more flowers that bring pleasure to the Barnetts.
 Native mesquite make a shady retreat of the yard. Mrs. Barnett said she got an awful scare from canker worms stripping mesquite at the barn. They finally eradicated the pests by putting boards on the ground at night. The worms come out of the trees and hide under boards or anything handy. By going early every morning, they (the Barnetts) squashed the worms before they left their board bed to eat on the trees.

My daughter, Yvonne Gaskins, says that large forests in West Virginia are banded with aluminum foil to keep canker worms out of the trees. She says a canker worm will not cross aluminum. If you are bothered by these pests, it wouldn't hurt to give foil a try.

Mrs. J. M. Glass had a sans-averia bloom last week. I'm frank to admit, I had never even thought of one having blossoms.

The flowers are lime green tassels on long stems that come from the plant's base. Their fragrance perfumes the whole room.

Mrs. R. C. Couch Sr., is concentrating on dahlias this year. She planted some 25 tubers. Every one produced a healthy plant. They are just starting to bloom.

Blue Salvia, lining the long entrance walk, makes a very pretty picture. Large white urns of red geraniums grace each side of the stairs leading to the porch. These lovely geraniums seem to say welcome to all visitors.

Mrs. Truett Cobb is making sachets from rose petals this year. Dried leaves are placed in net that is tied with ribbon. Mrs. Cobb (Myrtle) places her sachets in dresser drawers among the linens. They leave a faint aroma of roses on sheets and pillow cases.

I've seen tomatoes in clusters, but never before have I seen such a bunch as Mrs. Cobb is growing at her back door. I counted 14 large tomatoes grouped around the stem at the plant's base.

Our peach trees are very slowly turning green once more. The pecan and apricot that was yellow are still dark green after using soil acidifier.

"Break-Away Signs" Are Being Installed On Some Texas Highways

Highway signs that yield under impact are being installed on some Texas highways as a part of the Texas Highway Department's continuing effort to make motoring safer.

The signs and their supports are designed to crack in the middle and are away harmlessly when struck by a moving vehicle.

Dubbed "break-away signs," they were developed in a joint research effort of the Texas Highway Department and its research arm, the Texas Transportation Institute of Texas A&M University, in cooperation with the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads.

Although research is continuing to perfect a better sign structure for Texas highways, the transitional break-away sign already is being installed on highways over the state as a field test of the basic design. The sign was tested exhaustively last year at Bryan in crashes involving driverless autos.

Some of the revolutionary signs have been erected at strategic locations on Texas Interstate highways for further study under field conditions. Many more will be installed in the future under new signing contracts, and as replacements for older signs. Of those installed to now, none has been struck by an auto.

Development of the new sign structure followed a number of car-and-sign collisions, some fatal, on expressway facilities in recent years. The number is not alarming in comparison with other types of accidents. In fact, fixed-object collisions declined 14 per cent last year, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Nevertheless, 6,183 accidents involving vehicles in collision with fixed objects did occur on Texas highways last year. As one of the most numerous of fixed objects along highways, signs represent a major potential factor in such collisions.

Moreover, signs designed for legibility in high-speed expressway traffic are exceedingly large. Some expressway sign faces are bigger than the side of a house, with lettering 16 inches high.

With the nation's largest quota of new expressways built and to be built, Texas Highway Department officials decided to undertake a program of "preventive safety" to develop a safer sign design for the burgeoning expressway grid.

Development of the sign that yields is a dramatic illustration of how Texas is achieving better, safer highways through research. It is also a graphic expression of a Highway Department philosophy captured recently by State Highway Engineer D. C. Greer.

"We can't prevent all accidents," he said, "but we can do our best to design for 'softer' accidents when they do occur."

Basic features of the break-away sign support are a "slip joint" at its base and a "break joint" at the bottom of the sign face. The slip joint allows the sign post to slip free when sharply struck. The break joint, a cast-iron plate, cracks the post on impact, creating a "hinge" effect on the post.

The hinge effect permits an auto at high speed to pass under the structure safely and brake to a stop beyond the sign.

Before releasing specifications to the 25 district offices of the Highway Department, design and research engineers conducted collision tests for nearly two years.

Surplus cars, reverse-towed by another vehicle through a pulley mechanism, crashed repeatedly into experimental sign structures at the Institute's test facility. The breakaway signs were found to be effective at speeds ranging up to 60 miles per hour, maximum speed of the tow device.

Each crash was covered by high speed cameras. After every test, research teams pored over films to assess dynamics of various sign structures during collision. They finally arrived at the basic design for large structures now being installed at strategic spots along Texas highways.

The new sign represents a "first" for Texas. Before research began, the other 49 states were surveyed on whether work had been done or was underway of a "softer" sign. All replies were negative, and many expressed hope that Texas would come up with a practical solution to a nationwide problem.

State Highway Engineer Greer emphasizes that the research project is not yet over. "We think we've arrived at a workable sign, one that will help save lives," he says. "But we don't consider this model the 'ultimate' sign. Our research will continue at Texas Transportation Institute to improve on the present design, and to explore other possibilities."

Officials point out that research aimed at improving highway signs involves many complications. Signs must be constructed to withstand wind velocities of up to 100 mph in some Texas areas, for instance. Also, they must be installed near the roadway for driver visibility, particularly at night.

A "safe sign," engineers say, must not stop a vehicle but must yield at impact. It must move aside and allow the vehicle to continue on its path so it may be braked to a gradual stop.

And in moving out of the way, the sign must follow a definite pre-planned behavior pattern that keeps it clear of the windshield area. The model now being installed possesses these characteristics, researchers believe.

