Company Of Military Police Arrive Here For Outing

PILOTING

A short time ago an American Medical Association officer observed that the doctor's calls might have to be rationed for the duration. The reason, of course, is the immense number of doctors being called for service in the military forces.

Sacrifice of medical services to which they are accustomed will be demanded of civilians by the end of 1942, according to F. M. Hemphill of the State Health Department.

"By the end of the year" he states, "less medical service will be available to civilians than at any time since the beginning of scientific medicine. The services of our doctors and dentists and nurses are needed first by our armed forces. This is one of the sacrifices which civilians must make."

Retired doctors are coming back into the harness and taking over the practices of younger men who have gone into the army or navy. Other doctors are working harder and serving an increased number of patients. During this difficult period the patient himself can help in the following ways:

Don't waste your doctor's time. Don't ask him to make a house call when you are perfectly able to go to his office. Don't make his visits a social occasion and expect him to sit and visit after he has treated you. If you waste the doctor's time, someone who urgently needs his attention may have to go without.

Women can be especially helpful by learning some of the elementary principles of care of the sick; they may learn the fundamentals of nursing and emergency treatment by taking the classes in Home Nursing and in First Aid offered by the Red Cross. These classes should be a good investment of anyone's time. Some simple routine sickroom procedure learned in the course might be the means of saving hours of an overworked doctor's time, not to mention the anxiety and discomfort it might spare a patient unable to secure a doctor.

During the emergency of this war period it is almost criminal to demand a doctor's advice on minor details when a little common sense can be used as well.

Health services must be strengthened, not neglected. The waste of ill health destroys millions of man-days of production. Health good enough to get by in ordinary times is not good enough to carry strain or cope with disaster. Even the common cold is Hitler's ally.

Vaccinations and immunizations should be made a hundred percent preventive front against epidemics. Sanitary codes should be enforced. Community nutrition programs through school lunchrooms can help.

General education in nutrition and other principles of health, which can be acquired by serious home study or group classes is another aspect of good health and a means of avoiding the social cost of remedying bad health.

Trout Bite In Copano Bay Tuesday

A nice catch of trout from Copano Bay Tuesday afternoon was reported by a party which included Mrs. Chester Johnson, Miss Frances Peters of Alice, V. R. Sirey of the local Coast Guard office, and John Baugh, boatman from Mills Wharf.

One three pound trout and several two pounders were among the 30 caught, all of which were a nice size the group said. A 40 lb. drum was hooked and kept out long enough to be photographed before being released.

Barnard Names Diederich and Key Assist Fire Chiefs

Fire Department Urges Enlistment Of Older Men

Plans Made To Correlate Work City and Shipyard Organizations

Edward Barnard, new chief of the Rockport Volunteer Fire Department, this week named Lyle Diederich first assistant chief and Robert Key, second assistant and announced that every effort will be made to maintain adequate fire protection for Rockport.

Barnard was named chief of the department last week upon the resignation of Chief Francis Smith, who left last Saturday for Camp Hulen to become a part of the Army's fire fighting forces there. Lloyd Lassiter, assistant chief, also has resigned from the department to go to Camp Hulen for a like post on July 1.

Older men, who are not likely to be called into military service, are being urged to line up with the department and attend weekly drills. Drills are held each Thursday night at 8 o'clock.

The Rieg Bros. & Co. shipyard has some forty men in its fire fighting organization, which is headed by Harry Mills. Barnard said that a meeting will be held at the ship yard Friday to make plans to correlate the work of the City and Ship Yard organizations.

"As soon as we finish first aid classes, we are going to cut meetings down to one a week," Barnard said. "We are meeting twice a week now with some of the boys helping a third night each week with a class at Fulton."

The new chief said that plans for an auxiliary department have been abandoned because of a shortage of manpower.

PTA Will Conduct Vaccination Clinic

Plans Made To Enlarge School Lunchroom

In a meeting of the Executive Board of the Parent-Teachers Association which took place in the home of the president, Mrs. Paul Dupuy, Wednesday afternoon, plans were made for a Child Hygiene Clinic to be held this summer.

Mrs. Somer Smith was made Child Hygiene chairman. It was decided that a clinic for vaccination against smallpox would be held this summer at a date convenient to Dr. Charles F. Cron, who will be in charge. An effort will be made to have all children in the community vaccinated.

Plans for the enlargement of the school lunch room and kitchen, and additional equipment to be installed were made.

Mrs. Dupuy served tea to the following members present: Mrs. W. C. Rehmeyer, Mrs. Floyd Huffman, Mrs. Somer Smith, Mrs. Bertha Harper, Mrs. Charles Garrett, and Mrs. Hugh Morrison.

Another Chapter in U-Boat Sinkings

These pictures of a sinking tanker were taken by the radio operator from a lifeboat. The tanker was blasted with shells fired almost at random as the men took to the boats, after the torpedo struck. Sea Scouts Sail For Return To New Gulf

New Gulf Sea Scouts, Ship 123, set sail Wednesday on the Bounty for the return trip home following a ten day vacation here. They expect to reach home port before the week-end.

While here the scouts spent most of their time sailing and swimming. Their activities included a sail to Rockport and an overnight trip to Corpus Christi.

Skipper S. F. Powell said that he considered Rockport the most ideal place on the Texas coast for a vacation and superior to California coast as well. This is his fifth summer trip here.

Baptist Revival Closes This Week

"We are having good services every day and night", says the Rev. J. F. Stanley in regard to the revival in progress this week at the First Baptist Church.

"The attendance is good, the singing is good, and the sermons are good, and we want more of you to come out and hear these soul stirring messages," he added.

The revival will continue thru this week, with the Rev. E. B. Brooks of the East Tyler Baptist church, Tyler, preaching at every service. There will be no morning service Saturday.

Merchants Must File Price Lists By July 1

Price lists of all 'cost of living' commodities must be filed by retail merchants with their local War Price and Rationing Board by July 1, according to instructions received by the Aransas county board this week.

Ceiling prices and merchant's selling price must be tagged on each article in the store by that date also.

The retailers list to be filed with the OPA will show his maximum selling price on all "Cost of Living" commodities offered for sale in his store. He will also file a similar statement to be kept in his store for examination of any person which will show his "base period price" for any item carried for sale in his store during March.

Information regarding the determination of maximum selling prices and any other phase of the regulation is available at the War Price and Rationing Board office, J. F. Bullard, chairman, announces.

Mills Wharf Fishing Party Snags 218 trout

A fishing party out of Mills Wharf brought in 218 nice speckled trout Wednesday afternoon after a day out in the bay. Hosts were Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Heard of Refugio, and their guests were Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Cates, Mr. and Mrs. Otis Yeate and Mrs. Chester Johnson.

Rubber Salvage May Net 60,000 Pounds In Aransas County

Scrap Metal Drive Will Follow

Between fifty and sixty thousand pounds of scrap rubber is expected to be realized from the salvage drive in Aransas county now in progress, according to Judge B. S. Fox, county co-ordinator.

"The drive is coming along very satisfactorily", Judge Fox said. "Much of it is brought in to the service stations and to E. C. Morgan at the WPA commodity room at the Rationing Board office."

"The government attaches great importance to this drive and we want to sweep the county clean of every scrap of salvageable rubber", he continued. All major company service stations are buying the scrap. The county truck will be used to pick up loads which cannot be brought in.

Community chairmen will be appointed next week to get in touch with their neighbors, and this same group will continue with the drive for scrap metals which will follow the rubber salvage.

Induction Of Married Men Postponed

Further Legislation and Regulations Must be Made

Induction into the army of men with wives and children is temporarily postponed pending further legislation, according to instructions received here Wednesday by Fred Booth, chairman of the Selective Service Board.

The induction into service of men married before Dec. 8, 1941 will require further legislation and new regulations, Booth stated.

Sailor In Pacific Remembers Parents' Anniversary

However tense the atmosphere at Pearl Harbor may be it does not keep the boys out there from remembering the folks at home, as a package received by Mrs. E. C. Morgan this week proves.

Wednesday, June 24, marked the Silver wedding anniversary of the Morgans and the event was remembered by their son, E. C. Morgan, Jr., electrician mate 2c, now stationed in Pearl Harbor. He sent a chest of silver, engraved with the monogram "M".

The Morgans have three sons in the Navy.

Pascagoulians Beat Guides Here At Their Own Game Of Fishing

It seldom happens, but it did this week!

Two strangers came to town, and were met here by a third party to go out and do some plain and fancy fishing.

They shunned the services of guides, got a boat, put on their own outboard, and took out in strange waters.

"Those folks ain't farmers—they're fishermen", one guide commented as he watched the trio shake out their poles during the process of selection.

"We didn't do so good today", the strangers said after the first time out, apologizing for a string of twenty nice specks. "We were just getting the lay of the land."

Two more days of fishing followed (By fishing we mean catching 'em). How many fish? The total poundage (or tonnage) was unascertainable—but several households in town won't be looking

'Jeter's Creeters' Make Pop Call

Little 'Un and Bill, two of the pet pelicans which Jeff Jeter fed last winter, swooped down into the yacht basin Saturday for a brief call on their fisherman friend. They did not stay long. They were fishing and had to fly back to the shell islands in the bay because they are probably looking after some nests of "chiquitas" over there. The pelicans migrated late in May and are due back in September.

