Absentee balloting set to start

Absentee voting in three local board elections begins Monday — elections which may see an apathetic voter turnout due to a lack of contested races.

Place 2 on the Western Texas College board of trustees is the only contested position out of nine local board seats to be filled in the upcoming May 5 elections.

Absentee voting will be held during regular working hours at the respective offices of entities holding the elections — Snyder Independent School District administration building, WTC administration building and City Hall. Absentee voting will extend through May 2.

The positions to be filled include two on the Western Texas College board, four on the city council and three on the school board.

Carl Williams and William R. "Bill" Hibbs are opponents for Place 2 on the college board, seeking to replace incumbent Roy Baze.

Baze is not seeking another term.

The only other position up for election on the college board is Place 1, and as in the case of most of the local seats, the only person filing was incumbent Bill Wilson Jr., board president.

Incumbents are also the only ones to run for four places on the Snyder City Council. Seeking re-election are Ernest Tippens, District 1; Ralph Williamson, District 2; Joe Coronado, District 3; and Jack K. "Jackie" Greene Jr., District 4.

Two incumbents are running for another term on the Snyder (See ABSENTEE, page 15A)

Area schools ready for board elections

Ira and Hermleigh schools will bring out the ballot boxes Tuesday for the start of absentee voting in the May 5 school board elections.

Both schools will be closed Monday as they celebrate Easter holidays.

Absentee voting will continue through May 2. Voting will take place in the Ira and Hermleigh administration offices.

Two of three places to be filled on the Ira school board are contested while two at-large positions on the Hermleigh board are being sought by four individuals.

Local man receives 12-year TDJC term

A 21-year-old Snyder man has pleaded guilty in a recent wrecking yard burglary case and has received a 12-year sentence in the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

Billy J. Collins of 1205 Dorsey Ave. entered his plea before District Judge Gene L. Dulaney in connection with a March 27 break-in at McClurg Auto Parts on the Old Lubbock Hwy. in northern Snyder.

Cogdell secures pharmacy pact

Cogdell Memorial Hospital has secured a contract to provide pharmaceutical services to the 2,250-bed Clements maximum security prison which opened last Monday in Amarillo.

Tom Hochwalt, Cogdell administrator, said the bid was based on an estimated 24,000 prescriptions annually and is expected to produce gross revenues to the hospital of approximately $250,000.

In a noon hospital board meeting, Hochwalt said the contract was awarded by the Texas Department of Criminal Justice in conjunction with the Texas Tech medical school. Cogdell's was the best offer among competitive bids which also involved Amarillo area pharmaceutical suppliers.

"It was through the initiative of Larry Hall, director of pharmacy for Cogdell, and his staff that we were awarded this contract," the administrator said.

Cogdell already provides pharmacy service for the Price Daniel unit in Snyder and has a computer already interfaced with TDJC units throughout the state. Hochwalt said Cogdell so far has been able to provide the added service without any increase in pharmacy staff or additional equipment.

Hochwalt said the new revenue will equal what 10 extra patients a day in the hospital's long-term care unit would produce, and board member Bill Wilson III suggested that Cogdell might seek a similar arrangement with the new prisons being planned at Childress and Abilene.

Other business included the approval of medical staff privileges for 21 emergency room physicians who will be working here under the hospital's contract with Southwest Medical Associates of Rockport.

The hospital now contracts with the firm to provide 24-hour emergency room coverage six days per week.

The noon meeting was attended by board members Jackie Smith, Roy McQueen, Jim Palmer, Wilson, G.A. Parks Jr. and County Auditor Linda Franklin. Board member Brenda Hedges was absent.

City urging residents to use water efficiently

The City of Snyder Utility Department is mailing out water conservation information to water customers this month.

"Water conservation — the more efficient use of the state's water — is vital if Texas is to provide adequate future water supplies to meet the needs of its citizens," a department spokesman noted.

Projections indicate water use may reach 22.7 billion gallons a day by the year 2000 and 27.1 billion gallons a day by the year 2030, if conservation is not practiced.

The firm yield of the existing major reservoirs in Texas is approximately 9.8 billion gallons a day, and the average annual recharge rate of the state's aquifers is approximately 4.6 billion gallons a day. Thus, according to the department, the state's replenishable conventional water supply for use during drought periods is 14.4 billion gallons a day.

The construction of new surface water reservoirs will potentially add another 4.3 to 4.6 billion gallons a day to the state's water (See WATER, page 15A)

The feller on Deep Creek says, "April 15 is a day when blanks can kill."

It's that time when taxpayers have to "come clean" with the Internal Revenue Service. It may be more difficult than you think.

Long past is the day when a wage earner can simply put down a few numbers, write a check and make Uncle Sam happy for another year.

Most Americans depend on professionals, but a recent survey by a financial magazine does little to relieve the anxiety that most taxpayers feel at this time of year.

In the experiment, 50 tax practitioners worked a tax return for a hypothetical family. The results were even worse than a similar survey a year ago.

Tax professionals showed the fictitious family owing the IRS anywhere from $12,539 to $35,813.

The correct amount was $23,393.

In the survey mistakes included basic rules as who qualified as a dependent. Preparers spent from four to 20 hours on the 23-form return.

The hypothetical family was a husband-wife who earned $56,400 in wages last year. Both received lump-sum distributions from their pension plan and they had begun their own businesses. Investments included a second home and a master limited partnership.

But don't heap too much scorn on the professionals. The IRS's own tax assistance hotline didn't fare much better. The same test of the IRS tax hotline revealed that callers got the wrong answer 41 percent of the time.

One guy described the IRS this way: "It's a place where the sign reads, 'Watch your step' going in and 'Watch your language' going out."

Q—What are the dates for the state high school baseball and track meets?

A—The UIL state track meets in all classes will be held May 10-12, as will the golf and tennis meets. The baseball tournaments are scheduled for June 7-8. All of the events will be held in Austin.

Happy Easter!

Arrest 4 spies

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — Officials arrested four people this month as spies for the East, and a national magazine said Friday one is a bigger catch than the communist spy who forced the 1974 resignation of Chancellor Willy Brandt.

Last week, Heinz-Helmuth Werner, 45, a cipher clerk at West Germany's NATO mission in Brussels, was arrested and an unidentified 38-year-old engineer suspected of working for the Soviet KGB was jailed in southern West Germany.

McDonald's warns papers against critical ad

CHICAGO (AP) — Big Mac is on the attack, warning newspapers around the country that the fast-food giant would consider it a "malicious act" to reprint an advertisement claiming McDonald's food is too fatty.

"We think the papers just didn't check the facts," said McDonald's attorney Joseph Califano, who wouldn't rule out a lawsuit if the ad is published again. He said the company had advised the newspapers that the ad was misleading.

"Now they know the facts, now they are all on notice. ... To publish anything like that ad would be a malicious act," said Califano, who was secretary of health, education and welfare in the Carter administration.

The fat flap began April 4, when Phil Sokolof, an Omaha, Neb., industrialist and anti-cholesterol crusader, placed ads in The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal and several other papers.

"McDonald's, Your Hamburgers Have Too Much Fat!" proclaimed the ad, which went on to ask McDonald's to reduce the fat in its hamburgers by 10 percent as a "contribution toward lowering cholesterol levels for Americans."

McDonald's said Friday the ad was riddled with error and said it had asked the papers that published it not to do so again.

"Just about everything in the ad except the spelling of McDonald's was inaccurate," said Chuck Ebeling, a spokesman for the Oak Brook, Ill.-based fast food giant.

"The assertion of the ad, the poisoning of America, is an outrageous lie that we don't think any responsible publication should have published," Ebeling said.

Sokolof, reached in Omaha, said McDonald's was putting up a smoke screen and that the ad was a public service.

"McDonald's has chosen to try and intimidate the nation's leading newspapers," said Sokolof, who blames a bad diet for a heart attack he suffered years ago.

Ebeling said the ad "blatantly overstated" the saturated fat content of McDonald's products, including an assertion that McDonald's hamburger meat is 21.5 percent fat before cooking. He said it's more like 19.5 percent.

Survey planned for input into campus improvements

Snyder High School is currently in the process of writing a campus improvement plan. "We are very interested in what our parents, students and community think of our school," Rueben Gillespie, principal, said. "We will be surveying the students on Monday through the English classes. Each student will also be given a form to take to his/her parents."

All parents are asked to fill out this form and have the student return it to the high school. "We need everyone's input to be able to devise a plan that will reflect the wishes of the entire community," Gillespie said.

Persons in the community who do not have students in the high school, but still want to express an opinion may pick up a form in the high school office.

Neville Chamberlain became prime minister of Britain in 1937.

SCIENCE FAIR WINNERS—These four students were named the top winners in a science fair held at the junior high. This school year, for the first time, students entered the science fair on a voluntary basis only. From left are, Josh Palmer, seventh grader, first place in physical science; Amy Patterson, seventh grader; first place in biology; Marc Sparlin, seventh grader, second place in physical science; and Shannon Canada, eighth grader, second place in biology. Palmer's experiment concerned how shapes of parachutes affect their rates of descent. Patterson's concerned the effect of temperature and various carbohydrate nutrients on the growth rate of yeast. Sparlin's was about the effects of temperature on the bounce of a tennis ball. Canada's was about the environmental effects on plastic. (SDN Staff Photo)

However, an official of a Washington, D.C.-based consumer advocacy group, the Center for Science in the Public Interest, said either way, the saturated fat levels in fast food are too high.

"To me, the important part is that the general thrust of the ad was correct," said nutrition director Bonnie Liebman. "Many of the foods served at McDonald's are loaded with saturated fat and cholesterol and eating less would reduce heart disease, the nation's largest killer."

"A 10 percent reduction would still leave us with pretty fatty sandwiches, but it's a start," she said.

Trump wants drugs legalized

MIAMI (AP) — Billionaire New York developer Donald Trump thinks the only way to win the war against drug barons is to legalize narcotics.

"We're losing badly the war on drugs," Trump told a Miami Herald luncheon Friday. "You have to legalize drugs to win that war. You have to take the profit away from these drug czars."

Guarantee program said suspended

WASHINGTON (AP) — A billion-dollar credit program that allows Iraq to buy U.S. farm commodities has been suspended until the Agriculture Department completes an investigation of possible financial irregularities, officials said Friday.

Undersecretary Richard T. Crowder, who oversees international affairs and commodity programs, said in a brief statement that the department "is continuing its administrative review, begun several months ago, into transactions relating to past (credit) programs with Iraq."

Crowder said Iraqi authorities are cooperating in the investigation and that a U.S. team will be in Baghdad soon to continue the discussions.

Meanwhile, he said, additional commitments of export credits "will await the conclusion of this administrative review."

The action involves the Export Credit Guarantee Program, which provides short-term credit guarantees for up to three years. The government does not lend any money but acts as a back-up for exporters and commercial banks.

Kelly Shipp, press secretary for Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter, said the departmental team plans to be in Iraq next week. She said the irregularities appear to involve pricing and shipping procedures. She did not offer specifics.

For the current fiscal year that began last Oct. 1, Iraq was allocated a credit line of $1 billion, she said. Only $500 million has been used, and the rest is being held up until the investigation is completed.

Shipp said the investigation began last October and has nothing to do with another snarl of financial problems involving Iraq's credit operation with Banca Nazionale del Lavoro, or BNL, in Rome.

In that case, BNL's branch in Atlanta, Ga., allegedly ran up a $3 billion credit exposure with Iraq, Italy's Treasury Minister Guido Carli said last September.

