Defense tough again

TENSE MOMENT — Three-year-old Tiger fan Colby Huseman watches the action during a tense moment of Friday's football game at Tiger Stadium. Snyder's defense was dominant once again and its offense showed come-from-behind character as the Tigers fought to a 14-14 tie with ninth-ranked Big Spring. The Snyder defense went into the ballgame ranked third in the state in Class 4A and did nothing to change that as the squad limited Big Spring to 108 yards and seven first downs. Back-to-back third quarter turnovers allowed Big Spring to take a 14-3 lead on consecutive offensive plays, but Snyder's offense showed perhaps its best moments of the year in driving for two scores — a 17-yard run from Paul Anderson and a game-tying, 30-yard field goal from Brian Brunson. Anderson picked up 58 yards on 19 carries while Brunson had 44 yards on 12 carries, 44 more on four receptions and two field goals. Quarterback Ed Rios completed 9 of 17 passes for 97 yards. Now 2-1-1, the Tigers wrap up the non-district season by hosting Seminole in a homecoming game scheduled for 8 p.m. Friday. (See the Tiger game wrap-up on page 8A)

Attempted murder charges are filed against 2 local men

Two Snyder men have been charged with attempted capital murder after shots were fired at a Snyder Police Department patrol car early Saturday morning.

Rayfield Anthony Cooks, 39, and Herman Malone, 40, were charged with attempted capital murder after they allegedly fired shots at a patrol car being driven by Sgt. Trevlyn Pitner as he answered a disturbance call in the 3400 block of Ave. M at 2:37 a.m.

According to police, as Sgt. Pitner approached the scene of the disturbance, a shot was fired, striking James Wells, 32, of 805 34th St. who was involved in a fight with Cooks and Malone.

Shots were then fired at the officer's patrol car but missed the vehicle, according to police.

The subjects fled the scene in a (see CHARGES, page 15A)

TDCJ board member speaks to correctional officer grads

Texas Department of Criminal Justice board member Richard Collins told graduates of Western Texas College's correctional-officer classes Friday that the TDCJ is committed to being the best prison system in the world and their future would be an exciting and challenging one.

"It's a challenging job and an important job. Not only do you have to be officers...you have to be lawyers. You have to understand the law. And you have to be sociologists, to try and help the criminals help themselves," said Collins.

The Dallas entrepreneur said Texas is committed to having the best prison system in the world and added, "I want the Snyder unit to be the best unit."

He said the priorities should be building prisons to adequately house criminals, which the state is doing; to have effective drug and rehabilitation programs in the prisons; and to study the types of sentences to insure the punishment fits the crime.

He also urged the 34 graduates to "continue your own educational process to better deal with people that are incarcerated, because the best thing is just not (see GRADS, page 15A)

The SDN Column

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Congress is a place where people speak, say nothing, nobody listens and everybody disagrees."

West Texans should unite and file some kind of class action suit for discrimination. We just finished reading two things that make us believe our western world is deprived.

We just read the list of the 100 richest Texans. We didn't even know any honorable mentions, although we had seen a couple of guys on the ten o'clock news.

West Texas was almost void of rich folks. Out of the top 100 in Texas, only five live west of Fort Worth—and all five live in Midland.

It seems that much of the state's wealth was driven by the oil and gas industry—yet most of the wealth had rather reside in Dallas and use their West Texas/royalty checks to buy real estate. Some of the less wise invested in savings and loan stocks.

But so much for the suit idea. If we were to win, some Houston legal-beagle would take most of it and invest in time-shares on Padre Island.

But not all is bad. Being in the newsroom gave us the opportunity to see the latest issue of USA Singles News. One ad read: "Toothless spinster enjoys warm milk, flannel PJs and pink fuzzy slippers. However, with a little TLC from the right male over 30 to break spell, could blossom into a 5'4", 110 lb., 38-year-old blonde who would enjoy champagne, silk teddies and barefoot walks in the sand. Photo appreciated."

There were pages and pages of such ads, all telling of likes and dislikes. One fellow was advertising his 1986 Audi. He described it as brilliant red color, low mileage and loaded. He would take the best offer.

He was either just married or just divorced.

Annual event set for Cards

Hermleigh School will celebrate its annual homecoming on Thursday and Friday with a bonfire, football game and dance.

Fans are invited to Thursday's 6 p.m. junior high ballgame at Cardinal Field between Hermleigh and Ira. Following the game, a bonfire will be held behind the high school gym.

Friday, the varsity squad will entertain Grady at 7:30 p.m. for the homecoming game. Nominees for Football Sweetheart this year are senior Melissa Anderson, junior Rebecca Ramey, sophomore Stephanie Gannaway and freshman Sheri Sandefur. Nominees for Drill Team Hero are seniors B.J. Claxton, Andrew Sanchez and Felix Martinez and sophomore Chris Velasco. The sweetheart and hero will be crowned at halftime.

The senior class will sponsor a dance at the school following the ballgame.

Whitney's factory becomes museum

HAMDEN, Conn. (AP) — The musket factory in which Eli Whitney introduced mass production to the world has been reborn as a working museum where children can learn the importance of manufacturing by making toy soldiers.

At the site where in 1798 the inventor began to beat his competitors with the revolutionary production concept that helped arm the federal government, the goal now is 25 toy soldiers produced by 25 youngsters in 25 minutes.

"Ask me in a couple of weeks if we can do it," said William Brown, director of the Eli Whitney Museum. The exhibit opened Sunday.

Whitney, fresh from a disappointing attempt to profit from his cotton gin, set up the musket factory in a small barn along the Mill River just north of New Haven.

Ritchie accepted into academy

Tom Ritchie, owner of Scurry County Abstract-Title Co., has been accepted into the US Army Sergeant Majors Academy to begin a two-course instruction for promotion to the Army's highest enlisted grade of Sergeant Major.

Ritchie served six years on active duty (1966-1974) as super-

The museum thought a working exhibit would be the best way to demonstrate Whitney's genius.

"Kids are taught that 'factory' is a dirty word," Brown said. "We wrongly equate factory work with degrading, repetitive labor. Our goal is to help kids realize that this is a good and noble tradition."

Twenty-two antique lathes, drill presses and other machines cut and shape the 3-inch-tall toy soldiers. The machines were collected from other museums, factories and machine shops throughout the state.

Whitney's mass production system — based on interchangeable parts, the use of machine tools and the division of labor — made possible levels of precision and productivity unheard of in his day.

Whitney's work paved the way for Connecticut's rise as a hub of precision manufacturing, a legacy most children know little about, Brown said.

"The experience of producing something collectively has become as foreign to these children as ballet or opera," Brown said. "In the last 20 or 30 years, we've moved away from teaching anything about manufacturing. That's a horrible mistake."

Whitney's muskets were followed by Colt's revolvers — the legendary "gun that won the West" — and locks, clocks, typewriters and sewing machines. Today, jet engines, nuclear submarines and helicopters are made in Connecticut, along with Colt guns.

But manufacturing has tapered off since 1943, when 507,000 workers in the state — 63 percent of the Connecticut work force — were employed. Now only 22 percent of the work force, or 350,000 out of 1.6 million jobs, are in manufacturing.

Over the next nine months, the museum hopes to send as many as 25,000 students and other visitors home with toy soldiers — and even more importantly, with a better understanding and new appreciation of manufacturing.

House passes coastal barriers act

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Friday reauthorized the Coastal Barriers Resources Act, which takes away the chance of federal subsidies for two proposed multibillion-dollar resorts on South Padre Island.

The act prevents federal subsidies, such as flood insurance, from being used to develop islands and jetties deemed protective of the U.S. coast.

The version of the bill passed by the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee contained exemptions that would have boosted the proposed Playa del Rio resort near Boca Chica and a proposed resort on South Padre Island across the Gulf Intracoastal Waterway from Port Mansfield.

Rep. Solomon Ortiz, D-Corpus Christi, supported the exemptions.

But the House Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee, chaired by Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-San Antonio, excluded the projects from federal support.

The House passed the bill on a voice vote without amendments. The measure has not yet passed the Senate.

A coastal barrier included in the act also does not qualify for federal road or construction funds.

Rep. Tom DeLay, R-Sugar Land, said he was pleased some areas in his coastal district southwest of Houston were removed from the act.

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

An 84-year-old widower is suing St. Francis-St. George Hospital in Cincinnati for keeping him alive. The man, after watching his wife's prolonged and painful death, issued his doctor a "do-not-resuscitate" order. Several months later, the widower was admitted to hospital for a heart attack, complicated by cardiac arrest from which he was revived.

Although the DNR order was documented in the chart by the doctor, the nurses — who carried out the resuscitation — had not been informed. During his recovery from the heart attack, the man had a stroke, which left him partially paralyzed and confined to a nursing home.

The plaintiff is suing the hospital (but not the doctor) for negligence and battery. He claims he would have preferred a quick and painless death to the handicapped and dependent existence he now has. This, he says, was his decision, and it was disregarded by the hospital authorities. The court has yet to rule on the issue.

In a similar vein, the Nancy Cruzan case has attracted national attention. Cruzan, now 32 years old, was severely injured in an auto accident seven years ago. The accident left her in a vegetative state: comatose and totally unable to take care of herself. X-rays of her brain showed marked, irreversible withering of her cerebral cortex, the portion of the brain that controls movement and consciousness. Experts were unanimous that she would never recover.

Faced with this hopeless situation, their unimaginable anguish and annual medical bills exceeding $130,000, her parents (who became legal guardians) requested three years ago that her feeding tube be removed so she could be allowed to die. The hospital refused, insisting on a court order. The trial court granted the order, citing ample legal precedent that, in the main, families may ask for life-sustaining treatment to be withheld from patients in irreversible vegetative states — and, in this context, the feeding tube was regarded as no different from any other device, such as a respirator.

On appeal, however, the state supreme court reversed the lower court decision, based on the principle of an unqualified state interest in the preservation of life, not merely the quality of life, but life itself.

The case was recently heard by the U.S. Supreme Court, which affirmed the appeal decision, despite testimony that Cruzan would not have wanted to live in a vegetative state, that her parents were, indeed, her legal guardians and that the state in question (Missouri) still had the death penalty — a contradiction of its "unqualified" interest in the preservation of life.

This unfortunate outcome raises troubling questions for patients, doctors, hospitals and society at large. Nancy Cruzan is just one of about 10,000 similar patients in the United States, a number that will certainly swell as medical technology improves. Each of us is theoretically only a skid-mark away from being in her quandary.

Therefore, not satisfied to leave decisions about death to health professionals, many adults now attempt to articulate their wishes about heroic life-saving measures in printed documents. People want to make the final decisions about how and under what circumstances they will die. Simple, declarative living wills have now been superseded by more complicated legal documents called advance medical directives, as the courts become increasingly involved in issues that for centuries were decided between a patient and the doctor.

Some authorities believe the legal system is ill-equipped for such a role; judges are not given divine guidance in understanding patients' needs, and the courts seem to require exacting evidence that a person would refuse treatment, while assuming — often incorrectly — that he or she desires treatment.

To avoid legal controversy, healthy adults of all ages should make their wishes known in writing: To say nothing or merely to refuse general "life support" is not good enough. This position may be perceived as accepting death-prolonging measures if, at some future date, tragedy strikes. Also, people should make sure that copies of the directive are distributed to their doctors, lawyers, family members and persons with durable powers-of-attorney.

As doctors urge patients to provide clear, detailed directives about life-sustaining treatments and situations, there will be less confusion when and if people are rendered mentally incompetent by accidents or illness. To do less is to invite the courts, which are singularly unsuited to this purpose, to assume medical roles.

Surely, medicine has become up-ended in this Alice-in-Wonderland world where we're often more afraid of the consequences of living than of the threat of dying.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My sister has had juvenile diabetes since the age of 7. She's now 25. She has maintained a good weight and has regular check-ups. A neighborhood nurse has given her a very negative outlook, quite different from the doctor's. What is your prognosis?

DEAR READER: If your sister continues to follow medical advice, watch her diet and take her insulin, I believe her prognosis is quite favorable. However, I don't know your sister's case, so I cannot comment on the nurse's observation. In instances like this, where there may be a disagreement between the doctor and the nurse, you should turn to the doctor for clarification — or seek another physician's opinion, preferably that of a diabetic specialist.

Your sister may be showing signs of diabetic complications, such as retinal disease or kidney damage, which would alter the favorable prognosis. Nonetheless, I believe her doctor is the best resource to explain the apparent discrepancy. Nurses are often uncanny in their assessments of patients' health, but the ultimate responsibility and final word should be the doctor's.

To give you further information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Diabetes Mellitus." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their names and addresses to my attention at P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please provide information on the anxiety medication Centrax. What are the side effects, and is it safe for long-term treatment?

DEAR READER: Centrax (prazepam) is an anxiolytic: a drug used for the short-term treatment of extreme anxiety. According to the manufacturer, the long-term effects of Centrax have not been studied; thus, the recommended use should not exceed four months. Drug dependence, a characteristic of this and similar medicines, can develop.

The most common side effects of Centrax are fatigue, dizziness, weakness, drowsiness and poor coordination. Slurred speech, tremor, palpitations, rash, fluid retention and headache occasionally occur. The effects of Centrax are worsened in patients who take other drugs, such as alcohol, narcotics, tranquilizers or anti-depressants; thus, it's dangerous to mix drugs.

As a general rule, anxiolytic medicines are prescribed only for people who experience incapacitating anxiety; such drugs are not appropriate treatment for everyday stresses.

Exhibit presents life and work of Italian inventor

Visitors to the "Marconi" exhibit in the Scurry County Museum find a wealth of information about the development of worldwide communication, Shirley Leftwich, museum director, says.

The exhibit presents the life and work of Italian inventor Guglielmo Marconi, who opened the age of radio by transmitting the first Trans-Atlantic wireless signal in 1901. Photographs and text panels are combined in the exhibit to lead viewers over the years. Radios of varying ages and other items, which evolved from the work of Marconi and other pioneers in the communication field, have been added by the museum. One of the items displayed is a home-made one tube regenerative detector receiving set, constructed from a kit about 1922. Power was supplied by a 45-volt dry "B" battery and a 6-volt automobile storage "A" battery which furnished current for the tube filament. The antenna system was usually a 75 to 150-foot long wire strung between the house and windmill and a ground wire to a copper ground rod or a cold water pipe, says Jay Huckabee, who owns the set.

The museum's annual membership drive is underway and persons who would like to become members are invited to pay dues when they visit the "Marconi" exhibit, or to mail them to the museum at Post Office Box 696.

The "Marconi" exhibit is to remain in the museum through Oct. 21 and can be seen Monday through Friday and on Sunday afternoons. The exhibit is circulated by the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service.

89-year-old twins are shutting down landmark diner

CLINTON, Tenn. (AP) — Business is booming at the Twins Cafe since the 89-year sisters who own it decided to close up after 37 years.

Twins Hassie Seivers and Lassie Disney have had enough of their grueling 4 a.m. to 4 p.m., six-day-a-week, cooking-to-cleaning schedule.

On Oct. 6, the day this East Tennessee town celebrates its 100th birthday, the twins will dish up food and conversation for the last time.

"It's not retirement. We're just quitting work," Lassie said.

"We're not exactly quitting," Hassie added. "We're changing."

