By Nanalee Nichols

Last Wednesday, when the presses were broken and our usually hectic schedule had gone beyond retrieval into the ludicrous, we wandered out to an antique store...not to buy anything, just looking while we killed the extra two hours in Paris we were faced with.

And while the rain roared down, I found myself swept back into childhood by the antique pictures that were for sale.

Still in their original frames, these prints, never expensive new, were bringing some pretty fancy prices. But as I looked at each one, it brought back memories of darkened hallways, lace curtains blowing gently at opened windows and elderly ladies exchanging gossip and lengthy tales!

For as a child I was taken with my grandmother to visit her many friends.

Not being interested in the gossip, I turned in boredom to the pictures on the walls, and studied them in every detail.

At least one of these prints could be found in those parlors with their stiff furniture and cold fireplaces. Many homes held the same pictures.

They must have been made by the millions, for they could be found throughout the nation in "old-fashioned" homes.

Annie G. Anderson had a print of the "End of the Trail", the classic Indian and his dejected horse, crowded out of existence. So did a distant relative at Bogata, whose name I can't recall.

Then there was the collie dog howling over a newborn lamb in a freezing snowstorm. I can't recall which lady had that one, but know it always worried me as a child. Was the lamb dead, and the dog howling in dismay? Or was he trying to get someone to come and help it? At any rate, that cold and snowy scene was melancholy and disturbing to me.

The little girl and boy crossing a bridge, guarded by a watching angel and the small girl listening to a bird singing were two more familiar examples.

The one that was always my favorite was on hand too, the wolf, standing on a hillcrest looking down at the lights of a small town. Was he hungry? Was he lonely? Or was he on the verge of extinction from civilization?

Those pictures were mauldin in the extreme by today's standards...but the sight of them recalled the scent of lemon on iced tea glasses, and the chatter of ladies who are long gone.

It's been a long time since I sat on a stool at my grandmother's feet, looking at those inexpensive, common prints.

But it was a clear as day when those antique-store pictures jogged my memory.

Area Weather Produces Hail, Tornados, Heavy Rains

Rain, high winds, tornados and hail have characterized the past month's weather, leaving behind serious damage. And, according to weather reports, it isn't over yet!

Last Wednesday night high water resulted throughout the area from heavy rains, and a hail storm devastated the crops in the Cunningham, Taylortown area. Large hail there left fields looking like a shredder had run over them. Gardens, roofs and cars also suffered damage. Cotton plants about a foot tall were completely stripped of foliage. From Taylortown to Talco trees were uprooted and metal buildings stripped of sheet metal. Milo crops large enough to be in the boot stage looked as if a giant had twisted and torn the foliage away, leaving them totally destroyed.

Some farmers were in the process of applying fertilizer to the milo, which added to their financial loss. Cotton crops destroyed will have to be replanted in cotton because those in which certain herbicides had been applied cannot be used for other crops, the chemicals not being compatible with anything but cotton. Generally, most farmers had put their major expenses into the ground, and that is now lost.

In Talco residents could only watch as a small tornado passed over their main street, but, fortunately, never touched down. 3 and 3/4 inches of rain fell in about one half an hour. Mt. Pleasant was not so lucky, suffering severe damage from twisters and high winds.

But the most wide-spread problem has been the rain. Construction workers, farmers and others in weather-affected jobs have been forced to watch as more and more rain fell. Although excellent for pastures, and, basically, crops, damage to roads and bridges have resulted from the unusually heavy downpours. Hay baling has been a "hit or miss" situation, with very little hay being put up that hasn't been rained on. Plowing, gardening and other seasonal chores are behind.

To date there has been nearly as much rain in 1989 as there was throughout 1988.

In January of this year there were only 10 rainy days, with a total of 3.81 inches. February had 13 rainy days with 5.61 inches. March had 12 rainy days for a total of 5.16, and April was dry with 8 rainy days but a total of only 1.22.

Then, in May there were 13 rainy days and a total of 11.66 inches. In June, as of the 12th, there had been 10 rainy days and 7.20 inches of rain, with more still falling.

This adds up to 89 wet days and 34.66 inches of rain for the year!

Whether the rains will continue this pattern into the traditionally hot, dry months of July and August remains to be seen.

Meanwhile, the weather continues to remain a topic of conversation and a subject of concern.

HIGH WATER turned pastures into lakes last Wednesday, leaving the fences by Brushy Creek

Letter To The Editor

Dear Editor:
There were a group of ladies in our town who worked diligently to help our community and the needy people within it. They were unselfish, caring and committed but often went unrecognized. For working concession stands at the rodeo, helping with Frontier Day, to buying new air conditioners for the community center, their many labors were appreciated. Because of various reasons, they disbanded. I feel the need to reorganize them one last time and to say that their input has brightened the smile of many, many people throughout the area. My personal thanks to the Bogata Lionsess organization. Sincerely,
David Rozell, President
Bogata Lions Club

People And Things

The Bogata Lions Club will meet Thursday night, June 15 at the Community Center at 7 p.m.

English Language Is Confusing To Children

By Mollie Williams

Have you ever stopped to think how confusing it must be for children just beginning to speak and understand the English language?

We are told that even for adults, the English language is one of the hardest languages to master, because of the use of words which are pronounced the same, but with different meanings. Just think about many of the phrases and slang words commonly used around many households.

It's a miracle that our youngsters ever learn which words go where. I was made aware of all these things recently as I was told the response of a three-year old to a visiting great aunt, who was concerned about who's eyes the child had inherited.

Instead of using the word inherited, the great aunt of the child asked, "Who's eyes does Kyla have?" The child then listened as those present discussed whether she had "gotten" her daddy's eyes or her mothers.

Finally, with much apprehension, Kyla proclaimed to them all, "My daddy has his eyes and my mama has her eyes and I got my eyes." Upon hearing of this event, I couldn't help but believe that in the child's mind she thought she was being accused of taking something that didn't belong to her and was trying desperately to set the record straight.
