A year of supporting disabled veterans in Big Spring

By AMANDA DUFORAT

Mission: To provide support for local veterans. The local D.A.V. (Disabled American Veterans) Chapter 47 of Big Spring can say that the mission was accomplished in 2021. The organization gained a larger support system in the community this past year, and in turn was able to provide more assistance to local veterans. "Every dollar that we raise goes to support veterans in the Howard County community. Whether it be providing assistance with rent, utilities, food, and other daily necessities, or doing what we can to ensure that no veteran is forgotten throughout the year, but especially at the holidays," Mike Tarpley, Vice Commander for the Big Spring Chapter of the D.A.V., said. Last year began with assistance being provided for local veterans, as many were still trying to stay afloat from the impact that Covid had on the economy, finances, and employment. Before the first quarter was over, two local businesses stepped up and arranged fundraisers for the D.A.V. Back in Motion Chiropractic Services organized a barbecue luncheon, while Star Chrysler Dodge held their first-ever cornhole tournament. The summer of 2021 also brought a new fundraiser event: KBEST Media's Adrienne Green led a comedy night with the Veterans of Comedy. "The support that we received from the community in 2021 was a blessing. We are grateful and truly blessed by the businesses who stepped up and showed their support," Ed Meiser, chapter commander of the D.A.V. of Big Spring, said. "It is amazing to see what can be done when a community comes together in support of our veterans."

In addition to the rental assistance and utilities the DAV provides throughout each year, this year's annual Dove Hunt honored four veterans for the ninth year - two that served in Vietnam and two who served in Iraq. The Memorial at the Plaza took place for the 14th year, recognizing those Howard County veterans who have sacrificed their lives since the attacks of September 11, 2001.

Big Spring redistricting hearing Tuesday
Second hearing set Jan. 25

By ROGER CLINE
 Herald Staff Writer

When the U.S. Census comes out every 10 years, local governments are required to ensure that their districts' populations are balanced so that citizens' government representation is roughly equal. Along with other local government bodies, the City of Big Spring is currently going through that process, and will hold a pair of public hearings related to redistricting. The meetings will be held in the City Council Chambers, 307 E. Fourth Street, Jan. 11 and Jan 25, at 5:30 p.m. Members of the public are encouraged to attend and offer their opinions at the two hearings.

A press release issued by the city explains, "According to the 2020 United States Census data, the City's single-member districts from which Council members are elected are not of sufficiently equal population and must be redrawn to comply with the 'one-person, one-vote' principle established by the United States Constitution and the Voting Rights Act of 1965, as amended in 1975 and 1982," the release says. "The City Council is considering new boundaries for its single-member districts. The purpose of the public hearing is to discuss potential options for the drawing of those new boundaries in compliance with the law for the Project."

Criteria for redistricting established by the City Council at its Dec. 8 special meeting include:

1. The plan should ensure that all applicable provisions of the U.S. and Texas Constitutions, the Voting Rights Act, and the Texas Election Code are honored.
2. The plan should be drawn in such a manner that the maximum deviation from an ideal size, as determined by

"We have several families, local organizations, area businesses and individuals who have been loyal supporters of these events. It is through their support that we are able to continue to honor veterans with a weekend of making memories and healing," Tarpley said. "This is an idea that started after I attended a deer hunt in Eden, Texas. For many veterans the dove hunt weekend provides an opportunity to heal wounds that they haven't been able to heal emotionally."

Tarpley continued, "For three days, veterans see the outpouring of appreciation that Big Spring has to offer, and while it may not be near enough to truly say 'Thank You' for their sacrifice, it is a reflection of the heart of Big Spring. We (the local D.A.V.) are grateful for the continued support to make this happen on an annual basis. If you have not experienced a Dove Hunt closing ceremony I highly recommend attending the 2022 ceremony."

A new outreach that will continue to benefit the future impact veterans have on the community launched with the scholarship partnership at Howard College. In 2021, the local D.A.V. provided three $1,000 scholarships to veterans, children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren of veterans. The program seems to be making a valuable impact on future generations and will continue to grow with five $1,000 scholarships to be awarded in 2022.

"Our veterans sacrificed for their country, and through this scholarship program, we are able to give back to the future through the legacy that the veterans have made. Veterans and their children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren will be able to benefit from this scholarship program and hopefully receive a little financial relief as they equip themselves for the impact they will have on their community," Tarpley said.

As the holidays took place throughout the year, local organizations supported the D.A.V. in providing special meals for veterans housed in local facilities. Al's and Son BBQ provided meals for the holiday season, Dove Hunt, and other special veteran recognitions throughout the year. This past year also included a special holiday meal of rib-eye steaks for the local veterans at Lamun-Lusk-Sanchez Texas State Veterans Home.