Their cafe is a four-booth, six-table, five-stools-at-the-lunch-counter operation with a small neon sign outside and an open invitation to a bottomless cup of coffee you can get yourself.

The menu jokingly offers "ham an tue aigs an gravie or grits" for $2.75.

The customers are mostly Clinton residents — everyone from workmen to lawyers. But the guest list has grown since the twins delivered a pie, some lard-baked biscuits and several one-liners on "The Tonight Show" show in March.

After a newspaper reported the twins planned to close the restaurant, the cafe became standing-room-only.

"One more time, they say," Hassie said.

The sisters are widows with lots of family. They say they'll help out the Salvation Army, go to church socials and attend meetings of their American Association of Retired Persons group.

"There'll be plenty for them to do," said Wayne Seivers, Hassie's 34-year-old grandson. "But they are going to miss this. If they've ever taken a week's vacation, it's been a rare occurrence."

The twins grew up "about eight miles down the road in the country," Hassie said. They've always dressed alike, "even going to the bathroom."

They came to Clinton at age 15 to work in a hosiery mill. The pay was 5 cents an hour, 10 hours a day. They worked there for more than 30 years.

Two years after leaving the mill, they started the Twins Cafe with $800 borrowed from Hassie's husband's stepmother's brother. It was Sept. 7, 1953.

Over the years, the cafe moved from one side of Clinton's block-long business district to another. The sisters also sold the restaurant a time or two. "And we wanted it back, every time," Hassie said.

The shortest time anyone else owned the cafe was four days. "They just didn't keep it long enough to get to know our guests," Lassie said.

The twins were enjoying the diner's final moments.

"A lady says not long ago, 'Well, how much longer you going to stay?' I said, 'All day,'" Lassie said.

"Then I went over to another booth and a lady says, 'Have you been back there cooking all day?' I said, 'No, the day's not gone yet.'"

When customers ask, "Have you been here all your life?" Lassie responds, "No, I'm not dead yet."

CHICAGO (AP) — A South Side street that was once a hub for jazz and blues will be renamed after the late Sammy Davis Jr.

Davis, who died this summer of cancer, performed in Chicago throughout his career, beginning in the early 1940s.

"Legendary artists of the '30s, '40s and '50s were showcased in clubs and theaters and even private homes that lined 31st Street, which was once the hub of jazz and blues," Mayor Richard M. Daley said.

Former president renews friendship

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Former President Reagan renewed his friendship with country-music king Roy Acuff during a visit to the Music City to address a bottlers convention.

Acuff and Reagan spent about 15 minutes together Friday night, discussing sports, retirement and other topics, said Grand Ole Opry spokesman Jerry Strobel.

"Mr. Acuff wanted to thank him for coming to Nashville for his 81st birthday celebration in 1984," Strobel said. "And President Reagan said, 'Glad to do it — it's always a treat to see Roy Acuff.'"

The men have been friends since the 1940s, when Reagan was president of the Screen Actors Guild and Acuff was in Hollywood making movies.

Reagan also served as honorary chairman of a May 1984 tribute to Acuff at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington.

California is the home of giant sequoias — the largest living things on Earth. One record behemoth stands nearly 275 feet tall and has a diameter of more than 25 feet at waist height.

Once it has been cut down, one 120-foot, 800-year-old red cedar becomes a commodity — wood for homes and furniture — worth $10,000 at the mill, National Geographic says.

5 million barrels sale stands

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration is moving ahead with a test sale of 5 million barrels of stockpiled oil, despite contentions by lawmakers and its own energy secretary that the amount is too small.

The Energy Department sent out formal notices of the sale Friday as the House voted to give President Bush authority to triple its size, as recommended a day earlier by Energy Secretary James Watkins.

The White House stopped short of disavowing Watkins' suggestion that the 5-million-barrel sale announced by Bush on Wednesday was too small to even test how the 590-million-barrel Strategic Petroleum Reserve might work in an oil emergency.

"We'd have to look at" a proposal to expand it, said Steven Hart, a White House spokesman.

But Watkins' testimony and the House's prompt response to it amid a doubling of crude oil prices since July left the administration scrambling to find a single policy voice on using the reserve.

Although the embargo against Iraq and Kuwait removed 4.3 million barrels of oil daily from the world market, large inventories and shipments already on the ocean have prevented any actual shortages from developing so far.

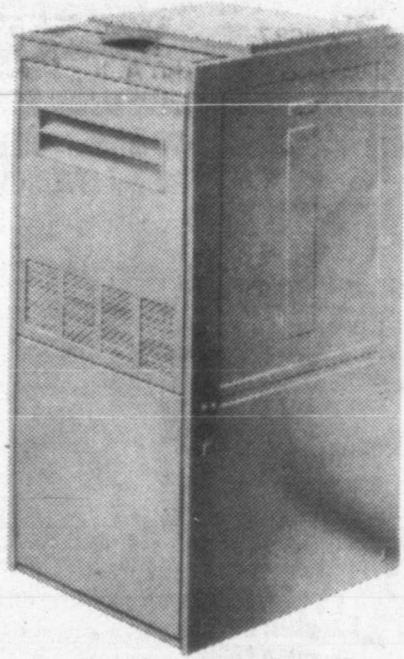

But the anticipation of shortages as winter approaches and commercial stocks begin to decline has sent prices from about $21 a barrel when Iraq invaded Kuwait on Aug. 2 to $39 this week.

The administration contended for nearly two months that the reserve, built at a cost of $20 billion to taxpayers after the 1973 Arab oil embargo, was never intended to counter escalating oil prices.

However, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Wednesday that one of the purposes of the test is "acting against what we believe is speculation in terms of unwarranted price increases."

Lawmakers have embraced claims by market analysts that Bush could have stopped the price spiral at $25 to $27 per barrel by tapping the reserve last month at a rate of 500,000 barrels a day.

Financial Focus

The beginning of 1990 marked the year that, for the first time, mutual funds held by more than 30 million Americans reached a total of $1 trillion in assets. "This represents a more than 10-fold increase from the $95 billion in assets on January 1, 1980," reports The Investment Company Institute, the Washington-based voice for the mutual fund industry.

Institute president David Silver recalled, in his annual report, some of the significant events in mutual fund history:

In 1924 the first mutual fund was established in Boston. By 1933 it was evident that stricter regulations were needed throughout the securities industry. The Securities Act of 1933 met this need by regulating the registration and offering of new securities to the public. This included mutual fund shares.

The Securities Exchange Act of 1934 charged the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) with the task of providing a fair and equitable securities market. This was followed by The Investment Company Act of 1940, which structured the framework for the mutual fund industry.

These major pieces of legislation and the regulatory agencies they created still direct the securities industry, of which mutual funds are a vital part.

In 1940 there were only 68 funds with total assets of $448 million. It took another five years to expand the mutual fund industry to 73 funds. That year, in 1945, these funds had total assets of $1 billion.

It was not until 1951 that the mutual fund industry saw 1 million accounts and $3.1 billion in assets. That year there were 103 mutual funds.

Money-market mutual funds were introduced in 1972; it wasn't until 1977 that the first municipal bond fund was offered to the public. Tax-exempt money-market funds were introduced in 1979.

Just 10 years ago the mutual fund industry consisted of only 564 funds with total assets of $100 billion. Two years later, in 1982, universal IRAs were introduced, and by mid-1989 IRA mutual fund assets alone accounted for $94 billion in mutual fund assets.

U.S. government bond funds and GNMA funds came to market in 1983. These funds played an important role in increasing the number of funds to 1,531 and raising total mutual fund assets to $495.5 billion by 1985.

This year the mutual fund industry topped $1 trillion in assets. From the inception of the first mutual fund in 1924 until the mid-70's, the mutual fund industry was considered an easy way for the small investor to participate in the stock market. Today, however with a wider range of fund types—stock, bond, a money market—mutual funds have truly become a universally accepted investment.

First-ever Community College Day... WTC to participate in special day in Dallas

The first-ever Community College Day at the Texas State Fair will be observed Saturday, Oct. 6, as hundreds of student performers from throughout the state gather in Dallas.

Western Texas College will be represented at the event, which is sponsored by the Texas Public Community/Junior College Association (TPC/JCA). More than 1,000 students, faculty and staff representing a majority of Texas' 49 community college districts are expected to participate throughout the day.

The presentation of a giant-sized diploma to Big Tex and day-long entertainment will be features of the day. The 11 a.m. diploma presentation, symbolizing the big role two-year institutions play in higher education for the state, will be made by a group of community college presidents and chancellors, with Dr. Raymond Hawkins, president of Tyler Junior College and TPC/JCA president, acting as spokesman. The ceremony will be preceded by a processional of educators in full cap and gown regalia to Big Tex Circle, accompanied by the 108-member Tyler Junior College marching band playing the traditional "Pomp and Circumstance" and including the high-stepping TJC Apache Belles precision drill team.

Throughout the day, student performing groups will strut at four locations on the fair grounds. The WTC Collegiate Singers under the direction of Brent Hardegree will take their turn at 3:30 p.m. on the stage in the Food and Fiber Building. Members of the Collegiate Singers are Denise Blythe, Tara Greene, Stacy Hardegree, John Howard, Blaine Irons, John Lancaster, Kevin Murdock and Stephen Williamson of Snyder, Anita Ceballos of Sweetwater, Amy Jamison of Fort Smith, Ark., and Frank Romeo from Roby.

There will be performances from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. on the Food and Fiber Building stage, in the Creative Arts Showplace Theater and on a special outdoor stage located in the southeast section of the fair grounds adjacent to radio station WRR and the Science Place II.

Community college academic and career programs will be showcased in a special big top also located at the WRR site. WTC will feature "Fun with Math," tricks for making math an exciting learning experience presented by Janice Mauldin, instructor of developmental mathematics. Darla Doty, director of recruitment, will be greeting visitors and telling them about WTC's academic and vocational programs.

Visitors to the big top demonstrations can also receive a free limited-edition, autographed poster of Rangers pitcher Nolan Ryan.

In a grand finale to the day's events, community college CEOs will participate in the fair's 5 p.m. "retreat" ceremony where newly named Dallas County Community College District Chancellor Dr. J. William Wenrich and others will receive a salute on behalf of their institutions and the approximately 500,000 Texas College students who attend them.

Foyt to race again

Texas at-large elections for judges upheld by court ruling

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Civil rights groups say they will appeal a ruling that protections against diluting the voting power of minorities don't apply to Texas' system of electing district judges countywide.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled 12-1 Friday that the protections have no bearing on the election of judges because they are not public servants.

The League of United Latin American Citizens brought the case to court, arguing that countywide voting for state judges in nine urban counties prevents minorities from electing the candidates they want.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton of Midland agreed, ordering Texas to divide the nine counties into electoral subdistricts.

Those counties — Dallas, Harris, Bexar, Tarrant, Travis, Lubbock, Midland, Ector and Jefferson — elect 172 of Texas' 390 district judges.

A three-judge U.S. district court panel upheld the Texas system, however. It then brought the case back before the entire 13-member appeals panel for reconsideration.

"We're pretty upset about it," said Rolando Rios of San Antonio, a LULAC attorney. "We think that any election system that discriminates on the basis of race and ethnicity is inconsistent with the most basic Democratic principles of our society."

"I think we'll have a good chance in the Supreme Court," added Rios.

Gov. Bill Clements praised the decision.

MARX BROTHERS AND COMPANY ...
In the early years of this century the Marx Brothers were serious singers and actors. They were appearing at the Opera House in Nacogdoches. During their "serious" show a team of mules ran away with a wagon. The entire audience ran out to see the runaway. When they returned the angry Marx Brothers began to insult and make faces at the crowd. The audience loved it ... and "comedian" Marx Brothers was born.

Sanchez scores 28 in Cardinals' win

AFTON — Hermleigh pounded the Patton Springs Rangers 56-0 in a six-man football game called at the half Friday night on the 45-point rule.

The Cardinals' Andrew Sanchez began the scoring on a 45 yard pass reception from Felix Martinez. Sanchez added the kick and the rout was on.

Sanchez crossed the goal line three more times against the Rangers on a 38-yard run, a 68-yard interception return and a punt return that covered 42 yards.

Felix Martinez hit three more scoring passes, one to Freddy Martinez, a 30-yarder, and two to Chris Velasco, a 15-yard effort and a 1-yarder.

Lance Price contributed a safety for the Cards for good measure.

Patton Springs was limited to minus 29 yards of total offense in the shortened game.

Hermleigh moves to 2-2 on the season while Patton Springs falls to 0-4.

The Cardinals will host Grady in Hermleigh's homecoming game Friday.

'Birds spoil Ira's celebration, 73-44

IRA — The Bulldogs' 1990 homecoming celebration was dampened by the No. 7 Jayton Jaybirds Friday.

Jayton's Paul Morales rushed for 443 yards and scored eight TDs as the Jaybirds rolled to a 73-44 non-district win.

Ira end James Sturdivant landed in the end zone four times catching scoring passes of 12, 43 and 51 yards from quarterback Chris Haynes and running the ball in from 17 yards away to pace the Bulldog attack.

Bryan Luna, Mike Hughes and Brian Martinez all scored for Ira, as well.

Ira defender Brain Martinez notched a dozen tackles in the game and all-district defensive end Dave Holmes was credited with 10.

The Bulldogs' grueling non-district schedule continues next week as Sands comes to Ira for a 7:30 p.m. matchup on Friday.

Loop bumps B.C. in Friday contest

LOOP — Loop managed 24 first-quarter points and held off a late Borden County rally to post a 24-21 non-district football victory Friday.

The Coyote's John Paul Harris scored twice in the loss. He hit paydirt once on an 8-yard jaunt and one time after a 20-yard scamper.

Cole Vestal took a Jimmy Rios pass for the last Borden County points on an 8-yard pass play in the fourth quarter.

Loop's Bradley Crow gained 189 yards on the night.

First year Borden County coach Bobby Avery was the head man at Loop before joining the Coyotes.

Borden County falls to 1-3 on the season. Loop also has a 1-3 mark.

Tigers tie ninth-rated Steers

Brian Brunson's 30-yard field goal ties Big Spring 14-14

By PHIL RIDDLE
SDN Sports Editor

Snyder's Tigers gave the No. 9 ranked Big Spring Steers all they wanted and then some in Friday night's 14-14 tie in non-district football action.

Snyder coach David Baugh thought the difference in the game was the Tigers' team character.

"What was outstanding about this game," he said, "was when we got down 14-3, after we gave up what I consider two easy touchdowns, our kids just bowed their ol' necks and they came back and got it."

Big Spring playmaker Jermaine Miller, who led area Class 4A running backs with 386 total yards and a 5.1 per carry average, was limited to just 76 yards on 19 carries.

Neal Mayfield, the Steers' wingback had accumulated 269 receiving yards in the three previous games but the Tiger defense didn't allow him a catch.

The only time the SHS defense was caught napping against Big Spring was midway through the third quarter when Miller blasted through the Tiger line and rumbled in for a 31-yard TD that put Big Spring up 14-3.

Miller had bulled over from two yards away just eight seconds earlier for the Steers' initial score before SHS gave the ball away on its second consecutive mishandled kickoff.

