People Should Watch For Foods With Ample Protein

College Station--Many consumers are obsessed with their daily need for protein--the nutrient necessary to make bodies grow. Mrs. Mary Sweeten, foods and nutrition specialist, said this week. The specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, pointed out that each day the average man needs only 56 grams of pure protein. That can be obtained by eating two 2 1/2 ounce servings of meat group foods daily, she said. "Each ounce of meat gives about seven grams of pure protein. So two 2 1/2 ounce servings along with other foods will give more than 56 grams," Mrs. Sweeten said. Children ages 1-10 need only 23-36 grams daily and women need 46 grams daily. However, during pregnancy, an additional 30 grams are necessary and during lactation, an additional 20 grams. "Body building proteins can be found in meat and meat group foods such as fish, poultry, dried peas, beans and nuts. Milk and milk group foods such as cheese and cottage cheese also contain protein. Breads and cereals provide small amounts of protein. And the best way for consumers to fill their daily protein requirements is by eating a wide variety of foods each day from the Basic Four Food Groups." This should include two servings from the meat group, two-three servings from milk group, four servings from bread and cereal, and four from fruit and vegetable groups, she explained. Selective Service has sufficient men registered and classified to continue the First Priority Selection Groups through the end of 1976. The First Priority Selection Group of 1976 will be those men who were born in 1956. These are the men who would be called first should Congress renew the induction authority because of a national emergency. Glantz expressed his sincere appreciation to the more than 1,600 volunteer registrars who have served without compensation in all communities of Texas. Their willingness to assist in this public service, giving freely of their Barry Blessed is the man who, having nothing to say, keeps patiently still while his wife says it. -Journal, Decorafl, Ia.

The title "Duke of Duval" has been heard by many people in the area to the west of Corpus Christi, and all over Texas and the nation. Now, the Duke is dead.

People over a wide area heard this name probably for the first time in the late 40s when Lyndon Johnson was elected to the U. S. Senate, by the big vote given him in Box 13 in Duval County.

The domain of the Duke of Duval embraces three personalities, first Archie Parr in 1912, later his son George Parr, and then George's nephew Archer Parr. It seems that the latter two got into trouble by forgetting what money was rightfully theirs, and by spending money that did not belong to them.

It all started in 1912 when three Mexicans were gunned down at the voting polls when they tried to vote.

Archie Parr sympathized with them, took up their battle, and became known as the "Duke of Duval." Later his son George took over the reins of power.

George ruled the politics of about four counties with a fist of iron. He made and broke politicians. One he made was Lyndon Johnson. One he broke was former governor Coke Stevenson.

Stevenson enjoyed the political benefits of the Parr power system for many years, as State Representative, Lieutenant Governor, and then as Governor. But along the way somewhere, Parr became disillusioned with Stevenson, and when the former governor ran for the Senate Parr went with Lyndon.

A strange thing, as long as Stevenson was getting the benefits of Parr politics it seemed to be a fine thing. But when Parr turned to Lyndon, then all of a sudden Stevenson thought it was corrupt.

Parr was not without his virtues. He is reported to always have had a fistful of twenty dollar bills, which he doled out to anyone with financial problems. Of course later, he might come and ask a political favor in return, and it seems he would get it. This is the way he made his power play.

His nephew Archer Parr, already has his troubles. He has been evicted as county judge, for getting his hands into the county till. He may not be able to succeed the old Duke.

It will be interesting to watch who takes over the Parr power now, since George shot his head off with his own gun. Quite a humiliating end, for a man who built up such a powerful machine, and maintained it for more than 40 years, part of that time while he was in prison for income tax evasion.

Many political amateurs, like myself, just cannot understand the attitude of the Congress about the national debt.

Just the deficit of this year's budget, amounting to about sixty billion dollars, is more than the entire national debt was at the beginning of World War 2. And each year since then, the Congress votes national deficits, and the debt gets larger and larger. People in Congress don't seem to worry about it. They write letters, and don't want to sign

I noticed a letter to the editor the other day in a neighboring paper, and at the end the writer said, "Don't sign my name, I would have to move out of the community." But to print such a letter, the person is putting the editor of the paper in the position he or she does not want to be in.

