Indians end football season of 2012

INDIAN EXTRA KICK-Haskell Indian #5 Gabriel Torres blocks while #12 Brett Shelton steadies the ball for #54 Daniel Contreas to kick the extra point during last Friday's game against the Winters Blizzards. The Indians ended their season with a tough fought 21-20 loss to the Blizzards.

The Haskell Indians ended the 2012 football season with a 21-20 loss to the Winters Blizzards last Friday night.

Indian quarterback Brett Shelton threw three touchdown passes, one each to, Henry Smith, Warren Flye and Ryan Markey.

Indian Coach Grady Benton remarked, "I'm proud of how my kids finished the season. Kids with less character would not have been able to endure what this team had to. This team was two plays away from being in the playoffs. Unfortunately, we didn't get it done but it was not from a lack of effort."

Winters defeated the seventh grade 14-12. The Haskell eighth grade won 42-0. The JV Indians defeated Winters 34-0.

The varsity Indians have ended their season, but the junior high teams will travel to Eastland for their final game of the season Thurs., Nov. 8 at 5 p.m.

Robertson to head Appraisal District

by Caron Yates

Although paying taxes is usually not high on the list of things we find pleasant to do, it is something we must do for the greater good.

The Haskell County Appraisal District, which was established in 1980 as a result of state mandated legislation, serves to ensure fairness, equality and market values for all taxpayers.

Wanda Hester, the Chief Appraiser for Haskell County the past three years, will be retiring at the end of December, and the governing board of directors for the appraisal district has hired Leah Robertson as the new Chief Appraiser.

Robertson, who was raised in Winnsboro, began her career in Upsure County. Starting off as a file clerk, she has worked in every aspect of the tax business.

Her educational training began with a Computer Science degree from Draughon Technical College in Longview. To be eligible for her current position, she had to obtain certification as a Registered Professional Appraiser or RPA. This was done primarily through many hours of intense classes and testing mostly offered through the Comptroller's office.

Robertson brings not only knowledge and training, but also fifteen years of experience to the local appraisal district. After nine years with Upsure County, she worked in the Panola County Appraisal District for six years.

She says she has been amazed at the friendliness of the people of this area, which has made the move so much easier. The board of directors have also been very supportive and helpful.

Robertson's husband Randy, who works for Walmart Corp., was able to transfer to the Stamford store. They have two grown daughters, Kayla and Angela, and are grandparents to Paige and Payton.

She enjoys reading, bible study, spending time with her family and working. She is also civic minded and looks forward to becoming involved in some of the civic organizations in town.

Robertson says most of the upcoming changes for the office will be internal changes, due to adjustments in law made by the Texas legislature. They are bound by the guidelines of the Texas Property Tax Code. They are also required to conduct an in-depth audit and a Property Value Study alternately every other year.

The appraisal district also serves as the collection office for all the taxing entities of Haskell County.

Five personnel are employed by the appraisal district. In order to make the transition as seamless as possible for the tax office and taxpayers, Hester and Jamie Weaver, who is also retiring, have agreed to continue working on a part time basis for a while. Melanie Grindstaff continues to work in the office as well.

While you may not enjoy paying taxes, you will enjoy meeting and visiting with Robertson and her staff. Of course they must work within the tax guidelines, but they do encourage anyone with concerns relating to property taxes to come by the office and visit with them.

TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

State Capital

HIGHLIGHTS By Ed Sterling

Officials say women's health program is ready

AUSTIN—Dr. Kyle Janek, chief of the state Health and Human Services agency, and Gov. Rick Perry on Oct. 31 announced a new state-funded Texas Women's Health Program is ready to step in and deliver services to low-income women "if Washington cuts off funding to the Medicaid program."

"We've got the state program ready to stand up at any time, and that transition would be seamless for patients and their doctors," Janek said.

Since 2007, the program has been funded primarily with federal Medicaid dollars. The state plans to reject billions in Medicaid dollars in order to cut off funding to organizations affiliated with abortion providers in accordance with a state law passed in 2011.

Perry said that any lawsuit filed to challenge the state's version of the women's health program would "kill the program, and would be responsible for denying these important health services to the low-income women of Texas."

