Wall, fears tumbling in Germany

BERLIN (AP) — Workers punched through the Berlin Wall Saturday and border guards from two nations reached through a gaping hole and shook hands in a spine-tingling ceremony marking the opening of the border between East and West Germany.

Thousands of exultant East Germans poured across the border for a second day to revel in their new freedom to travel after three decades of confinement in their once strictly controlled country.

East Germany's ADN news agency said West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and Communist Party chief Egon Krenz spoke by telephone Saturday about economic relations between the nations and other matters related to the historic reforms taking place in Communist East Germany.

Krenz's daring gambit — that by giving his people the freedom to travel he will stop an unprecedented exodus of his most talented young citizens — appeared to be working.

Austrian border officials said the steady flow of East German refugees heading to West Germany through Austria had slowed to a trickle. Only 150 East German asylum seekers crossed the border during a 24-hour period ending Saturday morning, a sharp drop from the 1,000-a-day average of recent weeks.

In Bonn, the Interior Ministry said Saturday morning that 140,000 East Germans had arrived overnight in all of West Germany through the newly opened borders, but most appeared to be using their remarkable new travel privileges to visit rather than seek asylum.

"I've never been in West Berlin before," said a beaming Sabine Gohlke, 23, who came from East Berlin with her husband and two toddlers. "I couldn't come before, they wouldn't let me."

In West Berlin, many danced, sang and smashed bottles from atop the wall in a second night of (see WALL, page 4A)

ER coverage plan on hold

Getting an Abilene physicians' group to cover Cogdell Memorial Hospital's emergency room six days a week will cost more than was originally quoted verbally by the group to the hospital, Cogdell administrator Thomas Hochwalt said Friday.

Hochwalt said an Emergicare executive told him last week that rather than $37.75 per hour for 24-hour-a-day coverage, six days a week, the group will need $51.25 hourly to ensure a sufficient number of physicians for the service.

The reason for the increase is that Emergicare President Keith Williams, M.D., had underestimated the cost of providing the service when the verbal agreement was reached, Hochwalt explained to the board.

Hochwalt said the high volume of patients in Cogdell's emergency room, with a record of 600 patients seen in October, is the primary factor in the higher rate Emergicare is requesting. He said he will continue to research the situation and will report back to the board at its next meeting.

"We feel the $51.25 hourly rate is cost prohibitive and we feel there are other firms which can provide quality emergency physician coverage at a lower rate," Hochwalt said after the meeting.

His discussion of emergency room coverage came under an "informational" heading after the completion of business on the agenda, which included only the payment of the hospital's bills.

The meeting was attended by board members Dan Cotton, G.A. Parks, Brenda Hedges and Roy McQueen. Jackie Smith and Dr. Jim Palmer were absent.

Baker pleased 'ESP' performed at college

Playwright Paul Baker said Friday at Western Texas College, where his experimental drama, "Hamlet ESP," is being performed this weekend, that he was impressed with the production and pleased that the school is interested in experimental drama.

Baker attended the Thursday night dress rehearsal of the play, which opened Friday and was to continue with performances Saturday and Sunday at 8 p.m. in the WTC Fine Arts Theatre. Tickets are $5 for adults and $3 for students.

Baker, a former director of the Dallas Theater Center who offered the first production of Preston Jones' "Texas Trilogy," said he was happy with the actors' performances and with what he said is an authentic rendering of the latest version of "Hamlet ESP." The play has been produced numerous times in various forms since the first version began being performed in the early 1970s, he noted.

Although some literary critics have suggested that Shakespeare's "Hamlet" is logically incoherent, Baker said Hamlet's behavior is puzzling "because he is a genius" for whom the murder of his father makes life hopelessly complex.

Baker said Hamlet's indecision throughout the play, when he might have seized control of the kingdom, "is a tragedy of indecision" and that "an awful lot of young people have that tragedy." Baker, who lives on a ranch at Waelder, between San Antonio and Houston, said he first had three actors portraying the dif-

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Junkets are necessary. With a track record like Congress, you'd need to get out of the country too."

Most proofreaders will tell you the most difficult error to catch is the headline. One of Murphy's laws must say that the larger the print, the more likely you are to overlook the miscue.

But not all errors are limited to headline writers and typesetters. Folks in Pasadena, Calif., have been mystified in recent years by an inscription neatly painted in letters almost three feet high across the upper wall of a red brick building. The words are easily visible to motorists traveling the busy street.

A local newspaper looked into the situation and found that the second floor of the building had been occupied by artists who had been displaced by a redevelopment project. The inscription, painted by the artists, read: "My people are the people of the desert," said T.E. Lawrence, picking up his fork.

But in quoting, the newspaper skimmed the cream from the jest by a common confusion. The sign actually read "dessert," not "desert."

Speaking of boners, here are some actual quotes from elementary essays on music:

- A music refrain is the part you better not try to sing.
- Music sung by two people at the same time is called a duel.
- A virtuoso is a musician who has very high morals.
- My very best-liked piece is the bronze lullaby.
- I know what a sextet is, but I'd rather not say.

Scouting for Food project set this week in Snyder

Scouting for Food, a joint project by Scurry County scouts and Snyder Jaycees, will be held next Saturday.

The food drive actually begins this weekend with the distribution of food bags inserted in this issue of the Snyder Daily News.

Scouts and Jaycees are asking residents to fill the bag with non-perishable food. The filled bags should then be left on the front porch and will be picked up by Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts between the hours of 9 and 3 p.m. next Saturday.

Bags will also be available from Everybody's Thriftway, Furr's and Lawrence IGA supermarkets. Citizens may also drop off food supplies at Gentle Dove Ministries, 1411 25th St.

This is the second year that Snyder scouts have participated in the food drive. Sponsors say all food will be used for needy persons in Scurry County.

Year-round schools suggested

AUSTIN (AP) — An expert told the State Board of Education that year-round schools could bolster lagging academic standards and hold down the costs of court-ordered funding increases.

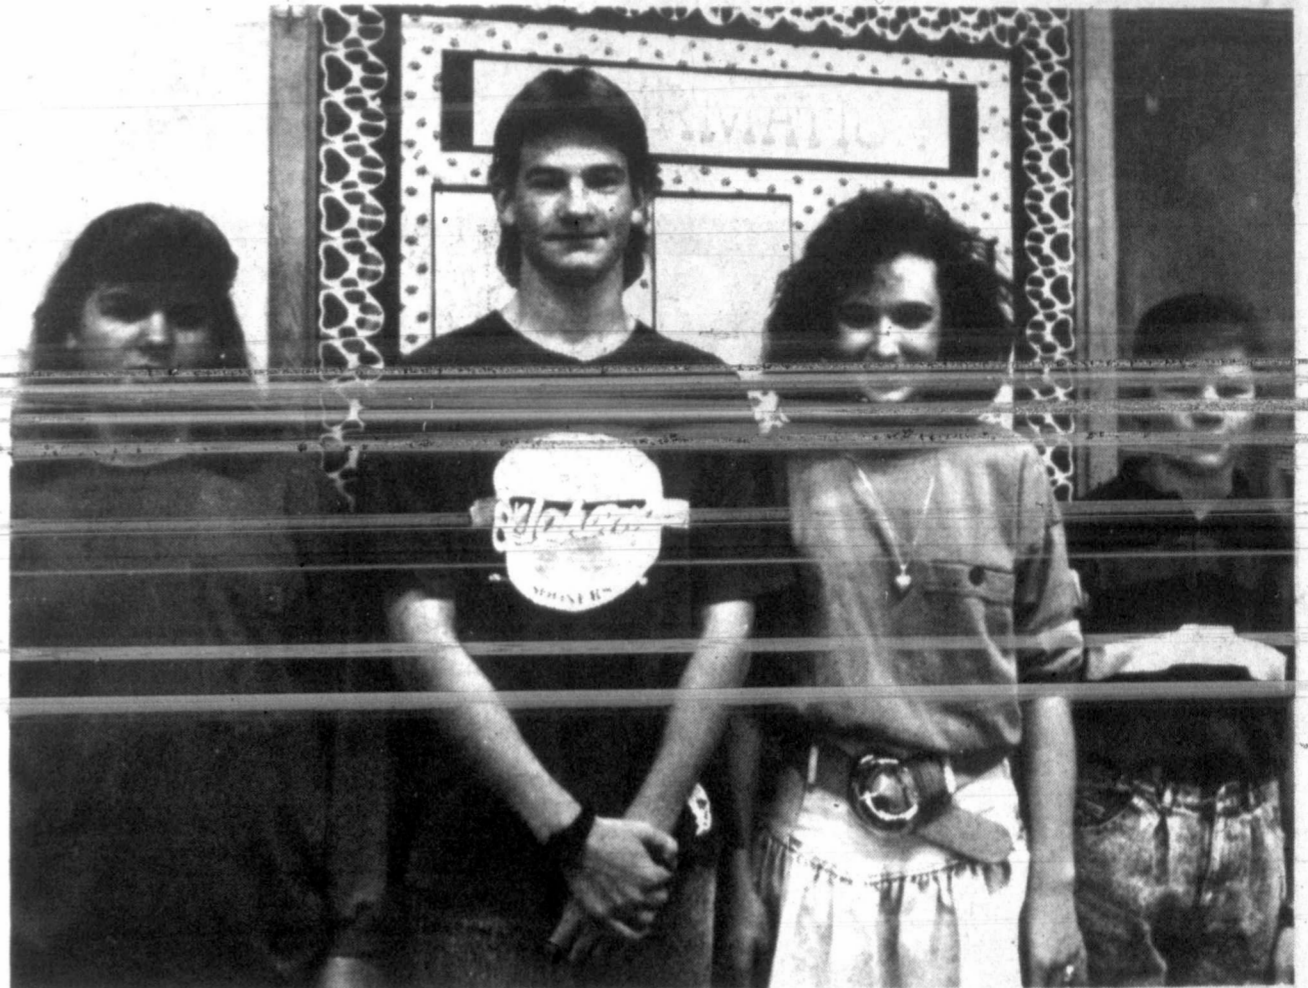

"Year-round schools make all the sense in the world," said board member Will Davis of

Austin. "We are going to pursue this idea and pursue it hard. It's a way to get a whole lot bigger buy for the money we are spending on education."

The board Friday was briefed on year-round concept in which students attend classes for a set number of days and then break for three to four weeks before returning for another session of classes.

Charles Ballinger, executive director of the National Association for Year-Round Education, told the board that year-round schooling offers great potential for Texas

Since 1905, Snyder National Bank has played a vital role in the progress of Snyder and Scurry County. But we've just begun, and the future of our area looks bright...

When something has to be accomplished in Snyder, you can always count on SNB. For more than 84 years, our people have rolled up their sleeves and gone to work. Service is what SNB is all about. We want you to be a part of the Snyder National Bank family.

Accelerated nursing program available

Licensed Vocational Nurses interested in becoming registered nurses through an accelerated associate degree in nursing program planned by Cogdell Memorial Hospital may contact Chris Bane, RN, at the hospital.

Through this program, working in agreement with Howard College in Big Spring, the LVN would take the RN coursework and obtain most of the clinical experience at Cogdell Memorial Hospital. It is anticipated that students would travel to Lubbock for pediatrics and advanced medical surgical training and go to Big Spring for psychiatric training.

The program is to begin in June, 1990, with the first class to graduate in May, 1991.

LVNs must meet certain prerequisites to enter the program. Students needing to complete requirements for microbiology, English, the second semester of anatomy, sociology, and computer science can take these in the 1990 spring semester starting Jan. 15 at Western Texas College.

Call Chris Bane, RN, at 573-6374 for more information. It is anticipated that financial assistance will be available for the ADN students through application process with the Cogdell Memorial Hospital Auxiliary.

An assassin's bullet killed her husband as he returned to Manila from exile in the United States in 1983, transforming him into a martyr for Filipinos who wanted freedom from the corrupt Marcos regime.

President Bush will consider trip to Berlin

DALLAS (AP) — President Bush says he will consider going to Berlin if the visit can contribute to peace and democracy. But he told reporters from four Texas newspapers in a private interview Friday that he has not scheduled a side trip to Berlin after his Dec. 2-3 meeting off Malta with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. He said he will only do so "if there were something that developed between now and then that would make the presence of the U.S. president catalytic for peace, for evolution of democracy." "I'd like to see it with the wall down, not just holes in it," Bush said.

celebration since the Berlin border was opened for the first time since 1961.

Two giddy, exuberant days of celebrations by Germans from both nations turned raucous at times around the wall, surrounded by a swarming mass of celebrants. There were several minor confrontations between police and demonstrators overnight and today, but the crowds were brought quickly under control.

In one incident near the wall's Brandenburg Gate, about 100 demonstrators tore several holes in the wall, one 2-feet wide, and then engaged in a shoving match with East German border guards, witnesses and radio reports said. The encounter ended quickly and there were no injuries.

