptions from the district's ad valorem tax, and to provide for a personal (see VOTE, page 12A)

The SDN Column By Roy McQueen

The feller'on Deep Creek says, "A day of worry is more exhausting than a week of work."

Last Sunday, a front page story in the SDN reported that Snyder theatrical products are making an impact on the Panhandle this summer.

The story told about seven Snyder folks who are in the cast of the musical drama, "Texas." Two of the youngsters, Amber Adams and Coy Berryman, have the starring roles.

Scurry County's Billy Ray Browning was in the office first thing Monday and expressed his "indignation" about over looking the eighth member of the cast from Snyder.

Billy Ray said he doesn't know what that word means, but he thought it was a serious enough matter to drive all the way in from Polar Road to file an "official complaint."

The other star from Scurry County, Browning says, is his talking horse Bob. Those who have enjoyed barbecue at Billy Ray's place have certainly been introduced to Bob.

Bob is a white horse being used this summer to pull the surrey with the fringe on top. Just to confirm that Browning wasn't pulling our leg, we called Canyon and visited with Billy Ray's talking horse. Incidentally, Bob knew the meaning of indignation.

Billy Ray had a second "heavy" matter to discuss Monday. He brought in a cabbage plant grown at his home. It weighed 7 lbs. and 11 ounces and was 32 inches around.

Billy Ray was trying to figure out how to save the giant plant to enter in the Scurry County Fair.

Another Browning, Betty, who is manager of McD's, asked for an important reminder this week. She is one of those who rises early and drives to work in the dark.

She asked that we again remind early-morning walkers and joggers to wear white clothing so they can be more easily seen by motorists.

Scene set for AJRA rodeo finals

The annual AJRA National Finals Rodeo is just over two weeks away and already sponsors have been secured, motel rooms are booked and tickets are being sold.

When Scurry County Coliseum doors open on Tuesday, Aug. 6, it will mark the 16th consecutive year Snyder has hosted the junior world championships.

A full week of rodeo activities are planned in the coliseum. On Sunday, Aug. 4, youngsters age eight and under will compete in the Ogden Memorial World Champion Barrel Race. The next day, AJRA team roping finals and the first slack performance will be held.

Admittance to the champion barrel race, team roping finals, and all slack performances is free.

The rodeo officially gets underway from the fan's viewpoint on Tuesday — the first of five nightly shows that culminate in the televised finals on Aug. 10.

Top rodeo professionals and celebrities return for this year's AJRA, including acclaimed rodeo announcer Bob Tallman. Rodeo clowns and bullfighters Rick Chatman, Leon Coffee and Snuffy Chancellor also return, as does co-announcer Curt Robinson.

Special week-long passes are available this year. The price is $15 for adults and $8 for children. These general admission passes are available at Snyder Chamber of Commerce and McDonald's. Box seats, at $6 each, are available only at the chamber.

Senior citizens will be admitted for half price on Senior Night, Wednesday, Aug. 7. Rodeo fans who attend the Tuesday, Aug. 6, performance, can get in for half price if they are wearing a 1991 AJRA cap. Caps are available at the chamber office.

Television sponsors this year are Wrangler and the City of Snyder/Board of County Development. The Saturday show will again be produced by Zolie Vajda.

Event sponsors are Coca-Cola, Stetson, Wall's Industries, Karman Inc.-Roper and Woods Boots.

All-around saddles have been donated by West Texas State Bank, Snyder National Bank, James Aaron, the Board of County Development, Tommy Maricle Water Well Service and Line & Line.

The saddles were made by Paul Ammerman of Yoakum.

Bucking chute sponsors are Kmart, Prowl Chemical, KSNY Radio, McCormick Marketing, Wilson Motors and Woods Boots. Roping chute sponsors are Mobil, Wal-Mart, Purple Sage Motel, McDonald's, The Shack, Willow Park Inn, Graves Insurance, Jack's Used Cars, Spanish Inn, Golden Corral, Jaramillo's and Mail Center Plus.

Mini-sponsors are Ezell-Key, Lawrence IGA, Gill's Fried Chicken and Furr's. Barrels are sponsored by McDonald's, legging by Lang Tire, the scoreboard by Everybody's Thriftway and tickets by Bar-H-Bar Western Wear.

Farm workers file suit against firms

HOUSTON (AP) — Costa Rican farm workers have sued three oil companies, accusing them of manufacturing a dangerous pesticide used on Latin American banana plantations.

The suit, filed in Houston Friday, accuses Shell Oil Co., Dow Chemical Co. and Occidental Petroleum Corp., of making and distributing the chemical DBCP, or dibromo chloropropane, which was banned in the United States in 1979.

"This chemical was known to cause cancer and sterility," said Ervin Gonzalez, a Miami attorney representing the workers.

"Many times these chemicals were given to the workers with no warnings printed on the containers. When there were warnings, they were always written in English."

The Costa Rican farm workers say they were exposed to the chemical as late as 1984. Most of the workers are men between the ages of 30 and 55 who worked on banana plantations along the coastal region of eastern Costa Rica.

"Some of these people are dying of cancer," Gonzalez said. "Many of them have not been able to afford medical care. They will sit in bed and deteriorate until they eventually die."

The three chemical companies say they stopped producing DBCP soon after the Environmental Protection Agency issued a ban against the chemical in 1977.

Its use on domestic pineapple crops didn't stop until 1985. "Shell ceased production of DBCP in 1977, and all of Shell's remaining inventory was sold in the U.S. in 1978 for EPA-approved uses," said company spokesman Norman Altstetter.

"In spite of allegations, Shell never shipped DBCP to Costa Rica and did not export any DBCP to any other country after the initial EPA action in 1977."

Representatives for Dow said the company suspended foreign shipments of DBCP in 1979. An Occidental spokesman said that company never shipped DBCP to Costa Rica.

Shell Oil is based in Houston. Dow Chemical, which is based in Midland, Mich., has the nation's largest chemical plant in Freeport. Occidental Petroleum is based in Los Angeles, but its chemical division is based in Dallas.

Courts in California and Florida refused to accept earlier lawsuits filed by Latin American workers against Dow Chemical and Shell Oil. Last year the Texas Supreme Court decided 5-4 to allow foreign workers to file suit against companies with a sizable presence in Texas.

The ruling was made after 82 Costa Ricans sued Dow and Shell in state district court in Harris

County in 1984. The defendants won a dismissal of the suit in the state trial court, but that dismissal was overturned in 1988 by the 1st Court of Appeals. The state Supreme Court then upheld the ruling by the appellate court.

The lawsuit filed Friday in Houston represents claims made by 101 more farm workers, not the 82 who first filed suit in 1984. That case is still proceeding in the state courts.

SUSAN NEVES

Neves' new position announced

Officials of Saint Mary of the Plains Hospital in Lubbock have announced that Susan Neves, CPA, will serve as the hospital's assistant regional controller.

The appointment is effective Monday.

As assistant regional controller, she will work with regional controller Leslie Robinson, CPA, in providing financial management services to St. Mary's regional hospital affiliates. In addition to Snyder, those affiliates include hospitals in Crosbyton, Seminole, Plainview, Denver City and Amherst.

Mrs. Neves will continue to live in Snyder, where she has resided for the past 16 years. Prior to joining St. Mary, she served as a senior accountant for Mason, Warner & Company.

Mrs. Neves received a bachelor of science degree in education from Texas Tech University in 1980 and taught mathematics, fifth grade and pre-algebra in the Snyder and Colorado City public school systems.

She received a master of business administration degree from Texas Tech in 1989 and earned the title of Certified Public Accountant in 1990.

Mrs. Neves serves as treasurer of the executive committee of Snyder Chamber of Commerce, bulletin editor of Snyder Rotary Club and a member of both the American and Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants.

"We are delighted that Susan has joined our staff," said Tom Hochwalt, senior vice president at St. Mary. "Her educational background and previous hospital audit experience will be a real asset to Cogdell and our other rural hospitals. We are especially pleased that this position will enable Susan to continue living in Snyder where she is such an active member of the community."

Mrs. Neves and her husband, Nicky, have three children: Melissa, age 18; Matt, age 15; and Ryan, age 12.

Band to play

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Harry Connick Jr. and his band will play a command performance when Windsor Castle throws a 70th birthday bash for Britain's Prince Phillip.

The invitation to the July 26 celebration was extended after the Prince's son Prince Edward saw Connick perform recently at the Royal Albert Hall in London.

Youth drowns swimming across pit

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — An 18-year-old high school football player drowned while trying to swim across a flooded sand pit with friends, authorities said.

Jermaine Wells began going under in the middle of a sand pit as friends tried to rescue him, police said.

James Harris, 18, also tried to swim across the lake, but survived and was treated at Baptist Hospital Friday evening.

Wells, Harris and about three or four other youths attended summer school at Central High School in Beaumont Friday and decided to cool off at the swimming hole, police detective Don Bailey said.

Police received a call about the drowning shortly after noon. Construction crews building Interstate 10 had dug the pit, which might have been as deep as 60 or 70 feet, Bailey said.

Most of the youths stayed near the embankment, but Harris and Wells ran to the other side of the hole and decided to swim across, Bailey said.

"It was a long distance across, and they misjudged it, apparently," Bailey said. "I'm sure they were overexerting."

One of their friends saw the pair struggling and floated on a raft to the middle of the lake, Bailey said.

Both Wells and Harris grabbed the leg of the rescuer, but Wells couldn't hold on, Bailey said.

Harris said when he got about 25 feet into the water, he turned and saw Wells behind him.

"He was swimming fast and I kept telling him to slow down," Harris said after being released from the hospital.

"When we got close to the middle, he started to go under, but he came back up. He was choking me and scratching me and he said, 'Man don't let me drown.' I told him I wouldn't, but he had to calm down," Harris said with tears in his eyes.

"I held him as long as I could, but I didn't have enough wind."

When Harris swam back to the bank, his friends ran for help, he said.

Slovenia...

Major obstacle remains on road to independence status

LJUBLJANA, Yugoslavia (AP) — The decision by Yugoslavia's presidency to pull the federal army out of Slovenia is a milestone on the republic's path to full independence. But some major roadblocks remain.

Slovenian leaders on Friday hailed the presidential decree ordering the army out within three months. Janez Drnovsek, Slovenia's representative on the eight-member body, called it "de facto recognition of sovereignty."

But the republic's president, Milan Kucan, was more cautious. He noted Slovenia has to gain domestic — and then international — recognition before it can become the first new country in Europe since the end of World War II.

He suggested the threat of renewed fighting between the army and Slovenian territorial forces had passed, saying he was convinced "no force... will be used" by either side.

Yet he stressed: "This is just the beginning of negotiations."

Slovenia and neighboring Croatia declared independence June 25. Fighting between Slovenian and federal forces claimed more than 60 lives before a European Community-brokered truce took hold July 8.

Yet the political skirmishing over independence is likely to go on for some time.

The Yugoslav government and the largest republic, Serbia, are unlikely to give formal blessing to Slovenia's departure without some kind of payment from the northern republic.

The quarrel over money was in part responsible for the week of fighting that began June 27. After Slovenia took control of its borders — Yugoslavia's only frontiers with Italy and Austria — it refused to pay customs revenues to the federal government.

Slovenia now pays its duties into a federal pot under the terms of the EC-negotiated agreement.

But that accord runs out in less than three months. The conflict over customs revenues could go on indefinitely.

The division of debts and assets is potentially even more difficult. When Slovenia first approached federal authorities months ago, it was told there was no way

Pinatubo gas could reduce ozone over N. America, Europe

NEW YORK (AP) — Levels of protective ozone — which shield people from the sun's harmful rays — may decline 12 percent over the northern United States and Europe this winter because of Mount Pinatubo's eruption, a study suggests.

The reductions, which will be severe the farther north one travels from the equator, could raise skin cancer risks, scientists say.

Guy Brasseur, director of the atmospheric chemistry division at the National Center for Atmospheric Research in Boulder, Colo., said the ozone could also continue to decline next summer, at about half the level of the winter rate.

Ozone is a pollutant at ground level, but at high altitudes it shields Earth from solar ultraviolet light that can cause sunburns and skin cancer.

The atmospheric research center's projections were based on studies of sulfur dioxide gas contained in the volcano's plume. Sulfur dioxide combines with water vapor in the air to form tiny droplets called aerosols.

The surface of these droplets provides an area for further chemical reactions that promote ozone destruction, Brasseur said Friday.

Other researchers said the projections for next summer are more worrisome than those for this winter because of the increased sunlight in summer in the Northern Hemisphere.

Brasseur said the ozone depletions would last perhaps two or three years, diminishing over time.

His projections are preliminary estimates and should be considered upper limits for ozone destruction, Brasseur said.

Ozone researcher Richard Stolarski of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md., said the projections were plausible.

"My suspicion is that there's going to be less ozone depletion than that, because I don't think we saw as much from El Chichon (a Mexican volcano that erupted in 1982) as a similar calculation would have shown," he said.

Susan Solomon of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, who studied El Chichon's effect on ozone, said she expected ozone depletions from Mount Pinatubo from January through about May.

Other researchers said even short-term loss of summertime ozone may raise the risk of melanoma, or skin cancer. Sunburns are considered a major risk factor for melanoma, especially in young people, and the ozone loss could raise the number and severity of sunburns, researchers said.

Hermleigh will conduct two hearings

Scurry County is currently making plans to apply to the Texas Department of Commerce for Texas Community Development Program funds. Two public hearings to solicit input from the community in the preparation of the development program will be conducted.

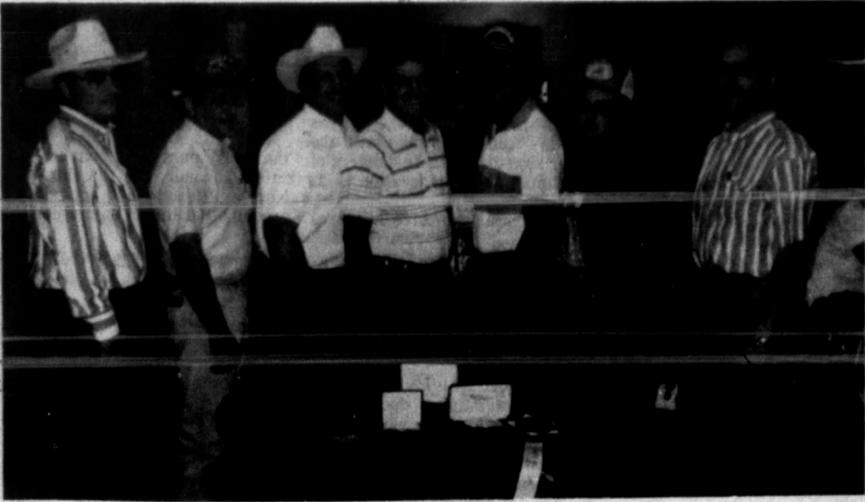

The first hearing will be held at 7 p.m. on Thursday, July 25, in the Hermleigh Community Center to discuss housing and community development needs, use of past TCDP awards, amount of funds available and eligible activities. County officials are asking individual citizens and citizen's groups to make their views known at the hearing, and welcome the full participation of citizens in the development of the TCDP application.