Quite often we get telephone calls like this, wanting the editor to crusade on some issue, but not wanting to be identified with the issue.

My guess is that the jury now sitting in judgment over former Texas Governor John Connally will not find him guilty.

I am not saying I think Connally is innocent, but with the type witnesses the State is using against him, they are not apt to get a conviction.

When defense attorneys get through with Jacobsen, he is not going to look like a creditable witness, which is what it takes to convince a jury.

Those of us who are not in the know in national politics have difficulty understanding why the United States Military, more than once in the past, has taken upon itself to fight a war which it did not want to win.

In Korea, and then in Viet Nam the U. S. armed forces did not really seek to win, only to detain, and move back the enemy.

With all of our sophisticated weapons of war in our arsenals, we chose in Viet Nam to do the main fighting with the foot soldier, with his rifle and bayonet to go down into the swamps and meet the enemy in hand to hand combat.

We spent nine years in Vietnam, and lost some 55,000 men, along with millions and billions of dollars.

Just for the sake of getting out, and to satisfy the shoves at home, we signed a shaky peace, which never did jell. We only got a few of our POW's and thousands of our MIA's are still unaccounted for.

We agreed to continue to furnish weapons to the South Vietnamese, only to see them turn and abandon them for the use of the enemy.

And for all of this, Richard Nixon wanted to go down in history to be known as the man who brought peace in Southeast Asia.

Special Program For Communities

The Community Improvement Program helps small rural communities to become organized to help themselves. The program is conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in cooperation with the investor-owned electric utility companies of the state and designed to help communities of 1,000 or less people. More than 600 communities were organized for "action" in 1974, with 983 community center buildings being used for meetings and other gatherings. A total of 3,335 leaders were trained in community organization. Some 65 counties were involved in a countywide organization for community improvement in 1974, according to an Extension Service community improvement specialist.

government should escape pruning as we try to escape the growth of an inflationary budget deficit that could exceed $80 billion in the next fiscal year.

THE MAIN PURPOSES OF THE ACT ARE: To provide assistance only to those entitled by need to receive it; to provide sufficient aid to the truly needy; to operate the system within the limits of public resources; to prevent fraudulent abuse of the system; and to provide incentives for recipients to find employment and leave the system.

THE PRINCIPAL FOCUS OF THE WELFARE REFORM ACT IS upon the program of Aid to Families with Dependent Children, the category of welfare which has been the most costly and subject to greatest abuse. The AFDC caseload which doubled in the decade ending in 1965 and doubled again by 1970.

TOO MANY IN THE WELFARE BUREAUCRACY and among legislators at all levels forget that the goal of a successful welfare program ought to be getting people off welfare and into productive employment again. Through this bill, we propose to give meaning to that goal.

THE THRUST OF THE LEGISLATION IS to rid the welfare rolls of "Professional recipients," not to penalize those with genuine needs for help. Welfare reforms are long overdue. Since the cost of these programs has doubled in just five years, it is time to call a halt to burdening the productive men and women of this Country with those who do not want to work.

MANY FEDERAL SOCIAL PROGRAMS NEED corrective legislation to insure that aid is channeled exclusively to the legitimately needy.

THIS ACT WILL COMPLETE SIMILAR actions which have been taken in a number of States since 1971. By tightening eligibility and cracking down on fraud, several of them have managed to improve assistance to citizens in critical need.

Texas Taxes

By BOB BULLOCK
State Comptroller

Austin—It comes as a surprise to most people that the State of California has fulltime state tax auditors stationed in Houston and Dallas to audit Texas companies which do business in California.

It should be just as surprising to find out that Texas has never had any regular program of auditing companies from California—or any other state—who do business here.

We're about to change that.