"Our loyal supporters make a huge impact in the continued support of our veterans. Covid caused our annual fundraiser to come to a halt - the Forget Me Not Drive - but the community has truly stepped up and ensured our veterans are not forgotten," Tarpley said.

Tarpley continued, "As we step into a new year, we are already gearing up for our annual events, and looking at more ways to reach out local veterans on a daily basis. In addition to providing assistance, we want to make sure our veterans are aware of the resources available to them in the Big Spring community. We appreciate all the support that we receive, and look forward to another year of partnering with Big Spring."

Veterans wanting to find out more about the D.A.V. Big Spring Chapter can reach out to Ed Meiser or Mike Tarpley. The organization meets the third Monday of the month at 6:30 p.m. for those wanting to become a member.

dividing the total population of the city by the number of single member districts that compose the City Council of the City of Big Spring be not more than plus or minus five (5%) percent for any individual single member district, or a total top to bottom deviation (percentage of deviation below and above the ideal size) between the most populated district and the least populated district by not more than a maximum deviation of no more than ten (10%) percent.

3. The plan should address minority representation, and if at all possible, in conformity with constitutional standards, avoid retrogression in the percentage of population and voting age demographics consistent with existing minority representation.

4. The plan should, avoid fragmentation and preserve minority communities of interest to the maximum extent possible. These communities of interest should be recognized and retained intact where possible. Only when the overall minority population of the county is sufficiently large to require more than one minority district should minority populations be divided, and only then to the least degree possible.

5. The plan should not, however, attempt to unreasonably join geographically remote minority populations into a single precinct unless there are strong and genuine connections between these communities as reflected by common schools, churches, or cultural ties. For example, minority populations in two separate neighborhoods, located miles apart, may not have sufficient links or common political cohesion to justify joining these two minority population centers into a single electoral group. Particularly when dealing with distinct minority groups, such as Black and Hispanic populations, a general assumption that separate minority populations will vote in a "block" may be unsupported in fact.

6. The plan should seek compact and contiguous political boundaries. Physical boundaries of cultural or economic significance, such as rivers, multi-laned control access highways or turnpikes, which tend to divide populations in fundamental ways, should be recognized and where possible, should only serve as necessary to achieve recognized objectives. Communities of interest should be retained intact where possible. To the maximum extent possible, clearly recognized boundaries, such as streets and highways, should be used to facilitate ease of voter identification of boundaries, as well as election administration.

7. Where possible, well-recognized and long used election precinct boundaries should be retained intact (within the limitations imposed by state and federal law) or with as little alteration as possible.

8. Election precincts in the plan should be sized in conformity with state law. For example, in counties that use traditional, hand counted paper ballots, no election precinct may contain more than 2000 voters. In jurisdictions with voting systems that allow for automated ballot counting, this number may be increased to as many as 5000 registered voters.

9. The plan should afford incumbent office holders with the assurance that they will continue to represent the majority of individuals who elected these incumbents, and all incumbents' residential locations should be retained in their reformed precincts to ensure continuity in leadership during the remaining term of incumbents to the extent possible.

10. The plan should address fundamental and necessary governmental functions, and to the extent possible, ensure that these functions are enhanced rather than impaired. Election administration should not be unduly complex as a result of election boundaries.

11. The plan should attempt to locate polling places in convenient, well-known locations that are accessible to disabled voters to the maximum extent possible. Public buildings should be utilized to the maximum extent possible as polling places. Where necessary, buildings routinely open to the public, such as churches, retail businesses, or private buildings dedicated to public activities, can be used as polling places.

12. If the reduction of polling places can be accomplished, without impinging upon voter convenience and minority voting rights, such reductions can be considered.

13. Citizen input should be encouraged, but in order to minimize cost and to have sufficient information to evaluate such proposals fairly, the City will only consider proposed plans submitted to the City for evaluation by individual citizens or groups if the proposed plan is submitted to the City in a commonly used GIS format, such as .SHP, .MAP, .KLM, .GPX, .MOB, along with maps and demographic data sufficient to address voting rights concerns.

Those with questions regarding the public hearings can contact City Secretary Tami Davis at City Hall, 310 S. Nolan, or by phone at 432-264-2513.

Washington to reveal new name on Feb. 2; won't be RedWolves

By STEPHEN WHYNO

AP Sports Writer

Washington's NFL team announced Tuesday it will unveil its new name on Feb. 2 and that it will not be the Wolves or RedWolves.