Local pastor, wife return from Soviet Union

Volunteers distribute Bibles among Soviets

By MISSY TRULL
SDN Staff Reporter

Sometimes it takes a trip across the world to discount a view you have held most of your life. It did for First Baptist Pastor Don Taylor.

Taylor and his wife, Jean, recently returned from a mission trip to the Soviet Union sponsored by the First Baptist congregation. While there Taylor discovered that the Soviet people are "just like you and me." He admits that this might seem a trivial observation, however, for Taylor, it was more like a breakthrough.

"I had grown up believing that Communists were bad... we were the good guys and they were the bad guys," Taylor said.

For Taylor, it brought to reality "that Christ died for all people and not just middle America."

The Taylors went to the Soviet Union to distribute Bibles. They traveled with 42 other mission-minded people from a variety of denominations. Each traveler took 100 Bibles into the Communist country.

Taylor was impressed with the people's openness to religion. "Those people are looking for something to put purpose in their lives. Communism isn't doing it. They are looking for hope."

Maybe the Soviet people discovered hope when they saw Taylor passing out Bibles in front of Moscow Baptist Church. They were so eager to get a Bible that a mob soon overwhelmed him. "I didn't try that again. From then on I left that (Bible distribution) to the churches."

The government is relaxing its staunch stand on religion. They have given a church to the Leningrad congregation and a deadline in which to refurbish it. If the work on the church is finished on time, then the government will turn over 100 more churches. According to Taylor, the Southern Baptist Association has committed $120,000 and will send work teams this summer to help the Soviets complete the project on time.

Taylor said that at one time churches in Russia had to be registered. The KGB would infiltrate the church and members of that congregation would find themselves lower on government lists such as housing. In one church he visited, half of the members had been imprisoned at one time or another. The pastor had been jailed for teaching children about God which is against Soviet law.

"The people were full of dedication and commitment. They possessed a spiritual quality that is the product of religious persecution, oppression and intolerance. It was inspiring to worship with these people."

While worshipping at First Baptist Moscow, Taylor was moved by the number of people who crowded inside the church. "Every pew was full. People were standing two-abreast in the aisles. There were people standing in the foyer as far as I could see. There were old women standing. It stayed like that during the entire 2½ hour service. There are three services every Sunday. When I was leaving there were always people gathering inside for the next service."

The community of believers is growing at an accelerated pace as seen in the Leningrad church where last October its members numbered only 80. Now they boast a membership of 1,500 that grows by 5 to 20 every week.

Taylor sees this as a "golden opportunity." "It's important that we as a church respond. There is a vacuum here and we need to fill the void." Taylor wants to fill the void before false religions have the opportunity.

Taylor described the trip as the "opportunity of a lifetime," made possible by the church, and through his experience he gained a better appreciation for his own country. He said the Soviet Union is a beautiful country full of history and heritage. (While there, he took over 300 photographs of the history and heritage.) While Americans think of an old building as being 150 years old, on his trip, Taylor had the opportunity to stand in the middle of a 1,000-year-old cathedral.

Taylor and the group traveled as official guests of the government although they never met with any government officials.

He and his family have been with the First Baptist congregation since October. The Taylors have three children Betsy, 16, Amy, 14, and Cameron, 12.

Renewable energy projects named

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements announced Friday that his Energy Management Center has chosen 17 Texas projects to demonstrate practical, economic ways to use renewable energy technology.

Solar water heating for a San Antonio hospital, a wind-powered drip irrigation system in Laredo and photovoltaic-powered emergency telephones on remote Panhandle highways are among the projects.

Photovoltaic cells are silicon cells that convert sunlight to electricity.

The projects were selected in the first cycle of the $4.5 million alternative energy program established by the Texas Legislature. The cost is paid in part by oil overcharge funds, which were returned to the state in the settlement of a case involving oil company pricing violations between 1973 and 1981.

The projects and their contractors are:

- Austin: Photovoltaic projects involving a youth hostel, low-income housing and traffic control signals; City of Austin Electric Utility.
- Austin: 3M Center Photovoltaic Project, 3M Co.
- Bryan, Brazos County: Photovoltaic farm applications project, Southwest Photovoltaic Systems, Inc.
- Canyon, Randall County: Alternative Energy Institute demonstration project, West Texas State University.
- Cedar Creek Lake, Henderson County: Solar-electric navigational aids, Don's Port Marina.
- Corpus Christi: Collier Municipal Swimming Pool heating, Corpus Christi Parks and Recreation Department.
- Dallas: Dallas Zoo project demonstrating solar technology, including evaporative cooling roof spray systems on the cat cages, large mammal house and primate house and nursery; Dallas Parks and Recreation Department.

— El Paso: El Paso-Trans Pecos passive solar residence retrofit, University of Texas at El Paso.

— Fort Bend County: Solar water pump for livestock tanks, Solar Contractors Inc. of Houston.

— Laredo: Wind-powered irrigation project, Center for Maximum Potential Building Systems of Austin.

— Lubbock, Waco, Farmers Branch, Austin, Big Bend National Park and other sites not yet selected: Solar-powered irrigation systems, Texas Tech University.

— Panhandle area: Photovoltaic telephone call boxes, National Alternative Energy Co.

— Pleasanton, Atascosa County: Gasification of Mesquite Wood Waste, Texas A&I University.

White House 'hopeful' of new visa policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is hoping a new 10-day visa that won't require foreigners to reveal their AIDS status will end threats of a boycott of an upcoming international conference on the disease in San Francisco.

But it was unclear whether the action will be enough to satisfy critics of U.S. immigration restrictions.

"I don't know whether they'll view this as sufficient," said June Osborn, chairwoman of the National Commission on AIDS. "But it's something we can point to and say 'Look, we're trying,' and in that I think it will be a reassuring signal to the rest of the world."

Members of Congress also said they were encouraged by the administration's action creating the new visa, announced Friday by the Immigration and Naturalization Service. But they also said the move was only a first step.

"More needs to be done," said Rep. J. Roy Rowland, D-Ga., sponsor of legislation that would clear the way for the administration to take AIDS off a list of diseases used to bar entry to the United States.

Dozens of organizations worldwide have said they will boycott the San Francisco AIDS conference in June in protest of U.S. immigration policy that restricts entry of people infected with the human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, which causes AIDS.

The World Health Organization, an arm of the United Nations, is considering whether to withdraw its co-sponsorship of the conference. Michael Merson, acting head of WHO's global program on AIDS, said from Geneva on Friday night that he could not comment until he and other officials reviewed the administration's action.

Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., said that while the new visa was "a first step," he was troubled that it would be available only for those attending certain conferences deemed by the secretary of Health and Human Services to be "in the public interest."

"Will the administration be limiting visas to censor meetings they don't approve of?" he asked.

Waxman, a co-sponsor of Rowland's bill and chairman of a House health subcommittee, said his panel will hold hearings on the legislation later this month.

Administration sources, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said the White House has no plans to support the bill, and supporters have said it has little chance to pass without such backing.

White House spokeswoman Alix Glen said it was premature for the administration to take a position on the bill.

St. Elizabeth Catholic Church...

3rd annual Sausage Festival set April 22

St. Elizabeth Catholic Church will have its third annual Sausage Festival Sunday, April 22, from 11:30 a.m. until 2:30 p.m.

All activities will be in the parish center located adjacent to the church at 3005 Avenue A. Proceeds from the festival will benefit such church projects as a college scholarship fund, the parish building fund and the purchase of classroom equipment and supplies.

The Men's Club is sponsoring the "all you can eat" homemade sausage dinner complete with all the trimmings. Besides homemade sausage, the meal will consist of beans, saurkraut, potato salad, dessert and drinks.

Tickets will be sold at the door. Adult tickets are $5 and tickets for elementary age children (first through sixth grades) are $2.50 and tickets for pre-school age children (kindergarten and under) are $1.

Takeout orders are available and homemade sausage will be sold by the pound during the festival. The cost is $2.75 per pound.

Members of the Men's Club will prepare 1,500 pounds of sausage on Friday, April 20.

The festival and dinner will also include carnival games, door prizes, raffles, and a country store.

Anyone purchasing a meal ticket will be eligible to win a door prize. Included in the door prizes will be a 35 mm camera donated by Wally Jones; a photo album donated by Lillie Rasche; a set of pens donated by Bennett Office Supply; movie passes donated by Tony Haley, manager of Cinema I and II; and a glass mirror and a window tint job for an automobile donated by G & G Glass. Friendly Flowers will also donate a door prize.

The women's Altar Society will also be drawing names for several prizes that they will be giving away. Anyone who purchases a $1 ticket will be eligible.

A few of these prizes include two afghans, donated by Muriel Mapes and Denise Gibson; a large mirror donated by Rosalinda Tovar; and six pieces of pottery made by Ty Brunson, art instructor at Western Texas College.

Leona Helmsley writes $42 million check for '89 taxes

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Convicted tax evader Leona Helmsley made out a check for $42,065,000 to the Internal Revenue Service on national television Friday to show she pays her taxes.

Mrs. Helmsley said the sum will pay off the 1989 joint personal income of her and her husband, real estate and hotel magnate Harry Helmsley.

"And we've already paid $22 million, which brings it to a gross of about $65 million for this year alone," she said.

"We paid our taxes in the past, we paid them now and we'll pay them in the future," she said. "I want the public to know that we're good Americans."

Helmsley, wearing a white blouse, black slacks, black-and-gold sandals and a gold necklace, also noted that she and her husband have given $143 million to charity. In addition, she said, they paid $29.7 million in New York city and state taxes.

Mrs. Helmsley, 69, was convicted last year of federal income tax fraud and sentenced to four years in prison, but is free on bond pending appeal. She still faces state charges that she, her husband and two former employees falsified $3 million worth of business and tax records from 1982 to 1986.

Her attorneys have asked that those charges be dismissed but the judge has not yet ruled. Mrs. Helmsley faces up to four years in state prison if convicted.

Her 80-year-old husband was found mentally incompetent to stand trial in federal court and is seeking the dismissal of state charges on the same grounds.

Mrs. Helmsley said she agreed to be videotaped by the syndicated television program "A Current Affair" while vacationing at her Harley Sandcastle hotel on Lido Key to show that she pays taxes like everyone should.

Financial Focus

A favorite question often posed by investors is, "What's the market going to do?" Other than "fluctuate," the only truthful answer is, "I don't know."

The public, however, invests millions of dollars annually on financial publications and spends hours watching programs that claim to know what the market's going to do. When financial news limits itself to what the market did, fine. When it starts predicting what it will do, beware.

An even bigger mystery are newsletters and services that peddle market timing. They promise to send subscribers a sell letter just before the market drops and a buy letter before it starts up again. You can pay extra to get a telegram so you can beat the crowd to your broker.

Granted, some services have better track records than others, but they all sell subscriptions by bragging about their most recent success. Information about their mistakes, however, is scarce.

For example, a recent article in the Investment Reporter, a professional financial publication, tells the rest of the story on two market-timing services. The services successfully warned subscribers about the possibility of the October 1987 crash. That was good. But, afterward, they continued to preach doom and gloom. That was bad. While the market recovered its 500-point drop, one service promised an even lower Dow—1500 followed by a drop of 400.

Subscribers to the other market timer are still waiting for their letters advising them to get back into the market. In essence, this timer managed to steer subscribers away from just about everything but Treasury bonds. Meanwhile, the market kept going up.

Thanks to the advice to get out, those subscribers were fortunate in avoiding the crash, but they missed the entire recovery. In addition, they had commissions to pay and probably a healthy tax bite on their capital gains.