In the Comptroller's budget request to the Legislature we are asking for funds to hire 50 auditors to work on out-of-state tax accounts. We could probably use more than that and here's an example of why:

Counting Texas businesses and out-of-state companies both, there are 225,000 concerns collecting our sales taxes. Of these 225,000, a mere 1,100 account for more than 50 per cent of all sales tax revenues. Of those 1,100 big accounts, more than a third are headquartered out of Texas and have never been subject to regular audits.

I think there's gold in them thar hills.

California has 200 out-of-state auditors on the road. A little state like Virginia in 1973 picked up an additional $1 million from just 54 out-of-state audits. Michigan, with auditors stationed in six other states, recovered $11 million last year. Indiana uncovered $5 million in out-of-state audits in a year.

The "Washington Monthly" magazine reported recently that "some of the nation's top state tax officials estimate 'hat perhaps half the tax money legally owed state governments by the big corporations goes uncollected every year.'" Without a regular audit program, it's easy to see why.

Hiring auditors doesn't cost—it pays. Auditors, whether in-state or out-of-state, easily can produce from $10 to $15 in new revenue for every dollar spent on them. It is not unusual for audits, especially of larger companies, to produce an average of $5,000 for each audit conducted—and that works out to be between $300 and $500 for each hour the auditor works.

Bringing in more money is the major thing we think about in talking about auditing programs, but there is also a case of justice involved which is just as important.

So much of the money we are talking about is money which the public has already handed over to these businesses in the form of sales taxes. It is not money coming out of the pockets or profits of these businesses.

In addition to bringing in revenue, a regular audit program is good therapy—it serves as a word of warning to anyone who might be tempted to cut a few corners with the public's tax money.

We will also be stepping up our auditing programs inside Texas. That in itself makes it important to step up the out-of-state programs because everyone should play by the same rules.

CHILDREN 'Make believe' a worry

By DR. WILLARD ABRAHAM
Copley News Service

Q. I remember so well the fun I had as a child in playing "make believe." In a way I'm now reliving my childhood because my little girl (she's 5) enjoys some of the same kind of activities. She dresses up, talks to herself in the mirror, and sometimes pretends she is someone else. It's all a playful kind of thing, I'm sure.

The problem is that my husband is very worried about all this. He feels we should make her stop, that it's an "escape" for her, and may lead to emotional difficulties later on. What should I do?

A. It all depends on how much the "make believe" dominates her life. If it creeps into most of her waking hours, to an extreme, there could be a problem.

However, most young children like to play at being someone else — a parent, friend, animal, or show personality, for example.

A visit with her teacher may be useful, with both you and your husband there. He or she can tell you whether your daughter is in the "normal stream" for her age and development or too much involved in so-called escapist activities.

Q. I am planning to marry a woman who has two teen-age daughters. I have never been married, so this will be my first experience in living with children since I was a child myself.

We seem to have a good relationship, but I'm concerned just the same. Their own father died many years ago, and they barely remember him.

Is it difficult being a stepfather? Am I taking on too much?

A. Many people are successful in the role you are contemplating, but it isn't easy. Rewarding, yes, but it takes a lot of patience and understanding.

Spend as much time with them as you can spare, and as much as you and they enjoy together. Listen to them, and be available to help in ways that they hint at, whether it's school work, arranging for household chores, or coping with teen-age problems.

Showing equal fairness toward each of them is important, and so is agreement with their mother in matters relating to rules and discipline. Just as with regular parents they mustn't be able to play one of you against the other.

Q. I just can't get used to boys with unruly, unkempt, curly hair — and my own son is one of them. We talk and argue about it more than about everything else put together. He's such a good-looking 15-year-old, but not this way.

His friends don't look as wild as he does, but that fact doesn't help tone him down at all.

How can I get him to wake up to what he's doing to himself?

A. Is he on drugs, behind in his school work, or up half the night running around? No? Well, then, try to relax as millions of other parents are trying to do, and "this too shall pass" — or you'll begin to adjust to this minor change among the many we have to adapt to in these speedily changing times.

Whoever said being a parent is easy anyway?

Letters may be sent to Our Children, Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column as space permits.