General information on the TCDP program will be available. Citizen comments may be delivered in advance to the county courthouse. Groups representative of persons of low and moderate income may request technical assistance in developing TCDP proposals by contacting Commissioner Jerry Gannaway at the county courthouse.

The second public hearing will be held at Hermleigh High School at 7 p.m. Aug. 8 to allow citizens an opportunity to comment on the proposed project, the amount of funds requested and estimated amount proposed for activities that will benefit low to moderate income persons.

More detailed information on proposed activities, amount of funds and proposed location of activities will be available for inspection at the county courthouse after the second hearing.

Handicapped individuals who may have difficulty in attending these meetings may contact the county courthouse to arrange for assistance.

Comedy festival comes of age

MONTREAL (AP) — When Montreal's Juste Pour Rire (Just For Laughs) comedy festival began nine years ago, it may have drawn a snicker or two for the meager lineup — just 16 French-speaking comics.

But look out, world. More than 350 acts from 15 countries are hitting the stage this year and television is beaming them globally. The festival, a 10-day event that ends Sunday, has come of age.

It features a quirky combination of comics known to millions worldwide and others known only in their native lands.

"Our goal is to show the state of the world's comedy at that time — nice or nasty, good or bad," says Andy Nulman, the festival's vice president. "We want to make sure we have a very diverse lineup, not leaning too much toward any one country or any one style."

American stars Mary Tyler Moore and Milton Berle are headliners. Ms. Moore, of television and film fame, hosts Saturday's and Sunday's galas. Berle, a television comedy pioneer, will become the first inductee into the Juste Pour Rire Comedy Hall of Fame, which will open in July 1993.

Saturday's event will be broadcast live on Showtime. MTV will also broadcast portions.

Shows are held wherever performers and audiences can meet: on street theaters along the city's trendy Rue St. Denis, in cafes and bars, and in evening theater galas where the audiences are as witty as the entertainers.

"It's like nothing else," says Mike MacDonald, one of Canada's top English-speaking comedians.

Nuke tanks won't be safe for years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department warns that aging atomic waste tanks at a nuclear reservation in Washington state could leak high-level radiation before safety problems are resolved after the turn of the century. The DOE report to Congress Friday said it will take until the year 2000 to eliminate dangers of flammable gas generation in 23 tanks and 2004 to fully address the potential explosive mixtures of ferrocyanide in 24 tanks at the site in Richland, Wash. In the meantime, the department is pursuing "near-term" safety measures at the Hanford Nuclear Reservation including, among other things, "emergency preparedness planning." "Resolution of all safety issues will probably take more than 10 years" the report said. Department officials briefed congressional staffers Friday about the status of Hanford's 177 underground storage tanks, which house about half of the nation's high-level nuclear waste. Congress requested the DOE assessment after the General Accounting Office determined last fall that too little is known about the waste to rule out the possibility of an explosion that could spread dangerous doses of contamination.

The new report maintains there is a "low probability" of an explosion because there are no known ignition sources in the tanks and temperatures are well below those required to initiate chemical reaction.

However, the DOE outlined a series of concerns about the "degraded conditions" of the 149 single-shelled tanks and 28 newer double-shelled tanks in the south-central Washington desert bordering the Columbia River.

"Sixty-six of the single-shelled tanks are either suspected or known to have leaked liquid radioactive waste to the ground and the remaining tanks can be expected to start leaking at any time in the future," DOE said.

Computerized cargo handler shuts down

HOUSTON (AP) — Omniport, a 2-year-old, multimillion-dollar computerized cargo handler at the Port of Houston, is shutting down this weekend, port officials said Friday.

Port officials met with Omniport's owners Friday morning, said port spokesman Tony Aleman.

"They informed us that they were loading a vessel and that will be their last vessel," Aleman said.

Omniport, a highly touted, $100 million automated docking terminal, is loading wheat flour aboard an African-bound ship that was to set sail during the weekend.

Aleman said port officials were dismayed by the shutdown, but did not fear for the economic prosperity of Jacintoport, a port-supported docking development where Omniport is located.

"The port is protected," Aleman said. "Omniport is only one part of the Jacintoport. The total area of Jacintoport is 125 acres — 40 acres of that is Omniport. All the improvements that have been done to the entire area — those will still be there."

The port spent nearly $30 million to buy and develop the Jacintoport property.

Houston Transmodal Owning Co., a consortium set up by Bechtel, CMT Systems, Vectura Group and Lease Finance Corp., pumped $80 million into the project for construction and another $8 million earlier this year. The consortium was supposed to pay the port quarterly lease payments of $617,000.

Aleman said Friday that Omniport already had deferred three quarterly payments and was expected to seek a deference for the next payment, due July 31. He said the port expected payment for the full year in October.

Brooks Taylor takes training as auctioneer

Col. Brooks Taylor of Roby has just returned from Kansas City, Mo., where he successfully completed the course in auctioneering and auction sales management at Missouri Auction School.

He received his diploma and the honorary title of colonel along with men and women auctioneers throughout the United States and Canada.

The concentrated two week course is conducted by Missouri Auction School at the world's largest auction training center located in the Kansas City Stockyards. His training included lectures and workshops featuring prominent auctioneers from throughout America.

He participated in selling numerous public auctions in Kansas City and nearby communities in Missouri and Kansas.

Subjects included antique auctions, livestock, furniture, business liquidations, real estate, rare coins, auto, machinery, general merchandise, all types of estate auctions, and the rapid fire chant of the tobacco auctioneer.

Taylor is the son of Nancy Madry of Lubbock and Dr. Robert Taylor of Snyder. He resides with his grandparents, Howard and Jean Whitworth of Roby. He will be a senior at Sweetwater High School.

Deadlock endures

WACO, Texas (AP) — The board of regents at Baylor University, hoping to stave off a possible fundamentalist takeover, ignored a reconciliation proposal offered by the Baptist General Convention of Texas.

"No motion or vote was taken on any proposal," Mike Bishop, Baylor University's vice president for communications, said of Friday's regents meeting on campus.

Relations between the state's Southern Baptist leadership and the 146-year-old Baptist college have been strained since Baylor trustees voted 10 months ago to create a new semiautonomous governing board

Financial Focus

Risk is an unsettling aspect of investing, but trying to avoid it completely can be just as dangerous, forcing investors to accept lower returns on their money.

There is no way for investors to totally avoid risk, but a carefully planned program of diversification, or asset allocation, can reduce the chances of a crippling financial loss.

One method of asset allocation is to balance your portfolio among a variety of dissimilar investments. For example, divide assets between cash and common stocks. Although the stocks may decline in value, the compounding effect of the cash earning interest can give stability to the portfolio. Separating investments among stocks, bonds, real estate, international securities, precious metals and more can add additional diversification and further reduce risk.

After achieving adequate diversification, the risk that remains can be divided into four categories:

Opportunity risk is always present. Simply by virtue of putting assets into one investment, you sacrifice the opportunity to participate in another investment. Holding only cash means you sacrifice the opportunity to own stocks or bonds, which traditionally have proved more rewarding.

Emotional risk is another consideration. When investing, your return should depend on whether you want to eat well or sleep well. Investing in highly speculative products that fluctuate wildly could mean a high degree of emotional risk. You can reduce emotional risk by sticking with quality, conservative investments.

Security risk is related to the quality of the securities in which you invest. Bonds become more risky as the credit worthiness of the issuer decreases. Stocks, on the other hand, can be volatile regardless of quality. Stocks paying consistent dividends, however, generally offer less security risk because the income protects the total return even though the market value may decline.

Finally, there is market risk. The market risk of owning bonds is generally more predictable than that of owning stocks. Bond risk is a function of quality, maturity and interest rates, but stocks are always at the risk of an unfriendly stock market. The price/earnings ratio and dividend yield of The Standard & Poor's and Dow Jones Industrials is a valid indication of an over priced market ripe for decline or one that is undervalued and ready for advance.

Alert investors recognize risk and try to allocate funds to profit from the investment climate while protecting assets from a decline.

Host families sought in Texas for students from foreign countries

Host families are needed for Matthias from Germany and Elena from Spain who are coming to spend the next school year in the state of Texas. The students are enrolled in the Academic Year in America program, a non-profit high school/homestay experienced sponsored by the AISF Scholarship Foundation.

The program's local representative, Pamela Williams-Rowe, is interviewing families in this area who would be interested in hosting Matthias or Elena.

Seventeen-year-old Matthias enjoys basketball, soccer and computers. He comes from a small village outside Hamburg where his dad is a physician.

Elena is a 16-year-old from Barcelona. She is an excellent student, plays the piano and enjoys cycling and going to the movies with friends.

Matthais and Elena will attend an area public high school, share everyday life with their host families and participate in sports, school clubs and community activities. Students arrive in mid-August to begin school with their American classmates.

Williams-Rowe has full applications of these two students as well as those of several other boys and girls who would like to live in this part of Texas next year.

Students have been carefully screened, speak English, and have their own spending money. All a family needs to provide is a bed, a place to study, two meals a day and an open heart ready to receive a "son" or "daughter" from another country.

Interested families should call Williams-Rowe at 512-699-9024 or Regional Director Susan Whitaker at the AISF national office in Connecticut at 1-800-322-4678.

Panel favors approval of treatment for AIDS

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — An advisory committee recommends that the Food and Drug Administration approve didanosine, or ddI, for treating sufferers of AIDS at advanced stages of infection.

It would join the drug AZT as therapy against the always-fatal disease. AZT now is the only approved treatment for infection with the AIDS virus.

After two days of hearing witnesses, the committee on Friday voted 5-2 to recommend use of the drug both for adults and children. Asked by an FDA representative whether approval should be limited to those who cannot tolerate AZT, six voted yes for adults and five voted yes for children.

Recommendations by the FDA's advisory committees of non-government experts are not binding on the agency, but they customarily carry great weight.

The committee has 10 members — nine physicians and one doctorate — under chairman

Masur Henry, chief of the critical care medicine department of the National Institutes of Health.

The Bristol-Myers Squibb Co., maker of ddI, submitted its application for approval only three months ago, prompting FDA Commissioner Dr. David A. Kessler to call the hearing a milestone. Most drugs take much longer to win a decision.

Representatives of the pharmaceutical firm told the panel that clinical tests and the experience of limited numbers of AIDS sufferers who received the drug show it to be safe and effective.

Despite the lopsided vote, committee members were clearly uncomfortable with their decision to speed up the normally lengthy evaluation process for a new drug.

Paul Meier, a professor of statistics at the University of Chicago who abstained from the voting, said, "It seems to me the committee wanted conditional approval... I don't think we have what the committee really wants."

Dr. Deborah Cotton, an assistant professor of medicine at Harvard Medical School said the vote was "in a sense, a rush to judgment."

The FDA has been under heavy pressure in recent years from patient advocacy groups to speed up its often cumbersome process of approving drugs.

"Our goal is to measure time in months for AIDS drugs," Kessler said at the start of the two-day ddI hearing.

As of May 31, the Centers for Disease Control said 179,136 Americans had been diagnosed with AIDS, or Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome.

AIDS attacks the body's immune system, leaving victims susceptible to a wide variety of infections and cancers. So far it has always proved fatal.

The drug AZT, for zidovudine, attacks the virus directly, slowing progress of the disease. It has been approved for sufferers of AIDS or those infected with the human immunodeficiency virus that causes it.

Heat wave blistering nation

By The Associated Press

Air conditioners strained and people sweated Friday as a heat wave sizzled from the Plains to the East Coast with steamy humidity and temperatures near 100.

"It's pretty rotten out there," said Walt Drag of the National Weather Service in Boston. "Everyone's going to be uncomfortable and it's not going to go away."

Some states issued health alerts as the heat and humidity combined with high ozone levels.

A cold front and thunderstorms brought a little relief to the Dakotas and parts of Nebraska — Yankton, S.D., had a high Thursday of 100 and Sioux Falls, S.D., topped out at 99 but their temperatures fell by 20 degrees in just two hours late Thursday.

"When it's hot like this, people don't come outside, even to get ice cream," said Jeffrey Steinberg, standing beneath an umbrella in Boston's financial district.

In Portland, Maine, workers for Deering Ice Cream Corp. had no problem finding takers for free samples of two of their new flavors — vanilla amaretto and chocolate binge. The company dished out 12 gallons in 45 minutes during a noon outdoor concert.

Business was less than brisk at the "Best of Scotland" cashmere sweater shop on Boston's fashionable Newbury Street.

"Who wants to think about buying a two-ply cashmere sweater when it's 100 degrees outside?" asked shop owner Corey Wielgus. A few people did come in to enjoy the air conditioning, he said.

Niel Barkowski, a surveyor, was working on a bridge in Chicago. But he had a water bottle handy.

"As long as you've got some cold water handy, you can get by," he said.

"We're very crowded and very hot here," said Tom O'Donnell, a receptionist at Scarborough Beach State Park in southern Maine. He estimated there were 1,000 people at the beach by 1 p.m. and said cars were still coming in.

Then there was a New York Department of Transportation asphalt crew assigned to a job in Brooklyn.

"If you think it's hot, try working with 270-degree asphalt. You can fry an egg on it," said DOT Commissioner Lucius Riccio.

Radio state KFOR in Lincoln, Neb., tried something different — announcer Scott Young tried to bake a meat loaf on a sidewalk Thursday. The temperature hit 100 and the pavement measured 124 degrees.

"Welcome to the great meat-loaf meltdown," Young told his audience. "We're baking and shaking here; this baby is starting to heat up real well."

The meat loaf did not cook.

Air conditioning companies appreciate the heat, but don't like working in it. "You need the hot weather for business and you dread it because you're worn out by evening," said Joe Cyhanick, president of CCA Heating and Air Conditioning Inc. of Martinsburg, W.Va.

The air-conditioned New England Shelter for Homeless Veterans in Boston strained to cope with people coming in from the heat.

PLO's guerrilla war is losing its allure

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — A couple of years ago, Palestinian youngsters like Fadi Ojeir and his school chums probably would have had one ambition — to join the guerrillas fighting Israel.

These days, the teenagers in the sprawling Ein el-Hilweh refugee camp on Sidon's outskirts see little point in taking up the struggle of their fathers and older brothers.

"I don't believe in armed resistance. What has it achieved? Nothing. That's why I don't want to become a guerrilla," said Fadi, 15, as he sat in his shanty home with his friends.

"We must find other ways. For myself, I want an education so I can build a life for myself."

Khalil Khartabi, a 21-year-old civil engineering student at the American University of Beirut, said: "We're not guerrillas and we don't wish to be. The PLO leadership is going the wrong way and we suffer because of it."

Their attitude reflects the feelings of many Palestinians in Lebanon's squalid refugee camps, where not long ago angry young men in droves eagerly took up Kalashnikov rifles.

Now there's widespread dismay over the decline of the Palestine Liberation Organization and its virtual demise as a paramilitary force.

"The Babe"...

Cowboy backup is feeling pressure

AUSTIN (AP) — Babe Laufenberg is in his ninth NFL camp, a testimony to his tenacity.

"I've always been the odd man out going into camp and been the odd man in when it was over," Laufenberg said.