Meanwhile, a temporary injunction put in effect by an Austin state district court on Oct. 26 prevents the state from following through on its "affiliate ban rule" until Nov. 8, when oral arguments in a case brought by Planned Parenthood will be heard.

Planned Parenthood called the injunction "a small victory for the approximately 50,000 Texas women who rely on Planned Parenthood for care through the Women's Health Program, which includes lifesaving breast and cervical cancer screenings, birth control, and testing for sexually transmitted infections."

Windstorm concerns aired

Hurricane Sandy's recent ravage of the eastern seaboard reminds Texans of Hurricanes Rita, Katrina, Dolly, Ike, Alicia and others. Before and after mayhem hits, questions over who pays and who is responsible for what inevitably arise.

On Nov. 1, the Joint Committee on Oversight Board of Windstorm Insurance met at the Capitol, hearing testimony from the Texas Windstorm Insurance Association ("TWIA"), the Texas Public Finance Authority, the Texas Department of Insurance and the State Auditor's Office.

A few of many topics addressed were TWIA's reserve fund, high administration costs, bookkeeping issues, the danger storms pose to coastal counties, slowness and other problems with recovery efforts, and how some coastal property owners struggle to pay high premiums.

TWIA was established by legislative mandate to provide wind and hail insurance for Texas Gulf Coast property owners in the event of catastrophic loss. "We provide 'basic' coverage unavailable in traditional markets for consumers who might otherwise be left uninsured," TWIA's literature states.

Drought proclamation continues

Gov. Perry on Nov. 2 renewed his July 5, 2011, proclamation certifying that exceptional drought conditions pose a threat of imminent disaster in specified counties in Texas.

The renewed proclamation, good for 30 days, applies to 121 of the state's 254 counties.

Disaster relief to counties with population under 200,000 and cities under 50,000 that have suffered from severe drought and wildfire may come in the form of federal aid through the Community Development Block Grant Program.

For example, on Oct. 31, Texas Agriculture Commissioner Todd Staples announced the award of $1.4 million in federal disaster relief grants to governmental bodies that applied and met the criteria: Bastrop County and the cities of Florence, Llano and Seymour.

Manufacturing panel forms

House Speaker Joe Straus on Oct. 22 created the Interim Committee on Manufacturing, a panel of 15 state House members tasked with recommending ways the Legislature can strengthen the manufacturing sector in Texas.

Straus said manufacturing is a $192 billion industry in Texas, accounting for 15 percent of the gross state product, adding that more than 800,000 Texans work in manufacturing.

Straus appointed Rep. Jim Murphy, R-Houston, as chair of the committee and Rep. Eddie Rodriguez, D-Austin, as vice chair.

TEA calls for applicants

Texas Education Agency last week posted notice that it is seeking qualified attorneys to act as independent hearing examiners in local school district employment hearings.

Examiners preside over hearings involving nonrenewal or termination of educator employment contracts and issue recommendations for a school district's board of trustees to consider. Deadline for filing application is 5 p.m. Dec. 3.

Perry welcomes F1 racing

On Nov. 1, the governor participated in a public relations event to promote Formula 1 Grand Prix automobile racing at the Circuit of the Americas track near Austin, where racing events will take place Nov. 16-18.

Ask the Mayor

By John Gannaway, Mayor of the City of Haskell

By the time you read this, I hope that the votes have been counted and we know who will be our President for the next four years. I hope we don't have to go through multiple recounts, hanging chads, faulty voting machines—just hope all goes well and we have a clear winner. That means the campaigning will be over and thank goodness for that. It would be so nice if candidates for the office of President were only allowed to campaign for three months and serve for only one term of six years. It would save a whole lot of money and more time could be spent performing the duties of President of these United States. This is my humble but correct opinion and I know lots of you out there are in full agreement.

