Worth

By Nanalee Nichols

Those of you who have followed my column faithfully and regularly know that I can have a rather "strange" twist of thought.

I've been accused of having a "wierd mind" a "sick mind" and "no mind at all".

However, I've always taken it as a sort of left-handed compliment and gone on.

But now...I'm beginning to wonder.

Last week was my birthday (again...already...so soon...I CAN'T be this old). Many very kind people sent me birthday cards. I love to get them...and the are much appreciated.

So I don't suppose that it's anyone's fault but my own that these cards are the way they are.

It took a few days for me to realize that these cards were...well...as strange as I am!

For instance, there is one which has flowers, trees, singing birds and etc. on the front. It has a lengthy verse about "may your heart be as light as the breeze that ruffles your hair, may your days be as special as you are, may the sun"- you get the picture. Inside it says "and may the people who write this garbage die a slow and painful death". The friend who sent it said her mother-in-law was with her when she bought the card and thought it was just AWFUL...insulting. My friend assured her that "Nanalee will really love it" and I did!

Another featured a terror stricken cat and was all about fear (including fear of birthdays).

Yet another had an old woman rocking and knitting and making rude references to my age.

Then there was the one about "Happy Birthday to a true original".

There was also the sympathy card. I don't mean a birthday card, but a real sympathy card, intended for times of loss. "Thinking of you in your time of sorrow" it began.

Then there was the one about "flying and flapping...." well, you are bound to be beginning to get the picture!

No bouquets of flowers or "You are a special person" for me. No tender verses or tear-jerking prose!

And you know what...that's the way I like it. I LOVED my silly cards.

My friends know me well. They know what I appreciate the most. They know I'm not a romantic.

I loved my cards. But I must admit...it re-enforces those notions about being "wierd, sick or strange". Oh well, I guess that you can't argue with the truth!

Dear Editor:

As the "House of Representatives Post Office Scandal" continues to generate news reports and editorials almost daily, we feel compelled to ask that a widespread misconception fueled by these reports be corrected.

The headlines announce: "Post Office Provides Lawmakers With Illegal Cash; House Postmaster Pleads Guilty", leaving people to conclude that the House Post Office is run by the U.S. Postal Service.

The House post office is not and has never been a U.S. Postal Service operation. It is a PRIVATE POST OFFICE staffed and managed by the House.

There are no Postal funds or Postal employees involved in the scandal.

Sincerely,
 Joe Thompson

Support Group Donates To New Library

On the second Monday of each month at 7 p.m. a group gets together at the Paris Library, and for one hour they cry, hug and heal each other. This group is the Bereaved Parents Support Group. "Last year, I highlighted 71 obituaries in the Paris paper alone that listed a parent survivor," said Irene Bryant, member and sometimes group leader. "Most people think that the bereaved parents are only for the parents of young children. That is not so. The loss of a child is overwhelming, regardless of age." Mrs. Bryant's son, Scott, was killed in an automobile accident in 1989. The group has a monthly newsletter that they send to bereaved parents. The newsletter is filled with stories about the loss of a child, articles on ways to work through grief and personal accounts by parents telling of how they managed to cope. They have an annual picnic in which the whole group gets together with the families of the members and at Christmas they decorate a memorial tree in Bywaters Park which people can bring ornaments in memory of a loved one. The group is funded by donations that mainly go towards publishing the newsletter.

The group meetings vary between guest speakers, round table discussion and films and videos about walking through grief. It is a nonpressure open meeting for anyone who would like to attend. If you or your someone you know would like more information on the group, write to Bereaved Parents Support Group, 2146 Culberson, Paris, TX 75460 or call Bertha Grimes at 784-7635 or Irene Bryant at 982-6176 or Louise Stuart at 785-4366. Information on the group can also be obtained at Wood Funeral Homes in Deport and Bogata.

PROGRAM-Reno Fire Chief Bubba Coston presented a program to the Deport Volunteer Fire Department on Monday night on the purpose and importance of establishing a comand post at every fire call the area departments respond to. (Staff Photo by Thomas Nichols)

Country Cooking

By Judy Screws

Donald and I were at the Tip Top one day eating more than we needed, and I asked Dianne Williams if I could interview her for this column. She laughed and I begged. She said that she would have to clean her house and have time to think about recipes. I didn't give up. I told her that I knew she did not have to clean her house because it was already perfect and that she already had recipes. She wanted to know why I thought her house was perfect, and I gave her an explanation so logical that neither she or any other woman would argue with it. I told her that I knew how she kept her house by how perfect her lipstick is every time I see her.

Dianne is really pressed for time right now. With the responsibility of her shop and helping Sheila, she doesn't have time for much except Brandon's rodeos.