Protesters also hurled bottles, litter and dirt at the East German guards, the witnesses said.

Baker commended WTC assistant professor of theater and speech Jim Rambo for his willingness to stage more difficult drama than many colleges are willing to undertake.

The production is preparatory to the college's participation in the American College Theatre Festival Thursday in Beaumont.

Baker said the charm of theater for him is in its emotional intimacy between actors and audience and in the relative privacy of it, with only those who were there during the performance ever knowing what it was like.

Clements and dedicate a Vietnam veterans memorial, he was closely watching East German events.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl phoned Bush in Dallas on Friday afternoon and discussed developments in East Germany for about 18 minutes. Bush said Kohl told him, "Without the United States, this day would not have been possible."

Bush said the change in Eastern Europe is "real" and "offers us all much hope and deserves our continued encouragement."

"I think we're seeing a disintegration of that form of totalitarianism in Eastern Europe," Bush said. "I hope it's a contagious disease and (Cuban Premier Fidel) Castro catches it and (Sandinista leader) Daniel Ortega catches it and perhaps (Panamanian Gen. Manuel) Noriega catches it."

Bush said events in Eastern Europe give his upcoming meeting with Gorbachev "even more importance."

But he added that developments in the Soviet Union itself do not warrant inviting Gorbachev to next year's economic summit. Gorbachev earlier this year asked the major economic democracies to include the Soviet Union in their deliberations.

Steers win over Tigers, 28-16...

Big Spring takes 4-4A crown

By PHIL RIDDLE
SDN Sports Editor

Snyder played District 4-4A leader Big Spring very tough for three minutes in District 4-4A football game, leading 16-14 as the fourth quarter opened.

In the end, however, the size of the Steers carried them past the Tigers, 28-16.

The win leaves Big Spring undefeated in loop competition at 6-0, and clinches the championship for the Steers.

There were some real positives achieved in the tilt for the Tigers, though.

Highly vaunted Big Spring tailback Neal Mayfield was held to just 35 yards on 17 carries by the Snyder defensive unit.

Snyder's offense gained more yardage Friday than they have in a single game all year, 311.

For the first time this season two Snyder backs rushed for over 100 yards and SHS passed for more than 100 yards in the same contest.

Dewayne Cato ripped off 102 yards on 13 carries and two touchdowns Friday against Big Spring.

Shelby Bufkin also gained 102 yards, his on 12 carries.

Quarterback Ed Rios, getting his first start of the season, passed for 130 yards on a six of 19 performance.

Defensively, Bert Merritt was everywhere. The cornerback snagged a pair of interceptions and broke up countless other pass plays, besides kicking a pair of extra points.

Most of the first period was spent with the two squads feeling for a weakness in the other.

Snyder got down to the Big Spring 18 before being stopped late in the quarter.

A 35 yard field goal attempt by Merritt was short and to the right to end the first 12 minutes in a scoreless tie.

With about a minute and a half left in the half Mayfield hauled in a Thompson pass with a beautiful over-the-shoulder catch good for 33 yards down to the SHS two yard-line.

It only took the 212-pound Maxfield one play to haul in the game-winning score.

The PAT by Jason Davis was good and the Steers had a 7-0 advantage with 1:16 left in the half.

Rios stepped in and went to work. He completed his first down pass to Randy Morris for 14 yards, followed by a gain of 18 to Carlton Sanders, who made a great catch at the sidelines.

Rios was sacked on first down at the Steers' 45 setting up a second and 18 situation.

He was flushed from the pocket but as he scrambled, Paul Anderson broke free of coverage downfield. Rios passed the ball to Anderson who scampered 42 yards to the Big Spring three-yard line.

Cato was called upon to carry the mail, and he did, rumbling around left end for the last three yards and the six points.

Merritt's extra point was successful and the game was tied at seven with :04 left in the half.

Big Spring opened the third period with a 12 play, 74 yard drive capped by a 14 yard touchdown pass from Thompson to Mayfield.

The BSHS running back gained 37 yards rushing on the drive, as well as the final 14 in the air.

The PAT was good and Big Spring was sitting atop a 14-7 lead with 6:32 left in the third quarter.

End of regular season.

Snyder threatened late in the period as Bufkin hit the middle of the line and the Steers were 10 before being hauled down from behind.

The Tigers could manage no further than the two yard line and the ball went over to the visiting squad after Anderson was dropped for a two yard loss on fourth down.

Big Spring couldn't manage a first down from that deep in their territory and they set up in punt formation with a minute left in the game's third quarter.

Damien Haywood ripped up the middle of the line and blocked the Mayfield kick out of the end zone for a safety and two points for Snyder.

The hometowners also got the ball back via a free kick following the safety and they showed the near-capacity crowd that they knew what to do with the pigskin as it only took three plays to take the lead away from the Steers.

Presley slipped through the line for six followed by another two from Bufkin setting up a third and two.

Cato smashed off right tackle and didn't stop until he had covered the entire 38 yards needed for the TD. Again, Merritt's extra-point was good and SHS led 16-14 with 11:48 left in the game.

A big scramble by Thompson on third and 11 for a first down highlighted the next Big Spring drive.

Otis Riffey took the football over from a yard out to put Big Spring ahead to stay.

They added an insurance score less than two minutes later on a nine-yard jaunt by Mayfield.

The win gives Big Spring a district record of 6-0 with only Ft. Stockton left to play.

Snyder falls to 2-4 in the loop and 2-7 overall for 1989.

Snyder will face Monahans, 6-2 and 5-1 next week in Tiger Stadium in the season finale.

OU gridgers get boot for breaking unit regs

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma starting tailback Ike Lewis and three other Sooner football players were suspended from the team for the rest of the season Friday for violating team rules.

Gibbs issued a two-paragraph statement announcing the internal disciplinary action for Lewis, Fred McCline, Reggie Finch and Corey Mayfield. Mike Treps, sports information director for the university, said Gibbs and Athletic Director Donnie Duncan would have no further comment on the action.

"Although the full nature of the incident is yet to be determined, I felt immediate action was necessary," Gibbs said. He said the players' future with the football program would be determined after a full review.

Of the four, Lewis was the only starter. Finch was a redshirt fullback. Mayfield, a defensive end, has been out with an injury and McCline, a defensive back, has not been playing.

Lewis took over the starting role after Mike Gaddis injured his knee in the Texas game. He had gained 558 yards on 92 carries and was averaging 6.1 yards per carry.

FUMBLE — Ed Rios, 24, getting his first start at quarterback this year for the Tigers Friday night, fumbles the snap as the Big Spring rush closes in. Rios was 6 of 19 for 130 yards against the Steers in a 28-16 Snyder loss. (SDN Staff Photo)

Nurse fired after accident

DALLAS (AP) — An emergency room nurse was fired for accidentally sticking another nurse with a needle that had been used on a patient with AIDS, according to a published report.

Esther Bauer, a spokeswoman for Parkland Memorial Hospital, on Friday would only say that an unidentified nurse was fired recently for "gross negligence" because she failed to follow hospital procedures.

Jody Lain of Grand Prairie told The Dallas Morning News that she was the nurse fired for the Sept. 26 incident.

Ms. Lain, a Parkland employee since 1988, said she believed she was following hospital rules for disposing of contaminated needles.

"I was being very careful," Ms. Lain said. "They cannot state that I've broken any rule or procedure. It was an accident."

The incident happened in a hallway in the emergency room's obstetrics section, Ms. Lain said.

She said she had drawn blood from a pregnant woman, who carried the human immunodeficiency virus, which causes AIDS.

Ms. Lain said she was carrying two tainted needles to a needle disposal container mounted on a wall when another nurse bumped her from behind.

Psi Zeta adds ten new ones

Ten new members have been inducted into the Psi Zeta chapter of Phi Theta Kappa at Western Texas College.

The new students qualified for membership during the 1989 spring semester. To be eligible for membership, the students must have at least 12 hours of college credit, have a grade point average of at least 3.2, and be pursuing a degree.

New PTK members at WTC are Rogene Sruell, Patricia Truock and Douglas Watkins of Colorado City; Chuck Black of Post; Helen Hatter and Wendy Oats of Snyder; and Alfred Bentley, Deborah Bentley, Vicki Dawson and James Farquhar of Sweetwater.

Drs. Duane and Mary Hood are faculty sponsors for the Psi Zeta chapter of Phi Theta Kappa at WTC. The WTC chapter will observe Founder's Day on Nov. 16 and will join with the Student Senate in honoring the Outstanding Campus Personality in a program that morning.

Financial Focus

One axiom every investor should heed is, "Don't believe everything you read."

The top-performing mutual fund should be ranked No. 1 by all financial magazines, right? Wrong. Visit any newsstand and select several of your favorite money publications. Compare their mutual fund hit parades. Most likely, the magazines won't even name the same funds much less have them ranked in the same order.

It may seem strange that rankings don't match because, after all, they should be a comparison of numbers. Because there are so many mutual fund categories with diverse objectives and levels of risk, no one can accurately determine which fund is best.

The Investment Company Institute, a Washington-based information source, lists 22 separate categories in which more than 2,600 mutual funds are listed. Each magazine sets its own guidelines for rating funds. No wonder the rankings don't correspond.

A mutual fund is simply a method of managing money. The better the management, the better the fund. Yet, this fact is often overlooked, and as a result, management teams are often ignored in a frantic search for numbers.

Graham Holloway, head of marketing for one of the nation's oldest and largest management groups, recently pointed out the significance of consistently strong results over short-term performance tables. Holloway used funds from his own group to illustrate. The method of evaluation he used, however, is valid with any fund group.

In the past 25 years, all seven of the group's funds that have existed for at least 10 years beat the stock market in every 10-year period. The three that have existed long enough to have a 25-year record beat both Standard & Poor's 500 Index and the Dow Jones Industrial Average in all 10-year periods that began between 1964 and 1973 and ended between 1979 and 1988.

In the past 10 years, the same seven equity funds outpaced the S&P 500 by margins up to 35 percent. "What this means," Holloway points out, "is that even if you had chosen what turned out to be our worst-performing equity fund, you still would have done much better than average." This alone should refute those financial evangelists who preach it's better to throw darts at the stock page than to invest in a mutual fund.

No one can predict the future, but consistently beating the market is a strong management credential. Surprisingly, Holloway's consistent performers are seldom listed on the newsstand hit parade. Why? Because they show a commitment to long-term results over short-term heroics. Holloway says, "Our investment approach is to buy and hold, not to trade in and out."

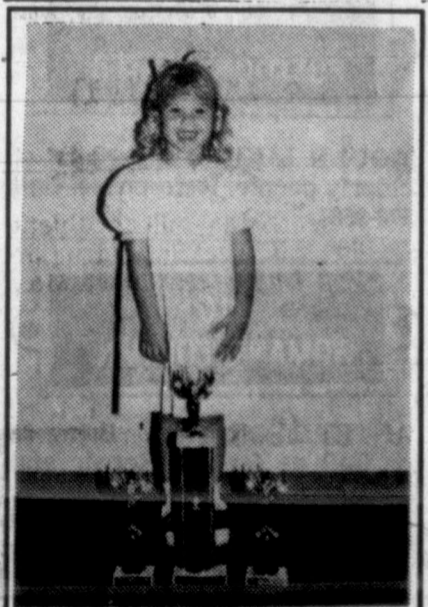

Most serious investing is long term. Those who avoid the temptation to chase today's magazine "top 10" might find management hunting a more profitable venture.

By Shirley A. Gorman

Hubert Gregory, 68, Snyder resident since 1945, did what thousands of American and Filipino soldiers were not able to do during World War II. He survived the hellish seven-day Bataan Death March and subsequent 3½ years as a prisoner of war.

T/Sgt. Gregory, a member of the 21st Pursuit Squadron, entered the Army Air Force on Oct. 14, 1940. "I joined just to have a job. I was a soldier of fortune in those days. My mother had to sign for me because I was barely 19-years-old," he explained.

He underwent basic training in San Antonio and then was transferred to Hamilton Field, Calif., where he trained 50 men. He was shipped to the Philippines in November of 1941 with the rank of corporal.

"We set up tents on Nichols Field and then 'all hell' broke out for us. Around midnight we were told that Japan had attacked Pearl Harbor. Around noon we were digging foxholes in what had been our baseball diamond, getting ready for an attack, and here it came, out of the sun," Gregory said.

He and two others were digging a fox hole on the pitcher's mound when the first bomb hit. Strafing by machine guns from the plains soon followed.

"After the first attack, I felt a chill of some kind run up my spine. I told the other men with me that we had better move or the next bomb may have the name of the pitcher's box on it. I jumped and moved to first base where we had finished a fox hole. It was very hot and we were very scared. I was covered with sweat, but we got out just in time. "A bomb hit the pitcher's mound just as we jumped into the fox hole. When it was clear, I looked up and saw that my friend, Carl Ruse, had escaped in time. But I never did learn what happened to the third man."