This year, however, "The Babe" could be the odd man out with the Dallas Cowboys. Run-ing ahead of him at quarterback are Troy Aikman, Cliff Stoudt and Bill Musgrave, the fourth-round pick from Oregon.

"It's a good thing I can't read or all the newspaper stories about me being gone might scare me," Laufenberg said in jest. "They're always try to get rid of me."

Known as "King of the NFL Cuts" because of all the times he has been put on the waiver wire, Laufenberg is feeling pressure for the first time.

"I got married, you know," Laufenberg said. "I've got to have a job."

Laufenberg's stock with the Cowboys plunged in a 26-7 loss to Atlanta in their final game last season. With Aikman sidelined with a separated shoulder, Laufenberg was intercepted three times in a loss that knocked the Cowboys out of a playoff berth.

"That game didn't help me, but I believe whoever was the quarterback that day we would have had a tough time," Laufenberg said. "We had offensive linemen injured and sick and we didn't exactly have the world's greatest game plan."

Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson has promised Laufenberg a fair shake in training camp.

"Jimmy wanted me back," Laufenberg said. "I wanted to be sure I wasn't just going to come to camp and be a spare. I asked him to spare me from that if that was the way it was going to be."

MARSHALL EARLY

Early first in bowhunter event

Marshall Early of Snyder Bowhunters Club made a clean sweep of the sub-division of the IBS Southern Crown last Sunday.

He won first place at the first leg in Jacksonville on June 1. He also won first place at Ardmore, Okla., on June 23 and first place at Fort Worth on June 30.

Early's overall score was best in his division.

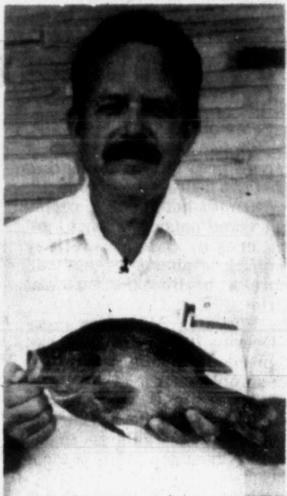

Jerry Early placed 13th in the men's bowhunter open class. Both qualified to shoot in the IBO World Championship tournament to be held Aug. 9-11 at Boonville, Ind.

Midway point...

Trio pace British Open

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — An odd threesome of outsiders — an obscure American, a tired Brit with "yuppie flu" and an Australian who can't jog straight — lead the British Wide, Wide Open.

The biggest weekend blast in the championship's 120-year history begins today at wind-blown Royal Birkdale with 113 players making the cut from the 156 in the original field.

One shaky stroke ahead of the rest at 2-under-par 138 after two rounds are Gary Hallberg, Andy Oldcorn and Mike Harwood, hardly names to scare off the giants of the game breathing down their necks.

Three-time winner Seve Ballesteros is right there in a group at 139. Five-time champion Tom Watson is poised to go for them at 141. Masters champ Ian Woosnam and always dangerous Greg Norman are in striking distance at 142, as are two-time winners Lee Trevino and Nick Faldo at 143 and three-time winner Jack Nicklaus at 145.

Heck, with the wild winds and on-again, off-again showers, everybody who made the cut by virtue of being within 10 strokes of the leaders is in the hunt for the $150,000 title.

British bookies rate Ballesteros the favorite at 11-2, followed by Faldo at 8-1 and Woosnam at 9-1.

But they probably would have given 1,000,000-1 odds that Hallberg, Oldcorn and Harwood would be leading at this point, if anyone had thought of them.

Hallberg has been shuffling around the PGA Tour for 11 years, winning only twice — the San Diego Open in 1983 and the Greater Milwaukee Open in 1987. "I have been in the hollows, and my peaks have been brief," he said humbly.

He gained his new prominence by sinking a 30-foot putt on 18 to polish off a round of 70.

Fishing is fair at Lake Thomas

Fishing has been fair at Lake J.B. Thomas during the past week, particularly for black bass and channel catfish.

Ken Huffaker of Lubbock reeled in a 6 3/4-pound black bass and one at five pounds and 10 ozs. Kim Hawkins of Lamesa caught a 6 3/4-pound black bass and Jody Whitley, also of Lamesa, took a 25-pound yellow catfish off his trotline.

Black bass were hitting lures best in 3-6 feet of water on worms. Yellow cats were biting boldfish best, and channel catfish was best off banks. Water temperature was 79 degrees.

Lake Ivie continues to get fair to good traffic of pleasure fishermen. Most of the fish being caught are tossed back inasmuch as the stocking is only a little over a year old and it will likely be next spring before there is an abundance of keepers. All types of fish stocked there, are making good to excellent growth.

Tom uncertain about honor

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Former Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry says he doesn't know if he wants to accept owner Jerry Jones' invitation to join the team's Ring of Honor.

Jones says he may induct the franchise-building trio of Landry, Tex Schramm and the late Clint Murchison into the club's Ring of Honor this year.

But Landry says he's in no hurry to join seven other Cowboy legends.

"Tex Schramm and Clint Murchison obviously belong there," Landry said. "To have all three of us being asked, I don't think that will ever happen. Besides, some people would think I'm dying to be in there, and that's not necessarily so."

Landry declined an invitation to be inducted to the Ring of Honor last season, saying he couldn't adjust his schedule so that he could be at Texas Stadium on the day Jones wanted to induct him.

Bob Lilly, Don Meredith, Don Perkins, Chuck Howley, Mel Renfro, Roger Staubach and Lee Roy Jordan are the seven former Cowboys whose names are already posted at the stadium.

"Coach Landry is in the Hall of Fame, Tex Schramm is going, and without Mr. Murchison, there wouldn't be a Dallas Cowboys," Jones told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram Thursday. "All three are greats of the National Football League, and all three would be wonderful additions."

"There is no timetable on anything, of course, because what we're working toward here at training camp is to uphold the tradition those three men built," Jones said from Austin. "We're concentrating on trying to live up to the standard they set."

Landry, who coached the Cowboys for 29 years and has two Super Bowl titles among his 270 victories, was fired after Jones bought the franchise in February 1989.

On Thursday, Landry said he was not bitter about his dismissal.

"Three birdies was a real class way to finish," Hallberg said. "I played a little more aggressively."

Oldcorn's case is more interesting, medically speaking. He has suffered since 1989 from the mysterious chronic fatigue syndrome, sometimes called "yuppie flu."

"I want this to be a signal to other people who get the disease that it is not a bottomless pit. You can get out of it," he said.

He said the disease "totally obliterated" his 1989 season, limited his play last season and caused him to lose his status on the European Tour.

Friday includes a free practice round and an optional nine holes sweepstakes, followed by a buffet dinner.

Saturday's tournament begins with a shotgun start at 8:30 a.m. and at 1:30 p.m. Saturday night activities include a Las Vegas night and buffet dinner.

Sunday's final round includes a shotgun start and 8:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

Athletes may schedule physicals

Prospective athletes in Snyder schools need to have a current physical examination form on file with the athletic director.

All incoming seventh graders planning to participate in junior high sports, all incoming ninth graders who figure to compete in high school athletics, new students planning to compete in SISD sports, any student who answered yes to questions 1,4,5,6 or 7 on their medical history form and any student going out for SISD athletics for the first time in the 1991-92 school year, must have a physical.

The school will pay for exams taken through August 9.

Snyder High School trainer, Steve Krueger, asks that those needing physicals schedule the examinations as early as possible to avoid later problems.

Drs. Nelson Brice, James Bureson, Bid Cooper, Robert Pierce and Paul Thompson will schedule appointments for physicals.

Necessary forms are available at the doctors' offices or from the school.

Athletes are reminded to have all forms completed prior to appointments and that doctors cannot give the exam without a parent's signature.

Completed forms should be turned in to coaches, the athletic director's office or to Krueger, Snyder High School, 3801 Austin Ave., Snyder, Texas.

Play Dixie Tuesday...

Snyder All-Stars earn 6-3 win over Clyde

MERKEL — Snyder scored a half-dozen quick runs, then held on to defeat Clyde here 6-3 Friday night in area Little League competition.

The victory sends Snyder against Abilene Dixie for the District 5 championship at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the Dixie Little League Field. Snyder will be the home team and occupy the third base dugout.

Snyder punched across two runs in the first inning and four in the second Friday.

David Smith got the action going with a one-out single off Clyde hurler Ben Russell. One out later, Patrick Cumbie rapped a single to push Smith across for Snyder's first run. The All-Stars made it a 2-0 ballgame when Ramsey Castillo followed with a double.

In the second, Snyder loaded the bases when Chris Ramirez reached on an error, Tommy Fields walked and Toby Delce got hit into a fielder's choice. Smith then cracked a double, sending Ramirez and Fields bolting home. Delce and Smith scored later in the inning when Pat Cumbie cracked a high fly ball which was dropped by Clyde right fielder Shawn Bennett.

Snyder threatened but did not score again. In the fourth, Smith got his third hit, a single, and Patrick Jordan doubled. And in the sixth inning, Teddy Murray walked and Fields singled.

Clyde was kept off balance by two-hit, 13-strikeout pitching from Cumbie. The lanky pitcher struggled at times, however, allowing six walks.

At one time, Cumbie struck out six of seven batters he faced. Bennett was the lone Clyde player to connect. He stroked a home run in the third inning, and ignited Clyde's rally attempt in the sixth with a single.

Cumbie opened the sixth by striking out Bradley Black. Bennett then singled, but Cumbie fanned Russell for the second out of the inning. The rally was kept alive with back-to-back walks to Chad Cauthen and Tom Johnson.

It appeared as if Snyder might falter when Bennett managed to score on a throwing error, and Chad Cauthen came home on a passed ball, cutting the All-Stars' advantage to 6-3. Cumbie was able to strike out Jason Gray, however, to end the game.

Cumbie got the win. Russell was charged with the loss. He gave up seven hits and walked two.

Snyder carries one loss into Tuesday's game against Abilene Dixie, which has no losses. To win the championship, Snyder would have to defeat Dixie twice. Should Snyder win Tuesday, a second game will be scheduled for 8 p.m. Thursday, again in Abilene.

UT's Campbell is paid to play golf

HOUSTON (AP) — Since being hired by the University of Texas in 1987, football great Earl Campbell has made 10 minority recruitment trips but played in at least 30 golf outings with wealthy and influential alumni, a published report said Friday.

The golf trips cost the school's athletics department $9,131, the Houston Chronicle said. The university hired Campbell to help recruit and retain students, especially minority students and athletes.

Campbell, listed as a 30-hour-a-week employee, does not keep time slips or record how he spends his work hours. He doesn't have an office at the university or keep regular hours on campus but attends university-related events as requested by UT officials.

"If you're a state auditor looking at it, you'd think, 'Gawd dog, that's not the way you want to do business,'" men's Athletic Director Deloss Dodds said. "But it's the way that really helps us do our business."

James Vick, Texas vice president for student affairs, said Campbell's job has changed since he began working at the school.

"His job has evolved into a development (fund-raising) type of position," said Vick, one of Campbell's bosses. "It seems to be the area that Earl enjoys most."

Campbell, a Heisman Trophy winner at Texas and All-Pro running back with the Houston Oilers of the National Football League, will be inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame July 27.

Against Blue Jays...

Ranger jinx continues

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — When the Texas Rangers resumed play after the All-Star break, they led the American League West and were batting .275.

But six times since then, the Rangers have faced Toronto pitching and they've lost five times — batting a collective .199 in those six games. The Blue Jays beat the Rangers 7-2 Friday night.

With three last-at-bat losses at Detroit, the Rangers have dropped eight of nine to slide into fifth place.

The Blue Jays, meanwhile, have overcome the loss of pitchers Dave Stieb, Ken Dayley and Al Leiter to win 21 of their last 26 and maintain a seven-game lead in the American League East.

"We're facing probably the best pitching staff in the big leagues," said Texas first baseman Rafael Palmeiro.

Ruben Sierra added that he believed the Blue Jays "have the best staff in the league along with California."

Todd Stottlemire (10-3) became the latest to stifle Texas hitters, throwing seven shutout innings, giving up five hits and three walks and matching his career high with eight strikeouts. Bob MacDonald and Mike Timlin finished up, Timlin getting his third save.

"I think his (Stottlemire's) mechanics were off even though he pitched well," said manager Cito Gaston.

"I was in trouble every inning," Stottlemire said. "But Pat (catcher Borders) worked me through the game. I've had better outings."

Manuel Lee drove in the first two runs with a double, and the Jays got 14 hits off four Texas pitchers. Starter John Barfield (4-4) gave up five runs and nine hits in four innings and took the loss, Texas' fifth in a row.

Toronto learned Friday that Stieb, who has been disabled since May 22, will be delayed in his recovery by a herniated disc in his back, which is pressing on the sciatic nerve and causing pain. Stieb may not be able to pitch again until late in the season.

At the same time, the Jays got a boost from a new acquisition, outfielder Cory Snyder. Acquired Monday from the White Sox and batting .180, Snyder drove in three runs with a single and triple, his first hits in a Toronto uniform.

"These guys are going to win whether I'm here or not," Snyder said. "If I can add just a little bit, I'm going to try to do that. To get that first hit is taking a little bit of the load off."

Astros enjoy 5-2 victory over Cubs

HOUSTON (AP) — Despite being an All-Star selection, Houston pitcher Pete Harnisch still needed a change of luck.

Harnisch (6-7) had lost three of his last four decisions before defeating the Chicago Cubs 5-2 Friday night in the Astrodome.

Harnisch went eight innings, allowing five hits and two earned runs that kept his ERA at 2.26 and lowered his league-leading opponents' batting average to .197.

"I made a couple of adjustments on my slider, and I think it was the best I've pitched so far," Harnisch said.

He may have felt the need to be perfect since he had lost two 1-0 decisions this season, one on a two-hitter.

"I got caught up in pitching for a shutout," Harnisch said. "I really wanted to finish the game."

Harnisch needed Ken Caminiti's three-run home run in the eighth inning to pick up the win.

The Astros had a 2-0 lead going into the eighth when Chicago rallied on pinch hitter Dwight Smith's triple and a run-scoring single by George Bell.

"That triple in the eighth inning broke his bat," Harnisch said. "I didn't get hurt on my fast ball. The hits they got were on good pitches."

Bob Scanlan (3-5) walked Craig Biggio and Jeff Bagwell to lead off the eighth before Chuck McElroy relieved. One out later, Caminiti hit his ninth home run.

'Rabbit Twisters' gearing up for another summer pageant

ROBERT LEE, Texas (AP) — Director Lucile Bryan has a knack of latching onto new talent for her "Ole Coke County, Home of the Rabbit Twisters" pageant.

Just ask John McDermott. He moved here only 10 months ago, and already has two parts in the musical pageant. For his debut, the former Haskell County judge has been typecast as a politician — playing a county judge and a congressman.

Or you could ask Harrell Johnston. Since becoming postmaster here three years ago, he's been in every show. This year he takes over duties as narrator.

Or you could ask Greg Fleming. The Southside Church of Christ preacher is one of the busiest performers, appearing in five scenes. This is his eighth year in the pageant.