The Tiger defenders, who solidified their position atop the District 2-4A rankings, gave up just 108 total yards to a Big Spring offense that has been averaging 345 yards per game against Amarillo Caprock, Lubbock Estacado and Lubbock High.

Snyder's defense made a remarkable goal line stand that halted Big Spring at the SHS 1-inch line in the latter stages of the first quarter.

The Tigers followed with a 22-play drive that ate up over eight minutes of clock time in the second period but ended at the Big Spring 24 on a fumble by Anderson.

"Things like that drive really help our defensive effort, too," the coach theorized.

"Our defense can get a little rest when the offense is on the field more."

"I've been really pleased with our ball control in all four games."

"Paul Anderson had a tough night," Baugh said of his senior tailback.

"He busted some plays, ne got his ankle hurt, he got his knee hurt, he fumbled the ball. He had a miserable night in some ways."

"But when the chips were down, when we needed a touchdown, he went out and got the job done."

Anderson gained 58 yards on 19 carries including the 17-yard TD run at the 2:52 mark in the third quarter that pulled the Tigers within three. He also fumbled the football four times.

"I just had to get it done," said Anderson. "I had to for the fans and to help my team."

He continued, "It feels great to tie the No. 9 team in the state."

The SHS coach also spoke highly of fullback-kicker Brian Brunson.

"Brian is a real dependable back, a real clutch, pressure-type player and an excellent blocker."

Brunson, besides his duties kicking off and two field goals, his last a 30 yarder in the fourth quarter that knotted the score at 14-all, had 44 yards on the night rushing, four catches out of the backfield for another 44 yards and sprung Anderson for most of his real estate.

Tiger quarterback Ed Rios completed nine of 17 passes on the night for 97 yards. He also connected with wingback Mark King for the two-point conversion after Anderson's TD to keep Snyder within a field goal of the Steers.

"When we're in a groove like we're in now, it gives us the feeling that we're unstoppable," Rios said. "I know if I can't throw it then some one can run it."

Baugh marvelled at the level of play of his entire defense, which is now allowing just 116.5 yards per outing, but mentioned the play of sophomore defensive tackle Todd Iglehart, in particular.

"He did some really good things. He was reading some keys that took him right to the ball. "He made several tackles on Jermaine Miller and that tickled me we had a sophomore doing that."

Snyder went ahead in the battle, 3-0 on its opening possession on a 28-yard Brian Brunson field goal and held the lead going into the half.

Each team had possession of the football in the first nine seconds of the third period.

The Tiger return team let the kickoff fall untouched to the ground to be recovered by Big Spring.

Big Spring quarterback Gerald Cobos was dumped on the next play for a loss and fumbled back to the Tigers who fumbled the ball back to Big Spring on the very next play.

The Steers held onto the pigskin for just three plays before Terry Stephens slipped in front of a Cobos pass intended for Neal Mayfield and got the ball back for the SHS offense.

"Both teams made enough mistakes to get beat by three touchdowns," said Baugh.

Each squad suffered four turnovers, Snyder four fumbles and Big Spring three fumbles and an interception.

"I'm tickled to death to be 2-1-1 after four games," said Baugh.

"We've already played the two best teams in District 3-4A."

The Tigers wind up their non-district schedule next week as the Seminole Indians invade Snyder for homecoming.

JV gridders fall to Steers

Snyder's Junior Varsity Tigers fell to Big Spring in a Thursday football game, 29-0.

"Our execution was off, said junior varsity coach Roland Hererra.

"We just didn't do a good job." Big Spring scored on its opening drive to go up 7-0 and never looked back.

The Tigers sent a snap intended for the SHS punter over the kickers' head into their own end zone. Big Spring found the errant football for another TD.

The Steers also scored later in the game on one of three pass interceptions.

Hererra praised the efforts of running backs Ben Wilson and Waylon Harrison on offense and Tim Neves and Payton Daniels on defense.

"Ben and Waylon ran the ball hard," said the SHS coach, "We just couldn't open any holes for them."

Of his defensive standouts he said, "Tim and Payton did a super job."

The Tigers' next game is set for next Saturday at 10 a.m. against Abilene Cooper in the Lee Complex in Abilene.

Top squads take wins

Aldine, Consolidated stop schoolboy foes

by The Associated Press

The road to victory in Texas high school football was similar Friday night for top-ranked Aldine of Class 5A and top-ranked A&M Consolidated of Class 4A.

Both teams got extraordinary passing performances from their quarterbacks, then got a key interception in the waning moments to preserve their victory and remain unbeaten.

Aldine quarterback Eric Gray teamed with wide receiver Eric Stephens on a 65-yard touchdown pass with 1:47 to play to give Aldine a 24-21 lead over Humble Kingwood in a game played before 9,000 fans.

Kingwood tried one last drive, as Kingwood quarterback Brian Harper completed two consecutive passes to take his team to the Aldine 35. But his third pass, with 42 seconds left, was picked off by Larry Kissam, and Aldine ran out the clock.

A&M Consolidated, whose super running back Cliff Groce was out with an injury, was forced into its version of the run-and-shoot after Groce's backup, Clovis McCain, sprained his ankle during a 22-yard touchdown run in the first quarter.

But quarterback Tommy Preston was up to the task. Operating out of the shotgun in a no-huddle offense most of the game, Preston passed for a career-high 320 yards, hitting receiver Mike Pearce nine times for 191 of the yards. A standing-room-only crowd of 8,000 watched the battle.

Leading 31-27 with just more than two minutes remaining and faced with a fourth-and-7 from the Panthers' 38, Preston had a pass dropped. That gave Lufkin the ball with 2:06 to go.

Following a motion penalty, Eugene Jones scrambled for a 9-yard gain. An incompletion brought third down, but Dewayne Castle went 16-yards on a draw play.

A halfback pass from Derrick Odom to Jones went for 3 yards before Jones connected with Clayton Odom for a 19-yard gain to the A&M Consolidated 20 with less than a minute to play.

On the next play, Jones spotted Chad Alexander on the right side of the end zone. Alexander was open for a split second, but Jones put the ball over his head. That allowed Hans Butz to out-jump Alexander for an interception in the end zone, and A&M Consolidated ran out the last 39 seconds of the game.

In the closely followed intricacy game between Odessa Permian and Odessa High, Permian prevailed 24-6 before a crowd of more than 20,000, including 44 Odessa policemen, six Texas highway patrolmen, and four sheriff's deputies, and hundreds of reporters.

The traditional rivalry between Permian and Odessa High intensified after Odessa's head coach blew the whistle on illegal preseason practices by Permian's squad. The UIL ruled in mid-September that Permian, the defending Class 5A state champion, could not participate in the playoffs after this season.

Ex-Westerner vies for Aussie crown

QUEENSLAND, Australia — Former Western Texas College rodeo team member Tony Hecksher, who now lives in Marburg, Australia, is leading the bareback riding standings in his native country.

According to The Rural Times, a newspaper published here, Hecksher has competed in about 35 rodeos in southern Australia winning approximately $8,000. He stands a chance to break the Australian money record of $15,000 held by Frank Green by the end of the season in November at his current pace.

The Australian cowboy has taken first place in 11 consecutive rodeos after a third place start to his season.

The Australian championship will be decided in January in Tamworth, according to the Times.

Hecksher, 27, was a member of WTC's national champion team in 1986 taking third place at the College National Finals Rodeo in Bozeman, Mont.

He also wound up the year in second place in the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association's Southwest Region.

He is trailed in the Australian standings by second-place Dave Johnson with Ian Collins in third.

Hecksher was the 1983 bareback event's runner-up.

Bears, Raiders set for Sunday battle

by The Associated Press
 Featuring identical styles, philosophies and records, the Los Angeles Raiders meet the Chicago Bears in a key NFL game Sunday.

"There are some similarities," Chicago coach Mike Ditka said. "They're an outstanding team. They really are. They'll be the best team we've seen, by far. Their defense has played very, very well."

And so have the Bears. In fact, Sunday's matchup at the Oakland Coliseum pits the 1-2 defenses in the NFL this season.

The Raiders have allowed 25 points in their three games, best in the league. Their opponents have averaged only 249.3 yards in total offense.

The Bears have given up 29 points, second-best in the NFL. Their opponents have averaged just 229 yards per game.

On offense, the Raiders have averaged 30 running plays for 113.0 yards and 18.3 passes for 167.3 yards. The Bears have averaged 40 running plays for 177.3 yards and 20.3 passes for 135.7 yards. Each team has committed three turnovers.

The defense-first philosophies have stood each team in good stead this season. They both have 3-0 records as two of the NFL's five unbeaten teams.

"(Ditka) has changed the attitude of their team," Raiders coach Art Shell said. "They're doing whatever they have to do to win. Whatever it takes to win, he'll try to do it. We have the same philosophy."

The last time the teams met — on Dec. 27, 1987 — the Bears won 6-3 at the Los Angeles Coliseum. Sunday's game also figures to be another low-scoring affair.

"Who knows, you might have a high-scoring game," Shell said. "If we win 3-0, I'll take that. If we win 35-34, I'll take that. Whatever it takes to win, I'll take."

In other NFL games Sunday, it's Denver at Buffalo, Dallas at the New York Giants, Green Bay at Detroit, Indianapolis at Philadelphia, Miami at Pittsburgh, Tampa Bay at Minnesota, Cleveland at Kansas City, Houston at San Diego, the New York Jets at New England, and Washington at Phoenix.

Cincinnati plays at Seattle in the Monday night game.

Four teams have an open date this weekend — Atlanta, Los Angeles Rams, New Orleans and San Francisco.

Dan Marino, the Miami quarterback, returns to play in his native Pittsburgh for just the third time since he spent eight years throwing footballs in the city's Oakland section.

Marino, a former high school and University of Pittsburgh star, spent many Sundays at Three Rivers Stadium, watching the Steelers of the 1970s win Super Bowl after Super Bowl. He was a Steelers' fan and wore black and gold on his sleeve, just as thousands of other Pittsburghers did.

Grand jury blasts state board

AUSTIN (AP) — A special grand jury investigating insurance fraud blasted the State Board of Insurance Friday and warned that the industry could face a "savings and loan type disaster."

"As was true in the savings and loan arena, we see embezzlement and self-dealing by insurance company insiders and regulators who were asleep at the switch," said the special Travis County grand jury in its report to State District Judge Mace Thurman.

"However, it is our hope that the S&L experience has provided sufficient forewarning and motivation to prevent this disaster," said the grand jury, which was empaneled in April. Its term expires at the end of this month.

New insurance laws, reform at the State Board of Insurance and funding for the insurance fraud unit at the Travis County district attorney's office give wrongdoers notice that they will be prosecuted, the grand jury said.

State Board of Insurance member Jo Ann Howard defended her agency and called the grand jury's statements about the financial health of the insurance industry "alarmist and incorrect."

Travis County District Attorney Ronald Earle said another special grand jury probably would be needed on the issue in the future.

Earle said his office will pursue the 27 indictments issued against 21 people by the grand jury, which called the charges "but a tip of the iceberg."

"We unfortunately found that fraud in the Texas insurance industry is widespread and deep," the grand jury said.

Typical cases involved the unlawful conversion of premium funds for personal use by company officials, or criminal misrepresentation in the sale of policies and annuities.

These were covered up by falsified documents filed with the State Board of Insurance, the grand jury said.

At the State Board of Insurance, the grand jury said it found "closed minds, lack of cooperation, a tendency to overlook and wink at blatant misapplication of funds, filing of false financial statements, and apparent undue influence by outside lobbyists and lawyers."

"Such an environment allows greed and amoral behavior to run rampant and cause grievous losses to innocent policyholders," it said.

But the grand jury said there have been signs of improvement recently at the board. It said board members have shown willingness to take action, while warning that agency problems "are deep-rooted and pervasive."

Ms. Howard said the report "totally ignores the fact that maior changes have occurred at the State Board of Insurance since May 1989 and that many initiatives are being implemented to strengthen insurance regulation and the enforcement of Texas insurance laws."

"This is a shallow and transparent effort by politicians to justify, continue and increase funding for what has been a less than productive effort to investigate and prosecute insurance crooks," she said.

Ms. Howard said the board referred 128 criminal cases to prosecuting authorities in fiscal year 1990, including 67 to Earle.

"We fully intend to continue cooperating and sharing information because we all share the same goal of rooting out and punishing fraud in the insurance industry," she added.

Wall company ordered to pay millions

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — A federal jury on Friday ordered a manufacturer of room partitions to pay $5.1 million in connection with a 1986 New Year's Eve arson fire that killed 97 hotel guests.

The U.S. District Court jury found Air Wall Inc. guilty of nine counts of negligence and 10 counts of failure to warn users about possible hazards associated with its foam-filled dividers at the Dupont Plaza Hotel.

It was not immediately clear what potential hazards were cited by the jury, which decided the walls contributed to the fast-moving fire linked to a labor dispute in Puerto Rico's most populous city.

In a separate trial, three former hotel employees were convicted of murder in 1987 for setting the fire to pressure management to give into union demands. The union itself has denied any responsibility.

The fire broke out in a ballroom on the first floor of the 22-story hotel and most of the victims were trapped in the casino

Due to Iraqi atrocities, Bush aide says...

Military action might be necessary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iraqi atrocities in occupied Kuwait could prompt the United States to return to the United Nations to seek tougher sanctions against Saddam Hussein, possibly even military action, the White House says.

On Friday, Kuwait's exiled emir, Sheik Jabir al-Ahmed al-Sabah, gave President Bush a harrowing account of what the president called a "population assaulted, incarcerated, intimidated and even murdered."

The narrative included tales of babies being removed from incubators and critically ill patients being taken off life-support systems so that the hospital machinery could be sent back to Iraq, said national security adviser Brent Scowcroft.

"It was a pretty devastating account, especially in the face of Saddam Hussein saying he is the defender of the Arabs against the outside," Scowcroft said.

As a result of these reports and other accounts of violence and pillaging, Bush is reviewing the possibility of seeking additional United Nations action beyond the existing trade embargo and naval and air blockades, Scowcroft said.

The White House official also mentioned Iraqi threats to cut off

Police clear more juvenile-related theft cases

Local police officers were able to close three more juvenile-related theft cases Friday.

At 3:30 p.m., police closed the weekend thefts of two bicycles. Susan Hembree of 122 East Hwy. and Harvey Steven of 126 East Hwy. both reported Sept. 23 that bicycles had been taken from their residences. Two juveniles, ages 13 and 14, were taken into custody and the bicycles were returned.

Authorities also recovered an air compressor that was taken from a vehicle owned by Ed and Pauline Fisk. An additional juvenile is being questioned in the case.

At 12:08 p.m., officers were called to Allsup's where they took into custody a 14-year-old juvenile for theft. He was later released into the custody of his mother. A report for Class C theft was filed.

Joey Rodriguez called at 2:27 p.m. to report that someone had broken into his vehicle while parked at Snyder High School. An undetermined amount of money was taken. A report of burglary of a vehicle was filed.

Officers took three into custody at 8:22 p.m. in the 3000 block of Towle Park. The three 17-year-old male subjects were arrested for minor in possession.

A 30-year-old male was arrested in the 1100 block of Ave. T at 12:22 a.m. Saturday for driving while intoxicated.