Gregory said that throughout his war experience he had about three premonitions and that he saved his life by acting immediately each time. "When that feeling told me to move, I moved with no hesitation," he said.

After the bombing, Gregory said all of their planes which had been caught on the ground were badly damaged. They tried to salvage what they could from the damaged planes in order to get other, less damaged ones, in the air.

"As soon as we got one going it took to the air so that we had someone flying all the time, either in battle or some other kind of mission," he said. He estimates that they got about five of the 12 planes they had into the air. But before working on the planes, he said they picked up their dead and wounded.

That same night they were sent to Manila, just in case the field might be attacked again. They stayed in groups of six to 10. The next day they returned to the field but when they arrived everyone was gone and they were told to go back to Bataan.

"As we started to leave I spotted a Japanese truck setting off all by itself. It was deserted so I asked Lt. Col. William Edwin Dyess if he wanted me to take it and he unhesitatingly said 'yes,' as long as I could drive it. I ran to the truck and drove off. I had ¾ tank of airplane gas in it. I felt pretty good because I had saved some gas which we would need later on and I had helped to keep supplies from the enemy," Gregory said.

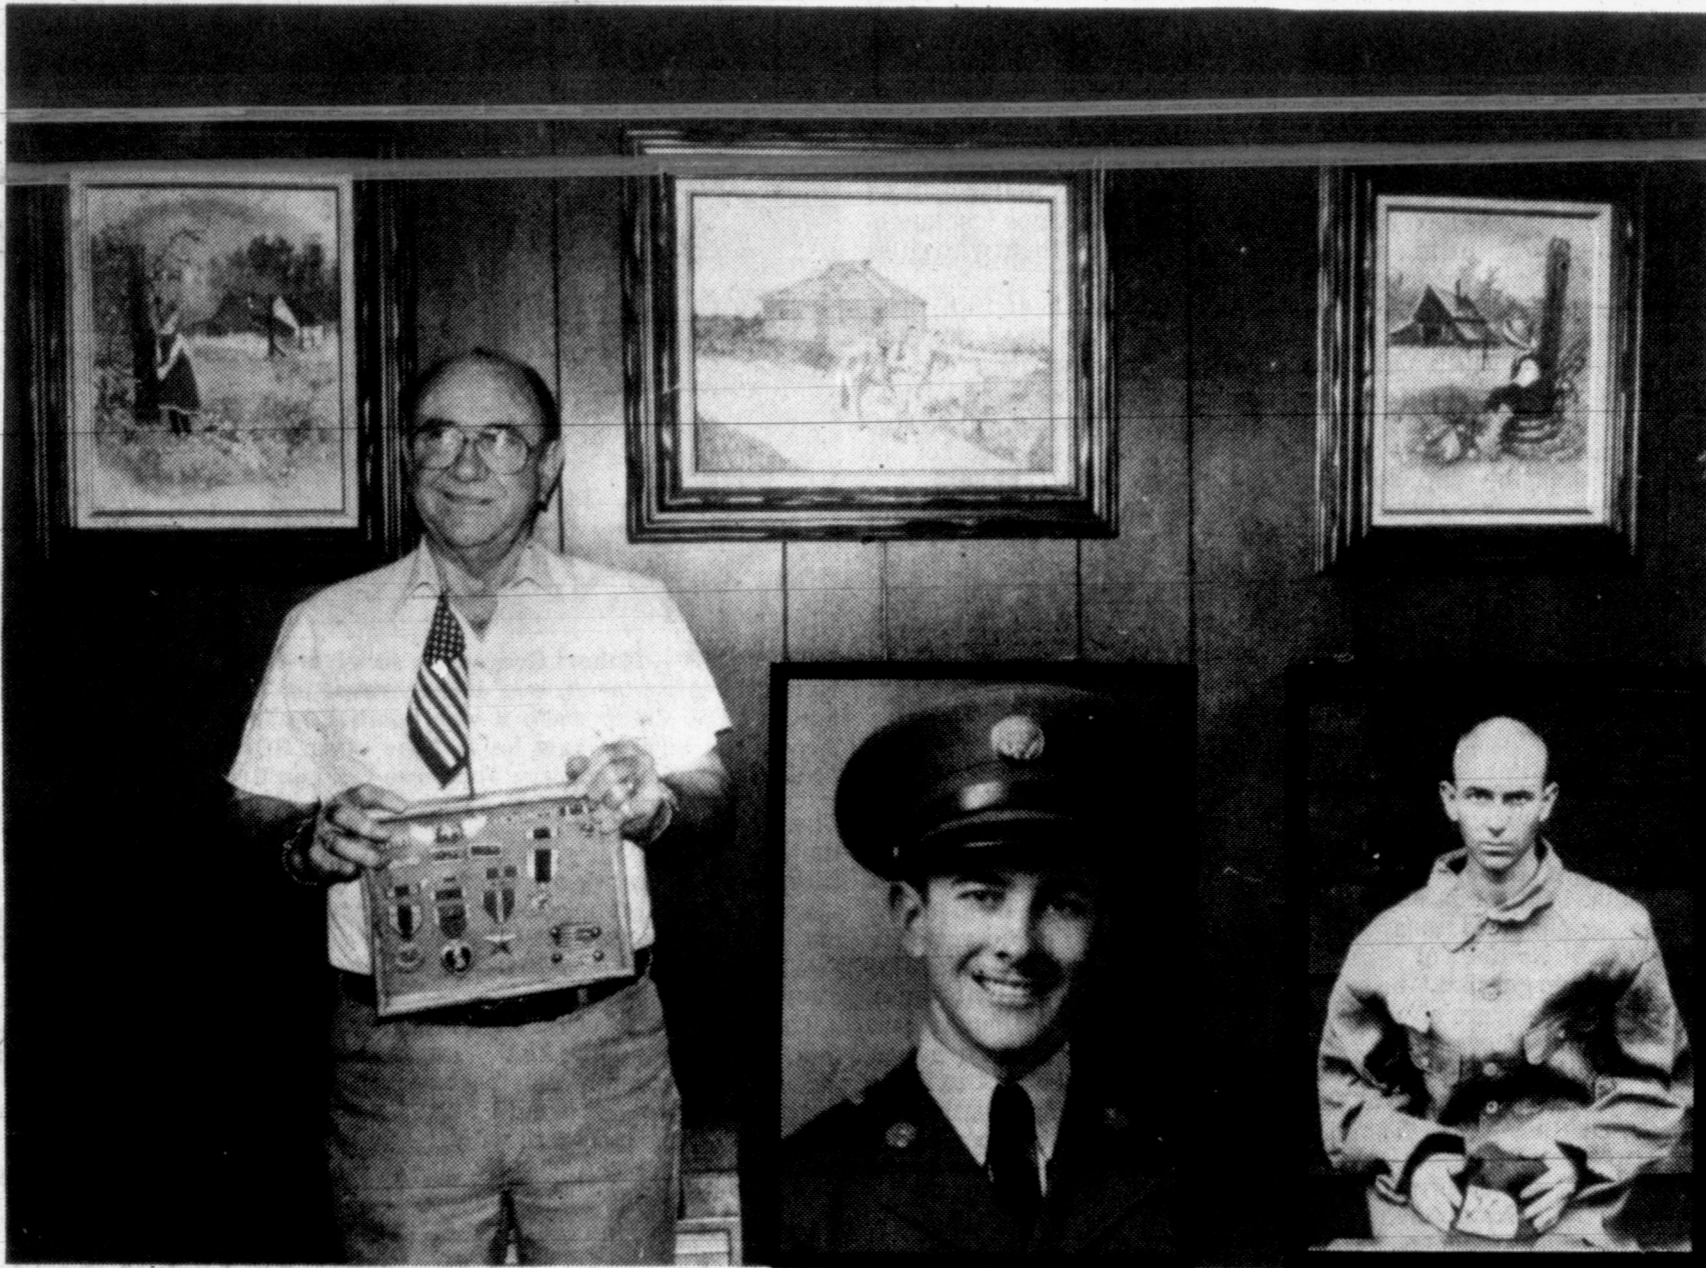

At night they followed a road along a cliff back to Bataan where they made a stand with only four airplanes. Finally, all but one was shot down. Gregory was sent to Parachute Hill to watch for parachute troops. Later he returned to camp.

He also volunteered to go with Lt. Col. Dyess to the front line in the Agoloma Bay region where the Philippine scouts had broken through. The dense jungle had underbrush so thick that they had to pick their way in the daylight. The mosquitoes were nearly as bad as the flies, and the stench of dead Jap soldiers they had killed was terrible. Due to heavy fighting, they could not dispose of the bodies.

At night, Gregory said the most gruesome sound he heard was a great battle going on somewhere nearby, and wounded soldiers crying and calling for someone to help them. Later they learned that the Jap soldiers had taped the sound of the dying prisoners calling for help and played it every night just to rattle the other prisoners.

"They thought this would draw us from cover so they could shoot

LIFE GOES ON — In at least one respect, Hubert Gregory of Snyder has been a lucky man. He survived the Bataan Death March and 3½ years of captivity, and he later settled in Snyder where he has made a life for himself with his wife, Thelma, her son and their son. But it hasn't been easy because he has been plagued with health problems since he was liberated on Sept. 4, 1945. Gregory is holding the medals which he earned during World War II and behind him are just a few examples of the oil paintings he has completed since finally realizing his boyhood dream a few years ago. The first inset (lower right corner) was taken of Gregory in 1940 when he was 19 and had recently enlisted in the Army Air Force. The second inset was taken of Gregory soon after he was liberated from a Japanese POW camp on Sept. 4, 1945. His head had to be shaved due to a severe lice problem. (SDN Staff Photo)

us. We had to sit and listen to that awful sound night after night," he said.

That lasted for about two weeks and then they charged the Japs' front line with the "only tank we had left," trying to knock

As Gregory explains, "We did our jobs."

It was time for another push but they were already weakened from having no one to back them up or let them rest even for a little while.

"We just stuck it out with very little hope," Gregory said. "I tried to keep the men hopped up by bragging on all of us, but I knew in my heart that if we were charged with a big force we would stand no chance at all."

They had already lost five or six men — one on Gregory's right, one on his left, one behind him about 20 feet, one lost both legs about 15 feet to his left, and another was close to the man that had lost his legs.

"If they (Jap soldiers) found anything that belonged to any Japanese they would take the prisoner out of the group and beat him senseless...."

Gregory's memory isn't clear beyond this recollection because they had all been on the front line so long without any backup or relief that they were beyond exhaustion. They tried to sleep 10 minutes at a time, taking turns. He thinks they were on the point about 60 days, existing on half-rations and getting weaker and sicker all time. Malaria was a constant ailment. This was the shape Gregory and the others with him were in when they were told they had been surrendered and would have to go back to Bataan.

"We had no choice but to obey orders," he said. "We gathered where we were told to and destroyed all our weapons. Then we sat down and cried. We discussed some way to hide out, but we were surrounded by Jap soldiers and could not leave without being shot."

Gregory, who finally fell asleep that night from pure exhaustion, said he wished they had known more about the jungle because they might have been able to get away. But that had been their one and only chance to escape.

Years later, Gregory learned he was to miss out on Col. Dyess's successful escape for two reasons. First, he was not on the same work detail as Dyess and the other escapees, and second, he was very, very ill.

"Dyess came to see me the day before they made their break, but he never said a word about the planned escape. It was safer for me not to know," he said.

Also, at this time Gregory said he was very ill and even though he did not know the cause, he said he could not eat. At that point, he said he wasn't even sure if he would "make it home at all."

He started out in sick bay but later switched to lying under the building. He was so weak that from one meal to the next he tried to consume a little soupy, watered rice, one spoonful at a time; but he never finished his ration before the next meal.

On April 10, 1942, all the prisoners were lined up in columns of four and forced to place all of their belongings before them so that the Jap soldiers anything we could do for him."

After seeing women and children killed "just for the fun of it," Gregory said they knew they were going to be in for a bad time.

They received no food or water that first night; instead they were run into a "standing room only" cattle pen. Everyone tried to sleep standing up. Some fell down and eventually they all ended up lying on top of each other, but they were able to get very little sleep.

Early the next morning Gregory said they were herded back to the road, and with no food or water, "men began to drop out from weakness, malaria, and starvation." The Japs just laughed and beat or hit them with rifles or clubs.

"With the dust, heat, filth, flies, the stench of the dead, and the brutality of the guards, I felt as if I had gone as far as I could. Guts, hate of the Japanese, will power, determination, and most of all God kept me going," he said.

On the third day they were placed in a deep ditch by the side of the road where they had very little room. Rice balls were being handed out, but when it became Gregory's turn they had run out so he got a half cup of tea instead. As he went back to the small cliff, he found some hog potatoes that eventually served as his supper.

