THE AVERAGE AMERICAN FAMILY

Includes 3 1/2 persons uses 1/2 of a bathtub
 owns 1/2 of a house

1929
 AND gets about twice as much electricity for its money as it did 15 years ago!

STATISTICS are tricky things to toss around. Obviously, 3/5 of a bathtub wouldn't hold water very well! That figure means merely that some 3 out of 5 American homes have bathtubs. Obviously, also, the electric figure applies only to homes that have electric service. But as a nation-wide average of all those homes, it is a fact—and perhaps surprising to many people. Most families own more electric appliances now than they did in 1929. Over the years, as they used more electricity, they earned lower rates—and the rates, too, were steadily reduced. So—though your bill today may be as much as it was in 1929—or even more—you're probably getting twice as much for what you pay. And remember that the price of electricity has stayed down while most other prices are going up. That makes it just about the biggest bargain in your wartime budget! For this you can credit the electric companies, such as Central Power and Light, manned and managed by business people, under public regulation. Their hard work has made electric service dependable and cheap.

GEORGE S. WALTON, Pastor

Liberators, Thunderbolts and Lightnings fly. The decreasing external pressure means a many-fold increase within the human body. The result in combat might be disastrous. A pilot doubling up with cramps could mean the loss of a quarter-million dollar aircraft and 10 men of the crew, a bombardier with an acute tummy-ache might miss the target, a gunner who takes his hands from the trigger to grasp a painful midrif might miss the fighter that could shoot him down.

'Ordinary' Car Forecast For War's End

DETROIT. — One day the bombers will be grounded, the guns will stop firing, America will be at peace, and the automotive industry will start building automobiles again—for civilians.

What kind of postwar car can Americans expect? How much will it cost?

Engineers who attended the recent war-engineering convention of the Society of Automotive Engineers in Detroit probably are in possession of as much knowledge as anybody to give the most accurate information.

Here's what they say:

First, as to when the industry is likely to resume production of automobiles for civilians, on a large scale:

"Not until the war ends," says William Stubbs James, new SAE president, chief research engineer of Studebaker Corp., South Bend, Ind. "Of course, there may be some small-scale production for civilians before then. The industry has no plans at present for resumption of civilian production on a large scale."

What kind of cars will those first

Stomach Gas Dangerous To Combat Airmen

AMERICAN AIRBASE, England —Gas attacks definitely are listed among the fears of America's high altitude airmen. Gas already has worked against them.

The gas is not of the poisonous variety. It is not necessarily fatal. It isn't even one of the enemy's concious weapons. As a matter of fact he probably has as much or more trouble with it than the Americans.

This gas is strictly an individual affair. It is the result of the phenomena or rarefied air at the five-mile altitude where the Fortresses peacetime automobiles be? "Probably 1942 models", says James.

"Not a dream car", says Edgard C. DeSmet, executive engineer of Willys Overland Motors, Inc., Toledo, Ohio. "Not a super-super job selling for $400, with tear-drop body design, rear-engine mounting and all those other fancy features you've read so much about. The 'dream' car is a masterpiece of creative imagery, but a manufacturing impossibility. It will most likely be just an ordinary car. The American public will not pay excessive premiums for intangible features and questionable improvements. Neither will they be willing to sacrifice practicability, safety and fundamental habits and standards for the sake of fulfilling predictions of untimely prophets."

But William B Stout, noted aviation engineer and designer, says: "DeSmet is talking about this from the industry's viewpoint, but if the automobile industry is going to continue in the transportation business it must undertake more research than ever before. There's a lot we don't know about automobiles. Aviation has taken transportation as far ahead of automobiles as automobiles took transportation ahead of the railroads."