Mrs. Bryan says, "Someone said to me, 'Have you seen John McDermott?' He has such a wonderful voice." It's so exciting to find new talent.

Johnston jokes, "You just don't say 'no' to Lucile."

This year's musical pageant is Friday and Saturday and July 26 and 27 at the Mountain Creek Amphitheater in Robert Lee. Shows start each night with patriotic singing at 8. Tickets are $6 for adults and $3 for children ages 6-12.

"I think it's going to be great," McDermott says of the pageant, adding that he's enjoying it already although he hasn't seen all the scenes.

"I'm enjoying meeting new folks," says the new administrator at the nursing home. "This is a countywide affair. Everyone participates — either behind the scenes or in acting parts."

Fleming agrees that being in the pageant is a great way to meet the rest of the community — "It helped me get to know a lot of people. I moved here during January and was in the show the next summer."

One of Fleming's parts is playing a saloon patron, but the preacher says he doesn't catch any flak for being in the scene, which is actually about the temperance movement coming to Coke County. Why, several years ago, there were as many as five preachers in the saloon scene.

One of the most important roles goes to Johnston, who stars as the narrator or Rabbit Twister. He succeeds the late Don Masters, who played the part of the Old-Timer. Masters died last year in an auto accident.

Mrs. Bryan says, "Gary will be bringing his own style to the part of the narrator and developing his character's personality."

Johnston says, "I'll be telling the story as a fairly modern day history and be more a part of the audience this year."

The show depicts Coke County's history — or rather, what could have happened — through about 1910 with songs and drama, and Johnston will be tying those scenes together.

Also, at the beginning of the show he'll be telling just exactly what a rabbit twister does.

"After past shows, people have said, 'I came to the pageant and I still don't know what a rabbit twister is,'" he says.

Raisa visits violinist

LONDON (AP) — Raisa Gorbachev spent an hour at the home of violinist Sir Yehudi Menuhin, who has staged several performances for Soviet charities and a cultural foundation established by the Soviet president's wife.

Menuhin, 75, interrupted a conducting tour in Vienna to fly home for Thursday's meeting, which was requested by Mrs. Gorbachev while her husband was attending the economic summit.

The musician, born in New York of Russian-Jewish parents, said he had never met Mrs. Gorbachev before.

Menuhin said they had a "pleasant chat" via an interpreter and he found her "very humane, very motherly and very devoted."

"She expressed great confidence in the ultimate ability of the Russians to solve their problems," he said. "My toast was that everything Gorbachev carries in his heart may be realized as I am convinced he is a good man."

He said that while visiting London's Great Ormond Street Hospital, built in the days of Charles Dickens, Mrs. Gorbachev told him she found that hardly any of the staff or the children had read Dickens' novels. "In Russia we continually read Shakespeare, Byron, Keats and we know all those authors," Menuhin quoted her as saying.

Menuhin was last in the Soviet Union in March when he performed a new work called "Prayer," composed for him by Rodion Shchedrin for his 75th birthday.

Food deliveries cutting death toll rate

GODE CAMP, Ethiopia (AP) — The hot winds of July lash this desert refugee camp with a steady fury, shrouding it in a curtain of sand and dust.

For the estimated 25,000 Somalis living in the camp's squalid huts of brush and mud, the wind aggravates a misery of homelessness and hunger.

Still, there is new hope here. "We think things are going very well now," Mark Thomas, spokesman for the United Nations Children's Fund in Ethiopia, said Thursday. "We've had a substantial drop in deaths in recent days."

Gode Camp is in the Ogaden, a vast, almost trackless desert in southeastern Ethiopia that is home to nomads and small farmers of both Somali and Ethiopian descent.

For nearly two months it was cut off from all outside help by a wave of banditry and other lawlessness that preceded and followed the civil war in Ethiopia.

On May 28 — a week after former President Mengistu Haile Mariam fled the country — rebels marched into the capital of Addis Ababa, ending three decades of conflict.

Unrest in the countryside, however, persisted for several more weeks.

On July 6, a convoy of U.N. trucks finally arrived in Gode with enough grain to feed the people of the camp for a month. More food is on the way.

The wheat is provided by the World Food Program, a U.N. Agency based in Rome. UNICEF and the private Irish relief agency Concern jointly operate separate feeding programs for severely malnourished children.

Before the relief agencies resumed their work, up to 20 people a day were dying in Gode

Camp, mostly children. A similar toll of lives was being taken at Kalafo, a sister camp about 60 miles south.

Thomas said the death toll is down to about four a day in each camp, with some of those succumbing to diseases not directly related to hunger.

"We've only lost three or four children in the special feeding programs" since they were resumed two weeks ago, he said. "We'll be able to save most of the most severely malnourished children. We feel good about that."

Most of the refugees in Gode Camp are people twice displaced. They are Somalis who left their homes in the Ogaden when Ethiopia and Somalia went to war over the region in 1977-78 and then were driven back into Ethiopia by a civil war still raging in their homeland.

But in a sign of changing times in Gode Camp, some refugees employed in a work-for-food program went on strike Wednesday, seeking more compensation.

"They were getting extra rations of wheat for working in the food distribution program," Thomas explained. "But with the resumed shipments of food, the price of wheat has dropped sharply on the open market in the region and they felt, in effect, that their wages had been cut.

"It's distressing, but it's a sign of progress."

Bonaduce faces 22 months in jail

PHOENIX (AP) — Former child actor Danny Bonaduce faces up to 22 months in jail after admitting to attacking a transvestite prostitute as part of a plea bargain.

Bonaduce, who played Danny Partridge in the 1970s ABC-TV show "The Partridge Family," pleaded guilty Friday to endangerment and no-contest to misdemeanor assault.

Bonaduce was accused of attacking and robbing Darius Lee Barney, 25, on March 31 after paying Barney $20 for a sex act. Barney suffered a broken nose and various cuts.

Judge Joseph Howe of Maricopa County Superior Court set sentencing for Aug. 23.

Howe told Bonaduce, 31, he could now face prosecution in Florida, where he was on probation after pleading no contest last year to a charge of trying to buy cocaine.

Neither Barney nor Bonaduce would comment outside court.

Police hope sculpture of victim will aid investigation

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A forensic artist has sculpted the head of an unidentified murder victim with hopes that someone will come forth with clues to her death.

The victim, whose body was found behind a manufacturing plant near Amarillo last July, has been nicknamed "Jane Doe 1990" by police investigators.

Medical experts say she was probably a white female of Hispanic descent, between 21 and 29 years old with light brown hair.

Medical officials speculate the body had been behind the plant for nearly two months. Animals had dragged some of the bones several feet away from the building.

But a relatively new investigative procedure has given Jane Doe 1990 a face.

"This is the very first sculpture that we have ever had done here," said Lt. E.W. Smith, director of the Special Crimes Unit for the Amarillo Police Department.

"Normally we find our victims before the stage that only the skeleton remains. But departments who have used it have had some success, so we are hoping for the same."

The victim's body was examined by Dr. Harold Gill-King, a forensic anthropologist at the University of North Texas. Gill-King determined she was murdered.

But without a name or a face, investigators didn't know where to begin.

"The sculpture gives us a place to start," Smith said. "We know she didn't look exactly like the clay model, but maybe there is enough recognition there that someone may remember something."

Smith said the department has already received six calls from people who claimed to recognize the likeness.

Retirement lobbying system decried

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards promised educators Friday that state officials will not harm the Teacher Retirement System, decrying criticism of a plan to change the handling of pension funds.

"I, for one, am angry that both teachers and retired teachers who are sitting there in their homes, and who are frightened enough as it is by this rotten national economy ... are receiving materials in the mail that would suggest to them that someone in Austin is trying to jeopardize their Teacher Retirement System," Richards told the Texas Classroom Teachers Association Annual Leadership Conference.

"We are not going to do that," said the governor, who noted that as a former teacher she is part of the Retirement System.

Education groups and the system board have said the system would be harmed under proposals by State Comptroller John Sharp, which are part of a state government audit endorsed by Richards. The Teacher Retirement System has included criticism of the proposals in its latest newsletter.

Sharp recommended eliminating the Texas Constitution's ceiling and floor on state contributions to the Teacher Retirement System. Instead, his audit said the constitution should simply require the state to fund the system in a financially secure manner.

A pension committee composed of the governor, lieutenant governor and comptroller would review the floating contribution rate recommended by a state actuary under his proposal.

Sharp's proposals "would certainly seriously endanger the integrity of the system," said Wayne Blevins, executive secretary of the system board. "We think we have a responsibility to inform our membership of

Round-the-clock radio ads spell the blues for fans

ADEL, Ga. (AP) — Country and western fans whose station switched from music to round-the-clock commercials yearn for the days when they could hear Clinton Gregory croon, "If It Weren't For Country Music, I'd Go Crazy."

John L. Williams, owner of WDDQ-FM in south-central Georgia, made the switch to "tourism information radio" in May. The commercials, which advertise his gas stations, motels and restaurants, are geared toward motorists traveling through town along Interstate 75 to and from Florida.

"The famous King Frog restaurant is waiting for you with home-made cornbread, sweet potatoes and iced tea," says one commercial.

While regretting the loss, the town's music enthusiasts aren't set on being crazed by commercial clutter. In answer to singer George Jones' query, "Who's Going to Fill Their Shoes?" — they tune in out-of-town stations.

"We don't listen anymore," said Gail Hughes, a secretary at Cook County High School in Adel, a farming community of 5,000, 40 miles north of the Florida line. "We don't care what's going on on the interstate."

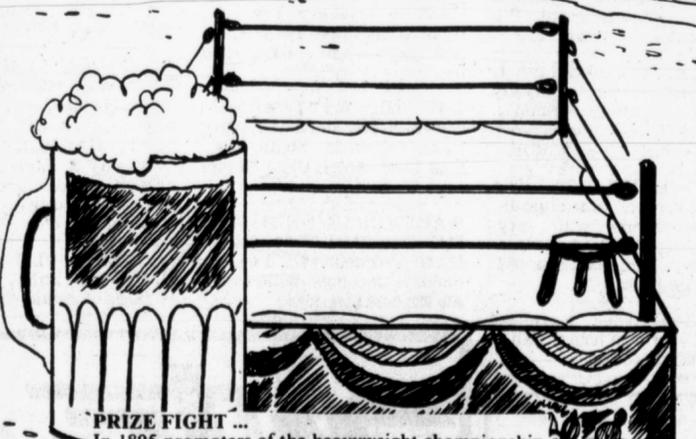

"A lot of people used to listen until they started advertising," said Candler Henderson, a high school junior. "Now they listen to other stations."

the facts."

Opponents of Sharp's plan have said it would allow lawmakers to drastically reduce the state contribution and cut benefits to retired teachers. They also have said a floating contribution rate would not allow pension increases when investment dividends are larger than expected.

Richards said she supports a 5 percent cost-of-living increase for retired teachers, and accused opponents of Sharp's proposals of using "scare tactics."

Blevins said the Retirement System has proposed an increase of at least 5 percent for retired teachers, coupled with a reduction in the state's contribution rate from the current 7.65 percent to 7.47 percent.

The state's new education commissioner, Lionel "Skip" Meno, also spoke at the teachers' conference. Meno emphasized the need to increase student achievement and to allow school districts flexibility in developing programs.

Lebanon to participate in peace negotiations

JIDDAH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Lebanon joined Syria Saturday in agreeing to participate in Mideast peace talks with Israel. Lebanon demanded that the expulsion of Israeli troops from a border buffer zone be placed on the agenda.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III lined up Lebanon's support for the peace conference in talks Saturday in Cairo with Lebanese Foreign Minister Fares Bouez. Baker then flew here to see King Fahd and Prince Saud, the Saudi foreign minister.

President Bush sounded a hopeful note in Ankara, Turkey, about the peace proposals Baker is carrying to leaders in the region. "I believe in my heart of hearts that when this is explained" to Israel and the Arabs, Bush said, "that all countries will see that it's in their interest to come forward and talk peace."

Bush, at a news conference with Turkish President Turgut Ozal, said Baker had encountered positive reactions thus far. Noting reports that Israel was balking at Baker's proposals, Bush said, "Every time you hear some negative comment you can't get discouraged." The Saudi royal rulers earlier in the year ruled out direct participation in negotiations to resolve the 43-year-old Arab-Israeli dispute.

But the Saudis and five other Persian Gulf countries said they would be willing to attend talks with Israel on such subjects as scarce water resources, the environment and proliferation of weapons.

Lebanon is the third Arab country to inform Baker it was accepting President Bush's formula for a peace conference. It calls for Israel to give up land to the Arabs in exchange for acceptance.

Bouez said Lebanon also "reserve its right" to demand immediate application of on another U.N. Security Council resolution adopted in 1978, calling on Israel to withdraw its troops from southern Lebanon.

Bush doesn't think U.S. troops will be relocated

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — President Bush Saturday expressed anxiety over renewed fighting between Iraq and the Kurds but said he doubted that circumstances would require a move of U.S. troops from Turkey back into northern Iraq.

Bush, who arrived this morning from Greece, praised Turkey's "critical role" in the drive to oust Iraq from Kuwait and expressed his gratitude with support for Turkey's military modernization and with a pledge that the United States would provide trade and investment.

He also encouraged Turkey to settle its Cyprus feud with Greece.

In the first major fighting since the recent withdrawal of allied forces from northern Iraq, Kurds protesting Saddam Hussein's rule have been battling with government soldiers.

U.S. officials said the fighting occurred outside the allied-designated security zone. The clashes came just two days after the allied forces completed their pullout from the zone after a three-month occupation to protect and repatriate the Kurds.

hospital management is already working to secure a replacement for Aycock, who has been on the medical staff here since December 1988.

Dr. Aycock has served both Cogdell Hospital and Rolling Plains Hospital in Sweetwater. Last fall, during Operation Desert Shield, Dr. Aycock was called up for reserve duty and spent several weeks in South Carolina.

During Operation Desert Storm, Dr. Aycock — a colonel in the Air Force Reserves — faced active duty call up again and members of the community wrote letters asking for consideration since Aycock was the sole provider of general surgery in a rural area.

Dr. Aycock became associated with Cogdell after Dr. Mark Pate left to establish a practice in Texarkana. Aycock joined the Sweetwater hospital in June 1988.

Aycock, a graduate of Abilene Christian University, earned his medical degree from Baylor College of Medicine. He served his internship at John Peter Smith Hospital in Fort Worth.

During Vietnam, Dr. Aycock served on the USS Response in the Gulf of Tonkin. After serving in the navy, Dr. Aycock returned to private practice in Dallas and then completed the surgery residency at Emory University in Atlanta.

Lancaster said one-on-one contacts have been made with general surgeon prospects as well as contacts with physician recruitment firms. Lancaster said the hospital will also use the resources of St. Mary of the Plains in seeking a full-time surgeon for Cogdell "as quickly as possible."

Family wants investigation

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — A judge has indicted two men accused of killing a doctor who wrote controversial columns for a local newspaper.

Judge Alberto Vasquez Quintero ruled on Thursday that Arturo Salas Sanchez, 21, and Sergio Aguirre Torres, 19, must stand trial for the slaying of Dr. Victor Manuel Oropeza.

