Rebels Capture Win Over Harmony 21 - 6

By Britt Morgan

A rather heavy mist covered the field. The player's uniforms were soaked and mud-streaked. And the ball, being damp, became almost alive as it squirmed loose from the grips of its carriers thirteen times. But through all the slips and slides of cleated feet, the Rivercrest Rebels with their ball-control wish-bone offense came through in the clutch and got a 21-6 district win.

The Rebels first touchdown came after Harmony's punter chased a bad snap back to his own 18 yard line and was swarmed by Rebel defenders. Two plays later Jerry Merchant scored from fifteen yards out, leaving four would-be tacklers grabbing air. The point after was blocked and the rebels led by 6. After a series of punts and an exchange of fumbles, Harmony gave its only threat of the first half to the 26 yard line of Rivercrest, but turned the ball over on downs just before the half-time break.

On the Rebels first possession of the second half, the express started from its own 47 yard line and in three plays was sitting on Harmony's 26 yard line on two fine runs of 12 and 13 yards by Billy Stewart. Merchant, Wade Cline, and James Strickland then took turns at the line and put the ball on Harmony's 6 yd. line, where Cline took the ball over for the Rebels second score. Merchant then added a two point conversion and Rivercrest led 14-0. The teams then exchanged punts and then Larry Davis intercepted a Harmony pass and gave the Rebels possession at the Eagles' 36 yard line. Strickland hit Merchant on a short pass and Merchant turned it into a 25 yard gain, putting the ball on Harmony's 6 yard line. Three plays later Strickland took the honors by carrying the ball over from the one and the Rebs led 21-0. Harmony, helped by penalties, then put themselves on the board with just minutes left in the game to save a shut-out and Rivercrest led 21-6. Then Davis again killed a Harmony drive by intercepting his second pass for the night and the Rebs then let time run out.

Groves said a rainy night will equalize teams faster than anything else and the game comes down to who will control the ball, and the Rebel offense, fast becoming used to each other, controlled the ball very well. The defense also showed improvement, especially in the secondary.

The Rebels play host to Maud's Cardinals, who are just coming off a victory over New Diana, next week in the Rebs third district game.

Flood Losses Are Great

Each year flood losses in this country average over $3.4 billion, and since 1925, floods in the United States have killed over 4,000 people, a local conservation leader said this week.

"The irony of all this is that most all of the loss and damage could have been avoided had citizens, builders, developers, planners, and America's real estate community heeded the advice and warnings of several public institutions," Henry Catlett, District Conservationist for the USDA Soil Conservation Service at Mt. Pleasant said.

"For close to half a century, conservationists and planners have urged that floodplains are best left to uses less intensive than houses and shopping centers," Catlett continued. "There are many sources of information that show where flooding is likely and where homes and other developments should not be built. Many homes, however, are still being built where floods can be predicted with accuracy. The price for this indifference is always flooded homes and serious damage, along with subsequent suffering and financial loss."

Flood-prone areas or flood plains are defined by Webster's as "fairly level lands that may be submerged by floodwaters. They are naturally occurring features of the landscape... The flatlands that border rivers, creeks, and coastal waters." All floodplains vary in size, shape, origin, and description, but they share one simple characteristic—from time to time they are covered by water.

"The problem with flooding is there are no guarantees," Catlett said. "The big rain could come tomorrow, next week, or maybe 100 years from now, but it will come. Flooding can also be repetitive. Many damaging storms often occur back to back during the same season."

Catlett said another factor that should always be considered is the changing conditions on the land. Sometimes floodplains that have been safe as long as anyone can remember suddenly overflow and send muddy water into homes. This occurs sometimes after only moderately heavy rains. Upstream construction of houses, supermarkets, streets, and parking lots can drastically alter natural drainage patterns. The sealed surfaces absorb no rainfall so runoff is greater and takes place faster. If the drainage system of a downstream subdivision is not adequate, a torrent of runoff water can create a flood.

Community leaders often fear that denying intense development on a convenient floodplain will give their locality a reputation of slowing down normal economic growth and discouraging new industry and business.

Floodplains that are not developed are definitely not lost to the community. They often provide long-term benefits and perform natural functions in water management and landuse that cannot be duplicated by works of man, no matter what the cost. For example, agriculture is a basic use of floodplains. Most farmers have long known the value and limitations of floodplains for growing crops or pastures. Parks, field sports areas, hiking paths, and other recreational facilities so necessary to an all-round community are acceptable on flood-prone land.

Floodplains also provide greenbelts, open space, and natural areas. In urban areas, they are often all that remains of the natural world. Wildlife also benefits from undeveloped floodplains by offering refuge to various species of fish, birds, and mammals. Using floodplains for parks and greenbelts can contribute to the attractiveness of a community as a good place to live and actually help contribute to a stable tax base.

Conversely, if this same area is repeatedly flooded, the news stories and pictures going out on the wire services don't help to give the community a good image.

For the sake of investment, the future of the community and human safety, we should always question any statement that a floodplain is safe for building.