Went to Lubbock on Sunday to celebrate our son's 36th birthday. He is currently working on his MS degree in Anthropology at Texas Tech and is employed by the Texas Tech Museum. However, if his chosen profession does not work out for some reason, he could always be employed as a chef because he loves to cook and is very good at it. I don't spend much time thinking about my age until I realize we have a daughter who is 43 and a son 36—then I begin to realize I'm no 'spring chicken.' I've often been told that age is just a state of mind

("if you don't mind; it don't matter") which is probably true until I attempt some sort of manual labor. No, it is more than just a state of mind.

While in Lubbock we stopped by to visit with JoAnn Dulaney who recently moved to The Sherick. This is no old age home or assisted living project. It is a beautifully landscaped home for "distinguished women." They have a beautiful "Gone With The Wind" collection of plates and memorabilia that our daughter would covet. JoAnn has already attacked their library straightening out books, etc. so a job was waiting for her and a bunch of gracious, friendly ladies as well.

We left Lubbock about 5:30 Sunday afternoon and did our best to avoid meeting and greeting a deer or a hog and we were successful. One thing that surprised me on this trip home was how many drivers do not dim their headlights. It is not only dangerous but it is also just plain rude and inconsiderate. I was tempted several times to flash my lights on bright as they approached but I remembered a story told by the late Coach Dick Gaines—the only thing worse than one blind driver is two.

Spent the majority of Saturday afternoon watching the young men and women who were involved in the Haskell Flag Football League display their talents. We have some young folks with strong arms, good hands and flying feet. They displayed much more talent and discipline than I had imagined. These young folks, their parents, the coaches, the sponsors and even the referees—all of these fine people are to be commended for helping with an excellent program. The cheerleaders were doing an excellent job of getting the crowd involved in the games. And thanks to all who came out and watched them in action on Saturday afternoon—I know they were appreciative of our support.

Last Wednesday I spent most of the day in the court room in the courthouse as an interested observer. It was interesting to observe our judicial system at work. I had the opportunity to visit with a Dallas police officer and a Texas Ranger. I asked the Ranger what kind of reputation our court system in Haskell enjoyed—his response was 'it's excellent' and that is good news. He was very complimentary of Judge Shane Hadaway and District Attorney Mike Fouts. He left me with the impression that if one wants to be involved in the illegal drug business in any way, Haskell is not the place to do it because these two gentlemen will do all they can to have you put away for many years. So if you see these two men, be sure and tell them to keep up the good work.

I notice that we have several loads of dirt ready to be levelled and packed out west of town where Jerry Lewis will begin constructing our last 'Haskell' monument. It will be nice to get this one finished and lighted as well and put the lights around the east monument and then this project will be complete. Then we will see what is next on the list.

I got a call from Doyle Jetton who now lives in Colorado but grew up in Weinert. His parents are buried in Willow Cemetery and he, like many others, are concerned about the cemetery. This is not a negative about the good work the "Cemetery Ladies" do, more about the dead grass and goatheads. I explained to him that many Haskell residents share his concern. In fact, I believe this subject is the #1 item I hear about with the exception of potholes. It has been suggested that we do something to highlight this problem at homecoming because many returning home have their loved ones buried here. We've investigated the watering/mowing angle of the cemetery and there just isn't enough money for maintenance... unless someone has a brilliant idea we're in a Catch 22 situation. I welcome all suggestions.

Winter canola is new crop for South Plains area

by Vic Schoonover
Producers Cooperative
Oil Mill

Winter canola, an unheard of crop a decade ago, will be planted in 250,000 acres across the Southern Plains this fall, according to estimates from the Producers Cooperative Oil Mill in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

Preliminary planting reports by the USDA show nearly 20 percent of the canola acreage has been planted to date. To obtain crop insurance and to get the best stand possible, winter canola should be planted between Sept. 10 and Oct. 10 each fall, according to Gene Neuens, PCOM canola representative.

"More than 125,000 acres of canola were harvested in the Southern Plains this year," Neuens said. "We estimate 250,000 acres will be planted this fall to be harvested in spring, 2013."

"Recent rains in Kansas and northern Oklahoma have permitted farmers to plant canola, while there has been less rain received in southern Oklahoma and north Texas, some farmers have started planting already."

Neuens reports Hugh Carmichael, a Haskell farmer, has canola that is already up. In Kansas, Neuens expects 30-35,000 acres of the crop will be planted, a significant increase.