If you haven't guessed, the point is that there is no accurate way to predict whether the stock market will go up or down—just when you think you have it figured out, you wind up zigging when you should have zagged.

Long-term investors don't buy stocks, they buy companies. The stock market is just a place where the transaction is conducted.

The stock market has always experienced periods of corrections and, undoubtedly, will continue to do so. These corrections have never caused permanent damage. In fact, the astute investor uses market corrections as buying opportunities, rather than selling frenzies. If a company is still a sound investment, why sell it during the equivalent of a "fire sale?"

Of course, few investors are confident enough to buy on a downturn. After all, they figure the market will probably go lower.

So, what's the market going to do? Since no one really knows, the best advice is to buy the stocks of a variety of blue-chip companies and let the market timers sell their subscriptions to someone else.

'Texas Ranger' fires gun at motorists

TYLER, Texas (AP) — A gunman claiming to be a Texas Ranger flagged vehicles down on a highway and then opened fire on them, the Smith County Sheriff's Department says.

No one was hurt, but at least four vehicles were struck by rifle blasts in the shooting spree on a wooded stretch of Farm-to-Market Road 2767 about 10:15 a.m. Friday, said Lt. John Whitham.

The gunman was identified as James Edward Willis Jr., 58. He is being held under $20,000 bail in Smith County Jail on two counts of aggravated assault.

Sheriff's Department Detective Jerry Morris said additional charges are pending.

Morris said Willis stopped his Ford Pinto hatchback in the center of the westbound lane and opened fire on anyone who came up.

Roy Tomberlain, a former

Smith County reserve deputy, was one who drove up. He said he saw Willis shoot at several vehicles.

"I started to pass the car, that is when he pointed the gun straight at me and told me to stop," Tomberlain said. He said the man identified himself as a Texas Ranger, ordered him to park his car.

Tomberlain said Willis warned: "If you move, I'll blow your head off."

Tomberlain said he believed he had stumbled upon a stakeout or drug bust, but realized something was wrong when the man turned his rifle on motorists.

Social science event due at WTC

Students from 14 area high schools will be at Western Texas College Thursday for the annual Social Science Contest.

Registration will begin at 8:30 a.m. in the Student Center. Dr. Harry Krenek, college president, will extend a welcome at 9:15 a.m. in the Fine Arts Theatre. The students will go to various locations to begin the contests at 10 a.m. and are to be finished by 11:30 a.m. They will go to lunch at 11:30 a.m. and return to the Fine Arts Theatre for the awards program starting about 1:15 p.m.

Robert Adams, associate professor of government/history, will be contest director. The contest is sponsored by WTC's Social Science Division.

About 215 students will be taking part in the contests which include current events, U.S. government, Texas history and government, U.S. history, world history, geography and economics.

Schools which have entered the contest are from Stanton, Roby, Hermleigh, Abilene, Crosbyton, Rule, Grady, Snyder, Seagraves, Roscoe, Westbrook, Spur, Highland and Coahoma.

Entry deadline set Wednesday in photo contest

Wednesday will be the final day for entries in the wild flower competition and exhibit sponsored by the Scurry County Museum in conjunction with Scurry County Wild Flower Day on April 22. Photographs are to be taken to the museum, located on the Western Texas College campus.

Entries may be color or black and white. They are to be framed or matted and ready to hang. There is an entry fee of $3 per entry for non-students or $1 for students. Each photographer may submit a maximum of three entries.

Details about the wild flower photography project can be obtained by calling the museum at 573-6107.

Several books about wild flowers are now available in the museum gift shop and wild flower enthusiasts are invited to browse there while visiting the Wild Flower Day exhibits in the museum.

NBA roundup...

Chicago beats Bucks, 116-106

by The Associated Press

Michael Jordan specializes in doing the impossible on the basketball court. The Chicago Bulls are trying to follow his lead in the nine remaining days of the NBA regular season.

"It would be great to win the division title, and we feel we can give it our best shot," Jordan said after his 26 points, 10 assists and eight steals carried the Bulls to a 116-106 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks Friday night.

The Bulls, who trailed Detroit by eight games in the Central Division standings on March 20, now trail by two after the Pistons lost 115-111 to Atlanta.

Catching Detroit would likely give Chicago a bonus: the No. 1 playoff seed throughout the Eastern Conference playoffs. The Bulls are virtually assured of being seeded no lower than third.

"We see them within striking distance," Jordan said. Detroit has four games left and Chicago six, and the two will meet in the season finale a week from Sunday.

Horace Grant scored 21 points in the Bulls' ninth straight victory, matching their longest winning streak of the season. It was the Bulls' 15th victory in their last 17 contests, and improved their home mark to 34-5.

In other NBA games, it was Minnesota 117, Orlando 102; the Los Angeles Lakers 131, Golden State 119 and Portland 124, Dallas 92.

Ricky Pierce scored 22 points, including 13 in the fourth quarter as Milwaukee trimmed Chicago's 19-point lead to 102-96 with 5:09 remaining. But the Bucks got no closer.

In the third quarter, Grant had 11 points and Jordan nine as the Bulls opened a 91-72 lead entering the final period. Chicago shot 65 percent in the third quarter to Milwaukee's 44 percent.

Hawks 115, Pistons 111
Atlanta pulled a half-game ahead of idle Cleveland for the final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference as Dominique Wilkins scored 25 points and made the game's key defensive play against Detroit.

The Pistons, trailing 113-111, had the ball with less than five seconds left, but Wilkins intercepted Isiah Thomas' pass with 3.6 seconds to go and then hit two free throws.

A 3-pointer by Doc Rivers, who scored nine of his 24 points in the fourth quarter, gave the Hawks the lead for good with 4:14 remaining.

Needville cage star signs with Dusters

Western Texas College women's basketball coach Kelly Chadwick announced Friday the signing of Needville standout Sherry Hoffpaur.

"She's a real dedicated player," said Chadwick, "and she'll be a super asset to our program."

Hoffpaur, 5-9, should play in the second guard position next season for the Lady Dusters.

She is fresh from her senior season in which she averaged almost 20 points and 10 rebounds per game in leading the Lady Bluejays to a 28-3A district championship with an 18-7 season mark.

The WTC signee cites her best high school game as a 29-point effort against loop rival Palacios.

Besides basketball, Hoffpaur competed in volleyball, track and softball.

She was named All-District in basketball for three seasons, as well as honorable mention All-State after her senior campaign.

Hoffpaur was also listed as the Greater Houston district MVP and first team All-Greater Houston by the Texas Association of Sports Writers.

Her reasons for inking with WTC?

"I like the environment and I'm determined to be a success."

She plans to become a high school coach upon her graduation from college.

WTC's Reed holds first in bull riding

HOBBS, N.M. — Western Texas College cowboy, Buddy Reed of Lorena scored a 75 in bull riding during Friday's performance of the NIRA rodeo here to take first place in the event.

Reed leads teammate Denny McClanahan of Canadian, who has a third place 68 and Tularosa, N.M. native Michael Gafney's sixth place 61 in the event.

Jennifer Lee of the women's rodeo team at WTC snatched first place in goat tying with her 8.0 time.

She also holds fourth place after two rounds in breakaway roping with a swift 3.6 second effort.

Teammate Rhonda Carroway of Harrisville, Ms., claimed seventh place after the first two go rounds in the breakaway event with her 4.5.

Other WTC contestants still in the running for today's short go as of Saturday included McClanahan with a sixth place 55 in bareback riding, saddle bronc rider Shane Gulbrandson of Queensland, Australia with a third place effort of 68 and steer wrestler Russell Merchant, from Madisonville, who posted a 5.5 second place time.

Shawn Tibbs' 63 is a fifth-place score among saddle bronc riders and Merchant's 12.0 in calf roping holds fourth place.

Tibbs hails from Dupree, S.D. Sunday's finals, which will include the top ten efforts in each event, begin at 1 p.m.

Western Texas will host their own NIRA event next week.

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) — Purdue coach Gene Keady was reprimanded by the NCAA and the school is having $10,000 of its share of 1990 tournament revenues withheld.

The action comes in the wake of Keady's angry tirade against the officiating in the Boiler-makers' 73-72 Midwest Regional loss to Texas March 18. Keady will pay the $10,000 out of his own pocket, said Purdue athletic director George King.

The action reduces Purdue's revenue from the tournament to approximately $560,000, a portion of which goes to the Big Ten Conference.

TENNIS
BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Andrei Chesnokov of the Soviet Union upset top-seeded Jay Berger 6-2, 6-4 and advanced to the semifinals of the Count of Godo tournament.

In another surprise, No. 2 Martin Jaito was ousted by fellow Argentinian Guillermo Perez-Roldan 6-4, 6-4.

Ira tracksters earn regional spots at meet

Shane Bearden, Jason Withers and the girls' 800 meter relay team from Ira will advance to the Class A regional track meet after Friday's District 10-A gathering in Jayton.

Bearden qualified for the regional meet with a 2:05.02 time in the 800 meter event that netted him a first place finish.

The Ira runner also took third in the 1600 meter run with a 4:52.93.

Withers' pole-vault effort of 11-6 was good for second place at the meet and a trip to the regional meet.

Sophomore Margot Perkins, and freshmen Misty Mathis, Emilee Taylor and Mauricia Rosas scooted to a second place time of 2:02.77 in the 800 meter relay to earn a place in the regional meet.

Other Ira contestants who placed included David Reyna who registered a fourth place finish in the 400 meter dash with a time of 55.68 and Dave Holmes who carded a fifth place finish in the pole vault with a 10-6 effort.

Justin Box took sixth place with a 5-6 high jump and the 1600 meter relay team scored sixth place points with a 3:51.31 time.

The team consisted of Brain Martinez, Justin Box, Mike Hughes and David Reyna.

Overall, the Ira boys took sixth position at the meet with 33 points.

Rotan's Boys took the loop title with a combined 192 points while the Rotan girls took first place with 185 points.

For the Lady Bulldogs, Mauricia Rosas captured fifth position in both the 100- and 200 meter dashes with times of 13.78 and 28.83.

The Ira girls claimed sixth place with a total of 20 points.

The track squads from Ira will next be in Saturday's regional six-man meet in Roscoe.

The top three finishers in each event there will advance to the state six-man meet in Stephenville.

Greathouse nabs post at regionals

Liz Greathouse was inadvertently left out of the list of regional qualifiers in Friday's SDN story on the District 4-4A track meet.

Greathouse finished second in the triple jump with a 33-1/2 effort that garnered second place and a trip to the regional meet to be held in San Angelo April 27-28.

Perez earns win...

Yankees halt Rangers, 3-0

NEW YORK (AP) — Pascual Perez made a memorable Yankees' debut, allowing one single in five innings and combining on a three-hitter Friday night as New York beat the Texas Rangers 3-0.

The Yankees managed just six hits, including two more by Dave Winfield, but benefited from some good luck on Friday the 13th. They scored the only run they needed in the first inning on a two-out error and Mel Hall's check-swing double.

Perez, the free agent who signed a three-year, $5.7 million contract, kept the Rangers off-balance with an assortment of fastballs, hard sliders and a couple of his favorite bloop pitches. He struck out five, walked two and gave up only Ruben Sierra's ground single in the second.

Perez pitched only three innings in spring training after arriving a week late. He stayed in Florida for extra work and, like many starters in the major leagues in this opening week, was pulled early after 75 pitches.

Lee Guetterman shut out Texas on two singles over three two innings, and Dave Righetti struck out two of the three batters he faced in the ninth for his first save. The Yankees permitted only one runner past first base.