Police were called to a domestic disturbance in the 100 block of 33rd St. at 1:35 a.m. Later, a 32-year-old male was arrested for public intoxication.

food supplies to Westerners trapped inside Kuwait and Iraq after the Aug. 2 invasion.

"The whole element of what the Iraqis are doing inside Kuwait to a whole people could conceivably be the subject of another U.N. action," Scowcroft said.

Asked if the United States might seek a resolution that specifically sought military action to force Iraq out of Kuwait, Scowcroft said, "That's one of those things which is conceivable."

Meanwhile, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, said he believes the administration "is looking more favorably on an early war option."

Aspin told reporters he based this assessment on four factors: The diminishing chances of Kuwait regaining its independence; cooler weather; Moslems' January pilgrimage to Mecca, which would make fighting then more difficult; and a more hawkish tone to recent administration remarks.

Scowcroft noted that one provision of the United Nations charter that might be "called into operation" already establishes procedures for assembling a multinational military force under the U.N. flag.

The presidential adviser noted that the charter allows the Security Council to organize military actions against a nation if other sanctions "prove to be inadequate."

Scowcroft said, however, that Bush did not plan to include an appeal for further United Nations action against Iraq during his visit to the world body this weekend.

The president was flying to New York today for a U.N. conference on children's diseases and hunger. He will address the General Assembly on Monday.

After his luncheon meeting with the exiled Kuwaiti ruler on Friday, Bush told a departure ceremony on the White House lawn, "What normally would be a pleasurable occasion instead is a time for sobriety and sorrow."

Bush reiterated his commitment to seek to isolate Saddam, the Iraqi president, and force withdrawal of Iraqi troops from Kuwait.

"His highness and I agreed that we must keep all our options open to ensure that Iraq's unlawful occupation of Kuwait is ended and Kuwait's legitimate government restored," Bush said.

"Iraq will fail," he declared. For his part, the exiled emir praised Bush for showing a "principled, courageous and decisive position in the face of Iraqi aggression" and said he hoped the president would one day be able to visit him in "liberated, independent Kuwait."

The White House meeting was intended as a clear sign that the United States still regards the 64-year-old emir as the legitimate ruler of Kuwait.

Bush has consistently insisted that not only must Iraq withdraw its invasion troops from Kuwait but that the emir must be restored to the power he has wielded since 1977.

O'Brien, former JFK aide & NBA commissioner, dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Lawrence F. O'Brien, who helped reshape American politics as director of John F. Kennedy's presidential campaign and later revitalized the National Basketball Association as its commissioner, died Thursday night of cancer at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center. He was 73.

O'Brien was one of the Democratic party's leading strategists for two decades.

He was with Kennedy when the president was assassinated in Dallas in 1963. O'Brien was also with Sen. Robert F. Kennedy when he was assassinated in Los Angeles in 1968.

He served as congressional liaison for President Kennedy and former President Lyndon B. Johnson, was postmaster general for three years, and was twice named chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

It was O'Brien's Democratic Party office that was broken into in the Washington's Watergate complex in 1972. The burglary triggered one of nation's most notorious scandals, forced President Nixon to resign and soured O'Brien on politics.

O'Brien left politics in 1972 for Wall Street, then was named as NBA commissioner in 1975, a year when free agency and big money were reshaping professional sports.

It was with O'Brien's guidance that the NBA settled the so-called "Oscar Robertson suit" in 1976, which paved the way to free agency in the league.

He also supervised the NBA's merger with the rival American Basketball Association and oversaw the league's adoption of the three-point basket. The NBA's championship trophy is named for O'Brien.

O'Brien was born in Springfield, Mass. After service in World War II, he helped elect Foster Furcolo to Congress and at age 29 went to Washington.

He soon returned to Springfield, but joined the campaign staff of John Kennedy, then a congressman challenging Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge — the symbol of Protestant Republicanism in Massachusetts and a pillar of the Eastern establishment in Congress.

O'Brien became director of the campaign, recruited an army of 1,800 volunteers to work for the handsome young millionaire, and put them to work writing thank-you notes to all 260,000 voters who signed Kennedy's nominating petitions. Kennedy upset Lodge, and in 1958 he easily won re-election.

In 1959, Kennedy decided to run for president and named O'Brien his campaign director. The candidate won each of the seven primaries he entered, and at the convention in Los Angeles, O'Brien's delegate count was so accurate that he predicted within a half-vote the final tally.

The victory was O'Brien's greatest triumph.

As Kennedy's liaison with Congress, O'Brien worked skillfully but largely unsuccessfully for the administration's "New Frontier" legislative package, then continued in the post under Johnson and helped usher win passage of the greatest body of social law since the Depression.

O'Brien also served as Johnson's Postmaster General, from 1965-1968. When Johnson decided not to run for re-election, O'Brien left the administration to run the presidential campaign of Robert Kennedy, and after Kennedy's assassination took over the campaign of Sen. Hubert Humphrey.

After Humphrey was nominated, O'Brien was named head of the Democratic National Committee. He also was named chairman of the DNC in 1970.

He retired from the NBA in 1984.

Survivors include his wife, Elva Brassard O'Brien; a son, Lawrence F. O'Brien, III of Washington; two grandsons, and a sister, Mary Placzek of Wilbraham, Mass.

A wake is scheduled for Sunday in New York and Monday in Springfield. The funeral will be Tuesday at St. Michael's Cathedral in Springfield.

Suspect in robberies surrenders to police

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who allegedly posed as a police officer to commit numerous robberies and then eluded a massive law enforcement search has surrendered to police, authorities said.

His father, girlfriend and alleged accomplice had been arrested previously.

John Franklin Bailey, 28, a suspect in 30 to 50 robberies during the past six months, turned himself in to police Friday morning in the Central Texas town of New Braunfels, said Houston police robbery detective J.B. Whiteley.

Bailey escaped from an elaborate police stakeout last week in Houston after a five-hour search of an apartment complex.

Police believe that Bailey obtained two police uniforms in the robbery of a laundry in July and later wore the outfits while robbing the House of Pies and the Yucatan Liquor Stand.

Whiteley said Bailey's father, Frank, 48, was arrested Thursday night by Harris County sheriff's authorities as he drove along a Houston freeway. He has been charged with aggravated assault in connection with a robbery at a residence. He was being held in lieu of $50,000 bail.

Whiteley said police believe that Bailey's father may have participated in several other robberies with his son.

On Thursday, Houston police arrested Jeffrey M. Daven, 38, who they said was Bailey's accomplice in several robberies and who has been identified by witnesses and victims as a suspect in at least four robberies.

Whiteley said detectives believe that Daven was the second man in the House of Pies robbery, in which he also was dressed as a law officer.

Daven has been charged with three counts of aggravated robbery and was being held in lieu of $20,000 bail on each charge.

Also jailed was Bailey's girlfriend, Ramona Cannon, 44, who was taken into custody on federal charges of harboring a fugitive last week.

Whiteley said police don't know why Bailey decided to surrender but feel that the arrests of his father, girlfriend and accomplice may have had something to do with it.

"Maybe he saw the handwriting on the wall," Whiteley said. Police estimate that Bailey has stolen about $70,000 during the past six months. All of the robberies that Bailey allegedly committed occurred while he was out on $50,000 bail on another felony charge.

In March 1989 he was charged with sexual assault of a child in Fort Bend County.

Robbery Lt. Alan Tharling said police plan to hold several lineups and may file charges in as many as 10 more cases.

KUWAIT Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein says his troops will never leave Kuwait because Kuwait has always been a part of Iraq. This claim goes back to a very old dispute.

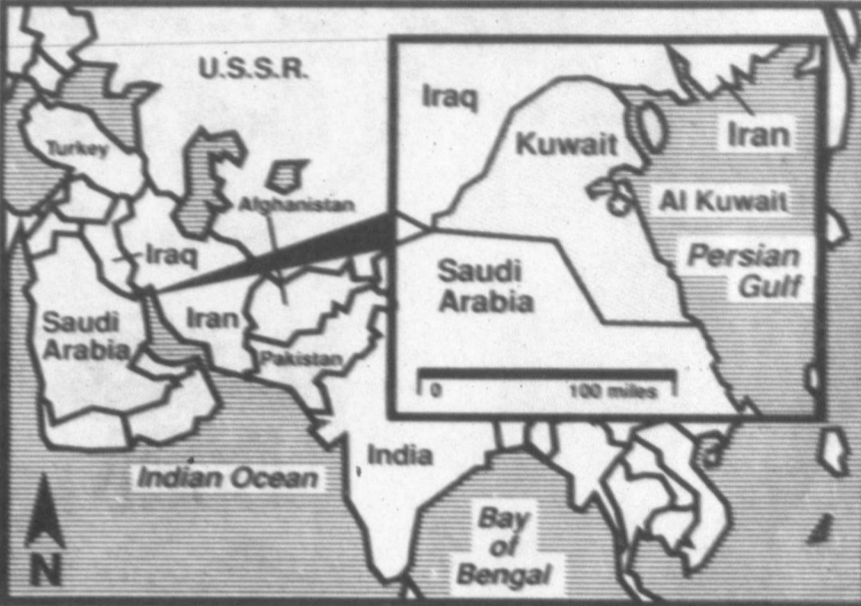

Originally, the land that is now Kuwait was part of the province of Basra under the old Ottoman Empire. What is now Iraq, including the rest of Basra Province, was also part of the Empire. Basra Province was actually ruled by the Al-Sabah dynasty that was founded in 1759. In 1899 the British broke off what is now Kuwait and operated it as a protectorate until its independence in 1961. During World War I, Britain secured a League of Nations mandate over Iraq and ran the country as a protectorate until its independence was granted in 1958. Effectively, the Iraq-Kuwait border was a line drawn in the sand by Britain to reward the al-Sabah family.

At the time Iraq was granted independence in 1958, it demanded that the area of Kuwait be included. Britain refused, holding on to Kuwait for an additional three years, and then made it an independent monarchy under the al-Sabah family. This act has never been recognized by Iraq. Immediately after Kuwaiti independence, Iraq tried to seize it by force. The attempt failed, as did similar attempts in 1973 and 1976.

In recent months the pressure on Iraq from Kuwait has increased. Iraq claims that Kuwait moved its border with Iraq 2 1/2 miles north while Iraq's attention was diverted by its eight-year-long war with Iran. That gave the Kuwaitis access to the rich Rumaila oil field, and Iraq claims that Kuwait owes it $2.5 billion for "stolen" oil. In addition, Iraq demanded that Kuwait forgive $20 billion in loans it received to finance its losing war with Iran. Kuwait refused.

Finally, Iraq is landlocked except for an 18-mile shoreline that is blocked almost entirely by Kuwait's Bubiyan Island. Iraq has long claimed the island, and in recent months it demanded that Kuwait allow Iraq to annex it. The Kuwaitis refused.

Britain's ground forces sent to Gulf

By The Associated Press

Britain Saturday sent ground forces to the Persian Gulf, and Iraq's foreign minister arrived in Jordan carrying a message from President Saddam Hussein.

Baghdad's government threatened to spread any war across the region, and talk of war also came from Washington.

Following a meeting Friday between President Bush and Kuwait's deposed emir, a presidential aide suggested Bush might push for tougher U.N. action against Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein, including a military operation.

Rep. Les Aspin, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, said he feels the Bush administration "is looking more favorably on an early war option" to end Saddam's 8-week-old occupation of oil-rich Kuwait.

So far, tough U.N. sanctions and a naval blockade that has choked off virtually all of Iraq's oil exports and food imports have failed to break Saddam's resolve to absorb the emirate.

Meanwhile, British ground forces were to begin leaving Britain and Germany Saturday for the Persian Gulf, the Defense Ministry said in London.

By Shirley A. Gorman

During the 1989-90 school year Monica Garcia was a "brat," a "Navy brat" to be more precise. But she didn't mind at all because that opened the door to an opportunity of a lifetime — living in Spain for a year.

Though now a senior at Snyder High School, Monica, who is the daughter of Gilbert and Eudelia Garcia, spent her junior year abroad attending a special school for "military brats" on Rota Naval Base in Spain.

During her time in Spain, Monica stayed with her sister, Glenda, and her husband Merl Fuchs, who is a navigator. Since he then served as her legal guardian, she qualified as a Navy dependent and could live on the base.

Sometimes, though, Monica had the opportunity to stay with different Spanish families and to travel to other parts of the country. She enjoyed being a Spaniard so much that she said she would like to return to Spain before her brother-in-law's tour of duty ends in about two years.

Rota Naval Base is located in the southern tip of Spain or the Costadel Sol, which is similar to the French Riviera. She said the region is also beginning to be affected by the adverse influence of drugs. She explained that this part of Spain was becoming more modern, but that the country as a whole was behind in women's issues. Men still make more money than women and women are just now beginning to be admitted to the armed forces. Men serve just one year.

The northern or industrial part of Spain is considered "more civilized," she said.

Rota Naval Base attracts lots of people because it is a refueling area. She said she loved the opportunity to meet new people but, as a result of the Gulf crisis, she saw many families "in turmoil."

A bomb scare on the base greeted them the first weekend they arrived, she said.

They lived off base at first before a base condominium became available. Off base living conditions sometimes left a lot to be desired she said. During the summer, water is rationed and from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. the water is cut off. Homes didn't have air conditioners, either. Instead, they relied on cool breezes.

After moving onto the base, Monica was able to travel freely just by presenting her military ID card.

She was very active in sports last school year and because opponents were so far away, going to an out-of-town match usually meant a 12-15 hour drive. Often they would leave on a Thursday afternoon and return on Sunday. Team members used the travel time to do homework and each of the girls carried different class books which they all shared. Not duplicating books made it easier for them to travel.

En route to and from their destination, she said they often stayed with various families along the way.

Monica played varsity volleyball and tennis and served as a cheerleader as well. During the fall, she helped cheer the football, volleyball and wrestling teams. Spring meant tennis, track and soccer.

Monica was a cheerleader from November through February. Not only did they cheer their school's teams, but cheerleaders from different military schools often competed against each other during cheerleading meets.

Monica said no dress code existed at her school last year, but several fund raisers were held to help pay for travel expenses, new uniforms for the booster club and other organizations or other needs.

Students sold baked goods, held telethons and anything else to raise funds.

Monica said her stay at the military school was an eye opener because not only was there no dress code, she met different types of students such as three British youths who liked to wear the mohawk look, as well as Filipinos and Hawaiians.

Monica attended classes from Monday through Friday for about nine months. Students were allowed holidays and vacations were approved as long as homework assignments were made up.

While in Spain, she was also a member of the Latin American Club. Though she was the youngest member, she "fit right in" and enjoyed meeting new people, including people from other countries such as Puerto Rico.

Communicating wasn't difficult for Monica because she already understood the Spanish language but she had to learn how to speak Castilian Spanish which she did from listening to others.

Monica, who likes to sit and observe people, said it has always been easy for her to meet people. She was impressed that most of the people she met were able to speak more than one language.

Though Spaniards are not known for "smiling or waving," Monica said she was "taken in rather easily" by some people, but with others it took longer.

She loved shopping in the "gypsy markets" and had fun buying Spanish shoes and clothes. Now, Monica said, she gets Spanish clothes from her sister while she (Monica) sends her sister tapes for her VCR.