Police say Oropeza was killed in retaliation for his complaint that led to the jailing of an El Paso man who broke Oropeza's windshield. The man, Samuel de la Rosa Reyes, remains at large.

Oropeza's family says Oropeza was killed because he wrote stinging columns for the Diario de Juarez.

Hospital will be designated by panel to aid trauma units

DALLAS (AP) — A committee of the Dallas County Medical Society says it will recommend at least one other hospital be brought in to help shoulder the burden put upon the city's trauma centers, a newspaper reported Friday.

The medical society has been searching for ways to relieve overworked surgeons, doctors and nurses at county-operated Parkland Memorial Hospital, Baylor University Medical Center and Methodist Medical Center.

But before another fully-staffed emergency room can be opened, the city might need to expand its paramedic services to improve response time.

Although the expected recommendation might only be an intermediate solution, medical leaders told The Dallas Morning News they believe it is a crucial step.

"I'm pretty optimistic that we're going to be able to come up with a fairly good short-term Band-Aid," said Dr. Ron Anderson, president and chief executive officer of Parkland Hospital.

Robert Heath, chief executive officer of the Dallas County Medical Society, agreed.

"I think the issues have been resolved," he said. "I think the details are what have to be resolved now."

Those issues, Heath said, include a citywide surge in violence — much of it tied to drugs and gangs — which has caused a 25 percent increase in the number of seriously injured people crowding emergency rooms.

Parkland has little choice but to provide trauma care, but Baylor and Methodist are private hospitals and don't have to keep their major trauma centers open. Both have said they would consider withdrawing from the system if other hospitals don't help out.

The two facilities, which take about 40 percent of the major trauma cases, lost more than $28 million last year on their emergency-room operations.

The medical society committee includes representatives from the three main trauma hospitals, as well as officials from Presbyterian Hospital of Dallas, St. Paul Medical Center, Humana Hospital-Medical City Dallas, RHD Memorial Medical Center and Zale Lipshy University Hospital.

Anderson said the general purpose of the committee meetings has been to establish at least a part-time major trauma center to help Thursday through Sunday, the busiest period of the week.

Though most major hospitals here have some sort of emergency room, few are open 24 hours a day with full surgical support. Any hospital that joined the network would likely have to add staff and might have to upgrade its facilities.

John Gavras, president of the Dallas-Fort Worth Hospital Council, estimates a hospital would spend about $5 million to create a major trauma center and about $4 million a year to maintain it.

In addition, Parkland, Baylor and Methodist officials estimate that 85 percent of the seriously injured patients in their emergency rooms are uninsured.

Dr. Anderson said that if the committee agrees on a plan, an announcement could be made Monday morning.

"I think we will find something that will be good for the community. And I think it'll be unique," he said.

Thomas nomination has black activists 'traumatized'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly three weeks after Clarence Thomas became the second black ever named to the Supreme Court, many black activists remain unsettled over whether to support or oppose a man whose record leaves almost all of them cold.

President Bush's nomination of Thomas, a conservative Republican and former chairman of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, has "traumatized" the black leadership family, said Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

"I have real mixed emotions because if his views are as they appeared to be when he was head of EEOC, I would have to oppose him," Lowery said. "But if he can clarify that... I can support him."

Lowery's ambivalence is not unique among black civil rights leaders, who seem to fall into three distinct groups when debating the nomination of Thomas to replace Thurgood Marshall, the only black ever to serve on the court.

One faction insists that Thomas' record demands black opposition, regardless of his race; another disagrees with his record but is reluctant to oppose him because of his race; and the third argues that his record simply isn't that bad.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson and the Congressional Black Caucus, which, with the dissent of its sole Republican member, voted last week to oppose the nomination, reflect the thinking of the first group.

Jackson said blacks would be rejecting the legacy of such civil rights leaders like the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. if they support Thomas, who has opposed traditional approaches to civil rights such as affirmative action.

THROFTWAY

Scurry County Folks

By Shirley A. Gorman

People helping people isn't just a slogan to Kathryn Roberts, it's a way of life.

Since earning a degree in home economics from Panhandle State University in Goodwill, Okla., she has held three jobs in that field, including her present position as home extension agent for Scurry County. She received her teaching certificate through Texas Tech University.

She assumed her then new duties in 1982, after having taught home economics at Snyder High School for 10 years. When she and her husband, Gary, who is the production superintendent at Y-Z Industries, moved to Snyder from Odessa in 1969 she worked as a substitute teacher for two years.

Kathryn values her present as well as past positions highly because she has always been able to work with various people in all age groups. When asked if she had a favorite job within her chosen field, she named her first job after graduation — home and community service adviser for Southwestern Public Service — mainly because it was the first. But, in truth, she likes everything about her occupation because it lets her work with people, something she said she enjoys very much.

Since more positions are available now than ever before in the home economics field, Kathryn said it is a good area for anyone to specialize.

Kathryn works with the total community in Scurry County, including all races, ages and genders. The home extension service's main goal is to "improve the quality of life and make a difference in others' lives."

This is usually done through programs and activities designed to build self-esteem, enhance the self-concept, and to promote leadership skills in both adults and young people through family activities.

She likes the Extension Service for many reasons, including the fact that it encourages its employees to further their education by working on masters and doctors degrees.

Since most extension programs depend on volunteers, Kathryn said they deserve, but don't always get, the recognition they need.

Few things please Kathryn as much as teaching someone and then having them teach someone else. She was pleased to note that many extension programs are well received in the county and participation is usually good.

For instance, a recent cholesterol screening brought many inquiries from adults who wanted to know the results of their tests.

A 4-H alumni herself, Kathryn enjoys working with county 4-H'ers. She once showed Hereford bulls and steers and credits that experience — plus the way in which her parents raised her — with influencing the career choices she has made.

Another job "perk," for Kathryn is that "each day is different," so she never has a chance to get bored.

She puts on programs for county schools and businesses as well as civic groups, organizations, clubs and individuals. She said she always encourages everyone to "get involved in the community."

During the past nine years, Kathryn said her job description has changed somewhat. Her office has taken on more responsibility and she attends special training sessions coordinated by the Extension Service, headquartered at Texas A&M University.

Before the Extension Service sets up a training session, she said, research is conducted at the local, state and national level.

Kathryn loves working with 4-H clubs and credits Scurry County members with being "good kids with good parents. They can do a lot and often have more skill than we give them credit for," she said.

She said that 4-H is more than just "cooking and cows" and that various activities offered through the program can be a positive influence. She said that in spite of other distractions, many students do make the commitment to 4-H.

4-H, though basically the same organization it was when Kathryn was a member, has changed over the years and now does more "networking," (clubs working together) which has a greater impact on the community.

In Scurry County, committees are formed periodically to zero in on the needs of the community, Kathryn said. Youth development was listed as a top priority by that committee plus another one, home economics, which came to the same conclusion, though each worked independently of the other.

These studies are utilized to organize projects which can benefit all ages in the county. A recent example is the YES program or Youth Exchange with Seniors, which pairs young people with the elderly for their mutual benefit.

Kathryn stresses that all youth, whether in 4-H or not, need to have access to adults who will provide them with a positive image.

4-H activities continue throughout the summer and she sometimes attends various camps with 4-H members.

Kathryn's activities aren't always centered around programs or teaching. She is the current president of the Texas District for extension agents, and is hard at work preparing for the state meeting which Snyder will host next year. At that time, she will also assume the office of second vice-president.

She strongly believes that "family life should involve sharing and caring." Both she and her husband grew up in "the Lutheran faith and strong family homes."

Kathryn was born in Texas County, Tex. but grew up on a farm in Oklahoma. Both parents taught school and her father farmed as well.

Her father and one sister are both deceased. But her mother and two brothers are still living. "Dad believed in hard work. After your parents are gone, you come to value what they taught you all the more."

Her sister had been a home extension agent in Kansas before her death in 1972.

Kathryn's "good memories of her youth" include her mother, who she described as a generous woman who fed everyone who came to their farm to work for them.

(See FOLKS on page 4B)

LIKES PEOPLE-ORIENTED JOB — Kathryn Roberts, a home extension agent for Scurry County, enjoys her work very much because it keeps her in touch with people. She is sometimes called upon to present programs throughout the county. She recently said that her greatest satisfaction occurs when people teach other people what she has taught them. Bethel, Hudson pledge vows

Laurie Lynn Bethel and William Paul Hudson were united in marriage at 8 p.m., Saturday, June 29 in a candlelight ceremony at the First Presbyterian Church in Snyder. Officiating was the Rev. Miller F. Robinson, pastor of Colonial Hill Baptist Church.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Forrest Bethel of Snyder and Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Don Hudson of Canyon and Mrs. Paula Harris of Amarillo.

Deceased maternal grandparents of the bride are the Rev. and Mrs. John Raymond Reedy, and her paternal grandfather, Albert Lee Bethel.

Maternal grandmother of the bride is Mrs. Virginia Bethel of Snyder and maternal grandparents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Harold Woolsey of Canyon and Mrs. W.E. Hudson of Canyon.

Beneath the tall stained glass windows, behind the church altar, was centered with a sprinkling of white taper candles and diamond cut votive candles in a bank of commadore and leather leaf fern. The candles were elevated, each to a separate level, to create a free form motif.

Rubrum lilies, hot pink roses and carnations, light pink delphinium, hot pink pixie carnations and pink bouvardia and alstroemeria lilies, in varying shades, were integrated among the candles.

The altar table held eight candles arranged with rubrum lilies and bright pink carnations were for special lighting by the bridesmaids and groomsmen. The center aisle was marked with lemon leaf and springer fern and hot pink carnations. The stained glass windows of the sanctuary were touched with crystal candlesticks, diamond cut votives and tree fern and baby's breath.

Guests were registered by Mrs. Robert Stocker of Denver, Colo. The bride's book was a creation of wedding white satin, lace and pearls. Printed programs were of white linen, tied with pink ribbons.

Pre-nuptial musical compositions by Johann Pachelbel, Johan Sebastian Bach, Gustov, a collection of Irish melodies and spirituals, was presented by harpist, Mrs. Jack Gorman Jr.

Vocal selections were presented by Mrs. Bob Womack of Snyder and Matthew Proulx of Cayon, including a duet "If I Loved You," by Rodgers and Hammerstein, and a solo entitled, "O Mio Babbino Caro," by Puccini.

Mrs. Richard McLaughlin of Wichita Falls, chimed the hour and played "Largo," by Dvorak on the tubular chimes for the seating of the grandparents and mothers.

Mrs. Randy Perkins of Abilene composed and played the organ processional, "March Nuptiale" and the recessional, "March Magnificat," especially for the bride and groom.

Bridesmaids and groomsmen entered from the back of the sanctuary as couples. Each lit a special candle as a token of love and friendship. They read selections from Shakespeare, St. Vincent Millay and Lovelace.

Handbells were rung before the entry of the flower girl, ring bearer and bride. Following the exchange of wedding vows and rings, the harpist performed "The Lord's Prayer," by Malotte, during the lighting of the unity candle, followed by silent prayers for the couple by the congregation and wedding party.

Chimes and organ joined together for the recessional.

Presented in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a white satin gown designed by Mou Lei. Her portrait collar was trimmed with beaded Venise lace and fell to a fitted bodice of Alencon lace with sequins and pearls. Her full satin skirt was trimmed with Alencon lace at the hemline. The dress featured a satin bow at the back with cascading lace on the cathedral train.

To compliment her gown, the bride chose a veil of imported silk which fell from a wreath of silk flowers, forming a cascade of seed pearl sprays on one side of her face. The two layers with ruffled edges flowed to walking length.

The bride carried a cascading bouquet of bridal pink and hot pink roses, pink bouvardia, alstroemeria lilies and white baby's breath. Loops, spray and streamers of iridescent pearls, along with streamers of sheer iridescent bridal ribbon completed the bouquet. Tucked in her bouquet was her Grandmother Reedy's handkerchief, which served as something old.

The traditional something new was her gown and something borrowed was her mother's pearl earrings. For something blue, the bride wore a white crocheted garter entwined with tiny blue ribbon, a gift brought to her from Scotland by her parents.

Serving as matron of honor was her mother who chose a pale aqua two-piece tea length linen dress trimmed in matching lace and shoes. The groom's stepmother wore a two-piece royal blue dress with tunic top. Each wore corsages of pink roses.

Bridesmaids were Pam Burgeson of Houston, Becky Looney of Canyon, Carole Bethel, the bride's sister-in-law, and Adrienne Younger of Dallas. Each carried field bouquets of pink roses, alstroemeria lilies and baby's breath and wore individualized tea length black dresses. They wore matching crystal cut earrings, a gift from the bride.

Laurie Huddleston, the bride's namesake, was the flower girl and Ginny Lynn Zimmerman of Bryan, niece of the bride, was ring bearer. They wore matching wedding white silk tea length dresses fashioned with full skirts and tiers of lace and pearls. They wore pearl necklaces, a gift from the bride, and headpieces of roses. The white satin ring pillow was covered with pearls and lace, and the white tulle basket was filled with rose petals.

The groom's father served as best man. Groomsmen were Brian Wilson of Canyon, Scot Gordon of Denton, Charles Bethel, brother of the bride, and Matt Proulx of Canyon. Ben Burgeson of Houston, along with the groomsmen, served as ushers and candlelighters.

The groom was attired a black full dress tuxedo and white vest and tie. His boutonniere was pink roses and stephonotis. The other members of the wedding party wore black tuxedos with white shirts and black accents. Their boutonnières were roses and baby's breath.

The wedding handbell ringers were Cody Hudson of Canyon, brother of the groom, and Wayne Zimmerman, nephew of the bride. They wore black pants and suspenders with black bow ties, white long sleeved shirts and white gloves.

Mrs. Sandra Robinson was wedding director.

A reception was held in the atrium of Willow Park Inn which was decorated in shades of pink. Individual tables held arrangements of pixie carnations, baby's breath and paradise candles, featuring lamp shades adorned with pearls. Tablecloths were pink taffeta.

The bride's table held a four-tiered Lady Windmire wedding cake and icing of white almond. Each tier was adorned with strands of pearls and clusters of hand crafted gum-paste flowers in shades of pink with pale green leaves.

The table was covered with a white silk taffeta cloth and draped with an overlay of taffeta, swagged with white satin ribbon bows. It held a silver punch bowl, two tall silver candlesticks and mints. The tablecloth was loaned by Mrs. Ralph Miller of Fluvanna.

Buffet tables were draped in pink satin and held a white candelabra with hurricane globes and drapings of smilax greenery and pink carnations. The pink cloths were designed by Mrs. Robert Stocker.

The pool held a double float of three topiary trees, love birds, rubrum lilies, September flowers, pink carnations and votive candles.

The couple's favorite Broadway show tunes were sung by Mrs. Larry Scott and Lanny Turner and accompanied at the clavivova by Mrs. Larry Turner. "Treasured Memories," a slide presentation with musical accompaniment was presented by Harley Bynum. Mrs. Jack Gorman Jr., harpist, completed the evening's entertainment.

