Mr. and Mrs. George Mullins and daughter of Abilene visited with Mr. and Mrs. Jack Monse and family Sunday and attended their open house.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Stremmel accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Leland Thane to Dallas recently and visited with Mr. and Mrs. Ray Henrichs there.

The home of Mrs. Lewis Corzine was the scene of a work day Monday for making curtains for the Sheltered Workshop for handicapped persons in Haskell. At present there are nine persons employed at the workshop.

The funds for the curtains came from donations at the Christmas party of the Haskell County Home Demonstration women, and Mrs. Leonard Kieke, Mrs. Delbert LeFevre and Mrs. Lewis Corzine, all members of the L.O.C. H.D. Club, were asked to buy the material and make the curtains.

Linda Rhoades of Rule was honored with a surprise birthday party after school on her birthday, February 17, at the home of Jill LeFevre. Lyn Fouts was the hostess and the party was transferred from her home because of the illness of her grandfather. Members of the Freshman and Sophomore classes at Rule High School attended. They enjoyed pizza, chips, cokes and birthday cake, which was decorated by Lyn.

WASHINGTON

OMAR BURLESON
Congressman—17th District

WASHINGTON, D. C.—THE READING OF THE FAREWELL ADDRESS ON George Washington's birthday has become an established custom in both Houses of Congress.

THE OFFICIAL HOLIDAY WAS CHANGED TO THE THIRD MONDAY IN February in 1971, as were some of our other national holidays, on the proposition that holidays falling on the day following a weekend would be less disruptive in industry and Government.

WASHINGTON'S ADDRESS WAS READ IN THE UNITED STATES SENATE AS early as 1888 and has been read annually since 1896. In the House of Representatives the ceremony was inaugurated in 1889. Democrats and Republicans alternate the reading each year.

WASHINGTON'S ADDRESS WAS NOT A SPEECH IN THE STRICT SENSE. It was more of a lecture filled with admonitions on both domestic and foreign matters. It received its first attention in the Philadelphia "Daily American Advertiser" in September of 1796. Washington's main purpose in making his statement public was to eliminate his name as a candidate for a third term as President. He used the occasion, as well, to present his thoughts on the desirability of a strong union and a justification for policy of neutrality towards France and England.

GENERAL WASHINGTON WARNED THE REPUBLIC AGAINST TAMPERING too freely with the Constitution and strongly emphasized unity, based on patriotism and liberty. He warned against excesses in Governmental action and against a concentration of power in any one department of Government. He described it as "a fire not to be quenched, it demands a uniform vigilance to prevent it bursting into a flame, lest instead of warming, it should consume."

ONE PART OF WASHINGTON'S ADDRESS IS CERTAINLY APROPOS TO today's situation. He said, "As a very important source of strength and security, cherish public credit. One method of preserving it is to use it as sparingly as possible, avoiding occasions of expense by cultivating peace, but remembering, also, that timely disbursements, to prepare for danger, frequently prevent greater disbursements to repel it; avoiding likewise the accumulation of debt, not only by shunning occasions of expense but by vigorous exertions, in time of peace, to discharge the debts which unavoidable wars may have occasioned, not ungenerously throwing upon posterity the burden which we ourselves ought to bear. The execution of these maxims belongs to your representatives, but it is necessary that public opinion should cooperate. To facilitate to them the performance of their duty, it is essential that you should practically bear in mind, that towards the payment of debts there must be revenue; that to have revenue there must be taxes; that no taxes can be devised which are not more or less inconvenient and unpleasant."

THIS WARNING ABOUT PUBLIC DEBT SEEMINGLY HAS FALLEN ON DEAF ears in more recent years. To spend for wars and to prepare for national defense in time of peace has, fairly constantly, been our practice but it is questionable as to whether we are keeping to the latter at this time.