Nevertheless, testing continues near Bryan to determine whether the desirable qualities hold true in all instances—including impact by a foreign compact car, or a trailer truck. "We're proud of our progress so far," Greer says, "but there's still work to be done."

Meantime, he points out a traditional sign structure that should save lives has been achieved and already is operational.

"Last year, 222 Texans lost their lives in collisions with fixed objects," Greer says. "Some of these fixed objects were signs which, ironically, are conceived and designed to enhance motoring safety. If this new design, and those that follow, can spare just one life, all our research will have been worthwhile."

OUTDOORS IN TEXAS

BY VERN SANFORD

Every year Texas news-people publish articles on water fishing. Yet every year people are killed while boating, swimming, wading, skating, or just plain falling into the water.

There are all kinds of accidents, minor, painful, fatal. Most of them are caused by carelessness.

Let's suppose that you are out on the river or lake fishing and a hook gets imbedded in you. Do you know how to remove it? This is something every angler should know. No matter how careful you may be, you are going to get hooked sometime—either by your buddy or by your own carelessness.

If the point has penetrated deep into the flesh, it is next to impossible—and very painful—to extract a hook by trying to take it out the way it went in. After all barbs are there to hold the hook securely in place. And they do a good job of it.

Problem then is to remove the barb.

So take your pliers (don't ever go fishing without wire cutting pliers) and cut the shank of the hook. This is done to remove the eye.

Next push the hook so that its point will move forward. That is, so that its movement will not be impeded by the barb. With a little pressure the point will move through the flesh, puncture an exit in the skin and emerge there.

Let the wound bleed a little. Blood washes out the wound and removes whatever impurities there may be on the hook. Now take your safety kit (you do carry a safety kit, don't you?) and apply iodine, mercurochrome, or whatever disinfectant is available.

After the disinfectant, apply a Band-Aid and you're as good as new.

As far hook accidents—the best idea, of course, is for them not to happen. A few simple precautions will prevent them.

If two men are in a boat, both should cast from the same side and in the same general direction. Never cast in opposite directions or toward the bow or stern.

If you ease longways of the boat, your backswing will put your lure right in your partner's face. If it doesn't hook him, it will scare him to death, or nearly so, and even if he survives, you will have lost a fishing buddy.

You're going to get lures hung in bushes, trees and weeds near the shore. When you do, avoid trying to free them with a hard, steady pull. Use a series of short, sharp yanks on the line, and even then look out! Even the latter method sometimes will free a lure so that it will come flying right back at you. Be ready to duck anytime either you or your buddy are trying to free a hook that is snagged.

If you hold your rod out to one side, in trying to free a snagged hook, the lure, suddenly loosened, is more likely to miss you in its return flight. If you want to play it safe, simply move the boat to the lure and free it by hand.

There's a good rule about safety in small fishing boats. Watch your partner, and when he moves to one side, you move to the other.

If he leans over the side to pull up a heavy anchor and you lean over the same side at the same time, to reach for the floating minnow bucket—don't be surprised if you both get a bath, even if it isn't Saturday.

Keep the boat in balance at all times! And don't stand up in a small boat unless you absolutely have to.

Don't fool around in swift, rocky waters in your fishing boat. If you're going upstream and hit a rock with your propeller shaft, your motor will tilt and the boat will go out of control and possibly overturn. If you're going downstream, put your motor in reverse to reduce speed and try your best to avoid the rocks.

Best of all though, avoid that kind of water whenever possible. If you must get into it, or through it, to catch fish, get out and tow the boat through the shallow, dangerous places. Or go to the bank and pull the boat along until you reach deeper, quieter water. You'll have to be guided by the situation, but in case of doubt, don't take chances. It's not worth it!

Another thing—don't fool around with storms. Head for home as fast as possible!

You don't have to be in a boat to get into trouble while fishing.

I'm thinking of some places, below river dams, where the white bass bite rabulously. Here the banks are usually rocky and steep. When power is being generated, the water comes out of the tail race in a great rush.

There is a giant sort of whirlpool effect: the currents smash against each other and against the boulders as the water fights for a route downstream.

Little springs ooze out of the cliffsides, and the rocks along the precipitous banks are slippery. One false step and you're in that terrifying current. I wouldn't give a dime for your chances.

These are just a few of the hazards of fishing, and a few precautions. Anytime you're fishing you're in danger of drowning—so if you value your life—wear a life-saving jacket. You'll never know in advance when you need it.

None of these accidents or incidents are very likely to happen to you, if you think before you act and use ordinary precautions.

So good luck, enjoy some fishing, and keep your head. Literally, that is.

TALK IS NOT CHEAP IN 4-H... IT COSTS TIME AND MONEY

Scores of 4-H Club boys and girls are helped everyday to overcome shyness, stagefright, inability to talk before groups and lack of self-confidence. The help comes from diligent effort applied in the 4-H Public Speaking program conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service.

Adults skilled in the art of public speaking, often serve as project leaders, and other resource people in the community volunteer to work with the budding orators. Not only are they taught basic steps in researching, writing and delivering a speech, but they also are coached in the use of communication tools such as tape recorders, microphones, television, radio and print media.

One of the top two 4-H speakers in the nation last year, is continuing his public speaking education in college. He said that his 4-H training helped him to decide on a career in the legal profession.

Many teen-agers find that public speaking experience aids them in recreational activities both in and out of 4-H. Even holding an office or presiding at a meeting is a little less formidable, they say, after participating in a public speaking project or activity.

There are three main categories of competition in this program: county, state and national. Awards are provided for the 15th straight year, by the Pure Oil Company. They consist of attractive medals, an engraved wristwatch for the top boy state champion, and a beautiful chest of table silver for the top girl.

The state winners can try for which fell in the night, fell fast