Commanders, Admirals, Armada, Brigade, Sentinels, Defenders, Red Hogs, Promada and the status quo "Washington Football Team" were among the other finalists.

"We are on the brink of starting a new chapter, but our history, our legacy cannot be lost along the way," team president Jason Wright said in an episode of the team-produced show "Making the Brand." "Now, more than ever, it's important that we stay connected to our roots. We understand the importance of choosing a meaningful name: one that will anchor the team for the next 90 years and beyond."

Wright said the decision was made not to go with Wolves or RedWolves because of trademarks held by other organizations. Those possibilities were popular among Washington fans.

The new helmets and uniforms will feature the franchise's signature burgundy-and-gold colors, with three stars on the collar and stripes on the shoulders of otherwise plain jerseys. In a "Making the Brand" clip showing him getting a look at one of the helmets, coach Ron Rivera said: "I love this. Right on. I think the look's going to be hot."

A trailer teasing the reveal included a "W" logo making an appearance.

The video featured the messages: "Hail to the greats that laid the foundation for our legacy," "Hail to the fans we consider family," "We are and always have been Washington," "We will fight for our community" and "Together we will define our future."

Photos of franchise greats were mixed in with current players meeting with military personnel and fans.

The organization dropped its old name in July 2020 after decades of complaints that it was racist toward Native Americans and recent pressure from team sponsors. The decision was made to be known as the Washington Football Team that season, which stuck around for 2021 while the front office went through a lengthy rebranding process.

"Our journey to a new identity is a marathon, not a sprint," Wright said. "To get it right, we had to take every step of the process seriously, and the destination is a sum of all those parts."

Washington was the first team in the four major North American professional sports leagues to move away from Native American imagery amid a national reckoning on race. Cleveland in Major League Baseball followed suit, adopting the new name Guardians that is now in effect after settling a lawsuit with a roller derby team by the same name.

MLB's Atlanta Braves and the NHL's Chicago Blackhawks have defended keeping their names.

Wright made it clear during the rebranding process that Washington would not use any sort of Native American imagery moving forward. He, Rivera and others have made references to wanting to honor the once-storied franchise's tradition, which includes three Super Bowl championships.

"I just think the heritage and the history of our team is what's so important, and, as fans, I think we're going to rally around that team," Hall of Fame coach Joe Gibbs said. "I'd say probably what's more important about naming the team, it's trying to bring everybody together. ... That's the one thing that we've got going for ourselves is the loyalty that we have for that team."

Washington has not had a lot going on or off the field in recent years. The league fined the team $10 million after an investigation into workplace conduct, owner Dan Snyder squabbled with minority partners before buying out their shares, the front office took criticism this season for botching late safety Sean Taylor's jersey retirement and over the past 15 years the team has not won a playoff game.

NFL's 2nd season of COVID just as trying as 1st, maybe more

By SCHUYLER DIXON

AP Pro Football Writer

The NFL worked around COVID-19 with pauses and postponements during a 2020 season that figured to be the worst in dealing with the virus.

Now the league — and its teams, coaches and players — are just working through coronavirus concerns in 2021, even with positive tests skyrocketing compared to late in the season a year ago.

Las Vegas and the Los Angeles Chargers are set for a playoffs-or-bust finale to the first 17-game regular season on Sunday. Masks and large meeting rooms — even virtual position-group gatherings — are as much a part of game plans as Xs and Os for those and other teams on the playoff bubble. Same for the teams already in.

"I'm worried about COVID just like the rest of the league is," said Dallas coach Mike McCarthy, whose team clinched the NFC East in Week 16. "It's just another variable in our league to be successful. The experience from last year is definitely beneficial. We'll do the best we can with it."

The Philadelphia Eagles are relieved they wrapped up a postseason berth over the weekend because 12 more players landed on the COVID-19 reserve list Monday, including defensive tackle Fletcher Cox and tight end Dallas Goedert.

The league and players' union agreed to ease return-to-play guidelines as the focus shifted from isolating infected players to encouraging vaccine booster shots as the best way to deal with the highly contagious omicron variant.

There were nearly 600 confirmed positive COVID-19 cases among players and league personnel from Dec. 12 to 25 compared to about 100 from almost the same timeframe in 2020, according to NFL figures.

But the league has only postponed three games, all in Week 15 when two games were moved to Tuesday.

One of the postponements involved Cleveland after Baker Mayfield tested positive as part of an outbreak for the Browns, and the frustrated quarterback lashed out on Twitter as the league was negotiating possible changes to testing protocols.