Evelyn Archer Announces For County Attorney

In announcing for the office of County Attorney of Aransas County, the voters may be interested in the following facts pertaining to my life and qualifications:

I was born in Corpus Christi, Texas where I lived until fourteen years of age. At that time I moved to El Paso, Texas where my parents still live, and where I finished high school and attended The College of Mines and Arts, of the University of Texas, where I took my B. A. degree in 1934. In 1935 I entered The University, School of Law, in Austin, where I completed my studies in 1938, and upon receiving my license to practice law in August of that year, entered the practice of law. I have been actively engaged in general practice since that time, in both Federal and State courts, doing trial work in both the District and County courts and Appellate Courts of this State.

If I become your County Attorney, I shall administer that office on policies of justness and fairness to all, according to the law and best dictates of my conscience, and no other source. I am sponsored by no group or clique religious, political or otherwise, and anyone who should come before me on official business shall receive justice according to the laws of the State of Texas.

Military Police Camping On Copano Bay

Men of 504th M. P. Bn To Get Weekly Trip To Rockport

Over one hundred military police passed through Rockport in a convoy of jeeps, and trucks bound for camp at the edge of Copano Bay, north of Rockport this morning. The M. P.'s forming A Company of the 504th Military Police Battalion, Fort Sam Houston, will stay over night and return to their base some time Friday.

Lieut. Herbert C. McConnell and Lieut. Raymond W. Saunders are in command of the company. In the convoy were 23 jeeps, nine trucks and a command car, carrying approximately 125 men and officers.

Col. A. G. Phillips and Capt. P. R. Whitaker came to Rockport Monday to arrange for the camp here.

Colonel Phillips said that the trip here was a part of routine training, but that the schedule was arranged to give the men a "break", so that they might enjoy an outing here on the coast.

The executive officer of the Military Police Battalion explained that present plans were to bring one company down each Thursday for five consecutive weeks.

"It looks like a good spot", the officers said after looking over the location near Copano Bay causeway. They said arrangements would be made to transport the men to Rockport for swimming at the beach.

Aircraft Observer Training School Set For Saturday

Official Defense Personnel and Observers Permitted To Attend

Aircraft warning observers of Aransas county are to receive personal instruction from a Ground Observer Training unit Saturday night, June 27 at eight at the court-house. This training school for observers is being held in 16 counties in the San Antonio Region of the Third Fighter command, U. S. Army Air Force.

The unit will be operated by an officer and seven enlisted men, it consists of map tables, platforms, and telephone equipment and will be used to illustrate the proper method of placing an army Flash call and what happens to it after it reaches the Army Filter Center.

Judge B. S. Fox, county co-ordinator of Civilian Defense, along with all judges of the 16 counties was asked to make arrangements for this demonstration. Only officially enrolled observers and bona fide personnel will be allowed to attend the instruction sessions.

Chamber Cancels Plans For Fourth

Because of the fast changing tempo of war times, the Rockport Chamber of Commerce waited until this week before making final decision regarding the scheduled Fourth of July Celebration here.

In keeping with the government's request that county and state fairs be postponed, the local organization felt that the celebration held here in past years should be cancelled, and so voted at a director's meeting.

In urging a curtailment of pleasure traveling, the government makes an exception of vacation travel, apparently realizing that occasional rest and play is essential to obtaining the best results in war work.

Kathleen Norris Says: Girl-Wife Plagued by Mate's Jealousy

Bell Syndicate—WNU Features.

From the beginning my husband wanted to know everything I was doing. I even had to read my letters aloud to him before I sent them, and had to show him the answers.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

"MY HUSBAND is jealous," writes an Arkansas wife. "I knew it, or suspected it, before I was married, but I didn't know how serious it was, or that it would affect every phase of my life with him. Now I find myself made completely wretched by his watching me and questioning me, and I don't seem able to cope with the matter at all."

"To begin with," her letter goes on, "I was married three years ago, at 18, to a man more than twice my age. Lewis was 44 then, my mother's friend. My father died when I was a baby; my mother remarried immediately; her second husband being Lewis' older brother."

"Lewis spoiled me when I was a small girl, sent me beautiful presents to school, came to my graduation, and it seemed to me wonderful and romantic to be married that very day. But now I think it was silly to crowd graduation and marriage into one day; I was so much of a kid that I regretted missing the big dance that evening."

"Even in my childhood he was jealous, teasing me about liking this boy or that better than I did him. But in those days Lewis seemed to me a sort of god, playing tennis and golf, wearing evening clothes to marvelous parties into which I could not even peep, and adored by all his patients. He is an eye doctor. It never occurred to me that he could be serious when he said he was jealous."

"Inquisitive Husband. "However, as soon as we were married I found out how much in earnest he was. From the beginning he wanted to know everything I was doing, or even thinking. I had to read my letters aloud to him before I sent them, and show him the answers. We had a housekeeper, now my son's nurse, who was asked to accompany me practically everywhere, and was questioned when we got back. She is my good friend, by the way, and takes my side in everything."

"When Junior was born Lewis showed a new side of his jealousy. He didn't like me to gush over the baby, sent him away whenever possible. If Junior shows eagerness to reach me, holds out his arms—he is 18 months old now—Lewis says 'here now, we're not going to have this mother's-boy stuff,' and often gets the little fellow screaming."

"All his interest in society is dead; he says I killed it by making such a fuss about other men, a thing I never have done and never will do. He wants to be at home every evening, sometimes having older men in for bridge, which I don't play. One of his first requests was that neither my mother nor my sister should ever come to the house without being invited; I could ask them as often as I liked but they must never come otherwise."

"This has made for great formality and stiffness where there ought to be so much pleasure and easiness; in fact, my mother has lost all patience with Lewis, and even her husband, who is Lewis' brother, rarely makes any effort to see us."

"Always Asking Questions. "I can charge anything I like anywhere, and we live luxuriously, but my actual money allowance is only $10 a month; and do what I will I can't seem to make any extensive plans on that. I mean I can't go in for charities or club work very well. I am studying French with an old refugee woman, but on two occasions her young son came in during the lessons, and after that Lewis insisted that they be given here in our house, which is very dull."

"Am I making myself out a martyr? You don't know what an effort I make to keep cheerful and busy, filling vases, ordering meals, playing with my baby, going every day to pick Lewis up in the car. But his continual questioning and suspicions make me nervous, and of late I have been crying a good deal, which does not improve my appearance and annoys him."

"What prompts me to write you," Catherine concludes her letter, "is that last night, when Lewis was in a particularly inquisitive mood, I suddenly emptied a vase I was filling with primroses right over his head. He was wonderful about it, but it really frightened me, and I thought that if there is any way to cure him, or cure me if I am to blame, I had better find out what it is."

And there, you luckier women, who are married to men without this particular form of vanity, pettiness and cruelty, is a perfect example of the elderly jealous mate."

Waking Is No Fun. It seems great fun to the little beauty of 18 to announce to her awed and envious schoolmates that she is going to be married on graduation day to a successful doctor who is able to give her every luxury and who has adored her since babyhood. It is a school girl's dream."

But the waking up isn't much fun. Catherine has cheated herself out of her happiest young years, years of dancing and house parties, picnics and camping and skiing, trips and theatricals and beaux. Every girl has a right to these, and every girl, rich or poor, manages to have a good share of them."

It wasn't Catherine's fault that this path was made so easy for her. If her mother hadn't sense enough to suspect what a prison Lewis was preparing for her, Lewis' brother might have given her a hint. Catherine, at 18, wasn't supposed to know that the flattery and the presents, the plain-gold ring and the new estate were just so many chains about her."

Will Have to Bear It. In Catherine's case she simply will have to put up with it. Society would stand aghast at the spectacle of that dear little pampered wife, with her beautiful home and two good servants, her adoring husband and lovely child, running away from it all. And she couldn't run to her mother, because her stepfather is Lewis' brother, which would make things very awkward."

My Week by Eleanor Roosevelt

PRICE CONTROL

WASHINGTON.—I have been getting some inquiries which lead me to believe that some people are still a little puzzled about the price control regulations. These regulations are an effort to keep down the cost of living, and to prevent people bidding against each other when they have the money and goods are scarce, which sends the price up.

Since May 18, stores cannot charge more for the articles which come under OPA regulations than they charged in their particular store at the highest peak in March. This price is called a ceiling price and obviously it may vary in different stores.

Stores may sell below this price, so the public may find sales going on of certain articles, but no store can sell above its own ceiling price. You should find posted in the store, or on the price tags "of cost of living commodities," notices giving these prices, which cover the articles considered most important in our daily living.

There are no ceiling prices set on fresh fruits and vegetables, and there are a few other food products exempted from the regulations until they attain the price level prescribed by congress. Bread, milk, beef and pork and all clothing and household furnishings are covered, however, by ceiling prices. On July 1, ceiling prices on some services will become effective. For instance, laundries and dry cleaning will come under this regulation, but professional services, motion pictures and other entertainments will not be covered.

