Q—Of Western Texas College's proposed budget of $6 million for next year, how much revenue comes from state and federal funds in comparison to local taxes and various fees?

A—Administrators figure the college will receive about $2.3 million in state funds and $184,000 in federal funds for 1990-91. Local taxes will amount to about $1.9 million while tuition will bring in $755,000. Those amount to almost $5.2 million, leaving about $800,000 to be generated from other areas such as fees and funds carried forward.

Srna, Shifflett top students at Snyder High for 1989-90

Cindy Srna was named valedictorian and Sam Shifflett salutatorian during Snyder High School academic awards ceremonies held at Worsham Auditorium.

Srna compiled a grade average of 5.0664 based on the school's 4-point grading system while Shifflett compiled an average of 5.0354. Honors system credits pushed both seniors far past the 4.0 boundaries.

As valedictorian and salutatorian, they were the top two students in the senior class. Other top 10 members of the class, in order, are Anne Osborn, Jason West, Jason Best, Felicia Perry, Annette Ramos, Kathy Armstrong, Dora Jean Rumpff and Jay Parker.

Shifflett was also recognized by Maj. Caroline Gilbert as being an Air Force Academy appointee and will receive a four-year scholarship, estimate in value to be in excess of $200,000. He was one of 1,400 students chosen from a list of 16,000 nominees.

Other students and awards presented during Friday's ceremonies included the top 10 junior, sophomore and freshman students, and the senior students who finished in the top 10 percent and competed in University Interscholastic League (UIL) events. Also announced were a number of individual awards and UIL achievement awards.

The top 10 members of the junior class for 1989-90 are Amy Armstrong, Ken Gartman, Courtney Lowrance, J.K. Palmer, Kim Wilson, Michael Hall, Gayle Henderson, Dayla Church, Melissa Huddleston and Kristi Mize.

UIL will set public hearing to address ineligibility ruling

A public hearing in Austin before the state executive committee of the University Interscholastic League is expected to be set within the next three weeks.

Bonnie Northcutt, a spokesman with the UIL, said the nine-member committee will convene at a date convenient for the members to hear Snyder's violation of no-pass, no play by a member of the Snyder one-act play cast.

The SHS entry had placed second in the Class AAAA state contest and Coy Berryman was named best actor.

Snyder's entry came under question after it was revealed that a grade was changed at the request of drama coach Jerry Worsham after the end of the fifth six-week grading period.

The Texas Education Agency ruled Wednesday that Snyder had violated state law for allowing Berryman's participation. The TEA instructed Snyder Supt. Dalton Moseley to inform the UIL of the ruling and provide them requested information on the case.

Moseley said Friday that he mailed all material to UIL on Thursday, and he is awaiting word on the date for the hearing.

Northcutt said many administrators already have obligations for the summer, therefore it will take longer than normal to arrange the hearing.

She said, however, that the public hearing will likely be held within the next three weeks. Northcutt said the school will be invited to send representatives to present their case.

Any sanctions against Snyder would come following the hearing, which is open to the public. At a minimum, Snyder will have to forfeit any awards relating to the one-act contest.

Berryman's grade of 69 was changed to a passing 70 after the end of the grading period following a letter that math teacher Jamie Hall received from Worsham asking for consideration for Berryman because of his key role in the play and because of the 25 other students in the SHS cast and crew.

Career has unlimited potential, speaker tells officer candidates

Stressing a positive mental attitude as the key to a successful career in corrections, Daniel unit assistant warden Charlie Streetman told 16 correctional officer candidates Friday night that they are entering a career with unlimited potential.

The graduates represent Western Texas College's first daytime correctional officer academy, and they were presented certificates by J.D. Barham, WTC training instructor.

It was the sixth class to receive certification, and brings to 154 the total number of students trained through the WTC program. The graduates are now eligible for employment by the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

Graduates included six from Snyder — Frank James Bevins, Rickey Dale Cathey, Ray Linn Darden, Christopher Ray Derrick, Kristi Kay Dryden and Zeena Renee Layne. Others were Glenis Gayle Duke and Sherry Kaye Mize from Rotan; Randal Ray Barnes, Daniel Joseph Hall and Bryan Keyth Wiebe from Abilene; Stanley Joe Cowley from Lamesa; Richard Wade Guthrie from Merkel; William Christopher Lafer from McCaulley; Mark Arthur Jimenez from Weinert and Carol Ann Lloyd from Colorado City.

Calling out the names of the graduates was Mike Thornton, director of continuing education. Dr. Harry Krenek, college president, welcomed guests and R.C. Patton, a member of the college board of trustees, gave the invocation and benediction.

The graduation also represented the first family affair. Two graduates, Glenis Duke of Rotan and Zeena Layne of Snyder, followed in their husbands' footsteps. Kyle Lane was in the first class and William Duke was in the fifth class.

Streetman said corrections is a

However, the postal station at Snyder Drug will be open for anyone needing those services. Post office officials indicated that mail received before 3:30 p.m. on Monday will be processed and shipped out.

Some retail businesses will be closed Monday and others which normally stay open until 9 p.m. are planning to close at 6 p.m.

The SDN Column

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Old age is when the husband says he's having an affair and the wife wants to know who's catering it."

The Good Book says that it's difficult, but not impossible, for a rich man to enter Heaven. It's so difficult, that it may be easier to thread a camel through the eye of a needle.

To help with a return to ethical management, one of the major Bible publishers is aiming a new Bible at the corporate world. The next handbook of big business may be Thomas Nelson's Businessman's Bible.

The publisher has introduced a new edition with short readings on management and business tied to relevant biblical verses. The man's version comes in navy color with a ship motif while the woman's version is in dusty rose, with floral motif.

The management messages were written by a TV preacher from Atlanta who claims it is biblical to be in subjection to authority—including the boss.

Charles Stanley paraphrases Paul, "Submit to the authority of your employer." He says this applies to even a harsh boss and he cites "remember the angel's words to Hagar, the slave girl who fled into the desert to escape...return to your mistress, and submit yourself under her hand."

The most common management theory is "survival of the strongest." But the new corporate Bible says the meek will inherit the executive suite. "Moses was the meekest man on earth, yet God chose him as field marshal of two million."

While saying the way to Heaven is to climb the corporate ladder, the new publisher also cites obvious temptations. It warns against adultery, consistent fellowship with the same sex and urges minimizing coed business travel.

There are also warnings about the office grapevine which includes complaining about the boss, pay or long hours. "All complaining is against God."

For those coveting a raise, readers are reminded that disgruntled Roman soldiers were exhorted to be content with their wages.

We suspect this Bible will get better acceptance in the board room than in the break room.

Link sought between incidents

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Federal agents are investigating possible links between a car-bomb blast that injured two radical environmentalists accused of carrying the explosives and a recent bombing at a lumber mill.

Earth First! activists Darryl Cherney and Judi Bari, who have been waging a campaign to slow logging in Northern California's old-growth forests, strongly denied knowing anything about the pipe bomb that injured them

Thursday. Some of their supporters accused police of framing the victims, and about 200 environment activists held a vigil at police headquarters Friday night.

The two were put under arrest Friday after police questioned Cherney for several hours.

Bari, 40, was under police guard at a hospital where she was in stable condition after surgery for a fractured pelvis, officials said. Cherney, 33, was treated for minor injuries and booked into city jail.

Oakland Municipal Court Judge Horace Wheatley raised bail to $100,000 each, based on what he called new information from Oakland police. He declined to elaborate.

No charges were immediately filed, but police Lt. Mike Sims said at a news conference, "The evidence is strong they were transporting this device and that's why they were arrested."

"We believe it went off accidentally," Sims said. "Based on our determination of the placement of the device in the car, we believe they should have known it was there."

Sims refused to say where the bomb had been in Bari's car.

"I know they didn't blow themselves up," said Shannon Marr, a friend who was in a car ahead of Bari's vehicle.

He was elected to the membership of the Natural Order of Barristers in March.

He is a 1974 graduate of Snyder High School, a 1978 graduate of Texas Tech and he obtained a masters degree from Sul Ross in 1984.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Rex D. Nall of Snyder. He is married to the former Paula Bell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D.C. Bell of Snyder.

Violence mars closing days of campaign

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — In the final days of a long election campaign marred by bloody attacks by drug traffickers and leftist guerrillas, a new wave of bombings and shootings has killed dozens of people.

In the latest violence, a car bomb blast in a Bogota neighborhood late Friday night seriously injured four people and heavily damaged dozens of homes. With voting set for Sunday, a leading presidential candidate proposed that cocaine be legalized in the United States and other countries to wrest profits from drug traffickers.

"The legalization of cocaine in the world would resolve the problem in Colombia," Alvaro Gomez, a center-right candidate for the National Salvation Movement, told a news conference.

The election front-runner is Cesar Gaviria of the governing Liberal Party, who says there should be no negotiations with drug bosses. The other three candidates have proposed at least some kind of accommodation with them.

No one immediately claimed responsibility for the car bombing Friday night but suspicion fell on drug traffickers blamed for the deaths of more than 250 people, including three presidential candidates, since August.

The assassination that month of then-leading presidential hopeful Luis Carlos Galan, of the Liberal Party, prompted a government crackdown in which authorities have extradited drug suspects to the United States and seized the property of traffickers.

Government officials say the drug barons are apparently stepping up their terror attacks to scare people away from the polls on Sunday. The army said this week that leftist guerrillas also aim to disrupt the balloting.

Since Thursday a wave of bombings and murders in the cocaine capital of Medellin has left 22 people dead and 27 injured. Eight bombs have exploded in Colombia in the last two weeks, killing a total of 34 people and injuring more than 320.

The Medellin cocaine cartel has offered $4,300 for every police officer killed. So far this month, 33 have been assassinated, police said.

The army and police said they were mobilizing about 230,000 troops to ensure peaceful elections.

Bogota is an armed camp. Military checkpoints line major streets and highways, and armored personnel carriers mounted with machine guns patrol the cities. Soldiers are everywhere.

It is difficult to have a conversation with a Colombian these days without the subject getting around to bombs and other terrorist acts.

"The violence is keeping people away from public areas and overwhelmingly reducing their activities. It might also keep people at home for the elections," Camilo Castellanos, a social scientist, told The Associated Press.

A low voter turnout could wrest legitimacy from the winner. That may be exactly what the perpetrators of the violence are seeking in their campaigns to destabilize politics, officials say.

The current president, Virgilio Barco, is barred by the constitution from seeking a second consecutive term.

Security concerns have prevented many candidates from appearing in public, forcing them to conduct their campaigns through television and radio. Three of the main presidential candidates have been murdered during the campaign.

"These are the most tense and difficult elections in Colombian history," Antonio Navarro, the presidential candidate for the left-wing M-19 party, told reporters Wednesday.

Navarro took over as M-19 candidate after his predecessor, Carlos Pizarro, was murdered in April by an assailant who shot him to death on a commercial jetliner over Bogota.

In Medellin, five bodies, with hands and feet bound, were found Friday on a highway, the police spokeswoman said.

Yeltsin does not win in runoff vote

MOSCOW (AP) — Populist Boris N. Yeltsin today failed to win a runoff election for the presidency of the Soviet Union's largest republic, and the Russian Congress now must take new nominations.

Yeltsin is considered one of Mikhail S. Gorbachev's main rivals, and his failure to win the runoff was a major victory for the Soviet leader.

Yeltsin won 503 votes, 28 short of the necessary majority of the 1,060-member congress. His rival, Communist Party functionary Ivan Polozkov, received 497 votes.

Lawmakers said Yeltsin, 59, may run again, or that a compromise candidate with better chances of winning a majority may be nominated.

In Friday's first round of voting by the Russian Congress, Yeltsin won 497 votes, short of the 531 he needed for an absolute majority.