Bobby Witt (0-1) gave up all three runs, two of them earned, on five hits in 6 2-3 innings. In spring training, Witt was 0-2 and gave up 14 runs on 21 hits in 12 innings.

Witt retired the first two batters before Don Mattingly hit a popout that drifted in the wind and fell out of shortstop Jeff Kunkel's glove for an error. Hall tried to stop his swing, but the ball hit his bat and bloomed for an opposite-field double to left.

Winfield opened the fourth with a slow grounder to Kunkel and beat it out for a single. Winfield took third on Barfield's single and scored when speedy Roberto Kelly grounded into a forceout and beat the double-play relay.

Winfield went 2-for-4 and scored a run for the second straight game.

Girls' basketball camp set in June at local college

The Tony Mauldin Basketball Camp for Girls has been scheduled June 11-15 at Western Texas College.

This is a day camp designed to give girls in the 4th grade through high school instruction in the basic fundamentals of basketball and to take part in full-court drills.

Cost is $65 per camper or $55 if there is more than one camper from the same family. The non-refundable registration fee of $20 is due by June 4, with the balance due on the first day of camp.

Sulfa drug found

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Food and Drug Administration milk survey found traces of sulfa drugs in most of the samples tested, but all were far below levels that would threaten public health, the agency said Friday. Also, of the 70 samples tested, three were found to contain traces of sulfamethazine, which is not approved for use in lactating cows because it may cause cancer at some levels, the FDA said. "The traces, while not of safety concern, nevertheless show that a few dairy farmers or veterinarians have improperly used the drug," the agency said. The study suggested milk from "only a few animals" that are being treated improperly is reaching the market. Fifty-eight of the 70 samples contained some traces of the sulfa drugs.

Satellite now headed back into space

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — An Indonesian communications satellite plucked from orbit by space-walking shuttle astronauts six years ago was launched back into space Friday aboard a Delta rocket. The unmanned rocket blasted off on time at 6:28 p.m. from Cape Canaveral Air Force Station. The satellite was expected to separate 26 minutes later, and an on-board kick motor was to boost it into its proper orbit on Sunday. The $60 million satellite, a Palapa B-2R, was one of two spacecraft rescued from a uselessly low orbit by Discovery in November 1984. The rescue came nine months after the satellites were launched by NASA aboard Challenger. Astronauts Joe Allen and Dale Gardner manually placed the satellites in Discovery's payload bay. The second satellite, originally built for Western Union, was renamed Asiasat 1 and returned to space on a Chinese "Long March 3" rocket on April 7. The successful sendoff marked China's debut into the international satellite launching business. The refurbished Palapa B-2R will join two Indonesian satellites already in orbit, electronically linking the 177 million people who live on the country's 13,677 islands. It is expected to go into operation in six weeks in its geosynchronous orbit 22,300 miles above the equator. The Indonesian satellites also will be used for internal communications services in the Philippines, Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore and Papua New Guinea. "The launch demonstrates how close the bilateral relations are between Indonesia and the United States," said T. Dahlia Soemolang, consul general of Indonesia who is based in Houston. Hughes Aircraft Co., which built the Palapa satellite, replaced the spacecraft's batteries and on-board thrusters and motors used to boost the satellite into its proper orbit. Damage in space was "amazingly benign," said Dave Braverman, a vice president for Hughes. Palapa's return to space on a McDonnell Douglas Commercial Delta rocket originally was scheduled for April 9. It was pushed back three days when the National Aeronautics and Space Administration moved up the date of Discovery's launch with the Hubble Space Telescope. Career diplomat assigned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Since taking over the State Department's new office of U.S.-Mexico border affairs last month, Irwin Rubenstein has been asked to investigate gridlock in Laredo and border cattle rustling.

As sympathetic as he is to the rancher's concerns, the career diplomat says he is "not going to be a personal problem solver for everybody who's got something cooking on the border."

Instead, Rubenstein says he will do just what the title says — coordinate the U.S. agencies that deal with issues on the 2,000-mile border, an increasingly important region for both countries.

"You have to deal with not only our own national interests, but the concerns and sensitivities of another sovereign state," Rubenstein said in an interview at the State Department last week.

Rubenstein has spent some 30 years in Latin America with the Foreign Service, including the past eight in Mexico. He says the creation of his job within the State Department's office of Mexican Affairs shows the Bush administration's awareness of the importance of the border.

"I think there is a tremendous awareness of Mexico and its importance to us and our importance to it, more so than we've seen in recent years and maybe in recent decades," Rubenstein said.

"Having said that, and with a booming border, obviously more and more people are becoming conscious of the border," he said.

The U.S.-Mexico border is the only place in the world where a major industrialized country shares a boundary with a developing nation, says Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, who a year ago asked the State Department to create the position Rubenstein holds.

The area has its share of special problems — high unemployment, low income, poor environmental conditions, including pollution in stretches of the Rio Grande that make the river unsafe even to touch. There is also too little health care, and diseases more common to the Third World than the rest of the United States.

At the same time, trade, population and jobs continue to grow on the border.

About sanctions against Lithuania...

Leaders caution Gorbachev

HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP) — President Bush is telling Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev that his threatened use of economic sanctions against the independence movement in Lithuania "is not the way to go."

Bush and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, meeting on this Atlantic resort island, issued a joint plea to Gorbachev to settle the Baltic dispute through negotiation rather than coercion.

"Now is no time for escalation," Bush said Friday at a joint news conference with Mrs. Thatcher.

He said the United States has made it clear to Gorbachev both publicly and privately that "coercion, escalation is not the way to go. The way to go is dialogue." And he called on the Soviet leader to heed his words.

Similarly, Mrs. Thatcher said the confrontation "must be solved by discussion."

The Soviet news agency Tass reported that Gorbachev had given Lithuania 48 hours to end its "anti-constitutional" activities.

The president was notified about Gorbachev's ultimatum toward the end of his daylong meeting with Mrs. Thatcher.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said later that the United States was still trying to sort out "what had happened and what it means."

collegiate Rodeo Association (NIRA) faculty president. WTC competes in the Southwest Region of the NIRA and its men's team won the national NIRA title in 1986. The men's team was holding on to first place in the region going into the New Mexico Junior College NIRA Rodeo in Hobbs, N.M., this weekend.

WTC hosted its first inter-collegiate rodeo in 1972 and has held its rodeos in the coliseum since 1981. College rodeo contestants who competed at WTC rodeos before going on to achieve national honors include WTC exes Dave Appleton, Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association (PRCA) All-Around World Champion Cowboy in 1988; veteran bull rider Wacey Cathey, one of WTC's early rodeo team members who has been to the National Finals Rodeo (NFR) every year since 1981; Buddy Reynolds.

NFR qualifier in bareback and saddle bronc riding; and James Zant, who went to the PRCA National Finals in 1987 and 1988.

Jim Sharp, who attended Odessa College, was PRCA Rookie of the Year in 1986 and World Champion Bull Rider in 1988, and the only bull rider to ever ride all 10 bulls at the NFR. Ty Murray also attended Odessa College and was PRCA World Champion All-Around Cowboy in 1989. Tuff Hedeman, World Champion Bull Rider in 1986 and 1989, attended Sul Ross State University.

Unlike most other inter-collegiate sports, rodeo programs at two-year institutions, such as Western Texas, compete against four-year schools. Among the institutions represented in the Southwest Region are WTC, Texas Tech University, Eastern New Mexico University, Tarleton State University, Hardin Simmons University, Sul Ross State University, Abilene Christian University, Howard College, Odessa College, Frank Phillips College and New Mexico Junior College.

Harry Vold from Fowler, Colo., will be providing stock for the rodeo. Quail Dobbs of Coahoma, twice chosen as barrel man for the National Finals Rodeo, will be clown and barrel man at the week-night rodeos. He will be assisted by Stan Ham from Andrews.

Blake and Tonya Richards announce the birth of their son, Christopher Carl, born March 28 at Wichita General Hospital in Wichita Falls. He weighed 8 pounds and one ounce.

Two weeks ago, budding student scientists in Roger Goodwin's 7th grade science classes at Snyder Junior High School, planted tomato seeds from space.

Each student planted two tomato seeds, some were labeled "control" or "B" for the earth-based seeds while others were designated "A" for the spaced-exposed seeds.

Students planted each of the seeds in small cup-like holders or square-shaped containers, using the same amount of soil for each container. Enough water was added for germination to take place. Goodwin said students observations will include:

-The percentage of germination for both groups.

-The growth rate in early stages.

-The size and shape of each leaf.

"As the plants grow," Goodwin said, "We'll compare all these factors."

Before some of the tomato plants had begun to germinate, a few of Goodwin's students shared their thoughts about the experiment with the Snyder Daily News.

Some thought the space-exposed seeds would be either a "lot bigger or smaller" than the earth-based seeds. Others anticipate that the tomatoes might taste either bitter or sour.

Others thought the seeds might grow faster and there might be changes in the shape of the plants as they grow. Some speculated that the space-exposed seeds might not germinate at all.

Seeds were planted in regular soil, but as some of the first ones were planted too deep, they had to be replanted closer to the top of the soil.

After a few days, Goodwin said they also noticed that the space-exposed seeds planted in the larger containers had almost 100 percent germination. The Earth-based seeds did not do quite as well during the same time period.

Tomato seeds planted in the smaller containers showed hardly any sign of germination because the containers were too small and did not retain enough moisture. However, as more moisture is added he said the seeds will start to germinate but it will take them longer. They also discovered that when the seeds in the smaller containers were transplanted into a larger container the rate of germination improved.

Goodwin said they are controlling the temperature with a heat lamp and they are trying to make sure that the same amount of water, soil and temperature be used for all of the seeds. Students will continue to wet the dirt every day as needed, until classes dismiss for the summer.

The seventh graders will also will be looking for possible mutations to the tomato plant, such as changes in fruit size and color, growth rate, and leaf, stem and stalk shapes and sizes.

The pink grapefruit is a mutation resulting from the white grapefruit seed.

Goodwin said that school will be dismissed for the summer before the tomato plants will be big enough to flower.

Even though the experiment won't be completed by June 1, Goodwin said if the preliminary results prove to be successful he will forward a copy of his report to officials at NASA who provided

Martinez examine the seeds about two weeks after they were planted. In Photo Four (bottom right) Monica Martinez takes a closer look at the space-exposed seeds in container "A" which almost had 100 percent germination. Tomato seeds planted in small, round containers had not really begun to show much germination as of Wednesday of last week. Container "B" holds Earth-based seeds which did not have quite as high a percentage of germination. (SDN Staff Photos)

APRIL GARDENING ACTIVITIES

Some early birds need to replant. In late March local nurseries were selling tomato plants. This week they'll be selling them again — to the same people. April weather makes us want to plant warm season vegetables. Be wise and watch air and soil temperatures. Plant tomato, pepper and eggplant when the soil at the four-inch depth is at least 60-65 degrees. To warm the soil and thereby increase the growth rate of roots, make raised beds and cover the soil with black plastic mulch. Immediately after planting, install plastic-wrapped cages to increase air temperature and the relative humidity while preventing wind damage. Plastic wrapped cages protect tomatoes from attack by the beet leafhoppers, which transmit curly top virus, and from the thrip insects which inject the plant with spotted wilt virus as it feasts on tender leaf tissue.

Later in April when frost is less likely and the soil is warmer, set out potted plants of squash, cucumber, muskmelon, watermelon and okra. Wait until soil is 60-70 degrees to plant seed of the vine crops, blackeyes and pintos.