The income of the people of the country as a whole has gone up. Therefore, there is more money to spend. But the amount of what we can produce for civilian use will be far below what we have to spend and if we do not put a definite top price on goods, which price cannot be changed, we will see prices go up.

This is only one step in the program to prevent inflation. Next, debts must be reduced. We must have wider rationing in order that people may share equally in what is produced for civilian use. Wages must be stabilized when once we really succeed in keeping down the cost of living. This last step cannot be taken, however, until we have machinery whereby we can prevent wages from being depressed by various methods which may come into use if proper supervision is not exercised.

AIM OF EDUCATION

WASHINGTON.—There was an article in one of the recent Sunday papers, written by Dr. William Allen Neilson, which I hope a great many people read. One paragraph seemed particularly thought-provoking to me:

"What is important and essential is that our teachers should keep vividly aware of the ends for which they work and resist the perennial temptation to content themselves with operating little devices inside a sequestered field. Their duty is to society and their concern is with lives. If these are attended to, their students will not fail to value the institutions and privileges of the tradition they inherit."

So many students come out of school and college, and their first experience with life makes them question how honest their teachers were with them. Young people can value only the institutions, privileges and traditions which they inherit if their teachers have made them face the whole picture."

EMPLOYING OLDER PEOPLE

One thing that has been brought to my attention has deeply troubled me. We are told that there is no real reason why anybody should be unemployed today, but I receive letter after letter from older unemployed people. Some of them can not adapt themselves to new jobs and their old jobs are wiped out under our war economy.

Employers would rather employ young people, who learn more quickly and easily. Some of these young people think if they accept lower wages they are fulfilling a patriotic duty. I am told that, in Detroit, some older women who have been employed in the automobile industry are still out of work. In some of the converted plants, young college people have been taken on and are paid less than the union member women made and, naturally, want to earn again. These are puzzling and distressing situations. The public should know about them.

POPULAR GALLERY HOURS

One afternoon I had the pleasure of attending a tea given for Mrs. Ruth Bryan Rohde by Mrs. Robert Armstrong Junior. I was very happy to see Mrs. Rohde again and much interested in the war production which she and her Danish-American husband are accomplishing on their West Virginia farm. I suppose all Danish people know how to farm successfully, but just at present I wish that we all had the same amount of background and could make our land as useful.

Lost and Found

By JANE OSBORN
(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

AS Maud and her Aunt Margaret neared New York in the privacy of their stateroom, the fifty-year-old woman thought it desirable to give the woman half her age a little sound advice.

"If you ever find yourself alone and in need of help don't ask help of a woman," was what she said, and added, "and especially if it is a motherly looking woman. If you don't see a policeman ask the nicest looking young man you see, because it would never occur to the gangs that a girl wanting help would ask a nice looking young man."

By this time the train was drawing into the terminal station. "Gracious me," said Aunt Margaret when their porter had reached the taxi stand. "What was the name of that hotel Cousin Helen said we had better go to? I had it written down in the front of my address book and that's packed somewhere in my dressing case."

"Take us to some really first-class hotel in a central district," suggested Maud. Minutes later they drew up at a good looking hotel.

Later that day Maud sent a telegram to the folks at home giving them the name of the hotel. She and her aunt spent two hours over lunch and then while debating whether to start in on their shopping expeditions that afternoon or not, Maud saw a girl she had known three years before in boarding school in the wake of her portly parents—the Dawkins family. They were introductions all round, and general rejoicings that here among strangers so far from home, friends had been found.

The next afternoon Maud decided not to go shopping with her aunt because she was anxious to look up a certain girl's finishing school where a friend of hers was staying. It was not until she had got into a taxi for the return that it occurred to her that she didn't know the name of her hotel—and hadn't any sort of conceivable idea where it was located.

So she got out of the taxi at the Public Library and sat on a stone bench there trying to think of some way of finding her way back to the hotel. Then she recalled her aunt's advice. She let a hundred or so strangers pass, and then a very well-dressed, decidedly attractive looking young man came briskly toward the library. Maud stopped him, told him her plight, and begged his help.

Together they went through the pages of a telephone book in a drugstore, but Maud found nothing to help her. So the nice young man suggested that they walk to a few nearby hotels, then take a taxi to the others. At least Maud would know her hotel when she saw it.

They walked past two or three that Maud knew were not her own. Then, walking down toward the avenue to hail a taxi, Maud gave a little cry of surprise. She had seen her aunt. Quickly explaining, she said good-bye to the young man. But in a few seconds she was back. "It's my aunt," said Maud, "but she is lost, too."

So the good-looking stranger found himself escorting two lost women instead of one.

"I did know the name of the hotel once," said Aunt Margaret, "because Maud found out and used it on the telegram. I suppose we could telegraph home and ask where it is. The strange young man said he didn't think it would be necessary to telegraph—they'd be able to find the hotel without that."

"Let's drop in here—a hotel just down this street. I had in a way promised to join an aunt of mine there—and we can have tea together, if you will permit me to order it for you, and I can just explain to my aunt and perhaps there we could telephone to the hotels and find out where you are registered."

He led them down the street, turned sharply in with one lady on either side and then Aunt Margaret and Maud exclaimed in chorus, "Why, this is our hotel!"

Aunt Margaret hurried forward toward the door—and Maud lingered by the young man's side. "I'm sorry we found it so soon," she said. "I had really looked forward to having tea together." Which was precisely what the young man was going to say if she had given him a chance.

"Let's have tea together anyway," he said.

Aunt Margaret went to her room explaining that she wanted to put on comfortable shoes and that she'd send down for tea. Maud and the young man went into the tea room where to Maud's surprise the strange young man led her forward to a table where sat the Dawkins family. He kissed mother and daughter, and shook hands with Mr. Dawkins.

"Hazel told me she was engaged," said Maud. "You must be the—the lucky man."

"Hardly. She's engaged to a friend of mine, though. I'm a second cousin or something—and besides I shouldn't consider myself particularly lucky."

"Why not?"

"Because I've fallen in love with another girl, and it would be rather awkward if we were already engaged," he answered.

THERE are now thousands of college football players, not overlooking 148 National leaguers, on active service in the army, navy and marines. This is an underestimate. And there are many more on their way.

In the face of this we have been asked far and wide what will become of football this next fall.

As far as one can offer a guess on a June date, football will keep under steam with the men that are left. This goes for both the colleges and the pros. It has been the wish of both army and navy that football be carried on, even with an increased number of players. Army and navy teams will be at full speed.

Above all other games, this is a football nation. I am referring to high school, college and professional players, plus the many millions who make up the camp followers. So you can figure it out that football will be the last game to go, if it goes at all. Which it won't.

Typical Case

In the matter of college play we can take Minnesota as a typical case along the upper plateau.

In this connection, George Barton, the sage of Gopher football, writes, "I am afraid Minnesota's national championship days are over for the duration, but the Gopher will do pretty well in Big Ten competition."

"Six regulars are gone from the great line of the past two years—Fitch and Ringer, ends; Odson, tackle; Levy and Pukema, guards; Flick, center. And, of course, Bruce Smith and Bob Sweiger from the backfield. Gone also is Bernie Bierman and three of his coaching staff."

BERNIE BIEMAN

But it might be mentioned here that as long as Minnesota has a back named Bill Daley and a tackle named Dick Wildung, the Gopher has something more than a mere nucleus on hand. Daley is a big part of any backfield and Wildung is a big part of any good line. And there are others around in Norsemen gold.

Two Others

From this crow's nest two of the best-looking college squads will belong to Georgia and Texas A. and M. And you can add Texas. Of course, you must remember that more than one or two things may happen between now and late September.

The strength of the different service teams is still a summer guess, but judging from most of their schedules they will have something more than tackling dummies on guard.

It might be noted here that football is only a part of these cadet training centers. Football will be but one-fifth or one-sixth part of the 10 or 12-hour conditioning drills, at which boxing, wrestling, hurdling, etc., will keep them spinning like human tops from dawn to dark.

The added rivalry between college and service teams will add to the general interest of the game, despite the fact that 40,000 or 80,000 crowds might not be on hand when the whistle blows.

Pro Football

There are now 148 National league football players in active service, with others on their way soon. Twenty-eight of these players hold commissions. Eighty-three joined up with the army, 56 with the navy, and nine with the marines.

Each year the pros draft some 200 top-rank players. They will get few from the draft list this fall. But as Steve Owen of the Giants puts it, "While we've all lost good men and key men, we'll have enough left to carry the game along until more men are called. This will make it a closer race—a better race."

"We won't have those Chicago Bears of last season to look at," Big Steve said. "Halas has lost his share of stars, and he had more stars to lose. At this spot I can't see any standout team. But I'm sure we'll have an interesting season with enough material left to go around."

All of which, with the colleges, the navy and army teams, plus the pros, should find the American landscape and atmosphere packed with more flying footballs than any past season ever knew.

Washington, D. C.

CUTTING NAVY TAPE

Behind Admiral King's forthright order slashing navy red tape 50 per cent and ordering more navy officers out of Washington, was an interesting comparison with the Japanese navy, conducted backstage by some of the President's advisers.

