GAS RATIONING REGISTRATION NOV. 19, 20, 21

Methodist Sponsor Building Social Center for Community

PILOTING
Rationing reprieve was

Mrs. Victor... had received no
... Guesses are anywhere from... to Jan 1, but most guesses are that rationing will begin Dec. 1. Registration for basic ration cards is to be held Nov. 19, 20 and 21 at the school house.

Rockport is soon to have a new asset—a Social Center for Soldiers, Sailors, Marines and Coast Guard who may be stationed or visiting here. This center is to be a building on the Methodist Church property, but it is to be non-denominational and all churches may have a part in its functions as a recreation center for service men. Funds have been raised for the building, plans made and construction is to start soon.

Due much credit for the new Social Center is the Rev. Almus D.
Jameson, pastor of the Methodist Church, who pushed the idea through to completion. For more than a week Rev. Jameson worked to secure the necessary contributions, and no telling how many hours before that in drawing up plans and selling the idea. It is a swell piece of work, and we feel sure that it will be appreciated by not only the service men, but by the town people generally.

High praise was given the press of America for the success of the Newspaper's United Scrap Metal
Drive this month by Donald M.
Nelson, chief of the War Production Board, in a statement issued last week. Mr. Nelson said:

"The job that the newspapers have done is absolutely unprecedented in this country. It has been magnificent. The results have surpassed the fondest hopes that I entertained when I asked them to come in a few weeks ago and discuss the problem of our material shortages and how the newspapers could help.

"This has been a wonderful job and has resulted in increasing the flow of scrap to the steel furnaces that must be kept going to keep our munitions program up. The whole campaign has been a major contribution to the war effort."

While the press of the nation led the way by pointing out the necessity for quick action in getting scrap gathered, much of the credit for the success of the campaign is due to the people who brought in the iron and steel. This action on the part of the public, inspired by newspapers, is a reflection of the real value of newspapers in critical times such as these.

Mr. and Mrs. Caspary Buy Stumberg Home

Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Caspary purchased the H. E. Stumberg home this week, and plan to move within a near future. The house is located on the beach road, about a mile from town. It is of white stucco and "telescoped" style of architecture.

The Stumbergs built the house
their home three years ago.

J. F. STANLEY ATTENDS BAPTIST CONVENTION

Rev. Jas. F. Stanley is spending the week in Fort Worth attending the Baptist General Convention of Texas. He left Monday from Corpus Christi and expects to be back before the week-end.

More than a hundred fishermen lined the concrete rim of Rockport's famous "fish bowl" Wednesday. The cold norther brought the fish bowl to life. It is believed to be the foremost of hungry, fighting fish.

During this week is not to be

New Building For Benefit of All Service Men

Social Center Will Be Non Denominational, For Community Use

Rockport will soon have a new non-denominational social center for service men, according to an announcement this week by the Rev. Almus D. Jameson, pastor of the Methodist church. The building is being sponsored by the Methodist church—with the assurance that people of all faiths will be privileged to use the center and to help plan and provide entertainment for service men.

Rev. Jameson, who solicited contributions for the project, is largely responsible for the center and he plans to provide a place where the serviceman may go to become acquainted with people here and to enjoy wholesome recreation.

"Building material has been purchased," Rev. Jameson said, "and plans are drawn for a building 20 feet by 48 feet to be composed of a 10'x30' kitchen, 28'x30' recreation room, 10'x15' library, 10'x7' cloak room, 10'x8' rest room and shower bath."

"This building when completed will be thrown open for use," Rev.
Jameson continued, "to any and all religious denominations, and each and every denomination without regard to creed or sect will be invited to arrange programs for the entertainment of the service men,
from time to time."

In this connection, Rev. Jameson states that it is his earnest wish that everyone feel free to take advantage of the conveniences which will be offered, with the positive assurance that there shall be no discrimination against either Protestant, Catholic, or Jew—all shall be welcome.

"It is also the desire of those who have initiated this movement that the building and grounds may be used as a social center for the entire community, especially the young people with the positive assurance that those of other faith and creed will not be constantly reminded that they are on Methodist property," Rev. Jameson said.

"This is not done in any sense as a possible means to try to proselyte anyone, but simply with the desire to do whatever is possible to make the lot of all a little more cheerful and a little more happy during these strenuous times.

"At the close of the present war it is understood that any who have donated to this enterprise and who are not of the Methodist persuasion will, on written request to the board of trustees of the Methodist church, be reimbursed for their contributions. The property is and will continue to be the property of the Methodist church and under its supervision. Construction of the building will begin soon."

Post Office Urges Early Gift Mailing

The Post Office Department now is starting the most gigantic task in its history—the movement of a deluge of Christmas parcels, cards and letters while maintaining the regular flow of millions of pieces of mail daily to and from our armed forces all over the world.

Indications are that the volume of Christmas mail will be the largest on record. Already in September, latest month for which figures are available, retail sales had reached a level second only to the record month of December, 1941, according to the Department of Commerce. And sales are rising.
Such heavy purchases always pre-sage heavy mailings.

If thousands of our soldiers, sailors, marines and civilian friends are not to be disappointed at Christmas time, the public must cooperate by mailing earlier than ever before and by addressing letters and parcels properly. The best efforts of the Post Office Department alone cannot be enough, in view of wartime difficulties faced by the postal system. The public must assist.

About 25,000 experienced postal workers already have been taken by the war services. Arrangements are underway to add thousands of temporary personnel to postal staffs, but this man power is hard to find and is inexperienced. Facilities of railroads and air lines are heavily taxed by movements of huge quantities of war materials and personnel. Extra trucks are almost impossible to obtain. Winter weather, hampering transportation is beginning.

The free-mailing privilege granted to members of the armed forces has raised their mailings some 30 per cent, it is estimated. Expansion of those forces also is adding rapidly to the postal burden.

The deadline already is past for mailing gifts to Army and Navy personnel overseas with assurance that the parcels will arrive by Christmas. The New York post office reports that in late October, 350,000 such parcels were handled
daily in that office alone.

The Post Office Department is making strenuous efforts to avoid such a terrific jam as it faced in 1918 under similar conditions, during the First World War. It can succeed in those efforts—and avoid many heartaches for its patrons—if the public will cooperate by mailing early.

Jeter's Pets Are Back Again

J. F. Jeter, retired railroad man, ardent fisherman and trainer of pelicans, has three of his big-billed pets back again, namely: Blue, Bill and Jerry; but, Old Mike, Jeter's favorite fish-eater of last winter, isn't here any more. He starved to death after some fisherman broke the old bird's beak after catching him on a hook. "I tried to feed him," Jeter said of Mike, "but he was in such pain and misery he wouldn't eat."

Christmas Buying Season Earliest --And Will be Longest In History

Beginning back in October, when friends, wives and sweethearts began buying gifts for overseas men,
the earliest and longest Christmas season in history is now getting into full swing.

People have the money to buy—and the merchants who are scrapping and manipulating for yule goods to replenish fast disappearing stocks, warn that the early shopper is going to get the choice gifts.

Here in Rockport Kaufman's Department Store is blossoming with inside Christmas decorations and on the counters and shelves unreplaceable toys are beginning to appear. When some items, including wheel toys, are gone, there will be no more. The same is true with many other gift items.

Joe Johnson's drug store windows are featuring an array of dolls, dogs, teddy bears and other playthings for children. Johnson says it is the earliest Christmas season he has known, but believes that the real rush will still come from late shoppers.

All Auto Owners Must Register At School House

Rationing Date Delayed, But Registration Will Be Held Next Week

J. F. Bullard, chairman of the Aransas County War Price and Rationing Board, has received notice that actual rationing of gasoline has been postponed, but new registration dates have been ordered by OPA officials.

Registration dates were changed
this week from Nov. 12, 13 and 14 to Nov. 19, 20 and 21. The delay became necessary when it became impossible to get supplies for rationing to all communities in the country.

The registration for basic mileage in Aransas County will be held at the Rockport school on Nov. 19, 20 and 21 from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Motorists registering for basic mileage rations at the school house must take along their application forms, listing serial numbers of their tires, and their car registration cards, Bullard said.

"The application forms are now available at service stations, garages and other conveniently located places throughout Rockport and should be picked up at once by any owner of a passenger car or motorcycle who does not already have one," Bullard said.

"This form is simple. Most of the information can be obtained from the vehicle registration card.
The most important information needed to fill out the application, however, is the list of serial numbers on every tire which you or any relative living in your house own for that vehicle."

The serial numbers, Mr. Bullard warned, are the indented numbers on the tire walls. They are not to be confused with any raised numbers appearing on the tires. In case the serial numbers have been obliterated, only the branch name of the tire need be listed.