Rains in northern Oklahoma gave farmers the green light to plant canola, he said. "A lot of that area has good surface moisture, but more rain is needed to allow the crop to extend its roots into the deeper soil."

Neuens reports more farmers are growing winter canola each year due to the educational programs conducted by Oklahoma State University agriculture people and agriculturists working for PCOM.

"Josh Bushong is the OSU Extension canola specialist. He and Heath Sanders, an OSU Extension specialist who came to work for us here at PCOM, work year-round with producers growing winter canola," he said.

Neuens said a lot of seed companies sold out their winter canola seed supplies this year. The harvested crop can be sold to local elevators, to PCOM and to Archer Daniels Midland, a company with a processing mill in Kansas.

Winter canola became a reality approximately eight years ago when Dr. Tom Peeper, an emeritus OSU weed scientist, began looking for a better method to control perennial weeds growing in winter wheat in the Southern Plains. Presence of the weeds, which were nearly impossible to control in continuously grown wheat, in wheat seed sold at grain elevators significantly dropped the price paid for the wheat.

Peeper found winter canola, originally a spring crop grown in Canada and northern US states, provided farmers with an effective weapon to reduce the presence of the weeds in the wheat.

Winter canola, unlike winter wheat, has a large taproot which helps the plant reach subsoil moisture. Completely different in plant and growing characteristics from wheat, growing the crop is an effective way to control the weeds, Neuens said.

Canola is an oil crop. Its seed consists of 41 percent oil. It is processed for healthy, nutritious cooking oil, cattle feed and for biofuel production. Prices paid for winter canola usually run more than three dollars per bushel above prices paid for wheat.

For more information on canola production and growing contracts, contact Neuens at 405-232-7555 or cscneuens@yahoo.com.

Veterans' Day activities scheduled in Haskell and Rule

by Caron Yates

Although our soldiers, especially those presently deployed around the world, are never far from our thoughts and prayers, it is our focus on Veterans' Day that reminds us all of the cost of our freedom.

America's soldiers, both past and present, carry a heavy burden to ensure that the citizens of the United States are free to choose the path their lives will take.

Several Veterans' Day activities have been scheduled. The Haskell Elementary School invites all veterans to attend a breakfast in their honor on Mon., Nov. 12. It is hosted by the fifth grade classes. A flag raising ceremony will be held on the front lawn at the elementary school at 8:30 a.m., followed by breakfast.

Beginning at 10:30 on Mon., Nov. 12, a Veterans' Day service will be held at Slim Sorrell's Park in Rule. Everyone is encouraged to attend.

A free lunch to honor all veterans of the community and their spouse or guest, will be served Mon., Nov. 12 from 11:30 to 12:30 at the Haskell Church of Christ Activity Building.

As Veterans' Day celebrations are being planned in Haskell County, as well as across the nation, The Haskell Free Press is taking the opportunity to share some personal stories of local veterans.

In 1995, the 50th anniversary of the end of WWII, the advanced English IV class at Haskell High School interviewed World War II veterans. As a living history and English project, the students in Mrs. Darlene Bellinghausen's class wrote about the wartime experiences of these veterans. The stories were originally printed in the Haskell County News in 1995. Sixty-seven years after WWII ended, many of these soldiers are no longer with us, but their stories and the stories of all veterans, live on.

George Fouts

written by

Kurt McCord in 1995

for an English IV project

The greatest war in world history began Sept. 1, 1939, with the invasion of Poland by Germany. It ended six years later almost to the day, Sept. 2, 1945, with the formal surrender by the government of Japan and all of the military forces to the United States. The events that follow are through the eyes of one man, a man named George W. Fouts. I recently had the honor of interviewing Mr. Fouts on his experiences in World War II and became intrigued with his story. I believe you will be equally intrigued.