The candidate backed by Gorbachev, Russian premier Alexander Vlasov, withdrew from the race Friday after it became clear he lacked Yeltsin's popularity.

During his campaign, Yeltsin angered Gorbachev with calls for sovereignty for the Russian republic, which includes Moscow, the seat of national leadership. Russia, by far the largest of the nation's 15 republics, contains more than two-thirds of the country's territory and half the Soviet populace.

Gorbachev accused Yeltsin of being anti-socialist and said his plans for Russian autonomy would mean "the breakup of the Soviet Union."

Yeltsin pledged Friday that if elected he would defend the republic from Kremlin interference, but also said he would be able to work with Gorbachev.

Yeltsin told the Russian Congress of his plans to promote Russian sovereignty, establish a market economy, increase housing and fill stores with consumer goods.

He blasted the national government program announced Thursday for a transition to a free-market economy. Yeltsin said he backed an alternative program involving sale of government property, full independence for enterprises, more liberal laws on ownership and foreign loans.

Warring factions call truce

ARANYAPRATHET, Thailand (AP) — Cambodia's four warring factions have signed a cease-fire that will go into effect next month, but one guerrilla official today called the agreement a mere "play on words."

Senior guerrilla sources said the parties agreed to a cease-fire and the formation of a Supreme National Council that would include representatives from each faction and oversee the truce.

The truce will go into effect when it is announced officially at Cambodian peace talks scheduled in Tokyo June 4-5, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity. The parties also will announce that peace talks will be resumed in Paris in July, they said.

The 11-year-old Cambodian civil war pits the Vietnam-backed government in Phnom Penh against a three-party guerrilla coalition that includes the Communist Khmer Rouge, the non-Communist Khmer People's National Liberation Front, and a faction loyal to coalition leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk.

Guerrilla and diplomatic sources say they expect renewed fighting prior to the Tokyo meeting as the guerrillas try to gain new ground and strengthen their bargaining positions.

One guerrilla spokesman, Ok Serei Sopheak of the National Liberation Front, said a truce would not end the fighting.

"It is only a document," he said. "It is a play on words. There will be no cease-fire on the ground."

Another National Liberation Front, Ieng Moly, described the reported agreement as only "a voluntary self-restraint on the use of force. There is no control, no supervision."

DEA offered reward for suspect

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The government offered a reward to the people who brought a Mexican doctor to the United States to face charges in the slaying of an American drug agent, a prosecutor acknowledged.

A U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration spokesman Friday also admitted for the first time that the government made a $20,000 payment about 10 days after Dr. Humberto Alvarez Machain was captured in Mexico to face trial in the 1985 slaying of DEA agent Enrique Camarena.

A witness at a federal hearing in Los Angeles confirmed the $20,000 payment and said the DEA has paid an additional $6,000 a week in "expenses" since April 8 to the Mexicans who abducted the doctor, for a total of $62,000 so far. Another witness, DEA supervisor Hector Berrellez, testified that up to $50,000 was authorized for the capture of Alvarez. He said that DEA Deputy Director Pete Gruden knew of the plan.

The seizure of the doctor from his office in Mexico has created a rift between the U.S. and Mexican governments. Mexico has demanded his return, saying his delivery to the United States violated its sovereignty.

Alvarez, a Guadalajara gynecologist, was arrested April 3 after being brought to El Paso, Texas, to face charges he administered drugs to Camarena during the kidnapping, torture and murder of the drug agent and his pilot.

The lawyer for Alvarez argued vehemently for dismissal of the charges against him. U.S. District Judge Edward Rafeedie asked for more legal documentation before he makes a ruling.

"This defendant is the third defendant in this case whose presence in this country is the result of forcible removal from his country," Rafeedie said.

He apparently was referring to Juan Ramon Matta Ballesteros, the Honduran drug dealer detained by U.S. agents after being arrested in Honduras and sent to the Dominican Republic, and Rene Martin Verdugo Urquidez, handed over to border patrol agents through a hole in the fence on the U.S.-Mexico border.

Assistant U.S. Attorney William Fahey told Rafeedie that capturing a witness in such a fashion was "not frowned upon" in U.S. courts and that legal precedent would allow the case against Alvarez to proceed.

Rafeedie said he would consider whether the court has "a supervisory power" to punish the government for actions even if case law does not make the actions illegal.

"There comes a time when the court has to draw the line on this type of conduct," the judge said.

Few protesters turn out to save pigeons

WACO, Texas (AP) — Animal rights activists are disappointed only 12 people showed up to protest the planned poisoning of several hundred pigeons who have been bombarding aircraft hangars at Fort Hood with odoriferous ammunition.

The group marched four hours at the base, then indicated their numbers might have been greater if pigeons had more personality.

"Oh, if it were Fifi the poodle, everybody would understand and feel for you," said Sharon Ringler of People for Ethical Treatment of Animals. "But that's not the point. The pigeon deserves as much respect as any other animal."

Officials at the army airfield said they are worried about more than the nuisance of cleaning up pigeon droppings. They said the bird waste may spread disease and could harm equipment as it falls into open engine bays.

Although Army officials say they have not yet decided to go ahead with a pigeon poisoning proposal, Maj. Tim Vane said Friday that the alternatives "don't appear to be viable right now."

The animal rights supporters, who came from as far away as Austin and Dallas, said they believe base officials could make the pigeons take wing by modifying their habitat. They say stringing wires across roosting areas would be one method to keep pigeons from sticking around where they are not wanted.

They also suggested lining windows with tiny spikes. "If you kill a bird or take it someplace else, two days later you're going to have another bird," said Chris Kelly of PETA and the Humane Society and Animal Legal Defense Fund. "If you have a bird problem in a chimney and you don't block it off, you're going to forever have a bird problem, and that's what we're trying to tell Fort Hood."

Vane said the Army feels modifications to discourage pigeons would be too expensive.

At least one passerby didn't agree with the protesters, who were carrying signs that said "Birds feel Pain" and "Poison Hurts."

As one man drove by, he leaned out of his window, and shouted, "Kill the pigeons," punctuating it with an expletive.

Vane said the Army has taken unnecessary criticism from animal rights supporters. The Army has nothing against most birds being all they can be, he pointed out.

"We all are concerned about the environment. But the Army they are picketing about the pigeons is also the same Army that is striving to protect the black-capped vireo and golden-cheek warbler," Vane said.

He said Fort Hood officials have been net-trapping the small, endangered birds and attaching identification bands to them. They want to study migratory habits in search of a way to boost their numbers.

"So we are not as insensitive as some people are trying to portray us."

Texas loses millions yearly in fed funds

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas loses $432 million a year in federal funds because of U.S. laws and policies that give other states more than their fair share of money, state Comptroller Bob Bullock charged Friday.

"The war between the states didn't end in 1865. Regional battles are fought every day in Washington, and Texas keeps ending up on the casualty list," Bullock said.

Changes in federal laws and policies that would bring more than $400 million a year back to Texas were outlined by Bullock in the second of a five-part series of reports on federal money.

Texas is being shortchanged a total of $2.4 billion a year in federal funds, Bullock said. He said federal changes would bring back 20 percent of that, while the remaining 80 percent could be regained by state and local changes.

The proposed state and local changes will be detailed in future reports, Bullock said.

Some federal laws that distribute money have been slanted to benefit smaller states, and those in the Northeast and Midwest, he said.

For example, according to the report, Texas loses $90 million a year in housing and community development funds because distribution formulas are based on how much of a state's housing was built before 1940.

"If federal funds were sent back to states based on actual needs and accurate population counts, Texas would get back more of the tax dollars we send to Washington," Bullock said.

By changing federal formulas in this way, the report said, Texas' benefits would include:

- Millions more dollars for federal research facilities.
- Medical care for an additional 120,000 low-income women and children.

— Additional federal aid for more than 1,000 Texas communities to build and expand wastewater treatment facilities.

— Federally subsidized housing for more than 15,000 low-income families.

— Preschool education for about 7,100 additional poor children, and vocational education for nearly 4,100 more students.

— Medical aid and employment training for about 2,500 more disabled people.

— Foster homes for an additional 2,300 abused children.

— Supplemental food aid for an additional 45,000 low-income women and children.

Examples of formula changes, the report said, would be using more accurate census data and modifying or eliminating "hold harmless" provisions that freeze the amount of money states receive. Such provisions hurt growing states with increasing needs, the report said.

The series of reports, called "Dollars We Deserve," is based on a three-year study by the Comptroller's Economic Analysis Center.

Tabloid settles with Selleck's dad

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A supermarket tabloid has paid undisclosed damages to Tom Selleck's father for publishing statements falsely attributed to him in an 1982 article detailing his son's alleged "love secrets."

The Globe, a Florida-based weekly, published an apology this week as part of a settlement of a $6 million libel lawsuit filed seven years ago by Robert Selleck. The terms of the settlement were not disclosed.

The lawsuit concerned a Dec. 14, 1982, story headlined, "Tom Selleck's Love Secrets — By His Father." Other headlines promised, "His father reveals all" about "why Tom Selleck can never become a happy lover."

Robert Selleck denied making any statements about his actor son's love life.

"Although he spoke to a reporter, Mr. Selleck did not write the article for the Globe, did not make certain of the statements in the article, did not reveal any of his son's confidences and did not reveal any of his son's 'love secrets.'" remembrances for the students about to graduate.

It's also a time for one last look at Snyder's athletic accomplishments over the past school year.

The Lady Tiger golf team captured second in the state in the spring while the Snyder boys and girls basketball teams were both in the playoffs.

Both the boys and girls track teams sent representatives from SHS to the regional meet in San Angelo and on to Austin. Tennis player Brandon Martin earned a spot at the regional gathering in Midland.

Snyder's baseball team recovered from some bad luck early in the season to post a respectable 16-9 record and the girls' volleyball unit finished fifth with a 14-11 slate.

The football Tigers went 2-8 through a hard-luck season and the boys golf team managed a sixth place finish in a tough golf district.

The volleyball and football teams began about the same time late last summer. Before classes had even started the spikers were on their way to a 14-11 season record. The Lady Tigers were 6-3 in district play but still placed three seniors on the all-district unit.

ANNE OSBORN

Anne Osborn, 5-8, was named to the first team while 5-8 teammate Teena Braziel was tagged for the second squad.

Jennifer Pate, a 5-0 setter, made the crew as an honorable mention.

Pecos cruised through the volleyball schedule with a 24-1 record, 14-0 within the loop for the championship. Sweetwater's 17-4 and 11-3 were good enough for second place.

Volleyball coach Patty Grimmer didn't waste any tears over the Lady Tigers' record.

"I'm proud of what we accomplished this year," she said at the conclusion of the season.

"We had a lot of success early and kind of dropped off, but the girls gave all they had."

"We have seven graduating seniors who will be missed very much," she said, "but we also have four juniors to build on."

The Tiger football squad and second year head coach David Baugh suffered through a trying 2-8 campaign that saw flashes of brilliance and some down-right maddening losses.

At one time during the football season Snyder had lost three one-point games in a row.

Those coupled with the devastating loss to Sweetwater after time had elapsed set the tone for the last half of the year but positive progress was made throughout the campaign.

Snyder's defense was ranked either first or second in the district most of the year and finished with a final ranking of third giving up just 226.1 yards per outing.

The Tigers managed a 9-6 upset win over preseason favorite Andrews in Tiger Stadium and crushed Ft. Stockton, 34-12, the following week on the road.

Snyder placed 14 gridgers on the all-district squad including four on the first team defense.

Seniors Jody Iglehart, a defensive tackle, defensive back Charlie Guynes, linebacker Tommy Lane and defensive tackle Bill Hodges earned first team honors for their efforts in the 1989 season.