SOUVENIR—Monica Garcia spent her junior year in high school on a military base in Spain. She is holding a towel which has a partial map of Spain on it. Rota Naval Base is located midway on the

Differences she noticed included plentiful supplies of shrimp and fish and drinks usually served without ice.

Oriental and Filipino food was plentiful but when Monica got lonesome for a hamburger McDonald's wasn't that far away and she said they never minded the long walk.

While in Spain, she attended one wedding. She said couples date for years and don't get to plan their wedding until they have all of their household supplies.

Being Catholic, Monica said she loved the old churches where services were held and Holy Week was a wonderful experience because during that special week before Easter she donned robes and walked for miles, just like everyone else.

For off-base activities, Monica said she liked to go dancing, visit the beach or ride mopeds. Spain operates on a different schedule than we do, she said, explaining that Spaniards' night life, especially in the summer, doesn't get started until midnight.

Merchants usually close in the afternoon (from 1-4 p.m.) for the traditional "siesta" which might include a trip to the beach instead. The shops reopen around 9 or so each evening.

Monica's visit to Ronda City was one of her favorite experiences and she really liked watching the traditional "running of the bulls."

Although Monica enjoyed living in Spain, she said she now has a greater appreciation of her own country and home in Snyder. See FOLKS, page 3B

Hall and Barker united in double-ring ceremony

STEPHENVILLE — The Harvey Baptist Church was the setting for the wedding of Karmen Ruth Hall and Craig Wayne Barker, on Saturday, Aug. 4, at 2 p.m. in the afternoon. Scott Curry, youth director at the church performed the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Cliff and Kathy Hall of Stephenville. Grandparents are A.W. Scrivner of Dermott, Pauline Scrivner of Snyder, the late Cliff Hall Sr. of Rising Star and Mrs. Cliff Hall Sr. of Rising Star and Stephenville.

Drs. Tommay and Ruby Barker of Stephenville are parents of the groom. His grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Weldon Cumbie and Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Barker, all of Plainview.

Guests were greeted by Tanya Stewart, cousin of the bride, of Brady. The registry table was covered with a lace cloth and held a registry book, a wooden carousel horse, a brass framed picture of the couple and a basket of yellow, pink and dusty rose birdseed roses, made by the bride's aunt, Betty Stewart, of Roby.

The altar of the church featured a carousel garden setting. White lattice decorated with illusion, greenery and ribbon streamers of peacock blue, dusty rose and yellow, set the backdrop for two carousel horses, hand painted by the bride and her mother. Twin white wrought iron benches were placed on each side of the setting between the altar base and guests. Tiny carousel horses and an abundance of greenery, live plants and ribbon streamers completed the setting.

Ann Post of Stephenville, provided wedding selections at the organ. Jeff Trice, Jeff Huffman, David Wilcox, all of Stephenville, and Cloyd Teague of Fort Worth ushered the guests and family members to their seats. Jeff Trice played "St. Elmo's Fire" on the saxophone as the grandparents and parents were seated. Mike Walton of Stephenville, sang "The Wedding Song," with Brian Barker, brother of the groom, of Morgan Mill, accompanying him on the guitar. Ann Post presented "The Bridal Chorus" at the organ as Scott Curry and the groom joined best man, Mike Walton, at the altar.

Before the ceremony, Robyn Barker Howland, cousin of the groom, of Waco, and Brian Barker sang "Household of Faith." They were accompanied by Colin Howland, cousin of the groom, of Waco, at the piano. Following the ceremony, Mike Walton sang "The Lord's Prayer," accompanied at the piano, by Robyn Barker Howland.

The bride was escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents. Her father was attired in shades of gray western wear. His single rose boutonniere was yellow, accented with peacock blue ribbon. The groom's father was also attired in shades of gray western wear and his boutonniere was a single fresh rose in dusty rose, accented with baby's breath and peacock blue ribbon.

The bride's mother wore a dress of shimmer polyester in dark peacock blue, accented lightly with black highlights. The groom's mother chose a drop-waisted Vogue design dress of brocade cotton in aqua. Both mothers wore fresh rose corsages, accented with baby's breath, pearl shoots and peacock blue ribbon. Mrs. Hall's roses were bright yellow and Mrs. Barker's were dusty rose.

Preceding the bride's entrance, the ring bearer, Chad McCright, escorted the flower girl, Dana McCright, both cousins of the bride, of Snyder, to the altar. She dropped rose petals from a lace covered satin basket, sprinkled with seed pearls and accented with dusty rose and yellow ribbons. She was attired in a peacock blue hanky linen dress, featuring a dropped waistline, double tiered angel sleeves, a double tiered skirt and accented with a rosette where the top tier draped up to the waist. She wore baby's breath with yellow and dusty rose ribbons in her hair and black patent shoes.

The ring bearer wore black Wranglers, a yellow tuxedo shirt, black suspenders, a black bow tie and black boots. His single rose boutonniere was in yellow, accented with peacock blue ribbon. He approached the best man, then the maid of honor, as they removed the wedding bands from ribbons of yellow and dusty rose, attached to a heart-shaped, lace covered, satin pillow, sprinkled with seed pearls. The basket and pillow were made by the bride's mother and grandmother 25 years ago and have been used in family weddings since that time. Chad and Dana then took their places, sitting on one of the wrought iron benches.

The bride chose a dress of satin peau, featuring a sweetheart neckline and a low V back. The molded bodice featured a "quilted effect," highlighted with seed pearls, inset in the front and back. The full puffed sleeves formed a snug fit above the elbows and were caught with small rosettes. They also had insets of "quilting" and seed pearls. The softly gathered skirt was caught to the extended dropped waistline, which formed a V in the front and back. The lower front skirt featured three appliqued satin carousel horses, lavished with seed pearls. The detachable semi-cathedral length train was caught to the back waist with a cluster of rosettes. It featured a larger version of the appliqued satin and pearl lavished carousel horse. Adorning her hair and caught to a pearl band, was a short pouf of illusion, sprinkled with shoots of seed pearls and cascading lengths of lily of the valley and seed pearls. She wore satin and pearl bridal slippers. Her dress and headpiece were completely designed and made by the bride and her mother. Her bridal bouquet was a fresh garden cascade of yellow and pink bridal roses, alstroemeria lilies, baby's breath with trailing English ivy and streamers of peacock blue, dusty rose and yellow.

Her train was carried by Jason and Justin Guynes, cousins of the bride, of Snyder. They were attired in black Wranglers, dusty rose tuxedo shirts, black suspenders, black bow ties and boots. Their single fresh rose boutonnières were in dusty rose, tied with peacock blue ribbon. After they reached the altar and the bride was given in marriage, they took their seats on the remaining wrought iron bench.

In the tradition of something old, she carried a white Bible, covered with satin, lace and seed pearls. It was a childhood gift to the bride's mother 33 years ago and had been carried by family members in previous weddings. Something new was her dress and a diamond watch, a gift from the groom. Something borrowed was a pearl necklace and earrings, belonging to the groom's mother. Something blue was her toss garter. For good luck, she wore an elegant white lace garter, entwined with ribbon and roses of emerald green, the bride's "good luck color."

Bridesmaids, Sharon Winkle, of Stephenville and Natalie Stephens, of Eastland, were escorted to the altar by Cliff J. Hall, brother of the bride, of Stephenville and Brian Barker, brother of the groom, of Morgan Mill. Each couple stood at the carousel horses. The bridesmaid's dresses were peacock blue hanky linen, featuring dropped V waists with full gathered skirts. Sharon's dress had a molded bodice and a sweetheart neckline, above the elbow full sleeves and a V back with twin diagonal straps across the V. Accenting the back of her skirt was a bow flounce, featuring a large rosette. Natalie's dress had a shaped bodice and featured an off-the-shoulder pleated drape that encircled her shoulders and was accented in the front with a large rosette. Both wore black patent shoes and carried a single long stemmed fresh rose in dusty rose, accented with baby's breath and tied with yellow ribbon.

The maid of honor, Tametha Barker, sister of the groom, of Stephenville, was met at the altar by the best man, Mike Walton, who then escorted her up the steps to wait for the bride. She wore a peacock blue hanky linen dress, featuring a dropped V waist, full gathered skirt and a fitted bodice with a V neckline and full sleeves caught just above the elbow with three rosettes. Black patent shoes complimented her attire. She carried a bright yellow long-stemmed fresh rose accented with baby's breath and tied with dusty rose ribbon.

The groom was dressed in a black tuxedo tails jacket over a white tuxedo shirt, white vest, white bow tie and black Wranglers, with black boots and belt completing his attire. His belt was complimented by a western buckle, a gift from the bride, engraved with the couples names and wedding date. His fresh twin rose boutonniere was in dusty rose and yellow, accented with baby's breath and peacock blue ribbon.

The best man was attired in black Wranglers, a yellow tuxedo shirt, black suspenders, black bow tie and boots. His single fresh rose boutonniere was in yellow, accented with peacock blue ribbon. The groomsmen wore black Wranglers, dusty rose tuxedo shirts, black suspenders, black bow ties and boots. Their fresh single rose boutonnières were in dusty rose, accented with peacock blue ribbon.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall following the ceremony. White lattice, draped with illusion, greenery and streamers in peacock blue, dusty rose and yellow, formed the backdrop for the bride's and groom's tables. The carousel horses were placed on either side of the lattice. The bride's table was covered in white lace over peacock blue and featured a gathered skirt of white illusion. The four-tiered white wedding cake rested on tall columns. Underneath the raised cake, was a small cake holding a blown glass carousel horse. A blown glass bride and groom rested atop the cake. Peacock blue ribbon flowed from the ornament to four satellite cakes resting on the table around the columns. The two front satellite cakes held the wedding cake ornaments belonging to both the bride's and groom's parents. The cake was made by the bride's mother. A large crystal punch bowl held pink lemonade. Mixed nuts and heart mints were also served. Scattered fresh cut flowers complimented the table.

The groom's table was covered in white lace over peacock blue and featured a gathered skirt in white. The chocolate cake was iced with chocolate and decorated to look like a computer, complete with disc and electronic program. It was made and decorated by the groom. Coffee was served from a silver service. The bride's toss bouquet added the finishing touch to the table.

Serving at the tables were Pat Guynes, cousin of the bride, of Snyder; Jeanene Kraft, cousin of the bride, of Alvin; Lynda Barker, cousin of the groom, of Lubbock; and Rita Davis. Heading the houseparty was June Hill, aunt of the groom, of Mansfield. Others in the houseparty were Gaynell Jefferies, Leona Goodman, Rhonda Wilcox and Lounell Archie.

The gift table held a wooden carousel horse, hand-painted and decorated in the wedding colors by Tom and Ann Post. A basket of birdseed roses in pink, dusty rose and yellow, and made by Betty Stewart, completed the decor.

The rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's parents at K-Bob's Steak House.

After a honeymoon trip to Disney World in Florida, the couple are at home in Lubbock, where they both attend Texas Tech University and are employed on campus.

The bride and groom are both 1989 graduates of Stephenville High School.

Couple wed in garden ceremony

CALVERT — Shawna Denise Chrane of Snyder became the bride of William Lawrence Walker of Bryan, in a garden setting at 10 a.m. on Aug. 18 at Our House Bed and Breakfast. Tom Holcomb, minister of East Side Church of Christ in Snyder, officiated the double-ring ceremony.

Lawrence Nolen, grandfather of the groom, of Bryan, read expressions of friendship, written by the bride and groom, acknowledging their special friends who helped them grow to maturity. Each friend was handed a miniature mauve rose by Gary Smith of College Station. Mr. Nolen also presented a special message to the couple.

The minister read special words to the parents, written by the bride and groom. Personal vows, written by the bride and groom, were exchanged.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Chrane of Snyder. The groom's parents are Dr. and Mrs. Robert Walker of Bryan.

The garden featured a brass arch, covered with ferns and azaleas on each side. Azalea silk bows with English ivy and baby's breath marked the aisle between rows of white chairs. Centered under the arch was a painted bronze swan sculpture, created by the bride's uncle, Dr. Robert Taylor of Snyder.

Michael McCoy of San Saba; Amy Walker, the groom's sister-in-law, of Lubbock; David Chrane, cousin of the bride, of Austin; Rachel McClure, cousin of the bride, of Norfolk, Va. and Julie Harmon of College Station, provided the music. The selection of songs chosen were "I'll Still Be Loving You," "The Vows Go Unbroken," "One Friend," "What God Has Joined Together," "Thanks Again," the theme from "Man From Snowy River," "Homemaker," and "Alleluia."

The bride was escorted and given in marriage by her father.

The bride chose an ivory satin bridal gown, featuring a Queen Anne neckline, re-embroidered Alencon and silk venise lace trim, a full skirt and a cathedral train. The fitted waistline was accented with sequins and pearls. The beaded bodice had pouf topped, fitted satin sleeves with satin button closures, and a sheer illusion open back, trimmed with lace. The skirt had an apron effect in back, trimmed with a large satin rosette and a cathedral train, accented with window motifs. Satin flowers, adorned with sequins, pearls and lace, formed her wreath headpiece. Her veil was shoulder length to accent the open back of her dress.

She carried a bouquet, fashioned of fresh white roses, fressia, stephanotis and English ivy. In the tradition of something old, she carried a lace handkerchief, made by her grandmother; something new was her gown; for something borrowed she wore a strand of pearls and earrings, belonging to Glenda Winkley of Ozona; something blue was a garter, made by Peggy English. She carried a six pence that had been carried by several other family members at their weddings.

Marcie Featherston of Lubbock served her sister as matron of honor. She wore a tea-length straight dress of emerald green chintz, featuring a sweetheart neckline, accented with ivory lace and dropped to a deep V in the back and a dropped waist with a full peplum. She carried a single long-stemmed rose accented with baby's breath and ivy. Her headpiece was made of pearls and azalea flowers, matching the chintz fabric of her dress.

Sid Walker, brother of the groom, of Lubbock was best man.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM LAWRENCE WALKER

The groom and best man were attired in Christian Dior charcoal gray morning tuxedos, featuring double-breasted jackets and vests. Completing their outfits, were ties and pleated ivory wing tip shirts. Their boutonnieres were fashioned of pink roses, baby's breath and greenery.

Rhonda Brewer of College Station registered the guests at a table covered with an emerald green chintz cloth with a lace overlay. The table held a bouquet of azalea and white flowers, a picture of the bride and groom, and scrolls with messages to the guests from the couple.

A brunch reception was held on the main floor of the 19th century home. Each of the four main rooms had a large fireplace and mantle that was decorated with large sprays of white calla lilies, roses, fressia and greenery.

Fingerfoods were served on white lace covered tables set in a T-shape. One table featured a lovebird bronze sculpture, created by Dr. Robert Taylor.

The bridal cake table was covered with a white eyelet cloth and held the traditional three-tiered white wedding cake. The cake had three raised layers over a tiered fountain and was surrounded by six round cakes. The cakes were decorated with white frosting, accented with green and fuschia flowers, and green ribbon bows interspersed with white bells and greenery. The table also held a silver punch bowl, silver coffee service, silver candlesticks and silver appointments that were used at the groom's parents wedding. The bridal bouquet was the centerpiece.

Serving at the table were Carla Caskey of San Marcos, Jennifer Dees of Greenville, Jan Davis of Abilene, Shelly Lewis of Gail and Jenni Gage.