WASHINGTON WARNED AGAINST FOREIGN ENTANGLEMENTS. OF COURSE, our world has shrunk because of transportation and communications but his admonition to "constantly keep in view that it is folly in one nation to look for disinterested favors from another; that it must pay with a portion of its independence for whatever it may accept under that character", should be fresh on our minds. He went on to say that where favors are extended to foreign nations that we will likely be reproached with ingratitude for not giving more. This too has been our experience since World War II.

GEORGE WASHINGTON HAD A DEEP INSIGHT INTO THE FUTURE OF OUR Nation and perceived what could happen to it under the system he helped devise. Much of what he warned against we have ignored, even recognizing that change is inevitable and that adjustments are necessary.

WILL ENERGY BE THE DEATH OF OUR FARMING SYSTEM?

Bonnie Kreidler, Editor of USDA, a biweekly publication of the U. S. Department of Agriculture is credited with the following statement: "Progress is rarely made without paying a price. Americans farmers have evolved one of the most technologically intensive farming systems in the world, and those healthy doses of technology now enable each farmer to produce enough food to feed himself and 56 others."

But the price American farmers have paid for this success is an increasing dependence on fossil fuels—a resource which has rapidly become both scarcer and more costly. Fossil fuel is the key ingredient in our modern agricultural system. We've replaced hand-labor operations and animal power sources with diesel tractors, combines, crop dryers and conditioners, and an array of other mechanical "field hands". Fertilizers made from natural gas and petroleum have played a major role in increasing crop yields. And if you add in the energy required to process, market, and distribute those crops to the consuming public, you find that the appetite for energy represented by our food chain from farm to retail store is enormous and growing.

The Economic Research Service of USDA recently analyzed the energy needs for fuel through 1980, five years from now. The study disclosed that the energy needs for the farm family living will decrease by 10 percent, but that the energy needs for farm production will increase by four percent, while energy needs for processing, marketing and distribution will increase by 19 percent. The total energy needs for any one of our major production are estimated to be a 16 percent increase.

Technological changes are building in agriculture, new methods that use alternative energy sources to oil, new methods that reduce the need for energy, such as minimum tillage. Plant genetics may produce new varieties that yield well without large doses of nitrogen fertilizer. Solar heat may one day be harnessed to dry crops.

But the transition to alternative energy sources won't happen overnight. In the meantime, as they bid against other producers and users for available supplies, farmers, food distributors, processors, and consumers should continue to do everything they can to avoid being "fuelish".

MINIMUM TILLAGE OR NO-TILL FARMING IS THE IMMEDIATE ANSWER

By studying your production methods and making some cost analysis, you can determine what farming operations can best be eliminated. For each operation you can eliminate from crop production, you can increase the net returns per acre of that crop and reduce the use of fuels.

Many farmers sowed wheat into cotton stalks this past fall without even applying a herbicide. If your cotton fields were clean, there wasn't a need for weed control of any sort. So one or two operations were eliminated. Cotton stalks do not have to be shredded, now does the land need disking. I have looked at a good number of fields during the winter in which wheat was drilled into cotton stalks without any other operations, and I find little to no winter weeds, and little to no erosion. And I can not tell any difference in the wheat planted by this method than wheat planted in land that was prepared. The same operation can be used where wheat follows grain sorghums. If the grain sorghum is combined shorter, so that the stalks are not more than 8 to 10 inches high, they will not interfere with combining the wheat next summer.

Cotton, of course, needs somewhat more land preparation than does wheat, but not as much as we normally think. Is listing in the fall and winter really needed, except maybe to prevent wind erosion? Do we really need to knife the beds prior to planting? With the use of herbicides, just how many cultivations are needed to produce cotton? Not nearly as many as most cotton farmers perform. I personally believe that the number of operations to produce a cotton crop can be drastically reduced without reflecting in the production of pounds of lint per acre.

Why don't you put the pencil to your farming operations? I know from analysis of certain farmers operations, that some operations can be eliminated, thereby reducing the consumption of fuel, and increasing the per acre net returns. And, after all, isn't this the general idea. Reduce costs and increase profits, at the same time you are treating the soil, your basic resource, better. There is such a thing as farming your land to death.