Members of the houseparty were Mmes. Elizabeth Potts, Blanche Chisum, Jane Crenweldge, Roxanne Stoker, Connie Huddleston, Teresa Wall and Tammy Stoker.

A candlelight steak dinner honored the couple in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Carter on June 28 at 7 p.m. The other host and hostesses were Mr. and Mrs. Randy Perkins of Abilene and Mrs. Elizabeth Potts. Dinner music was provided by Katie Perkins.

The wedding rehearsal luncheon, hosted by the groom's parents, was held at noon on the wedding day at Willow Park Inn.

Bridal courtesies were held in Snyder, Dallas and Houston. Included were a lingerie shower in Dallas hosted by Adrienne Younger; a bridal shower hosted by Pam Burgeson; and a bridal coffee, given by several hostesses in Snyder. A swim party was held at the Bethel home on June 27.

Wedding guests were registered from Fort Worth, Waco, Dallas, Richardson, Snyder, Odessa, Lubbock, Abilene, Colorado City, Sweetwater, Houston, Seabrook, Canyon, Amarillo, San Angelo, Denton and Denver, Colo.

A Snyder High School graduate, the bride graduated from Baylor University with a bachelor of arts degree in sociology, and received her bachelor of music degree in music therapy from West Texas State University, and did her internship at the University of Georgia Retardation Center at Athens. She is presently the Music Therapist at Danforth Hospital in Texas City.

The groom graduated from Canyon High School and attended Amarillo College. He is presently employed with Galveston County Beaches and Park Board and is pursuing an occupational therapy degree.

Following the reception, the couple left on a wedding trip to Puerto Vallarta, Mex. The bride wore a cobalt blue raw silk suit accented with matching accessories and multicolored jewelry.

Mr. and Mrs. Hudson are at home in Seabrook, Tex.

Blue shadow back

NEW YORK (AP) — Blue eye shadow is back. But it's far from the heavy frosted shades so popular in the 1960s. In fact, it should be used only to accent the eye, not contour it.

The makers of Stendhal beauty products says older women should use a dark blue only as an accent on the outside corner of the lid after applying a taupe or soft brown base.

Brown-eyed women should wear darker shades of blue, while hazel eyes look best with medium to lighter tones of blue. Women with blue eyes should choose a blue that contrasts with their eye color to avoid a monochromatic look.

Nail information

NEW YORK (AP) — If you get ink or carbon on your nail polish, there's no need for despair.

Dip a cotton swab into nail polish remover or rubbing alcohol and lightly run it over the stained area. If, says the makers of Cutex, you are over-zealous in rubbing, apply a fresh coat of polish and let it dry 10 minutes.

Matchpoint madness

By Phillip Alder

If you venture into a duplicate bridge club, you will probably compete in a matchpointed pairs game. The same hands will be played at all tables and the different results compared. You receive one matchpoint for each pair you outscore, and half a matchpoint for each tie.

Suppose at nine out of 10 tables North-South plays in three no-trump and wins nine tricks for plus 400. If you play in four hearts and win 10 tricks, you score 420 and receive nine matchpoints: one for each pair you beat. You get a "top." The other North-South pairs will each receive four matchpoints.

This drive for extra points sometimes "forces" you to risk your contract in the hunt for an overtrick — as long as the odds are in your favor.

In four hearts, at rubber bridge, you would draw trumps and ruff your club loser in the dummy: the safe route to 10 tricks. But in a duplicate, if other declarers are making an overtrick, you will score very few matchpoints for making your contract exactly.

The right play, in this deal from Bill Root's "How to Play a Bridge Hand," is to win the diamond lead in the dummy and take an immediate club finesse. Suppose West wins with the queen and returns another diamond. Win in the dummy and take a second club finesse: it is a 2-to-1 favorite to win.

True, if it loses, you will go down, but you will have company. However, if the second club finesse wins, you draw trumps, discard dummy's diamond five on the club ace, and ruff your diamond loser in the dummy, bringing home an overtrick and sharing a top.

Mount McKinley is a place where nature is still in charge, even during the summer. Mountaineering guide Vernon Tejas had a dream of climbing Mount McKinley, solo, in the winter. How he survived on this menacing mountain and fought the wicked winter elements to defy death itself is the story of "Dangerous Steps."

Athletes dressed well for parade

NEW YORK (AP) — Henry Grethel will design parade uniforms for the 1992 U.S. Olympic Team. He will dress more than 1,100 athletes, coaches and officials, so it's a job that will require a lot more finesse than finding a color and style flattering to a bevy of bridal attendants.

Women's sizes will range from 4 to 18, while men's jacket sizes will range from 36 short to 58 extra long.

Grethel, a designer of menswear for Hartmarx, also had a fling with women's wear in the 1980s. He's the first American designer selected by the U.S. Olympic Committee.

The Winter Games are scheduled for Albertville, France, and the Summer Games in Barcelona, Spain.

The 1988 uniforms were the work of Adidas.

Her father had to quit school in the fourth grade in order to help support his family. But though he wasn't able to complete his education, he saw to it that his children had the opportunity to do so.

He learned early on that he could get Kathryn to do almost anything as long as he praised her. That paid off because in later years she worked her way through college by helping her father on the farm.

They were poor, she recalled, but always had fun. As a young girl she remembered backyard picnics and trips to the river.

She always loved to see birds and wild flowers and an occasional red fox on her outings.

Her mother kept a garden and raised animals and that's how they managed to get by.

Now 83, her mother is still active. On visits home, Kathryn said she likes to help with the wheat harvest when she has the time, just like she did as a girl.

Perhaps the greatest compliment a daughter can give her mother is to say, "My mother is the most unselfish person I have ever met."

Kathryn believes people should learn from each other and said it is important to change or be left behind. She has always been adaptable to change. As a home economics teacher, she initiated a food class for boys during her tenure.

The idea for the class originated with five boys who approached her one day asking if you could teach them a few basics. As juniors and seniors they realized they weren't going to be living at home much longer.

She found her male students to be "competitive" and they didn't seem "to mind washing dishes" either.

The curriculum she organized for the class included nutrition, laundry instruction, mending, renting and making a major purchase like a car or home.

They also learned how much food costs at the grocery store. When they learned how high steak was, she said they had to become resourceful. They decided on wild game instead.

She also taught them table manners.

One of her favorite activities is camping out and she loves water sports as well. She also delights in being a grandparent. A daughter, Dalinda Mangis lives in Knox City. A son, Stockton Roberts, is a medical resident at Scott/White in Temple. Each has one child.

Barbecues are hot with mushroom kebab on grill

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

America's menus for summer cookouts and patio parties are more inventive than ever as backyard chefs experiment with new tastes and flavor combinations when barbecuing their favorite foods.

For an easy summertime meal, team your favorite grilled meats, poultry or fish steaks with fresh vegetable kebabs, marinated in a tangy vinaigrette.

To make marinade, in a small bowl thoroughly mix oil, wine, vinegar, shallot, tarragon, salt and pepper; set aside.

Alternately thread mushrooms and peppers onto four 10-inch bamboo skewers, dividing equally. To make hors d'oeuvres, use twelve 6-inch bamboo skewers.

Holly McKenzie, Parker marry in garden ceremony

Holly Noelle McKenzie became the bride of James Darren Parker in an outdoor garden ceremony at 7 p.m. Saturday, June 22, at the home of the bride's parents. Rusty Dickerson, Trinity United Methodist Church pastor, officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Dean P. McKenzie and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth W. Parker, all of Snyder.

Vows were promised against a background of pink roses bordered with white petunias under an arbor entwined with pink roses and decorated with a large swag of rose, country blue, and cream colored static, roses, baby's breath, strings of pearls, and bows of rose ribbon. There were pink crepe myrtles on either side of the arbor. Large clay pots of pink geraniums and white caladiums were placed throughout the yard.

Doug Smith of Lubbock, cousin of the bride, provided original music which he had written especially for the couple.

When presented in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in a gown of candlelight silk organza over taffeta which belonged to her aunt, Linda Smith of Kermit. The fitted bodice was trimmed in Alencon lace, scalloped at the scoop neckline and extending into short sleeves, which were also scalloped. Wide scalloped bands of matching lace were inserted into the full skirt.

Her veil was a Victorian halo, delicately fashioned with an array of dried roses, baby's breath, and everlasting, held with a bow of illusion in the back. A pink cameo which had belonged to her great-great-grandmother, Carrie Lea Thomson, was attached to her colonial bouquet of pink roses, caspia, alstroemeria lilies, blue static and monica daisies, tied with satin and lace streamers.

Tamara Schulz of Midland served as her cousin's matron of honor. She was gowned in a tea length dress of polished cotton print with roses on a pink background, fashioned with a round scooped neckline, puffed sleeves and a full skirt with tiered ruffles in back. Her headpiece was a circlet handcrafted of dried roses and German static clustered amidst swirls of ivory satin streamers. She carried a bouquet of pink roses and baby's breath.

Heather Zajicek of Snyder was flower girl. Her dress and headpiece were styled after the matron of honor's and she carried a pink wicker basket filled with loose petals of pink and white roses.

Steve Parker of San Angelo served his brother as best man. Daniel Parker of Snyder, the groom's other brother, was junior groomsman. Cole McKenzie of Lubbock, brother of the bride, was usher.

Guests were registered by Stacy Parker of San Angelo, sister-in-law of the groom, at a small round table covered with a full-skirted cloth topped with a cloth of handmade applique. An antique cut glass bud vase, a wedding gift of the bride's great-great grandparents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Tom Stone, in 1898, held pink roses, stock and baby's breath.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the dining room of the McKenzie home. Baskets of monica casino daisies, larkspur, bouvardia, pink roses and blue static were used throughout the house and on the quartet tables in the yard. Full-skirted country blue cloths were topped cloths of polished cotton of pale yellow with a floral pattern of rose and blue.

The bride's table, laid with an antique Battenburg cloth belonging to the bride's late great-grandmother, Nora Boatman, held the three-tiered wedding cake made by the bride's mother. It was designed with small dotted Swiss decor and decorated with nosegays of fresh flowers of roses, lilies and baby's breath. The ceremonial cutting of the cake was done with a sterling silver cake knife, a wedding gift to the bride's parents in 1965.

Pink mock champagne, mints, nuts and miniature chocolate cupcakes, made by the groom's mother, completed the table setting. Serving were cousins of the groom, Jennifer Suggs of Big Spring, Angela Suggs of Hamlin, Pam Suggs of Lamesa, Tammy McNutt of Fort Worth, and a close friend, Meredith Goodwin of Stephenville.

The bridegroom's parents were hosts for a rehearsal dinner on June 21 at Reta's Cake Shop.

Following their wedding trip to Fredericksburg and San Antonio, the newlyweds are at home in San Angelo.

The bride, a 1991 graduate of Snyder High School, is employed in the office of Dr. Robert Rowland. The groom, a 1990 graduate of SHS will attend Angelo State University and is employed by the accounting firm of Jones, Hay and Sanders.

Special guests were the couple's grandparents, Mrs. Arvid Malm and Mr. and Mrs. C.R. McKenzie of Fort Stockton, Mr. and Mrs. James B. Suggs of Aspermont, and Mr. and Mrs. J.D. Parker of Peacock.

Out-of-town relatives attending were from Kermit, Lubbock, Midland, Stamford, Graham, Big Spring, Lamesa, Fort Worth, Austin, Andrews, Round Rock, Fort Stockton, Peacock and San Angelo.

DEAR POLLY — Is there a substitute for self-rising flour in my southern biscuit recipe? — JANNE

DEAR JANNE — Each cup of self-rising flour generally contains 1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder and 1/2 teaspoon salt. So to use a recipe calling for self-rising flour when all you have is regular all-purpose, simply add these quantities of baking powder and salt for each cup of flour used (decrease proportionately for fractions of cups, of course).

If you want to substitute self-rising flour for regular flour in baking powder-leavened biscuit, muffin or cake recipes, simply omit both leavening and salt. However, certain types of baked goods do not turn out well when made with self-rising flour. Egg-leavened cakes, such as sponge cake or angel food, or popovers do not do well when made with self-rising flour. And in chocolate recipes, self-rising flour may not provide the correct acid-alkali balance, resulting in a strange flavor and less-rich color. — POLLY

RECIPE OF THE WEEK — Refresh your summer salads with this delightful homemade curried yogurt salad dressing.

Stir together 1/2 cup plain yogurt, 1/4 cup mayonnaise, 1/2 teaspoon curry powder and 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce. Refrigerate the mixture for an hour or two to allow the flavors to blend and mellow before serving. Serve over any green salad or even fresh fruit. Tangy and delicious!

DEAR POLLY — How can I remove a sour odor from my microwave oven? — DIANE

DEAR DIANE — Place a cup of water with several tablespoons of lemon juice added into the oven. Bring the water to a boil and let it boil for a few minutes.

You can also wash out the interior of the oven with a solution of baking soda in warm water. This mixture is also good for cleaning up dried food stains and spatters.

To prevent odors, be sure to clean up spills in the oven promptly and be sure the interior is completely dry before closing it, especially if you use your oven infrequently.

I'm sending you a copy of my newsletter "Eliminating Household Odors," which tells how to eliminate odors from other appliances, from furnishings and carpets, and from the air, including directions for making your own air fresheners. Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1991 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Recently I've noticed how much I have been lying to people about little things, when the lie does not in any way benefit me.

For instance, if I am asked what I've been doing, I will lie, even though the answer is no more glamorous than the truth. Yesterday, I told someone I had to stop and get gas before going home, even though I knew I was going straight home.

I once heard someone who had been abused as a child say that she started lying about everything in order to feel that she was in control of the situation. Abby, I have never been abused, and I don't know why I lie so much. It's really been bad the last year, but the lie is always out of my mouth before I realize it.

I'm sure the people I lie to know that I am lying, so why do I feel so powerless to stop? Could this have anything to do with the fact that I am in an unhappy relationship and want out?

CHRONIC LIAR

DEAR CHRONIC LIAR: Your last sentence could be a clue. You are not happy with things the way they are, so even though that which you lie about is of no consequence, at least it's not reality, which you dislike.

A psychotherapist could help you get to the root of this. If you are not already acquainted with one, ask your physician for a referral—or contact your county mental health department.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 22-year-old college student with plans to graduate in December. I have been dating the same guy for almost five years. He is out of college now and has a steady job.

My problem is that I want to get married. I would even settle for an engagement ring or some sort of promise of marriage after I graduate from college. My boyfriend is 27 years old and keeps saying we'll get married someday (when I bring it up); otherwise, he never mentions it. He says it would be fine if we just lived together because we need to be "soul mates" first.

I used to believe that living together was a good idea, but I don't think so anymore. I truly love this man and want to be his wife.

Please help me, Abby. Am I wasting my time? He says he feels like I'm pressuring him. What should I do?

RUNNING IN PLACE

DEARRUNNING: When a man tells you that he feels like you're pressuring him—trust me, you are pressuring him. Back off.

Then tell him you think it might be a good idea if you two cooled it for a while, and maybe if you dated other people you could get a better perspective on your relationship. If he agrees, that's what you should do. If not, say nothing more about marriage until after graduation.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to reply to "Real Adoptive Parents" who need an answer to the question, "Are your children real brother and sister?"

