Many Ways To Improve Your Pasture Land For Wildlife Hunting

By Carroll Johnson

If you are considering leasing your land for hunting or want to keep your land for personal hunting use, there are many things you can do to improve your land for wildlife.

Grassland needs to be in good condition to produce good cattle and the same is true to attract and keep wildlife. Depleted grassland that is infested with solid brush offers plenty of cover but little food during stress periods such as drouth or severe winters. Brush control can be used to help improve grasslands and wildlife habitate, but it must be done in harmony with other conservation measures. Brush can be controlled leaving strips of brush for wildlife cover. Brush should be left along streams, draws and natural drainageways since these are preferred wildlife areas.

Wildlife will feed in the open yet they want wooded areas nearby for escape cover. Cropland can be improved by planted grasses such as kleingrass or blue panic grass along turn rows and on small unproductive areas in your cropland. Leave a row or two of unharvested feed such as maize hegari or other feed grains in your grain fields. These tall growing grasses provide both food and cover for birds and animals and the feed grain provides additional food for wildlife. These are but a few of the ways you can improve your farm or ranch for wildlife and still not interfere with your livestock or farming operation. For further information on wildlife management contact your local Conservation Service Field Office in Jay-

We should thank God for the responsibilities we DON'T HAVE, and then seek His strength in fulfilling those we have.

It may be the by-product of democracy, but we often become too engrossed in the responsibilities of othersnot enough in our own!

If I have a home and a family, it is part of a community, and my community part of a nation, and my nation part of a world. Then, for my abilities, my task may be as great as that of the President of the United States.

It was a president who said he had been driven to his knees many times by the knowledge that his strength was insufficient for the day.

We all have days like that-most of the time!

Peanut Butter Adds Flavor And Goodness to Milk Shakes

milk shake flavor. It is anybody's guess what comes second. Vanilla, strawberry, coffee? Favorite or not, here's one that deserves more recognition. It's a peanut butter milk shake.

To make a peanut butter milk shake, put 11/4 cups milk and 1/3 cup creamy peanut butter into an electric blender container. Blend on high speed until smooth. Add 1 pint vanilla ice cream and blend to desired consistency. Makes 3 (8 oz.)

Delicious ves, but nutritious, too. One serving supplies more than a quarter of the protein needed daily by a child and just about a quarter of that needed by an adult. The protein is from the peanut butter and the milk. In addition to the protein, the milk shake is an excellent source of calcium, phosphorus, ribo-flavin and niacin. The whole milk and ice cream also make it a good source of vitamin A. To reduce the saturated fat, chosterol and calories, substitute skim milk for the whole milk and ice milk for the ice cream.

For the refuse-to-switch chocolate milk shake fans, substitute chocolate ice cream for the vanilla ice cream, or add 1/2 cup Bosco chocolate flavored syrup.

With either the vanilla peanut butter milk shake, or the chocoate, consider the addition of banana. Add 1 sliced banana If you don't have a blender, make the milk shake with an electric mixer. In the case of the banana shake, mash the ba ana first. Or mix the milk and peanut butter in a shaker and pour over chunks of ice cream. In other words — enjoy a peanut butter milk shake, no mat-ter how you make it or whether you drink it for breakfast, lunch