Americans, recently familiar with Japan, have reported that the Japanese navy is staffed by only about 1,000 personnel in Tokyo. In contrast, the navy department in Washington has more than 30,000—not including the navy yard.

The Japanese navy also is reported to have cut red tape and government reports to the bone and it gives widest latitude to commander at sea. The U. S. navy also gives wide latitude to commanders in distant posts, such as Admiral Leary in New Zealand, Admiral Nimitz at Pearl Harbor. But in home waters, especially in anti-submarine warfare along the East coast, insiders say the navy has suffered from a constant stream of reports and orders to and from Washington requiring a tremendous staff for the paper work alone.

Now Admiral King offers promotions to officers who will decrease their Washington bureaus rather than increase them.

GASOLINE CZAR

The one-man dynamo who runs the gas rationing system of the U. S. A. is a preacher's son and a former professor of economics. Though one of the most harassed men in Washington, he is constantly on the verge of breaking into a broad smile.

Only 35 years old, he has gray hair about the ears, thin hair on top, works so late into the night that his wife, mother of a new-born boy, seldom sees him. "I generally make the 2 a. m. feeding," he says.

Joel Dean was born in Vermont, schooled in California, and has a doctor's degree from Harvard, where he wrote a thesis on small loans. He spent a year as European manager of a travel bureau, two years as traveling salesman for International Business Machine, and seven years as teacher and research expert.

As a fellow economist, he always admired Leon Henderson, but never met him until he came to Washington less than a year ago.

To effect his own economy in gasoline, he formed a "Drive-In Club" with four other OPA officials. They take turns driving to the office from Arlington, Va., across the river.

When brickbats fly in the OPA office, Dean recalls that his father, a Congregational minister, wanted him to be a missionary on a South Sea island.

"Many people," says Dean, "wish that I had fulfilled that mission."

ARMY HOUR PROGRAM

"Jamming" radio programs is one of the recognized weapons of modern warfare. But it is a two-edged sword, and the war department radio branch is ready to swing on the Axis if the prize Army Hour, on Sundays, is jammed again.

Jamming by manufactured static or other interference is feasible in the United States only on short-wave broadcasts. The Army Hour features short-wave talks from all over the world, made by such noted personalities as Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, General MacArthur, General Wallace, and others. The most recent case of jamming was during a talk by a high ranking army officer from the Dutch island of Curacao. A piano banged loudly all the time he spoke.

Winston Churchill's latest speech, which came on the radio immediately before the army hour, was jammed by a guttural Teutonic voice carefully observing Churchill's own pauses in an effort to escape detection.

These two cases of jamming were traced by triangulation to Axis broadcasting stations. The army proposes to retaliate if this deliberate interference doesn't stop.

WAR FLASHES

If you are a business executive, and uncertain about tax deductions for advertising and pay increases, you can get "informal" advice by applying to the internal revenue bureau under a new treasury ruling.

OPA agents are checking up on private airports on tips that they are bootlegging high octane gas to car drivers. High octane won't run a car by itself, but makes a very smooth-running fuel if mixed with lower grade gas.

Guerrilla warfare in Russia has become so highly organized that every third guerrilla now is armed with an automatic rifle.

The war department soon will break still more precedents. It will start accepting women doctors in the army medical corps. They will be assigned chiefly to the WAAC, and also for general eye, ear, nose and throat work.

The army's new M-1 helmet, that comes far over the cheeks, neck and forehead and is much stronger than the old raky "tin-hat," is now being distributed to all soldiers.

If you know a Navy man, don't ever call him a "gob"—sailors consider the name an insult. You can get on the right side of him though if you offer him a Camel— or better yet, send him a carton. Camels are the favorite cigarette with men in the Navy (Army, Marines, Coast Guard, too, for that matter) based on actual sales records from the service men's stores. Local dealers are featuring cartons of Camels to send to any member of our armed forces anywhere. Send him that Camel carton today.—Adv.

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

METRO'S "Mrs. Miniver" will probably be one of the best remembered war pictures that have reached the screen, not merely because it is well directed (by William Wyler) and superbly acted, but because it deals with a typical family, facing the war at home. It vividly presents the sort of situations that we might have had to deal with in this country. Incidentally, a "Mrs. Miniver" rose has been developed, named for the one in the picture; it is dedicated to "the unselfish and sterling qualities of American women in the war," women like the one whom Greer Garson plays so movingly in the film. Don't miss "Mrs. Miniver!"

Buddy Clark, young baritone of radio's "Hit Parade," has an important role in RKO's "Sweet or Hot," starring Lucille Ball and Victor Mature. His comedy specialties and songs last year won him one of the highest individual ratings on radio listener polls, but in the picture he'll do more than sing; with Peter Lind Hayes and Arnold Stang he'll play an army buddy of Mature's.

Alan Ladd attracted plenty of attention and favorable comment during his stay in New York; as part of the campaign to introduce this new leading man to the public Paramount can consider the trip a success. But all the girls who eyed him admiringly realized that it was a case of "Hands off!" Mrs. Ladd (the former Sue Carol, once a movie star) was with him, and they're devoted.

Joan Crawford is one screen mother who wants her daughter to follow in her footsteps. Looking at golden-haired Christina, now three, she remarked: "If she isn't an actress I'll be the most disappointed person in the world."

Russell Hoyt, handsome 24-year-old North Carolina traveling salesman signed by RKO, reached Hollywood without an iota of dramatic experience. A friend, an agent and a talent scout were responsible, and he got a contract without even making a test.

Gary Cooper can spend his vacation traveling with the San Francisco Seals as the ball team's assistant manager if he wants to. He was invited by Lefty O'Doul, the manager, who taught him to bat and throw left-handed for "The Pride of the Yankees."

As part of his war work, Ronald Colman is making three films this year; during the past six years he's made only one a year. The bulk of his income will go to the government in taxes. During the last war he served with Kitchener's "Contemptibles," saw action at Ypres, was wounded at Messines, and he holds the Mons medal with 1914 bar. His next picture is "Random Harvest."

Eric Blore celebrated his 50th picture role when he began work in Paramount's "Happy Go Lucky," which stars Mary Martin and Dick Powell. Once on the London stage, with time out for serving in the last war, he's been in demand in Hollywood since 1934.

Warren Hull, Parks Johnson's new "Vox Pop" partner, is instantly recognized by young radio followers as "The Green Hornet," a role he played in a screen serial. He was besieged by juvenile autograph hunters in an Alexandria, Va., store.

Phil Baker ought to be happy; the one thing that visitors to New York seem to want more than anything else is tickets to his "Take It or Leave It" broadcasts.

ODDS AND ENDS—Edward G. Robinson of "Big Town" has taken up horseshoe pitching at his ranch behind Beverly Hills. . . No actor changes leading ladies more often than Tim Holt; his new one, in "Son of the Saddle," is Ann Summers, a newcomer. . . Khalid Staff Lieutenant Hopper puzzles audiences when she aids the treasury department in selling war bonds—till they recognize her as Marsha Hunt; she uses her married name when in uniform. . . Hedy Lamarr does a jitterbug routine in "White Cargo"—in a sorong. . . Keep your eye on Helmut Dantine, who gives an outstanding performance as a German flier in "Mrs. Miniver."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D., Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for June 28

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

ALCOHOL FACTS VERSUS DRINKING PROPAGANDA

LESSON TEXT—Proverbs 21:17; 23:22; Isaiah 5:20-23; Hosea 4:11; Joel 3:2, 3; Ephesians 5:18.
GOLDEN TEXT—If sinners entice thee, consent thou not.—Proverbs 1:10.

The facts are on the side of the one who opposes the liquor traffic, and they are so plentiful and so devastating that the industry does not care to face them. Their "best bet" is to use propaganda so skillfully prepared as to disarm the reader. If the propaganda is truthful, it is only because it has to be, and only in that measure.

Our lesson suggests several points in the liquor propaganda, each of which we can prove to be untrue.

I. They Say, "Enjoy Life, That's What We Are Here For" (Prov. 21:17).

Consider the ads of the liquor trade. They carry the beautiful lady, the brilliant young man, the socially correct surroundings, riches, ease, etc. They suggest that even the grandmother in the home approves the use of intoxicants to bring comfort and pleasure to the breadwinner in the home.

What is the truth? Man is not here for pleasure; he is here to serve God. History demonstrates that the nation that lives for pleasure, especially in connection with the use of intoxicants, is doomed to extinction.

II. They Say, "Liquor Is Not Dangerous" (Prov. 23:32).

It is presented as a pleasant and harmless stimulant, when in fact it is known to science, to police and social welfare workers as a narcotic which not only upsets digestion and deranges physical processes but, most vicious of all, "affects personality by its action upon the certain specific brain area. It disturbs, confuses, slows down, and removes the restraints, the checks and balances which make a well-rounded personality. It is the highest functional level of the brain, the personality level, which is first put into eclipse by the action of alcohol" (Carson Taylor).