As the mother of two adopted Korean children, I am asked that question frequently, and my stock reply is: "They are now!"

A "REAL" MOM

DEAR ABBY: Our 19-year-old daughter is a college sophomore, living at school.

Recently, while in her old room at home, I came across a pharmacy bag containing contraceptive supplies with a receipt dated 2 1/2 years ago. At that time, she was dating a 19-year-old guy, with whom she recently broke up (six months ago) after a three-year relationship.

She's a great kid, well-adjusted, always obeyed her curfew, and doesn't drink or do drugs. Should I just forget about this and be glad she at least took responsibility for protecting herself? (She has never been willing to discuss sex with me.)

I have not mentioned this to her father. Should I? I feel a bit like a traitor keeping it from him, but he is her father. Thank you for any advice you can offer.

HER MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Your daughter is to be commended for her (a) maturity and (b) sense of responsibility regarding contraception.

If it will ease your mind to have a private conversation with your daughter about your "discovery," do so. But if sharing the information with your husband could possibly sour their relationship, please reconsider. The past is history.

DEAR ABBY: You recently published a letter signed "Real Adoptive Parent" from a mother who was upset by insensitive questions. My wife and I are the parents of three girls: one, an adopted Korean-born child; another, a biracial child; and one who is our daughter by birth.

We belong to a local adoptive-parent support group where we have heard every imaginable story about encounters with prejudice and insensitivity. We have also learned how to handle such questions.

When asked what seems to be an impertinent question, it is best to assume that there was no harm inson who recently took a trip to an important sporting event with two married couples. My question: What should my share be when it comes to expenses?

For instance, it cost $20 to park our van. Should I pay one-third of the cost with each married couple paying a third? Or should I pay one-fifth of the cost—with each person paying one-fifth?

I paid one-third of the parking and gas bill. Was this justified, or should I mention to the couples that I am only one-fifth of the group?

WISCONSINITE

By answering good-naturedly, and with a little humor, parents can communicate two very important lessons to their children: how they can one day handle such questions, should the need arise; and at the same time demonstrate that since the parents are not embarrassed by their family, neither should the children be.

ROBERT KLAHN, PRESIDENT, RAINBOW FAMILIES, TOLEDO, OHIO

DEAR ROBERT: Thank you for your helpful suggestions, as well as your eye-opening letter.

Families interested in information about adoption can contact Adoptive Families of America, 3333 Highway 100 North, Minneapolis, Minn. 55422. You will be provided a free information packet upon request. No self-addressed, stamped envelope is required.

DEAR ABBY: I am a single person who recently took a trip to an important sporting event with two married couples. My question: What should my share be when it comes to expenses?

For instance, it cost $20 to park our van. Should I pay one-third of the cost with each married couple paying a third? Or should I pay one-fifth of the cost—with each person paying one-fifth?

I paid one-third of the parking and gas bill. Was this justified, or should I mention to the couples that I am only one-fifth of the group?

DEAR WISCONSINITE: Unless you are on a very tight budget, assume one-third of the expenses. Otherwise, "take the fifth."

Texas Instruments will cut 3,200 jobs in a few months

DALLAS (AP)—Texas Instruments Inc. will reduce its work force by about 5 percent, or 3,200 workers, to adapt to changes in its primary businesses, defense contracting and semiconductors.

The cutback, to be achieved through early retirement offers and layoffs in the next few months, will cost the company about $130 million.

But chairman Jerry Junkins said Thursday it will save Texas Instruments about $125 million a year.

"While progress has been made in aligning TI's operations with near-term market demand, additional actions are needed to reduce TI's cost structure and improve the company's long-term competitiveness," Junkins said.

The company announced the reduction Thursday along with its second quarter statement, which showed a $157 million loss largely due to the job cuts.

Texas Instruments also said it will meet Fujitsu Limited in a Tokyo court over its Japanese patent for the integrated circuit.

Fujitsu is the first company to defy the "Kilby patent" the Dallas-based company won in Japan two years ago for the then 30-year-old basic design of the computer chip.

The patent is expected to yield billions for Texas Instruments before its expiration in 2001. It covers "all integrated circuits made, used or sold in Japan regardless of the technology or process used," said Richard J. Agnich, general counsel for Texas Instruments.

The company has been realigning its operations for months because of less defense spending by the United States and rapid changes in the semiconductor business. For instance, its production of semiconductors will soon be half standard integrated circuits and half chips designed for specific applications.

Earlier layoffs this year have predominantly affected defense-related divisions in Texas. But the company did not specify where the latest 3,200 jobs would be cut.

Texas Instruments employs about 69,000 people worldwide, about 35,500 in Texas.

Without the expense of the job cut, Texas Instruments said it lost $27 million, 40 cents a share, on revenue of $1.69 billion for the quarter that ended June 30. In the year-ago period, Texas Instruments earned $11 million, 1 cent a share, on revenue of $1.59 billion.

For the first half of the year,

Texas Instruments showed a loss of $212 million, $2.76 a share, on $3.33 billion in revenue. The company earned $24 million, 6 cents a share, on revenue of $3.13 billion during the same time last year.

The company's plans for the second half of 1991 hinge on the improvement of the nation's economy, Junkins said. But he said third quarter performance would not erase the losses of the first six months.

The royalty battle arose during discussions between Fujitsu and Texas Instruments on a new cross-licensing agreement covering patents they own. Such agreements, renewed every few years, establish terms by which companies use the technology of others in their products.

The companies reached a pact on other patents but not the Kilby.

Buffalo Reef

By Bill McClellan

I made a startling discovery the other day. I can't find the bottom of my navel. My wife took this as an opportunity to tell me it might be time to lose weight.

A lot she knows. All the articles I've read say that if you can pinch an inch of fat around your middle, you need to lose weight. I suppose that would hold true if you can pinch enough fat to turn your belly-button up and look down in there.

I've seen a lot of research on weight control and health. Some of it seems practical; some is pretty technical; and some is just plain hype. One thing is clear. We're talking big, big business. People are making major dollars.

Did you see the graph in an area publication which asks you to determine whether you are an apple or a pear?

What kind of fruit came up with this anyway? It tells you to measure around your abdomen, then measure around your rear. If your abdomen is bigger than your rear, you are an apple. If your rear is bigger than your abdomen, you're a pear.

I haven't measured, but I'm pretty sure I'm a cantaloupe. The purpose of this fruity survey is to let you know that people with fat middles — apples — are at a greater risk for high blood pressure, heart disease and diabetes. Just think: all your life you've been told "An apple a day keeps the doctor away," and now you are one. And it's not good.

People with fat behinds — pears — are at a greater risk to find suitable seating.

I know I need to lose weight. Nobody should look this way. But in my book, nutritionists and dieticians are no better than politicians. You can't trust them.

It wasn't too many years ago, we were encouraged to drink lots of whole milk. It was supposed to build strong bones, strong teeth, strong bodies. Now, they say drink only fat free milk — and in extreme moderation.

Eggs used to be healthy. Now they are like little hand grenades, waiting to go off inside you.

I read two reports on the same subject by different authors less than a week ago. One said that children, left to fend for themselves, will basically choose a suitable diet. The other said that parents must constantly supervise their children's dietary habits, lest they turn into junk food junkies.

When the experts don't agree, to who do you turn? I've never trusted those tests they run on lab mice. You know, the ones where they cram 10 tablets of sugar substitute down a 3-ounce mouse each day for a year and then have the gall to say, "Yep, just as we thought. This stuff is bad for you."

The day they show me reports that they served a bunch of mice mouse-sized portions of barbecue, baked beans, potato salad and a cold one or two for a year and they dropped dead, then I'll sit up and listen.

In the meantime, I think I'll contemplate the existence of the bottom of my navel.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

Last night I called my bubba, Bob (who lives in Arlington), for the first time in two years and said simply, "This is Deanie." Immediately he shouted my name with great joy, and when I asked if my whole family could sleep over at his house after visiting Six Flags next month, he was so excited with the idea that he promptly decided to take off work, grab his wife and two kids, and join us. Since Bob owns his own business and lives in a beautiful four-bedroom house, I knew it was a done deal before I even called. That's just the way it is with bubbas.

Perhaps I'd better define the term "bubba." A bubba is a male friend who hangs out with in high school but does not date. A bubba might call her on a Saturday afternoon — late — and say, "I couldn't get a date for the party. Wanna go?" Sometimes girls get dates for bubbas and vice versa, and they double. But most of the time they just run around and do wild and crazy things that they never tell anybody about.

I had a number of precious bubbas in school, and grew so close to their families that I inherited a few extra mamas, too. In fact, right before I called Bob, I had a message on my answering machine from "Mama Reams." In college, I continued the practice. Not that I didn't date, or the bubbas didn't date. We'd just get together and commiserate when one of the other of us got dumped on. And when I got around to picking a life-mate, the first criteria was that jealousy was out of the question. This person needed to understand that I had male friends who were dear to me but were in no way a threat to our relationship. (And when I married him, and we'd travel "back home" for a visit, he'd cart me around to see them all.) Eventually we all married, and all the wives and bubbas and me and Kent can be seen prominently at reunion time, gathered around several tables pushed together, doing wild and crazy things that we don't tell anybody about.

By the time I moved to Snyder, I was a proper married lady, but I've still made many dear male friends whose friendship and support I cherish (and whose wives I also adore). One such friend, Robby, is ten years younger and still single. He's off in the Big City now, but he calls me about once a month and we have a great time insulting each other. He says he's never had a big sister before, and I've never had a little brother, so that makes him an automatic bubba. I got him through a particularly rocky relationship once, and he got me through a black time when I didn't think I could handle any more rejection and hovered on the brink of quitting writing altogether. That makes his friendship particularly valuable.

A couple of years ago, there was a hit movie called, "When Harry Met Sally." When Billy Crystal's character was college-aged, he asserted that, "Men and women cannot be friends together because the sex thing will always get in the way." Ridiculous.

I think Bob would agree. Maybe I'll tell him about it when we're at Six Flags, doing wild and crazy things we won't tell anybody about.

SDN Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the many people that were involved with the Fourth of July celebration this year. Most people don't realize the effort it takes to put on a production like the chamber of commerce does every year.

I'm afraid I'm going to take up the whole editorial page of the Sunday edition of the Snyder Daily News, but there were so many people who helped me with this deal, I feel like I need to thank them. And this will be a lot better than hearing from Leland.

I'll start by thanking the members of the July 4th Celebration Committee: Betty House, Nelda Huddleston, Marilyn Graves, Bill and Billie Jackson, Max von Roeder, Donna Gray and Norma Miller. Marilyn Graves got together the musical entertainment in the cottonwood flats area and the horseshoe pitching contest. Bill and Billie Jackson put together the best parade this side of the Desert Storm Parade in New York City. Max von Roeder did an excellent job with the morning prayer breakfast which was catered by McDonald's. Norma Miller was responsible for the novelties that were sold on the day of the Fourth. And I really don't know what Donna Gray was responsible for, but she was at all the meetings and she helped with everything.

Betty and Nelda were the ramrods of the Arts and Crafts Fair. They had been working on that thing since July of 1990, so you can see the effort that they put in on it. There were some individuals that were upset about the one dollar admission fee to get into the fair, but folks, we spent over $5,000 for the fireworks, and since I didn't win the Publisher's Clearinghouse Sweepstakes this year, I didn't have the money to pay for it all myself. The fee was used to defray the cost of the fireworks show.

While I'm addressing the fireworks show, I'll thank the many businesses in Snyder that contributed money for them. They are too numerous to name individually, but they know who they are. Being an independent businessman myself, I know how often they are hit upon to donate money for every special interest in the country. So thanks, guys.

Jackie Hall at Snyder National Bank and Bobby Beard and West Texas State Bank were instrumental in contacting these fine businesses for their pledges. Bobby said he called and talked until his ears were blue, so I know how hard they worked.

Once again this year, Terry Butler discharged the fireworks for us. As always, he did a commendable job. This is probably the most dangerous job on the Fourth of July. While the rest of us have only to worry about a sunburn, Terry and his crew have to worry about losing an arm or an eye. I helped him a couple of years ago, and believe me, it's scary. Eddie Williams dug the holes and ditches for the fireworks. Thanks to those guys.

There were many people who helped with the door of the Arts and Crafts Fair. Among them were the Gold Coaters, the Sparklers, Missy Doty and Pat Cain. Sergeant Jess Pierson needs to be commended for having the National Guard Armory ready for the fair. And when it was all over, Bud House and Sgt. Pierson pitched in to clean it up. Also helping with the cleanup were Kevin McGinnis, Jackson Brewster and Mike Dennis. There was an electric company crew that hung the banner and flags at the entrance to Towle Park. I don't know their names, but thanks anyway.

I need to thank Rudy Garza and the Snyder Jaycees for running the fishing rodeo again this year. And I want to thank the media here in Snyder. They did an excellent job covering the affair before, during and after the event. Thanks, too, to the people who work in the park on the Fourth. They work extremely hard picking up after people like myself who can't seem to find a litter barrel after drinking a coke or eating a hotdog. Thanks to you.

I think the people who worked the hardest on this deal are the three individuals at the chamber: Ricky Fritz, Trisha McCasland and Sandra Morin. They were always willing to do anything, at any time, for anyone. It seems that we have had problems at our chamber for awhile and Ricky was fairly new at the job, but he stepped in with both feet running and did a great job. I only hope that the right people realize we finally have someone who is willing to work at this job and get our town rolling in the right direction. Thank you Ricky, Trisha and Sandra.

I know I've probably left someone out and if I have, I'm sorry, but as you can tell, there were many people involved. My biggest thank you goes to my wife Joan, and kids Lindsey, Stacey and Dylan, for putting up with my not being with them on one of

Bosley chose acting
 NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Bosley says he really wanted to be a sports announcer, until he decided 30 years ago that acting would be easier.
 "I found that the competition to be a sports announcer was much too difficult," Bosley said in Sunday's issue of Parade magazine. "I thought acting was probably a better way to go."

William Kellogg formed the Battle Creek Cornflake Co. to make a breakfast cereal he had invented for people suffering from mental disorders.

U.N.'s peacekeeping role considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Everybody, with the possible exception of Saddam Hussein, seems to like the United Nations these days, and it's becoming increasingly fashionable to suggest that the world body play a more assertive peacekeeping role.
 The leaders of the seven major industrialized nations jumped on the bandwagon this week with a call for what amounts to a U.N.-directed early warning system aimed at heading off international conflicts before they start.
 The hope now, following the decisive U.N. role in the liberation of Kuwait from Iraq, is that when a predatory country is poised to take over a smaller neighbor, the United Nations will be there to nip the threat in the bud.
 This approach is heartily endorsed by Brian Urquhart, a former high-ranking diplomatic troubleshooter with the United Nations and an authority on international conflict.
 But he wonders whether the United Nations will ever be able to work in concert again the way it did in the Persian Gulf. Urquhart, now with the Ford Foundation in New York, believes the Gulf War may have been a one-of-a-kind conflict.