On the fourth day they resumed the march. "We had guards all around us and were forced to stay close together. My canteen had been taken away from me on the third day so I found one on a dead soldier. I didn't think he would care if I used it. It had a hole in it so I darted out of line and ducked my cup into a bar ditch full of dirty water. But I had to have a drink so I drank the dirty water. I found a corpse about 100 yards later, but it was too late as I had already drunk the dirty water. Since I had other things on my mind I tried not to think about it, but it nearly made me sick," Gregory said.

The fourth day continued much the same: "old dirty, stinking, filthy, hot, thirsty and hungry march." Every time shots rang out, Gregory said they knew those too weak to continue the march were being killed.

That night they were herded into a "building of some kind." He did not like the night nor did he appreciate the "cruel and beastial" treatment they all received.

They marched again on the sixth day.

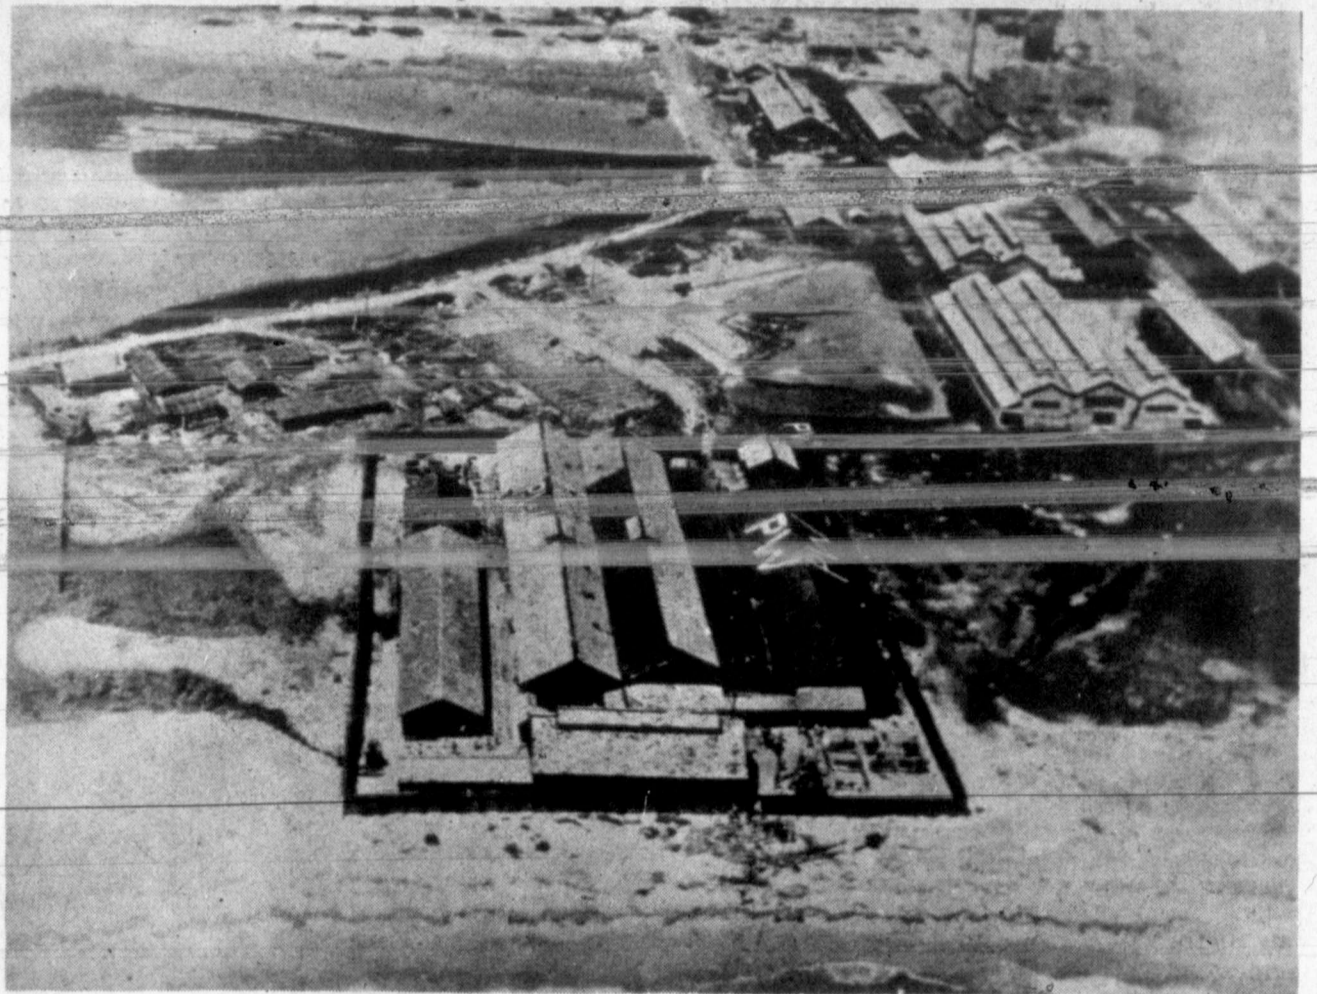

By day seven they arrived and were immediately crowded into a small "standing room only"

Another time, he said he encountered some artesian water and he and the others quickly tried to get their cups under it. He managed to fill his cup, but then the Japs came and beat anyone they could get their hands on. Fortunately, Gregory was able to outrun them.

Other atrocities he witnessed included POWs being forced to dig their own graves and then being buried alive.

"I forgot about the dirty water and began to wonder where my next food and water was going to come from," he said.

By this time Gregory and the others on the death march were getting pretty hungry and tired.

POW CAMP — Hubert Gregory, a survivor of the Bataan Death March, was incarcerated in Yokkaight POW Camp when it was bombed in 1945. Across the bay, he said he and the other POWs could see Nagoya, a large Japanese city, on fire.

While there he also survived an earthquake and a hurricane. He was liberated on Sept. 4, 1945, and discharged two months later. (Photo Courtesy of Hubert Gregory) found some quinine. It was in powder form and no one knew how much to take, but he was having real bad chills and fever every other day so he took some anyway because he "had to do something." It cured his fever for one month.

They were then sent to Camp that mud, but that old water buffalo would go right on and with just a little encouragement, would pull me along. My legs broke out with ulcers, so I ended up changing to a logging detail where we built a road across swamps with logs cut from the jungle."

"...Men began to drop out from weakness, malaria, and starvation."

Cabantuan which had a very high death rate. Gregory was there about one year. Food consisted of rice with rice worms, seaweed and burnt rice coffee. He finally got to go to Davao Penal Colony, a POW camp in Mindanao.

Gregory said they all had beriberi, could hardly walk and they hurt so much that they cried themselves to sleep at night.

The trip to Mindanao took 20 days, with Gregory and others being packed into the cargo hold of a 1918 U.S. junker which had been sold to Japan. In the prison camp Gregory said they all worked on a large farm, planting and harvesting rice. They plowed the field with water buffaloes and had to work in soured mud which came up as far as their knees and sometimes as high as their hips.

"I had a hard time walking in

At that point Gregory said his good friend Carl Ruse, a fellow prisoner, helped him get on a detail which used a Brimmer bull to plant purple comatatoes. "We ate the top of them in our water soup along with a few of the purple potatoes. However, the Japs took most of the comatatoes for themselves," he said.

Later, Gregory said he and other prisoners of war were sent to Yokkaight Island to a Japanese factory where he worked for a year. He called it a "handmade" island because the Japs had hauled in junk and filth until they filled the area. It was located across the bay from Nagoya.

After a 90-day boat ride in a 1918 U.S. freight junker, Gregory said they arrived in Mindanao.

railroad boxcar which no one was allowed to leave. Prisoners only had room to stand, he explained, and if any of them had to go to the restroom it was "too bad." With malnutrition and dysentery rampant, Gregory said everything was a "mess" and they all had to live "in such filth."

Several prisoners suffocated during that train ride. Camp O'Donnell proved to be their first POW camp. Their first night there, Gregory said he and a friend found a place in the barracks. But when they awoke the next morning they discovered that most of the others in that room had died during the night.

"We didn't sleep there another night. Instead we found a place nearby where we were fed. We stayed there until we were assigned to a work detail in Bataan where we spent 30 days cleaning up some junk," Gregory said.

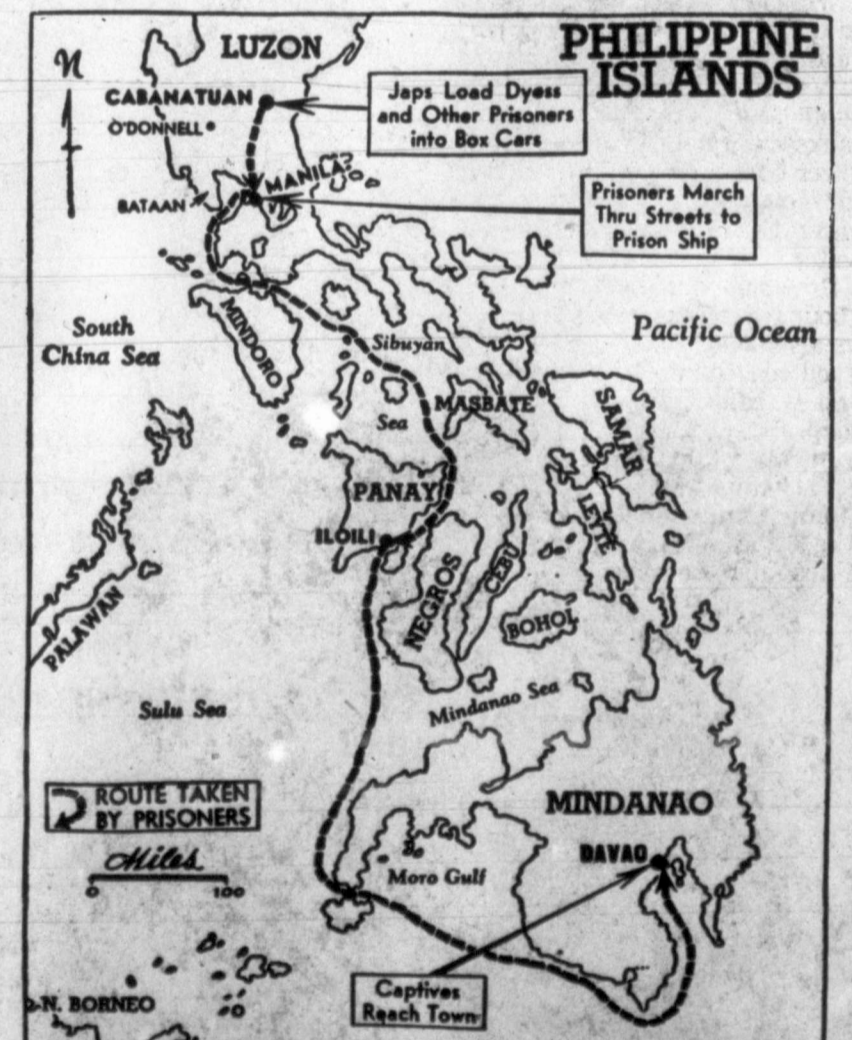

While there, Gregory said he

WWII memories still vivid for Snyder man

They were crowded so tightly that each man barely had room to lie down.

"It was hard for us to lie down in fact, we could not lie down until the ship got underway. The Japs did let some of us on the deck where I found a place by the loading mast or boom. I sat on the loading arm of this ship all that time because I wanted to rest. I would trade places with a friend. We were fed 1/2 cup of watered down rice twice a day and 1/2 canteen of tea which comprised our only drinking water," Gregory said.

"After the first attack, I felt a chill of some kind run up my spine. I told the other men we had better move or the next bomb might have the name of the pitcher's box on it...."

En route to Mindanao they passed through a hurricane which Gregory thought "was going to break us in half." He almost got washed overboard but managed to "hold on somehow." After the waters settled he was able to get back to his hole.

He said the convoy "ran off and left us because we could not keep up." A U.S. submarine followed them for two days but they never torpedoed the ship. The "old tub" Gregory was on dropped some depth charges but never hit anything.

Eventually the POWs were put on an old barge and taken to Yokkaight. For the next year, Gregory worked in a factory for the Imperial Japanese Army.

During that year, Gregory said he experienced his first earthquake, and it was a "shocker." He was standing by a railroad track when the ground started to open up. The Japs started taking to higher ground, but when Gregory saw that the sea looked 20 feet higher he decided to "sit down on the railroad track and wait the earthquake out."

"I just knew it knocked me off my feet and at first I didn't know what to do. As the earth opened up, I could see hot water shoot up from the cracks. If the earth had opened up underneath me it would have swallowed me up," Gregory said.

The quake, which Gregory remembers as being 8.6 on the Richter Scale, was the biggest to hit Japan at that time and it was over within 30 minutes. Two or three aftershocks followed.

"I sure was glad it was over and especially glad that the sea never did come in like we had thought," he said.