TOMMY LANE

Second teamers included Clint Haywood and Damien Haywood on the defensive line, linebacker Bart Morton and cornerback Willie Garcia.

Fullback Dewayne Cato was selected on the second team offense as was split end Jayson Presley and tight end Hayward Clay.

Mark King, a DB, center Greg Kiker and tailback Paul Anderson were named honorable mentions for Snyder.

Big Spring captured the district title with a 13-3 record and worked their way to the state semifinals before losing, 59-6 to Tyler Chapel Hill.

The boys and girls basketball squads both had exceptional years as the Lady Tigers finished with a 16-10 record overall, 9-5 in District 4-4A play and a tie for second place while the boys overcame a 1-6 non-district start to post a 19-11 mark and finish 12-2 within the loop.

Snyder's girls, coached for the last time in '89-90 by Ken Housden finished tied with Big Spring for the second playoff spot from the circuit by whipping Monahans 57-38 in the last game of the regular season.

Sweetwater had already sewn up the district title with a 14-0 record.

EVETTE HOUSDEN

Big Spring and the Lady Tigers met in a deciding third game at Coahoma where the Lady Steers notched a 67-62 win to advance into post-season play.

Anne Osborn and Evette Housden were both named first team all-district from the Lady Tigers for 1989-90 and teammates Liz Greathouse and Teena Braziel were both tabbed second teamers.

The Larry Scott-coached Tigers ripped through their loop schedule losing just two games — one to preseason pick Andrews in the Mustangs' gym, the other to Pecos in the Eagles nest in the season finale — to wind up the regular season tied with Pecos for first place.

Snyder lost a tie-breaking tilt, 52-51 at Midland Greenwood, to represent the district in the post-season as runner-up.

The Tigers' first opponent in the playoffs was the then fourth ranked Pampa Harvesters.

TRACY BRAZIEL

Despite an early lead over the panhandle team, Snyder was defeated, 62-50.

Snyder placed three cagers on the all-district unit including Most Valuable Player and three-time selection Tracy Braziel.

Braziel was also named to the All-South Plains squad, the All-Big Country team and was listed on the third team all-state ballot of the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches.

He was joined on the all-district team by sophomore post-Hayward Clay and junior forward Ed Rios.

Jason West and Lee Hamilton, both senior guards, were chosen for the second team.

Guynes' 15-0 at regionals was McCarroll of Joshua, who vaulted 15-6 for first place, and a trip to the state meet in Austin.

The senior athlete took seventh position with a 14-0 in the state set affair, 6-2, 3-6, 6-1, to end his capital.

The Snyder golf program was highlighted by the Lady Tigers of coach Penny Perry taking second place in the state Class 4A tournament in Austin.

The Lady Tigers finished second to eventual state champion Andrews in all their district matches in '90. Andrews took the title with a 661 score and Snyder captured the runner-up post with a 710.

Amy Armstrong was named all-state, all-region and all-district with her performance over the course of the season. She fired a combined 156 on rounds of 79 and 77 in Austin to finish as the state's third medalist.

AMY ARMSTRONG

Teammate Jacy LaRoux was tabbed an all-region pick, as well, and Kim Duncan earned all-district honors with the Lady Tigers.

The boys' golf crew, coached by Mackey Green improved 80 strokes over last season's Tigers but still finished sixth in District 4-4A.

Snyder's loop total of 1322 trailed champion Monahans, who improved a total of 120 strokes over the 1989 campaign, with a 1205, Big Spring's 1220, a 1235 score from Sweetwater, Andrews' 1244 and San Angelo Lake View's 1268.

Snyder senior Jay Parker fired a 313 in 1990, three strokes better than his all-district 316 last year, and finished in fifteenth position in the loop.

Chad Jacobi carded a total 329 and placed 27th.

Snyder senior tennis sensation Brandon Martin finished second to Big Spring phenom Rocky Tubb in the loop boys singles tennis tournament and earned a trip to the regional tourney on the campus of Midland College.

Martin was defeated by Barry Thrutchley of Borger in a three-

BRANDON MARTIN

The Tiger baseball team, one of the winningest programs in Texas, fell on hard times early in the season when six key ball players were suspended for rules violations on a road trip.

The remainder of the team pulled in the slack and stayed atop the district standing for most of the first half of the season before losing twice to Monahans and Andrews and once to Pecos and Big Spring to finish the campaign at 16-9 in fourth place.

The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal recently named SHS baseball coach Albert Lewis the coach of its All-South Plains team for his job running the Tigers this year.

All-district baseball selections have not been released.

RANDY MORRIS

Top offensive performers for the SHS baseball team include Willie Garcia who hit .406 with two homers. Garcia was the Tigers second pitcher and starting shortstop most of the season.

Other key hitters for the Tigers were John Wright, Chad Fox and Randy Morris.

Wright, the SHS first baseman, and designated hitter Fox each hit .318 for the season. Wright also contributed a homer.

Morris, an all-district pick in 1989 at third base was injured early and had trouble bending his right knee enough to play effective defense. He did, however, provide a punch on offense hitting a team-high .429 and blasting two round trippers.

Scoring three for the Twins in their Friday night victory were Casey Chaney, Justin Pechecek, Paddy Vantine, Derek Rushing and Scott Reston. Adam Lucero raced home four times while Byron Hayes, Michael Compton and Todd Dobson scored twice and Martin Villereal made one.

The Astros' J.J. Vasquez, Joey Martinez and Kevin Marshall touched the dish three times each, Ricky Halford and Chris Hill made two and Randy Romero, Marcus Diaz and Josh Arnold scored one apiece.

Drivers gear up for Indy 500

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — There is no substitute for victory in the Indianapolis 500.

You can start 33rd and finish second, as Tom Sneva did in 1980; finish in the top five four straight years, as Roberto Guerrero did from 1984 through 1987; or come within four miles of a victory, as Al Unser Jr. did last year, only to watch the win vanish as he hit the wall.

Those things are only part of the landscape at the tradition-laden Indianapolis Motor Speedway. Winning is everything.

"When you win here, it changes your life forever," Sneva said when he finally won in 1983 after three second-place finishes. "You are forevermore known as an Indy winner. It becomes practically a part of your name."

When the 33 cars take the green flag Sunday at noon EDT for the 74th Indy 500, there will be eight former winners in the lineup.

Emerson Fittipaldi, the defending champion, will start at the front, alongside three-time winner Rick Mears. Those two set the pace for another record-breaking Indy field, with Fittipaldi's four-lap average of 225.301 and Mears' 224.215 both better than the previous mark of 223.885 set by Mears a year ago.

The field average of 217.437 broke the year-old record of 216.588.

Bobby Rahal, the winner in 1986, and Mario Andretti, the 1969 champion, will be in the second row, with four-time winner A.J. Foyt — making a record 33rd consecutive start — and 1985 winner Danny Sullivan in the third three-car row.

Sneva will start from the inside of the ninth row, with Al Unser, the only other four-time winner, on the outside of row 10.

Rahal said winning Indy makes all the difference in the world to a driver.

"When you win, you know the flavor and you want to taste it again," Rahal said. "When you win this race, the monkey's off your back.

"I've won a lot of races, coming from behind, but they always ask, 'Is this your year at Indy? Are you going to win here?' Now they ask, 'Can you win again?' That's different. It's like night and day."

The first three rows feature nine of the 10 Chevrolet-powered cars in the field, all considered legitimate contenders.

Arie Luyendyk of the Netherlands, who never has won an Indy-car race, will start from the outside of the front row.

"I've never experienced starting on the front row," he said. "But I need to approach it like any other race. The 500 is very elaborate, but it's still a race with a start and a finish like all of the other ovals."

Michael Andretti, who was leading after 162 laps last year when his engine blew, will be between his father, Mario, and Rahal for the start.

Al Unser Jr., another winner's son looking for his first Indy victory, will start from the inside of the third row.

The younger Unser battled Fittipaldi within 1½ laps of the end last May before the two touched wheels and Unser's car wound up in the third-turn wall. It has only made him more determined.

The purse was a record $5.7 million in 1989, with Fittipaldi becoming the first driver to win more than $1 million for a single event. The overall money is expected to climb to at least $6 million for Sunday's race.

Suns burn Blazers

PHOENIX (AP) — The Phoenix Suns might be confused about what constitutes a safe lead in the NBA playoffs. A 103-57 margin certainly qualifies, however.

The Suns, who blew a 22-point advantage in a 108-107 loss Wednesday night at Portland, built a 46-point bulge Friday night en route to beating the Trail Blazers 123-89.

It was Portland's worst playoff loss in its 20-year history and cut the Trail Blazers' lead to 2-1 in the best-of-7 series for the Western Conference championship.

"We played our kind of game — run-and-gun — and we made things fun again for us," Phoenix coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said. "We haven't lost three games in a row all year and I don't see how anybody can question this team's character after this one."

The Suns, who play host to Portland in Game 4 Sunday, are trying to become only the fifth team in NBA history to recover from a 2-0 deficit to win a best-of-7 playoff series.

"Everybody has been casting doubts about us, but we felt we could do it all along," said Tom Chambers, who scored 15 of his 24 points in the first half for a 70-43 Phoenix lead. "We got back to playing the way we like to play and the way we play best."

"We kept the pressure on them and kept building the lead by playing aggressively instead of just trying to preserve the lead. That's what cost us the last game. We did what we had to do and now we just have to do the same thing Sunday. If we don't, this win won't mean anything."

Portland, which has lost both previous playoff series against the Suns, is not taking this defeat too hard.

"I don't care how many points we got beat by. The series is still 2-1," Trail Blazers coach Rick Adelman said. "We just got to regroup and do some things differently Sunday and come back strong."

Chambers had 10 first-quarter points as Phoenix led 40-18, the most opening-period points ever allowed by Portland in a playoff game.

The Suns built leads of 61-31 and 70-40 in the second period and led 103-57 with 1:06 remaining in the third quarter.

Portland's previous worst playoff loss was 125-101 against the Los Angeles Lakers on April 27, 1985.

"It doesn't matter if you lose by 100. We're still one game up. You got to remember that," center Kevin Duckworth said. "We just didn't play very smart and the Suns played very aggressively."

The Suns' starters made 83.3 percent of their shots, 35 of 42.

Financial Focus

A lot is being written today about the European Economic Community (EEC or Common Market). Yet surprisingly, many U.S. investors know very little about it.

Although members of the European Common Market have traded without tariffs since 1968, expensive physical trade barriers remain. There are border delays at custom posts, inconsistent taxes among countries and protectionist product standards, to name just a few.

In 1987 the EEC, made up of 12 member nations, adopted The Single European Act. This act set 1992 as the deadline for free movement of people, capital, goods and services among the EEC's members.

What does this mean to the European economy and, ultimately, to the world economy?

There is no shortage of over-optimistic projections. CHANGING TIMES says the unification of the European Economic Community could result in 2 million new jobs. Greater efficiency, more equitable taxation and less regulatory confusion should reduce business costs by 10 percent. This means consumer prices could decline by as much as 6 percent.

On the other hand, the ECONOMIST of Britain is skeptical of many of these projections. They see this as "a cunning scheme to lure investments to Europe through high-pressure public relations."

As with most major events, when the dust settles, the truth will probably lie somewhere in the middle. Regardless of what results, European companies are already benefiting. Their securities markets are, and have been, consistently rising.

Economists offer two suggestions for participating in this growth. One school of thought suggests focusing on countries. France, Spain and West Germany are the reported top choices. This reasoning is based on that old economic nemesis, inflation. These countries have less inflation than others within the European Economic Community.

The other camp favors investments based on companies. Those that can effectively and profitably participate in this new world market are said to be the ones to own.