She also said her year in Spain had given her a "taste of what college would be like." She loved being able to meet different people and getting to do so many things. It never occurred to her to be afraid.

Evening service unites Lisa Robbins and Dale Harris

Lisa Gail Robbins of Austin, became the bride of Dale Lynn Harris of Austin in a double-ring ceremony at 8 p.m. on July 14, at the First United Methodist Church in Snyder. The Rev. Jim Mosley, pastor of Union Baptist Church, officiated. The bride's grandfather, as part of the ceremony, read scriptures from II Corinthians, Chapter 13.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Robbins of Snyder. The groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Tom Harris of Hannibal, Mo.

The bride is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Buck Woolever of Snyder and Faye Robbins of Hermleigh. She is the great-granddaughter of Mrs. Gertie Wilson of Snyder. The groom's grandparents are Inez Putnam of Corpus Christi, Mrs. N. Wray of Merrivale, Mo. and Mr. and Mrs. T.T. Harris of Camron, Mo.

A large arrangement of white gladioli and votive candles decorated the center of the altar with a candelabra accented with greenery and baby's breath on each side. The altar rails were decorated with greenery, votive candles and baby's breath. Two white Grecian columns, topped with white gladioli and baby's breath, were set on each side of the altar. Two heart-shaped candelabra, with votive candles and decorated with greenery and baby's breath, adorned the back of the church, where the bride entered. The decorations were designed by Steven Floyd of Ft. Worth.

Lighting the candles were Heather Floyd and Julie Doolittle, cousins of the bride, of Snyder.

Tammy Farmer, cousin of the bride, of Denver, Colo. played the piano while the mothers were seated. Jane Wommack of Snyder played the traditional wedding march on the organ and also sang "The Lord's Prayer," accompanied by Farmer on the piano. Kim Gorman of Snyder played the harp while guests were seated and later at the reception. Brent Hardegree of Snyder played "The Wind Beneath My Wings," on the flute, accompanied by Farmer on the piano. Shirley Putnam, aunt of the groom, sang "Whither Thou Goest."

The bride was escorted and given in marriage by her father. She chose a romantic white gown of crystalline organza over satin and Alencon lace. The bodice, heavily beaded with sequins and pearls, featured a Queen Anne neckline, Juliet sleeves and a basque waistline. The full skirt, highlighted at the back with a bow, was adorned with fluted edge ruffles and flowed into a cathedral train. Her veil featured a Juliet cap of Alencon lace, beaded with sequins and pearls, appliques of lace on layers of white tulle and a short blusher veil.

She carried a cascading bouquet of peach roses, white gladioli, white stephanotis and white spider mums, accented with streamers of white and peach ribbons, tied in love knots.

In the tradition of something old, she wore pearls belonging to the groom's mother; something new was her bridal gown; something borrowed was a set of pearl earrings from LaVonda Vincik; and something blue was her garter. For good luck, she wore pennies in her shoes given to her by her sister, Kellie.

Kellie Robbins, sister of the bride, of Austin was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were LaVonda Vincik of Johnson City, Irene Euresti of Austin, Diana Molina of Snyder and Jean Rieger of Austin.

The maid of honor wore a teal taffeta dress with a teal and silver laced bodice, sleeves and peplum. The bridesmaids wore teal taffeta dresses with teal and silver lace bodices and sleeves and bell skirts. They carried nosegays of peach roses, carnations and baby's breath, accented with long streamers of teal, peach and silver ribbons, tied in love knots. They wore combs, decorated with peach roses and carnations, in their hair. Patsy Sitton, the bride's aunt, designed the flowers.

Shahala Mata of Snyder was flower girl. She wore a white eyelet dress, accented with a teal sash. She wore a coronet of teal and peach flowers in her hair and carried a peach lace basket filled with rose petals.

Grant Gonzales of Snyder was ring bearer. He wore a gray suit and white shirt, accented with a teal tie and sash, that matched the groomsmen's.

MR. AND MRS. DALE LYNN HARRIS

Danny Salinas of Corpus Christi, was best man. Groomsmen were Tom Harris, father of the groom, of Hannibal, Mo.; Mike Putnam, uncle of the groom, of Austin; Brandon Martin, nephew of the groom, of Kansas City, Mo.; and Craig Clark of Austin. The groom was attired in a Parisian gray tuxedo with tails, accented with matching vest and tie and a boutonniere, fashioned of two peach roses and baby's breath. His attendants wore silver shadow-weave tuxedos, accented with teal ties and sashes and boutonnieres, made of peach roses and baby's breath.

Holly Floyd, cousin of the bride, of Snyder registered the guests at a table covered with an antique lace cloth. It held the bride's book, pictures of the bride and groom, as children, in silver frames, and a single red rose in a silver vase, in memory of the groom's mother, Patricia Ann Wilkinson.

A reception was held in Wesley Hall of the church following the ceremony.

The bride's table was covered with a teal taffeta cloth and a white, pineapple design hand-crocheted overlay, made by the bride's maternal grandmother, Louise Woolever. The table held a traditional white three-tiered floating cake decorated with fresh roses, carnations and gladioli. It was topped with a Precious Moments bride and groom. Punch was served from a silver punch bowl, decorated with fresh flowers. Nuts and mints were served from crystal dishes.

Tina Robbins, cousin of the bride, of Lubbock and Sheree Sturdivant, cousin of the bride, of The Woodlands served at the bride's table.

A small table covered with a peach cloth and a hand-crocheted overlay, held a bouquet of teal and peach flowers and small teal baskets tied with peach ribbons and filled with birdseed, made by the bride's sister, Kellie.

The groom's table was covered with a peach cloth and an antique postage stamp quilt, handmade by the bride's great-grandmother, Ola Jane Sooter. The groom's cake was a German chocolate cake decorated with milk chocolate roses. Coffee was served from a silver service. Nuts and mints were served from silver bowls. The centerpiece was a long peach taper, in a silver and glass candle holder surrounded with fresh flowers.

Stacey Robbins, sister-in-law of the bride, of Hermleigh and Lana Robbins, cousin of the bride, of Lubbock served at the groom's table.

After the reception, the couple was honored with a dance at Willow Park Inn. The table held a silver champagne fountain, glass and silver punch bowl, trays of hors d'oeuvres and a red-velvet armadillo cake. The cake was designed and presented to the couple by Mike and Reta Graham.

Members of the houseparty were: Jean Godair, Bobbie Combest, Charlotte Clifton, Susan Stowe, Sue Eiring, Patsy Sitton, Fran Farmer, Rene Floyd, Katie Necessary and DeVelva Sorrells.

After a honeymoon trip to Jamaica, the couple is at home in Austin.

The bride is a 1984 graduate of Snyder High School and attended Western Texas College and the University of Texas in Austin. She is currently employed as a senior investment counselor by First Gibraltar Bank of Austin.

The groom graduated from the University of Missouri in Rolla, Mo., with a B.S. in petroleum engineering. He is currently employed at Craven Laboratories in Austin.

Smokers-Heart Attack

In addition to the lung cancer threat, habitual smoking predisposes smokers to clots in artery walls that can cause heart attacks. Smoking impairs the ability of the lining of blood vessels to resist clotting. Most of the 325,000 annual deaths in the U.S. attributed to smoking are due to cardiovascular failures. Improvement in the blood vessels is rapid when the smoking ceases.

Consider Product Packaging
 One of the best ways to reduce municipal solid waste is to limit packaging, which comprises about 40 percent of the solid waste stream according to a 1988 Franklin Associates study for the EPA.

Packaging accounts for 50 percent of all paper produced in the United States, 90 percent of all glass and 11 percent of all the aluminum. One dollar out of every $11 spent for groceries in the U.S. pays for packaging.

When buying products, consider these types of packaging:

•Over-packaged Items — An item surrounded by polystyrene beads in a box that is inside another box that is wrapped in plastic, may be very secure. However, all that extra packaging material (the cost of which is added to the price you pay for the produce) ends up in the landfill. Buy items such as fruit, vegetables and dry goods that often use little or no packaging at all.

•Refillable and Resealable Containers — Use refillable containers. Many food cooperatives allow customers to bring their own containers to refill. Peanut butter, cooking oil, honey, shampoo, flour, nuts and many other products can be purchased in this manner. Invest in resealable containers for storing leftovers and avoid using disposable plastic wraps, storage bags, etc.

•Bulk Packaging — Buy food and dry goods in bulk sizes. Items with a long shelf-life such as laundry detergent, flour and dry pet food can be purchased in large-size containers. Avoid individually wrapped portions of items such as cheese, fruit and juice servings which are expensive and add to the waste stream.

•Concentrates and Less Processed Foods — Purchase concentrates and add the liquid yourself. Transfer to a small container that you use over and over. Eat lower on the food chain by using less highly processed foods. Foods in their natural or raw form have less packaging.

Hostages recount their night of terror

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Hostages of a schizophrenic who hated Americans and claimed to hear voices endured seven hours of bizarre conversations and gunfire in a hotel bar.

They also saw one of the hostages killed and seven other people wounded before the gunman died in an explosion of police bullets.

"When he took a head count of us he started counting his rounds as well," said Doug Moore, among 33 people held by Mehrdad Dashti. "He watched every single move. Every time someone moved, he flinched."

Dashti, 30, commandeered Henry's Public House and Grille at the Durant Hotel, a block south of the University of California's Berkeley campus, early Thursday.

The siege, punctuated by Dashti's gunfire and the escape of some hostages, ended when police decided they could not talk him into coming out and stormed the bar.

Dashti was described as a paranoid schizophrenic on an Alameda County mental health form found in his cluttered Berkeley apartment. Police knew of no clear motive for the attack.

"He was apparently very confused," said Berkeley police Capt. Phil Doran. "Deranged is not a bad description."

Dashti, who grew up in Iran and came to the United States eight years ago, expressed animosity toward Americans.

"The foreigners in there, he told them he wasn't going to bother them. He was after the Americans," Moore said.

He claimed the "government owed him $16 trillion for mental telepathy work and this was his way of getting it back," said Moore, 25, a student at the nearby campus and manager of the hotel bar, a popular gathering place for students.

Dashti, in an unmailed letter to President Bush obtained by the San Francisco Examiner, claimed to have spoken with "invisible intelligent species" from the world of the dead.

Moore said Dashti also disliked blond women. During the ordeal, Dashti made them take off their pants but let them keep on their underwear, hostages said.

Carrying a briefcase, Dashti walked into Henry's shortly before midnight and had a drink, Moore said. Moore made a "last call" and the remaining crowd of more than 40 people clustered at the bar.

There was a bang. Dashti had concealed a pistol, a revolver and an "assault-type pistol" in the briefcase, police said. Moore said he looked up to see Dashti point a gun into the crowd and fire several more shots.

"I saw the gun and I hit the ground," said John Landa, 21, who was shot in the right arm but escaped with several others.

San Francisco police Sgt. Jerry Senkir said Dashti was named in a March 1989 warrant charging grand theft in connection with cashing two checks, worth more than $16,000, stolen from a bakery.

Dashti's roommate, 19-year-old Fred Smith, described him as "pretty religious" and fond of guns.

John Sheehy, 22, of Lafayette, died after he was shot in the chest at close range.

During the next seven hours, Dashti terrified his hostages by shooting "for the hell of it," Moore said.

Dashti used two male hostages as mouthpieces, having them answer telephone calls from police trying to negotiate with him and shout his demands out the window.

One of his demands was that San Francisco Police Chief Frank Jordan "drop his drawers" on television, Doran said.

Dashti, who received a degree in engineering from San Francisco State University, also was upset he didn't get a student loan for UC Berkeley, police said.

Quinn students in class by themselves

DALLAS (AP) — A week after its new Dallas campus opened for classes, Paul Quinn College still has no classroom or dormitory air conditioning, the hot water isn't working in students' living quarters and there is no bookstore, library or cafeteria.

But the key to getting past these hardships, administrators say, is patience.

"It just takes a little time," said Warren Morgan, president of the predominantly black school of about 750 students. He predicts classes will be normal by Monday and most other problems taken care of within 10 days.

"We worked a miracle in 44 days, and (students) just have to bear with us a little longer," he added.

After 118 years in Waco, college trustees last summer decided to move to the former campus of Bishop College, which had folded.

Dallas entrepreneur Comer Cotrell paid $1.5 million for the campus, then leased it to Paul Quinn officials, who had six weeks to renovate its neglected facilities.

Meanwhile, students are buying fans, usually two to three to a room, but sweltering through their classes and meetings. They're also taking cold showers.

And because cafeteria equipment isn't ready, they're eating on the lawn after being served from several long picnic tables.

"It boils down to patience," said junior Willis Chambers.

Luckless Sudanese hit with calamities

WASHINGTON (AP) — Not many Americans have ever thought much about the Sudan but, for the State Department, that East Africa giant suddenly has become a problem that is making a lot of diplomats sit up and take notice.

It's hard to imagine a more luckless place than Sudan, a country three times the size of Texas with the potential to be Africa's breadbasket. But it has been plagued by virtually every calamity that can befall a people — drought, civil war and misrule.

The Sudan story lacks the drama or the security component of the Persian Gulf for U.S. policy makers. It is, above all, a story of human deprivation on a massive scale, a story of millions of desperate people, many of whom are dying slow deaths.

When describing el-Bashir's tenure as head of a military government, U.S. officials no longer bother about diplomatic niceties.

"I think it would be well if Sudan's leaders looked back at the last drought (in sub-Saharan Africa). Eleven of 13 governments were overthrown by popular outrage by failure to respond," said Andrew Natsios, the top U.S. official for foreign disasters.

"Half the country is starving to death. That is a recipe for massive political convulsions."

Among other alleged misdeeds, Natsios accuses el-Bashir of ordering air raids on a barge carrying food supplies this past week at a time when top officials

Don't be too sure

In today's auction, North transferred to spades after partner's no-trump opening. His follow-up three-diamond bid showed a second suit and was a force to game. North gambled that four spades would have a good play if South held three or more spades. If South did not, North's good diamond suit would be a source of tricks for no-trump play. Just in case North had any slam interest, South cue-bid hearts before settling in four spades.

The deal demonstrates the lack of guarantees at the table. Declarer won the heart ace and played a diamond to dummy's jack, winning the trick when East followed with the nine. Declarer played a spade back to his king, ruffed a heart and played another spade back toward the closed hand. East won the ace and played a third heart, ruffed in dummy. Declarer drew the last trump and took a second diamond finesse. East now won the king, and poor South still had to lose a heart and two club tricks — down two.

Declarer should never allow his trump entries to dummy to be compromised. After the initial successful diamond finesse he is right to play a spade back to his king. But he should then immediately take a second diamond finesse. East can win and play a heart, but now a second spade play still leaves declarer able to get back to dummy by ruffing a heart, so he can play on diamonds. In this scenario, East might ruff a good diamond with the jack of spades, but South will over-ruff and still make his contract, in fact with an overtrick.

CDC: smokers know cigarettes aren't healthy

ATLANTA (AP) — Even the most veteran of smokers know their health could improve if they kick the habit, federal researchers say.

The Centers for Disease Control said Thursday that 83 percent of smokers believe they could avoid health problems if they quit, and 85 percent believe there are health benefits for those who quit even after 20 or more years of smoking.