Gardens with southern exposure, protected by a fence or building on the north side will be warmer in spring.

Bed down sweet potato mother roots in a warm hotbed or under row cover to grow slips for transplanting in late May or early June. Always set windbreaks to shield newly set transplants and never let soil dry out around the roots. Finish planting sweet Spanish type onions by early April. Sow cold tolerant sweet corn now and wait two or three weeks to sow seed of the cold sensitive varieties that have the "sh", shruken gene for super sweetness, genetic makeup.

Eighteen wheeler sits on top of stop

EDITOR'S NOTE — Trucks are to Fultonville what baseball is to Cooperstown, something that keeps the village out of red ink. Folks here talk about traffic on the New York Thruway like farmers talk about the weather. But when one truck stop operator hoisted an 18-wheeler atop a 30-foot water tower as a beacon to truckers, some officials thought he had gone too far.

By MICHAEL HILL
Associated Press Writer
FULTONVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — Trucks don't outnumber people here, but it's close.

An average of more than 600 trucks a day rumble off the New York State Thruway and cruise down Riverside Drive, Fultonville's mile-long midway of truck stops, hotels and restaurants.

On any evening, this tiny Mohawk Valley village of 777 people welcomes the 18-wheelers spilling in to fill up on diesel fuel or get fine-tuned as their drivers shower, chow down or bunk for the night.

"After three o'clock the trucks just can't find a place to park," says Wayne Hazzard, the village's fire chief.

Trucks are everywhere. There's even one in the sky. That rig — an 18-wheeler painted red, white and blue — sits atop a 30-foot water tower advertising the town's claim to fame:

"Welcome to Fultonville — 3 Truck Stops, 4 Motels, 7 Restaurants."

Trucks are to Fultonville what baseball is to Cooperstown, something that keeps the village from both rural anonymity and red ink.

The average truck can hold 300 gallons of diesel fuel and the average trucker can hold a bit more than a sandwich and coffee after eight hours on the road. With more than 13 million commercial vehicles — including commercially registered vans and pickups — riding the Thruway yearly, those figures mean dollar signs to Fultonville.

"The biggest thing to me is the sales tax money," says Fultonville Mayor George Wadsworth, who estimates that business generated from passing truckers enriches the village's tax coffers by about $50,000 a year.

"And it keeps going up and up."

The New York State Thruway Authority counted 244,457 commercial vehicles passing out through Exit 28 at Fultonville last year, up from 235,237 in 1988.

That's heavy traffic for a town so small it doesn't even have its own doctor.

Beyond Riverside Drive, Fultonville reveals itself to be not all that much: a general store, post office, a few other businesses and a couple of blocks of aging houses.

But Fultonville has shrewdly taken advantage of its location and small size to attract trucks navigating the trade route between New England and the upper Midwest.

"I kind of like it here," says Bob Thompson, a trucker passing through from New Haven, Mich. "It's a friendly little place and it's halfway to anywhere you want to go."

Fultonville has capitalized on through-traffic before. The town once sustained itself on the comings and goings of mule-drawn ships along the Erie Canal, which cut through the town in the 19th century.

That section of the Erie Canal was filled in by the beginning of this century, but, ironically enough, it was the long-gone canal that gave impetus to Fultonville's current heyday.

In the early 1950s, state planners drew the route for the proposed New York State Thruway right over the old path of the Erie Canal — and right through the heart of Fultonville.

Many here thought it would be the town's death knell.

"Everyone was skeptical," former Fultonville Mayor George Snyder recalls. "But I knew there was nothing we could do to stop them... We decided to make the best of it."

Guessing the superhighway's economic potential, Snyder wheedled and cajoled politicians in Albany — including Gov. Thomas E. Dewey himself — until Fultonville got its own Thruway exit.

Under Snyder, the town also became one of the few in upstate New York to allow tandem trailers, "double barrels" as truckers call them, to exit to their roads.

Snyder started Fultonville Truck Center in 1954 with four diesel pumps, 12 rooms with a little diner downstairs. When he sold the business in 1973, it had 37 pumps.

That same stop today — is the Roadway Motor Plaza, the largest of the town's three stops with 14 motel rooms and dispensing an average of 5 million gallons of gasoline a year. Next biggest is Glen Travel Plaza, followed by Countryside Fuel Stop.

Having multiple truck stops in small towns is not unusual, according to Don Lofstrom, a vice president of the Rochester-based Roadway Motor Plaza Co., which owns the largest stop.

"It's not uncommon for truck stops to be placed in the middle of no place on interstates," Lofstrom says. It can be more convenient for trucks to stop in small towns like Fultonville or Buda, Texas, than big cities like Chicago or Houston, he says.

"If it's not unusual, then it's certainly laudable," says Roger King, a spokesman for the National Association of Truck Stop Operators, a Virginia-based trade group.

"It's an example of what truck stops can be to a community."

People here talk about the Thruway like farmers talk about the weather.

"There's enough for all of us as long as we can get them off the Thruway," says Vincent Gramuglia, Countryside's owner.

Gramuglia is the man who parked a retired semi 45 feet above the Thruway's roadside flora as a way of attracting business.

The four-spade contract could be played in a number of ways. After the queen of diamonds was led, declarer covered with dummy's king. East took the ace and returned a diamond. South ruffed with the jack, played a spade to dummy, ruffed another diamond, and then played another trump to dummy. Of course, declarer might just as well have kept the lead in his hand when he drew the last trump. That way, he could play a low club up to dummy's queen. If West held the king, a diamond could later be discarded from the North hand, assuming that South retained an entry in the trump suit. But declarer had decided to work on hearts, hopeful of setting up the suit for a club discard.

Note that playing the ace and a heart does not work. East will win the second heart and play two more high hearts. Although the last heart can be ruffed in dummy, declarer will still be left with a club loser. But South cannily led away from dummy's heart ace. East could win the jack, but what then? If East plays another high heart, declarer wins the ace and continues the suit, setting up his heart 10 for the needed club discard. So it looked as though South had found the winning line — until East casually played a low heart. Not believing that East could possibly hold K-Q-J-4, and catering to the possibility that West might hold K-J doubleton of hearts as well as the king of clubs, declarer put in the eight of hearts. West was a little surprised to win the trick with his nine-spot, and the contract was duly defeated.

Okay for granny to get gussied up

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — If Grandma gets all gussied up to go to church or Grandpa preens in the mirror before walking to the corner market, it's a good sign.

It's when the elderly give up caring how they look that you have to worry, says Dr. Mary Adams, professor of gerontological nursing at the University of Oklahoma Health Sciences Center.

The special interest a senior takes in his appearance is an indication that he is well. "Illness, not aging," says Adams, "brings about the erosion of self presentation."

By the same token, she says, you can tell when a person who has suffered a serious illness is feeling better: he asks the nurse or family members, "How do I look?"

"I am always delighted to see seniors spruce up," Adams says. "It's a joy to see a 90-year-old woman in a nursing home who puts on bright red lipstick. The lipstick may not be completely straight, but it is a good sign that she has not given up."

the seeds.
 Goodwin said that whatever information they obtain from this experiment will also be shared with other interested science classes.

During the summer, the tomato seeds will not be abandoned as Goodwin said they plan to transplant the plants to the school's patio area. He said they will attempt to place the "B" and "A" plants as near to each other as possible.

He said that someone would be around the junior high building all summer to help care for the tomato plants and in addition, the school also has an automatic watering system.

He explained that they first heard that NASA would provide space-exposed tomato seeds for interested science classes through a radio announcement made in January. He said he sent a student to the school's library to obtain NASA's address. But, in order to save time, he said he called NASA the next day and he was referred to someone in Washington, D. C. He gave them his name and address and several weeks later the seeds arrived in Snyder.

Goodwin said one of the reasons he has pursued this project is that he believes that students can learn better if they are having fun.

For nearly six years, the seeds were exposed to the harsh environment of space, subjected to cosmic radiation, temperatures extremes, weightlessness, and the vacuum of space.

The Space Exposed Experiment Developed For Students (SEEDS) was one of 57 experiments housed on the recently recovered 11-ton Long Duration Exposure Facility satellite. After a nearly-six year voyage in space, the 12.5 million tomato seeds were rescued by the crew of the Space Shuttle Columbia on January 12, 1990.

The space seeds were only supposed to be in orbit about six months. Space shuttle Challenger was supposed to retrieve the seeds, but when the shuttle exploded on Jan. 28, 1986, plans were scrapped.

The tomatoes are said to be a hardy variety and have a very good germination rate.

SEEDS is a project sponsored by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Educational Affairs Division, NASA Langley Research Center, and the George W. Park Seed Company of Greenwood, S.C.

Students nationwide from grades five through university level are participating in the program.

Two other West Texas schools are also participating in this project—a middle school in Abilene Wylie and an elementary school in Breckenridge.

All seeds were grown during the same growing season and are of the same variety.

Jim Pickens, science teacher at Abilene Wylie, plans to collect the seeds from the plants and plant them next season. He may do this for the next four to five years to see if there will be any changes in the plants.

Linda Sims, an elementary teacher at South Elementary in Breckenridge, planted that school's seeds several weeks ago and her class found that "space tomato seeds sprouted before the earth-bound ones did."

SEEDS has the potential to involve 4 million students and 40,000 educators, according to a NASA release.

In March, NASA distributed 180,000 SEEDS kits containing space-exposed seeds and an equal number of Earth-based seeds to teachers from the upper elementary school to the university level for experiments and study.

Goodwin, who also serves as the junior high coach, has lived in Snyder for the past seven years. While some of his students said he was both a "good teacher and coach," Goodwin said they were all "anxiously awaiting the rest of the experiment's results."

Students in Goodwin's class have been having fun while learning throughout this school year. Students have, just to name a few projects, been incubating eggs; placed a sweet potato in a jar of water in order to observe its growth rate; sprouted beans; dissolved an egg shell in vinegar; tested the effect of Karo syrup and vinegar and water on an egg and used hydrochloric acid to dissolve a penny.

(Editor's Note: An Associated Press article released Friday said that the tomato seeds exposed to cosmic radiation during six years in space could produce poisonous fruit. But a NASA scientist called the report "unfounded and unreasonable.")

"There is no validity that this presents a hazard to school children," said William H. Kinard, chief scientist for the Long Duration Exposure Facility (LDEF), which carried the seeds as one of 57 experiments.

An unsigned memorandum from a NASA contractor described the danger as "remote," according to the Los Angeles Times, which obtained a copy of the memo.

But the memo said the research director at Park Seed Co., which gave NASA the seeds, "seemed to favor against" eating the tomatoes.

The Times said the memo was written by Nelson Ehrlich, associate director of the aerospace education services program at Oklahoma State University, which oversees NASA's school programs.

"There is a remote possibility that radiation-caused mutations could cause the plants to produce toxic fruit," the memo said. Radiation levels in space are higher than those on Earth.

No such warning was included in written materials sent to 180,000 teachers involved in the experiment designed to give 4 million students the chance to study the effects of space exposure on living tissue.

Frank Owens, deputy director of NASA's educational affairs division, that the two-page document obtained by the Times was "not an official NASA memo."

The memo apparently was sent by mistake about two weeks ago to the NASA-JPL Teaching Center in suburban La Crescenta, which has been distributing the seeds throughout Southern California.

"It was not meant to get out like it has gotten out," Ehrlich said of the memo Thursday. "Even though the possibility is there, it is extremely remote. People shouldn't have fears."