What kind of parent am I? Am I realistic in what I expect from my children? Send stamped return envelope to Dr. Abraham, P. O. Box 572, Scottsdale, AZ 85252 for information.

REDDY'S HELPFUL FREEZER TIPS

Lock in flavor: Use moisture and vapor-proof materials especially designed for freezers to wrap your foods. Tightly sealed, these lock in flavor and moisture and prevent "freezer burn" (surface drying) on foods. Don't use wax paper, bread paper or regular cellophane for freezer foods.

Label packages: Date and identify freezer packages so (1) you don't accumulate a lot of mysterious shapes and (2) you'll be able to pick out foods that have been in the freezer longest.

Take advantage of sales: Avoid overstocking with commercially frozen food that's always available. Use your freezer as your own bargain counter and store foods you can buy on sale. But do allow space for short-time baked goods, leftovers and special party foods.

MONEY Widow and her money

By JUDITH G. RHOADES
 Copley News Service

When we offered the article "How to Avoid Being a Widow Without Assets," we received not only requests for reprints, but also a substantial number of questions which the article suggested. So many of the questions were about widowhood and the problems of handling money, that this column seemed to write itself today.

At the time of the death of your spouse, money seems to take on a greater significance to the survivor, especially if it is a woman who has never worked before.

If this happens to be your situation, money, even though you have children, psychologically becomes all you have left, and there is that desperate feeling that you must hang on to it. Money is important, and certainly necessary in today's world for survival, but it shouldn't override your living plan.

When one is unhappy, money, many times appears to be the "be all to end all" thing to undo your unhappiness. Other times, however, money appears to be meaningless and is virtually thrown away. Obviously, neither of those appearances is valid. What follows in this and future columns is designed to help you separate the valid from the invalid.

Q. My husband died almost a year ago and left me with two school-age children. The estate has now been settled, and after I paid all the medical and other bills, paid off the house and other loans, I have approximately $63,000 in cash to invest. I've had lots of advice, but I'm not certain what to do. I plan to go back to college, but the tuition is nominal, so that isn't a problem.

With the securities my husband had, there is only about $100 in dividends each year. — J.G., La Jolla, Calif.

A. The financial condition which you outlined is better than many, many women in your condition. You have a positive outlook on your future, and have the ability to support yourself and your children. You are going to need more money for living expenses than you will receive from Social Security. To get it, you have a number of alternatives.

One is to buy a good quality mutual fund and receive a check each month until you have an earning capacity of your own. Another alternative would be to purchase corporate bonds, and receive the interest from the bonds. It would be in your best interests to have your stock portfolio evaluated.

If you have any poor quality securities, eliminate them from your portfolio and reinvest the money into stocks which will provide income.

At the time you begin to earn an income for you and your children, you could eliminate the withdrawal plan from the fund and continue to invest in it, as a means of saving for your children's college education. Whatever you do, it would be advisable to keep $2,000 to $3,000 of that $63,000 in a pass book savings account for emergencies, and approximately $1,000 in your personal checking account.

This week's question was from someone who has the means to carry on her normal life-style without any interruption. Next week we will discuss the widow who is barely making ends meet and what are some of the things she can do in order to survive.

The hill spreads out in front of them, stretching up and up; they can't see over the top. There may be clouds in the distance; but just now they are oblivious to them. They are together, and for the moment, that is all that matters.

Together, the mood, the romance it evokes, are a part of life. But so is that uphill winding road. Traveling through life, you often can't see over the top. You can only give each step along the way the best that is in you.

Fortunately, this is a journey that none of us has to make alone. Your Creator is reaching out to you and the doors of His Church are forever open. If you haven't passed through those doors for a long time, or if you have never passed through them at all, give it a try next Sunday! You will not be alone, and a new perspective may be yours.

Farm Bureau Group Heading For Capitol

WACO -- A large group of local Texas agricultural leaders will be travelling to Washington, D. C., later this month for an unusual version of the annual Texas Farm Bureau conference for the county FB presidents, according to Carroll Chaloupka, TFB president.