1040 U.S. 1040A Taxpayers Ask IRS

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U. S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

Q. My 1973 tax return was more complicated than usual to fill out, so I decided to use a return preparer. Can I deduct the charges that I paid in 1974 for preparation of my 1973 return?

A. Yes. The cost of tax counsel and assistance is a deductible expense, and is reported on Schedule A of Form 1040 as a miscellaneous expense.

Q. I'm a member of the Armed Forces, and am transferring to a new assignment in the Orient. I have received an allowance for the transfer. Is this money taxable?

A. It depends on the reason for the allowance. If it is a dislocation allowance paid upon transfer from one post of duty to another it is taxable. But if it is a housing and cost-of-living allowance or a family separation allowance, it is excludable from your gross income.

Q. What is the reason for my indicating the county where I live on my tax return?

A. Under a law known as Revenue Sharing, a portion of the tax money collected by the Federal Government is returned to the states and cities. The amount of money your locality receives is based on information you supply on your Federal income tax return. So it's important for you to fill in the County of Residence block on the front of your return. To complete this block, print or type the full name of the county (parish in Louisiana; organized borough in Alaska) in which you live. The instructions for both 1040 and 1040A forms explain how to fill in the block if you don't live in a county, parish or borough.

Q. What is the rate for exemptions for myself and my family this year?

A. The personal exemption for 1974 is $750. If you file a joint return, you may also claim a $750 exemption for your spouse. Exemptions of the same amount for age and blindness are available for both of you if you qualify. Furthermore, you are entitled to an exemption of $750 for each person who qualified in 1974 as your dependent. For more information on exemptions and dependents, consult IRS Publication 501, "Your Exemptions and Exemptions for Dependents." It's available free at all IRS offices.

Dear Mr. Bill Comedy,
I am writing this letter for Mrs. Allie Mae (Milstead) Williams and hope you will print it in your newspaper in the "Letters to the Editor" column. She lives in a nursing home here and asked me to write you.

Mrs. Williams has not seen her parents, who are dead now, or any of her family members for over forty years. The family was separated during the depression when she was five years old.

She is anxious to find some members of her family if they are still living. She knows very little about them but hopes some of your readers will be of some help in locating them.

Her older brother, James Dillard Milstead, was born somewhere in Texas in 1912; and a young sister, Velda Jean Milstead, was born in Haskell, Texas in 1924 and is known to have lived at one time in Haskell during her later life.

Allie Mae would appreciate very much hearing from anyone who knows anything about her brother or sister or their families.

Please make her days brighter and happier by writing her at the Evergreen Care Center, 63 So. Center, Rexburg, Idaho 83440.

Thank you for your interest and help.
Sincerely,
Afton F. Parkinson

February 23-March 2

PISCES—Your gentle nature will be tested. Don't let other drivers get your goat. Follow basic traffic rules at all times—like stop ways at all intersections.

ARIES—A week to relax. If your schedule is too tight to loosen things up a little bit. And don't skip the appointments you have. Being a little late is the end of the world.

TAURUS—You may tend towards doing things your way this week. Be sure you come to a complete stop sign.

GEMINI—You may really be feeling like playing it safe. But let the person with the right of way go.

CANCER—Cutting things close could be a thing with you at this time. Don't ride the car too closely. Someone else on the other side is doing the same thing.

LEO—The problems a friend is having could be heavy on your mind. Don't be distracted by mistakes, such as following too closely.

VIRGO—A week for you to be uncertain about you're going. When you make a left turn, stay in the lane.

LIBRA—Watch out for a tendency to make a wrong turn. Hitting your brakes too hard could be a problem for drivers behind you.

SCORPIO—Don't be distracted now. Before you get to the grocery store, make sure you have all you need. If one falls over, it could take your attention off the road.

SAGITTARIUS—You might feel like making a start this week. Before you do, think about what you're wasting.

CAPRICORN—Don't be indifferent to the traffic you. If it looks like things are slowing down, get off on the gas.