I am going to tell you all about the recipes Dianne gave me, but I first want to tell you that I didn't believe she used them until she assured me she does. You see these are all a bunch of little bitty slim folks. Even her mother-in-law, Maggie, who makes those pies that taste like Mama's isn't as big as a minute. Perhaps she just makes these recipes and eats a sensible portion. That would probably work.

The recipes Dianne gave me are Chicken Spaghetti, a version which she has created to her own taste, Caramel Squares, which was given to her by her friend Linda Wilson from Arkansas, Aunt Sue Hendricks' Green and White Salad, and Choc-Oat-Chip-Krisp Cookies which was given to her by Brad's friend Mark Musser from Tulsa.

Thanks to Dianne for the interview. Everyone have a good week.

family. The Williams family has 4 horses, and she enjoys riding them. Her horse is named Skip. She says she asked her family what their favorite thing was for her to cook for them and they would give her no specific answer. They just said they liked everything. I'm not surprised. Her recipes look wonderful.

Dickey, Johnson Exchange Vows

Darrell Lynn Dickey and Brian A. Johnson were united in marriage at 6 p.m. Saturday, July 3, in Reilly Springs Baptist Church. The Rev. Larry Baxley, pastor of the church and great-uncle of the bride, officiated the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Dickey of Sulphur Springs. She is the granddaughter of Hester F. Dickey of Sulphur Springs, the late S. C. Dickey and Mr. and Mrs. John B. Whitney of Deport.

The groom is the son of Carol Elaine Sprague of Sulphur Springs and the late Robert Bruce Johnson. He is the grandson of A. Lyree Phillips of Sulphur Springs.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted to the altar by her father, the bride wore a diamond white satin gown designed by Illisa. The Renaissance look of the gown started with a lace Queen Anne neckline and long tapered sleeves adorned with Italian lace appliques with shimmering sequins and seed pearls.

The fitted basque bodice was detailed with beaded lace appliques. The full, bouffant skirt and cathedral-length train were accented with lace insets and scalloped lace border with iridescent sequins and seed pearls.

To complement her gown, the bride wore a sequin and seed pearl tiara with a double-layered fingertip-length veil of bridal illusion.

The bride carried a cascading bouquet of white roses intertwined with blue and pink ribbons, lace and strings of pearls.

To carry out the traditional wedding custom, the bride wore something old, her great-grandmother's ruby engagement ring; something new, her gown; something borrowed, her great-grandmother's pearls; and something blue, a garter created by Peggy Davis of Sulphur Springs. She also had a six-pence in her shoe for luck.

Beth Davis of Sulphur Springs served as maid of honor. Jaclyn Dickey of Sulphur Springs served her sister as bridesmaid.

The bridal attendants wore teal-length gowns of blue and pink floral print. The gowns featured sweetheart necklines, dropped waists and puffed sleeves. The backs were accented with large bows. The gowns were designed and fashioned by Bessie Cockrum, aunt of the bride.

Each attendant carried a white Bible topped with a white lace fan. The fans were topped with clusters of rosebuds intertwined with pink and blue ribbons and seed pearls.

Ashley Horton, cousin of the bride, of Sulphur Springs, was the flower-girl. She wore a gown identical to that worn by the bridal attendants. She carried a white basket, laced with pink and blue ribbons and clusters of rosebuds, that held rose petals.

Mitchell Smith, cousin of the bride, of Sulphur Springs, was the ringbearer. He carried a white heart-shaped lace pillow that held the couple's wedding bands.

Ely Horton of Sulphur Springs served his brother as best man. Adam Sprague of Sulphur Springs served his brother as groomsman.

Ushers were David Alkire of Sulphur Springs, Courtney Currin, cousin of the bride, of Paris, and Glenn Maddox, nephew of the groom, of Sulphur Springs.

Music for the ceremony was provided by Charlotte Baxter, cousin of the bride, of Sulphur Springs.

She played the bride and groom's favorite selections as guests were seated. She accompanied Billy Joe Smith, uncle of the bride, as he sang Just See the Love She Found In Me. Brenda Hooker of Yantis sang Two Sparrows in a Hurricane before the ceremony and Strong Enough to Bend during the lighting of the unity candle.

The sanctuary was decorated with a 17-branch heart-shaped candelabrum on each side of an archway topped with white doves holding gold rings. The altar rail was covered with ivy and votive candles. The stained glass windows were highlighted with arrangements of hurricane globes, fern, ribbons and pearls.

The registry table in the church foyer held an engagement photograph of the bridal couple. Rebecca Gardner of Sulphur Springs presided.

The wedding was decorated and directed by Carolyn Smith, aunt of the bride, of Mahoney.