The game was pushed back two days, and the Browns lost to Las Vegas 16-14. They were eliminated from the playoffs before losing at Pittsburgh on Monday night.

As the numbers escalated, the 10-day quarantine was reduced to five for players who test positive but aren't showing symptoms. The federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention adopted similar guidelines about the same time.

"We wanted to go where the science was going, and I will say that that five-day period sort of mirrors the data we have been seeing in our own NFL testing data throughout the year," Dr. Allen Sills, the NFL's chief medical officer, told the NFL Network. "So, it really wasn't about player availability or roster numbers. It was, 'What is the science telling us?'"

The changes helped the unvaccinated Carson Wentz of Indianapolis avoid becoming the latest starting quarterback to miss a game. The Colts lost to the Raiders anyway, and need a Week 18 victory over two-win Jacksonville to make the playoffs.

Kirk Cousins, also unvaccinated, and Minnesota weren't so lucky. He was out against Green Bay on Sunday, and the Vikings never had much of a chance in a last-gasp effort to keep their postseason hopes alive, losing 37-10.

Baltimore needs a victory over Pittsburgh this week to reach the playoffs, and the Steelers can stay alive with a win. New Orleans lost to Miami two weeks ago after a COVID-19 outbreak decimated the roster. Still, the Saints can advance if they beat Atlanta and San Francisco loses to the Los Angeles Rams.

"I think the players and staff here handled a lot of challenging things not always perfectly, but we have managed to keep our head above water, keep grinding, and keep fighting," said Saints coach Sean Payton, whose team had another outbreak early in the season while also displaced because of damage in New Orleans from Hurricane Ida.

"You're just looking at the number one goal, outside of winning the division, is making it to the postseason. We have the opportunity to do that this weekend. You just want to find a way to get into the tournament."

NFL players are traditionally off on Friday nights for Sunday games, and the most recent one fell on New Year's Eve. It's safe to say that was a topic of conversation in locker rooms.

"I don't think many guys are partying right now," Dallas quarterback Dak Prescott said. "Now that you're reminding me, there may be a young guy or two that may have the inkling to do that. So we'll have to just make sure that everybody understands where we are in this season, where we're trying to go, what the important things are right now."

Tampa Bay won last season's Super Bowl in its home stadium with a pandemic-limited crowd of 25,000. While there hasn't been an indication of reducing capacity for the first Super Bowl in 70,000-seat SoFi Stadium in Inglewood, California, on Feb. 13, the competing teams won't arrive until late in the week just as they did last year in Florida.

The NFL also has the traditional extra week built into the playoff schedule, between the conference championship games and Super Bowl. There wasn't a need to adjust during the playoffs last season, but the positive cases all but disappeared as the postseason progressed.

Plenty of the player absences this season, particularly in December, have been late in the week, leaving a feeling of randomness as to whether teams will be missing star players. The anxiety will grow along with the stakes.

"To say that I'm not concerned wouldn't be accurate," Rams coach Sean McVay said last month as his team dealt with an outbreak. "I think you want to find out a little bit more because you want to understand, just looking at the landscape of the league, this was as bad as the outbreak has gotten."

"And the hard thing is for some of these guys — and I don't want to get into the specifics just out of respect for the individuals — but for some of them, there's no symptoms," said McVay, whose team has qualified for the playoffs and can win the NFC West with a win over the 49ers or an Arizona loss to Seattle. "They feel great and that's what's unfortunate."

The rules have been changing to try to adapt.

Jalen Hurts asks Washington for response to railing collapse

PHILADELPHIA — Jalen Hurts is asking the Washington Football Team to take action after narrowly escaping harm when fans fell onto the field because a railing in the corner of FedEx Field gave way as the Philadelphia Eagles' quarterback was walking into the tunnel after Sunday's game.

Hurts avoided the railing and calmly helped some fans to their feet. Mark Tenally, a photo runner for The Associated Press who was standing under the railing, was injured and attended to by medical personnel.

The team said in a statement: "To our knowledge, everyone involved was offered onsite medical evaluation and left the stadium of their own accord. We're very glad no one appears to have been seriously injured. The safety of our fans and guests is of the utmost importance and we are looking into what occurred."

Hurts sent a letter to the NFL and the team, saying: "I am writing to inquire what follow-up action is being considered."

"I tried to handle the situation with a lot of poise and show compassion for the people that fell down, really, but it could've been so much worse," Hurts said Tuesday. "It didn't hit me until after the fact, having time to reflect on it and think about it, so I just wanted to see what could be done to make sure it doesn't happen again. That's all I really care about it."

That's a very tragic incident and it could've been much, much worse but I don't want it to happen again."
