DIFFERENCE BETWEEN DIVORCE AND ANNULMENT EXPLAINED

Notice of the filing of suits for divorce appear daily in our newspapers. Something has gone wrong with the marriage, and one of the spouses is asking the court to end the marriage by granting a divorce.

Occasionally, however, we read that someone is suing for an annulment of their marriage. The average reader may be inclined to say, "What is the difference?" Obviously the marriage is terminated if the court grants the petition, whether for divorce or an-

In the case of a divorce, the plaintiff (the person asking for an end to the marriage, whether the husband or wife) recognizes that the two parties involved were validly married and that there is an existing valid marriage.

The plaintiff alleges, though, that the other spouse has been guilty of some act which the law says constitutes a ground for divorce. If the divorce is granted, a marriage that actually exists is terminated legally by the court.

In effect, the court tells the couple that they were validly and legally married at one time, but no longer are.

Annulment Differs

In the case of an annulment, nowever, the plaintiff alleges that there never was a valid marriage in the first place because of some impediment of the parties or because of some fraud in its incep-

In this case the court must determine whether there ever was valid marriage. If the court agrees with the plaintiff, the decree says in effect that the couple never was legally and validly married, and is not now.

Such a decree of annulment establishes for the public record the fact that the marriage was and i invalid according to law.

Children Protected

Whether the action takes the rm of a divorce or an annulment decree will have no effect on the legitimacy of the couple's children. Our statutes provide that the children of couples whose marriages have been declared null shall nevertheless be legitimate.

Every divorce petition must set out the name, age, sex and residence of each child under 16 years of age born of the marriage involved. Then, before a divorce may be granted, the trial judge is required by law to inquire into the "surroundings and circumstances" of each such child.

Having considered all the pertinent facts and circumstances, the court in granting a divorce may give the custody and education of the child to either the father or mother. The governing factor here is the judge's belief and findings with regard to the best interests of the child himself.

Either parent may be required to make periodical payments for the benefit of the child, and may be punished for contempt of court in event of failure to comply with the support order.

In the past some trouble has been experienced in enforcing support orders against parents who

Seeing the situation, the child drifting out to sea to an unknown and certain death; the mother frantic with grief, and the hundreds of spectators willing but absolutely helphappen, laughingly reached down to him that it might be possible less, the thought at once occurred and tied the string holding the to cut the balloons so the weight of the child would bring it again to the beach or in reach of some of the boats following it.

He at once brought his rifle up from the launch, a 32-60 target gun, light but true of aim, and jumped to the pier. The child was now up about 50 feet and not more than 50 yards from the pier. Taking deliberate aim at one of the red toys, he fired. The hundreds of spectators held their breath in fear, and the mother covered her face with her hands. To the joy of everyone, a red balloon disappeared from the bunch, pierced by the bullet, and the child was untouched.

The balloons and child perceptibly ceased to rise, but drifted on slowly seaward. Raising his rifle again, Mr. Menefee took deliberate aim once more, while every man, woman and child held their breath. Another balloon disappeared. There was a great sigh of relief when the child appeared to be slowly drifting downward. He would not risk another shot, and the boats followed the toys and their precious