While at Yokkaight, Gregory said they also survived a hurricane which left them all wading in water up to their waists for about four days. Since the barracks were built with upper and lower bunks, he said they all had to move upstairs because the lower bunks were covered with water.

Crowded conditions existed for about two weeks along with two meals a day with half rations. Food consisted of 1/2 bowl of rice and 1/2 cup of watered seaweed soup.

In 1945, while Gregory was still at Yokkaight, the U.S. dropped atomic bombs on Hiroshima on Aug. 6 and on Nagasaki on Aug. 9. Allies also bombed Nagoya, a large Japanese city located across the bay.

POWs were kept from work details until noon and shades were placed over all the windows of the barracks because the Japanese did not want them to see the results of the bombing raids.

After they returned to work, Gregory said they were called in from the factory and just as they got back to camp they were headed back to the beach. "The sky was full of airplanes, just as far as I could see to my right and left and north. Bombs were falling everywhere, but we were glad to see them," Gregory said. Afterwards all the POWs were loaded onto a barge and taken across the bay to a railroad station where they were placed on a train, allowed to ride in real seats, and treated like human beings for the first time since they had been taken prisoners of war, he said.

They were all taken to P.T. Boats which later carried them to Iwo Jima, then Clark Field in the Philippines, and finally to San Francisco via a B-17 bomber that was "ready for the graveside." In fact, that was the bomber's last mission.

"The Golden Gate Bridge sure did look good to us. It was the most beautiful thing we had seen in a long time. I cried. I don't know how many others felt as I did, but I'm sure they cried a little; none of us wanted anyone to know."

Gregory was sent to Hamilton Field where he received his separation papers. From there he traveled to Temple for a two-week stay and then he started a 90-day leave before reporting back to Ft. Sam Houston for discharge.

Gregory had been captured on April 9, 1942, liberated on Sept. 4, 1945, and discharged in November of 1945.

He received the following campaign ribbons for the Asiatic-Pacific Theatre: Philippine Defense with two bronze stars, American Defense with one bronze star; two presidential citations with two oak leaf clusters, Good Conduct Medal, Bronze Star, POW Medal, Air Force Wings, and Purple Heart.

Gregory said that when he was discharged he received no special medical treatment and only a little time off because "I guess they figured time would heal all things."

But time didn't heal all things. He said he doesn't remember experiencing any psychological difficulties after being held prisoner for 3 1/2 years, but he still suffers from medical problems which can be traced back to World War II.

Almost immediately he started experiencing heart trouble and eventually had to have surgery. Today, he said his veins still try to clog up. He is also diabetic, but that developed later in his life. He said that the Veterans Administration has assisted him, but not without a fight. They recognized that his heart problems were brought on by his war experiences, but they deny that the diabetes is linked to the war.

In spite of the VA's stance, Gregory said several local doctors have told him that it is very likely that his suffering during the war helped bring on the diabetes since no one in his family ever suffered from the disease.

He has also suffered with "nerves" ever since World War II.

He said what amazes him is that his stomach survived the war cruelty in tact and he could still eat anything if not for having to follow a strict diabetic diet. He said other GIs were not so lucky and many are still unable to eat normally even after all these years.

Gregory also remembers that once liberated, all POWs had to have their heads shaved due to a severe lice problem.

In spite of the hellish 3 1/2 years Gregory spent as a POW, he said he never has regretted for one moment joining the service. When asked why he thought the Japanese soldiers had been so cruel to the prisoners, he said he thought it was because they were all hardened soldiers who had seen years of action in China and were immune to death. He said after a while he became immune to death also.

Gregory also said that because they were Buddhists, none of the prisoners were supposed to look at the Jap soldiers or talk to them. He added that he has a lot of respect for Filipinos who tried to help them along the way, because they were severely punished when the Japanese caught them.

During captivity, Gregory's weight dropped from about 155 pounds to a mere 90 pounds.

He was born in Hood County and he and his family moved to Rotan in Fisher County when he was a year old. His wife, Thelma, is a native of Hermleigh. They knew each other before he left for the Asiatic-Pacific Theatre

With peaceful time to call his own, Gregory turned to wood-working, then switched to oil painting, something he had always wanted to do since a small boy.

PRACTICE FIREARM SAFETY

Hunters and other sportsmen should make firearm safety a top priority.

Accidents with firearms don't just happen. They are caused by haste, carelessness or disregard for safety rules.

Listed below are guidelines for firearm safety:

—Treat every gun with the respect accorded to a loaded gun.
—Watch that muzzle. Be able to control the direction of the muzzle even if you should stumble.

—Be sure the barrel and action are clear of obstructions and that ammunition is of the proper size for the gun you carry.

—Be sure of your target before you pull the trigger. Know the identifying features of the game you hunt.

—Unload guns when they are not in use. Take down or have actions open.

—Guns should be carried in cases to the shooting area.

—Never point a gun at anything you do not want to shoot.

—Never climb a fence or tree or jump a ditch with a loaded gun; and never pull a gun toward you by the muzzle.

—Never shoot a bullet at a flat, hard surface or water.

—When target practicing, be sure your backstop is adequate.

—Store guns and ammunition separately beyond the reach of children and careless adults.

—Avoid alcoholic beverages before and during shooting.

For several years Bols Distilleries has sponsored a "bridge tips" competition among leading journalist-experts. George Rosenkranz's tip for 1989 is "Direct the opening lead during the auction." Today's deal well illustrates the strength of making the appropriate lead-directing bid.

South ended up in a six-heart contract, after East and West had bid a lot of spades. West's leap to four spades was meant only to thwart the North-South slam-bidding process, and East's continuation of five spades was more of the same. In South's methods, six clubs after Blackwood interference showed two aces, and so he arrived at six hearts.

Not being clairvoyant, West led a spade, and 12 tricks were easy to take. The point of Rosenkranz's tip is that East should have bid five diamonds rather than five spades. Since North is trying for slam, it is very likely that he has the diamond king, and getting a diamond lead may be crucial to preventing North-South from making a slam. Of course the opponents may then be smart enough to stop bidding and double five diamonds, and double again when East or West runs to five spades. But from East-West's point of view, giving up 300 points is far better than losing a possible 1430. And who knows? Perhaps South would show his two aces in some fashion over five diamonds and reach a slam that would be defeated with the diamond lead.

Holiday cooking made easy with cheese balls

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Food Editor

No grating, no stirring — your blender or food processor does the tough stuff when you make this flavorful appetizer cheese ball, just right for upcoming holiday festivities. Shape the cheese mixture into the traditional ball, form a log or circle, or press into a 2-cup mold lined with plastic wrap.

CHUTNEY CHEESE BALL
8 ounces sharp cheddar cheese, cubed
2 tablespoons margarine or butter
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Dash bottled hot pepper sauce
½ cup finely chopped chutney
½ cup finely chopped pecans or peanuts
Assorted crackers

Allow cheese and margarine to come to room temperature. Put ½ of cheese in blender container or food processor bowl; cover and blend until chopped. Remove and set aside; repeat with remaining cheese. Return all cheese to blender; add milk, margarine, Worcestershire sauce and hot pepper sauce. Cover and blend with several on-off turns until smooth. Turn cheese mixture into a mixing bowl. Stir in chutney. Cover; chill for several hours. Shape cheese mixture into a ball; roll in chopped pecans. Chill. Serve with assorted crackers. Makes 1 ball.

HIGH STRESS LEVELS HASTEN BURNOUT

Burnout is a condition that occurs when aggressive, motivated and successful people work too hard too long at their jobs.

When stress levels stay high over a period of time, an employee will burn out. They tend to have mental and physical health problems or begin to be accident-prone.

Employees suffering burnout often exhibit one or more symptoms. High resistance to going to work and a negative attitude are two of the first symptoms. Other symptoms are seeming to be angry all the time, blaming others for their problems, frequent clock watching, and little care or concern for their job.

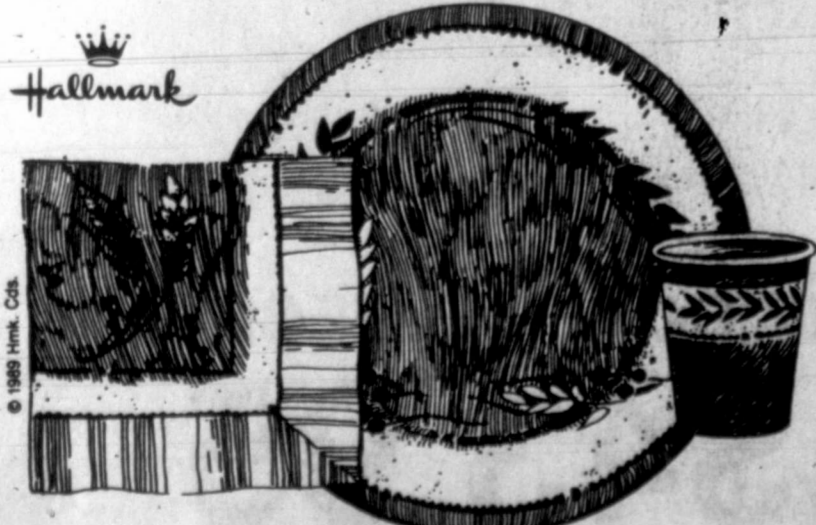

Additional symptoms include withdrawing from co-workers, postponing client contacts, inability to concentrate, feeling helpless or immobilized, higher absenteeism, resisting any kind of change and having more health problems.

Coping with job burnout is a challenge. Before any changes can take place, the burned out employee must be willing to change and be willing to work diligently at turning his or her life around. When burnout occurs, marital and family conflict are natural consequences.

Listed are eight recommended practices for keeping mentally and physically fit to prevent burnout:

- Get enough sleep every night.
  - Keep physically fit, eat right and exercise regularly.
  - Take regular vacations.
  - Deal with stress realistically.
  - Organize your life.
  - Allow yourself a ten-minute "down-time" each hour you work.
  - Talk about your problem.
  - Use your faith and values.
- Middle age is the period when both men and women experience the most depression and job burnout. Middle age is also life's most successful period of life.

Safety Seat for Toddlers Has Use Both On and Off the Road

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column, you praised the "Hug a Tree" survival program and credit "Abe Taylor" as its creator. In the first place, the man's name is "Ab Taylor," and in the second place, he did not create the program, I did.

I wrote every word of that program and took every photographic slide. Of course, Mr. Taylor was very helpful, but the material was mine. I even had it copyrighted.

In the past, you have always given credit where credit was due. Will you kindly do the same for me?

THOMAS R. JACOBS, AUTHOR OF HUG A TREE AND SURVIVE

DEAR MR. JACOBS: You bet! Consider yourself duly credited for that wonderful program. And my apologies to Ab for calling him Abe.

For a dandy tip for campers who camp out with toddlers, read on:

DEAR ABBY: Hugging a tree is good advice for youngsters who lose their way in the woods, and as one writer suggested, a whistle around the neck is also a good idea for campers.

But what about toddlers who wander off in a wooded area and are too young to follow instructions about hugging a tree? Or even blowing a whistle should they get lost?

My husband and I have been camping in the Colorado Rockies with our children since they were babies, and I have a suggestion for parents who camp out with very young children.

To keep your children from getting lost, simply remove their "car seats" from the automobile and use them as security chairs. Infant car seats provide comfortable, "escape-proof" chairs that can be placed by campfires, rivers or wherever you are on your camping trip. While parents are fishing, erecting a tent or preparing meals, with the little ones safely in their escape-proof car seats, there is no need to worry about where they are.

Children under 3 years of age do wander, and in hilly, wooded terrain like we have in Colorado, only a few minutes is all it takes for a youngster to get lost. And sound doesn't carry very well in the mountains.

I hope this suggestion will save some toddler the grief of getting lost, or some parents the pain of losing a child on a camping trip. Sad to say, it happens to somebody's child every year.

CAROLYN REED, DENVER

DEAR ABBY: Our family has a problem. We say it's Mom's job to check the pockets before putting clothes in the washer. Mom says it's the wearer's job.

Abby, when an article of clothing is in the laundry, it should be ready to be washed! So whose job is it to check the pockets?

ARGUING IN OGDEN, UTAH

DEAR ARGUING: The wearer should check the pockets first. And if the wearer isn't doing the laundry, the person who does it should check the pockets to be sure the wearer hasn't overlooked something that probably will not survive the wash cycle — such as paper money, a lottery ticket, a parking ticket or somebody's telephone number.

Is your social life in a slump? Get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular" — for people of all ages. To order, send your name and address, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

'Hobby plan' on reform has been filed

AUSTIN (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby may be the most powerful man in the Legislature, but "he still has to get 21 votes" to have his workers' compensation proposal considered by the Senate, a state lawmaker said.

Hobby, the presiding officer of the Senate, has written two bills to overhaul the comp system. Sens. Kent Caperton and Carl Parker have pre-filed a competing plan.