The rationing board chairman urged car owners with more than five tires for each vehicle to dispose of these excess tires at once, since the school house registrar cannot issue a mileage ration book to any applicant who lists more than five tires. Excess tires can be sold to the government through the local office of the Railway Express Agency.

"Only basic ration books will be issued by the school house registrars," Mr. Bullard said. "Motorists with car registration cards and properly filled out application forms will be issued "A" books providing for 240 miles of driving a month.

Fish Bowl Fun Warms Up As Cold Weather Brings In First of Big, Fightin' Trout

this week couldn't resist the temptation to try their luck with the first cold norther. Many of them trout that weighed 12 pounds.

Fire Chief Urges 'Older Men' to Learn Use of Fire Fighting Equipment

Fire Chief Edward Barnard this week again issued a plea for "older men" of Rockport to attend meetings of the volunteer Fire Department to learn how to use fire fighting equipment. The chief points out that many of the regular firemen are being called into armed service and that it would be well for those not likely to be called under the draft law to familiarize themselves with the department's equipment.

"At our meeting on November 5
the older men of the community were urged to attend," Chief Barnard said. "Seventeen were asked and only six came. I was able to contact some on short notice, but more are urged to come out whenever they can on regular drill nights."

"The regular department has lost thirty-one men, fifteen to services and the rest have moved away to jobs out of town or have lost interest," the chief continued.
"It is imperative for the protection of your own property and to maintain our present good fire insurance credit that you attend and fami-lize yourselves with our equip-

Trucks Now Rolling Over Alaskan Highway

U. S. troops and supplies are now rolling into Alaska over the Alaska Highway (Alcan), which was finished months ahead of schedule. The 1,600-mile road ends at Fairbanks. Captured in Battle With British Corvette

In a midnight Atlantic ocean battle the corvette Dianthus rammed and sank a U-boat which had been imperiling United Nations supply lines. After the U-boat was blown to the surface with depth charges the Dianthus rammed it four times. A number of German prisoners were picked up by the Dianthus, which rejoined her convoy in time to rescue survivors from a torpedoed merchant ship. Here are some of the U-boat prisoners disembarking from HMS Dianthus at a British port.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Rommel Rout Lifts Middle East Peril, Paves Way for Drive in Mediterranean; WPB 'Budget' Plan Speeds War Output; Allies Drive Japs Back in New Guinea

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.) Released by Western Newspaper Union.

With Allied forces in New Guinea steadily pushing the Japs back to their seaport bases, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's recent tour of inspection was a happy occasion. The Pacific commander in chief is shown riding in the front seat of a jeep, while in the rear seat, scrutinizing the troops is Gen. Thomas Blamey, commander of Australian land forces.

NORTH AFRICA: Rommel Routed

Wily Marshal Rommel's North Africa corps had been driven back on previous occasions. But never before had its reverses reached the proportions of a disastrous rout. Yet rout it was as Lt. General Montgomery's British Eighth army climaxed a 13-day slashing drive by shattering Rommel's Egyptian defense line and pursuing his fleeing armies back along the coastal road toward Libya. The decisive nature of the Nazi's defeat was indicated by General Montgomery's statement that the Allied desert offensive had resulted in a "complete and absolute victory" and that the Axis was "completely finished" in North Africa. Such a victory would mean a freeing of the Mediterranean and the chance to strike at the Axis soft spot—Italy. Military experts pronounced the defeat the worst the Axis had yet suffered. Unofficial estimates placed Axis losses at 40,000 troops killed, wounded or captured. A Cairo communique reported the capture of 9,000 Axis troops.

The extent of the Allied victory was further indicated by the fact that 260 Axis tanks were knocked out, 270 heavy guns destroyed, 600 Axis planes downed and 100,000 tons of shipping crippled. A communique reported that Italian troops had suffered so severely in one sector they had asked for a truce to bury their dead.

While Allied planes had harassed the retreating Axis forces and land units pushed forward, it was officially revealed that 7,000 fresh American troops had arrived in Egypt. These units comprised ground crews for the air forces, technicians, engineers and members of the quartermaster's corps.

Thus had the Axis threat to the Alexandria naval base and the Suez canal been removed. Gone, too, was the menace of a junction of Rommel's armies with the Nazi forces threatening the Middle East via Trans-Caucasia.

NEW GUINEA: Japs in Reverse

Three key points remained in Jap hands in northern New Guinea. Only by their capture would the Allied forces claim control of the area. These were Buna, Lae, and Salamaua—all seaports. Allied troops had made a good start by recapturing the inland base of Kokoda only 50 miles from Buna, after a hard-fought drive over the crest of the Owen Stanley mountains. This latest Allied success underscored the quick-change character of the war, for only five weeks before the Japs had been within 32 miles of Port Moresby.

That the Japs did not underestimate the dangers of their present position was shown by their attempt to land two transports with 7,000 soldiers at Buna to bolster their retreating forces. Allied heavy and medium bombers prevented the landing and drove the convoys off.

AXIS SPY-HUNT: Latin America Acts

As a far-reaching cleanup of Axis espionage in Latin America was under way with the deportation by the Chilean government of 12 German and Italian agents, a report detailing the operations of the spy ring responsible for the torpedoing of United Nations ships was made public by the Advisory Committee for the Political Defense of the American Nations. The report was issued in Montevideo, Uruguay.

WAR MATERIALS: New Allotment Plan

The United States moved closer to total war economy with civilian production cut to the vanishing point when War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson announced the genesis of a "Controlled Materials Plan."

Under the plan's operation, scarce materials will be strictly budgeted to uses that will harm the Axis the most. Production generally will be limited to military needs, shut-downs will be prevented, the output of war commodities stepped up and nonessentials eliminated.

So drastic will the control be that allotments of steel for civilian use in 1943 may represent only 1 1/2 per cent of the nation's total steel production, according to Leon Henderson, director of the Office of Civilian Supply. The civilian share of copper will be less than three-quarters of 1 per cent.

WPB Chief Nelson said war production would reach its peak by July, 1943.

ELECTIONS: All Eyes on 1944

Politics turned their eyes toward 1944 as they pondered the results of the wartime national elections. To Republicans the results were far above their highest expectations. Not only did the GOP capture four governorships and nine senate seats from the Democrats, but they gained 43 seats in the house of representatives in an upsurge that rolled from coast to coast.

The result was that the Democrats controlled the house by the precarious margin of 8 votes—a margin so slim that any coalition could upset it. The lineup was: Democrats, 220 seats; Republicans, 208; Progressive, 2; and Farmer-Labor and American-Labor, 1 each. In the senate the Democrats retained a majority of 18, holding 56 seats to the Republican's 38.

Significant among Republican victories was the election of Thomas E. Dewey as governor of New York. It marked the first time in 20 years the opposition party had carried the state. Gone from the senate after January 1, would be the veteran independent, George Norris of Nebraska, as well as Democratic Senators Brown of Michigan, Herring of Iowa, Lee of Oklahoma, Smathers of New Jersey and Schwartz of Wyoming.

SOLOMONS: Tailspins for Japs

Heartening was Vice Admiral William F. Halsey's report that 520 Japanese planes had been shot down thus far in the Solomons by navy, army and marine pilots. American losses, the commander reported, had been comparatively light.

Meanwhile, with Jap naval concentrations withdrawn from the Guadalcanal area after air and sea engagements with the American fleet, ground fighting was comparatively light. Marines and U. S. army units did, however, push the Jap invaders several miles back from strategic Henderson air field. Big guns of naval vessels subjected Jap mountain strongholds to heavy bombardment.

Although Round 1 of the crucial engagements for the Solomons' control was settled in favor of the American defenders, Secretary of Navy Frank Knox warned the nation not to be overoptimistic, predicting that the Japs would come back for more.

HULL:

Backs Vichy Policy

More verbal brickbats have been hurled at the state department for its handling of relations with Vichy France than for any other diplomatic policy. But through thick and thin, grave-faced Secretary of State Cordell Hull has stuck to his guns in continuing recognition of Marshal Petain's regime.

Latest evidence that Mr. Hull intended to continue that policy and had President Roosevelt's backing came in the form of an assertion that the "State department and the administration are entirely satisfied with the government's policy toward Vichy France and the way that policy has been pursued."

Mr. Hull's remark was in reply to a request that he comment on Wendell L. Willkie's recent statement that the administration's "lack of courageous leadership . . . nowhere is more plainly illustrated than by its continued recognition of the vicious and subversive Vichy government."

RUSSIAN FRONT: Trans-Caucasia Next?

Balked at Stalingrad and on the defensive in the northwest as the bitter Russian winter swirled down from the steppes of the Don, the Nazi command had shifted its main operations southward to the Caucasus. Here Hitler's generals relied on a strategic device that had served them well in the past—that of concentrating overwhelming force at one single objective. That objective was Ordzhonikidze on the Georgian military road leading south through the Caucasus mountains. Russian defenses stiffened and slowed down.

