Principal H. T. Wilkinson tells of the small boy who hesitantly handed his report card to his father with the remark: "Dad, let's look at it this way, naturally I seem stupid to my teacher. She's a college graduate."

The two men appeared to be talking heatedly, and observers across the street kept watching. Then they started pointing, first one way and then another. One would shake his head in vigorous disagreement and wave his hand for emphasis.

The argument appeared to reach its peak, watchers thought, when the men sat down and started pulling off their boots. "They're getting ready to start slugging," one observer predicted.

About that time Sheriff Garrett drove by and one of the men called, "Come here and be the judge for this."

The two involved were Brooks Middleton, local Gulf dealer, and Hartzell Ash of Throckmorton.

Hartzell had sold Brooks a chance on a saddle to be given away in Throckmorton.

Then, he propositioned Brooks on another ticket, flipping a coin on a "double or nothing" basis.

That's when the argument started. Brooks offered to broad jump to decide the issue, instead of flipping a coin.

Hartzell countered by offering to run a footrace for a block.

We failed to learn whether the race was ever run. However, we figure Hartzell came out winner anyway, probably selling the Sheriff another ticket, along with Brooks.

One of man's most exciting experiences is when he becomes a father, and at a time like that he can be forgiven for making almost any kind of mistake.

However, Wallace Cox Jr., is taking quite a bit of ribbing about errors in connection with the arrival of a new son on Sept. 27. First, he and wife Jo, had planned the announcements and the matter of having them printed was left to Wallace, naturally.

"Rush these out, man, here's the copy," he told the printers. Later, checking the initial "proof," he gave it his OK. "Fine, fine, it looks very good."

Some time afterwards, when Jo had had time to see the "proof" Wallace came red-faced back to the printer. He'd misspelled the name of one of the grandparents.

That correction had hardly been made when Wallace was back again for another correction. "Say, fellows, we've got to change the weight of that little fellow. I gave it wrong."

Finally, everything was squared away in proper order, the announcements printed and sent on their way.

Razing of the county jail building erected in 1910 recalls for one of our subscribers and a former resident, Leila Nisbett of Dallas, memories of a miniature saddle made by a inmate of a still earlier Haskell jail around 1900.

She writes: "The Hugh Nisbett family, seven in number, walking daily to and from town and school, passed by the Haskell County jail, a one-room rock structure.

"One day a youthful voice from an only prisoner hailed Hugh Nisbett and said 'They've got me here for stealing a saddle. Mister, bring me a small piece of leather, and I'll make you a saddle as perfect as can be.'"

"With that few square inches of leather, a pocket knife and a lamp wick adjuster (winder) with which he stamped designs on the leather, the prisoner made the perfect model of a saddle with all its trimmings.

"This miniature saddle of 1900 is still preserved by the Hugh Nisbett family.

"I hope the young man who made the saddle, by chance, may read this article," our subscriber concluded.

When a golfer makes a hole in one, he's entitled to all the honors and recognition generally accorded for such a feat, despite any obstacles encountered on the part of fellow players.

While playing on the course at Hillcrest Country Club in Lubbock recently, Dr. Wm. J. Kemp and Dr. R. E. Colbert approached the second green. Dr. Kemp fired away and his ball sailed 153 yards for perfect landing in hole No. 2.

The Haskell man had duplicated a feat which had been accomplished only once before, Lubbock golfers said.

Officers are called upon to apprehend almost all types of people under almost any circumstance imaginable. Sheriff Garth Garrett declares.

Several weeks ago, he received a report of a car being abandoned near Lake Stamford. After locating the vehicle, a 1935 model, it turned out to be stolen.

After having the car towed in and stored to await its owner, the Sheriff learned that a family, evidently stranded, had been seen in the vicinity where the abandoned car had been.

Enlisting the aid of Constable Raymond Denson of Rule along with Stamford and Stonewall county officers, the Sheriff and his deputies began a search for the family.

Officers finally found a woman and four children, ranging in age from 4 to 11 years, hiding in a clump of bushes beside the road. The husband had abandoned them and the car when it ran out of gas, officers learned.