Some 225 persons, including wives of some of the farm leaders, from 130 counties are expected to go. They will fly from Houston and Dallas April 22 and will return April 24.

Chaloupka said the purpose of the trip is give the local leaders a first-hand look at the governing processes on the national level. They will also have the opportunity of becoming better acquainted with their elected representatives in the U. S. House and Senate, he said.

The Texas farmers and ranchers will have breakfast with the Texas delegation in the House on the morning of April 23. They will later meet that day with Senators John Tower and Lloyd Bentsen.

Besides making contacts with legislators, the Texans will be feted to a banquet featuring American Farm Bureau Federation President William Kuhfuss and the Washington office staff of the AFBF in a discussion of "The Washington Situation."

They will be conducted on a special guided tour of the Department of Agriculture and will meet with Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz and his staff.

In addition, they will see the usual sights including Ford's Theater; the Federal Triangle; the Capitol building; the Supreme Court Building; the Library of Congress; the White House; the Washington, Jefferson, and Lincoln Monuments; the Cheery Trees; the Smithsonian Museum; the National Gallery of Art; and Arlington National Cemetery.

Plans for the trip were approved by the TFB Board of Directors early this year. It was made contingent on the state farm organization reaching certain membership goals. In order to send a representative, a county Farm Bureau had to have 55 per cent of its last year's total membership and 50 per cent of last year's new members enrolled by March 31. In addition, TFB had to have 85,000 members enrolled and 100 qualified counties by that date.

When membership figures were tabulated, it was found that some 130 counties had qualified and total new members transmitted to the Waco headquarters since Nov. 1 (beginning of the organization's fiscal year) exceeded 92,000.

Now Is Time To Start Planning Your Garden

Warm sunny days signal the start of another growing season on the South Plains. In spite of cold nights and windy days some eager gardeners have already planted onions, English peas and lettuce. Many people are starting a garden for the first time. Others are expanding their garden to fight inflation. To help home gardeners, County Extension Agent Smith offers several steps in starting a successful garden.

"Garden location is very important," Smith says. "Soil should be deep, well drained and fertile. The garden should be in full sun if possible. The south side of a fence running east and west is ideal. It is the warmest spot in the spring. The fence helps to capture solar heat and breaks the force of the wind."

If slight shading of part of the garden cannot be avoided, he adds, the partly shaded area can be planted to leafy greens and root crops. Fruiting crops such as tomatoes, peppers, and okra must have full sun to do their best.

A close estimate of the total area of your garden will help in calculating the proper amount of fertilizer to spread on the soil before spading.

Smith says experienced gardeners sample their garden soil in the spring and have it tested at the Texas Agricultural Extension Service Soil Testing laboratory in Lubbock. Printed instruction forms to aid in preparing a good soil sample are available at the county Extension office.

"Most fertile plains soils are rich in potassium," Smith explains, "so nitrogen and phosphorus may be the only two mineral elements needed. Usually one-half to one pound of ammonium phosphate (16-20-0) evenly spread over 100 square feet of soil will be enough to start the season."

He advises spading or tilling the soil to a depth of 8 to 12 inches. If the soil structure is tight or compacted, two to three inches of Michigan or Canadian peat or composted organic materials such as lawn clippings and leaves can be spaded in.

Soil should be raked into raised beds about 36 to 40 inches apart on center, 6 inches high and 18 inches wide at the top.

"You can plant seeds or plants in shallow furrows on top of the beds," says Smith, "and irrigation water can be run down the furrows between the beds. An even better way to irrigate is to use drip irrigation. The drip irrigation lateral water lines are placed along the top of the bed."

Vegetables that the family likes to eat can then be planted.

"The average soil temperature is still quite low -- in the mid 40's at the eight-inch depth and only slightly warmer at a depth of four inches," he cautions.

Seed of English peas including the edible pod types germinate when the soil temperature is still in the low 40's, Smith continues. Beet, cabbage, carrot, cauliflower, chard, lettuce, onion, parsley, radish, spinach and turnip seed will germinate when the soil temperature is 45 to 50 degrees.