Caperton, D-Bryan, on Thursday was referring to the two-thirds Senate vote necessary to bring a bill up for discussion.

But Caperton stressed the similarities in the proposals. "We had been anxiously awaiting his (Hobby's) product. I want to see where we can merge our bills," Caperton said.

The Legislature returns Tuesday for a special session devoted to overhauling the insurance system that employers have criticized because of high premiums and workers have blasted because of meager benefits.

Lawmakers failed to reach a compromise on reforming the $3 billion per year system during a 140-day regular session and a 30-day special session last summer.

Hobby's bills have been sponsored by an equal number of Democrats and Republicans. Hobby, a Democrat, said, "I am extremely pleased at the bipartisan support for these bills. Both of them are attempts to solve the problems that are driving up costs in our workers' compensation system."

His plan and the Caperton-Parker proposal differ in two major areas: calculating benefits for disabilities and resolving disputed claims.

Under the Hobby plan, compensation would be based on an impairment schedule set by the American Medical Association, while the Caperton-Parker bill is tied to lost wages and earning capacity.

Hobby's plan would also restrict juries to two issues: whether a worker's injury occurred on the job and the extent of

DEAR ABBY: Five years ago when I was 24, I married a wealthy, 48-year-old divorced father of three grown children. In addition to signing a prenuptial agreement, I agreed to three stipulations: that I honor his privacy, love his family, and agree to a childless marriage since he had no desire to start a second family.

At the time, I was willing to accept any terms in order to marry him, but now I have some regrets about these stipulations.

His demands for "privacy" make me uneasy, since I remember only too well the way he deceived his wife so we could be together. Second, I have tried to love his family, but his mother blames me for breaking up his marriage and never passes up a chance to let me know how she feels about me.

The third stipulation has been the hardest to accept because now I realize that I would like to have a child.

What do you advise?
 SECOND THOUGHTS

DEAR SECOND THOUGHTS: If "honoring" your husband's privacy means closing your eyes to his philandering, since there is no cure for AIDS, you could be foolishly risking your life.

No one should agree to "love" anybody's family. You can agree to treat them with respect and even to be cordial, but it's impossible to "love" on command.

And if you want to have a child, keep in mind that a man who doesn't want a child usually makes a poor father.

I advise you to seek counseling, and ask your husband to join you. You don't have a marriage — it's a business deal you may both want to end.

DEAR ABBY: This is a weird problem, but I am stumped. My husband and I returned from our vacation to find that our across-the-street neighbor had mounted a cannon in his front yard!

This monstrous metal relic, set in concrete, is aimed directly at our house. When we sit on our front porch, all I can see is that ugly weapon trained on our front door, and it makes me nervous.

I went over there and told that neighbor that his cannon was making me very uncomfortable, but he just laughed and said he thought it was an interesting piece of art and I had nothing to worry about because the cannon wasn't loaded.

My husband keeps telling me to relax — the cannon is harmless and hasn't been fired since the Civil War, but I'm not convinced. What do you suggest?

"IN THE SIGHTS" IN SYRACUSE

DEAR IN: To put your mind at ease and your fears to rest, call your local police department and ask to have an arms expert sent to examine your neighbor's cannon.

The expert will examine the cannon to make sure that the firing mechanism is inoperative. And since your neighbor assured you that the cannon was harmless, he should have no objections to an expert's examining it to confirm the fact.

DEAR ABBY: I took off a lot of weight recently. It wasn't easy and I am very proud of myself, but what do you say to someone who says, "I liked you better fat"?

DEAR CATHY: Say, "I liked you better before you said that!"

impairment caused by the injury. The Caperton-Parker bill modifies the current system but does not restrict jury trials to those two issues.

Both plans increase benefits for injured workers and provide incentives for reducing the number of job accidents through rate discounts and penalties for unsafe employers.

Buffalo Reef

By Bill McClellan

I'm a little ashamed to admit I booed with the best of 'em Tuesday night. Maybe even louder than most.

After 12 years of keeping my cool on the sidelines, it felt pretty good to sit in the stands at the WTC-Ranger basketball double header and applaud, cheer, and boo several calls by the officials. Since I don't write 'em anymore, I feel obliged to take part in a more vocal manner. Not that I agree with booing, understand — poor sportsmanship and all that. But it's too tempting to resist. Human nature.

I also found myself taking a few notes, despite myself, and I guess that's something that I'll grow out of in time.

And, I'll admit, I wasn't used to paying the $3 to get in the gate, but even then, it was definitely worth the price. Make that $6. The wife went along.

Keeping tabs on John Dunnam, the ex-SDN news editor and good friend who is the former advertising manager at the former KBYG radio station in Big Spring, you'll recall the station was closed by the federal bankruptcy court last Sunday and employees camped out in front of the building that evening.

Ironically, I was in Big Spring at the time, taking a "weekend vacation" with my wife and visiting John. We had all gone out together the night before and the wife and I were getting ready to go have breakfast when he called and told us the plug had been pulled on the station end, of course, his job. Employees met that morning and decided they would spend the night outside the station, which is just inside Comanche Trails Park. Sort of a show of support, protest, or maybe desperation.

I haven't talked to him since except for a brief phone call to make sure that, yes, the employees did spend the night there, since I had already written the story and wanted to make sure it was accurate.

Apparently, the "sleep-in" is continuing. A check with the Big Spring Herald revealed that the group — though down to about five employees now — has spent the entire week camped out near the station.

And, the effort to draw attention to their plight has apparently done some good, if only to get some sympathy from the Big Spring community. According to the Herald, the group has the backing of the mayor, who was to meet with some prospective buyers on Thursday. What may have come of the meeting, I don't know.

However, a fire department has donated use of a camper to the group and several restaurants have provided meals. I don't know whether the staff's efforts will get the station back on the air, but it does show the limits to which people will go in order to keep their jobs nowadays. And, it's an indication of how, in tough times, people pull together to help each other.

If you noticed last Tuesday's article on the school board then you picked up on the discussion concerning homecoming. We had received some "Ask Us" questions concerning why Snyder High School holds the event only once every two years but hadn't been able to come up with anyone who knew.

It was determined that the student council is in charge, however, and I suspect that they'll review the situation and make the best decision.

A number of folks have indicated to me that it would be good for local business and, of course, for school pride, to have a yearly homecoming. Sounds good to me, but with my kids already out of school, I'll admit that I'm not affected by the somewhat nightmarish thought of paying for corsages and new outfits for such an occasion.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

'Way back in February, 1981, "Writer's Digest" had an article by an author named Paris Afton Bonds called, "Moment By Moment." Ms. Afton Bonds writes those huge thick historical saga romance novels that run 600 pages or more. Back in 1981, she'd just published one called "Dust Devils," which became a paperback bestseller, and in "Moment By Moment," she wrote about what it was like, trying to write those long researched novels and raise five sons, three of whom were preschoolers and one a baby at the breast.

That lady knocked my socks off, and inspired me to think, "If she can do it, so can I." Her article detailed how to write, literally, moment-by-moment—how to grab writing moments whenever you can, how to write through distractions, (even screaming infants and bickering toddlers), how to focus your concentration and get the dadgum job done, even if you have to do it in twenty-minute spurts. She wrote with great humor, quoting lurid love scenes she'd written interspersed with, "Mama! Dougie threw the cat in the toilet, and I haven't flushed yet."

In my favorite scene in the article, she described how one night she discovered, to her horror, several manuscript pages missing, and how she'd gone out from their rural New Mexico home in the driving rain to the small private dump area out in a nearby pasture, and crawled through the garbage with a flashlight, bawling, searching for those pages.

I can relate. My kids were babies then too. I can still remember sitting at a scarred old dining room chair at a rickety card table, typing away while my baby daughter, directly beneath the chair, teething on the chair legs. I could feel the grinding all the way up my spine. Once, I kept doggedly working through my little boy's plaintive cries for Mama, Mama until it got on my nerves so bad I finally went to check. I found that kid spread-eagled, half-way up a window facing like a fly, unable to get up or down.

Now here it is almost the nineties, and Bonds and I both are battle-scarred veterans of the writing wars. A couple of weeks ago, I ordered a book from the writer's book club by a Pulitzer-Prize-winning author, Annie Dillard, called simply "The Writing Life." I'd read her autobiography, "An American Childhood" and had loved it. I figured this book had to be a delight. Yet while it's true that I read it in one evening, by the time I was finished, I was planning all sorts of creative ways to murder that woman.

I mean, here's her life: Get this: NO KIDS. Even more—HER HUSBAND IS A WRITER TOO, which means, he ALREADY KNOWS his wife is half-crazy and doesn't have to learn the slow, hard way like the rest of our spouses did. They are FINANCIALLY SECURE, and do things like pick out a spot on the atlas that looks like it would be beautiful and wild-life filled. She's lived places like the Puget Sound in Washington, and Cape Cod. And every place she lives, she has like, THIS WRITING CABIN, with a little bed and a computer and printer and copy machine and coffee and popcorn, with, of course, a splendid view.

She SLEEPS TILL NOON, takes a little nature walk, writes in her cabin, has lunch with her writer husband, who never bothers her until she's ready, reads, writes some more, stays up till midnight doing her thing.

Uh huh. Right. All us writers live like that.

OK. Maybe I am just a teensy-weensy bit jealous. Right now, I'm working on the last five or six chapters of an extremely demanding book I've labored on for sixteen months, and geez Loueez, it would be nice to get my heroine out of dire danger without having to worry about whether the kids have lunch money or my husband has clean underwear. But I can handle that.

What I have a problem with is what Dillard had to say about her "Perfect Life on Earth." She said she "hates writing." Said she "wrestles with each sentence," throws out "the best of everything," doodles in the margins, even. With all this perfect life she's got, she manages to choke out, oh, maybe one or two pages a day, on a good day. Takes her five or ten years, she said, to finish one book.

("Stop! Stop!" I yelled.

"You're breakin' my heart.")

I have this sneaking suspicion that a writer like Paris Afton Bonds because she doesn't write LIT-er-a-tuuuuure. She writes (ew, yuk, gag,) COMMERCIAL fiction.

Well, I know one thing for sure, Twenty-year-old Pulitzer Prizes aside...If I ever had to go a couple of rounds with an agent, or mud-wrestle an editor, or go hand-to-hand with the Muses themselves...I know who the hell I'd want stepping over the rope and crouching in my corner.

We'd schedule the match between soccer games.

SDN Letters to the Editor

To the editor:

In reference to "Letters Policy" Sun., Oct. 29, 1989, a couple of "long-standing policies" were brought to your readers' attention. I personally feel that they have been standing so long the ink isn't dry.

I realize this is your column and as they say at the courthouse, "your sacred right" to run it any way you see fit, and I back you "110%."

Are these policies yours, Mr. Editor, or those of a representative of the hospital, your publisher? I could not tell as it was not signed. I am reluctant to try a paid ad because of the confusion it causes in your billing department. Remember how mixed up they got on the commissioners court open letter? Besides I do not have anyone to pick up the tab or any customers on whom I may pass the expense.

There is no question about it, you made a big hit with some of the county employees with your "long-standing policies." One of which you could not wait to tell me, "I guess this will shut you up."

My advice to him is he's the one who should shut up and listen because the people in Scurry County are trying to tell him something. I do not see your letters to the editor as being political. I see it as a chance for those who can't afford to pay for space to express their opinions. The subject of late has been one of interest to the majority of the people in this county.

I have subscribed to your paper for 35 years and this is the first time I ever heard people, and myself included, say, "I can't wait for the Sunday edition," and how disappointed we are when it does not include one of Mr. Dunn's letters. I think it will be a mistake if you choose to censor the opinions of the public. You just turned out the last remaining light. But as I said before, we grow better in the dark.

to be published, without charge, as long as they do not deal with an issue or candidate listed on a called election ballot.

As for the censorship charge, all letters—even those with blatantly incorrect facts—have been allowed to be published without comment. We make no apology for civic involvement in an effort to make Snyder and Scurry County a better place to live.

Sincerely,
Roy McQueen

To the editor:

We, the Borden County E.M.S., would like to take this means to thank the Snyder Police Department and the staff in the emergency room at Cogdell Memorial Hospital for their assistance on Saturday night, the 28th of October.

We came into Snyder from Gail with a very sick little eight-year-old boy and were met at Von Roeder Seed Farm by a policeman, who responded to our need without our even having to request help. We thank him, Sgt. Robert Harbin, for making our trip through Snyder so much easier. To him and the other policeman, Patrolman Shane Scott, who had traffic stopped along the way, we say "Thank You" for your invaluable (see SDN LETTERS, page 7B)

ON THE CAMPAIGN TRAIL

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

In 1987, Mylan Laboratories, Inc., a Pittsburgh-based drug firm, became fed up with delays in the Food and Drug Administration's approval of its applications. The executives at Mylan were frustrated with the FDA ritual. Once a drug patent expired, any company could manufacture and sell the product as a generic or non-name-brand. But first, the company had to obtain FDA approval.