None of the five permanent Security Council members had an especially close relationship with Iraq and none wished to be seen coming to its defense, given the brazenness of Saddam's aggression. All of this helped facilitate the creation of an international consensus to reverse the Iraqi takeover of Kuwait.
 There is some basis for Urquhart's skepticism about the ability of the U.N. to demonstrate the same type of cohesion that it displayed in the gulf.
 As an example, there are a lot of other conflicts in which one or more of the permanent five Security Council members would be less eager for the U.N. to play an activist role than they were in the gulf.
 Can anyone imagine China allowing the United Nations to come to the rescue of, say, Tibet? Would the Soviets refrain from vetoing a U.N. move to spare the Baltics from continued Kremlin domination?

 It's hard to imagine Britain sitting idly by while the United Nations tries to dictate terms in Northern Ireland. As for the United States, the American military didn't bother to get a permission slip from the United Nations before invading Grenada in 1983 and Panama in 1989, not to mention bombing Libya in 1986.
 Still, Urquhart, who served as U.N. undersecretary for special political affairs, thinks the organization should be prepared to come to the aid of small countries under threat despite the obstacles.
 "If would-be aggressors knew what was going to happen to them, it would be a most useful measure," Urquhart told a reporter.

 The leaders who met at the economic summit this week in London agreed, asserting that a "revitalized United Nations will have a central role in strengthening the international order."

Hughes and Ketcham team for film

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Hughes, who gave the world the forgotten-kid comedy "Home Alone," is teaming up with "Dennis the Menace" creator Hank Ketcham to bring Dennis to the big screen.
 Warner Bros. announced Thursday that Hughes and Ketcham would work together on the movie about the youngster who drives his neighbor Mr. Wilson nuts. The studio did not say who might play Dennis or Mr. Wilson.
 Hughes said he was reluctant to take on the project at first, fearing a "Dennis the Menace" movie might be too much like "Home Alone." But he said his meetings with Ketcham convinced him that wouldn't be the case.

 "Home Alone" is about an unusual situation, and Dennis is about a character and his childish view of the world and an antagonistic relationship with this old retired man," Hughes said.

Co-dependency undermines self-esteem

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is there a definition of co-dependency? I'm married to a person who has to have the approval of everyone, even to the detriment of his family, health and morals. And I'm stuck with him.

DEAR READER: Co-dependency is a relatively new concept that was first articulated in the 1970s and is now receiving a lot of attention because it is far more common than previously suspected.

Co-dependency is difficult to define; it seems to mean different things to different people. However, in a few words, it is a mental attitude learned in childhood, marked by poor self-esteem, denial of feelings, lack of trust, an obsession to control other people and a need for approval from and acceptance by others.

This attitude is unhealthy. It causes us to focus on other people's needs and desires, in preference to our own, leading to unsatisfactory — sometimes harmful — relations from which we have trouble extracting ourselves. The co-dependent puts up with a great deal of emotional pain and suffering in order to maintain this unhealthy attitude, out of fear that change itself may prove more painful than the co-dependency. Co-dependents often are attracted to alcoholics or individuals who abuse drugs.

People who suffer from co-dependency can obtain help from support groups, such as Co-Dependents Anonymous, a 12-step program modeled after Alcoholics Anonymous. CoDA lists the following statements that characterize the co-dependent personality:

I have difficulty identifying what I am feeling.

I minimize, alter or deny how I truly feel.

I perceive myself as completely unselfish and dedicated to the well-being of others.

I have difficulty making decisions. I judge everything I think, say or do harshly, as never "good enough."

I am embarrassed to receive recognition and praise as gifts.

I do not ask others to meet my needs or desires.

I value others' approval of my thinking, feelings and behavior over my own.

I do not perceive myself as a lovable or worthwhile person.

I compromise my own values and integrity to avoid rejection or others' anger.

I am very sensitive to how others are feeling and feel the same.

I am extremely loyal, remaining in harmful situations too long.

I value others' opinions and feelings more than my own and am often afraid to express differing opinions and feelings.

I put aside my own interests and hobbies in order to do what others want.

I accept sex when I want love.

I believe most other people are incapable of taking care of themselves.

I attempt to convince others of what they "should" think and how they "truly" feel.

I become resentful when others will not let me help them.

I freely offer others advice and directions without being asked.

I lavish gifts and favors on those I care about.

I use sex to gain approval and acceptance.

I have to be "needed" in order to have a relationship with others.

To counteract these negative attitudes, CoDA resources help co-dependents to forgive, accept and love themselves, thereby establishing a much-needed balance and harmony in their lives.

For more information, I suggest you read two books by Melody Beattie, both published in paperback by Harper & Row: "Codependent No More" and "Beyond Codependency."

From the sound of your question, you may have some work to do making your own attitudes healthier. Also, you can write Co-Dependents Anonymous at P.O. Box 33577 in Phoenix, AZ 85067 to discover the location of CoDA support groups in your area.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have what appears to be a hundred questions about Buerger's disease. Can you answer some of them such as medication for control, symptoms, what causes it and my prognosis?

DEAR READER: Buerger's disease (thromboangiitis obliterans) is an arterial disorder, primarily affecting men, marked by progressive circulatory deficiency. The cause of the disorder is unknown, but it is seen almost exclusively in cigarette smokers.

The disease begins gradually as inflammation of the lining of the arteries and veins, which causes blood clots (thrombi) to form, thus progressively blocking the blood vessels. Patients usually experience coldness, numbness and pain in the extremities, leading to death of tissue (gangrene) and ulceration of overlying skin. Fingers and toes tingle and turn blue. Arterial pulsations are diminished or absent.

The disease progresses proximally, meaning that arms and legs are eventually affected.

The diagnosis is confirmed by arteriography, special X-ray studies of the arteries showing multiple blockages of small and medium-sized arteries.

In the treatment of Buerger's disease, factors that reduce blood supply must be corrected.

Therefore, patients must stop smoking, stay warm and avoid injury to tissues (from chemicals such as iodine, infection, tightly fitting footwear, and minor trauma). In the early stages, patients are encouraged to exercise (to stimulate circulation); however, in severe cases, bed rest may be necessary. Hands and feet may need protection with bandages and foam-rubber booties.

Drugs, such as calcium-channel blockers, may improve circulation, but other medications, such as cortisone (to reduce inflammation) and anticoagulants (to prevent thromboses) are not effective. In some cases, nerve surgery (to prevent arterial constriction) and amputation may be required to save life. Surgery, such as bypass grafting to improve circulation, is almost never helpful.

In short, Buerger's disease is a serious and progressive circulatory disorder that is related to cigarette smoking. It is difficult to treat because the precise cause is not known. The prognosis varies. You should question your own physician about therapy and the techniques needed to manage this affliction.

Because Buerger's disease is a chronic ailment needing close medical supervision, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Insuring Your Good Health." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

Sylvester Stallone got apology and settlement

LONDON (AP) — Sylvester Stallone got an apology and an undisclosed sum in a settlement of a lawsuit against a magazine that had reported the "Rambo" star evaded military service during the Vietnam War.

Stallone, 45, says he tried to enlist during the war but was turned down because of a bad ear.

Authenticity of reputed MIA photo may never be resolved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon says it may never be able to determine for sure whether a photograph of three men holding a sign really shows Americans held captive since the Vietnam War or if it is a fake.

At one point Thursday, the Defense Department acknowledged that it had received a set of remains from the Vietnamese government, which said they belonged to one of the men believed to be in the picture.

By evening, though, the Pentagon issued a statement saying analysts determined a year ago that those remains were not human.

It was another twist in a mystery in which evidence mustered by the Pentagon on one side and a group of hopeful relatives on the other side rises, falls and then rises again.

Families of Air Force Col. John Leighton Robertson, Air Force Maj. Albro Lynn Lundy Jr. and Navy Lt. Larry James Stevens say they are the three men standing in a grainy photograph derived from an unknown source claiming to prove that they are alive.

All three were declared killed in action while flying missions in Southeast Asia in the late 1960s, but their bodies were not recovered, the Pentagon said.

Intelligence analysts have studied the photograph for months, and the results are inconclusive.

"We may never have a very definitive view of that picture, but that certainly isn't preventing us from giving it the best analysis that we can or treating it very seriously because the family members in question feel so strongly that the picture is pictures of — is images of their relatives," Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said.

"We take very seriously any report about the possibility that there might still be Americans in Southeast Asia," Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said in an interview Thursday with The Associated Press.

"We have to check out every single report, and we will this time, too," he said.

The picture shows three men holding a sign. Bright sunlight has cast shadows on two of the men's faces and, coupled with the poor quality of the photograph, it is difficult to see them clearly.

The lettering on the sign and the men's style of clothing do not appear to be American. Even the sign's message is a mystery. It says "Photo LD-25-5-1990 NNTK! K.B.E. 19."

The first three numbers on the sign may mean "May 25, 1990." That would date the picture a month after Vietnam handed over remains it says were Robertson's.

Killer bees said likely to become more docile

WASHINGTON (AP) — Africanized bees are likely to become more docile as they migrate north and breed with their European cousins maintained by beekeepers, a scientific journal reported Friday.

That bodes well for American agriculture, which keeps bees for honey production and to pollinate crops, a research team from the Department of Agriculture wrote in the journal Science.

The so-called "killer" bees, so named because they launch massive stinging attacks against intruders, were introduced into Brazil from Africa accidentally by a scientist in the late 1950s. Since then they have spread from Argentina to southern Texas.

People worry about them because they can sting in sufficient numbers to kill a human or even animals as large as horses.

More than 600 deaths, most in South America, have been attributed to the aggressive bees. At least 200 swarms have been detected in South Texas, where one man was stung 18 times last May. He survived.

Most honeybees in this part of the world are European bees and are considered docile. The are also better at making honey and pollinating plants.

The team studied what happened when these Africanized honeybees encountered their first large concentration of European bees, which happened in Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula.

"The peninsula has the largest concentration of commercial colonies of honeybees in the world," the research team wrote.

The study found that when European bees are present in overwhelming numbers, later generations of cross-breeds tend to resemble the Europeans.

"This hybridization will presumably produce bees more desirable for commercial applications ... and less likely to cause public health problems," the researchers wrote.

Astrographs by Bernice-Bede Osoi

July 20, 1991
 Your possibilities for accumulating a financial surplus by year's end look rather good. However, what you gain isn't likely to be made through investments.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't come on too strong today with individuals of lesser financial means; someone might jockey you into an awkward position where you'll either have to pay the tab or end up looking like a bad guy. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your probabilities for fulfilling your expectations look good today, but this might be due more to the efforts of others than to you. Don't take credit you don't deserve.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Usually, you're rather good at keeping secrets, but today this could be your Achilles' heel. You won't intentionally betray a confidence, but you could do so inadvertently.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A business matter in which you're involved might not live up to your expectations today; you may throw only a few light jobs when a knockout punch is required.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're not likely to have too much trouble in accurately assessing today's developments. Problems could enter the picture, however, through the impractical measures you use to respond.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It's best not to let anyone unfamiliar with your affairs give you advice today. While it might sound good, it's not apt to fit your circumstances.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A firm you've been doing business with for quite some time might offer you a deal today that is not on par with others you could get. Don't feel obligated to take it.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You're in a very strong bargaining position today, but this might be more obvious to others than it is to you. It's not up to you to make concessions; it's up to the other guy.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Guard against the tendency today to take strong positions on issues about which you are not fully informed. A sharp opponent could tear your arguments to shreds.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) This is one of those unusual days when you may create complications for yourself and others through expressing what you believe to be good intentions. Think before you act.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You are not going to be able to placate everyone today in an arrangement that involves several others. In fact, if you try, you may take a course that will end up pleasing no one.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your ability to handle worldly concerns is rather good today, but your grades might not be as high in areas where you have to deal with esthetic values.

Recession has different faces

NEW YORK (AP) — Ask an economist and you might be told this has been a mild recession. Ask a wage-earner and you might hear that the recession has been an extremely painful one. Differences of opinion about recessions aren't rare, because people are affected in various ways. But this time, opinions

Continental abandons plan to increase fares

HOUSTON (AP) — Continental Airlines has dumped a plan to increase domestic fares after other U.S. carriers failed to match the increase.

The Houston-based carrier began including a 5 percent increase in fares on tickets purchased since the July Fourth weekend for travel beginning July 24 and thereafter.

"We have gone ahead and made a decision for competitive reasons not to put that fare action in place," Continental spokesman Ned Walker said Thursday. "There will be no fare increases."

Continental officials had said the boost was an attempt to bring revenues in line with expenses. Officials changed the plan on Tuesday.

Generally, fare increases don't work unless the entire industry goes along because any carrier that goes out on a limb with higher prices would run the risk of sharp drops in traffic.

When the Continental fare increase was publicized, Pan American World Airways was the only carrier to go along with the hike. But it backed off the increase earlier this week.

Continental said Thursday that it is reducing some fares in the Northeast. Walker said some current max-saver fares to several Northeastern cities would be reduced by up to 40 percent for passengers ticketed by July 25.

Continental filed for protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code in December. The airlines cited the effects of a sluggish economy, high fuel prices in the wake of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait and the related drop in the number of passengers.

seemed split into two vast groups who see things entirely differently.

In the first group are those who study impersonal indicators, such as the decline in gross national product. Prominent in this group are economists. In the second are all those people whose finances have been affected directly.

For millions of Americans in the second group the stress on personal finances has been especially great in this recession. Close to 2 million jobs were lost. Savings were depleted. Debt piled up. Bankruptcies rose.

The loss of jobs and income was especially painful for several reasons that never existed to the same extent in earlier recessions.

First, most people had forgotten that layoffs could occur. During the expansion that began near the end of 1982 to the beginning of this recession, the economy had created more than 22 million new jobs.

Even those with the least skills found jobs. Some were trained through in-house programs and advanced quickly into higher-paying jobs, especially in the swift-growing service industries. Job security was high.

Deterioration of the job market was swift and profound. The impact has been greater even than the number of jobs lost might suggest. As always, the least skilled were hurt badly, but so were some of the most highly paid.

Many of the highly paid ones held white-collar positions in finance, banking, securities and middle management, once somewhat insulated from downturns. Thousands of the jobs lost weren't mere layoffs, either; they were eliminations.

In most postwar recessions the jobless totals were swelled by blue-collar layoffs. While losing such jobs was painful to those involved, layoffs often were expected and prepared for. Recovery would mean rehiring.

In earlier recoveries, construction industries were among the fastest regainers of jobs. These days, that industry has oversupply problems that transcend the economic cycle.

Idle white-collar workers have still another special problem. After so many years of easy money many of them weren't prepared for unemployment. Such fate befell others, but not the well-paid executive.

Why they were unprepared isn't likely to elicit great sympathy, but their plight is painful. Many must begin anew, quite likely at lower levels.

These are among the reasons why millions of people find it hard to understand those who measure recessions by the statistical impact on the economic cycle rather than in more personal terms.

In its impact on the job markets, this was indeed a serious recession. From gains at the rate of 2.5 million additional jobs a year, the employment picture turned negative at almost the same rate.

A Dun & Bradstreet survey of 5,000 companies suggests that improvement will be slow to come. It is likely, according to D&B, that the jobs lost during the recession will not be recouped until well into 1992, at the earliest.