The Nazi thrust first forced a Russian withdrawal from Nalchik, 60 miles northwest of Ordzhonikidze. It was estimated that 50,000 German and Rumanian mountain infantry, armored troops and tank detachments had then edged toward the snow-sheathed Caucasus mountains.

The Nazis' goal of the strategic Georgian highway from Ordzhonikidze to Tiflis would give them a rapid entry to the oil fields of Trans-Caucasia and bring them menacingly close to the Turkish border and the Middle East.

Elsewhere in the Caucasus the Nazis were reported on the defensive. Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, estimated that 38,000 Germans had been killed, wounded or captured in September and October during their vain effort to break through the Mozdok region—an offensive succeeded by the flanking drive toward the Georgian military highway.

DOCTOR SHORTAGE: Senate Seeks Remedy

Even as senate leaders sought a solution to the war-depleted supply of doctors, Paul De Kruff, author and scientist warned that the nation's health might be threatened by the indiscriminate draining of medical men from private practice into the armed forces.

Under consideration was a plan to create a federal agency empowered to freeze doctors in their civilian status, order them to areas where shortages exist or draft them for military service.

Rural areas face the most acute shortage because so many doctors in these regions are entering military service, according to Dr. Frank Leahy, national chairman of the Central Board of Procurement and Assignment.

Surgeon General Thomas Parran of the United States Public Health service went on record as opposed to compulsory assignment of doctors at present. "We may have to come to it eventually to alleviate the serious depletion of doctors in many areas," he said, "but I am not now prepared to recommend it."

MISCELLANY:

WASHINGTON: The five-cent cigar was added to the list of war victims with the announcement by the Office of Price Administration that the ceiling price on nickel stogies would be six cents hereafter. Increases averaging 20 per cent in retail prices of all cigars were allowed by OPA to cover higher wartime excise taxes and increased costs of labor and production.

DOAN'S PILLS

GHOST PLANE

By ARTHUR STRINGER

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: To keep Norland Airways in business Alan Slade agreed to fly a so-called scientist named Frayne and his assistant, Karnell, to the Anawotto river in search of the trumpeter swan. With the proceeds his partner, Cruger, has bought a new plane, a Lockheed, which is stolen. When Slade returns from the Anawotto he starts out, with only two clues, to recover the plane. The first clue is the "devil bird" which the blind eskimo, Umanak, hears. Dr. Morlock, the "Flying Padre," has operated on Umanak's eyes in the hope of restoring his sight. If the operation is successful Umanak will be able to help Slade. The second clue is Slade's hunch that the lost plane and the swan-hunter are somehow connected. But when he flies back to where he left Frayne he finds him apparently just hunting swans. There is no sign of the plane. But on the way home he finds that his gas cache at the cabin Mrs. and Minty, two old prospectors, were killed. He tells Cruger of a third clue—the appearance of a flyer named Umanak, who knows about both the Lockheed and Frayne's expedition. Zeke and Morlock discover provisions near their camp and set out to investigate. Now Slade is talking to Lynn Morlock, the Padre's daughter. Now continue with the story.

"That's all I'm getting out of it," he contended. "And I'm about fed up."

CHAPTER XII

"What's wrong?" Lynn asked, startled by that never note where fearlessness had always reigned. "Cruger and I may go bust. We haven't been able to spot our stolen Lockheed."

Lynn's brow furrowed with thought.

"But who could get away with a thing like that?" she asked. "Even in country like this?"

Instead of answering that question, Slade asked one of his own.

"Have you ever stopped to ask what became of your friend Slim Tumstead, the flyer you fixed up after that bar-room fight?"

Lynn's brow deepened.

"I'd scarcely call him a friend," she objected. "He needed help, and I gave it to him."

"But they'd taken Tumstead's ticket away, remember. He's lawless and reckless. And he was at the end of his rope."

"And is probably drowning his sorrows in some McMurray gin mill," suggested the girl.

"On the contrary," said Slade, "he dropped out of sight there, without leaving a trace."

"But what would he do with a plane?"

"That's what I want to figure out," affirmed Slade. "It couldn't be just cheap-john smuggling. And it couldn't be high-grading. Not, at least, unless that man of science who calls himself Frayne is fooling us. Our birdman, of course, might be putting on an act."

"But mining and trapping is all anyone could do in country like that. He wouldn't be smuggling out marten and fox."

"It's not furs, naturally," conceded Slade. "But why is a plane flying between Echo Harbor and the Anawotto? And where did that plane come from? And who's flying it?"

"You're as bad as Umanak," Lynn observed as they stepped into the rough-boarded surgery. "That's what he keeps asking."

But Umanak surprised them by an abrupt movement of his bandaged head.

"Kabuna come back," he quietly announced.

That, Lynn knew, meant the Flying Padre. And her quick cross to the door confirmed Umanak's announcement.

"It's Father," said the girl, with her eyes on the blur of blue that grew bigger as she watched.

He could hear her cry of "Dad!" as she ran light-footed down the talus slope.

The Flying Padre's greeting to Slade was cordial but preoccupied.

"You're just in time, Alan," Lynn's father asserted, "to see whether I'm still a surgeon or not. We're going to unseal our old friend Umanak."

Slade tried to be casual as they entered the little surgery and examined the patient. But he was, he felt, the most excited of the three.

The Flying Padre, after a study of the patient's face, reached to the shelf for a candle, which he lighted.

"You see now?" he questioned as he held the small flame well above his head.

"Me see," said Umanak.

"High or low?"

"High up," answered Umanak.

The Flying Padre blew out the candle.

"And now?" he asked.

Slade could feel Lynn's fingers tighten on his arm.

"Me no see," was the old Eskimo's answer. "Light gone."

Slade could hear Morlock's sigh of relief as he stepped back and stood straighter.

"Me go find devil-bird now!" cried Umanak.

"That happens to be my job," he said.

"What's this talk about a devil-bird?" asked the Flying Padre, looking up from his instrument bag.

Umanak explained about the plane he had been seen between Echo Harbor and the Anawotto. But the man of medicine was not impressed.

"I see planes," he observed, "in me mighty unexpected places."

The Flying Padre's gaze rested on the younger man's face.

"That's mean-country to meander out in," he said.

"I've been over it," answered the man with the Viking eyes. "That's where I took those two swan-hunters."

"Wait a minute," cried the Flying Padre, arrested by a sudden thought. "What was the nationality of those swan-hunters?"

"It's hard to say," Slade explained. "But a good deal of their equipment was German. They were certainly foreigners."

"German?" meditated the older man. "That doesn't seem to fit in."

"Fit in with what?" asked the flyer.

"With what's been happening along the coast here. Short-wave sets have been picking up messages from time to time in Russian. A good part of it, they tell me, is in code that can't be made out."

"It might be a whaler," ventured Lynn, "between here and Echo Harbor."

"Then me go Echo Harbor," was the unexpected cry from Umanak, "and find out."

But Lynn disregarded that cry.

"Don't you remember, Dad, how we kept picking up stuff like that when the Russians made their transpolar flight three years ago?"

"Yes, I remember," said the Flying Padre. "But where are these people sending from? And what would a Russian be doing in this back yard of Nowhere today?"

"That," said Slade as he glanced down the talus slope toward the Snow-Ball Baby that floated in the shallows, "is what I'm going to find out."

A gold-green light lay over the evening world as Slade left Iviuk Inlet behind him. He was too close to the land of the midnight sun to hope for much darkness, even after two hours of heading southward.

But, since his one wish was to remain unseen, he flew low over the scattered waterways and ridges, his flutters all but brushing the meager spruce tops as he advanced on the thinning timber line. He flew with his lights out, feeling his way along by the stars.

The thought of flying dark over a steadily darkening terrain gave him the feeling of being singularly alone in a world that had fallen asleep. He wondered if, some day, camps and town-sites would mark that world of emptiness. And as though in answer to that unuttered question he observed the darkness punctuated by an unmistakable sign of life. Up from the empty world ahead of him he saw a signal rocket flare and die away again. Then out of the gloom his eye caught the repeated winking of a flashlight.

He watched those flashes closely, doing his best to read them. But they meant nothing to him beyond the fact that they were spelling out a message, and a message obviously not intended for him.

Slade made a quick decision. He banked and turned, still keeping uncomfortably close to the ridge crests, skimming over the broken woodland like a swallow skimming over ruffled water. He quartered off at right angles to his former course, idling on until he was certain he was beyond the vision of the flashlight signal. Then he doubled back until he found open water enough to make sure of a landing.