Frustrated at what they considered to be arbitrary stalling by the FDA, Mylan's management hired private detectives to investigate employees of the FDA's generic division. The investigation hit pay dirt. Three employees admitted taking bribes from Mylan's competitors, a congressional committee is looking into the issue, and more heads will roll. In addition, two of Mylan's competitors were found to have faked test results; five others were discovered to have used improper manufacturing procedures.

Initially, Mylan asked other small drug companies to join in the complaint, only to be rebuffed. Now, Mylan is suing four competitors for at least $200 million in damages which, under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organization Act, commonly known as RICO, could be tripled if the company wins.

The drug scandal has consumers worried that generic drugs may be ineffective, faulty or hazardous. Once again, people are asking: How safe are my medicines? As doctors and pharmacists have known for decades, this is not an idle question. Concerns about the reliability of generic drugs have repeatedly surfaced in the 20 years I have been practicing. How did we get into such a pickle?

Perhaps I can partially explain this by describing, in hypothetical terms, how pharmaceutical companies operate.

Stemming from an aggressive research-and-development program, company A discovers a new drug of great potential use in treating a certain condition or disease. Company A patents the formula. After thorough testing — a process that used to take years and now takes much less time — the company obtains FDA approval to manufacture and market the substance.

Under the patent law, company A has the sole rights to produce and distribute the drug, which is carefully concocted under stringent quality control. The compound is a huge success because it is effective. Company A makes an enormous profit (much of which is plowed back into R and D for new projects), because the manufacturer charges plenty during the 17 years the medication's patent protects it from competition.

When the patent expires, generic companies B, C and D express interest in making and selling the drug. Because they are in competition with each other and with company A (the brand-name company), they reduce their prices in an attempt to capture the market.

So far so good. However, in reducing prices, companies B, C and D also reduce their profits. Enter temptation: reduce quality control and overhead to make up the shortfall. But wait. The FDA has to approve each manufacturer. The solution: pay off officials, fudge reports and produce the drug in foreign countries where manufacturing standards are poor and labor is cheap.

This is where Mylan's "gutsy gamble" to hire detectives paid off, according to reports in The New York Times. Mylan knew something wasn't kosher when its applications were repeatedly shelved in inactive status. The company took desperate action and blew the whistle. Unless I miss my guess, we haven't heard the last of this scandal.

Funny business in the pharmaceutical business isn't new. A few years ago, Italian-made tetracycline was judged below snuff and was withdrawn from the market. Later, generic digoxin, a heart stimulant, was found to vary substantially in strength depending on where it was made. Recently, generic furosemide, a diuretic, was discovered to be substandard in comparison to the brand-name product Lasix.

How can consumers protect themselves against this type of health fraud?

• Patients should purchase drugs made only by reputable companies and should insist their pharmacies carry quality products.

• Consumers should rely on doctors' judgments. Physicians often suspect which generics are safe and will steer patients away from substandard brands if they can.

• Patients should enlist the aid of their pharmacists in deciding which brands to use. Pharmacists are valuable resources; these qualified professionals are eager to help patients avoid making mistakes.

Most people buy generic drugs because they are cheaper than name brands. Insurance companies and national pharmacies often require generic-wise available. However, when it comes to complex and powerful medicines, cheaper may not be better.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been diagnosed with orthostatic hypotension. My doctor put me on Indocin, which upset my stomach and gave me severe headaches. Dexamedrine also upset my stomach, made me nervous, and I couldn't sleep. Is there anything else to try?

DEAR READER: Orthostatic hypotension is an unusual condition marked by excessively low blood pressure when a person is in an upright position.

Ordinarily, when we sit or stand, monitoring nerves in our blood vessels are stimulated to raise blood pressure against the force of gravity. This prevents the blood from rushing downward out of the brain and making us faint. In explaining this to patients, I often use a plumbing analogy: They're not getting enough steam heat to the third floor.

The most common cause of orthostatic hypotension is medicine that is used to treat hypertension; the drug may work so well that the blood pressure falls too far and "orthostatic symptoms" appear. The "cure" is simple: reduce the dose of medicine to allow the blood pressure to rise.

Orthostatic hypotension, itself a symptom not a disease, can also be caused by fluid loss (hemorrhage or excessive sweating), nerve disorders (neuropathy or spinal injury) and some degenerative afflictions (such as amyloidosis).

Treatment obviously depends on the underlying cause, which must be corrected. For example, administering fluids or blood transfusions. If the cause cannot be corrected, doctors usually manage the condition by prescribing special elastic stockings (to prevent pooling of blood in the legs), increasing dietary salt (to promote a blood pressure rise) or giving medicine (such as ephedrine) to increase the blood pressure.

Indocin works by causing salt retention by the kidneys, producing a rise in blood pressure. I'm not aware that Dexamedrine, a central nervous system stimulant, is especially helpful. If your doctor is unable to solve your problem, I suggest you ask for a consultation with a vascular specialist.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What is contained in the pull-apart kind of capsules that hold vitamins, herbs and medicines? If I take one of these capsules, I have abdominal swelling and diarrhea. Yet if I pull the capsules apart and empty the contents into water, I don't suffer any consequences. This doesn't make any sense to me.

DEAR READER: Most capsule coverings are made of gelatin, a common protein. I've never heard of anyone being allergic to gelatin but, I suppose, you could be sensitive to dyes or other compounds in the coating. Ask your pharmacist to look up the names of the companies that manufacture the various capsules you take. Then write them and request information about what goes into their gelatin coatings. This may solve your problem.

To give you more information on another cause of your symptoms, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Irritable Bowel Syndrome." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

Monday night I listened to the most beautiful music that will ever be in Snyder, Guy Lombardo and the Royal Canadians. Most of the small audience that was there was embarrassed for the low attendance.

Those who wanted to dance did so. The rest of us just enjoyed the music. Some of us went to them and apologized for the small interest and attendance.

I'm sorry most of Snyder missed such a great performance.

To the editor:

The students of Stanfield Elementary will be conducting a fund raiser Nov. 10 thru Nov. 19 to help raise money for new playground equipment at their campus. Each child will have a goal of $50.00. Students will be selling Valley Brook Farms cookies in decorative tins, candy in cute containers and a few other items in the same brochure.

These cookies are not baked till we send in our order so they are fresh from the bakery! The cookies will be great for taking to Christmas parties and giving, plus the other items are nice for giving as gifts too. All items will arrive on Dec. 4th or 5th and the students will be delivering them within the next few days.

Items to be purchased are a Lokville Playsystem, a junior physical activity center, picnic tables, trees and supplies needed to install this equipment.

The Stanfield Parent Council and teachers have sampled these cookies and they are quite tasty! Any purchase you make would be greatly appreciated since this fund raiser will be conducted by the students. This will also give the students a sense of accomplishment in knowing they helped purchase the new equipment through their hard work. Thank you.

Landry heading group seeking sports events in Dallas area

DALLAS (AP) — Former Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry will head a group of sports and business leaders working to attract sporting events to the Dallas area, city officials said.

The Dallas International Sports Commission's first objective is to secure the 1994 World Cup Soccer Competition, said Mike Jordan, chairman of the Dallas International Initiative.

Texas economy...

Zero growth said possible

DALLAS (AP) — A benchmark of the state's economic health slipped for the fourth straight month in September, prompting one economist to warn Texas is "close to zero growth."

The Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas said the state's index of leading economic indicators, a composite of nine economic measures of the state's health, fell to 99.2 in September, down 0.2 percentage points from August. The September dip is the fourth since May when the index topped 100.

"It's pretty close to not growing; we're close to zero growth," said Keith Phillips, an economist with the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas.

Phillips said four months of declines is a bad signal, "but the declines aren't real strong declines. It's kind of edged downward."

Other economists were optimistic that things could pick up in 1990.

"We're actually forecasting that overall growth in 1990 will be stronger than this year," said John Hockenjos, publisher of the economic newsletter Texas Perspectives.

Manufacturing production and retail sales have been weak, providing for much of the index's fall, but there still is strength in business services and in consumer confidence.

Court orders Grissom back to Kansas

DALLAS (AP) — Authorities escorted a murder suspect back to Kansas on Thursday to be tried on first-degree murder charges.

The 5th Court of Appeals in Dallas denied a motion Thursday that would have allowed Richard Grissom to delay an earlier court decision ordering his extradition.

Grissom was arrested July 7 in Dallas and has been held in jail on a charge filed by the Kansas Department of Corrections alleging he violated his parole.

Grissom, 28, was charged in August in Johnson County, Kan., with three counts of first-degree murder.

Officers with the Kansas Department of Corrections and detectives from Overland Park, Kan., and Lenexa Kan., flew to Dallas early Thursday to pick up Grissom. They came in a nine-seat, state-owned plane offered by Kansas Gov. Mike Hayden.

Grissom's attorney has argued that Grissom is being held unconstitutionally and that technical errors in extradition papers make them invalid.

A Dallas District Court judge and the Court of Appeals had already ruled on the case and ordered Grissom back.

He is charged with killing Christine Rusch and her Lenexa roommate, Theresa Brown, both 22, and Joan Marie Butler, 24, of Overland Park. All three have been missing since June.

Grissom also is charged in that case with aggravated kidnapping, four counts of aggravated robbery, two counts of aggravated burglary, burglary and theft.

In addition, six unrelated bad check and forgery charges have been lodged against Grissom in Johnson County.

Zachary Taylor, the 12th president of the United States, died in the White House in 1850, having served only 16 months of his term.

Retail employment in Texas declined, despite the approach of the Christmas season. There were 1.239 million people employed by Texas retailers, down 7,000 jobs from August and 20,000 jobs below the peak in June, according to seasonally adjusted employment figures.

"Retail employment has been really soft, and retail trade is kind of an indication of what demand is doing," Phillips said.

Retail sales are one of nine indicators that make up the leading index, which also includes the average number of hours worked per week, well permits, oil prices, the value of the U.S. dollar and unemployment claims.

Industrial production grew 3.85 percent in 1988, but manufacturing, once touted as the economy's bright spot, has been virtually flat in 1989. The average length of the work week, another gauge of industrial production, declined from a peak of 42.8 hours in April to 41.6 hours in September, the Federal Reserve said.

Also hurting the economy was a 5.5 percent rise in the dollar against most major currencies.

A higher dollar cuts demand for exports by boosting the cost of Texas-made goods to overseas consumers. Exports account for about one-third of manufacturing production in the state.

The number of applications to the state government for oil well permits also declined in September, to 770 in from 861.

On the positive side, business and repair services grew at a robust 6.8 percent annual rate in the third quarter. Business services such as computer and software makers have "been the leading growth area in the state," Phillips said.

Houston pitches for 1992 Demo confab

WASHINGTON (AP) — Houston leaders pitching their city for the 1992 Democratic National Convention say there's no place better than George Bush's adopted hometown for launching the party's next election battle against the Republican president.

"What better place than where George Bush votes absentee to take the battle to Bush, and to convince the American people that the Bush-Quayle politics and policies are out of step with America," Jack Carter told the committee considering bids from five cities for the 1992 convention.

Carter, chairman of the Harris County Democratic Party, said the nation's fourth-largest city was disappointed when Atlanta won the convention in 1988 over Houston.

But "we don't sit and put in Harris County, Houston, Texas" and the city started early in its bid to capture the 1992 convention, he said.

"There's a thought that coming to Houston might not make much sense. It's a big state, not a Democratic stronghold, it's George Bush's adopted home," Carter said. "Are these reasons to come to Houston? In my opinion, clearly yes."

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, the Democrat's vice presidential nominee in 1988, led a delegation of Texans touting Houston as the next convention site before the selection committee Thursday.

"In 1992, Texas will be the same kind of key battleground that it was in 1968," said Bentsen, D-Texas, recalling a rally 20 years ago at the Astrodome for Democratic presidential nominee Hubert Humphrey. "And for that reason, I can't think of a smarter way to begin the 1992 general election than to nominate our candidates in Houston."

The site selection committee was expected to decide this afternoon which of the five cities making bids for the convention would be visited before a final decision is made in April.

New Orleans and New York, considered Houston's toughest competition by Mayor Kathy Whitmire, were scheduled to make their presentations this morning. Houston, Cleveland and Detroit made their pitches Thursday.

Bet You Didn't Know...

- ...It costs $40,000 to rebuild a $13,000 car, part by part.
- ...Health care expenses rose 10% last year, double the general inflation rate.
- ...Accident victims not only get a lower percentage of claim payments when they use lawyers, but must wait twice as long to receive their settlements.

These three factors: skyrocketing cost of repairing cars, repairing people and the use of attorneys to settle claims all contribute to the increasing cost of your auto insurance.

"The 'stick-on cat' is extra!"