III. They Say, "Those Who Oppose Liquor Are Fanatics" (Isa. 5:20, 21, 23).

The prophet answers that claim by pointing out that those who favor the use of alcohol are the ones who call evil good and good evil, etc. A little study of liquor propaganda as it appears in the advertising of the industry soon demonstrates that fact. Of late they have been trying to convince us that beer is just a soft drink for the home. Any policeman who has seen a man drunk on beer, and any social or religious worker who has seen the destruction it has wrought in the home and in society, knows that is not true.

IV. They Say, "Strong Men and Leaders Are Drinkers" (Isa. 5:22).

Sadly enough, many of our leading men do indulge in liquor, but if the truth were out, it would be known that they are less capable as leaders and weaker men for their use of it. And who has not seen a leader become a poor derelict by the alcohol route, or a strong man become a jittery mental, moral, and physical wreck in the same way.

The work of a nation in both war and peace is done by sober, steady, trustworthy men who have a "clear head," not because they use a certain whisky but because they do not use it.

V. They Say, "The Pleasure Is Worth the Price" (Hosea 4:11; Joel 3:2, 3).

The wicked ones who captured Israel felt they made a good trade when they gave a boy for a harlot, or exchanged a girl for wine. The modern system of making merchandise of boys and girls is not as openly crass as that, but when you figure the cost of alcohol to our land, be sure to add in the girls who have gone into iniquity by the way of tavern hostesses and the boys who have lost everything sacred because of 'booze.'

Remember too that the beer makers are deliberately using this war to cultivate a taste for beer in millions of young men—their future customers—and we are letting them get away with it, right in the army camps.

VI. They Say, "Drinking and Religion Go Well Together" (Eph. 5:18).

The contrast of Paul gives that claim the direct brand of falsehood. Being drunk with wine is the exact opposite of spirituality.

Liquor interests know that if church members can be led to believe that wine at dinner, beer as a soft drink—and an occasional social cocktail—is not incompatible with religious life, they will have effectually shut the mouth of the opposition they fear the most—the church.

Let pastors and church boards deal plainly and drastically with drinking church members, and the church will profit spiritually, and again become an effective means of stemming the tide of social iniquity which is engulfing our nation.

The army air force's new $2,500,000 wind tunnel at Wright Field near Dayton is equipped with a 40,000 horsepower, alternating-current induction motor that develops a 400-mile-an-hour wind, says Collier's. Largest of its kind ever constructed, this motor cannot be turned on until notice has been given to the electric company, so it may be prepared for this load, which is equal to the capacity of one of its largest generators.

Wartime Problem Solved

Necessity has forced the American people to do many new things. While in the past many bird lovers have raised canaries at home for the pleasure and satisfaction they derived, now the breeding of canaries at home has become a new, worthwhile hobby—a money-making hobby that is spreading all over this country.

With the major supplies of canaries from abroad abruptly stopped . . . with a strict wartime ban placed on the importation of hundreds of thousands of canaries formerly shipped yearly from Central Europe and Asia, the ingenuity and foresight of the American people have met the situation with smiles of satisfaction—as they turned this canary shortage into a wartime opportunity.

But a small out-lay was required to start this worthwhile hobby—turning a most pleasurable undertaking into a profitable, money-making business at home.

PREPAREDNESS AMERICAN RED CROSS

NEWEST of all the American Red Cross activities is the Wool Conservation program. Under it, volunteers from the more than 3,700 Red Cross chapters throughout the nation collect scraps of new, unused wool and place them in reprocessing channels.

The Wool Conservation program was developed jointly by the War Production board and the Red Cross when it became apparent that the nation faced a serious wool shortage. There were only two ways in which this shortage could be alleviated within the next year. The first was by cutting down wool consumption in every possible way by restyling and re-designing garments to save wool. The second was to have every scrap of new, unused wool reprocessed as rapidly as possible. The Red Cross was selected to do this job.

Under the agreement between the Red Cross and the War Production board, the 3,700 Red Cross chapters arrange for the collection of trousers cuff clippings, wool samples and other wool clips from tailors, men's clothing stores, department stores, clothing manufacturers and cleaners. These are then placed in reprocessing channels by selling them to wool reclaiming firms.

When reprocessed into wool cloth, the clippings from 21 pairs of men's trousers will be enough to make a complete soldier's uniform or another civilian suit. Proceeds from the sale of the wool clips collected under the Wool Conservation program are retained by the local Red Cross chapters to carry on their work of War Relief and Civilian Defense Preparedness training.

What's a musical comedy got to do with winning a war?

PLENTY! We're building an army of men—not machines. And men have minds. And minds need freshening . . . change . . . relaxation.

So one of the biggest undertakings of the USO is its sponsoring of free entertainment, through the cooperation of the movie and theatrical industries, at army camps, naval bases—wherever the fighting men of the USA go to train or dig in.

USO Camp Shows, Inc. is actually the biggest single theatrical enterprise the world has ever seen. It books 264 shows for the boys every week, which play to an average nightly attendance of 50,000.

It contacts movie stars, theatrical headliners, big name bands and their leaders. It routes all these . . . plans their itinerary . . . arranges the most convenient times when soldiers and sailors can take time out to sit and be entertained.

For it realizes that the one great advantage of the American fighting man is his ability to think for himself, to make the most of any situation, to fight as a liberty-loving individual.

And this is one of his great differences from our enemy.

To help carry on the all-important work of maintaining the morale of our fighting forces, the USO needs your help . . . it needs your contribution.

Your dollar has many demands on it this year. Many of these demands must be met—others deserve to be met. And among these latter, the plea of the USO for whatever sum you can contribute merits your earnest consideration.

For we have a war to win, and the USO is directly concerned with the men who must—and will—win it.

Dig deep—for the men who are digging in!

Send your contribution to your local chairman or to USO, Empire State Building, New York.

Sea Scouts Entertain With Luncheon And Sailing Party

"Not a dry moment" was literally true of the sailing party aboard the Bounty given by the New Gulf Sea Scouts, Ship 123, Monday afternoon. Sailing with a light wind into the bay, the weather calmed before a sudden rain which came up and drenched the party, all without spoiling the fun, according to the scouts and their guests.

After an hour with little wind, less progress, and more rain, Game Warden Marshall Clark picked up the sloop and towed it with a motor boat into the yacht basin. The scouts proceeded with their entertainment at the Rockport Pavilion as planned.

Preceding the sail, the boys, Ford Powell, Edward Sterling, Jack Pletzer, and Paul Jones with Skipper S. F. Powell entertained with a seafood luncheon in their Bay Shore Cottage. The guests were Genevieve Davis; Evelyn Powell, New Gulf; Mannie Poch, North Little Rock, Ark.; Loris Haynes, Harlingen; and Kay Bynum. "Turtle" Sterling being on K. P. duty that day was in charge of the luncheon.

Mrs. Powell and her daughters, Justine and Maybeth, joined the group at the Pavilion for dancing. Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Wakefield, of Rice Bros. and Co. were their hosts there.

The marriage of sisters in a double wedding took place in the Methodist parsonage Saturday evening with the Rev. Almus D. Jameson uniting the two couples in a single ceremony.

The sister brides were Miss Corrine Evans, who was married to Pvt. Sigmund Zawadski and Miss May Jean Evans, who was married to Robert W. Hester. They are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Evans.

Casa De Juan Party Proves Famous Recipe

To honor a departing guest and to try out a good sounding recipe from Margaret Rawlins recent best seller, "Cross Creek", a neighborhood lunch was held on Fulton beach Wednesday.

Mrs. John Fries, hostess, and the neighbors, Mrs. Benton Davies, Mr. and Mrs. John Shook and Mrs. Shook's mother, Mrs. Harmon, got together for a farewell to Mrs. Delestiner, guest of the Davies leaving Wednesday. Bee Wee, the Fries' cook, got together the one dish meal which was pronounced entirely too good to be kept secret.

So here 'tis: In an iron skillet, or pot, spread a layer of diced salt pork (Margaret Rawlins called it white bacon). Over it place a layer of boned fish, trout, redfish, flounder or what have. The Casa De Juan party mixed the three. On this goes a layer of thinly sliced raw Irish potato, then a layer of thinly sliced white onions, top with a layer of whole soda crackers.

Dot with butter, salt and pepper, and repeat the layers until the pot is full. Half fill with water and simmer on a slow fire until all juice is gone and the bottom slightly brown.

Then barely cover the whole mixture with sweet cream, and let it begin to simmer. Turn on a platter and serve. With this Mrs. Fries served "Hush Puppies", the recipe for which is also found in "Cross Creek" and which might be passed on with a little coaxing.

Discuss WAAC Plans in Washington

Full Accounting

Admiral Nimitz pronounced Midway a partial accounting for what happened at Pearl Harbor. But Pearl Harbor was more than an attack on the American navy. It was also an attack on the American home.

The navy can settle in full as an ocean force, but the American people must settle in full as a fighting nation. The Pearl Harbor account will be settled when the last concentration camp is a public park. And when a worker in Europe has the dignity of a human being, instead of the standing of a driven slave.

It is America's duty to demand full payment. The question of our future depends on how much the enemy is made to answer for its past. The liberties won on the freezing slopes at Valley Forge were almost lost in a dirty beer cellar in Munich.