AQUARIUS—Make sure your acceleration is all times. You might feel the urge to push it a while, but be careful—it uses far more gas.

Rotary Club News

The Haskell Rotary Club held their regular weekly meeting at the City Cafe at noon, Thursday, February 13th, with vice president, Sam L. Rosser, presiding in the absence of president Ferrell Coston.

Rotarian Bob Brown, Pastor of the First Methodist Church, gave a most inspiring talk, using as his subject material, the Constitution of the United States. This pattern for a free Nation was written one hundred and ninety-nine years ago, he said, and now as we are making preparations to celebrate the Bi-Centennial of America, we should by all means give some thought to this great constitution of the United States. Our Forefathers struggled to give us what we now have and every citizen of America should rededicate themselves to the meaning of the free land we are privileged to enjoy. His timely remarks were well received by those present and he concluded his impromptu talk by saying that he had been privileged to travel over a great part of the civilized world and that he had never found a nation to compare with what we have.

The invocation for the meeting was also given by Rev. Brown and the song session led by R. C. Couch, Jr. with club pianist Joan Dean providing accompaniment.

The pledge of Allegiance was led by Charles Thornhill.

THE SCIENTISTS TELL ME...

By Robert L. Perry, Science Writer
The Texas Agricultural Experiment Station

We May See Vintage Wines Made in Texas

Texas has considerable potential for producing commercial wine grapes according to preliminary research results. Growth of U. S. wine consumption, and its resultant interest in grape growing here, justified expanding grape research. If wine grapes could be successfully produced in Texas, they would provide a significant new source of income.

Possibilities vary widely in the state according to Ron Perry, Experiment Station horticulture researcher. "Distinct temperatures and diseases seem to be the primary limiting factors in successful grape growing in Texas," Perry says. But soil, wrong soil type, poor water quality or lack of water can also limit grape growing in some parts of the state.

Diseases such as Pierce's disease and corky root are the major drawbacks to grape growing in some parts of Texas, according to Perry. No feasible control has yet been found for either disease. At present, where Pierce's disease is a problem, growers can use one southern muscadine variety such as Huxley, Scuppernon, Fred and a few American bunch grapes known to be resistant. Researchers are working to develop other varieties tolerant to Pierce's disease.

Since with a known history of cork root should be avoided. However, if such sites are good, resistant varieties may help; additional research is needed for confirmation.

The major diseases attacking foliage and fruit of grapes growing in Texas are powdery mildew, downy mildew, black rot and anthracnose. These diseases are controllable with fungicide spray programs. The occurrence and seriousness of the infestation of each disease largely depends upon grape varieties and location. Without control, normal vine growth and yields may be seriously reduced.

And there are many insects in Texas capable of attacking the grapevine and its fruit. TAES research shows. The most potentially hazardous ones are the grape leafhopper, the grape leaf folder, June beetle and western grape leaf skeletonizer.

Insects can be controlled by applying insecticides at the times recommended. But research shows increased effectiveness in control is helped by disposing of rubbish and fallen leaves in vineyards.

Perry says the Experiment Station and the Extension Service are testing several grape varieties in various parts of the state. These varieties will be judged for yield and quality of fermented and unfermented juice.

Potential of grape production in Texas looks good. We know they can be grown here; they have been in the past. In earlier days, Texas had as many as 35 Class B wineries. Del Rio has the only commercial one today. (A Class B winery grows all its own grapes. A Class A winery uses all or most of its grapes from other wineries.)

Now, let's focus on one area of Texas and see what's being done there. A great deal of interest in wine grape production has developed in the South Plains area. According to Dr. William Lipe, plant physiologist at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station (TAES) at Lubbock, there are three separate groups in the area making tentative plans for wineries in the next few years. About 50,000 vines of several varieties were planted in 1974.