Several agencies and organizations have floodplain information available for the asking. Some have maps and flood-prone areas clearly delineated. The SCS has people in or assigned to practically every county in the United States. They provide assistance including information about floodplains free of charge. The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers also has floodplain data available. Local planning agencies, regional governmental bodies and zoning officials also may have useful material.

"Overlooking the consequences of building in floodplains without having all the available information in advance could prove to be a costly error, Catlett concluded. "Unfortunately, it's an error that we all share with higher insurance, building costs, and relief programs to flood victims."

The wreck may be the first example of an ancient ship built with the modern technique of laying keel ribs first and then planking. A scale model of the ship is being constructed to show how the restored vessel would look.

Listening At The Library

By Bosley Bookworm There is so much excitement going on down here at the library that I'm just a-shaking and a-quivering watching everything that is happening. The energy generated by all these who are working on the second annual Red River County Historical Bazaar on Oct. 17 is really something. If enthusiasm makes a project successful then this event should be spectacular. Of course, it takes the help of everyone in the county and since it is for the preservation of the old DeMorse home, I feel sure that all our great citizens will want to volunteer their time and contribute their goods to make this a huge success. Some of the items needed are baked goods, arts and crafts, plants, home canned goods, white elephant items, etc. Come on--let's everyone pitch in and make this a huge success. Incidentally, this event has also been noted in the magazines "Southern Living and Texas Monthly" which we have here at the library.

On the display table are a number of books pertaining to the new television series call "Odyssey-The Human Adventure" which will air Tuesday nights at 9 p.m. The first program was on September 29 and of Bosley was just enthralled watching how discoveries are made under the sea of ancient shipwrecks and how these artifacts are preserved. Nearly all of the children who participated in the summer reading program have picked up their certificates, but if you haven't be sure to come by the library and get yours.

The library Board of Trustees meet in September and welcomed a new member, Jack Hood of Detroit. Reports were given and acted upon with the meeting being conducted by Pat C. Beadle, president. Be sure to come by and see the historical pictures on display in the meeting room. Jim Clark has been responsible for getting these pictures hung and I know you will find the scenes of old Clarksville quite interesting. There will be more and more Red River County historical items on display as we get closer and closer to bazaar time so make plans to drop in and see everything. HAPPY READING!

PORK AND MICROWAVE COOKERY

Cooking pork in the microwave? It's important that it reaches a temperature of 170 degrees F. throughout. This is to insure all microorganisms are destroyed.

Preliminary studies have shown that live trichinae (parasitic worms) can be present in fresh pork cuts which are cooked in several ways. Cooking instructions in some cookbooks may not guarantee sufficiently high temperatures to kill all organisms.

USDA has notified the microwave oven industry of potential problems with pork cooking instructions.

Microwave ovens cook by exciting the water molecules in food. Variations in the distribution of water in the pork, the uneven energy distribution in microwave ovens and potential energy blockage by bone may result in uneven cooking.

Therefore, it's important that the entire piece of meat reaches a temperature of at least 170 degrees F.

Let me know if you have questions concerning this. SMOKING AND CURING PORK

Have you ever thought of curing your own bacon or ham? You can do it right in your own home!

Dr. Frank Orts, Meats Specialist with the Extension Service, will be in Pittsburg this Thursday, October 8 to demonstrate "Home Processing of Pork".

Dr. Orts will show how to cut up a side of a hog, then proceed to curing methods for hams and bacon. It is an easy method anyone can do and the curing products are readily available.

If you do not have access to a whole or side of a hog, you could purchase a fresh ham or belly and proceed with home curing. So it's not necessary for you to have the whole hog to be able to use this information.

Demonstrations will be at 10:00 a.m. and 7:00 p.m. in the Youth Center in Pittsburg. If you have questions call 856-5005.

Whitehorn Appointed Specialist

Dr. Norman Whitehorn joined the staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service October 1 as community development specialist for East Texas, according to an announcement by Dr. Dan C. Pfannstiel, director. Whitehorn will be headquartered at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center at Overton and will have primary responsibilities in 39 counties. These counties comprise the East and Northeast Extension districts.

"Dr. Whitehorn will assist county Extension agents and community leaders to develop programs to improve community services and facilities," according to Dr. James Mallet, Extension state community development program leader. "His major program emphasis will deal with community economic development, manpower, developing community organizations and planning for specific community services."

A native of Myrtle, Mississippi, Whitehorn earned the B.S. degree in general agriculture from Abilene Christian College, his M.S. degree in agricultural economics and the Ph.D. degree in adult and extension education from Texas A&M University. For the past 10 years, he has been employed in the Industrial Economics Research Division of the Texas Engineering Experiment Station at Texas A&M University. Most recently, he served as associate director of the Center for Strategic Technology. He also has experience in teaching and industry.

Whitehorn served two years in the U.S. Army Medical Corps. He is a member of the American Association of University Professors, Adult Education Association, Texas Industrial Development Council and the Texas Association for Community Service and Continuing Education.