All was quiet along the starlit lake surface that took up his headway. He let his plane drift in closer to the shadowy shoreline. Then, making sure that all was still silence, he poled his ship patiently along the shallows. He worked his way westward, toward the source of the rocket flare, until he came to a landing spot that suited his purpose. There he moored his plane against the shelter of a sparsely timbered bluff and took up his rifle.

For several minutes, after mounting the near-by ridge, he stood silent and watchful. When no sign of life came to him he began picking his way carefully over the broken terrain toward the quarter from which the flashlight signals had first shown themselves. His caution became greater as he noticed where timber had been cut along the ridges that grew bolder as he advanced. He even observed where a hillside had been cleared and stripped. The scattered dikes and hollows clearly showed how a prospector had been busy there with pick and shovel.

Slade crouched low in one of these hollows and struck a match, wondering if the light would show up a tell-tale vein of gold-bearing quartz. But all he saw was dark and pitch-like rock.

He went on up the slope, puzzled by the repeated signs of an enterprise that seemed without meaning or purpose. Then he stopped short, arrested by a movement above him.

In the vague light he could see a man, a huge-bodied man stripped to the waist, moving along the ridge crest. Balanced on his shoulders he carried what had every appearance of an ore bag, an ore bag so heavy that the big body bent forward under its weight. He seemed to be following a path that led into the scrub timber ending abruptly in the shimmer of lake water.

Slade, watching from the shadows, saw that figure return empty-handed along the hilltop trail. Then he saw it once more forge lake-ward, once more burdened with the weight of its ore bag. He could not be sure, but something about that great body with its gorilla-like arms made him think of Karnell. And if it was Karnell, Slade felt, the man who called himself Frayne would be somewhere in the neighborhood.

That thought prompted the watcher to push farther up the slope, seeking the cover of the underbrush as he went. He crept on until he crossed a well-trodden trail and again entered the underbrush that furred the declining hill slope. From there he could see a strange-looking structure of spruce boles partly obstructing the view of the lake water between the shoudering hills. In the rocky cup behind the odd-looking spruce canopy he saw a small tent, and beside this tent he caught sight of a small campfire carefully ceilinged by a tarpaulin on four stakes.

But what held his attention was a figure squatting beside that fire, a figure in a leather flying jacket. He could not make out the man's face. But he could see him replace a coffee-pot on the coals and drink from a granite cup, which he tossed aside when he had emptied it. Then the man by the fire looked up as a second man spoke to him, apparently from inside the tent.

"Not on your life," cried the man beside the fire. "I'll be damned if you'll get me to do any navy work."

What was said in response to that Slade could not hear.

"I sweat enough unloading the damned stuff," contended the man in the flyer's jacket.

A figure emerged from between the tent-flaps and stood looking down at the fireside lounge.

"You would sweat less, my friend," the newcomer said with steely-voiced precision, "if you restricted your use of alcohol."

The other's laugh was not pleasant.

"That's all I'm getting out of it," he contended. "And I'm about fed up with living like a timber wolf."

"But that plane must be loaded, a ton a trip," retorted his companion. "And Karnell can do only so much."

Slade knew then that his guess had not been wide of the mark. The huge-bodied man who carried the ore bags was indeed Karnell. And the indignant figure standing above the campfire was Frayne. When, a moment later, the fireside squatter rose to his feet and stood with his face to the light, Slade saw that it was Tumstead.

"Your bullhead can do the load-er," Tumstead was saying. "I'm a flyer."

"Who's drinking too much to keep a clear head," amended Frayne.

"What I drink," retorted the other, "is my own affair. I've carried your cargoes and kept this crate afloat, haven't I? And now that an outsider or two is edging in on your little enterprise I'd rather like to know where I get off when the blow-up comes."

"There will be no blow-up, as you term it," was the cold-noted response. "And there will be no edging in on this enterprise."

"But there's a snooper or two around this camp, and you know it. And when they stumble over what you're after I'm left out on a limb."

RUBBER MIRAGE

Unfortunate, inside fact regarding our grandiose plans to get rubber from the Amazon Valley is that we aren't going to get any more than a dribble this year. About 4,000 tons have been produced, against an expectation of around 50,000 tons.

Part of this failure is due to the jealous tug-of-war between Jesse Jones and the Board of Economic Warfare. Jones' Rubber Reserve at first delayed doing anything about Brazilian rubber. Later the BEW stepped in.

This situation, bad as it may be, is insignificant compared with the handicaps of nature. For in the jungles of the Amazon, nature has erected the most difficult barriers conceivable to protect her rubber.

Here is the tragic, inside story of what has happened.

First, the BEW, working in cooperation with Jesse Jones' Rubber Reserve, offered a higher wage to rubber workers, with the result that they flocked to the jungle. But this took men away from the lesser paid work of farming and wood-cutting, so that river steamers lacked wood fuel, and the jungle settlements lacked food.

Starve in Jungles. The result was that a great many men actually died of starvation in the jungles. A few had been given shot-guns, but ammunition was so scanty that they were scarcely able to shoot monkeys.

Later the people in the towns from which the rubber workers were recruited heard that their friends and relatives starved to death. Now these towns won't send any more workers.

One factor contributing to the tragic situation was that a ship bringing food, firearms and more equipment to the Amazon was sunk by a Nazi submarine.

Also it takes a tremendous number of tin cups to collect rubber. A cup is tied to each tree, and catches the rubber as it slowly oozes from the trunk.

However, the chief shipment of tin cups got held up on the dock in southern Brazil, missed the boat, then were further delayed by submarine warfare, and now have missed the current rubber season.

A lot of these handicaps, such as submarine warfare, are insurmountable. But the net result is that although we are spending many millions, we will get almost no rubber from Brazil this year.

HITLER'S NEW ORDER

Here is an authentic account from Dutch government sources, of what happened to Hollanders who were caught in the act of printing an anti-Nazi publication in the Netherlands. One victim was forced to place his feet in a tub of water, which was brought slowly to the boiling point. Another patriot, who had been arrested in mid-winter, was compelled to undress and was placed upon a chair in the open courtyard of the prison, surrounded by warmly dressed Gestapo men, who questioned him as long as he could stand it.

Whenever he fainted, they poured hot drinks down his throat and rubbed his numb body until the interrogation could be continued.

Still another Hollandier had his fingernails torn out; and a very common method of torture was the use of dazzling light directed upon the eyes of the suspect.

When the Nazis first took over they gave orders to their troops to deal gently with local populations. But with continued local resistance, the gloves are off. Men and women all over Europe are learning the true meaning of the "new order" now promised by Germany.

SENATOR DOXEY'S RAILROAD

The subway train between the Capitol and the Senate office building is a great help to senators shuttling back and forth to their offices, but Senator Wall Doxey of Mississippi would be the first to admit that it can prove a political liability.

Doxey seldom uses the little tramway, preferring to walk. Nonetheless, Mississippi farmers call it "Doxey's Railroad," and according to friends, it had something to do with the Mississippian's primary defeat. Here's the story:

James Eastland, who defeated Doxey, made a practice of inquiring, during speeches in farm communities, if there was a railroad nearby.

"Nope," someone would reply. "Nearest one's ten miles."

"What a shame," sighed Eastland. "You know, Senator Doxey has a private railroad in Washington which he uses to ride back and forth to his office."

CAPITAL CHAFF

Marshal Rommel now has approximately one division of U. S. tanks, previously captured from the British, with which to combat the present British advance.

A sample of a new substitute fence, made at Rock Island arsenal, has been brought to Washington to try out around the White House and thus enable the present iron fence to go for scrap iron. However, the White House staff has not been satisfied with the non-iron fence would protect the President.

Serve the Festive Bird—Plump With Stuffing (See Recipes Below.)

Day of Praise

Now that the frost-nipped days have come and we've gathered the harvest, Thanksgiving giving time is here again. It really is a Thanksgiving, for a year of plenty if not of peace, and it's to be celebrated with a dinner symbolic of the plenty of harvest. Your family will feel a deep and heartfelt satisfaction if you place yellow-gold and deep crimson autumn leaves over the mantel, or provides a blazing fire and have bowls of lush colored grapes, crisp shelled nuts, blushing pears and apples within comfortable reach.

The Bird Itself.

Select tender chicken for roasting. Pick dry. Singe and take out pin feathers with tweezers. Cut around vent and make split almost to tip of breastbone. Insert hand and take out entrails carefully from back and sides. Pull out. Be sure lungs are removed. Push back skin of neck, and cut off neck close to body. Remove windpipe. Separate gizzard, heart and liver and cut away gall bladder which is attached to liver, being careful not to break it. Cut through gizzard and clean. Remove oil sack from tail.