Following the ceremony, the bride's parents hosted a reception in the church's fellowship hall. House-party members included Rebecca Gardner, Tammy Horton, Peggy Davis and Valerie Johnson, all of Sulphur Springs.

The bride's table was covered with white lace over a blue underskirt. The scallops of lace and tulle were accented with pink and blue bows. It was centered with an arrangement of one dozen white roses, a gift to the bride from the groom, flanked by tall white tapers.

The bride's cake was a four-tier white cake with strawberry filling. The cake was decorated with white icing roses and topped with a bride and groom.

The groom's table was covered with an antique beige lace cloth. It featured a German chocolate cake and coffee.

Following a wedding trip to Dallas, the couple will reside in Sulphur Springs.

The bride is a 1993 graduate of Sulphur Springs High School. She will attend East Texas State University in the fall and pursue a degree in computer science.

The groom is a graduate of Sulphur Springs High School. He is employed by Runge Industries in Sulphur Springs.

Shade Trees Being Lost

By Paul D. Payne
Lamar County Extension Agent

The dry weather affects us in many ways, and one of those ways is the loss of many valuable shade trees. The Lamar County Extension Agent's office has received numerous calls lately from individuals all over the area who are concerned with dying trees, mainly Oak trees.

I certainly do not have an answer for the situation. It is a safe assumption that these trees have been stressed by the absence of rainfall following an extremely wet winter and spring in which many of the feeder roots were destroyed due to a lack of oxygen in the soil. Now that the trees are in need of an abundance of moisture, there just aren't enough feeder roots to supply the needed water.

It is always possible that there may be a disease contributing to the problem; however, we have not been able to diagnose one. If someone can shed some light on the problem, I would be most appreciative. A good deep watering would probably help some of the trees. If you want to water a tree, see that the water reaches the feeder roots. You might want to think about placing the hose in the area at the ends of the limbs, turning on the faucet slightly, and letting it run for several hours. The length of time will depend on the soil compaction and etc. Whatever you do, do not lightly sprinkle the soil under the tree every day, as this will encourage the roots to come to the top of the soil.

Tear-Full Memories Of First Days At School

By Liz Irwin

As I walked down the hall the first day of school Friday I heard the sound of a little girl crying her eyes out. This brought back memories of my first days of school and those of my own children.

Jamie, the oldest, was not afraid of the devil himself and we had no problem getting her settled in. In fact, from day one Jamie began giving orders and telling everyone else what to do.

But Amy, my middle daughter, well...she was a different story altogether.

We did the usual back-to-school bit...buying new school clothes, traipsing down the aisles of the stores buying school supplies. Then, on first day we found that you needed fat pencils, not skinny ones, you were supposed to have blunt end scissors, not sharp pointed ones, that was a second grade tablet, not a kindergarten tablet and heaven forbid, Mother, NO ONE uses a "Big Chief" anymore! Amy just had to have the lunch box with "Barbie" on it...the one that after the first week, if it was not set up straight let all the juice run out of the thermos...and who wants a soggy sandwich and wet chips?

Anyway, I'm getting sidetracked. Amy, not very brave anyway, decided that school was going to be great.

So we packed our lunch, got our new school clothes on and gathered our school supplies and were on our merry way to first day of school! We reached school just in time for everyone else to get there too. There is no place to park, I am suffering from morning sickness. (I had planned on sending my husband off to work and the two girls off to school and spending some quality time alone...well guess again...my third child, Cari, was on the way). But, back to the story.

Amy was being so brave. Jamie said "I can find my room...no need for mom, after all, I'm a first grader".

Amy began to tear up and lost quite a bit of confidence with each step.

By the time we reach the room we are in full-scale tears. I mean BIG TIME. She was not alone though, Marla Moss, Thomas Crossland and Joanna Johnson joined her in the waterworks display.

They cried every day for two weeks!

There are some things that you just can't forget...and that is one of them. I can see them as if it was yesterday...all four of them, lined up by the door, lunch boxes in hand, back packs strapped on, just boo-hooing away.

We begged, we pleaded, we promised, we cried, but to no avail. By the time I got home I was exhausted. After two weeks of this I said "I can't take it anymore, you are riding the school bus".

That morning she got on the bus and went to school by herself and never cried another tear!

One of the ladies at school asked Amy's teacher, Shiela Stokes what was wrong with Amy...how did we get her to stop crying. Mrs. Stokes replied "I don't know, but leave her alone and don't say anything to her!"

Five years later Cari began her first day of school.

She announced "Mom, I can't read and I can't write, so why go to school!"

Odd logic or not, Cari went, and now all my youngsters are long past the crying on first day of school stage. But it's one thing I'll never forget, and I'm sure other parents don't forget their youngster's "First Days" either!