All this, of course, is academic to U.S. investors who may be unfamiliar with European companies or markets. If you are such a person, the simplest and, probably, the safest way to participate is through the purchase of mutual funds. These investments represent the pooled resources of many investors. The primary benefits of mutual funds include professional management of your money as well as the risk reduction inherent in having money spread among a wide variety of investments.

Mutual funds consisting of global or international investments are popping up everywhere. It is, therefore, prudent to investigate them before you invest. Make sure management is qualified and has an established track record in this specialized sector. Too often one is quick to jump at the magic words "global" and "international" without concern for fund management.

The European Economic Community could be one of the major economic developments of the 1990's. You owe it to yourself to learn more about it.

Bentsen says he does not seek White House

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, continued to deny Friday night that he is considering running for president in 1992, but he did take a swipe at the man who currently holds the office.

Bentsen, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and a leading congressional negotiator in the ongoing "budget summit" with President Bush said this country's chief executive needs to accept the "obligation of leadership."

Speaking at a news conference before a political fund-raiser Friday night, Bentsen likened Bush to a quarterback who, with his football team on the 5-yard line on the crucial final play of the Super Bowl, asks for a volunteer to "carry the ball."

Probe 'casts grave doubt' on Iowa verdict

New investigation suggests blast may have been an accident

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional findings "cast grave doubt" on the Navy's official conclusion that a troubled sailor probably caused the blast that killed 47 servicemen aboard the battleship USS Iowa, lawmakers said Friday.

The new investigation, by the General Accounting Office, suggests the explosion may well have been an accident.

Congress' report came one day after the Navy reopened its own investigation, citing unexplained ignition of gunpowder in a test.

The Navy, in a report last September, concluded that gunner's mate Clayton Hartwig probably set off the April 19, 1989, explosion by inserting a chemical detonator between bags of powder in one of the warship's 16-inch guns.

The service resumed testing after Congress sought advice from scientists at the Sandia National Laboratories in Albuquerque, N.M., who then conducted an independent analysis of the Navy's initial findings.

Sandia analysts said at a Senate hearing Friday they believed a possible cause of the Iowa explosion was the unintentional high-speed overramming of gunpowder bags in the barrel.

The GAO said forms of some of the chemical constituents of what the Navy had theorized was an ignitor were "either commonly used in the turrets or are part of the maritime environment."

The Navy, in reopening its investigation Thursday, ordered a halt to any firing of 16-inch guns aboard the service's four battleships.

"I anticipated that the testimony we would receive this morning would expose significant shortcomings in the Navy's investigation and would cast grave doubt on the conclusions," said Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

"I believe that the testimony we have heard has done that and more."

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, who represents Hartwig's home state, said the Navy blamed the seaman "because of its inability to find other reasons. That's wrong. The rush to blame Hartwig was flat wrong."

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., added: "The Navy's conclusion is seriously undermined."

But Sen. John Warner of Virginia, the ranking Republican on the Armed Services Committee, said, "It's far too early to jump to any conclusions" about a firing system that has worked tens of thousands of times since World War II.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said he would reserve judgment on the new reports until additional investigations are completed.

Navy officials "did the best job they could. Now there's new evidence, new information that warrants reopening the investigation," Cheney said. "But I think at this point I'd want to keep my powder dry, so to speak, until we have a better sense of exactly what this new information may contribute."

Ret. Capt. Fred Moosally, the Iowa's skipper at the time of the explosion, attended the hearing Friday but declined to comment on the testimony, saying, "I'm only here to listen."

Hartwig's sister, Kathy Kubicina, who also attended the hearing, said that even though the new evidence didn't prove what happened aboard the battleship, it would help clear her brother's name.

"My brother was only a victim," she said. "I would just like to see them admit that they made a mistake and just say ... 'we really don't know what happened.'"

Investigators from the GAO and Sandia took issue with the Navy's finding that "unique foreign materials" in the rotating band of the projectile were evidence of a chemical detonator.

The analysts found that some of the chemical constituents of what the Navy had indicated was an ignitor — calcium, chlorine and certain glycols — are found in other 16-inch guns, including those on the USS Iowa, the USS Wisconsin and the USS New Jersey. One glycol is a constituent of a cleaning and lubricating fluid known as Break-Free that was routinely used in the turrets, and the Navy's identification of the second glycol was incorrect, the analysts said.

The outside investigators said they also found that the powder bags were overrammed against the projectile about 24 inches — three inches more than the Navy established. This occurrence, combined with the impact sensitivity of the powder bag pellets, may have touched off the explosion, they indicated.

The Navy was informed several weeks ago about the results of tests conducted by Sandia on possible explosions using 8-inch guns.

Ten days ago Nunn wrote Adm.

Carleton A. ... the cause of naval operations, to complain the service was not moving fast enough to act on evidence that the Iowa blast might have been caused by a friction problem.

In that time, the Navy conducted its own tests and on Thursday, five 96-pound bags filled with gunpowder pellets were dropped in a vertical column with weights on top of them, in an attempt to recreate the force that rams the bags through a 16-inch gun barrel on a warship.

On the 18th test, an explosion occurred, analysts said.

Police investigate burglary of College Ave. service station

Snyder police early Saturday were investigating the burglary of L&L Service Station at 3812 College Ave.

At 8:07 a.m. Wade Baze reported to the police department that the station had been entered sometime during the night and that an undetermined amount of cash had been taken.

Police said entry was gained by breaking a glass in the south door. No merchandise was reported missing.

At 12:12 p.m. Friday, Gilbert Costilla reported that someone had stolen property from a storage building at the ABC Storage. Police took a report for a Class A theft.

At 11:03 a.m. Friday, Ronald Porter of 3100 Ave. I reported the theft of a bicycle from that address.

Starting just before midnight Friday, city officers were called to three fights, but were unable to locate any subjects at two locations. Police were called to the club at the Great Western Motel at 11:19 p.m. where it was reported that a woman had been assaulted by another subject. The victim, however, declined to file charges.

At 4:10 p.m. Friday at 2310 25th St., officers were called to investigate an incident of a broken windshield. A man said his son had broken out a windshield of another man's car, but the two men had reached an agreement, officers were told.

At noon Friday, officers were called to Snyder High School where administrators said a subject would not leave when requested.

Two persons were arrested for driving while intoxicated. The first, a 38-year-old man, was apprehended at 12:04 a.m. Saturday in the 1900 Block of 40th St. The second, a 60-year-old female, was arrested at 4:12 a.m. in the 100 Block of 37th St.

The only wreck inside the city on Friday occurred at 12:18 p.m. in the 3900 Block of College Ave. The mishap involved a 1985 Chevrolet driven by Juan Garcia of 107 Chestnut and a 1985 Chevrolet pickup driven by Ronald Kincheloe of Route 3, Snyder. There were no injuries and damage was minor.

One arrested at rural keg party

Officers of the Scurry County sheriff's office and local units of the Department of Public Safety investigated two reported "keg parties" Friday night.

Officers were unable to locate one in southwest Scurry County. At 10:20 p.m. officers got a report of approximately 10 car loads of people at a party north of Union.

DPS arrested an 18-year-old male for minor in possession and for an outstanding DPS warrant for no seat belt.

Barbara Grannato loves working with children, especially children with handicaps or learning disabilities. In fact, few things give her more pleasure than seeing a child with special needs get the help he/she needs in order to make it in today's tough and competitive classroom.

Grannato, who is the wife of Tiger coach Joe Grannato, has just completed her first year as the Director of Special Programs for the Snyder Independent School System. As such, she devotes her talents to working with school programs such as special education, bilingual and migrants, and she also works with school nurses.

"Basically, I work in a supervisory role with teachers," Grannato said, adding, "Essentially, I work with teachers and coordinate the support services which are available to students."

"Seeing children with problems get the help they need is one of the most rewarding things I can do," Grannato said.

Sometimes, though, lack of awareness of what is available to students, teachers and parents is one of the biggest problems to overcome.

"Snyder has wonderful teachers and administrators who support programs for students with special needs and the school board is very cooperative also as the trustees want to do whatever is necessary to help a child in need," she said.

Grannato also acknowledged that classroom aides "do more than a terrific job." "It's wonderful to be able to walk into a classroom and not be able to tell the difference between the teacher and aide oftentimes because they compliment one another so well professionally."

Grannato's praise also extends to Snyder Schools' administrative secretaries who, as she put it, "have saved my life a million times."

One discordant note did emerge during this interview though as Grannato reported, with regret, that "Snyder had just lost its Regional Day School for the Deaf which had been funded by the Texas Education Association who channeled monies to operate the program through Abilene.

Prior to this latest development, Snyder had been able to have classes for deaf students, some of whom came from Colorado City and Hermleigh as well as Snyder. The out-of-town students will have to seek special help from another source, Grannato said, but a special signed interpreter will be hired who will work with Snyder's one deaf student while she attends mainstream classes.

Programs for deaf students will still be operated in Lubbock, Abilene and Big Spring.

Grannato said she regrets losing the program not only because of what it meant to the deaf students they serviced, but also because it means losing "one very fine teacher."

Grannato and her staff try to help all students regardless of whether their problem is emotional, a learning or speech disability, or lack of English language skills.

Anyone can initiate a referral on a child not just a teacher or parent. If the child is of school age then the first step is to contact the principal of the school the child attends or if it's a preschooler, then Grannato said they can contact her directly.

That's what "starts the wheels turning," so to speak, as in

A CHILD'S BEST FRIEND — Barbara Grannato, director of special programs for the Snyder Independent School District, just might be the best friend a handicapped child or child with a learning disability might have. She coordinates all of Snyder's support services which are designed to help children with special problems. She also works with migrant children who have difficulty keeping up in the classroom because of frequent moves. (SDN Staff Photo) depth assessment of the child in question is then started. However, Grannato explained that nothing can be done unless the child's parent or legal guardian give permission. But, this usually is not a problem because the responsible adult in the child's life usually realizes that (a) the child needs help, and (b) this is the best way to go about getting it.

Once the assessment begins, the students is evaluated by Snyder's three educational diagnosticians who administer intellectual and academic tests individually.

According to Grannato, this process "is the most wonderful thing which can happen to a child" because, essentially, it points out the "strengths each child has."

When necessary, Grannato said they hire a psychologist who will administer a psychological test. Fourteen such tests were administered during the 1989-90 school year.

Grannato emphasized that an organized "team effort" evaluates and works with each child as his or her special needs are determined. One person cannot do it alone, so an "ARD" (Admission, Review and Dismissal) Committee is formed so that all of the professional people previously mentioned have direct input into the child's assessment.

This committee decides what the student needs and how best to achieve it. Usually, their decisions are unanimous, but if a unanimous decision is not possible, then Grannato said they will "dismiss for 10 days" and then meet again in order to "explore other options."

She added that parents usually cooperate very well and most will listen to what the teacher has to say because they realize that since the teacher has the child for several hours each day that he/she "know the child best."

It's not unusual for a child to have a two-inch thick file after this evaluation process has been completed.

Grannato is also proud of the bilingual programs which have been implemented at Central Elementary and at both the junior high and high school.

Children are encouraged to speak in both languages, but English is the predominate one, Grannato said. Bilingual students are often "very bright" but are "handicapped" because they don't know English, she explained. Some students start the year not knowing a word of English, but as the school year progresses she said their knowledge of English improves greatly. Special tutoring is arranged whenever necessary and students are great at helping each other out, Grannato said.

But, before any bilingual training can begin, Grannato said the parent or legal guardian has to give their permission.

Grannato said that one of the paradoxes of her job is that it started out with her and her staff providing a support group for teachers, but that sometimes that can be turned around now where the teachers are "now supporting us."