We begin on Dec. 7, 1941, in Wichita Falls, Texas. George Fouts, then 23, slept peacefully, as did shipmen and pilots of a naval fleet at Pearl Harbor several thousand miles away. In a matter of hours, lives in both of these places were to be changed forever. In a brutal Japanese surprise attack, 40 torpedo planes and 50 horizontal bombers dropped tons of explosives on Pearl Harbor. This attack destroyed 19 warships and killed 2,303 people. Hours later, the U.S. declared war on Japan, and in turn Germany and Italy declared war on the U.S. We returned the favor to the Japanese allies of the superpowers.

George Fouts was awakened and distraught with the news of the Pearl Harbor attack. He had been married for only six months and was working for Western Electric in downtown Wichita Falls. Mr. Fouts feared he might be drafted into the war, and in April of 1943, a month before his newborn baby boy's first birthday, his fear came true.

He was drafted into the Signal Corps and sent to receive basic training at Camp Crowder, Missouri. Mr. Fouts proved his talent and electric experience by receiving an "Excellent" rating in DRI, Signal Radio Intelligence. After his training at Camp Crowder. Mr. Fouts was sent to Camp Shenango replacement depot in Pennsylvania for more training. When his training was concluded in Pennsylvania, he was sent to New York for additional training. Mr. Fouts remarked how he and some buddies that had been with him since Camp Crowder would go into the city and just look at the tall buildings. They didn't know where they would be sent next, so they tried to have fun to keep their minds off the war.

Mr. Fouts was qualified to do some very futuristic, complicated and dangerous work for the Signal Corps, but he was assigned as a field switchboard operator, the result of an urgent and desperate effort for an officer to find one more qualified individual to leave for England in a matter of hours. The FSO in one of the officer's outfits had gone AWOL the night before, and they had to replace him quickly. Mr. Fouts was chosen because of his extensive training in the field of communications. There was not time to train a new cadet, and they knew someone with his intelligence and experience could run a traditional telephone switchboard. So before Mr. Fouts knew it, he was aboard a ship with hundreds of strangers.

As the ship left the harbor, he watched the Statue of Liberty fade out into the distance. His shipmates had been together for two years, so Mr. Fouts felt like an outsider. In fact, no one would even tell him what branch of the Signal Corps he was in, but when someone finally told him, he knew why it was so secret. Mr. Fouts was in the RIC, Radio Intelligence Corps and about to be assigned to a "bastard outfit" which meant no branch of the Armed Forces would claim them. Their primary mission was to set up instruments at a given coordinate, intercept German codes, break the codes and report back to the allied base. When he arrived in England, there was a few months delay before he and his outfit were sent to France for their first mission.

He and members of his outfit had small living quarters on the English Channel, and they traveled to London very frequently. It was outside London on the Channel where Mr. Fouts became acquainted with the German buzz bomb. The buzz bomb was a poorly controlled missile with a weak 1,000 pound explosive strapped to it. Its purpose was to simply harass the city of London. Several thousand buzz bombs were fired at London, but really heavy damages or casualties from buzz bombs were uncommon. Mr. Fouts told me that London and the vicinity around the city is enumerated with small, five feet tall, two feet wide, solid walls. He didn't quite know how the British used them, but he recalled that he got a lot of use out of the walls one day. He was lying on top of one, watching the British air fighters dog fight with a buzz bomb when, all of a sudden, they gunned one down...in his direction! As the bomb fell toward him, he began to conjure a plan. He would simply roll over behind the wall opposite the side of the impact. A simple, yet brilliant alternative to the instinctive running.

As the weeks passed in London, he knew he and his buddies were soon to be sent out on missions, and that day finally came. They were sent to the border between France and Germany and immediately began missions. They had their equipment set up on the back of trucks, so they could be fully mobile in less than 15 minutes. They were taught that the worst thing that could happen was their equipment falling into enemy hands. This is why outfits like his were very heavily protected by armaments throughout the war. If something happened and their lives were in immediate danger, they were to pour a certain type of acid, that each one was issued on their equipment and leave it there. The acid would completely disintegrate the devices and prevent any use by the enemy. This method never had to be used, but it proved how important the equipment was.