The woman and children had spent several nights in the open, taking shelter in culverts during rains, and living on what little food they had in the car before they left it. The woman told officers she thought the man would return for them.

They were brought to town, and arrangements were made for them to stay in a motel one night, then they were provided tickets to Austin.

Whether the unfortunate incident here had any bearing on subsequent events, Sheriff Garrett reports that a few days afterwards, the woman shot and killed her husband in Abilene.

We seldom plug our Want Ads in this space, because they get results so fast as a usual thing that they speak for themselves.

Occasionally, however, the Want Ads do a selling job so fast that it is breath-taking and deserves mention.

Two such instances were reported recently by J. M. Diggs. The first was when he advertised a Jeep, which he had disassembled, for sale. He used a Want Ad, and by 8 a. m. on publication day (Thursday) had a call from Benjamin from a man who wanted to buy the Jeep. Made the sale over the phone immediately.

Then, last week, Diggs placed a Want Ad to sell a used Frigidaire. Same results. A buyer was on hand almost as soon as the paper was out.

The musician was practicing on his saxophone late at night when the landlord came in. "Do you know there's a little old lady sick upstairs?" he asked.

"No," answered the musician, "hum a little of it."

From A Pastor's Study
By DOUGLAS B. FINCH
Pastor, First Presbyterian Church, Haskell, Texas

Many branches of Christ's Church have developed a severe legalistic concept of personal behavior that goes far beyond the Biblical teaching. It has often been thought in the Christian Church that to function according to a set of rules and regulations would be the best way for us to be classified as Christians. It is too often the prohibitions which designate us, rather than the more positive characteristics which lead to a joyous and more abundant life... and cause us to attract others to the communion of saints of which we are a part. People are attracted to those who are positive and happy, and are repelled by those who are negative and gloomy.

The Church is identified in the minds of many people with a series of prohibitions... prohibitions which have multiplied far beyond Biblical teachings. For example, since the Gospel tells us to deny ourselves and not be conformed to the world, a host of specific acts are thought by Christians of some groups to be prohibited, e. g., card-playing, smoking, theatre-going, and dancing. The result has been to associate the Christian ethic with narrowness rather than fullness of life, with repression rather than sublimation of impulse, with enslavement rather than freedom, with gloom rather than joy. Moreover, since external acts can be prohibited more easily than states of mind and heart, sins of the flesh are made to appear more deadly than the more subtle sins of the spirit... such as pride and callousness—which cannot be controlled by any law or regulation. Laws, when contrary to natural inclinations, are absolutely unable to secure obedience. One basic law of human nature that is well remembered is "deprivation brings on over-indulgence."

When Christ is new power and life into a person's life becomes a positive of love from within a burden imposed out. With this Christ in his life, can live "above" superficial sins of ignorance. smooths bumps better than a bulldozer

If all roads were superhighways Chevrolet's remarkably smooth silent ride might be just another luxury. But as most town and country roads will demonstrate is one Chevrolet advantage that might easily get excited about. (The way those four deep springs put the kibosh on bumps you'd almost think Chevrolet working for the highway commission.) The '63 Bel Airs, Biscans and Impalas are equally easy on upkeep. Brakes are self-adjusting. New Delco-tron generator s-t-r-e-t-c-h-e-s battery life. Rocket panels on the Body Fisher are self-washing and vibrating to cut down on rust. ELECTRIC HOME HEATING IS

BABY SAFE

WARM as toast - SAFE from burns!

"There's never a worry when you have electric baseboard heating" says Mrs. C. E. Woods, 2126 Glendale in Abilene. "This is the second winter we've heated electrically, and it's the best thing that's happened for baby comfort and safety since the invention of the safety pin." Glynda Woods is feisty-two-year-old who plays variously on the floor and up on chairs, couch and bed. Glynda is warm and comfortable anywhere in her electrically heated home.

Ask West Texas Utilities about the low 1¢ winter rate for home heating and the many types of modern flameless heating available to you.