The figures were taken in a canvass of 4,351 smokers, ages 25 to 64, during a random telephone survey conducted from January to April 1989.

The CDC reported that about 90 percent of college-educated smokers ages 55 to 64 indicated they believe there are health benefits for long-term smokers who quit.

Knowledge of the advantages of not smoking was lowest in smokers in that age group who had no college education; 67 percent of them said they saw a benefit to quitting late in life.

The survey was part of a battery of new studies intended to freshen decades-old warnings about smoking, CDC officials said.

The overall message, though,

Cocaine trafficking network said razed

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Bolivian anti-drug police and U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agents said Friday they had destroyed one of South America's most important drug-trafficking networks in a five-day series of raids.

The U.S. and Bolivian teams simultaneously hit ranches, labs, distribution networks, radio transmitting facilities, air strips and a nightclub, DEA Bolivia chief Don Ferrarone told The Associated Press.

He said at least 20 DEA agents and 300 Bolivian anti-drug police were involved in the operation, which continued Friday.

The smashed cocaine-trafficking network belonged to Carmelo Meco Dominguez. Law enforcement agents said the 34-year-old kingpin handled five to 10 tons of pure cocaine a month, much of it bound for the U.S. market. They said Dominguez is one of Bolivia's top three cocaine traffickers.

Dominguez was arrested Wednesday in Santa Cruz, Bolivia's second-largest city, located 350 miles east of La Paz, said Raul Loayza, Bolivia's undersecretary of the interior.

"We have destroyed one of the much the risk goes down after quitting," Davis said.

According to the CDC, risks associated with smoking drop dramatically — in some cases almost from the moment the last cigarette is snuffed out.

The Atlanta-based CDC concluded that smokers gain an average of 5 pounds after quitting; only 4 percent of those who quit gain more than 20 pounds.

The psychological effects of nicotine withdrawal — irritability, difficulty with concentration, sleep disorders, increased appetites and cigarette cravings — peak after about two days, then subside rapidly over the next several weeks, he said.

"We recognize that many smokers don't quit because they think they might gain some weight, or suffer withdrawal," Davis said. "We are trying to get the message out that these effects go down very quickly, so smokers should do all they can to get beyond those first two weeks and increase their chances of becoming permanent non-smokers."

The CDC also cited a study of pregnant smokers in Ohio which found that women who stopped smoking before pregnancy or during the first four months of pregnancy would have the same risk of delivering low birth-weight babies as women who never smoked.

The raids have been concentrated in Bolivia's principal cocaine and cocaine-producing regions, and resulted in confiscation of property worth at least $10 million, officials said. The seized assets include an automobile dealership and eight airplanes.

In 1929, Lt. James H. Doolittle guided a Consolidated NY2 biplane over Mitchell Field in New York in the first all-instrument flight.

It's the newest diet on the market: Operation Dessert Shield.

It's a fact that paper multiplies. Whether paper mates as often as coathangers is debatable, but it is prolific, never the less.

I've already written a column about the miles of mail that pass through a newspaper office in a week's time. Tons of the stuff feeds the trash containers. Cookie Monster never had it this good.

But with all that's thrown out, the amount of paper that survives is mystifying.

In one corner of this office, there is a three-foot stack of newspapers dating back to 1968. In the other corner is much smaller stack of letters, news releases and recipes. Let me explain that the recipes aren't for our society department; they are interesting recipes that I think sound good and would like to have my wife fix. The problem is, they are for things like brisket and chili and chicken enchiladas — which she won't eat. She would probably cook them for me, but somehow I feel guilty asking, knowing that she won't eat them herself. (I am also suspect of anyone who will cook something, but won't eat it. I figure what do they care if they put in a tablespoon instead of a teaspoon, or baking soda instead of baking powder?) Meanwhile, the recipes keep piling up.

And no, she was not born in Texas.

There's also a slowly fading decal from the Caprock Peace Officer's Rattlesnake Rodeo, a handful of letters-to-the-editor that aren't signed, about six Western Texas College catalogs dating to 1984 and several telephone books, dating to 1978. There are city directories back to 1968, plus seven or eight Snyder High School yearbooks.

In one drawer sit about 60 file folders, ranging in topic from AIDS to Windham School. In another, there are 20 to 25 old SISD school board agenda booklets, several more telephone books, and a couple of empty cassette tape boxes.

Behind the desk are some things I plan to get around to: a few back issues of Washington Journalism Review; a publication "Current Situation in Communist China — A Briefing in Chart Form;" some more recipes, including one for Chili Mole Ole! that calls for unsweetened cocoa; a plastic covered report entitled "Covering the Literacy Story;" a 1991 outlook on the hydrocarbon processing industry; information on the Oktoberfest in Fredericksburg; a Home Safe Home information kit; a 107-page report on cable television rates and services by the United States General Accounting Office; and The Media Guide to Medicine in Texas.

There were more, but I threw away about a half a dozen while writing this column.

I've been at this desk for a little more than a year. I figure at this rate, it'll be a storeroom in about 24 months.

There's one other piece of paper here now. It's this column. But, unlike the recipe for Chili Mole Ole!, it won't be around long.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

I just watched a movie called "Flashback," starring Dennis Hopper and Keifer Sutherland. Hopper plays a sixties radical who has emerged from the underground. Sutherland is the FBI agent assigned to bring Hopper in for trial. After a series of misadventures, Hopper winds up touting a bestselling book and riding around in a limo. Sutherland chucks his conservative dark suit and takes off cross country on his motorcycle.

I can identify. Back in the sixties, I did everything my parents told me to, dressed like a PTA president, and dated frat rats. I thought flower power was for the birds and the war protesters misguided.

Or did I? As the sixties melted into the seventies, I married and settled down to a life of conformity. For a while.

When school administrators warned me that I couldn't teach in slacks and a blouse without a "tunic" or blazer, I told them, fine, they could buy me new clothes if they didn't like my wardrobe.

They said, well, er, that wouldn't be necessary. And soon, I noticed other teachers sporting daring slacks outfits.

Somewhere along the line, I found myself arguing with my husband about the Vietnam war, signing checks "Deanie Mills" instead of "Mrs. Wesley K. Mills," and studying things like holistic healing. When I started writing crime novels, I soon grew accustomed to resistance from the male-dominated field, which changed, eventually, to a grudging respect.

Last winter I bought myself a fringed leather jacket.

Am I attempting to relive my youth? Lord, no. I'd have never worn a fringed leather jacket in my youth.

Part of it is that apparently I absorbed a great deal of the sixties through osmosis. Once in a while I even had a taste of them — such as when our journalism class was forced to sit through a Nixon rally and I was the only one in the coliseum who attempted to walk out. (I was stopped by the Secret Service. Still, I refused to return to my seat. It was scary; it was great.)

Part of it is my schizophrenic upbringing. My mother is a gypsy, who's worn a masquerade of middle-class civility all her life, but who would chuck it all for a motorcycle and a cross-country map any day, if she could. My natural father is an ex-Marine who, to this day, goes white water rafting for fun. My daddy—the man who raised me—was a rugged individualist and buckler of the system, but I never realized it, same as I never realized my mother was a free spirit until it was too late. All I ever saw was a man who came home at 5:15 every night of my life, watched TV, and went to bed by 10. But in his youth, they called him "Wild Bill." Free spirits, all, forced into molds by their generation.

The last thing Keifer Sutherland says to Dennis Hopper in "Flashback" is, "Don't grow up." And Hopper replies, "I'll never grow up, man—I'm too old." I think one of the legacies that the sixties gave us is the lesson that it's okay to stay young at heart; it's okay to be true to yourself; it's okay to let your kids see you pelt each other in a snowball fight or dance in the rain.

So many of our parents had to give up their dreams because they didn't think they had any choice. The sixties taught us that we DO have choices, thank God. Some of those choices involve sacrifice, to be sure, but it's well worth the freedom of knowing that, whatever the outcome, at least you had the guts to go for it.

Twenty years ago, I watched Dennis Hopper in the film classic, "Easy Rider." Thank goodness he's still around to remind us of these things. And I'm sorry it took me twenty years to buy a fringed leather jacket, but I've never forgotten the best lesson the sixties taught us: It's NEVER too late.

Peace.

The voting process

Editor's Note: The following is the third of a three-part series on voting.

Once you've registered to vote, some questions may remain about the process of actually casting a ballot. The following may clear up any confusion new voters may have.

Methods of Voting:
In addition to the traditional paper ballot, there are three types of voting systems currently used to conduct elections in Texas. These are (1) punch card, (2) optional scan, and (3) mechanical voting machines.

The majority of the counties in the state — including Scurry — conduct their elections using paper ballots. With a punch card voting system, you insert a computer card into a device provided in the voting booth and use a "punch" (stylus) to poke out a hole next to the candidates and propositions you support. You then remove the card and place your voted ballot in the ballot box.

If you have questions about how to cast your ballot, any election official can explain the procedure and demonstrate for you.

When and Where:

You must be registered at least 30 days before an election in order to vote.

Polls are open from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m.

Polling locations are available by contacting the county clerk's office. They are also published in The Snyder Daily News prior to the election.

Absentee Voting:

Any qualified voter is eligible to vote absentee by personal appearance without having to give a reason for doing so. The period for absentee voting by personal appearance for the Nov. 6 general election is from Oct. 17 to Nov. 2.

A qualified voter may vote absentee by mail, but must give a reason to do so. Those reasons are absence from county of residence on election day and during the absentee voting by personal appearance period, a disability, 65 years of age or older, religious beliefs, or confinement in jail. For further information, call the election hotline at 1-800-252-VOTE.

An application for an absentee ballot by mail must be submitted to the absentee voting clerk (county clerk's office) prior to receiving an absentee ballot. The application must include your name, signature, permanent address, the address where you want the absentee ballot sent, and your reason for voting absentee. An official application form is not required, but will probably help make a more complete application. Forms are available at the county clerk's office.

Chemotherapy hair loss may be prevented

WASHINGTON (AP) — First a patient hears the cancer diagnosis and then learns that the needed chemotherapy may cause temporary baldness. For many, the loss of hair is a huge cosmetic burden piled on the already terrible physical trauma of disease.

But help may be on the way, according to a study published today in the journal Science.

Dr. A.A. Yunis, of the University of Miami Jackson Memorial Hospital Medical Center, reports that he and his colleagues have discovered "by chance" that an experimental cancer drug blocks hair loss in laboratory rats injected with some chemotherapy agents.

If the finding can be translated into drugs to treat humans, an expert said, "it would be of tremendous benefit" to cancer patients who now must endure the characteristic mark of chemotherapy baldness.

Yunis said his team made the discovery while testing cancer-fighting drugs on lab rats that had been injected with leukemia cells.

Half of the rats were treated with a drug called cytosine arabinoside, or ARA-C. The rest were treated with a combination of ARA-C and an experimental drug called ImuVert.

"We found, lo and behold, that the rats with ARA-C only became nude. They lost all their hair," said Yunis. "The ones with both ARA-C and ImuVert, however, did not lose hair at all."

Yunis said his group then tested ImuVert with another common cancer drug, doxorubicin, or DX. He said they found that rats with the DX-ImuVert combination also experienced no hair loss, while rats receiving only the DX lost hair on their heads and shoulders.

ImuVert combined with a third cancer drug, cyclophosphamide, however, did not prevent hair loss in the rats, said Yunis.

Dr. Ed Gelmann, chief of the department of medical oncology at Georgetown University in Washington, said that if a way can be found to prevent hair loss "patients will feel much better about chemotherapy."

Chemotherapy baldness is nearly always temporary. The hair usually grows back after the treatment cycle.

Nonetheless, said Gelmann: "A lot of patients focus on hair loss because it is so apparent. It can be quite a stigma. It would be a tremendous benefit to eliminate hair loss as long as it did not change the efficacy of the cancer chemotherapy."

Yunis said that ImuVert appears to help combat leukemia while it is preventing chemotherapy baldness. He said the drug teamed with ARA-C halted the progression of leukemia in all but 20 percent of the laboratory rats tested. This result was better than among rats treated with ARA-C alone, he said.

Dr. Gregory Curt, director of the clinical oncology department at the National Cancer Institute, said controlling hair loss during chemotherapy "is a very serious thing for patients."

"The two things that concern patients the most about chemotherapy are nausea and that some people can get bald," he said. There are drugs to control the nausea, but there is no pill to block the hair loss.

"For both men and women, it is one of the side effects that concerns people the most because it changes one's body image," said Curt.

Circuit court judge gives away city hall

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. (AP) — Walter DeBow and his family fought City Hall, and now they own it.

DeBow, 55, suffered permanent brain damage after being beaten into a coma by a fellow prisoner at the city jail more than six years ago. He and his family were awarded $3.4 million in a 1985 court settlement with the city.

With interest, that amount has grown to $4 million, and the debt-ridden city has not paid at least $1 million of it, said the DeBows' attorney, Clyde Kuehn.

So on Thursday, Judge Roger Scrivner of St. Clair County Circuit Court awarded the East St. Louis Municipal Building and 220 acres of city-owned property to the DeBows.

Kuehn said the DeBows planned to sell the property. "Definitely my clients want what they were awarded, and I think this is necessary to accomplish that," he said.

City officials estimated the municipal building alone cost $10 million to build. City Attorney Eric Vickers said the value of the properties far exceeds anything owed the DeBows.

"I think this decision is just a major miscarriage of justice and demonstrates bias against the city of East St. Louis," Vickers said. "The city has not defaulted on its payments. It's ludicrous."

Another lawyer for East St. Louis, Irvin Williamson, said the city would ask a court to stay the judgment pending appeal.

"If the court allows the judgment to stand against the city, what's next? The police cars? The fire trucks?" Williamson said.

East St. Louis is plagued by debt estimated at $47 million.

Gov. James R. Thompson signed a $34 million bailout bill Aug. 30. The money will come from state bond issues.

The population of the city, which has one of the highest murder rates in the country, fell from 55,000 in 1980 to 40,000 this year, the Census Bureau estimates.

Mayor Carl E. Officer declined to comment on the judge's order. Aldermen were flabbergasted.

"It's amazing," said Alderman Percy McKinney. "I guess we pay rent from now on."

Your Birthday

Oct. 1, 1990

Your material luck may come to you in a somewhat circuitous route in the year ahead. You will first be fortunate with people rather than with things.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Beginning today there could be an abrupt change in your luck. What transpires will be favorable. You can help matters along by elevating your hopes and expectations. Major changes are ahead for Libra in the coming year.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Two secret ambitions have excellent chances of being fulfilled in this time frame. However, it's best not to talk about your intentions to others, even close friends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Do not take yourself or your involvements too seriously today, because you'll function better if you are philosophical and open-minded. If you lighten up, you'll brighten up your world.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If your objectives are clearly defined today it is very likely you'll achieve your goals. Concise vision enhances your chances for success.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Generally speaking, you should be rather lucky today, but your best breaks are likely to come from your partnership arrangements. Operate in your area of greatest strength.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your possibilities for generating money from other than your usual sources look very encouraging at this time. In fact, something might even open for you today.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It is time to take appropriate action on a matter to which you have given serious consideration. Have faith in your judgment and adhere to the game plan upon which you've decided.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Lady Luck is likely to lend her assistance today to help you reap rewards from an ambitious interest on which you've been working. Each day could bring you nearer to harvest time.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You could be endowed with an abundance of energy today that will enable you to accomplish all of your serious assignments and still have enough zest left over for socializing with pals.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your optimism is contagious today. It's likely you'll establish procedures for making the most of your involvements and also show associates how to bring their matters to constructive conclusions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you draw upon your past experiences to guide your actions today you'll not only avoid repeating past mistakes, but you should also be able to do things that will generate praise from others.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're presently in a cycle where you should be able to improve upon things that are already going rather well. Don't settle for the status quo if you feel there's a chance to do better.