The seedlings of these vegetables will tolerate a slight freeze, so you can sow seeds of all these directly into the garden or transplant seedlings from a greenhouse. Do not transplant seedlings directly from the warm greenhouse to the garden, but place the flats on the patio or in a partly sheltered area for several nights before transplanting them to the garden.

"Listen carefully to the weather forecast," he advises. "As soon as the average soil temperature rises above 50 degrees the cold tolerant varieties of early corn may be planted."

He says nothing is to be gained by planting potatoes until the soil temperature at the four-inch depth is at least 50 degrees. Commercial growers plant earlier, but this is because they have a large acreage to plant in a very limited time and must start early.

"It is still too cold to plant tomatoes and peppers unless you can cover them with hot tents or plastic row covers," he cautions.

Tips Are Given On Elimination Of Children's Quarrels

College Station -- If quarreling has become a way of life at your house, following some guidelines may help maintain more peace and harmony. Mrs. Ilene Miller, family life education specialist, suggested this week.

"First, it's important to realize that some quarreling between children is normal and to be expected. Quarrels are generally intense--but brief," the specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, said.

"When possible, let children work out their own problems. Don't become overly concerned about who is right or wrong. Taking sides without knowing all facts can be a mistake.

"Since children lose their tempers easily, the experience of working out their own problems will help them learn some self-control."

Families can reduce the amount of quarreling by setting some guidelines on behavior, the specialist suggested.

"Most quarrels occur when children are tired or want attention. Try altering their play and work habits. Keep them separated as much as possible.

"Plan with the children for more separate activities during the times when they are tired, such as before supper. Encourage them to develop their own interests and ignore minor skirmishes," Mrs. Miller said.

IT'S A LAUGH!

"I TELL YOU IT'S JUST A RUMOR... NO ONE HERE TOOK IT WITH HIM!"

The Consumer Alert

by John L. Hill
Attorney General

AUSTIN—"If he can make a million dollars with a voice like that, I know I could too!" How many times have you heard, or thought, something like that?

Some companies specialize in providing services to persons who feel they have singing, acting, modeling, dancing, or other talents but think they need assistance in marketing those talents.

The Attorney General's Consumer Protection Division lawyers say some "talent scout" companies provide satisfactory services for their clients. A few, however, have been found by courts to engage in deceptive or misleading actions.

Our office filed suit against one company which advertised and conducted a "singing talent search," and we obtained a permanent court injunction and $10,000 in restitution for defrauded consumers. The firm invited amateur singers of country, pop, rock, folk, gospel, and rhythm and blues to appear for "free, recorded auditions" in order to be considered by a major recording company.

After the audition, singers were urged to sign a $1,000 contract which would pay for auditions, the recording of master tapes, and presentation of the tapes to various recording companies. Agency officials represented that they knew persons in the recording business and would select songs especially suited to the client's voice. However, our lawyers found that the firm misrepresented its abilities and the efforts it would make on behalf of its clients.

Reports from other states have indicated that "talent scouts" claiming to represent a television talk show host have been promoting a training program that would "guarantee" person an appearance on national television. Authorities discovered "talent scout" was associated with the program.

Our Consumer Protection lawyers say that some talent developers operate in similar ways, direct their sales pitches to parents of children.

Some unscrupulous talent firms have been known to employ intense high-pressure sales tactics, then to allow a parent to cancel a contract or get a refund of the money he or she has had time to invest.

Most of the profit the firms make comes from fees and other charges. Parents are required to sign a child a contract in advertising or entertainment agencies.

Our Consumer Protection attorneys advise any parent interested in a talent scout offer to check into the firm's background. Ask for names of persons who have been hired by the firm. If names are provided, check them out. If names are provided, it's a good clue that the firm's services haven't been very useful.

Always get any promise made by a talent scout in writing. If you can't, they are worthless. And never sign a contract without thinking about it for a day or two.

If you have a consumer complaint, get in touch with the Attorney General's Consumer Protection Division, your county or district attorney, or your local Business Bureau.