By AL HINDS

Some years ago the Seminole Sentinel columnist who at that time was writing the widely read "Pirootin' Around" column, expressed the trials and tribulations of the country weekly newspaperman. What he had to say then certainly holds true today, so I give you below some of the things "Pirootin' Around" had to say about his paper, which by the way, holds true of practically all small town weeklies:

"Whenever bigger bulls are made The Sentinel and its force will make 'em. We had a prominent local gentleman marrying the lady at whose home his wedding to another lady took place. All of our readers who know the parties concerned are aware of whom we are writing. To the rest of you we shall make no explanations since we are embarrassed enough as it is.

"But that's the way it goes. When a doctor makes a mistake the undertaker buries it for him. When a lawyer makes a mistake, the sheriff hangs it for him. But when a newspaperman makes a mistake he publishes it and sends it out for all the world to read and make smart cracks about.

And "Pirootin' Around" goes on to say:—"Sometimes I think there should be a shake up in this world and people swapped around in their occupations. If I have any religion whatever to do with, or knowledge of the flesh and blood animal called man, a lot of us would be in some other calling.

"For instance, I think I should have been a sheep herder. I dislike to have people crowded around me all the time. Around this place where I live and work, people are crawling all over me from early morning to late in the night.

"They bang on my back door and are in the place like ants before I can get my britches on. They parade through my kitchenette and eat my bacon and drink my coffee faster than I can cook it. Nothing is private nor sacred to them. I haven't gone to the bathroom in my apartment during the past three months that someone didn't come into my bedroom, or closer, yelling "Pappy."

"Big, little, old or young—male or female—it makes no difference. When they want me they come looking for me, and ferret me out whether I am half dressed, or dressed at all. Compared to me, a gold fish lives behind an iron curtain.

"How swell it would be to wake up some morning in a sheep wagon, camped on a high knoll and miles away from the nearest inhabitant. Get up when I got good and ready, and cook and eat my bacon and flapjacks without having someone drooling over my shoulder and wanting to know why in the 'ell and condemnation I didn't put so-and-so in the paper last week, and how I come to leave the signature off Bill Digley's ad, and who the heck was that Mrs. Aetoin Sherdlu listed as a guest of Mrs. Pumperknickle's bridge party, and on, and on, and on.

"That would be the life. No one to ask fool questions, or raise the chickens. No one to scold or quarrel. Just the sheep, and all they could say would be baa, baa, baa. Then you could baa baa right back at 'em.

"Yep, humans to my way of thinking are all mixed up in the wrong profession. Reminds me of hearing two good old brothers discussing the new preacher. 'I heard he used to be a pugilist,' said one. 'A what?' asked the other. 'A pugilist,' said the first—'a boxer.' 'Oh,' said the other, and after a contemplative moment he added, 'Well, if he didn't get any closer to fightin' in the ring than he did to preachin' in the pulpit this mornin' I can understand why he quit bein' a pugilist.

"We all make mistakes because most of us are trying to do something some other fellow should be doing. But there isn't much we can do about it, but be charitable and forgiving. After that couple is married as long as I've been, they are liable to think they made a bigger mistake getting married than we did reporting their wedding."

I will agree with "Pirootin' Around," because a newspaperman who tries to work in all departments in the process of printing a paper, jumps from one job to another, and does his "dagdumdiest" to keep mistakes out of the paper—and yet most every week when the sheet hits the street, mistakes will show up in spite of "h'll and high water." I know how Mr. Pirootin' Around feels, and if he ever decides to turn sheepherder, and needs an extra hand, I would like for him to hold open a place for this scribe.

A Haskell married lady was trying to convince her husband and he should be more considerate and affectionate—"Why, said the little lady, our neighbor kisses his wife every time he meets her—now, why don't you do that?" "Well," drawled the Hubby, "I would, but I don't know her very well."

Man is that foolish creature who shortens his life by working hard to acquire things, that further shortens his life.

One Dealer In County Buys Pistol Permit

There is only one dealer in Haskell County licensed to sell pistols, a check at the county tax collector's office reveals. Although all individual dealers or establishments selling firearms are required to be licensed by the State and County, only one license has been issued here, Tax Collector Elizabeth Stewart said. The county receives a fee of $2.50 on each permit, she said.