Your Birthday

Sept. 30, 1990

A busier than usual social life could be in the offering for you in the year ahead. What makes this unique is that fact you may get heavily involved with two unrelated groups.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be extremely careful in money matters today, both your own and those you may be called upon to handle for someone else. Trying to turn a profit could be an exercise in futility. Libra, treat yourself to a birthday gift.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You might have to adjust your plans today in order to accommodate the demands of others. Their impositions will be annoying, but you mustn't let them spoil your day. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you fail to be an attentive listener today, it could work to your detriment, especially if someone give you complex instructions regarding a matter which you hope to take care of later.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't yield to peer pressure today and do things which do not serve your best interests emotionally, materially, financially or morally. If there are any consequences attached, they won't be shared by them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your behavior may be closely scrutinized by others today. They won't be focusing on what you'll do right, they'll be looking for what you'll do wrong. Don't give them food for thought.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Anxieties and apprehensions should not be interpreted as intuitive perceptions today. They are instead self-induced negative imaginings.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It might be advisable today to avoid a friend who always has problems which are usually self-made. If you get involved, your pal might drum some up for you as well.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) In order for a joint effort to be effective today responsibilities and duties for each party must be clearly defined. A lack of organization could lead to failure.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Attitude is extremely important today both at work and play. If yours is negative, don't expect favorable results in either area. If you think of yourself as a loser, you'll be one.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You could be rather vulnerable today where financial or material losses are concerned. Be protective of your prized possessions and don't waste your money on pie-in-the-sky ventures.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Before any type of action is taken today, it's imperative that you and your mate are in accord as to how an important issues should be handled. Do nothing without the other's consent.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You are endowed with very sharp, critical faculties and when used constructively this gift is an asset. However, today you might not use it to anyone's advantage.

Lawmaker anticipates many lost House seats

AUSTIN (AP) — The chairman of the House Redistricting Committee said Friday parts of West, South and East Texas are likely to lose Texas House seats when district lines are redrawn to reflect population changes.

But Rep. Tom Uher, D-Bay City, and his Senate counterpart, Bob Glasgow, said they may ask the Justice Department to allow districts spread over large geographic areas to have slightly smaller populations.

If granted, that change could cushion the blow in sparsely populated areas like West Texas and parts of South Texas, Uher said.

But he acknowledged that metropolitan areas like Houston that have gained population are likely to fight a move that would deny them extra seats.

Uher and Sen. Glasgow, D-Stephenville, said districts spread over hundreds of miles defeat the purpose requiring districts to have roughly the same population.

"One man, one vote probably works real well in Massachusetts and Connecticut and Maine and Rhode Island," Glasgow said. "One man, one vote doesn't work as well in Texas because of the distances that we have."

He said smaller population numbers are reflected in preliminary numbers from the 1990 census for the region west of the Interstate 35 corridor; south of a line from Del Rio to Bay City; the Beaumont-Port Arthur area of East Texas; and pockets of Northeast Texas.

Gains are shown in Dallas, Tarrant, Harris and Bexar counties.

Bank customers may have to pay higher fees

NEW YORK (AP) — Customers may wind up paying the cost of higher deposit insurance premiums as banks, already struggling to hold on to profits, pass along the added costs, industry analysts said.

The board of directors of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. voted Thursday to boost the premium banks pay by more than 60 percent starting next year to shore up the deposit insurance system.

The FDIC took the action after learning that the government fund protecting bank accounts dropped from $13.2 billion at the end of last year to $11.4 billion at the end of June, a 14 percent decline.

FDIC Chairman L. William Seidman said in Washington that he now expects by the end of the year the fund will have lost "closer to $3 billion" rather than the $2 billion he earlier predicted.

Under the premium increase, banks will pay the FDIC 19.5 cents in insurance for each $100 in deposits. Currently, they pay 12 cents per $100 in deposits.

The insurance increase could reduce profits in an already-troubled industry, analysts said Thursday. But they added that the higher premiums were necessary to ensure the health of the banking system.

"The FDIC needs the money," said Christopher Mahoney, an analyst at Moody's Investors Service. "The soundness of the FDIC is important."

Analysts believe many banks will try to pass on to customers some of the premium increase in the form of higher fees for checking accounts, bounced checks and other services. Banks also may try to lower the interest they pay on savings accounts, certificates of deposit and other investments.

If banks were to pass on to sav- ings account customers the full 7.5 cent increase, a customer with $10,000 in his account would lose $7.50 in interest over a year, before compounding.

But such moves could be met with resistance and loss of customers, analysts said.

"It's pretty hard to gouge the customer when the customer has other alternatives," said Eric Hemel of the investment firm First Boston Corp. He said savers could put their money in mutual funds or other investments, or switch banks.

That means banks may be forced to absorb some or all of the insurance increase, which could affect their earnings and be especially troubling to weaker institutions.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1990 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: We often read about animals and children suffocating in cars and in discarded refrigerators, so it's time to tell my story:

When my youngest son was 3, I was a single mom with a nanny/housekeeper. The nanny knew that we would be grocery shopping on Saturday, so on Friday, she defrosted the refrigerator and removed all the shelves.

Saturday morning, we were chatting about the week's events and making plans for the day while the children were watching a movie. The 3-year-old got up to get a toy, and after five minutes or so, I asked, "Where's Jesse?" I went upstairs: no Jesse. I called out to him while Nanny searched downstairs. We heard Jesse crying in a faraway voice that was hard to locate.

"Where are you, Jesse?" "I fell in." We heard his faraway voice, but we couldn't locate the origin of it! Five more minutes elapsed. I called 911.

The firemen and police arrived, searched the fireplace, heater vents, attic and everywhere a toddler might climb or fall. Finally, as I stood exasperated in the kitchen, a fireman opened the refrigerator, and out fell Jesse, face red from lack of oxygen, cold, and blinded by the sudden light! We had not even heard him come downstairs or open the refrigerator!

Abby, please ask parents to get safety locks for their refrigerators, and to never remove shelves to clean them without replacing them immediately.

CLOSE CALL IN DENVER

DEAR CLOSE CALL: Over the years, I have had many letters in my column warning adults about the dangers of refrigerators — particularly those that are stored in garages and basements. (They are literally death traps for children who play hide-and-seek.) I advise removing the doors of ice chests, refrigerators or cabinets into which children can crawl. Yet, every year I see a small news item in the newspaper reporting that some child has suffocated in an abandoned refrigerator.

DEAR ABBY: Another letter to pet owners: Vets, dog breeders and many other experts have said this for years, and since owners pay little heed to them, perhaps this will be more convincing coming from man's best friend.

I am a family dog — a pet who lives in a yard bordered by a link fence. I had a companion, a beautiful female Doberman who lived in the yard next to mine. Her owner often said she was hard to train, so she wore a choke chain day and night. My owner, who has owned several dogs, warned her owner that it was hazardous to keep the chain on her when she was off the lead, particularly since she had a penchant for jumping the fence.

Naturally the Doberman's owner thought he knew everything and declined to remove the chain. One day when both humans were at work, the Doberman tried to jump the fence and the chain got snagged. My owner was the first one to find the body hanging on my side of the fence. (The Doberman was only a year old!)

Abby, please print this letter, as it will reach millions of dog owners and could save the lives of many pets. Always remove the choke chain when your dog is off the lead! It takes only a minute to replace it with a normal collar. Certainly your dog's life is worth that effort.

THE WONDERDOG
NEXT DOOR

DEAR WONDERDOG: You deserve a loving pat on the head for speaking out.

"How to Write Letters for All Occasions" provides sample letters of congratulations, thank-yous, condolences, resumes and business letters — even how to write a love letter. It also includes how to properly address the clergy, government officials, dignitaries, widows and others. (Postage is included.)

DEAR ABBY: A 25-year-old woman wrote to say that she and her live-in boyfriend were expecting a baby soon, and although it wasn't planned, they were happy about it. Her problem: Her parents were pressuring her to get married before the baby arrives. She said she and her boyfriend both had failed marriages and didn't want to rush into marriage again although they were sure of their love — and she didn't think a baby on the way was a good enough reason to get married.

You said it was. Some readers wrote in to say, "You're old-fashioned, Abby. Get real — this is the 90s; it's no disgrace to be a single parent!"

You stuck to your guns, saying, "If they're going to try to make their marriage work, they'll probably try harder if they have a legal as well as a moral commitment," and asked, "Isn't anybody on my side?"

Well, Abby, I took a survey at work; we have 29 people working in this office — 17 women and 12 men — and every one of them was on your side!

ON YOUR SIDE IN ROCHESTER, N.Y.

DEAR ON: Since that letter ran, I have been inundated with letters from people wanting me to know that they, too, are on my side. I've heard from every state in the union, all the provinces of Canada, plus Guam and the Philippines.

How reassuring to know that countless thousands of people spent the time (and postage) to let me know that the holy sacrament of marriage is still respected, and that while having a child out of wedlock is not the end of the world, neither is it the most desirable of circumstances.

So, it's not true that our morals have gone to the dogs. I'm now up to my neck in letters from readers of all ages — the youngest a 9-year-old girl from Greenville, N.C., and the oldest a 98-year-old man from Windsor, Vt. — all saying, "Don't back down, Abby — we're on your side!"

Hallelujah and praise the Lord!

DEAR ABBY: I went for a job interview the other day. I didn't wear jeans; I was nicely dressed — nothing flashy. I was well-groomed and wore very little makeup.

I answered all the questions directly and with confidence. I wasn't nervous at all and had excellent references. When the interview was over, I was sure I would get the job. Well, four days later, I was notified that another applicant had been hired.

Abby, I would like to go back to the man who interviewed me and ask him why I didn't get the job. Was someone else more qualified, or what? Was there something negative or obnoxious about me? What could I have done differently — or better? I still can't believe I didn't qualify. What should I do?

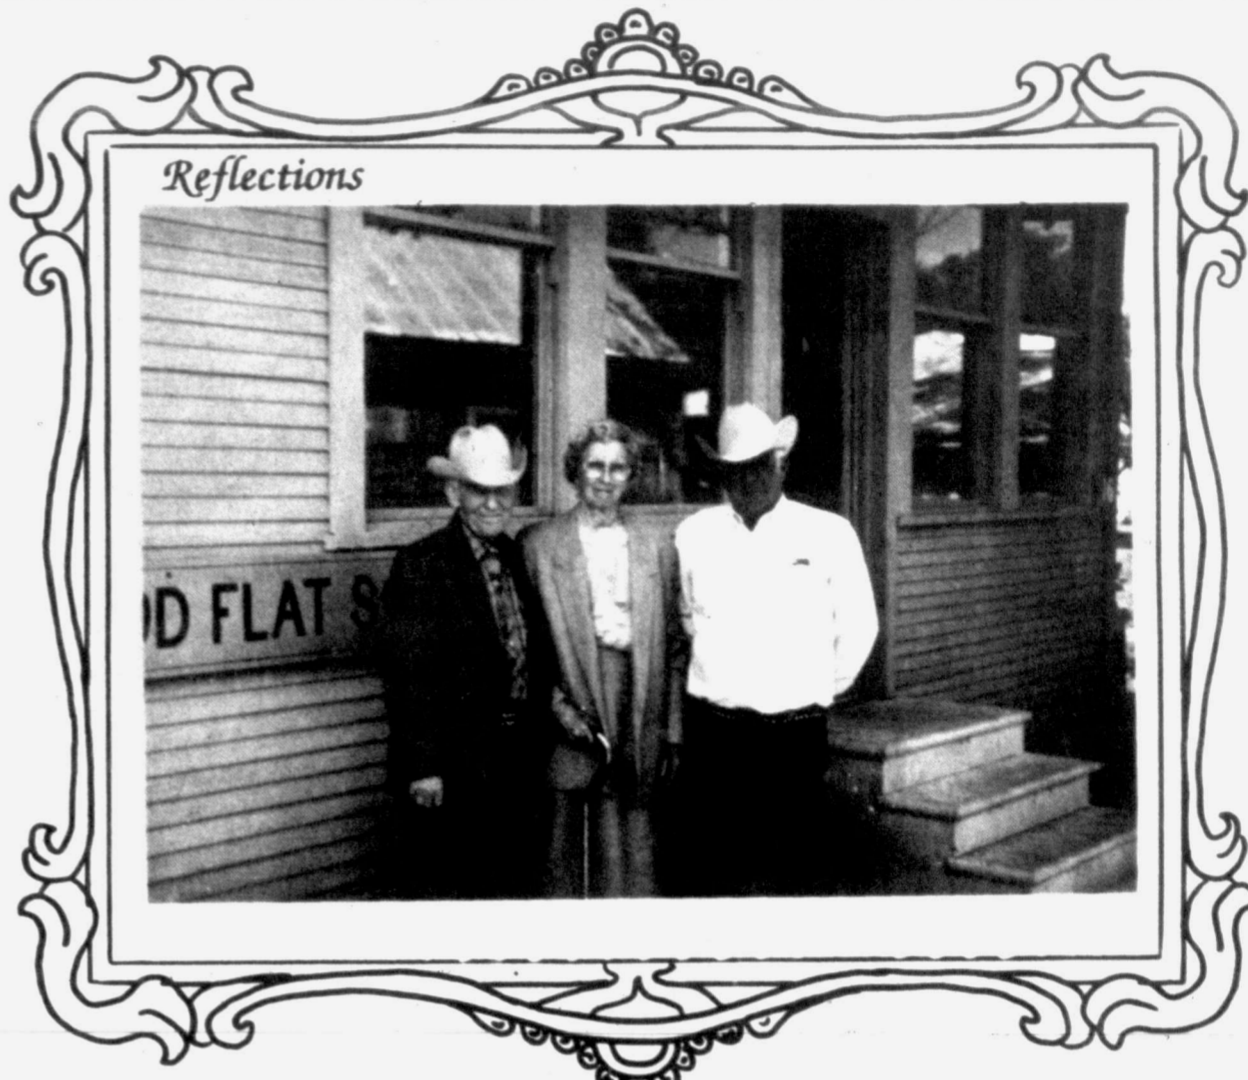

LOST OUT IN KANSAS

DEAR LOST OUT: First, consider yourself fortunate to have been notified that you didn't get the job. Many people are interviewed for jobs and unless they get the job, they're left wondering.

It's commendable that you want to learn from your mistakes — if you made any during the interview. But do not return to question the person who interviewed you unless you arrange for an appointment first.

Write a brief, courteous note, thanking him for the interview, then ask if he would kindly see you again or write a note suggesting how you can improve your chances. And it might not be a bad idea to enclose a small picture of yourself and a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.