While France is bound, while Norway is in prison, and while Belgium is in chains, America will never be fully free. Our monument to Pearl Harbor must be a milestone in world progress. That can only begin to happen when all men realize that the peace cannot be kept while criminal leaders remain in power to start a war.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Churchill-Roosevelt Meetings Presage New Action on Second European Front; Mediterranean Naval Battles Indicate Rising Anglo-American Air Strength

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.) Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Gone are the days when this unholy trio of American Nazi chiefs paraded around in their Bund uniforms. George Froboese (left) of Milwaukee, Midwest bund head, killed himself under a train en route to a grand jury hearing in New York. Fritz Kuhn (center), former national Bund chief, is ill in Sing Sing prison, and Dr. Otto Willumeit, Chicago leader, is under indictment as a spy.

CHURCHILL: Third Meeting

For the third time within a year Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt met face to face to discuss war problems, when the British statesman arrived unheralded in Washington for a series of conferences. Their first meeting occurred last August aboard ship and resulted in the Atlantic charter. The second was Mr. Churchill's visit to Washington last December after America's entry into the war. It resulted in the declaration by the United Nations.

This third meeting, following closely on Russian Foreign Minister Molotov's historic conferences in Washington recently, promised momentous consequences in the prosecution of the war. Two matters of pressing need—the opening of a second European front and further steps to curb dangerously rising Allied ship losses by Axis submarines—faced the two leaders.

Another leader of the United Nations to reach American shores was Queen Wilhelmina of Holland.

REDS VS. NAZIS History Repeats?

Balacava, famed site of Tennyson's poem, "The Charge of the Light Brigade," took its place in modern battle headlines as Hitler had rammed his massed power against the defenses of Sevastopol's fortifications.

The Crimean fishing port—Balacava—where the legendary charge by the British occurred in 1854, was a fierce point of contention between the Russ and Nazi forces in the battle for control of the western Black sea coast.

Possession of the Sevastopol naval base was vital to the hard-pressed Russians, for it represented a powerful barrier to the approaches of the Caucasus oil fields—a prize which would give the Nazis coveted oil and bulwark their war effort.

To the north in the Ukraine, where the Nazis were attempting to straighten out their long circular line at Kharkov, battles raged doggedly, with Red army communiques reporting successful counterattacks.

FATS AND OILS: Housewives Contribute

Frying pans, pots and roasters in millions of American homes yielded up a harvest of fat as the national program to salvage grease and oils from the nation's kitchens got under way.

Fats collected in this household campaign will be used in making glycerine an important element in explosives manufacture. Meat markets everywhere will be collection agencies where housewives will deposit the salvaged fat. Butchers will then turn the fat over to the renderers.

In Chicago where a fat salvage program has been in progress for months past, it was reported that collections averaged 50,000 pounds weekly.

AUSTRALIA: Japs Still Menace

Lest his countrymen be lulled into a belief that the battle of the Coral sea had removed all danger of a Jap invasion, Prime Minister John Curtin of Australia held aloft a warning finger. Declaring that "Australia can be lost," he declared if the commonwealth fell to Nippon, that Hawaii and the entire North American coast would lie open to Japanese attack and west coast cities would be in danger.

MEDITERRANEAN: Axis Gamble Fails

As the swiftly moving battle for world naval supremacy shifted to the Mediterranean, Germany and Italy had made a supreme gamble by throwing every available airplane, submarine, torpedo boat and virtually the entire Italian fleet into an effort to knock out the British forces. The stakes were the strategic convoy routes supplying Axis-menaced Tobruk and Malta.

That the Axis gamble had failed was due in part to the timely intervention of United States army heavy bombers which made their Mediterranean debut by scoring 35 direct bomb hits on two Italian battleships, setting them afire and sending the whole force of 15 Italian warships scurrying home to port.

The epic sea and air fighting centered around two heavily laden British convoys—one leaving Alexandria for Tobruk and the other leaving Gibraltar for Malta. Both carried badly needed supplies for hard-pressed British garrisons.

In two days of death-struggle fighting, the British and Americans beat off Axis attacks, shepherded the convoys safely to their destinations, sank or damaged seven Italian warships and shot down 33 planes.

LIBYAN FRONT: Nazi Fox

With the Suez canal as his eventually hoped-for goal, foxy Nazi General Erwin Rommel continued his harassing thrust against the British forces in Libya.

Whether Rommel's dream of a drive to the Suez and a possible link with Japanese forces pushing west would ever materialize depended on how stout was the British resistance. Tobruk, recently reinforced by a huge British convoy, was the immediate target. The tide of battle had surged back and forth, with the Nazi desert force registering a superiority in tanks and anti-tank strength. Hope for the British lay in receiving further supplies and replacements and in a wearing down of Nazi power due to its sustained exertions.

The seriousness of the Libyan situation was evident from the fact that the Axis offensive succeeded in splitting the British army—one force withdrawing to Tobruk to make a stand while the other withdrew to positions near Egypt.

ARMY PAY: $50 for Bucks

Uncle Sam prepared to add at least $20 more per month to the pay check of every enlisted man in the nation's armed forces, when President Roosevelt signed legislation granting the first general military pay increase in 20 years. Non-commissioned officers, "shave-tails" and ensigns shared in the raise.

American soldiers and sailors thus became the highest paid fighting men in the world. The lowest grades—buck privates and apprentice seamen—will receive $50 a month, as against $30 formerly.

Officers above the rank of second lieutenant or ensign got no pay raises, but were allowed boosts in their subsistence and rental allowances.

One result was hoped for by sponsors of the new legislation—that was to eliminate recruiting competition between the army and navy. It had been charged that the navy had been in better position to obtain recruits since it could offer more attractive ratings. The uniform pay schedule would, it was believed, equalize the appeal of all services.

AIRCRAFT CARRIERS: Lessons Learned

Lessons learned in the battles of the Coral sea, Midway Island and the struggle for the Aleutian Islands were applied by the house naval affairs committee when it approved an $8,500,000,000 expansion bill projecting a "five-ocean navy." For a definite swing to sea airpower was discernible in the bill's provisions calling for immediate construction of 500,000 tons of aircraft carriers, while postponing the construction of five 60,000-ton super-battleships.

This trend was the immediate result of the smashing blows dealt Japanese seapower in recent weeks by American airplane carriers and their accompanying forces. It was tacit recognition that a revolution in naval tactics had occurred as a result of the battles in the Pacific.

In place of the postponed battleships, the navy will rush construction of more than a score of aircraft carriers with escort vessels and submarines. Scheduled to be completed within a year, they will be distributed among naval forces in all areas in which Axis fleets are operating.

CHINA: Japs Push On

As Jap armies drove deeper into China and two pincer columns were converging on the strategic 450-mile Chekiang-Kiangsi railroad, the China high command appealed again for an Allied blow that would divert the steadily mounting power of the enemy's invasion.

Discouraging news was made public in the announcement that Shanghai, an important station on the line and capital of Kiangsi province, had fallen.

With all highway sources cut off by the Japanese, China had to depend on giant American cargo planes to deliver supplies for her embattled armies. This trickle would have to be augmented to a full-scale flow of supplies if effective resistance was to continue by Chiang Kai-shek's armies.

PEACE TECHNIQUE 'Cooling Off'

A clue to post-war peace table technique was disclosed by Sumner Welles, undersecretary of state, when he advocated a "cooling off" period after the war before final terms are made.

In effect, the American statesman urged that both the victor and vanquished plan together and prepare an equitable settlement that would preclude future wars.

Speaking before a United Nations rally, Welles declared co-operation is no less essential in maintaining peace than in winning a war. "The final terms of peace," he said, "should wait until the immediate tasks of the transition period—after the defeat of the Axis powers—have been completed and final judgments can be coolly and rationally rendered."

VICHY FRANCE: 'Discontent Grows'

Somber were the words 86-year-old Marshal Petain spoke to the French people on the second anniversary of his nation's military collapse.

Admitting that his recovery program had suffered many setbacks, the aged chief of state declared that "discontent is growing" and warned that the government must undertake sterner measures of punishment to stamp out unrest, public anger and greed.

Petaim made no reference to Pierre Laval in his brief radio speech, although he had declared recently that he and Laval are going along "hand in hand and in complete understanding."

Not only the opposition of the people, but a "slack and sometimes incapable administration" by the government was blamed by the Marshal for present conditions.

MISCELLANY:

VICTORIA: Canadian air force squadrons and Canadian anti-aircraft units have been operating for some days with the United States force in Alaska, it was reported by Lieut. Gen. Kenneth Stuart, chief of the Canadian general staff. This marked the first time in World War II Canadian forces have taken part in any operations with the United States army.

New Rubber From Old to Help Bridge Shortage

When you answer the nation's call for your scrap rubber, here is what becomes of it before it becomes reclaimed rubber, mixed with crude and served up to bridge the shortage. At right is a pile of finely ground rubber scrap.