Camp Is Escape For Kids With Diabetes

DEAR READERS: More than 11 million Americans have diabetes, a disease in which the body does not produce or respond to insulin, a hormone needed for daily life. The resulting high blood sugar can severely damage the heart, blood vessels, kidneys, eyes and nerves. If left untreated, diabetes can lead to death.

This year, the American Diabetes Association (ADA) — the leading voluntary health organization supporting diabetes research and education — is celebrating its 50th anniversary. Its 1990 Camp Directory for children and teen-agers with diabetes is now being made available, free, to the public. The directory lists by state resident camps sponsored by ADA affiliate associations and accredited by the American Camping Association (ACA). The 58 camps listed in the directory passed a rigorous review by both the ACA and ADA. Trained health personnel are on site to provide and teach up-to-date diabetes management to the campers. Some 10,500 diabetic children, from 6 to 17 years old, attended camp last year.

"The camp setting is an excellent environment for children and teen-agers with diabetes to obtain the vital educational information they will need to live longer, healthier lives," explained Linda M. Siminerio, R.N., M.S., chair of the American Diabetes Association's Committee on Youth Services. "And, at the same time, the kids get to enjoy a true camping experience, including recreational activities and the valuable lessons learned in independent living."

Information on camping programs, financial assistance ("camperships") and other ADA services and programs are available by contacting local ADA affiliates and chapters. Phone numbers are listed in the white pages.

For a free copy of the 1990 Camp Directory or for a referral, call toll-free: 1-800-ADA-DISC. (Residents of Virginia and metropolitan Washington, D.C., call (703) 549-1500.)

DEAR ABBY: My husband is an ordained minister, and we have recently relocated to a new community. Thus far, we have been inundated with announcements and invitations to weddings, bridal parties, anniversary celebrations, graduations, baby showers, etc.

We don't think it's proper to send these notices concerning gift-giving occasions when they know we can't attend.

We cannot send a gift to all of these people — even a nice card costs at least $1.25. Yet, we cannot just ignore the occasion.

Kindly print this (no names or city, please) so the people in this congregation will realize that our budget does not allow for gifts or cards in response to these announcements.

THE MINISTER'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Please do not regard every invitation or announcement as a hint for a gift. It's not. Many send their clergyman invitations to all family celebrations seeking more to be honored with their presence than their presents.

Don't strain your budget in order to send a gift or card. A personal note of congratulations and best wishes is sufficient.

"How to Write Letters for All Occasions" provides sample letters of congratulations, thank-yous, condolences, resumes and business letters — even how to write a love letter. It also includes how to properly address the clergy, government officials, dignitaries, widows and others. To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

DEAR ABBY: I need your advice. I've put off writing to you for several years, but now it's time. I've been married to my husband for 27 years. We have a son, 26, who is married to a lovely girl, and a daughter, engaged to be married in June. We are very proud of them. So, you ask, what's the problem?

It's my husband. He's a good provider and a good husband, but he's a lousy lover. We make love once every seven or eight weeks. I'm 49, keep myself immaculate, exercise regularly and weigh only five pounds more than I did on my wedding day.

My husband is 52 and still working regularly. He's healthy and hard-working, and we go to church every Sunday. He was never what I would call a passionate lover, but I feel as though I'm living with my brother. If I feel romantic, he says, "Not to-night, maybe tomorrow." I miss the closeness we once had.

I know he loves me, Abby, but I feel so empty and alone. Please help me. No name or town, please. Sign me ...

LONELY

DEAR LONELY: Since you go to church every Sunday, look into Marriage Encounter. It's a weekend refresher course for couples who would like to renew the excitement and intimacy they once had.

I have had wonderful reports from Catholic, Protestant and Jewish couples of all ages who have benefited enormously from the Marriage Encounter experience.

Ask your clergyman what's available in your area. You have nothing to lose but your emptiness and loneliness. Please write again. I'd like a progress report.

DEAR ABBY: Recently I was looking for a birthday card for my son and, as usual, it was hard for me to find one with the proper words. You see, he is an alcoholic and lives in a shelter in northwest Oregon.

His brother is an officer in the U.S. Navy, and although I love them both equally, my heart goes out to the one with the problem.

It's difficult to find a card that expresses exactly how I feel. Most cards say, "I'm so proud of you," etc. Abby, please print this so the greeting card people will take notice.

OREGON MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Must it be a store-bought card? A handwritten note could say it all in four words: "I love you, Son."

DEAR ABBY: I appreciated your letter concerning the minister's fee for performing a marriage ceremony. As a minister, I am well aware of this situation. I work from 15 to 20 hours on each marriage I perform, for which I am usually given about $20.

You said, "A minister cannot have his suit cleaned and pressed, get a haircut, and pay to get his car gassed up to get him to the church and back for $20."

You could have said, "She can't get her dress cleaned and pressed, her hair fixed, and drive her car several times to the church in order to help this couple begin their life together," etc.

Abby, 50 percent of the students of the United Methodist seminaries today are women. I know. I was one of them.

THE REV. LIN JENNEWEIN, McCOOK LAKE, S.D.

DEAR LIN JENNEWEIN: Forgive me. When I hear "minister," I'm programmed to think "male!"

DEAR ABBY: The letters I see printed in your column are remarkably well-written — brief, concise and to the point. Are they edited and/or rewritten by you or your staff?

I find it rather difficult to believe that so many people can, or are able to, write such well-composed letters. Please set me straight.

JESSICA W. LEY, MILFORD, PA.

DEAR JESSICA: Neither I nor my staff would presume to "rewrite" a letter, but some must be edited. Offensive language is laundered, errors in grammar are corrected and non-essential details are omitted to conserve space. Occasionally, a letter can be printed without changing a word. Hallelujah!

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage is included.

Torchmark can elect own directors

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal appeals court ruled that Torchmark Corp. can try to elect its own slate of directors to American General's board.

A three-judge panel of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Thursday stayed a preliminary injunction that had kept Torchmark from lobbying American General's shareholders in support of its own slate.

American General shareholders are scheduled to elect six directors to the Houston-based insurance company's board at the May 2 annual meeting.

Torchmark, a smaller insurance company in Birmingham, Ala., said it intends to proceed with plans to solicit proxies for its board nominees. The company began sending American General shareholders proxy materials Tuesday on other issues.

The materials asked shareholders to vote on a proposed resolution that would require American General to hire an investment banking firm and appoint a committee of independent directors to evaluate acquisition proposals.

Last month, Torchmark made a surprise $6.4 billion offer for American General. It withdrew that offer a week later in favor of a proxy fight, a technique of taking over a company by persuading shareholders to vote for an alternative slate of directors and oust management.

Last week, U.S. District Judge David Hittner in Houston granted the preliminary injunction, prohibiting Torchmark from proceeding with its proxy contest. Hittner ruled that Torchmark violated American General's bylaws by not notifying the company 60 days before the annual meeting of its intent to offers its own slate.

Torchmark appealed to the 5th Circuit. The judges ruled in favor of Torchmark partly because of questionable disclosures by American General about the board being expanded from 13 to 15 members and how shareholders were being asked to vote for six directors instead of four.

American General did not inform shareholders of the changes until March 23. Eight days later, Torchmark informed the company that it planned to offer its own slate — less than 60 days before the annual meeting.

Thursday's ruling remains in effect until a hearing on the injunction, which was tentatively scheduled for April 30 in New Orleans, American General said.

Supreme Court: traffickers can get seized property back

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — In a grave blow to Colombia's anti-drug campaign, the Supreme Court has ruled the government must return millions of dollars in properties seized from alleged drug traffickers, a senior official said.

Judges have already returned 33 of the 430 farms, houses and other properties worth at least $23 million. They had been confiscated by presidential decree, the official said Thursday on condition of anonymity.

A Supreme Court ruling overturned the order, he said. Some judges have taken bribes from alleged traffickers who want their farms back, and "those judges who resist will almost certainly be killed," the official said.

"I think this may mean the war against traffickers is lost," he said. The official referred to the government's 8-month-old war on drugs that began when the leading presidential candidate was slain by traffickers. The government began confiscating properties and extraditing drug traffickers to the United States for trial.

At the same time, traffickers announced a counteroffensive in which 200 people have died. Barco's order to seize properties of suspected traffickers was one of his main weapons in his fight against drugs. According to his decree, a federal court was to determine the final status of the properties.

Owners were to present themselves before the court and prove they had no ties to drug trafficking in order to recover their possessions.

However, the Supreme Court late last year shifted the burden of proof to the administration, ruling no property can be permanently seized unless the owner has been found guilty of a crime. Many of the owners are charged with crimes but have not been found guilty. Traffickers have traditionally bribed or intimidated Colombian judges.

Investment banker accused of diverting lots of money

HOUSTON (AP) — An investment banker is accused in a lawsuit of stealing millions of dollars from the company he helped establish to pay for an extravagant lifestyle.

Duncan, Cook & Co. filed a lawsuit Thursday in state district court against Stephen C. Cook, alleging he secretly diverted as much as $5 million from the Houston investment firm.

"Cook, a founder and original shareholder of Duncan Cook, resigned from the firm March 14, according to the suit.

"All I can say is there are definitely two sides to this story, and I look forward to telling my side at a later date," Cook said in response to the suit.

Cook serves on the governing boards of Rice University and Baylor College of Medicine and is chairman-elect of the board of St. Luke's United Methodist Church in Houston's exclusive River Oaks area.

Cook was born in Houston in 1949 and attended Princeton and Harvard. His wife, Allyson, was 1988-1989 president of the Junior League. The lawsuit accuses Cook of having a Duncan Cook employee prepare more than 45 company checks — some for more than $100,000 — that diverted money into his personal bank account in 1989 and 1990.

According to the suit, some of the money was used to help pay for a $1.4 million Houston home that has monthly mortgage payments of $10,000. Cook also bought a 2,800-acre resort home in the Adirondack Mountains in New York, the suit says.

"In addition, Cook freely spent money," the suit claims. Since January 1989, Cook allegedly has spent $500,000 on personal living expenses.

His lifestyle was enough for Cook to accumulate $6 million in debts — much more than he was able to handle on his $100,000 per year salary at Duncan Cook, the suit claims.

Duncan Cook, formed in 1984, is an investment firm that arranges multimillion-dollar corporate buyouts.

PLEASANT HILL COMMUNITY (HELL ROAR N' HOLLER), 1920'S. Sallie Lee Gillum, mother of Shirley Gillum Drum and Surry Gillum, was a teacher at Pleasant Hill School. The community was also known as "Hell Roar N' Holler" and is still called that by many old-timers today. Being a farm girl, Sallie also knew how to use this scoop pulled by a mule. The mule and scoop were used to build terraces and ponds, and to level roads and locations for houses. The scoop had many uses around the farm. Courtesy: Shirley Gillum Drum, Snyder, Texas.

IMMUNITY-HOW
Ancient Greek physicians observed that people who recovered from the 'plague' did not catch the disease again. Once your immune system develops antibodies to certain diseases by conquering the invading antigen, certain white blood cells develops a 'memory' of it-you are now immune for years, perhaps for the rest of your life.
Modern medicine now triggers a mild case of measles, polio, whooping cough, etc., using a dead or weak virus, thereby causing further immunity to the disease. Do not fail to have your family inoculated against such diseases.

Went to see Elber the other day. Brought him one of those petitions circulating around town. You know, the ones that protest the FCC syndex and exclusivity rules that are allowing KTXS Channel 12 in Abilene to block out programming on the cable here in Snyder.