She also said that they have recently purchased a Special

Squeeze right, squeeze wrong

By James Jacoby

Of course six hearts is a better contract. But declarer had to bear the burden of his clumsy bidding. So he won the ace of diamonds and forced out the ace of hearts. Then he took the diamond king and ran all the hearts. His last four cards were the A-K of clubs and the A-Q of spades. As you might imagine, West kept the K-6 of spades and the high diamond, so declarer had to lose another trick. Could something have been done about it? Watch closely.

Let declarer win the ace of diamonds and cash the ace of clubs. West will win the ace of hearts and continue diamonds. Declarer takes the king and runs the heart suit. Along the way he makes the unusual play of discarding his winning king of clubs. At the finish the last three cards in dummy are a spade, a diamond and the club jack. Declarer will be down to A-Q-J of spades. And West? To come down to three cards, West must either unguard the spade king or else throw away the club queen or the high diamond. If he throws away either minor-suit winner, the corresponding card in dummy becomes good and can be played next. That will squeeze West once again. His only hope is that East holds as much as the jack of spades, so he should blank the spade king. But South then succeeds by playing to his ace, dropping West's king and taking the last two tricks with the Q-J.

James Jacoby's books "Jacoby on Bridge" and "Jacoby on Card Games" (written with his father, the late Oswald Jacoby) are now available at bookstores. Both are published by Pharus Books.

Cutworm season

By Deanna Holladay
Texas Agriculture
Extension Service

Mesquite cutworm larvae are feeding on mesquite leaves in Scurry County. One species feeds only at night and remains hidden under rough bark or at the base of the tree during the day. When fully grown, the larvae are about one and three quarters inches in length. Another species of cutworm feeds throughout the day. The worms are black with light-colored to gray parallel lines running the length of the body.

Most of the foliage may be stripped from mesquite trees are heavily infested with mesquite cutworms. When these cutworms are damaging mesquite trees in the home landscape, carbaryl (Sevin) will provide effective control when sprayed on the foliage.

The adult stage of the mesquite cutworm is a moth. In the next few weeks, large numbers of moths should be emerging. The moths, which are almost black, have a light colored line about one third of the way back across the wings. When the wings are folded, this line forms a V. There is a crescent shaped orange spot on the end of the underwings.

If the moths become a problem in the home, aerosol sprays containing pyrethrins or resmethrins will be helpful in controlling moths. They will not cause any damage in the home but may be a nuisance. Use yellow lights that do not attract the moths if the presence of large numbers of moths become a problem.

Education bus which has a lift which was used by a student with cerebral palsy and three others this past school year.

Special education programs are invaluable for the students who need them, but Grannato said they are not designed for the "severely handicapped child."

She also said that she works with "LDs" or children with learning disabilities. A child with a specific learning disability usually has average or above average intelligence, but "hidden handicaps" prevent him/her from learning. If the child is assessed early enough and the learning disability is identified as soon as possible then the child has a greater chance of being helped.

Boys seem to have more LD problems than girls do, and usually their fathers were also classified as LDs when they were in school.

During assessment, the child with an LD may be discovered to be "bright." Reading, writing and math skills will be evaluated to see what the child is able to do and what the child should be able to do.

One problem which many students face is dyslexia, a specific learning disability which causes the child to see things backwards and from right to left which causes disorientation.

Dyslexia has no specific test which identifies its presence in a child. Dyslexics might be strong some subjects and weak in others. Children with LDs, whether it's dyslexia or another problem, can often be helped by attending special resource classes for part of the school day.

However, Grannato said that it is important for parents to accept that their child is dyslexic or has another learning disability, because that is the only way for the child to get the necessary help.

Again, Grannato emphasized that they always try to "point out the child's strengths" because that is so important for the parent to know and accept as well as the fact that their child is having trouble learning in the classroom.

Grannato said dyslexic children learn to compensate. They have terrific memories she said, and they can learn orally. Often, they are labeled "visually handicapped."

Grannato said that when children with special needs are tested the results are shared with them as quickly as possible, because it is also important for them to realize the areas in which they are strong as well as the areas in which they are weak.

Grannato also works with migrants who also have special learning problems because they move around a lot.

In Texas, most migrant students have fathers who work as farm hands, while other parts of the country might have migrant children who have fishermen as fathers.

Grannato said that now a central computer in Arizona keeps track of all migrant students and when migrant students enroll at Snyder schools, their records are automatically transferred.

Grannato also works with school nurses whose services are available to all students in Snyder Schools, not just those with handicaps or learning disabilities.

Grannato said they also provide early childhood classes which can begin at age three or earlier if necessary. If blind or deaf, handicapped children can be served from birth.

She said she loves children and she loves to work at a furious pace because that is when she does her best work.

"I'm at my best when I'm going 24-hours a day," she said.

Grannato grew up in Brownfield and obtained her masters degree from the University of Oklahoma. She has taught four years in all, been an educational diagnostician, an associate school psychologist and was a diagnostic consultant for six years at Tyler. All emotionally disturbed students in Tyler were her responsibility.

In addition, she has taught disturbed high school children for two years in Magnolia and once served as the diagnostician for the Sweetwater Co-op.

While living in Oklahoma, Grannato said the University of Oklahoma was then just beginning a program of study related to learning disabilities in children which was open to anyone who had at least three years teaching experience. Grannato qualified in that regard and at a friend's urging she enrolled and liked it so well that she pursued more studies in the field.

Grannato and her husband have three children and two grandchildren. A daughter, Tonia Newsom, lives in Brownfield and has two children, Tate and Morgan. Todd is a construction engineer in Santa Barbara, Calif., and Tregg attends Texas Tech University.

Introduces LE CREUSET

Enameled Cast Iron
Cookware from France

Benefits

Le Creuset enameled cast iron has long been recognized as one of the best materials available for cookware for any heat source. The flat bottoms make full contact with appliances; gas, electric, ceramic, induction and solid fuel.

The weight and thickness of the pot increases the retention and distribution of heat, thus promoting gentle, even cooking at low heat. This is not only economical, but ensures that the best flavor is brought out from ingredients while cooking.

The attractive enameled coating provides for an easy to clean surface that will not absorb odors or flavors.

CHECK OUT THE OUTLETS

Designer outlets offer designer merchandise 25-80 percent off the regular full price. The upscale outlets started appearing only about six years ago. The number of outlets of all kinds grew 18 percent last year, compared with five percent for full-price specialty stores and one half of one percent for department stores.

According to Value Retail News, an outlet and off-price trade journal, outlets' annual average sales of $211 a square foot. That's slightly higher than ladies specialty stores in large shopping centers. The difference is that the outlets are owned by designer-manufacturer, thus, eliminating middlemen, and advertising cost are almost nonexistent.

Outlet centers and outlet malls have begun to affect American shopping habits. They are found on major highways either between two sizeable cities or tourist areas. A recent Gallup poll of Money subscribers found that nearly a third consider shopping opportunities when planning a vacation. And a majority — 54 percent — reported that non-food shopping is a family activity. An estimated 500 bus companies now offer a range of special tours, some just to malls, others to malls plus a traditional tourist attraction.

Some generalities of what you will find in a typical designer outlet mall include:

—A broad mix of merchandise, as designers favor their outlets over off-price stores.

—Stock tends to lag behind what you'll see in department and specialty stores as much as one season. For example, if you need a sweater this month, the place to look for it is in outlets, not department stores, which are already pushing spring items.

—Premises are usually unattractive but clean and easy to shop. Dressing rooms are ample and often have private booths.

—Return policies vary but are clearly spelled out in signs near the checkouts. Service is minimal — mainly cashiers and dressing room monitors.

—Most outlets discount their discounts at different times of the year, especially in January and the summer.

University of Wisconsin researchers found that of sudden infant death victims, 20% were lying, face down, on a waterbed. Many other dead infants had been sleeping on a soft quilt or comforter, apparently unable to raise their head from the soft bedding, and thus smothered by it. A firm mattress without a pillow is mandatory for babies who cannot easily lift their heads or turn themselves in bed.

Washing before wearing extends hosiery life

NEW YORK (AP) — New hosiery — particularly stretch nylon — might last longer if you wash it before wearing, but there's not a thread of evidence that putting stockings in the freezer will make them more durable, says Mae Clarke, manager of public relations for Hanes Hosiery.

"New hosiery has a finish to make it look good in the package," says Clarke. "If you wear them with the finish in them, you restrict the elasticity to some degree. So it's well to wash them before."

Clarke says the average life span for stockings is eight wearings, so you want to do what you can to get the most wear. Storing them separately from other garments helps, and be sure they are well protected when packing for travels.

"You can bruise them if you drop jewelry on them, for example, creating a stress area," Clarke says.

Other tips for better wear: — Before putting on hosiery, remove all jewelry and make sure nails and cuticles are smooth. Keep toenails cut short, too.

— If snags are a recurring problem, wear cotton gloves.

— If adjustment is needed when putting on hosiery, inch it from ankle to waist or take hose off and start again.

— To launder, use cold or lukewarm water and mild soap or detergent. Be sure detergent contains no chlorine bleach, which could damage fibers and remove color. Squish suds through hosiery, gently rubbing foot area if needed. Rinse in clear water and squeeze.

First time buyers don't have cash

BY CHANGING TIMES
The Kiplinger Magazine
For AP Newsfeatures
A typical house today costs about $96,000. With a 10 percent down payment and, say, $3,000 in closing costs, buyers need at least $12,600 cash up front — an amount out of the question for many couples.

An estimated one-fourth of would-be buyers have the income for monthly home payments but not enough cash for a down payment. That's where parents come in. They can give money as a gift, provide a loan or share in the ownership in exchange for cash up front.

GIFTS — The advantages of a gift are self-evident: Kids get the money (and a brighter balance sheet) free and clear. Parents benefit, too, because cash transfers can save estate tax and administration expenses later.

You and your spouse can each give up to $10,000 per year per person to as many people as you want without paying any federal gift taxes or filing any IRS forms. You simply write the checks.

The rules get complicated when you give more than the $10,000-per-year limit. In addition to annual tax-free gifts, everyone can transfer a total of $600,000 to others (and an unlimited amount to a spouse) — via lifetime gifts or bequests — without worrying about the federal gift and estate tax. Gifts beyond $10,000 a year eat into that $600,000 allowance.

The few states, including New York, North Carolina and Tennessee, that levy gift taxes have their own rules, which usually differ from the federal system's. Check with a tax professional in your state before giving more than the $10,000-per-year-per-person ceiling.

Lenders want assurances that a parental "gift" is just that and not a disguised loan, because mortgage creditworthiness is based primarily on the borrower's income and debt load. A secret agreement to repay parents can throw debt calculations out of whack and hang young homeowners with outsized liabilities.

And, gift or not, kids must still come up with part of the money. On conventional loans, a 5 percent down payment ordinarily must come from the buyers' own resources. Parents can help with the rest.

LOANS — There are a number of ways to make loans — and not all of them involve cash. Among the quickest, easiest and most substantial loans a parent can make to a child buying a home is that of a good name and credit record. By co-signing the mortgage, a parent promises to pay the mortgage if the child cannot. A parent is not automatically a co-owner of the house under such an arrangement and, usually, does not make mortgage payments.

The danger would be if the child ran into difficulties. Should a lender foreclose for missed payments, co-signers are liable for the difference between the principal loan amount and proceeds from the foreclosure sale.

Cash loans are another option. If parents act as mortgage lenders for their offspring, they should conduct the transaction in a businesslike fashion. A mortgage loan from parents should include a legally recorded lien so kids can deduct the mortgage-interest payments.

The interest rate should be businesslike, too, because bargain-basement, below-market loans get tough treatment from the Internal Revenue Service. If parents charge 2 percent interest on a home loan, the government will consider the difference between payments at that rate and payments on the same size loan at a minimum, government-set rate to be a gift. Unless the loan is a large one, such a "gift" will likely be covered by the $10,000-per-year giving rules.