W.N.U. RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: To save his life after he quarrels with the boss of Wild Horse, Asa Brock, Con Cameron hits the trail, leaving his pal, Caramba Vear, behind. On the trail he meets the Raniers and rides with them until he learns they are wanted for robbery and murder. Discovering that Nevil Lowe, whose life he had saved shortly before, has a ranch near Tivan, Con goes there, only to be seized as a murder and robbery suspect. Because of his association with the Raniers, he is believed to be "Comanche Linn." Lowe has been made marshal, but will not release him. So he and Jeff Allmon break out of jail and join Dud Paramore's gang. Paramore hates Lowe and tries to avenge the death of some of his men killed by Lowe's posse by kidnaping Lowe's sister, Janet. In spite of Lowe's treatment of him, Con helps Janet escape. Then he foils Dud's attempt to rob the Tivan bank. When he finds Jeff Allmon, killed by Dud, he leaves a note by Jeff's body telling what happened. Caramba Vear catches up with him after looking for him all this time, and persuades him to stay in the neighborhood. If he is not seen with the Paramore gang he may not be recognized. If he runs he is almost certain to be caught. Calling himself "Twenty Johnson," Con goes with Caramba to a saloon where they meet Gale Goree, foreman of the Broken Wheel ranch.

"I want a detective, but I'll take two."

CHAPTER XI

Con and Caramba ate in a place the bartender recommended, a clean house called only "Carmelita's Joint" where the cooking was wholly Mexican. Con talked of Slash Oxweld and speculated concerning the gunman's next movements.

Caramba nodded agreement with Con's measure of Gale Goree.

"The real quill! Yes, sir! Much of a man. Reckon we measure up to Busted Wheel size? We might hit up Goree for jobs, huh? I wonder how come they call this Tension outfit the Broken Wheel. . . . Wagon Wheel I have heard of, lots of times. But a busted one—"

Back in the cantina, explanation of the brand came from the nervous bartender.

"That was the Wheel, up to twenty-three year back. Seems old Topeka had him a partner in some l'il mine and they fell out and this partner figured Topeka'd skinned him. Which, maybe, Topeka done. Anyhow, Emory was awful mad and a hard man himself. He grabbed up the Tension boy that was six or seven and he run. Nobody's seen the kid from that day to this—either Emory killed him or maybe he's got kids of his own, by now. But Topeka come back from the last of his trailings and he knocked a chunk out of his brand—changed it to the Broken Wheel."

"You know, I'll bet my uncle knew something about all this," Con said thoughtfully. "He never was much to talk, but he did use around Tivan and on over, in his young days, before my aunt knocked his horns off. I've heard him tell a thing or two and he must've been something extra with a gun. He—"

"Slash Oxweld!" the bartender interrupted, his voice almost a groan. "He's got everybody plumb cat-eyed, since Goree and the Wheelers pulled out. Slash is poison. As soon kill you back or front without a bobble. He just aims to get the killing done. Now, he's plenty fast—faster'n Goree, I bet you. But somehow he just can't get the glue out of his holster around that Texas man. If he could, he would kill him, I bet you anything. But—"

There was a poker game going in a corner of the big room. Presently Con and Caramba drifted over to watch. A cowboy got up, professing himself empty of both money and liquor. Con slid into the seat and began to play against three cowboys and two nondescript townsmen. Caramba looked on. Con had poor cards for several hands and lost a few dollars. Then, as he picked up his cards on the sixth or seventh deal and found three jacks, he leaned back a little and swore with artful amazement.

"Throw 'em away before they land you in trouble—and let a man set down and show these tin horns how to play!" Slash Oxweld snarled at his shoulder. "Three jacks is nothing!"

Con put his cards down without so much as turning his head. A man who had been looking on from the other side of the table edged away and began to walk fast toward the door, looking back. Con stood and pivoted deliberately to meet Oxweld's grinning stare.

"You asked for it!" Oxweld said in a high, flat voice. "You just asked for it!" He grinned.

His thumb had been hooked in the belt just over his tied-down holster. Now, his hand twisted flashingly. Left-handed, he slapped down and outward, just as he would have blocked a boxer's punch, to knock Oxweld's hand away from the Colt butt. His own gun was inside his shirt, comfortably snugged in his waist-band. As he struck, he drew and let the hammer drop as the muzzle bore upon Oxweld, thumbed the hammer back and fired his second shot. Oxweld staggered with each impact of lead. The flaming powder at this pointblank range set his shirt afire. He spun with a groan and lurched one step away from the table, then fell flat.

Oxweld sprawled without moving. Caramba's shot was like an echo to the report of that other man's gun. A cowboy came in sight beside a table with lifted Colt and Caramba shot again and puffed dust from the man's shirt. He dropped the gun and went scrambling toward the door on hands and knees. Ahead of him, a fat little man jumped up from under another table with a high, squealing scream. He ran, still squealing, to the door. The cowboy whom Caramba had shot followed, still on hands and knees. The fat man plunged out. Caramba sent a slug into the floor just behind the cowboy and he fell flat and began to roll to the door. In the cantina there was sudden quiet, then a buzz of voices.

"Stick 'em up, you-all!" a nervous voice commanded from the shadows around the back door. "I'm the constable. And I got you covered with two barrels full of buck—"

He was a lank and fidgety and uncertain-seeming man, this officer. But the short double-barreled gun in his hands was trained upon both Con and Con shrugged and lifted both hands to his ears as the constable moved slowly toward them.

"You don't mean that you'd arrest a man for trying to save his life!" he said irritably. "Oxweld has been on the prod ever since Goree showed him up—and you know it!"

"Maybe so. But there's law that has got to be followed. I—Ah, Judge!"

A tall man, long of face and narrow of dark eyes, pushed through the growing crowd and waved the constable's shotgun down impatiently. He said in almost a confidential tone to Con:

"Put your hardware away. I can hold an inquest right here, right now. Some of you men! Up you come for a jury. Those who didn't see it, by preference. If you did, forget it. We've got plenty of witnesses."

The formalities were very slight. When three witnesses from the players at the poker table had testified, promptly the jury called Oxweld's death justifiable. The justice looked at Con.

"That was fast work. But it was more—it was thoughtful. I take it that you didn't think yourself faster, just because of the way Goree treated Oxweld."

"No. No, I didn't," Con answered slowly, frowning. "All I thought was that somebody would have to kill Oxweld of he'd be killing him a man. When he shoved himself into our poker game in a way that not only wasn't necessary, but would make almost anything on two legs fit to tie—exposing a decent hand—I figured that he'd picked me to kill. He wasn't in a poker humor; he didn't want my place. I just looked the tender young pilgrim to him. So, before I stood up I knew it was Oxweld or me!"

"And knew what you intended to do to make it Oxweld," the justice said, still studying him shrewdly. "I thought so. Are you and your friend working?"

"No. We thought about hitting up the Wheel. If Tension hasn't got jobs, we'll go on to see Lit Taylor. I rode for him a while and he told me to come back when I wanted to."

"The Wheel," the justice said softly. "Why, you couldn't peel 'em for a better outfit. Are you Vear, or Twenty Johnson?"

"Twenty Johnson. But—Oh, I remember: I told the bartender our names. Does the justice here check on every saddle lobo?"

He looked with open curiosity at the tall man. Caramba was watching him, also, with blank face and narrowed eyes.

"Not every saddle lobo, no. Not as justice, either. My name is Wiley. Suppose we have a talk. You wait five or ten minutes, then drift. Go past Carmelita's swing right around the next house, walk straight ahead until you bump into a little corral. I'll be there."

Nobody seemed interested in their movements when they got their horses and rode through damp darkness up to the corral Wiley had indicated. Beyond was a small adobe house and one shaded window was a yellow square. They put Pancho and Caramba's black Job Stuart under a ramada and went cautiously to knock at the house door. Wiley's calm voice answered and Con gave his alias. The door opened and Wiley stepped back to let them in.

The clean, comfortably untidy kitchen and bedroom had no place that would have hidden a man. Wiley gave them chairs in the bedroom, by a table that held whisky and cigars under a shaded reading-lamp.

When they sat with glasses and cigars, Wiley shifted his lean length in the old leather chair opposite.

"I think you two shape up as the answers to a question," he said calmly, swirling the liquor in his glass. "Before we go any deeper into our business discussions, let me make it plain that who you really may be, or what you may have done, is nothing at all to me. I want a detective, but I'll take two, since you boys seem to be siding each other. Will you pass your words not to mention anything I'm going to say, without my permission, whether or not you go to work for me?"

"Why, I think we can do that," Con said, after an inquiring glance at Caramba. "I promise!"

"I trot with you," Caramba agreed. "No talk."

"Buono! I'm not only a justice, but I own half the Walking X. Sometimes my partner and I have said we own half—thieves own the other half and collect a damn' sight more income than we can. Well, most of the outfits in the Territory are in our fix. Some months ago we organized a private association. Anyway, there's more and more expensive stealing going on than we've had for a long time. And a detective's job is more dangerous."

"I want you to take on with the Broken Wheel if Tension will hire you."

"Well, then," Con said slowly, "as I see the layout, you want us to work for Tension in two ways—as hands and as detectives. But he's not to know that we're anything but hands and we keep our eyes skinned to see if the rustlers have got help on the Broken Wheel. Suppose we uncover something?"

"You'll have to use your own judgment."

"Well, it sounds all right to me," Con told him. "How about you, Caramba? Want to give the proposition a whirl?"