Elber doesn't get cable out where he lives. He's got one of those 30,000 volt, 10 billion mega-watt, super-duper satellite dishes. So I couldn't figure out what he wanted the petition for.

I shouldn't have asked.

"Shoot, Son," he said. "Just 'cause I ain't on cable don't mean I think it's right what them folks are doin'."

Elber's solution to the problem is a simple one.

"You know what you do when one chicken tries to take over the hen house, don't ya?" he said.

"What's that?" I said, as one not astute in the ways of chickens.

SDN Opinion Page

Columns - Cartoons - Look Back - Letters - Quotables

"They'd be Sunday dinner," he said, nodding his head toward an old axe in the corner.

No, Elber's not advocating going after KTXS with an axe, although some folks in Snyder are just about that upset. A local group of over 350 people (1,000-plus if you count husbands and family) is boycotting not only KTXS, but Abilene merchants, too. A petition drive came up with more than 2,500 signatures from irate citizens.

To put it another way, Elber says boot KTXS off the cable. It's an obvious enough answer, but unfortunately maybe not the solution. There's some confusion over what are known as right-to-air laws — laws more or less stating that television stations within a certain distance of a community have a right to be on the cable.

But KTXS is breaking the spirit of the FCC rules, which were designed a) to prevent the smaller hometown stations from getting pushed out, and, if one is to believe the FCC, b) for the consumer.

We don't have any local television stations in Snyder. And KTXS is better than 70 miles away. The station's transmitter is in Trent, however, and that makes it "local" according to FCC rules.

But whatever the original intent was, it's obvious the consumer is getting the short end. Blacking out shows or substituting different commercials (which is what is being done during some programming on WFFA Channel 8) is only in the best interest of the station demanding exclusivity rights — in this case KTXS. It's not in my interest to have shows I like to watch blacked out. It's not in my interest to have KTXS commercials substituted for commercials from Dallas. After all, you can still get KTXS commercials on Channel 12. So where's the benefit?

Personally, I like to watch Cheers, including the reruns. Cheers is aired on KJTV 34 out of Lubbock at 10 p.m. each day and by KTXS at 10:30 p.m. — same show, different episodes. I can't watch it at 10 o'clock anymore because it's being blacked out. And I won't watch it on KTXS because as far as I'm concerned, I don't have a Channel 12 on my television anymore.

It's about the only thing I know to do to get a pompous, self-serving chicken out of the hen house.

SDN Letters to the editor

Dear Editor, I just pulled back into my driveway. In the distance I can see the lights of the all famous Price Daniel Prison Unit.

When the prison was coming to Snyder, there were pros and cons concerning the facts of what the prison could do for our community.

It seemed sad to me that we were to make monies from other people's grief, and at the same time, these quote "needed prisons" have to be somewhere, so why not Snyder?

My home is just a few miles, as the crow flies, away from the prison. Almost anywhere I go at night, I can see the lights that surround the prison. All my thoughts turn to the 1,000 men that are confined to their rooms!

I realize that each man has committed some kind of crime and has to pay for this, but also I think of many lives that are effected by only one person at Price Daniel, the mothers, fathers, grandparents, sons, daughters, aunts, uncles, nieces and nephews. My heart is heavy with all the sadness.

As I look back on my own life, I wonder how things could be different if I were in these people's shoes. You see, no one abused me as a child; no one beat me, cursed me, neglected me. I was never hungry, always had a place to live, but the most important thing I had was plenty of love.

The Bible says that God is love. Maybe God was not always the head of my home, but love was, and as I get older I can see that this is the same thing. Where love abounds, God is present and this is what our prisoners need: God's love, His unconditional love.

As I look at those amber lights I will say a prayer for the men that live there. Will you, the people of Snyder, please join me because as we all should know, God's son Jesus Christ is the answer.

With Christian Love,

To the editor,

In Hermleigh there is a dirt road that goes through a field. I am told that this is a county road. There is no sign or road number.

The property on one side of the road belongs to Frank Nachlinger. I don't know who the other side belongs to, but he keeps plowing up more and more of the dirt road. Pretty soon it will be just wide enough for a bicycle.

As a newspaper carrier, this road saves me several miles on my route. I know that I'm not the only one that uses the road.

If this is a county road, a sign should be put up, and someone should find out where his property ends and the road begins.

We are a nation of hypocrites, and nobody said it better than Ryan White: "Sometimes I wonder why people keep dogs," he said on the "Donahue" show two years ago. "I mean, they're prejudiced against black people because their skin is different. They're prejudiced against Hispanic or Asian people because their language and culture is different. They're prejudiced against AIDS patients because something inside their body is different. And yet they'd let a stray dog into their house."

Ryan White knew something about prejudice. When he was first diagnosed with AIDS five years ago at the age of twelve (which he contracted from a blood transfusion), his home town of Kokomo, Indiana went beserk with it. People backed away from him on the streets, threw away dishes he'd used in restaurants, forced him to be educated at home by remote TV, and fired shots into his home. When Ryan, against his mother's better judgement, went to court to win the right to go to school, kids wrote "fag" on his locker and accused him of spitting into the food at the cafeteria. He was forced to eat in a separate area and use a separate bathroom. Even his lunchroom garbage was disposed of separately.

Still, this remarkable young man was not bitter. "They just let their fear take control of them," he said. "The parents were just trying to protect their kids." Even after his family moved to neighboring Cicero, Indiana, and even after Ryan was welcomed by that community with open arms, he decided to use his brief life to educate the public about this terrible disease.

He traveled the country, giving talks. He testified before Congress in Washington, D.C. He got celebrities involved. He knew he was going to die, but his positive outlook and Christian faith sustained him. "I believe in God and I believe that when you die you go to a better place. I'm not afraid to die," he said calmly whenever anybody asked, which was often. At his funeral, his minister said, "It was Ryan who first humanized this disease...He helped us believe that nothing is impossible, even for a kid."

Yet we are a nation of hypocrites, and Ryan knew it. The flood of sympathy and outrage at his death actually subtracts from his life's work. We are outraged because Ryan was a child, because he was an innocent victim, not because he died of AIDS. On the show "Nightline," Ted Koppel said "Ryan, unlike most AIDS patients, was neither gay nor an intravenous drug user. He could be a 'safe symbol,' the innocent victim of AIDS which, of course, leaves a certain amount of prejudice that most of us still feel toward the thousands of others who have the disease."

Randy Shilts, columnist for the "San Francisco Chronicle" and author of "And the Band Played On," a study of the AIDS epidemic, says Ryan's death sort of draws a line between who we should feel sorry for and who we should not feel sorry for, "the implication being, who deserves AIDS versus who does not deserve it."

This hypocrisy and prejudice then spills over into the amounts of funds our elected officials feel should be spent on research into this plague. Former Surgeon General C. Everett Koop says that both this administration and the previous one "have had great trouble in facing the fact that this disease is passed by techniques (i.e. sexual contact and IV drug use) in which most people do not engage nor approve."

What this incredibly brave and wise young man tried to teach us is that AIDS is here, now. Anyone who contracts it is a victim. And (see Country Life, page 7B)

Do cars need extended warranties?

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

When you buy a new car, chances are you'll hear a sales pitch for an extended warranty. "And for only $12 a month, you'll never have to worry about repairs..." the salesperson may say.

According to one insurance-industry estimate, nearly half of all car buyers succumb to the pitch and purchase an extended warranty. Are they getting a good deal?

Buying an extended warranty is a gamble, say the editors of Consumer Reports. It will pay off only if your car needs repairs that cost more than the price of the contract, if the repairs are not already covered under the manufacturer's own warranty, and if the warranty company agrees that such repairs are indeed covered. That last one is a very big if.

Every new car comes with a manufacturer's warranty, usually running from 12 months or 12,000 miles to as long as seven years or 70,000 miles. There's never an extra charge for the basic manufacturer's warranty, and it's transferable if you sell the car.

(Some of the longer warranties offer more limited coverage and require the payment of a deductible once the car has reached a certain age or been driven a certain distance. They should not be confused with extended warranties.)

Extended warranties come in two varieties. First, and by far the most common, are those backed and sold by the dealer or manufacturer. Coverage runs for up to five years and 100,000 miles, depending on the contract you choose. A deductible of $25 or more for each repair visit is common.

The other variety is a service contract (sometimes called mechanical break-down insurance) sold by third-party companies. Under a service contract, repairs are done by dealers and independent shops, and then reimbursed by the insurance company. These contracts are sold by dealers or, more often, through mail solicitations to automobile owners.

Recently, Consumer Reports' editors did a spot survey of consumer-protection officials in California, New Jersey and Wisconsin to ask about extended warranty complaints. The majority of the problems the officials had seen involved contracts sold by third-party companies. Legitimate repair claims were frequently denied, sometimes on the shabbiest pretexts.

For example, one Wisconsin man's claim wasn't honored because the company won't pay for any repairs it doesn't first approve by telephone. But getting through on the phone for the approval was impossible. Despite calling for weeks, the man never reached a human being.

Presumed failure to maintain a car is a favorite dodge for refusing claims. If routine maintenance is not performed on a tight schedule — and thoroughly documented — then you may well be out of luck at claim time. When Consumer Reports' editors examined a number of contracts, they found that many of them duplicated manufacturers' coverage. The starting date of the contract is often backdated to the day you bought the car, and coverage begins then, too, even though the factory warranty may not expire for two or three years.

In Consumer Reports' view, it makes more sense to buy a car with a good reliability record than to gamble on high-priced insurance unlikely to pay for itself. You should consider an extended warranty only if you're buying a car with a fairly high probability of future trouble — a newly introduced model, a car with a turbo-charged engine, or a four-wheel-drive vehicle.

Some questions to ask if you decide to buy: Does the contract include labor? Where can the repairs be done? Is the contract transferable if the car is sold? Can you get a refund if you want to cancel? Are towing and a rental car included? Is the repairer reimbursed, or do you have to wait for the check? If there's a disagreement, what is the arbitration process? What happens if the company goes out of business?

THE TUNNEL AT THE END OF THE LIGHT

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

Breast disease needs follow-ups

DEAR DR. GOTT: A recent mammogram revealed I have fibrocystic breasts. Can this condition lead to cancer? My mother died of breast cancer, and I'm quite worried.

DEAR READER: Fibrocystic breast disease is a common condition that rarely causes symptoms. It is due to benign scar tissue that produces a lumpy feel to the breasts. Occasionally, these irregular lumps can enlarge and become somewhat tender in relation to the menstrual cycle.

About 30 percent of women with fibrocystic disease show a condition called proliferative hyperplasia (overgrowth of cells within the breast), in conjunction with the usual benign cystic scarring. This overgrowth is associated with an increased risk of breast cancer and may have to be biopsied or removed. Therefore, authorities urge women with fibrocystic disease to be examined at regular intervals by their doctors and to have mammograms every 12 months.

The fact that your mother had breast cancer puts you in a particularly high-risk group. You should follow your physician's advice about appropriate intervals for follow-up and when (and if) you should have a biopsy of breast tissue.

To provide you with additional information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Breast Cancer and Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am plagued with a constant tingling in the calves of both legs. I've contacted six different doctors, and one described it as "crazy legs." To complicate things, I'm 73 years old with a heart condition and am on daily medication, yet I can't sleep more than an hour at a time because of the tingling.

DEAR READER: Tingling, cramping or so-called restless legs can reflect circulatory problems in older patients. When the calf muscles are deprived of oxygen, these symptoms may occur. Such symptoms are often prominent at night because during sleep the heart's output of blood falls by as much as 30 percent, thereby accentuating poor blood flow through arteries that are already partially blocked by arteriosclerosis.