Mrs. Aquino: still a heroine but tough issues intruding

WASHINGTON (AP) — The adoration for Philippine President Corazon Aquino is perhaps somewhat diminished from three years ago when she received the most prestigious honor Congress ever gave a foreign leader.

Mrs. Aquino's return visit this week is far more low-key than it was then, a time when she was still able to coast on her image as symbol of modest righteousness, triumphant over the corruption and extravagance of the Marcos era.

It was a time when U.S. lawmakers were so taken with Aquino's eloquence in an appearance before Congress that they quickly lavished $200 million in extra aid on the Philippines, prompting Capitol Hill wags to call it the largest honorarium in American history.

The affection for Mrs. Aquino was — and still is — genuine but, as any diplomat knows, relations among sovereign states are based not on heartfelt sentimentality but compelling national interests.

The issue now for Americans and Filipinos is not so much whether democracy can survive — the communist insurgency seems less menacing than before — but rather what kind of relationship the two countries should have.

Can the U.S. bases in the Philippines survive the growing nationalism among Filipinos? Does the Pentagon need all those military facilities now that so many people are saying the Cold War is over?

Does a large U.S. aid program enable the Philippines to defer badly needed but politically painful reforms? Should aid be replaced by trade or is a combination of both the best approach?

Mrs. Aquino seems sensitive to the notion that there are limits to U.S. aid levels, and her visit here emphasizes trade and investment instead. The military base question was not even on her agenda with President Bush although she was meeting this afternoon with Defense Secretary Dick Cheney.

It's hard to overestimate the difficulties she faces back home. She presides over a country where 40 percent live below the poverty line, where the per capita income of $700 a year is less than a quarter of South Korea's and where servicing of the nation's $28 billion foreign debt is a continuing drain on cash assets, exceeding foreign aid from all sources combined.

But it's the base issue that is expected to dominate U.S.-Filipino relations between now and September 1991 when the U.S. leases on Subic Bay Naval Base and Clark Air Base expire.

Preliminary talks start next month.

Sensing that the welcome mat may be withdrawn, U.S. officials have begun speculating publicly about transferring the facilities elsewhere in the Pacific, mentioning such locations as Australia and Palau.

But Bush expressed confidence on Thursday that the two sides will reach an agreement that will prolong the U.S. military presence in the Philippines.

Mrs. Aquino didn't mention the subject in her arrival statement and brushed aside a reporter's question about it. Unlike three years ago, she's been playing hard to get.

Bush lauds East Germany's actions

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush, lauding East Germany's lifting of travel restrictions as a dramatic advance for freedom, is ordering "all possible assistance" to help West Germany cope with the flood of refugees from its communist sister state.

The border-opening decree by East German authorities on Thursday caught U.S. officials by surprise.

If East Germany fully implements the promise to open its borders, the president told reporters, "this (Berlin) Wall built in '61 will have very little relevance."

It was just 6½ months ago in a speech in Mainz, West Germany, that Bush added his voice to the chorus of U.S. presidents who have demanded that the Berlin Wall be torn down. He called it then a "brutal wall" that "stands as a monument to the failure of communism. It must come down!"

Former President Reagan said on the ABC television show "Prime Time Live" that "If the wall isn't torn down immediately, at least they could keep the gates open."

East Germany said it was opening its borders to the rest of the world and that its citizens may travel or emigrate anywhere, including through the 28-year-old Berlin Wall, erected at the height of the Cold War between East and West.

"It's a dramatic happening for East Germany and, of course, for freedom," Bush said.

The White House announced Thursday night that Bush had ordered U.S. military units and U.S. Ambassador Vernon Walters to give "all possible assistance" to the West German government struggling to cope with the flood of refugees. The Pentagon said it was making available housing for 980 people in three off-base installations.

Other U.S. leaders reacted with a mixture of joy and surprise.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell of Maine called it a "symbolic destruction of the Berlin Wall" and urged East Germany to "take the final step and tear that wall down."

"The events of today are truly remarkable," said Vice President Dan Quayle.

Bush, with Secretary of State James A. Baker III at his side and a map of Germany open on his desk, said, "We salute the people in East Germany, whose aspirations for freedom seem to be a little more down the road now."

Bush seemed subdued in an exchange with reporters summoned to the Oval Office to hear his reaction to the latest startling news from the East Bloc.

"I am not an emotional kind of guy," he explained. But he added, "I feel very good about it."

Bush said he was prepared to give "maximum help" to Bonn to cope with refugees. Some 200,000 East Germans have fled their country this year through Hungary, Czechoslovakia or other routes West.

But recalling his advice last spring to Poles to stay in their homeland to work for democratic reforms, Bush said:

"These are Germans. And Germans love their country. And at some point, I think a lot of Germans who have felt pent-in and unable to move are going to say, 'Look, we can move but wouldn't it be better to participate in the reforms that are taking place in our own country?'"

Bush said that when he meets with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev next month in the Mediterranean, he would discuss additional steps the United States might take to help spur change in East Europe — including possible restoration of long-denied U.S. trade benefits.

Sounding a note of caution, Bush said, "I don't think any single event is the end of what you might call the Iron Curtain, but clearly this is a long way from the harshest Iron Curtain days."

The Biafran War erupted July 6, 1967, as Nigerian forces invaded an eastern region which had declared its independence May 30. The war, which lasted two-and-a-half years, claimed some 600,000 lives.

Women making shall for first lady of Russia

VENICE, Italy (AP) — About 80 women on a tiny island in the Venetian lagoon are busy stitching lace for a shawl to be given to Soviet first lady Raisa Gorbachev.

Italian Premier Giulio Andreotti personally selected the model and decorative pattern for the shawl by the Burano lace makers that he will present during Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's Nov. 29 visit to Italy. It has not yet been disclosed whether Mrs. Gorbachev will accompany her husband.

Gorbachev will meet with Andreotti in Rome and meet Dec. 1 with Pope John Paul II, the first meeting between the leaders of the Kremlin and the Vatican.

Unusual skin graft may help

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Doctors, performing a unique grafting procedure, transplanted patches of a woman's skin onto her 5-year-old son, who suffers from a rare disorder.

"It's a situation where the skin does not adhere normally," Dr. Ronald Grimwood Jr. said of Jamie Stafford as the boy was released Thursday from Wilford Hall Air Force Medical Center.

Jamie suffers from a form of epidermolysis bullosa, a potentially fatal genetic condition medical experts believe afflicts only 106 children.

"With just minor trauma anywhere on his body, he'll develop a blister and the skin will actually then shear away from the second layer of skin," Grimwood said.

"There has never been a graft from a mother to a son or daughter that has this particular problem," Grimwood said.

As doctors talked about him, the blond-headed kindergartener quietly played with toys in his mother's lap. Jamie, though a bit bashful in front of strangers, was happy to talk about the meal his grandmother was preparing for him his first night home.

"Steak with bacon wrapped around it. I like that," he said, smiling.

J.D. Salinger's novel, "The Catcher in the Rye," was published in 1951.

SNYDER CABLEVISION SUPPORTS SENIOR CENTER THROUGH NEW CUSTOMERS

Snyder Cablevision is donating $20 to the work of the Snyder Senior Citizen Center for everyone in the community who signs on for cable TV during the month of November. There will be no charge for basic installation during this time.

Joyce Buchanan of Snyder cablevision recently talked about the reasoning behind the program and what her cable television company is trying to accomplish throughout "Good Neighbor Month," as it is being called by Snyder Cablevision.

"With every new subscriber we take on, we become a more important part of this community," Joyce explained. "Providing great entertainment value just isn't enough any more. In order to continue our growth toward universal acceptance in the community, we've got to start giving back to all our good neighbors. We looked around, and we couldn't find a better good neighbor than the Senior Center."

This month especially, Snyder Cablevision's choice of beneficiaries is a good one indeed. The Snyder Senior Citizen Center is getting ready for its annual Thanksgiving Day meal to be held on Tuesday, November 21. Hundreds of individuals will be served a hearty turkey dinner and a generous helping of hospitality. An additional 50 meals will be delivered to those folks who can not make it into the Senior Center for the Thanksgiving celebration.

Snyder Cablevision has a pre-holiday treat planned for the Senior Center. In cooperation with American Movie Classics and Snyder Cablevision, the Snyder Senior Citizen Center is opening its doors for a special viewing of the John Ford movie "My Darling Clementine," on Wednesday, November 22. Coordinators of the program at the Senior Center, Jerry Baird and Nancy LaRoux, expect a great turnout on both Wednesday and Thanksgiving day.

"We're looking forward to being a good neighbor to a lot of folks this year," said Jerry Baird. "And we certainly appreciate the boost we're getting this month from the cable company and all of our friends and neighbors in Snyder."

Besides offering free installation of basic cable, Snyder Cablevision has added an extra good neighbor incentive to their "Good Neighbor Month" fund raising drive. They are giving every new subscriber a gift certificate to pass along to a neighbor. The gift certificate is good for 30 days of HBO, Cinemax or The Disney Channel delivered to the selected neighbor's home without charge. "We think it's a nice way to spread the good neighbor spirit," said Snyder Cablevision's Joyce Buchanan, "and we're hoping it lasts well beyond our "Good Neighbor Month." Questions can be directed to the cable company at 573-2327.

Alzheimer's disease more widespread than previously believed, study says

CHICAGO (AP) — Four million Americans may have Alzheimer's disease — 1.5 million more than had been thought — according to findings that suggest the disease and its treatment will "weigh heavily on our future."

A study of 3,623 elderly people in Boston indicates one in 10 of them probably had Alzheimer's disease, which robs people of their memories and their ability to function, researchers said.

The rates of Alzheimer's grew rapidly higher with advancing age, as nearly half of those older than 85 suffer from it, said the researchers, led by Dr. Denis A. Evans of Harvard Medical School.

Based on the study's results, the National Institute on Aging revised its estimate of how many people in the United States suffer from Alzheimer's from 2.5 million to 4 million.

The institute issued a statement saying the study is unique because it involved large numbers of people, including those living in their own homes or with their families, and it included people with few or no memory problems.

"As a result, these estimates might lay the groundwork for developing the most accurate picture of Alzheimer's disease in the U.S. population to date," said Dr. Zaven Khachaturian, NIA associate director for neuroscience and neuropsychology of aging.

Results of the study, partly financed by NIA, were published in today's Journal of the American Medical Association.

"People that I see do not realize that this is an extremely prevalent condition, that it is an epidemic that is going to weigh heavily on our future," said Dr. Bruce Naughton, geriatrics chief at Northwestern University Medical School in Chicago.

The U.S. Census Bureau has estimated that from 1980 to the year 2000, the number of people 90 years old and up will increase 236 percent, to 1.9 million, Naughton said.

The Harvard study consisted of giving brief memory tests to 81 percent of the 65-and-older population of east Boston beginning in 1982, and conducting more extensive psychiatric and laboratory testing on 467 of the individuals.

Of people 65 to 74 years old, 3 percent had "probable" Alzheimer's disease, compared with 18.7 percent of those 75 to 84 years old and 47.2 percent of those over 85, said the study.

"Everyone in our study, whether they had Alzheimer's disease or not, was living in the community, not in institutions," Evans noted in a telephone interview. "They may have had impaired function, far from perfect function, but they were able to live in the community."

Victims of Alzheimer's disease often end up in nursing homes, but Evans called for finding ways to allow Alzheimer's sufferers to stay in the community with their families.

Alzheimer's disease is a degenerative illness of the brain and nervous system with no known cause, no cure and no effective treatment, save medication to treat the depression that sometimes accompanies it.

The disease usually is fatal within 5 to 10 years, according to Naughton, who said its first symptom is typically memory loss, followed by speech difficulties and a tendency to lose one's way even in familiar surroundings.

Guard accused of false statements

MISSION, Texas (AP) — A misdemeanor charge of making a false crime report has been filed against a security guard who reported that three men tried to set him on fire while he was guarding the house of a soft-drink truck driver involved in a school bus accident that killed 21 students.

"From what we were able to gather, it just doesn't appear that this happened," Cesar Cito Luna, chief or criminal investigations for the Hidalgo County Sheriff's Department, said today. "It just doesn't pan out."

Alexander Murillo of Pharr, the security guard, was arrested Thursday on a Class B misdemeanor charge of making a false statement to a peace officer, Luna said.

Murillo was released Thursday on a $1,500 personal recognizance bond after arraignment before Justice of the Peace Juan Rosel in Mission, Luna said.

On Oct. 30, he reported that three armed men doused him with gasoline and tried to set him on fire about 2:30 a.m. as he was guarding the Mission-area residence of Ruben Perez. Murillo reported he was able to escape after his assailants' matches failed to light.

Luna declined to speculate on the possible motive for allegedly fabricating the attack story.

Perez, 25, was driver of the Coca-Cola truck that crashed into a Mission school district bus on Sept. 21, knocking the school bus into a flooded roadside pit in the town of Alton. Twenty-one students died from the accident.

Company officials said they hired the guard at the request of Perez' family.