A typical day described by Mr. Fouts was to get up with his canteen frozen solid and 18 inches to two feet of snow on the ground. The men were bored all day or until their shift came up. A continuous game of poker was played where the person that came off shift took the place in the game of the person going on shift...and so on. Mr. Fouts felt that this got very old after a while, but they did anything to pass the time. When nighttime fell, they always had a visitor though. A German plane randomly fired shots into the forest where they camped. Mr. Fouts said that "Bed check Charlie" knew they were down there somewhere and tried its hand at luck, but never came close to hitting anything.

One evening as the sun was going down, the men kept hearing distant gunfire and lots of it. Mr. Fouts radioed in to see just what was going on because the gunfire seemed to be getting closer. An officer replied at the other end of the line, "Oh, we forgot about ya'll! That place is crawling with the enemy! Get out of there now!"

The men quickly cut the wires on their equipment and loaded up in about 15 minutes. With no lights, they drove off into the woods, avoiding the German-infested roads at all costs. After driving all night, they found a small village with what seemed like a German road sign in front of it. One of the members of the outfit spoke very fluent German and began asking a villager just where the heck they were. It turned out they had driven all night right into German territory and were in Luxembourg. They immediately headed the opposite direction and arrived safely in Contrezeville, France. They had left from Haghenah on the Rhine River the night before which was Jan. 1, 1945. The battle they had just witnessed was the Battle of the Bulge, one of the last in the war, and also the one Hitler masterminded and oversaw. Soon after the Battle of the Bulge, which occurred on Dec. 19 through January, Mr. Fouts and his buddies toured a concentration camp and the beautiful Eagle's Nest, Hitler's hideout.

Mr. Fouts and his wife received a wonderful Christmas present that year. George W. Fouts returned home on Dec. 23, 1945, after an absence of two years overseas.

Teen Read Week celebrated by Haskell schools

The Haskell Junior High and High School libraries recently celebrated Teen Read Week in their respective libraries by serving cappuccino and hot chocolate to students and faculty. This year Teen Read Week was the week of Oct. 14-20 and the theme was "It Came From the Library—Dare to Read For the Fun Of It!"

Junior High hosted a cappuccino bar on Oct. 16-18 and High School's event was Oct. 25-26. On those days English classes came at scheduled times to enjoy refreshments and check out books. At both libraries students were given the opportunity to list their favorite books so that their friends could get reading ideas. All faculty, staff and administration were invited to come and enjoy the cappuccino bar.

Teen Read Week is an initiative of the Young Adult Library Services Association (YALSA) and was started in 1998. Libraries across the world celebrate Teen Read Week with a variety of special events aimed at encouraging teens to read for pleasure and to visit their libraries for free reading materials. It's important to remind young people to spend time reading for pleasure because research shows that teens who read for fun have better test scores and are more likely to succeed in the workforce. We hope this event can also remind teens of the possibilities within the doors of the library, and within the covers of books.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH... AT HOME!

Brought to You By:

Haskell Home Health Agency

November is National Home Care Month. I would like to honor all the individuals who help our elderly stay at home. Home is more than a place to stay. It is a favorite chair, a beloved pet, a treasured memory, someone you love. But sometimes age or illness can make it more difficult to stay at home.

When you are sick, where would you rather be treated? Bets are you would prefer the security and comfort of your own bed in your own home. More than just providing excellent care where and when patients need and want it, home care saves the United States and commercial health insurers billions of health care dollars each year. There is no more cost-effective provider of health care in our country. Home care providers work diligently to keep Americans in their homes, where they belong.

I would like to share a few quotes from some of our patients and patient's families.

"Words can never express how grateful I am for having you come and help take care of me during this time. I am so grateful to you for everything you did for me. For the baths, laughs, sharing, putting on those awful hose, and everything else you did. When you come in you light up a room. Most of all I am thankful for your reminding me each time you came that "God is Good" and also to praise him for everything."

"Thank each one of you for the special care you took with Mom. You comforted her, cleaned her wounds, washed her, and loved on her. You are truly the hands and feet of Christ at work daily."

As we prepare for Thanksgiving and recall our many gifts, please remember the home care and hospice professionals who make a difference every day for our nation's seniors, disabled, and infirmed. They make it possible for home care to be where the healing begins.