Whitehorn is married to the former Darlene Emberlin of Longview. They have two sons, Stan, of Longview, and Gary, who lives in Beaumont.

Producers Should Plant Winter Pastures

Producers should be planting their small grain winter pastures. With the moisture over most of East Texas, conditions are excellent for planting. If clover is in the winter pasture program, it should be planted about October 15.

Many commercial producers and home gardeners are harvesting sweet potatoes, according to Dr. Terry Menges, horticulturist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Several precautions should be taken to insure the quality of the potatoes.

Menges recommends digging the potatoes when the soil is relatively dry. Handle the potatoes very gently, almost as you would handle eggs. This will prevent bruising and breaking the skin of the potato. To store the potatoes, try to maintain a temperature no cooler than 55 degrees. If the potatoes are subjected to lower temperatures, cold damage could occur. Store the sweet potatoes in a cool, dry place. Control of temperature and humidity is very important.

The pecan crop in East Texas is looking good. Menges says that the crop should be larger than last year, but not as large as 1979. Some reports of premature leaf drop have been received. This will probably not effect this year's crop but could reduce the crop in 1982. All management techniques available should be used to insure a good crop each year. Insect and disease control, plus fertility, weed control and other necessary chores should be carried out on a regular schedule. County Extension agents throughout East Texas have information on pecan production.

SENIOR CITIZEN'S CORNER

HELPFUL IDEAS FOR SUCCESSFUL RETIREMENT

GROWING UP

As sure as death and taxes, the child who lives long enough becomes an adult. Despite the fact that it has always been this way, some senior citizens refuse to accept such a truism. Their children, at whatever age, are still children.

This is a sad commentary, a situation which destroys family relationships and isolates senior family members at that period in life when they most need the help and support of their children and grandchildren.

Together, in its most proper value, demands that parents know when it is time to set their "children" free, to accept their choice of occupation, of wife or husband, and to abide by their personal decisions. Those parents who unwittingly always seem to "know what's best" and seek to continue to force or influence decisions affecting the lives of their children and grandchildren invite estrangement. Their children become less communicative about their plans and their activities, they stay away, because they seek neither advice nor criticism.

The art of growing old gracefully is a matter of accepting reality. Things must be accepted as they are and not imagined to be something else. One must learn to accept change and to adjust to new situations. One must realize that the past is far more important to those of advanced age than to the young. The past provides fond memories for one; the future is a vision of promise for the other.

The best times for all should be today and tomorrow. They can be and will be in those families where there is mutual respect and understanding.

Calling Colleen

Dear Colleen:
A few mornings ago, my mother started to work and discovered that someone had plastered our car with honey, syrup, ice cream and tomatoes. She was furious. My sixteen year old sister told her that she strongly suspects it was done by a friend of hers with whom she had a disagreement. When Dad returns from his business trip, Mother plans to ask him to visit the girl's parents with her. What she doesn't know is that my sister and another friend did almost the same thing to the other girl's car first. I have decided to tell the whole story if my sister doesn't, so Mom and Dad won't be embarrassed any further. Am I right?
Ted

than it would be if they visit the girl's parents to complain and discover that your sister was the prime instigator.

Dear Colleen:
I thought religious prejudice was a thing of the past, but it still exists. I have been dating this girl for three weeks and met her father last night for the first time. Everything was fine until he asked me about religion. At first, I thought he was just unhappy because I belonged to a different religion than his daughter. But his questions were so obnoxious I finally excused myself and left. How do you handle such situations?
Bill

Dear Bill:
I know of no sure-fire way to handle deep-seated ignorance and prejudice. I learned long ago that it is difficult to argue (or reason) with a fool without making a fool of yourself.

Dear Ted:
You are right. What your sister did was childish and foolish. Whatever punishment your parents mete out to her is certain to be less

Leased Floodlighting Your after-dark advantage.

Business is tough. Competition is bad enough, without having to compete with unwanted nighttime intruders. Leased floodlighting lets you direct a bright beam of light on entrances, store fronts, back alleys, anywhere you need the advantage of security lighting. And if you or your employees keep after dark hours, extra lighting on stairways, loading docks or other areas helps prevent accidents. Leased floodlighting is on-at-dusk, off-at-dawn, and gives more illumination per watt than conventional incandescent lighting. Get the after-dark advantage for your business... just a phone call away.

ETSU Preview Day

Rusty Reeder and Craig Clemmons attended the University Preview Day held at ETSU on Wednesday October 7. This is the first year for a meeting of this kind.

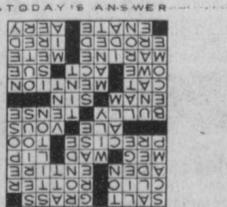

The purposes of University Preview Day are two fold: (1) to give seniors an opportunity to learn what college is about first-hand and (2) to give council superintendants and-or high school principals a chance to visit informally with top students on the way to and from the meetings and during lunch.

Dr. Stuart Chilton was in charge of the session with the speaker, Dr. Bob Munday, talking to seniors about "What to Expect from College."