The Lubbock Center began trials on grapes in 1961 in response to and in cooperation with the Ahermally Chamber of Commerce. This research has expanded until there are 250 varieties under observation at Ahermally and at TAES, Lubbock. The Ahermally test planting now has about 26 acres. A new one-acre planting was made at the Lubbock Center in 1974 with 90 varieties in two rows. Smaller test plantings have been made at Welch and Ropesville.

Lipe says that although some varieties (mostly fresh market and processing) have been in production 3 or 4 years, most of the wine types came into production for the first time in 1973 and 1974.

The research program at TAES Lubbock involves variety evaluation (wine, fresh market, and processing), irrigation systems, hail protection, and weed control.

Thus far, research shows that several grape varieties are beginning to stand out with regard to yield and juice quality. It has been shown that commercial yields are attainable and that juice characteristics for a potential wine industry are acceptable.

Comparison of Texas areas to wine-producing regions of California suggests that bulk and standard table wines and high quality dessert wines can be produced in Texas.

If grape production problems in the state can be solved so growers greatly expand production, it can be a strong economic boost to the state. And along with wine grape growing, we'll probably see expanded production of table and juicing grapes.

Who knows, we may one day see a "Texas Champagne 1983" as a much sought-after vintage wine.

New Decisions On Harvesting Cotton Needed

EXPERIENCE—In the face of drastic changes in cotton prices and the costs of cotton production, cotton producers should take a long, hard look at their capital investment in harvesters and at the way they use modern, high-speed pickers or strippers.

A new study by Cotton Incorporated shows that harvesting decisions based on possible gin jam-ups are almost as outdated as hand-picking.

"The modular system for harvesting, handling, storing and ginning seed cotton has liberated harvesting operations from constraints imposed by slow ginning," says J. E. ("Farmer") Jones, associate director of agricultural research for mechanization at Cotton Incorporated.

Cotton Incorporated is the research and marketing company of U. S. cotton growers. The new study was prepared by Dr. William Laine, manager of systems and cost engineering in the agricultural research division.

"Any decision on harvesting speed and harvesting capacity involves a trade-off between the loss of unharvested cotton that remains in the field and the cost of enough harvesting equipment to prevent losses in the field," says Jones.

"In making these decisions, producers should carefully consider the new modular system," Jones believes. "Seed cotton storage can mean more economical harvesting and ginning for the producer."

What is financially best for any producer will depend largely on whether he has high yielding or low yielding cotton.

The new study shows that a producer of high-yield cotton benefits most from very rapid harvesting made possible by a storage system. Capital investments in added harvester capacity are quickly amortized.

"But producers of low-yield cotton will gain advantages with a storage system," Jones says.

"Low-yield cotton does not require rapid harvesting. It cannot produce revenues required to justify the capital investment in greater harvester capacity. But a storage system still allows a low-yield producer to operate the harvesters he does own at maximum capacity, thereby allowing him to spread his capital investment over more acres of cotton."

In the past, it was generally true that the faster the rate of harvesting, the greater the cost of ginning. The increased flow of seed cotton to the gin dictated ever increasing gin capacity—to the point of diminishing returns.

But the Cotton Incorporated study shows how seed cotton storage offsets the demand for increased gin capacity, and thus effectively cuts ginning costs. Ginning capacity need not match harvesting capacity.

"In addition, a module system for handling seed cotton will give any producer protection against bad weather and will lessen his vulnerability to changing market conditions," Jones claims.

Converting Car Exhaust

The 1975 cars with converters not only spew out fewer pollutants, they also run better than last year's models, start quicker, and even get better gas mileage. Fuel savings in 1975 models with converters, for example, are 13 percent above that for last year's cars.

Cars with catalytic converters are commonplace this year. Along with unleaded gasoline.

Part of the reason for this good news is that car manufacturers have had to redesign carburetors and ignition systems in order to get the catalysis to work properly. So there are happy side-effects along with less pollution.

The converters themselves, attached to exhaust pipes, chemically change polluting hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide to harmless carbon dioxide and water. The converters are designed to reduce hydrocarbons by 83 percent and carbon monoxide by 90 percent.