But the arrangement can have other tax consequences for the lender: The parents to whom the interest is imputed must pay tax on interest income they never receive.

Your loan may avoid these hassles, though. No interest is required on loans of less than $10,000. For loans up to $100,000, the IRS won't get involved as long as the borrower's investment income is less than $1,000. Apparently, the IRS wants to be sure the borrowers are using most of their own money before waiving interest requirements on loans over $10,000.

Government-set rates can actually be a good deal for parents and kids. In April the long-term rate for a loan that calls for monthly compounding was 8.42 percent — at least a percentage point below the market rate for mortgages in most places.

Complex IRS rules apply for gift taxes, mortgage-interest deductions, and income calculations on such loans. When setting up this or any other type of mortgage loan with a family member, consider playing it safe and having a lawyer prepare and register your loan document, and get a tax accountant to set up the tax details.

With another type of loan called an equity-kicker arrangement, parents can get loan-interest income and a piece of the children's home-value appreciation. Equity kickers work somewhat like convertible bonds, which offer regular interest payments and potential stock-price appreciation.

Whatever type of loan you choose, you'll need to think about time limits.

International students coexist without confrontations

NEW YORK (AP) — In a couple of small corners of this metropolis, young representatives of many nations rub shoulders each day without confrontation over boundaries, religion or culture.

They come from the Soviet Union, Iraq, Israel, China, the United States and more than 100 other countries. They attend the United Nations International School, which for more than four decades has exemplified the meaning of coexistence.

The United Nations International School (UNIS) is an independent, coeducational elementary and secondary school in an unusual international setting.

Located on two campuses — along the East River in Manhattan and in Jamaica Estates in the borough of Queens — UNIS serves a wide range of families living in the New York metropolitan area, including many affiliated with the U.N. and the city's international community.

The 1,400 pupils are served by a full-time faculty of 161 drawn from 40 countries.

What makes UNIS unusual, says its director, Joseph Blaney,

"is a commitment to global awareness by the students, the staff, an unusual curriculum as well as extracurricular activities and events in conjunction with the U.N."

Blaney cites the annual U.N.-UNIS Conference, when for two days each spring UNIS pupils take over the United Nations to discuss issues of international importance. The conference is organized by the pupils and is the culmination of a year-long project involving investigative research and writing. This year's topic: "Education for Survival."

"International schools focus on the future in dealing with the salient issues of human society which transcend political and geographic boundaries," says Blaney. "These include the peaceful resolution of conflict, protection of the environment, sexism, religious fanaticism, poverty, famine, and disease; controlled development and equitable sharing of Earth's natural resources; stopping violent crime and terrorism and the spread of drugs, and shared exploration of space and seas."

In view of recent developments in Eastern Europe, Latin America and South Africa, says Blaney, "students without a deeply-rooted global understanding and commitment will have been the victims of educational malpractice."

Although many languages are spoken in the school, 10 languages are taught regularly for credit — Arabic, Chinese, Dutch, French, German, Italian, Japanese, Russian, Spanish and Swedish.

This may be carrying things a little too far. Aside from the as yet unwritten column concerning Uncle Elber, Crazy Joe Hettermeyer and their amateur gospel hour which I mentioned two or three weeks back, I don't have a column for you this time around.

Nothing. Zip. Nada.

So, I've decided to fabricate one. It's pretty drastic. I've decided that I'm going to quit smoking.

It's a heck of a price to pay just to get a column out, but...

SDN Opinion Page

Columns - Cartoons - Look Back - Letters - Quotables

First of all, I want to get the date and time right. Monday, May 28, at 2 p.m.

Oh sure, I know what you're thinking. "Why not right now. Just throw 'em down. Bang! Right now."

Well, right now I'm writing this column, which will appear in Sunday's paper, and I'm not writing it to say I have quit. I'm writing it to say I'm going to quit. Or at least try.

So it's Monday, at 2 p.m.

"At 2 p.m.?"

Absolutely. One cigarette after lunch and that'll do it.

And you can forget about me quitting at night, just before going to bed. I don't need to wake up at 6 a.m. with the realization, that in addition to a long Monday ahead of me, I popped off and said I'd try to quit smoking.

Besides, I've been here before. Unsuccessfully, obviously, but I have learned a few things about quitting. Start in the morning and the day lasts 48 hours. Start in the afternoon, and by the next morning you can at least psych yourself with the fact that you've already been without for 15 hours or so.

"But why not Sunday?"

'Cause Sunday is a day of rest. So give it a rest, okay?

Besides, it takes a little time to reshape my thinking from "So, what? It's my life and I'll do what I want," to "It's my life, and I better do something about it."

Please, no phone calls or letters telling me about all the diseases I can get if I continue. How bad cancer is, etc. You don't get stubborn people to quit by threatening them.

What works is, at a buck-fifty-plus a pack, I'm doing some serious money burning here. A pretty good size bonfire after 20-plus years.

I'm also tired of paying "sin" taxes every time some idiot legislator can't think of another way to come up with the money. Of course, after enough people quit, they'll come up with another tax, which I'll undoubtedly have to pay, too. But in the meantime...

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

"After it rains
There is a rainbow
And all of the colors are black.
It's not that the colors
aren't there
It's just imagination we lack."

There aren't too many magic-makers in the world, and when one of them is lost to us, it's as if the sun has been eclipsed, or, as Paul Simon wrote in his song "My Little Town," all the colors in the rainbow are black.

I've spent the past week trying to imagine what the planet would be like if Kermit or Miss Piggy had never existed, what the lives of millions of children would be like if they had never seen "Sesame Street," or how Saturday morning would be without "Muppet Babies" cartoons, or what families might have done for entertainment if they had not gone to see various Muppet movies together or watched the incredible wonderment of any of Jim Henson's creations on television or stage.

I suppose we would have, all survived, but think how colorless our lives would soon have been.

"When you first met the man, you were immediately struck by his gentleness," said Joel Siegel of "Good Morning, America," about Henson. His gentleness, yes. And his almost awe-struck love for children. (He had five of his own.) Yet the true genius of Jim Henson goes beyond that, because he reached out, not just to children, but (as he said himself), "to the child in all of us."

I can honestly say I have never met any parents who grumbled about having to take their children to see a Muppet movie. As for me, one of my favorite moments in all moviedom was the time Charles Grodin, playing it perfectly straight, kissed Miss Piggy and pledged his undying love for her.

The magic, you see, was that we BELIEVED.

Henson once said that it never ceased to amaze him that he would be sitting in front of a group of children with Kermit the puppet frog on his hand in plain sight, but that when Kermit spoke, they BELIEVED it was Kermit speaking, even though Henson never pretended to be a ventriloquist.

He was a magic-maker.

He didn't stop there. He used his incredible gifts, not just to entertain, but to TEACH. When he discovered that inner-city and otherwise poor children were starting school at a distinct disadvantage over more privileged youngsters whose parents could afford expensive pre-schools, he set out to create an educational program that stunned children with sheer delight of fantasy and fun, while at the same time, he taught them the alphabet, numbers, colors, shapes and language — all skills necessary for the pre-schooler to learn to be able to blend into kindergarten. There are now hundreds of copycat shows just like it all over the world.

Hand puppets were just the beginning. With the onslaught of computer technology, Henson used his own peculiar wizardry to create pure spectacles of imagination of film, all of which put forth subtle messages of the importance of honesty, love, loyalty, self-esteem, family and friendship. And all along, his pioneering "Sesame Street" program taught youngsters respect for authority, self-sufficiency, and how to handle such important life passages as the birth of a sibling or the death of a loved one.

Through it all, he never grew stale or complaisant. Friends and co-workers say he always ended a visit with an ebullient, "Have fun!" And he continued to welcome new challenges, such as his most recent accomplishments: bringing the wildly popular "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles" to the silver screen and the Muppets to Disneyworld.

His death, at the impossibly young age of 54 of a sudden illness, comes as a staggering shock to all of us who have a hard time picturing Kermit's voice stilled forever. I think of the famous lines by poet Dylan Thomas: "Do not go gentle into that good night. Rage, rage, at the dying of the light."

As I write this, Jim Henson is being laid to rest. And do you know what his last request was?

He didn't want anybody coming to his funeral wearing black. It must be a celebration of life, he insisted... and all the colors of the rainbow must be there.

SDN Letters to the Editor

To the editor,

In response to the letter in the May 20th edition of The Snyder Daily News from Justin Baize, I'd like to share my thoughts on Justin's predicament, and on Officer Jay Johnson.

Justin described an event in which an unlicensed, uninsured person drove a "piece of junk" motor scooter illegally and unsafely (driver not helmeted) on a public roadway, and was subsequently ticketed for doing so. What was unfair? Simplistically, it is the job of a police officer to enforce and uphold the law, not to determine the law, or the fines for offenses.

I do appreciate Officer Johnson. I have seen and heard of too many traffic related tragedies, and possibly Officer Johnson's actions that day may have prevented the occurrence of a future tragedy. Maybe not. But as a licensed and insured driver for eighteen years, I've seen numerous similar illegal and potentially dangerous traffic situations and have thought, "Where's a cop when you need one?"

Maybe it was just your tough luck that day, Justin, to have been caught. But maybe Officer Johnson went home that day grateful to have ticketed you and your friend for your offenses, rather than having to notify your loved ones of a tragedy, perhaps caused by your unsafe and illegal actions.

On another note, as director of the Noah Project family violence center in Snyder, I have dealt with Officer Johnson on a one-to-one basis for several years. I have always found him to be courteous, knowledgeable, and caring. Snyder and Scurry County residents are fortunate to have police and sheriff's departments that are staffed by quality law enforcement personnel. I am grateful for them all.

To the editor,

I see where the commissioners court can't seem to make up its mind about opening the Towle Park swimming pool.

Commissioner C.D. Gray said about 200 names are on petition. Are they old enough to vote, or are they just kids wanting to waller around in the swimming pool for about three months at the expense of taxpayers of about $17,000-22,000?

I want to tell the court that they can put enough user's fees on the use of the pool — as they did our community centers — so that it won't cost the taxpayers any money.

There is a difference in the swimming pool and the community centers. You see, the swimming pool costs the taxpayers from $17,000 to $22,000 for three months so a few kids can take a bath together. If the swimming pool stayed open 12 months a year, it would cost the taxpayers some $70,000 a year.

The community centers cost the taxpayers from $25,000 to $30,000 a year — 12 months — and have benefited thousands of people. I ask you, which one of these do you think is the most important?

I am afraid our community centers will not be used as they once were. Back in the fall of 1989 the court said they were going to charge users a fee on the centers. If you will check back on the records, you will find this to be one of the reasons that the court lost the roll-back election, they lost every box in all eight community centers.

I hope I have given the court a thought or two.

To the editor,

As I complete my third year as a student at Snyder High School, I am amazed at how much I have been exposed to. Many citizens of Snyder realize that high school kids are no longer naive, and that we face decisions and challenges almost daily. In fact, one might go so far as to say that, at times, Snyder High School is somewhat of a pressure cooker.

I am sure that most high school students have shared the same feelings, but at times, it is hard to even get out of bed and go to school, simply because it seems like no matter what you do, someone finds something to "gossip" about it. But, we all continue on, and there are certainly some teachers and administrators who help make SHS bearable, and even enjoyable.

I am privileged to have two teachers who distinguish themselves from the rest. They are two of the most dedicated, caring and hard working individuals that I know. Their names are Jerry Worsham and Jamie Hall. These two educators rise above the rest, and they are a definite asset to Snyder High School, as well as the community. I consider this an opportunity to offer a well-deserved "thank you" as well as an opportunity to show support for them.