In addition, some heart medicines — such as those used to lower blood pressure (and hence the work of the heart) — will contribute to nocturnal leg discomfort.

I believe you need testing to assess the circulation to your legs. Arteriography, a type of special X-ray examination of the arteries, will show if the arterial blockage is treatable and what method of treatment would be most effective. Ask your doctor about this. In addition, the physician might prescribe a drug that enhances circulation, such as Trental, which might alleviate your symptoms.

Most doctors are concerned about the side effects of an increasingly bewildering array of modern medical drugs. However, physicians are now recognizing an equally serious consequence of drug therapy: non-compliance, sometimes called "America's other drug problem." Studies show that about one-third of patients take their medicine as directed, one-third sometimes take their medication and almost a third never take it. In elderly patients, as many as half do not take their medicine at all or do not follow the prescribing directions. Those with diabetes, hypertension, asthma, epilepsy and depression are among the worse offenders.

The National Pharmaceutical Council estimates that 125,000 unnecessary deaths occur each year because patients are unable or unwilling to follow instructions about their medicines. One investigator discovered that 85 percent of hypertensive patients fail to maintain adequate treatment (which may be a lifetime commitment), half stop their therapy within one year and 75 percent within five years.

About 70 percent of elderly patients intentionally alter their intake of prescribed medications in order to avoid side effects. Psychiatric patients deviate from their prescribed treatment plans in up to 66 percent of cases.

Antibiotic treatment of children is another non-compliance nightmare: More than 60 percent of pediatric patients in one study were given drugs on an inappropriate schedule. In another study of adults, about 50 percent had trouble remembering to take their antibiotics.

Non-compliance crosses all boundaries: age, sex, educational level and socioeconomic status. Experts have identified two major categories of non-compliers.

Well-intentioned patients may merely misunderstand or forget instructions. This pattern is more common in people with chronic diseases, who are required to take more than one drug. Even so, about 50 percent of patients forget what their physicians tell them about how and when to take medicine. This can be due to impaired cognitive abilities (in the aged), poor communication between doctor and patient, anxiety and inability to concentrate during visits to the doctor, or difficult dosage schedules. However, with additional help, support and understanding, these non-compliers can usually be educated to follow instructions.

The second category is more troublesome. These are the patients who purposely disobey instructions, believing they, more than their doctors, know what is best. Some people assume that drugs are "foreign" substances and, therefore, are unhealthy. Others, because they feel better and are relieved of symptoms, alter their courses of treatment or neglect them altogether. For example, antibiotics often produce improvement in two or three days — but a continuing course of treatment is usually necessary to be completely effective and to avoid a relapse of the infection.

Further, some patients deny they have diseases (and the need for medicine), while others are embarrassed or lack sufficient motivation to continue therapy. Such non-compliers frequently respond to clarification of instructions, information about their diseases and the necessity for on-going treatment, a reduction in the number of medicines, and simplification of dosage schedules.

In addition, there are devices to assist patients with accurate self-administration of drugs. These include special caps on prescription containers, calendars and automated software programs that telephone a patient and deliver a message about dosage times and suggested dates for prescription refills.

Many factors influence non-compliance: for instance, long duration of therapy, multiple doses, excessive number of medications, poor understanding about disease processes and the need for treatment, side effects, disruptive dosage schedules (for example, at night), misunderstood instructions and expense.

To overcome non-compliance, authorities recommend that patients attempt to maintain an honest, open relation with their doctors, become partners in the treatment program and ask for clarification and modifications when necessary. Also, pharmacists can provide valuable assistance by educating patients about prescribed medicines. Most important, patients should feel free to discuss, disagree and negotiate with their doctors — and be comfortable requesting a second opinion when the question of compliance cannot otherwise be resolved.

Problems plague census

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of Americans haven't sent back their census forms. Millions of others didn't get forms in the first place. Local governments are suing the Census Bureau.

All in all, the 1990 national head count is off to a rough start.

Years went into the planning before roughly 100 million census forms were sent to households at the end of March.

Promptly, things started to go wrong.

Forms began pouring into the bureau's Jeffersonville, Ind., clearinghouse. But they weren't completed responses from citizens. They were undeliverable forms being returned by the post office.

Census Director Barbara Bryant estimated Thursday that between 4 million and 4.5 million forms were undeliverable for various reasons, largely incorrect addresses.

That is being fixed by sending out workers to hand-deliver forms, she said.

But even many of those who received their forms haven't cooperated, Bryant said, pleading with those who haven't filled them out and mailed them back to "do it now."

as it spreads, more victims fall by the wayside: health care professionals, law enforcement officers, newborn babies who caught it prenatally. To continue to cling to the outdated idea that if you catch this disease, it is because you must have been doing something wrong makes Ryan White's death all the more tragic. Because of Ryan, we now know that you can't get AIDS by drinking after someone who has it, or kissing them, or touching them. But Ryan's bitter-sweet life also taught us that anyone who dies too young because of this miserable disease is just as innocent as someone who succumbs to cancer, or hepatitis, or pneumonia — and ANY death is one death too many.

If, after all the furor and celebrity of Ryan White's death settle down, we go back to complacently sniffing our turned-up noses at all those "queers" and "junkies" who somehow deserve to die, then that boy would most surely have died in vain, and all his brave effort would be wasted. He deserves better.

Telescope contamination is minimal, NASA officials say

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope will get slightly more dusty as it awaits a new launch date on space shuttle Discovery, but the amount of contamination is expected to be minimal, NASA said Friday.

"We've done all the cautionary things that we can," said Fred Wojtalik, a NASA project manager. "(But) we're going to get some degradation. Some particles are going to come into the Hubble that we just can't avoid." Scientists want no more than 5 percent of the surface of Hubble's 94-inch mirror, the finest ever made, covered with dust or other debris once the telescope reaches orbit, Wojtalik said.

A 2 percent rate of contamination was expected if Discovery had been launched on time Tuesday, Wojtalik said. That is expected to rise to 2.1 percent — still well within limits — as a result of the delay until the new launch date, April 25.

Clean air was being circulated inside Discovery's sealed payload bay Friday to reduce contamination of the telescope. The payload bay was to be opened Saturday so the telescope's nickel-hydrogen batteries could be removed and taken to a Kennedy Space Center laboratory for recharging.

A protective cover will not be placed over the telescope's aperture door because the procedure is difficult and might result in even more contamination or damage, Wojtalik said.

Discovery's launch was postponed four minutes before liftoff Tuesday when one of the shuttle's three auxiliary power units failed. Technicians will replace the unit with a new one this weekend.

It will be the first time NASA has ever replaced an auxiliary power unit at the launch pad. As a result, the space agency has told technicians to take their time and that "there is no schedule pressure there."

"Changing the APU is going to take what it takes," said John "Tip" Talone, a NASA administrator. "When we get to the changeout of the APU and get back into our normal standard operations ... we'll feel better about the 25th, although I feel pretty good about the 25th right now."

Recharging Hubble's batteries inside a laboratory rather than at the launch pad will extend their lifetime, giving NASA more days to try a launch before the next recharging is necessary, Talone said.

Rezoning may affect sale of Nelson Bunker Hunt's ranch

FORT WORTH (AP) — Plans to sell ex-billionaire Nelson Bunker Hunt's Tarrant County ranch to a Canadian developer could be scuttled by a decision to rezone the property.

The Westlake Board of Alderman's decision to rezone most of the 2,000-acre Circle T ranch to "campus-style" planned office developments could greatly curtail development on the ranch.

Hunt's ranch is being sold as part of a bankruptcy court settlement. But if the ruling by Westlake officials stands, the sale price of the property could decline.

Bills Group, a Canadian developer, has signed a contract to acquire Hunt's ranch and build a retail, office and residential development on the property. Westlake is a city of 200 people northeast of Fort Worth.

The ranch's new zoning classification would limit development to campus-style office buildings. No building could be higher than 700 feet above sea level.

"With a 700-foot requirement, you couldn't even build a basement without being in violation," said Carter Pate, the court-appointed trustee handling the liquidation of the fallen oilman's estate.

Rick Sheldon, a Dallas broker representing Bills Group, said if the zoning change can't be modified the sale agreement is dead. However, he said the group is hopeful of reaching a compromise with Westlake officials.

Any proceeds from the sale of the Circle T will be used to pay creditors of Hunt's bankruptcy.

Feds probe explosion...

23 violations found at plant

HOUSTON (AP) — Federal safety investigators found 23 violations by Phillips 66 Co. stemming from a deadly explosion last year at its chemical plant in Pasadena, the Houston Chronicle reported Friday.
 Some of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration violations dealt with the plant's emergency response plan and its warning systems, a government source told the newspaper's Washington bureau.
 The unidentified source, however, would not release the specific nature of the violations, the newspaper said. Details about safety conditions, violations and possible fines will be disclosed by OSHA by April 22.

The source did not know how many citations were deemed "serious" violations and how many were deemed "willful." The latter carries a larger penalty.

OSHA is expected to recommend substantial fines against Phillips 66 Co., the chemical production and marketing arm of Phillips Petroleum Corp., the source said. Phillips 66 Co. operated the Houston Chemical Complex in Pasadena, a Houston suburb.

"Phillips plans to respond after the company has the opportunity to review OSHA's written report," Phillips officials said in a statement.

Twenty-three people died and 120 were injured in the Oct. 23 explosion that destroyed the facility at the plant that produced polyethylene, which is used in making plastic items.

Phillips officials have said the explosion occurred after a seal on a polyethylene reactor ruptured, leaking highly flammable ethylene and isobutane gas from a pipeline. It was unclear what ignited the gas.

Workers have reported that only a few seconds elapsed between the time they spotted the flammable cloud of gas, heard the warning sirens and were rocked by the explosions.

Phillips officials met with OSHA administrators March 29 for a conference on the agency's findings.

DFW sues 3 suburbs over expansion

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — The Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport board has filed suit against three cities which have battled for more than a year over a $3.5 billion expansion plan.

The suit, filed Thursday in Dallas state district court, challenges whether Euless, Grapevine and Irving have the authority to control development at the airport.

Officials from all three cities said they believe the ordinances are legal and probably will fight the suit.

But airport officials contend the cities exceeded their authority.

"We feel since they adopted these ordinances, contrary to what state law says, we need to have the court ruling as quickly as possible," said Oris Dunham, the airport's executive director.

Airport spokesman Joe Dealey said the legislature granted the board "exclusive responsibility for the development of the airport" through the Municipal Airport Act.

The controversy began when residents expressed concern about the possibility of increased overflights and noise from two proposed runways. Airport expansion also would cause the relocation of 402 families in a $120 million buy out plan.

In an attempt to control the expansion, the cities passed zoning ordinances in November designating the 18,000 airport acres for "governmental use."

"We are looking forward to a very large amount of construction in the next few years," Dunham said. "American Airlines has announced some $250 million worth of work and Delta about $100 million in the next couple of years. With these ordinances that these cities have passed, we're not sure how far we should proceed without knowing who has the right to control construction and development of the airport."

City officials say the lawsuit is premature.

"We had hoped the airport would allow the cities to illustrate how the ordinances would work before they took any action," Grapevine Mayor William Tate said Thursday. "We were even in negotiations to compromise on issues like overflights."

Euless Mayor Harold Samuels said the city stands by its contention that it has the power to regulate all of its land.

"If we lose this, anyone who buys land in our city can do whatever he wants on it. The council has not taken action, but I can tell you that we will certainly fight this."