Wash outside with cold water. Wipe inside with damp cloth. Sprinkle inside with salt and then stuff loosely. Insert toothpicks or metal pins across opening and lace them with cord.

Fold skin of neck over back and fasten with toothpick. Fold wings across back. Tie ends of legs together with a cord, then bring cord around tail and forward to tip of wings to tie. Rub skin with fat (unsalted) and place on roaster rack. Roast uncovered in a moderately slow oven (325-350 degrees) 30 minutes to the pound for a chicken under 3½ pounds, 22-25 minutes for a chicken over 4 pounds.

Stuffing (Makes 3½ cups)

½ cup rice
3 cups boiling water
¾ teaspoon salt
½ cup fat
¾ cup diced celery
¾ cup chopped onion
5½ cups oven-popped rice cereal
2 tablespoons minced parsley
1 tablespoon poultry seasoning
¾ teaspoon salt
½ cup stock

Wash rice thoroughly in a sieve. Drain well. Add rice to boiling water slowly as water continues to bubble. Boil rapidly about 20 minutes until rice is tender, then drain in sieve.

Brown celery and onion in fat.

Lynn Says: Speaking of Stuffings: The old-fashioned bread dressing is easily adapted to many variations. Here is the basic idea: To 1½ pounds of dried bread cut in one-inch cubes add ½ to 1 cup melted butter, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon white pepper, ¼ cup minced onion, cooked but not browned, and 2 tablespoons of poultry dressing. Toss lightly and stuff fowl.

If you like crisp celery tasty dressing, add 2 cups finely chopped celery to the bread dressing.

On the other hand, if you like the crispness of chestnuts, add 1 pound of chestnuts, chopped and cooked.

Giblets go well with bread dressing, cook and chop and toss into bread dressing. Mushrooms are distinctive, if simply chopped and sauteed in butter and added to bread stuffing.

Oysters make a tempting dressing. Use 1 pint, chopped and heated until edges curl in 3 tablespoons butter.

Miss Clare Louise Johnson
Wed To Lieut. R. C. Schmeling
In Sacred Heart Church

Miss Clare Louise Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Travis Johnson, and Lieut. R. C. Schmeling Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Schmeling of Brownsville, were married in the Sacred Heart Catholic Church Thursday morning at 9:00. The Rev. J. H. Kelly performed the simple rites.

Miss Mabel Bracht played Lohengrin's Wedding Processional and Mendelssohn's Wedding Recessional, and the other ritual music. She also sang with Miss Genevieve Bracht, Miss Shirley Johnson, Fred Bracht Sr., and Maurice Curry. Miss Johnson sang Bach-Gounad's "Ave Maria," accompanied by Mrs. A. L. Bruhl on the organ. James Bracht and Harold Picton were the altar attendants.

Miss Mary Beth Picton, maid of honor, dressed in a coca-brown princess styled crepe dress, with brown accessories, and a corsage of pink carnations, and T. J. Johnson, best man, in his uniform of the Schriener Institute, preceded the bride to the altar.

The bride, wearing a light brown woolen suit, fur trimmed, and adorned with an orchid corsage, an off-the-face matching fur-brimmed hat, and brown accessories, entered with her father, and met the groom before the altar.

Giant bronze and yellow chrysanthemums decorated the main altar, with an arrangement of side vases and baskets of chrysanthemums and other autumn blossoms. Large bows of golden bronze ribbon marked the pews reserved for the families of the bride and groom.

The bride's mother wore a plum-colored woolen suit, fur trimmed, and black accessories. The groom's mother was dressed in black, with black accessories. Both Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Schmeling wore white carnation corsages.

After the wedding, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson entertained with a breakfast at Thompson's Spa, the relatives and close friends attending.

PLASTIC COINS

WASHINGTON — We haven't reached the stage of wooden nickels yet—but we may get some plastic coins. The Treasury is studying the use of plastic for some new denominations below a dime—such as half cent pieces for sales taxes, and three cent pieces to buy newspapers and stamps. Mint authorities favor minting the new coins to meet the increasing use of small change and at the same time get around the metal shortage.

Flat Cut of $1 To Be Made In Grant Checks

AUSTIN.—The State Department of Public Welfare announced today that a flat cut of $1 will be made in each Old Age Assistance grant when checks are written in November. An estimated 182,000 aged persons will be affected. The notice to be mailed with each old assistance check states:

"Effective November, 1942, and until further notice your Old Age Assistance check will be for $1 less than your certified grant. The monthly cost of Old Age Assistance is now in excess of income. Under the law eligible applicants must continue to be added to the rolls, which will make less money per recipient.

"The Welfare Department has no control over its income. Old Age Assistance financing provisions are set by law. State law provides an appropriation of $1,750,000 monthly in the Old Age Assistance Fund. All money now being disbursed in excess of the amount comes from federal grants to the state."

Since the state waived consideration of the ability of relatives to support aged applicants, the rolls have made a net gain from 122,059 in January, 1941, to the estimated 182,000 new eligible. A small percentage of these were not being supported by relatives when eligibility was established. This group has added approximately $1,200,000 per month to the cost of Old Age Assistance in Texas. The rolls and costs have mounted steadily each month since liberalization of the law by the 47th legislature and applications continue to come in.

Mrs. Jim Warnock and Mrs. Nell Webb spent the week-end in San Antonio. Pvt. Bernard Webb, Mrs. Webb's son, returned with them, and spent Monday with his family in Aransas Pass.

Old Fashioned Christmas Due to Lack of Trees

HELENA, Mont.—It'll be an old-fashioned Christmas in thousands of homes this year with one exception — Montana Christmas trees.

Lack of labor and transportation facilities has made Montana's million dollar Christmas tree industry a war casualty. Last year, the western state furnished more than two million evergreens to the Yuletide markets of Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, New Orleans and other areas.

But when Santa Claus comes down the chimney this Christmas he'll have to hang his gifts on ersatz trees.

Mrs. Ruby Huff's sister, Mrs. C. H. Jennings, of Lubbock, spent the week-end with her.

TELEPHONE SERVICE IN WARTIME

We are trying to give our nation in war what we have always tried to give in time of peace—the best telephone service in the world. We can't build more lines to do it, because most of the metal is needed for arms. So the longer long distance lines, carrying vital war calls, are becoming more and more crowded.

When you think of calling a faraway city, won't you please ask yourself:

1. Is it necessary?
2. If so, how can I keep it short?

War calls come first, and we know you'll gladly help clear the way for them.

SOUTHWESTERN BELL TELEPHONE CO.

There are enough problems confronting the country today without trying to dig up any new ones. But there is one we should meet now, and take care of in future years.

This is the matter of far better physical training and development on the part of millions on the younger side.

We have been rated a great athletic nation. But apparently this has concerned only a small percentage of picked people—of stars good enough to make big-time teams and so draw big crowds at the gate.

When you find, for example, that out of some 3,000 young recruits over 2,500 have taken practically no part in sport—that most of these barely can chin themselves; that they can't box, wrestle, swim, play baseball or football with any skill; that they are quickly exhausted; that they are clumsy—you begin to get part of the answer.

I know of one district where, out of 81 draftees, 66 were turned down on the physical side earlier in the war. There is something entirely out of focus with our form of athletic life.

The program also should include such competitions as boxing and wrestling, basketball and baseball. A rough, body-contact game, such as football, should not be compulsory before 15 or 16. Kicking, passing and touch football fit in nicely—not hard tackling or blocking.

I believe that Texas, for example, overdoes high-school football. Too many hard games for undeveloped kids can do more harm than good. Six or seven games a season for those under 18 or 19 is quite enough.

But Texas, at least, has erred on the right side. In too many other states the kids are undertrained, not overtrained.

An Example I got an eyeful of this poor condition while walking around with Lieut. Jack Dempsey of the coast guard. The coastguardsmen were volunteers. There were several thousand from all over the map. They were keen, dead game, willing. But most of them had known little physical training before they came to camp. I'd say about four out of five.

As Jack pointed out: "They'll tackle a bulldog. But many of them don't know their left hand from their right hand when they first come here, and they have a hard time chiming themselves just once."

"I never saw a more willing bunch, though. They just never had a chance to learn. It's a shame we've had an athletic system that developed a comparatively few stars, instead of giving every kid a chance. It means a lot in more ways than one, and I don't mean on the physical side alone, which, of course, is important. There's also the mental side, which means self-confidence."

A young fellow who can handle himself also believes in himself, the ex-champ went on. "If he can fight a little, wrestle a little, swim or play some game fairly well, his head is up. But when he knows he is no good at any game, it is only natural that he has no confidence in himself."

There are no finer developing exercises than walking, running, swimming, jumping and climbing. For hand exercises use a small rubber ball—or any small object—to be gripped and squeezed to develop finger strength. Ask Lefty Grove or Charlie Keller about this.