During the past week, Snyder's (see SDN Letters, page 7B) drama department has once again gained a lot of attention. In fact, this television has once again been running stories on this fine group of people. Unfortunately, this time the stories tell a different kind of news.

As many of you know, the Snyder drama department was informed that its most talented student, Coy Berryman, was ineligible for any awards at the recent state contest. Even worse, all of the time and effort that these kids put forth may be declared invalid. All of the stage direction, the costuming, the late rehearsals and overall hard work may be lost. What an absolute shame!

And as anyone who has kept up with the story knows, apparently someone from within Snyder High School convinced the TEA to investigate the situation. Even though the TEA had been phoned and Coy had been declared eligible, someone set out to cause a major problem. Well, I hope that person is reading this letter, and I want to offer him or her congratulations, because they have certainly caused a problem.

It is amazing that certain individuals at Snyder high have nothing better to do than sit around and think of ways to destroy people who are successful. It is a shame that one group of teachers in that school are constantly criticizing everything. Any realist knows that if you look hard and long enough at any person or program, you will find something wrong with it. Yet, I can't count the times I've heard some of these same teachers tell their students to, "Do what it takes to pass, I mean WHATEVER!"

Does this imply cheating? Maybe it implies asking the teacher for points. Whatever it implies, the point is that this type of situation occurs every six weeks, and no coach, UIL, or whatever program they are associated with is above it. Maybe the fact that the drama kids are so successful has something to do with it. But I believe that there is a secret to this success. It is centered around one key word — understanding.

Drama students manage to stay out of all the "bashing" that goes on at SHS. They are smart enough to see that all of that is a waste of time, and that time and energy can be focused on something of value. Most drama students have no time or desire to be involved with the type of "talk" that has been floating around Snyder this week. In fact, I know of one teacher who got up and announced that, "Snyder will no longer be allowed to participate in any UIL event for up to five years..." Luckily, there were people in the room who silenced her and dismissed this vindictive lie. However, what if no one had stopped her? This scenario makes it easy to understand how ridiculous stories get started.

In conclusion, I want to thank all of the people who have shown genuine support and care for Mrs. Hall and Mr. Worsham. This week must have been a bad one, but I know that these two individuals are strong enough to rise above it all. Thomas W. Galyean 2803 35th Street Snyder, TX 79549

To the editor, I read the letter Mr. Baize had written in reference to Officer Johnson and the tickets he issued to him and his friend. I would like to answer the letter with some questions for Mr. Baize.

First, if Officer Johnson had looked the other way this time (because his friend was just going around the block), then the next time he sees someone who is intoxicated and just going around the block home should he look the other way? Or should he arrest him so he cannot run over some child or other person and kill or seriously injure them?

The state of Texas has set out several laws necessary for the safety of all people. If the motorcycle is just a piece of junk, what if a child had run out in front of it, the brakes failed, or some other part of the bike not worked properly so it could be stopped. The rider did not have a proper drivers license to ride the bike. The state has drivers license laws to protect all of us.

One is that you have to have a proper drivers license for whatever vehicle you are operating if you are on the street.

The other citation for no liability insurance is protection for all of us again. How many people in Snyder have been in an accident where the person at fault did not have insurance? They are left holding the bag with the bill to repair their property. How would Mr. Baize's friend have paid medical bills if a child had been on a bicycle in front of him, fell off and he struck that child? Perhaps both Mr. Baize and his friend need to think about things like this before making judgement on Officer Johnson.

Lastly, I wonder if Mr. Baize or his friend has ever seen someone who did not have a helmet on that was involved in a motorcycle accident? I think if they would check with the Highway Patrol, EMS Personnel or with the police department, they would find the reason for that law is for their own sake. Many people would be alive today if they had been wearing a helmet.

I know of one on a 3-wheeler that turned over that could have had very serious head injuries had he not had his helmet on. His head was pinned between the 3-wheeler and the ground. He was only very scared and said, "Mom, you will never have to tell me to wear my helmet again!"

If Officer Johnson was rude to these boys, perhaps he was wrong. But, what had they said to him? After all, he is not just an officer — he is also human. Think about it, guys.

Foreign aid sought on super collider

WASHINGTON (AP) — A team of top government officials will travel to Japan and Korea next week to open the first formal talks on the design and construction of the superconducting super collider.

Deputy Secretary of Energy Henson Moore said Friday the United States will present specific requests to the countries. "The signs that we're seeing is that there is definite interest," Moore said.

But he said no formal agreements are expected with foreign participants before Congress takes up 1991 budget appropriations for the super collider later this year.

Moore would not discuss details about the level of participation the Energy Department feels is appropriate for the super collider.

The House earlier this month authorized spending $5 billion on the approximately $8 billion project. The rest is to be made up from outside sources, such as foreign investors. Texas, where the collider will be built, has pledged $1 billion.

The collider will be a 54-mile tunnel, where protons will be smashed into each other at high speeds at the direction of superconducting magnets. Scientists hope the particles will break apart, yielding clues to the fundamental nature of matter. Moore said collider officials in Texas Friday issued preliminary specifications for the 45-foot diameter, 1.5-mile-long super collider.

A final document will be released this summer and contractors for the magnets chosen in the fall, Moore said.

U.S. advance teams have been in Japan and South Korea to set up meetings with legislative leaders and ministers of science, education and foreign affairs, Moore said.

"Both governments have been waiting for this visit to officially begin their considerations within their governments," Moore said. "At this point, what's been going in Japan and Korea have been fairly low level discussions."

Officials from the Commerce and State departments and White House science advisor's office will accompany Moore on the two week trip.

"We intended from the beginning for the super collider to be an international project, as all such labs are," Moore said.

He said the trip is planned now because the design of the collider is far enough along and congressional support for it is strong.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If others do not give you their complete cooperation today, it might be due to the fact you're reluctant to let them share the applause or credit.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Try to keep pace with your duties and responsibilities today so that they do not begin to pile up on you. Mounting pressure is something you might not handle too well.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Should something tests develop between two friends of yours today, it could prove an unwise move if you take sides. You could end up in the middle with both angry at you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You will have to be assertive and determined if you hope to achieve an important objective today. Wishy-washy won't get the job done and could make you look weak in the eyes of others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If you have a closed mind today it could cause you to ignore the suggestions of a friend who is trying to be helpful. This person's reasoning might be superior to yours.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Let your present state of finances determine the kind of expenditures you make today. If you allow instant gratification rule, you may do something very imprudent.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You might feel stymied today by the very people who are usually the most supportive. They still love you, but present conditions may be such they have to attend to other needs first.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It won't do you much good today to dwell on how you would like things to be. In order to progress, you must face up to reality and begin to work from that point.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Today you might have to deal with an acquaintance who did some things in the past that displeased you. There's still a possibility your personalities could clash, so be careful.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) In order to have others believe in and be supportive of your ideas today, you must first believe in them yourself. Doubtfulness will be easily perceived causing others to back away.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your leadership could be the critical factor at this time in revitalizing a joint effort that has been losing stamina. Under your direction, it can be successful.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Beginning today, it looks like balance and harmony will be restored in a situation that has been rather unsettling lately. Someone other than yourself will be responsible.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Things you are blocked from doing on your own can be achieved by surrogates today if you motivate them properly. Show them the ways in which they will benefit.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A partnership arrangement will be more productive today if one person provides the initiative and the other the back-up. It will be up to you to rev up the engines.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Assignments you've been unable to complete can be brought to satisfactory conclusions today. Prioritize them, then knock them off one at a time.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your popularity is peaking and the impression you'll make in your social encounters will be favorable and lasting. This is a good time to circulate and make new friends.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Financial trends could be more favorable today than they will be tomorrow. If you're involved in something that spells profit, make every minute count.

'Coast highway's rerouting is now under consideration

AUSTIN (AP) — A state highway official says a plan to rebuild U.S. 87, commonly called the "Coast Highway," about 300 feet inland sounds like a sensible solution to chronic problems the state has had in keeping the highway open after hurricanes and tropical storms.

Robert Dedman, chairman of the Texas Highway and Public Transport Commission, said Thursday a Jefferson County delegation's plan to rebuild the two-lane highway sounds like a "common sensical" solution.

Dedman suggested state and local officials work together to gain federal approval for a route that would run through marshland in the McFaddin National Wildlife Refuge. Hurricane Jerry churned up the two-lane beach highway in October forcing its closure.

Art Spencer, chairman of the highway committee for the Greater Port Arthur Chamber of Commerce, said the highway is the "lifeline" of the Sabine Pass community and also is important for law enforcement, tourism, recreation and to service offshore oil and gas rigs.

"We cannot ignore or isolate those who have lived or worked in the Sabine Pass area for years," Spencer said.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, said the highway also would protect the 30,000 acres of natural habitat in state and federal refuges from saltwater encroachment.

"I don't understand the ecologists objecting," he told the commission. Parker later said he was encouraged by Dedman's response.

Jefferson County Commissioner Dave Smith of Port Arthur said gaining approval from federal authorities to build a highway through the marsh could take two years.

"It's better to wait a year or two than to wait a year every other year," Parker said.

The three-member highway commission periodically has debated whether to rebuild the storm-plagued 16 miles of highway from Sabine Pass to High Island. The agency spent $457,162 to rebuild damage from Hurricane Chantel on Aug. 1, 1989, but a few weeks after the repairs were finished Hurricane Jerry struck on Oct. 15, 1989.

Traffic has since been detoured onto Texas 82, Texas 73 and Texas 124, while the one lane that remains is limited to emergency and local access.

The United States severed diplomatic relations with Cuba in 1961.

Bush, Gorbachev talks reach turning point

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush's summit next week with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev may mark the end of one era in U.S.-Soviet relations and the beginning of another.

The main business the two will conduct symbolizes the old era. They will sign a declaration to reduce U.S. and Soviet strategic nuclear weapons — by much less than the 50 percent initially advertised — and probably commit themselves to pursue further cutbacks.

The declaration will make the May 31-June 3 summit, like the majority of its predecessors, an arms control summit.

At the same time, Bush and Gorbachev will begin the transition to a new superpower relationship forced on them by a rapidly changing world.

The Germans, taking charge of their future, are moving speedily toward unification. This is creating a new Europe, and Bush and Gorbachev will have to put their heads together and decide how to adjust.

Michael Mandelbaum, director of the East-West project of the private Council on Foreign Relations, has suggested the two leaders use the summit to begin plotting "a new European security order." He calls the task far more important than arms control.

AP analysis

Bush is not about to jettison the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. But he has to look into a future Europe anchored by an immensely powerful Germany and lacking the stabilizing standoff of two military alliances.

And Gorbachev is not trying to hold on to East Germany, once the Soviets' most reliable ally.

The future of the 360,000 Soviet troops there is uncertain, while the Soviet leader is likely to comply with requests by Hungary and Czechoslovakia to remove all traces of the Red Army by next year. Poland is making noises along the same line.

So there is no reason for Bush to play the heavy, to poke a finger in Gorbachev's eye.

The president insists that the new Germany be in NATO. And yet, he also is aware of the anxieties that cause the Soviets, who are losing their East European buffer and have stark memories of World War II, to oppose such an affiliation.

Within the Soviet Union, meanwhile, the diverse nationalities are threatening to go their separate ways. That weakens Moscow but also raises a danger of ethnic strife and instability.

Like German unification, these events are outpacing the ability of the two superpowers to take charge of history. Bush and Gorbachev, working together, would have a better chance of keeping up.

The pressure on Gorbachev, of course, is far more severe than the strains on Bush, although the president must keep a wary eye on the drive toward unification in Western Europe and the economic colossus challenging the United States that could result.

The West Germans, seeking Soviet blessing for unification, may be ready to buy that approval with economic assistance. Bush so far has promised Moscow almost nothing. Feeling the heat of congressional conservatives, who are worked up over Gorbachev's treatment of the Baltics, Bush is reluctant to assist perestroika.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Barry Schweid will be covering his 10th summit for The Associated Press.