Haskell Home Health is located in Haskell and locally operated by members of your own community that you and your loved ones know and trust. In addition to regular visits, we are always just a phone call away, and can be at your home in minutes. Put your faith in us to take care of you or a loved one when you need it most. Haskell Home Health feels like family, and from our family to yours, we will be there.

God Bless Each and Every One of You,
Michelle Johnson, RN

FSA co. committee elections underway

Farm Service Agency (FSA) Administrator Juan M. Garcia has announced that the 2012 FSA county committee elections began Nov. 5 with the mailing of ballots to eligible voters. The deadline to return the ballots to local FSA offices is Dec. 3, 2012.

"The role and input of our county committee members is more vital than ever," said Garcia. "New county committee members provide input and make important decisions on the local administration of disaster and conservation programs. With better participation in recent years, we also have seen promising increases in the number of women and minority candidates."

Eligible voters who do not receive ballots in the coming week can obtain ballots from their local USDA Service Center. Dec. 3, 2012, is the last day for voters to submit ballots in person to local USDA Service Centers. Ballots returned by mail must also be postmarked no later than Dec. 3. Newly elected committee members and their alternates will take office Jan. 1, 2013.

To be an eligible voter, farmers and ranchers must participate or cooperate in an FSA program. A person who is not of legal voting age, but supervises and conducts the farming operations of an entire farm also may be eligible to vote. Agricultural producers in each county submitted candidate nominations during the nomination period, which ended Aug. 1.

While FSA county committees do not approve or deny farm operating loans, they make decisions on disaster and conservation programs, emergency programs, commodity price support loan programs and other agricultural issues. Members serve three-year terms. Nationwide, there are about 7,700 farmers and ranchers serving on FSA county committees. Committees consist of three to 11 members that are elected by eligible producers.

More information on county committees, such as the new 2012 fact sheet and brochures, can be found on the FSA website at www.fsa.usda.gov/elections or at a local USDA Service Center.

This Week's Devotional Message:

Let's honor those who risked everything for our freedom

The survivors of the battles that were fought to maintain our freedom were fortunate enough to return to us, although many of them suffered permanent injuries in the process. Moreover, even those who came home with their bodies intact have had to resume their interrupted lives scarred with the memories of their nightmare experience. However, it is unlikely that anyone ever wanted to go to war, and those who did so acted out of what they considered a duty to their country. We should be grateful to them and show them every consideration in return for the sacrifices which they made for us. Let us further honor them by attending our house of worship, the choice of which they helped to preserve for all the rest of us.

The family of Eva Dunnam would like to thank you for your kind expression of sympathy during this difficult time. It is deeply appreciated.
The families of Wayne Dunnam and Betty Criswell

After fighting a long hard battle, our beloved Paw found his victory in Jesus on October 29, 2012. Even though the word "thank you" is not nearly sufficient enough to truly show our appreciation, I thank all of our friends, relatives and fellow Christians for all the prayers, words of encouragement and support that was sent to us through the prayer chain that extended all throughout Texas, Tennessee, Florida, New Mexico and California. God is wonderful.
Thank you to all the individuals that labored to prepare the food and furnish all the supplies to accommodate my entire family from the time we got back from the hospital to the time of his funeral. God bless you all.
We are also blessed to have the First Baptist Church, all its members, Brother Greeson, Brother Art, all the people who sang and played the hymns, worked in the kitchen and a special thanks to Larry LeFevre for working the video. You all are amazing and thanks to you all. We could not have had a more beautiful service for our Paw.
Also, we would like to thank the Hamlin National Bank, the Rule Banking Center and its staff, Helena and all the wonderful people who donated to the Juan Herrera medical fund. We are all speechless and overwhelmed with the generosity you all have shown us, and we thank you from the bottom of our hearts.
Lastly, thank you to those who donated the prizes for the bake sale, and to those who helped work the bake sale.
We are eternally grateful to each and every one of you who has supported us through this very hard and emotional time. I apologize if we have forgotten a group or individual but the good Lord has blessed us with a multitude of people who supported us - too numerous to name.
May God bless each and every one of you.