In the way of competitive games there are basketball, baseball, touch football, track and field, swimming.

Scoring Rules We never yet have been able to see any sense in the scoring rules or regulations whereby long gains for touchdowns are not scored as first downs also. If a back runs 12 yards and is stopped, he registers a first down. If he runs 40 yards and scores, there is no first down.

PALACE LUNCHEON LONDON, ENGLAND.—The king and queen very kindly gave a luncheon for the heads of the various women's services, to which they also invited Mrs. Oveta Hobby, director of our Women's Army Auxiliary corps.

I was glad to find that there were a number of women present who were not complete strangers to me. Mrs. Arthur Grenfell, head of the YWCA, had come to see me in Washington. The dowager duchess of Reading, who heads the Women's Voluntary Services, spent weeks in the United States before she started her work over here. Now, of course, we have much to learn from her, but I think we may feel that at the beginning our country contributed something to the development of her ideas.

Mrs. Mary Agnes Hamilton, of the ministry of planning, had spent the day with us in Hyde Park years ago, when the President was governor of New York state, and it was very pleasant to renew that acquaintanceship.

AIR RAID DAMAGE After lunch, their majesties took me to visit St. Paul's cathedral. It was my first view of the destruction which has levelled whole blocks of houses. It is remarkable that St. Paul's still stands, in spite of considerable damage. Its fire fighters spent night after night sleeping in the crypt, ready to spring to their posts should they be needed.

I had seen pictures of the fire which had swept the financial district, known as "The City," after one of the blitzes, but I was in no way prepared to see such a great area of destruction. When buildings, such as the fine old Guildhall and many beautiful old churches are destroyed, they are a loss to the whole world. So much skill and artistic ability, not to speak of historic interest, have simply been swept away.

But even more poignant is the destruction that we viewed a little bit later in Stepney. Here the crowded population lived over small shops and in rows of two-story houses. Today there is only one-third of the population left and each empty building speaks of a personal tragedy. They showed me one of the big shelters, which at one time housed as many as 1,200 people, and where, even now, 300 people come to sleep every night. They feel cared for, less lonely and their own houses are no longer very secure.

It seemed to me, as I walked through the brick compartments of that shelter, that I learned something about fear and the resistance to total destruction which exists in all human beings. How could people be herded together like this night after night without some epidemic being the result? Yet, it was done and the spirits of kindness and cheerfulness prevailed. Those who had lost so much still managed to smile.

We visited the city fire control center, where the lord mayor of London, Sir John Laurie, and senior regional commissioner, Sir E. Gowers, who is in charge of the safety of the city, greeted and welcomed us. Many of the other city officials demonstrated how the system which they have built up functions to protect, as far as possible, the life and property of this city.

Later, at the Guildhall, we saw a small detachment of the civilian defense personnel, looking very efficient in their uniforms. Many of them wore decorations for conspicuous courage. A short stop for tea at the Mansion house with the lord mayor and lady mayoress, and then, on our return, a visit from our secretary of the treasury, Mr. Henry Morgenthau Jr.

NAVY FILM After dinner one evening, we were shown a very fine film, "In Which We Serve," which I hope will soon be released in the United States. It is acted and produced by Noel Coward and is the life story of a ship of the royal navy. In great part it is the story of Lord Louis Mountbatten's own ship. For people whose life is so tied up with the navy, it must have exceptional poignancy.

Seen here, surrounded by people who are so conscious of the truth of every detail and must be so emotionally responsive to the suffering, it was an extraordinary experience. I wondered how some of those present could bear to sit through it and was grateful for General Smuts' strong, quiet presence beside me.

PRESS CONFERENCE We attended the press conference at the United States embassy, and I must say it was a formidable gathering I faced. It reminded me far more of the President's press conference at home than my small gatherings of ladies. In it were represented the Empire, British and United States press. I was asked a number of questions about my plans, which were still nebulous in detail except for two or three days in advance, but with a carefully defined objective.

Kathleen Norris Says: No Shortage of Jobs for Women of 50

Bell Syndicate—WNU Features.

Give your free afternoons every week to the sick of the neighborhood or to your hospital kitchen and you'll not have to ask again for the right to do "some thing for the boys."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

THIS article is written for women of 50 years and more who have some time to spare, cannot enter upon defense jobs with regular and difficult hours, and yet are passionately anxious to do something to help our country in her hour of need, and bring nearer the glorious hour of a good and honest peace.

Such women speak to me and write to me every day. I am never in any group but what they approach me. "My daughter is working in a machine plant and the boy is in uniform, but what can I do? I must do something!" they say.

Well, I'll tell you one thing that you can do, a thing that embraces a thousand others. You can help our woefully small and insufficient army of doctors and nurses. We have not enough now, and we are going to feel a dangerous shortage later on. You can do what the writer of this article hopes to do, follow a Red Cross primary training by a special course in midwifery, learn to handle women through normal confinements, and welcome new babies into this war-clouded world—for the young mothers go right on having them, God bless them, and that work must be done.

300 Babies, No Nurses. In one western town whose normal staff was 17 doctors, four are left. The obstetrician among these told me that he had listed among ward, clinic and private patients exactly 300 babies who are due before April. Asked about nurses he said: "There are NO nurses!" and he spoke with considerable feeling about families who keep one nurse or even two for routine chronic invalid care that might be handled easily by the idle women of the family. "It ought to be stopped and I believe it will," he said.

Only a few days later I chanced to look, on a hospital visit, into one of those large, clean pantries that hospitals have on every floor, sink, cabinets, gas stove, hoppers, and so on. It was a shocking sight. Trays, pans, basins, tumbled linen, piled dishes were everywhere; the nurse who flashed in and out again was perspiring—her face on a very hot day was the color of wax—but she smiled gallantly as she said: "Last year this time we had 70 less patients and 39 nurses. Now we have 15 nurses for the whole crowd!"

Well, I don't know that I'll ever qualify as a licensed midwife, but I know right then and there that until that pantry looked very different I had a war job. And in a clean apron with a box of soap flakes and a mop I came back a few minutes later. It takes study and skill to deliver babies, but the woman who washes dishes and sorts sheets and sterilizes bandages frees a graduate nurse from that work, and has her place, too, in the great war story.

My reward that day was to feel many a young strong arm go about me for a second, while many a grateful voice said in my ear: "You're an angel!" and nobody could ask more genuine happiness than that.

Health an Obligation. Give your free afternoons every week to the sick of your neighborhood or to your hospital kitchen, and you'll not have to ask again for the right to do "something—anything for our boys!" Get in touch with your doctor, and he'll give you a list of patients who merely need beds made or soup heated. And do what you can to keep your own home people well; don't tolerate any of the minor ills that IT'S THERE If you have not yet found a war job, you haven't looked hard enough. You may not find it in a factory, if you have no special skill. You may not find it in the armed forces. But you will find it in a hospital where there are floors to be scrubbed and linens to be sorted. You will find it in the home of a sick friend. You will, perhaps, find it right in your own home if you have been relying on someone else to do a dozen little things you could do for yourself. And finding it, says Kathleen Norris, is your job.

lead to serious trouble, not this war winter! Health is an obligation that we owe America, while her youth and power and glory are committed to this tremendous adventure, and it's mother who holds that responsibility at home.

So if Dad is making too long and tiring a shift of cars and trains and busses to get home, see whether you can't find the simplest, the plainest little quarters nearer his work. If the working girls come in weary and cold, have a cup of hot soup or malted milk ready. This idea of a warming drink before a hearty meal is one that dietitians everywhere approve. To get very tired and hungry often means that a hearty meal doesn't get digested before bedtime by the cold and weary stomach. The hot drink, the comfortable chair and pleasant news all help to make dinner-time a success.

If cold feet and backache and headache and nerves and restlessness at night are chronic, they are apt to have one cause—constipation. Lack of exercise, long sedentary hours in the factory or office, and lunches of pastry, strong tea or coffee, sweets, accentuate it. Mother can do a lot about that with the introduction of raw vegetables at dinner, salads of lettuce, chopped carrots, apples, cabbage, spinach and by serving a dark rough bran bread.

And make desserts laxative; prunes, apples, figs, oranges and grapefruit can be served in about 300 ways, all helpful. Hot tomato juice, hot prune and apple puree are medicinal enough, as are ginger bread and ginger-molasses cookies to cure many of these cases of chills and aches and nerves, and to hold off the colds and bronchial and laryngeal conditions to which they lead. Get your family through this winter without a night of lost sleep or a sneeze and you will be doing your share of the big job.