Phlebitis cure depends on its location

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been diagnosed with phlebitis and placed on Indocin 25 milligrams. This makes me lightheaded and sick to my stomach. My doctor has me on Cytotec to protect the stomach and prevent the side effects. Is there a cure, or is this something I must live with?

DEAR READER: Phlebitis is inflammation of the lining of a vein, leading to formation of blood clots. The affliction is painful and can be dangerous if clots break off and are carried to the lung. Such clots will lodge in the lung's blood vessels, causing shortness of breath, chest pain and — in extreme cases — shock and death.

This is called pulmonary embolism and is a dreaded consequence of phlebitis involving the veins deep in the legs or in the pelvis. Phlebitis of the smaller, superficial veins (just under the skin) is not ordinarily associated with pulmonary embolism.

Thus, the answer to your question depends on the location of your phlebitis.

If you have superficial phlebitis, anti-inflammatory drugs — such as Indocin — will help relieve discomfort and swelling while the body heals the phlebitis. The medicine is usually prescribed with other treatment, primarily bed rest (with leg elevation) and hot compresses.

Frankly, I'm not too impressed with Indocin. I've found other drugs, such as Butazolidin, to be more effective. Also, as you have discovered, Indocin — like other drugs in its class (including Butazolidin) — can cause stomach upset, which Cytotec should help prevent.

If you have phlebitis of the deep leg veins, Indocin is not appropriate therapy. In this case, you should be given an anti-coagulant medicine to prevent further clot formation. This is a more complicated situation.

Should you experience repeated attacks of deep-vein phlebitis, you will have to consider surgery on the veins to prevent pulmonary embolism. The most common operation for this purpose is one in which the surgeon places a type of filter in the vena cava, the major vein in the pelvis. This device allows blood to flow through the vein, at the same time preventing pieces of clot from entering the lung circulation.

In my practice, I treat superficial phlebitis with rest and hot compresses and sometimes prescribe anti-inflammatory drugs. After the acute attack has subsided, I urge the patient to wear elastic stockings (to provide support and prevent a recurrence). Patients usually learn to live with recurrences which, if identified early, are easily treated in the manner I described.

I treat deep phlebitis differently, relying on Coumadin, a prescription anti-coagulant in pill form that is useful for chronic therapy. Repeated attacks of deep phlebitis with or without pulmonary embolism, are sufficient grounds for referral to a surgeon.

To provide you information in the event surgery is required, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "An Informed Approach to Surgery." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

Radon contamination of residences is an increasingly troublesome issue. In my community, for instance, prospective home buyers may unceremoniously back out of the deal or insist the price be substantially lowered if the dwelling is found to contain radon. This posture has raised vexing questions: Does radon pose health risks? If so, how serious are they?

Radon is a naturally occurring radioactive gas that results from the natural decay of uranium. Radioactive materials exist throughout the earth's crust, but they are unevenly distributed in rock and soil.

Uranium decays into 17 different compounds, of which radon, with a half-life of 3.8 days, is one. Radon percolates through soil to contaminate both ground water and air. Its own radioactive decay produces 10 non-gaseous substances that attach to dust and droplets in the environment. When inhaled into the lungs, these compounds emit high-energy alpha particles that irradiate lung tissue.

Chronic exposure to high levels of alpha particles increases the risk of lung cancer. Interestingly, the combination of cigarette smoking and alpha exposure increases the risk of lung cancer by as much as 10 times.

Radon concentrations in buildings is unpredictable. For example, although granite acts as a reservoir for radon-producing uranium, geological surveys have failed to demonstrate a consistent relation between granite subsoil and elevated radon levels. Radon enters buildings through defects, cracks and joints in the below-ground foundation.

The concentration of radioactivity depends on pressure differences between the house and the soil, the vacuum effect (loss of inside air causing lower pressure) and ventilation. Also, radon levels fluctuate, according to weather, humidity and barometric pressure. The tighter a house is built (to save energy) the greater the chance of elevated radon levels, because of diminished ventilation.

To date, the toxic effects of radon gas in the general population remain a mystery. No official guidelines exist, and "recommended maximum indoor radon levels vary among different health organizations," according to Gregory Grande, a registered pharmacist, and Louis Ling, M.D. (both members of the Hennepin Regional Poison Center in Minneapolis), writing in a recent issue of Postgraduate Medicine.

Nonetheless, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency recommends that residential radon levels not exceed 4 p Ci/L of air; levels greater than 20 p Ci/L merit further investigation; levels exceeding 200 p Ci/L require immediate correction.

The concentration of radon in residences can easily be determined by the homeowner, with a commercially available canister filled with activated charcoal. The canister is placed in the basement for several days, then mailed back to one of several companies that performs a radioactivity count of the radon degradation products. If high levels are detected, experts advise more thorough, confirmatory testing by community health authorities.

Radon can be reduced by increasing basement ventilation — literally blowing the gas away. Cracks in the foundation should be sealed. More complicated procedures usually require the services of a contractor or other professionals.

In summary, we all experience radon exposure to one degree or another. Most is harmless; radon does not constitute a health hazard in the overwhelming majority of American households. However, the prudent homeowner should perform radon testing. If the levels are high, precautions should be taken to lower the concentration.

Although the health risks of radon in a general population have yet to be defined, chronic exposure to high levels are statistically associated with a risk of lung cancer. As with any pollutant, no matter how ubiquitous, limiting exposure to radon may have long-lasting health benefits.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1990 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Years ago, you had a piece in your column about "children's little hands" — I can't remember all of it, but it contained some wonderful advice for parents who are raising small children. It said, "Never remake a bed after a child has done his best to make it — no matter how bad the job is."

I just loved that piece, but I can't find it anywhere. Will you please run it again? It was one of your best.

LOU HARMON,
HAZELTON, IDAHO

DEAR LOU: That piece ran in 1981. It was titled:

A CHILD'S TEN COMMANDMENTS TO PARENTS

1. My hands are small; please don't expect perfection whenever I make a bed, draw a picture or throw a ball. My legs are short; please slow down so that I can keep up with you.

2. My eyes have not seen the world as yours have; please let me explore safely. Don't restrict me unnecessarily.

3. Housework will always be there. I'm only little for a short time — please take time to explain things to me about this wonderful world, and do so willingly.

4. My feelings are tender; please be sensitive to my needs. Don't nag me all day long. (You wouldn't want to be nagged for your inquisitiveness.) Treat me as you would like to be treated.

5. I am a special gift from God; please treasure me as God intended you to do, holding me accountable for my actions, giving me guidelines to live by and disciplining me in a loving manner.

6. I need your encouragement to grow. Please go easy on the criticism; remember, you can criticize the things I do without criticizing me.

7. Please give me the freedom to make decisions concerning myself. Permit me to fail, so that I can learn from my mistakes. Then someday I'll be prepared to make the kinds of decisions life requires of me.

8. Please don't do things over for me. Somehow that makes me feel that my efforts didn't quite measure up to your expectations.

I know it's hard, but please don't try to compare me with my brother or my sister.

9. Please don't be afraid to leave for a weekend together. Kids need vacations from parents, just as parents need vacations from kids. Besides, it's a great way to show us kids that your marriage is very special.

10. Please take me to Sunday school and church regularly, setting a good example for me to follow. I enjoy learning more about God.

— DR. KEVIN LEMAN

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for eight years. I love him very much, but at times I do not like him very much. Before we were married, we knew we had different interests, and were labeled "opposites" by everyone who knew us.

I am a very active person; I am an aerobic instructor and also teach dancing. I love to work outdoors in our garden.

My husband doesn't do any kind of exercise. He comes home, eats dinner, then sits in front of the TV until he falls asleep—I have to wake him up so he can sleep the rest of the night in our bed. He rarely helps me with the household chores. On weekends, he follows the same lazy routine.

Needless to say, he is not in very good shape physically. He needs to lose about 25 pounds. His doctor has also told him that his blood pressure is too high for a man his age (he's 31). He blames his high blood pressure on his job. He's in sales.

Every time I mention an exercise program we can do together, he gets angry and we end up not talking to each other.

Please advise me, Abby. He's really a wonderful guy and I love him dearly.

WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: Apparently, your "wonderful guy" doesn't care nearly as much about himself as you do.

You can't force him to exercise and take better care of himself, but try this approach: Keep telling him how much you love and care about him. And remind him to keep up the payments on his life insurance, so after he's gone, you and your next husband can travel and enjoy life without any financial worries. (Only kidding — but it might work!)

***

DEAR ABBY: I'm 26 years old, and my mother thinks I'm an "old maid" because I'm not married yet. She got married when she was 18. Abby, I have no problem getting dates, but there are specific qualities I'm looking for in the man I hope to spend the rest of my life with. My mother says I'm too picky.

I'm taking classes at the local college and holding down a job that pays well because I want to be able to support myself whether I get married or not.

My mother keeps telling me that the best career in the world is marriage and motherhood. We argue about this all the time. I'm losing confidence in myself because my mother insists something must be wrong with me, and a woman doesn't need a college education to be a homemaker.

Abby, I refuse to get married and have kids just to make my mother happy. I can't seem to get through to her. Maybe you can.

NO OLD MAID (YET)

DEAR NO OLD MAID: I don't have to get through to your mother — you do. In case she's been living in a cocoon, there are worse fates for a woman than remaining single and childless by choice. One of them is getting married to prove you can get a man — another is having children you really didn't want in the first place.

***

CONFIDENTIAL TO "ONLY A HOUSEWIFE": What do you mean, "ONLY"? The job of a housewife is an executive position.

In your home you are the Director of Health, Education and Welfare, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Head of Entertainment and Public Relations, the Chairman of the House Rules Committee and the Chief Operating Officer of Family Planning. And you'd have to be married to a millionaire to be paid what you're really worth!

NATO sharply slashes war maneuver plans in Europe

MONS, Belgium (AP) — A waning Soviet threat has prompted NATO to slash war games nearly in half, replacing them with computer simulations, and to slacken the response time of some forces, the alliance's chief military commander says.

"People don't want big exercises because the looming threat of an immediate war has lessened," U.S. Gen. John R. Galvin, the supreme allied commander in Europe, said Thursday.

"We have cut down significantly on the amount of noise, maneuver damage (and) general bother, and yet we have accomplished our exercises to train to the standards that are required," he said in an interview at his official residence in Mons, about 40 miles southwest of Brussels.

That should come as good news to West Germans, who have increasingly called for a cutback in NATO maneuvers on the ground and in the air that have been prone to sometimes deadly mishaps. Most of the exercises are held in West Germany.

The changes in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization follow the fall of hard-line Communist regimes in Eastern Europe and come as East and West Germany prepare to merge.

A new NATO report shows authorities have canceled or trimmed 47 percent of the approximately 100 exercises that will begin late this year and run over three years in Europe.

Ten major maneuvers have been scrapped; 22 exercises have been linked together, and an additional 22 have been reduced, it said.

Some exercises held annually now will take place every three years. Fewer tanks and other heavy equipment will be used.

The report estimated the slimmer training schedule would mean an annual savings of about $21 million in property damage in West Germany. Heavy tanks tear up farmers' fields and cut into roads used in the maneuvers.

Galvin said that with the tightened military exercises, senior officers use computer simulations of crisis situations to get their training. Smaller units, often swallowed up in the big maneuvers, get more chances to run through drills and perfect their skills.

"This is better training than we had before," he said.

PLANNING COMMITTEE — The planning committee for the class reunion of the 1941 and 1942 classes at Fluvanna met recently in the home of M. J. Merritt to plan a reunion for the two classes which will be held in conjunction with the Fluvanna