Caramba shrugged. But his eyes were twinkling.

"I'm a scary man, Judge," Caramba said whimsically. "But if this smoke-stomping, fire-breathing terror of the prairies, here, he'll guarantee to protect me, I'm your gossling. We'll hang and rattle for you—if the pay's right."

"Two hundred a month. You can split it to suit yourselves. And—here's—something for each of you . . ."

He got up and crossed to a battered desk, fumbled in a drawer and turned, holding up two dull brazen disks.

"English pennies. I'll scratch my initials on each one: W.W. A word goes with them: Eye. Any member of our association will recognize the penny, the initials, and the word, as identifying a detective. Suppose a detective working for us joined a sticky looping gang and was caught with the rustlers. He'd say he was just a passer-by. 'Search me!' he'd yell. Our member in the necktie party would do that, very promptly. Sight of the penny would be almost enough to tell him the truth. The word would make him sure. So he would arrange for our man to get off, without ever exposing himself if possible."

"Does Nevil Lowe belong to the association?" Con asked.

"Oh, yes! In fact, he's an original member. Don't worry at all about him!"

They drank a little, played a little stud poker, and turned in at midnight in the livery corral near their horses, without excitement.

They ate at Carmelita's in the early morning and drifted about sitting talking to loafers like themselves. Near midday Wiley appeared and looked at them as at the merest acquaintances.

"Didn't you men say you're job-hunting? Well, Topeka Tension of the Broken Wheel is down at the rooming house. I don't know but he might have a place for you."

Magic for Your Meals—Berry Jams
(See Recipes Below.)

Time for Jam

With the arrival of the fruit and jelly season, you homemakers will want to make the most of these garden products for winter use. This year it is doubly important for you to can fruits and jellies wisely, as this will help you not only in conserving the nation's resources, but also assure you of delicious accompaniments to your meals during cooler weather.

Since sugar is used in canning not only as a sweetener, but as a preservative, the government will allot five pounds of sugar per person, in addition to what you receive in your ration, so that you will have sugar for canning.

*Ripe Raspberry Jam. (Makes 10 6-ounce glasses)

4½ cups prepared fruit
6 cups sugar
1 box powdered fruit pectin

To prepare fruit, crush thoroughly or grind about 2 quarts fully ripe raspberries. Remove some of seeds by sieving part of pulp, if desired.

Measure sugar into dry dish and set aside until needed. Measure prepared fruit into a 5- to 6-quart kettle, filling up last cup or fraction of cup with water if necessary.

Place over hottest fire. Add powdered fruit pectin, mix well, and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. At once pour in sugar, stirring constantly. (To reduce foaming, ¼ teaspoon butter may be added.) Continue stirring, bring to a full rolling boil, and boil hard 1 minute.

Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once. Jam takes slightly less sugar than jelly, and you will work an economy by making use of the fruit in addition to the saving on sugar:

*Ripe Blackberry Jam. (Makes 11 6-ounce glasses)

4½ cups prepared fruit
6½ cups sugar
1 box powdered fruit pectin

To prepare fruit, grind or crush thoroughly about 2 quarts fully ripe blackberries (not black caps). Sieve about ¼ of ground or crushed pulp. (For Spiced Blackberry Jam, add ¼ to ½ teaspoon each cloves, cinnamon, and allspice, or any desired combination of spices.)

Measure sugar into dry dish and set aside until needed. Measure prepared fruit into a 5- to 6-quart kettle, filling up last cup or fraction of cup with water if necessary.

Place over hottest fire, adding powdered fruit pectin, mix well, and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. At once pour in sugar, stirring constantly. (To reduce foaming, ¼ teaspoon butter may be added.) Continue stirring, bring to a full rolling boil, and boil hard 1 minute.

Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once.

Jam takes slightly less sugar than jelly, and you will work an economy by making use of the fruit in addition to the saving on sugar:

*Cherry Relish.

2 cups pitted cherries
1 cup seedless raisins
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ cup brown sugar
½ teaspoon cloves
½ cup honey
½ cup vinegar
¼ cup pecan nutsmeats

Mix all the ingredients except pecans and cook 1 hour, slowly. Add pecans and cook 3 minutes longer. Pour into hot sterilized jars and seal at once.

Sugar Substitutes.
If you feel that you cannot use sugar in all of the canning recipes given here, even with your extra rationing, here are the rules for substitutions:

If you are using a bottled fruit pectin recipe, you may substitute 2 cups light corn syrup for 2 cups of the sugar. Do not use more than 2 cups of corn syrup in any recipe, however, as this will give unsatisfactory results.

In a powdered fruit pectin recipe, you may use 1 cup light corn syrup for each cup of sugar omitted. But, do not try to use all corn syrup in the recipe instead of sugar. You may substitute corn syrup for only ½ the sugar required. If, for example, the recipe calls for 6 cups of sugar altogether, you may use 3 cups of light corn syrup, but you must also use 3 cups of sugar.

Why get hot and bothered over your cooking and household problems when you can get expert advice on them? Write, explaining your problem to Miss Lynn Chambers, Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Illinois. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply.

NEW IDEAS For Home-makers

SAME BED WITH FOOT CUT DOWN—THE DOTTED SWISS VALANCE IS STITCHED TO MUSLIE BETWEEN THE SPRINGS AND MATTRESS

HAND-MADE QUILT IS NOT WELL DISPLAYED ON A BED WITH FOOT BOARD AND NO VALANCE

MOST quilts today are planned as bedspreads and have a color scheme to harmonize with other decorations. If a variety of figured scraps is used one color is generally repeated in each block to give the design unity.

The beauty of any quilt is enhanced if it is set off with a valance around the bed. The bed in the sketch had no particular tradition and the footboard was much too high to display the quilt to advantage. What a difference in the effect when the board was cut down and the crisp frills of dotted Swiss were added! Surely, any quilt worth piecing is worth this extra touch.

NOTE: If you have a metal bed that you would like to modernize you will find sketches and directions in Mrs. Spears' Book 3. There are eight of these booklets of 32 pages of things to make from odds and ends which accumulate around the house, or from inexpensive new materials. Copies are 10 cents each and with an order for three (No. 1 to 3) you will receive a set of three different quilt block patterns including the Whirl Wind illustrated herewith. Send order to:

Concisely

"Aunt—I suppose you will be at the picnic, John?"
"John—Naw, I ain't goin'."
"Aunt—Don't say 'I ain't goin'.' I'll give you a lesson: 'I am not going, you are not going, he is not going, we are not going, they are not going. Now can you say all that?'
"John—Sure. There ain't nobody goin'."

Few Virtues
Lady—That parrot I bought here swears frightfully.
Dealer—I don't deny it, madam, but you must admit he doesn't drink or smoke.

Beddix takes rationing so seriously that instead of calling his wife "Sugar," he now calls her "Honey."

Knew All the Angles
Professor (in math class)—What steps would you take to measure the height of a building with a protractor?
Student—I would lower the protractor by a string and measure the string.

I been readin' about some of these divorces and it seems to me husbands are like automobiles. If you take good care of them, you don't have to keep getting new ones all the time.

And one way of takin' good care of him is to see he gets all his vitamins. And that's where KELLOGG'S PEP comes in. 'Course it hasn't got 'em all, but it's extra-rich in the two most likely to be short in ordinary meals—vitamins B₁ and D. What's more, PEP's one grand-tastin' cereal, too!

Fifth R-Day To Be Held Soon

Only one registration office in the county is to be opened for the fifth registration to be held Tuesday, June 30, and that will be located in the city hall, according to Fred Booth, chairman of the Selective Service Board.

It is believed that the one office will easily take care of the number to be registered and there is no necessity for places in Fulton and at other points as has been the case in some previous registrations. Young men obliged to register and finding it necessary to be away from town on that date may register before that time at the Selective Service Office in the Meyer Building.

As many as twelve volunteer typists could be used for the registration, if that number offer their services it will not be necessary for anyone to work more than two or three hours, Booth said.

The hours are between 7 a. m. and 9 p. m. and all young men whose birth date falls on or after January 1, 1922 and on or before June 30, 1924 are required to register. Approximately 220,000 young Texans will be affected. This fifth registration will complete the inventory of America's potential military man power.

Under current policy men under 20 are not subject to combat duty but they will be registered in the same manner as men enrolled in previous registrations.

They will be required to answer only nine questions; name, residence, mailing address, telephone, date of birth, place of birth, and the name and address of a person who will always know the registrant's whereabouts, and name and address of employer.

There will be no questionnaire to fill out and no examination to undergo.

Home Nursing Class Needs Supplies

"Donate or lend" is the request of Mrs. J. P. Hanway this week in appealing for serviceable sick room supplies to be used in the Home Nursing class soon to be organized under the direction of the Red Cross.

The class will be held in the Red Cross quarters in the Meyer building. One bed has already been given. Mrs. Hanway reported, but there is need for another, or a cot, with mattresses and mattress covers.

Other items on the needed list are hot water bottles, ice caps, large basin, large enamel pitcher, towels, wash cloths, and at least two changes of sheets, each student will furnish her own thermometer.