No Shortage of Jobs. If the youngsters are tired and nervous enough to complain; if they demand starches and gravies and heavy meats, take them into your confidence. Explain that you are meeting all sorts of war conditions; shortage of fuel, difficult transportation, higher prices, the need for closer management of finances, beef scarce, bananas gone, domestic help unobtainable, and insist that they co-operate to the extent of remembering overshoes, drafts, over-fatigue—and by eating what Mother tells them to!

Oh, there isn't going to be any shortage of jobs for us older women, as the war months go on. The only question is whether we are going to be willing enough and humble enough to step into them. And I think we are. I think we presently will have an army of mothers and wives quietly filling the menial and minor positions that free the younger and more experienced women for actual war services.

UNNECESSARY EXPOSURE

By J. T. BARBER

McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.

"O'KEEFE, upstairs!" Patrolman O'Keefe dropped his dissembled pistol on the assembly room table beside the rags and cleaning oil and hot-footed it up to the lieutenant's office. He knew what the lieutenant would say. The lieutenant would say: "O'Keefe, what are you mooning about? You're slowing up."

O'Keefe would reply: "Lieutenant, do you know Miss Polly Cudahay that lives at 400 North Woodbine?" And the lieutenant would say: "No, O'Keefe. Tell me about her."

Then Patrolman O'Keefe would go on to say how a woman could trouble a man by deliberately ignoring his brass buttons and his tall blue-coated figure of authority.

And when a woman like that had dove's eyes and hair like the pale amber fire in honey under sunlight and a nose that rivaled the poetry of her mouth—why it was nothing less than unnecessary risk and exposure. He would ask the lieutenant's advice.

"O'Keefe!" the lieutenant snapped when the patrolman had saluted, "get set for a quickie in your district tonight. You're going on duty now. Dust out to Woodbine and Hamilton. Hide in the grocery store there and do your duty."

O'Keefe's mouth closed over his private troubles with the abruptness of a sprung trap. It was probably the mob from Philly, who had been hitting a different grocery in town every Saturday night. They were raiders, "quickies" who swooped down and carried off the day's receipts.

"O'Keefe," the lieutenant was saying, "a good piece of work on this job will get you a promotion." "Yes, sir," replied O'Keefe, even while his will power struggled to submerge the disconcerting influence of Polly Cudahay. It was the more difficult because unfortunately she lived just across the street from the store.

When he got to the corner he paused on the curb for one last look around before entering the store. It was not entirely necessary, but his bright blue eye had fallen upon the alluring face of Polly Cudahay and he thought it would be a swell idea to ignore her officially.

Accordingly he paused there by the waterplug and, glancing unconcernedly about, straightened his belt with just that unstudied touch that makes efficiency a pleasure. He wanted her to get a good look this time at a fine looking policeman and evidently she did because she seemed to be looking him up and down without seeing him at all.

He was burrowed among boxes and bags in the grocery three torturous hours when they came in. Three of them. O'Keefe studied the men from the black shadow of his vantage point. It wasn't much of a place to shoot from. His hands twitched under the strain, but there wasn't anything to do but wait. The trio fiddled around until the last customers left the store and then at a signal they pulled their guns. It was all done in the flick of an eyelash. Now it was time for O'Keefe to act. But someone else was acting.

With the suddenness of a squall a riot squad had come pouring in through the front and side doors, shooting as they came. In ten seconds the place was a madhouse of staccato shots. Cans of vegetables began to leak over everything.

Patrolman O'Keefe was in the thick of it then. The stumbling figure of a riddled gunman crashed into him. He grappled with the bandit and took his gun. Then he did some effective shooting with it. It gave him a thrill to shoot the robbers with their own weapon.

Afterward when everyone was congratulating him he became more and more indignant. It was something that had come up to gnaw within him and to embitter his triumph. And when he could get away it took him no more than a split second to reach Polly Cudahay's door. He wanted to ask her if she thought he was so weak and wan that he needed help on that little job. And what business was it of hers anyway?

He didn't expect her to deny it, but she did. She denied with flashing eye she had anything to do with calling the riot squad. He could see then that if he ever kissed her it would have to be a delight separate and remote from any subject that happened to be up for discussion.

"And you didn't wonder what I was doing on the curb?" he growled. "I did not," she said. "Police-men stand around on curbs all the time, like the braggarts they are, all brass and buttons."

"It's the uniform, Colleen," he informed her with dignity. "It isn't the man. The badge on the tunic and the gun on the hip—they clothe a common man with the authority of the law."

"Oh, yes?" said Miss Cudahay with a belittling eye on his right hip. "Well, you've practically been a nudist for hours!"

With that Patrolman O'Keefe clapped a dismayed hand to his heavy service holster and found it as empty as his pride.

NOTES OF A NEW YORKER IN WASHINGTON

Memos on the Congressional Limited:

The FBI personnel is now 13,000, of which 4,600 are agents (G-Men) in the field. . . . In 1932 the FBI had only 300 of them. . . . The Bureau now has sixty million sets of fingerprints—and every morning 125,000 new sets arrive. . . . This is due to the many defense workers, army, navy, marines, air force, et al. . . . An agent can find a set of prints within two minutes. . . . The exact amount of U. S. currency confiscated in the arrest of the eight saboteurs was $174,588.62. . . . In Director Hoover's reception room the No. 1 attraction used to be the kidnap letters of the Weyerhaeuser snatch, the Dillinger mob's weapons and so forth. . . . It has been replaced by the "saboteur exhibit"—detonator caps, fuses for the high explosives, the Nazi navy cap with swastika insignia, and "the best bomb mechanism we've ever seen!" . . . Haupt, one of those electrocuted, was "the brainiest" . . . He was 22.

Dorothy Lamour phoned the Navy Dept and asked the operator to connect her with a Lieutenant. . . . "Who's calling?" was the query. "Dorothy Lamour," lamoured Dorothy.

"Ha, ha!" said the operator. "And I'm Queen of the May!" "Really!" replied the star. "Did you happen to see me in 'Beyond the Blue Horizon'?" . . . The operator said she had—so what?

Whereupon Lamour, for the special delight of a Navy phone girl, sang the entire chorus of the film's theme.

Another woman will eventually be arrested by the government, when it is through dealing with more important rabble-rousers. She is being watched, of course, but "she can always be taken," it was explained, after a reporter wondered why she was allowed to get away with her campaign of hate and incitement against the President. . . . During recent Federal hearings for others, Federal men trapped her attempting to "persuade a Federal juror" . . . They are hoarding that charge for the time they need it. . . . When she goes to the clink—so will her daughter.

This is one way they are getting around Union Czar Petrillo. . . . A recording is made of voice only in the U. S.—no music escort. . . . That "master" is sent out of the country—where a band playing in American style provides the orchestral background. . . . Both are then re-recorded to make a complete record of vocal and orchestra. . . . A copy is sent here, manufactured and sold in the U. S. . . . The big idea is to avoid the A. F. of M. recent ruling that "no musician can make recordings in the U.S.A." It's the brain child of a member of Local 802!!!

Among the famous ships that the 500 Reserve Cadets at the Coast Guard Academy train on is the old schooner Atlantic. . . . It was commissioned in 1903 after the Vanderbilts built it to compete in the Transatlantic sailing races sponsored by Kaiser Wilhelm. . . . The Atlantic was the winner, and Wilhelm, said the stories at the time, gave the Vanderbilt tribe "the most expensive gold cup in the world."

When World War I began that gold cup was turned over to our Government, which found that it was $22 worth of pewter!

Washington Rogues' Gallery: The Washington reporters put the spotlight on the Gimme Bloc in Congress last week. It wasn't very pretty to look at either. In fact, the sight of it gave you the same kind of queasy feeling in the middle that comes when you're good and scared. . . . And the way the Gimme Bloc was behaving, there was good reason to be scared.

The matter the Honorables were chewing up was Senator Lee's (Okla.) amendment to the 18-10-year-old draft bill. . . . Sen. Lee wanted to dry up the areas around the Army camps. There being Army camps practically everywhere, you wouldn't guess the measure was a prohibition wrinkle unless you looked at it. . . . Sen. Lee is a smart cookie about his brothers in the two Houses. He is wise that lots of the Representatives from the corn bread and by-cacky belts haven't got the "moxie" to nix a blue nose measure. . . . To show that much fight would cost the office holder his job. His job to him is one grade higher than the fate of his country.

The members of Congress frankly admitted to reporters that they hoped the measure wouldn't lead to a roll call. That would mean that their ballot would be public, with no chance to weasel. . . . They admitted that the Drys back home were laying on the pressure, and it wouldn't be good politics to go agin it. How do you like that? The United States is engaged in a war for survival. And these birds make no secret of the fact that getting elected is a matter much more important to them.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Japan now controls about 60% of the rubber plantations of the world. Regardless of whether synthetic rubber is made from petroleum, grain, shrubs or chemicals it will be some time before our owners will be able to purchase synthetic rubber tires. War purposes have first call. A tombstone marks the spot near Sussex, England, where a tire that had served its owner 15 years was ceremoniously buried. 300 rubber parts, not including tires and tubes, are used in the modern automobile. Without rubber the car would truly be a "roll" wagon. There is talk these days of replacing 25,000,000 tires a year! Quite a jump from the 3,600,000 replaced—retreaded mark of 1937. Automobiles were over 50% of all U.S. farms in 1940; 15.5% of the farms had motor trucks and 23.1% motor tractors.

FOR years Hollywood has complained that there were too many extras for too many jobs. Now it begins to look as if the shoe might be put on the other foot. For the extras are getting jobs in war plants. The other day at Columbia they were shooting a big banquet scene for "The Power of the Press," with Lee Tracy, Gloria Gibson, Guy Kibbee and Otto Kruger. There were also 150 dressed-up extras—and practically all of them were studying books on acting, diet, sinking, etc., between shots.

Pat O'Brien ("Navy Comes Through") is keeping himself busy with his dramatic experience in the fact that the state of Wisconsin paid ex-service men $30 a month to complete their educations, after the last war. Discharged as a seaman, second class, he went to New York and enrolled in dramatic school, and landed on Broadway. "The Front Page," his first film, put him on the movie map.

When the Red Cross army and navy nurses who were feted at Abbott and Costello's roller skating party left for foreign duty they took with them a book of radio scripts from the comics—material for the soldiers' own entertainments.

Raymond Massey played a touching farewell scene, his biggest one, when, in Warner's "Action in the North Atlantic," he bade good-by to his wife, played by Ruth Gordon. When the picture's done he'll join the Royal Canadian army as a major; he was an officer with them in the last war.

If you're homesick for the dear old days of vaudeville you mustn't miss Metro's "For Me and My Gal," with Judy Garland and Gene Kelly. It'll send you away singing the old songs. Judy and Kelly will do "Anchors Away" after she finishes "Girl Crazy."

"My Sister Eileen," with Rosalind Russell, Brian Aherne and Janet Blair, is as funny as the stage play, and is saying a lot. Even though Hays office stepped on the script a little—it hasn't lost much.

Since Esther Williams finished work in "Andy Hardy Steps Out" she's been waiting so sorely for her next assignment that somebody asked her how she did it. "When I was badly defeated at my first swimming meet," said she, "my mother said, 'Remember, you have to lose a long time before you win.'" And that's practically perfect advice for all young actresses, most of whom need it.

THINGS THAT MAR FAMILY LIFE

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 27:30-35; Matthew 5:31, 32; Luke 12:13-15.

Home is what you make it! Oh, yes, there may be circumstances which hinder us from doing what we would like—such as poverty, illness, unemployment, etc. These are things we cannot control and certainly they do have a bearing. But man or woman when of the right spirit can triumph over such matters and make even the poorest home the gateway to heaven. It is a matter of the attitude of heart and mind. Our lesson then is very practical, for it deals with those sins which mar family life.

Whatever our circumstances may be, we can and must turn away from sin—and in this case, the sins which hinder the home from being what it ought to be. God has provided victory over sin through Christ for all who believe in Him.

What then are the sins which stand as the enemies of the home?

I. Deceit (Gen. 27:30-35).

Whatever the circumstances of the home may be, there can be absolute honesty and candor in the dealings between members of the family.

Our recent study of the story of Jacob and Esau showed us the sad consequences of the deceit practiced by Jacob and his mother in defrauding Esau. Many elements entered in, the favoritism of the mother toward one son, the envy that the brother had of his elder brother's birthright, the wicked scheming of mother and son to outwit the aged father—all a very distressing picture of a home shot through with deceitfulness. To build anything of permanent value on such a foundation was quite impossible.

The family in which deceitful means are used by husband or wife to gain some advantage for self or a favored child is heading for the rocks and needs to turn about and get into the channel of truth and uprightness before it is too late.

II. Divorce (Matt. 5:31, 32).

One of the most destructive elements of modern life is that of divorce. Terrifying statistics could be quoted, but they are not nearly as moving as the knowledge most of us have of broken homes, delinquent children, decadent morals, etc., and nausam. The victims of this deadly evil are primarily the children who are sent on into life with disordered minds and hearts.

Jesus declared that the decree of divorce allowed by Moses was not an abrogation of God's original law in this matter. Because of the "hardness of their hearts" (Mark 10:4) Moses permitted it, but the standard of God was and (note this please) is unchanged.

Marriage, as we saw in our lesson of November 1, is God's plan for the perfect union of the man and woman whereby the two become one in the sight of God. That means that the tie is not one to be dissolved at will or on some purely legal ground; it is an inseparable union.

The only exception recognized by Scripture (v. 32) is that act of unfaithfulness which is such a breach of the holy union as to virtually destroy it. Perhaps it might be called a recognition of the breaking of the union rather than an exception. Adultery is a heinous sin, an extremely serious violation of God's law. Let us press that fact home today when it is so lightly regarded in our sinful generation.

III. Desire (Luke 12:13-15).

Money is necessary and may be a blessing, but the "love of money is the root of all evil" (I Tim. 6:10). That is not just a verse in the Bible. It is the true picture of the thing which has destroyed the happiness of millions.

Here was a quarrel over an inheritance, and in meeting it our Lord laid down a principle which would solve all the money quarrels in every home—and they are endless in number and great in bitter destructiveness.

"Man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth" (v. 15). Write it large over the minds and hearts of the boys and girls in our homes! Let it control in the attitude of father and mother toward money. It will solve not only the money problems of the home, but will send the children forth into life with a foundation philosophy that will bless them to the end of their days.

Notice verse 14. It is the desire for money that most often makes man desire to be a judge over his brother. The big eyes of envy cause him to look with bitter desire upon what his brother has and he wants. The fine principle of sharing the family's possessions would do much to knit the home into a unit—happy, strong and useful to both God and man. The point is to say "ours" rather than "mine," and to ask, "What can we do?" not, "What can I get?"

AROUND THE HOUSE

When sandpapering surfaces that are to be painted, the work is made much easier if sandpaper is folded over a small block of wood.

When unsalted fats are used to replace butter or margarine in baking, additional salt may be needed.

Custards can be enhanced by a bay leaf boiled in the milk.

Take some garden soil, mix in some compost and fertilizer, and put it away where it won't freeze. Then next winter or next spring when you want to do some extra potting of plants, you will have some nice soil ready.

When carving a rolled or standing rib roast use a very sharp, thin-bladed, long handled knife. For the rolled roast cut thin slices across the top; for standing roasts cut in thin slices at right angles to the ribs.

Be sure that the fruits and nuts are well distributed throughout your fruit-cake mixtures. Chop or grind them into uniform-sized pieces and sprinkle them well with flour to prevent them from sticking together or remaining in one spot in the cake batter.

Broiled vegetables brown better when dipped in salad oil or melted butter.

It is not usually advisable to let prepared but uncooked vegetables stand for any time in water; it frequently causes a loss of mineral content.

A leaky chimney flue is one of the most expensive and trouble-breeding ailments from which any house can suffer. If you suspect that your chimney harbors a leak, lose no time in making sure of it, and if there is a leak, even a small one, have it repaired at once.

When painting a room the following hints may be found useful: Don't be in a hurry to finish; put down old newspapers before work and remove all curtains and hangings; keep handy a rag soaked in turpentine to wipe off "mistakes"; start painting in the darkest corner of the room and work toward the light; don't drown your brush—immerse it about half an inch; use a piece of stout cardboard with a straight edge to protect woodwork or wall that it is not desired to splash.

In the home, plants give off moisture through the leaves, from the surface of the soil, and from the pot itself if it is of the porous type, so provide sand, sphagnum moss or similar material, to keep the pots moist. And, if possible, keep the temperature down to below 68 degrees.

Subconscious Training

The ease with which the subconscious mind can train itself is illustrated by the case of a certain somnambulist, reports Collier's. The man placed a tub of cold water beside his bed when retiring so he would step into it and be awakened when starting his nightly sleepwalks.

The plan worked successfully a few times and then his subconscious mind began to make him get out on the other or "safe" side of the bed.

YOU can't set a wave or even comb a smart new hair-do without seeing the back of your head. A deep curve in the front of a dressing table will allow you to get close enough to a triple mirror. Here are the dimensions for such a table to be built into a corner. The stool top is pink cotton material; the skirts for it and the table, and the drape for the top shelf, are of light weight white muslin edged in old-fashioned embroidery panty ruffling. Pink ribbon holds the drape and edges the table. The top frill and center part of the table skirt are snapped to a strip of muslin tacked around the front of the table under the ribbon.
