Worth

By Nanalee Nichols
Some of you may recall our lamentations back last October when Arnold, our type-setting computer, went on the "blink".

Well, Arnold has joined the ranks of the retired now, and is expected to spin out his days at the side of a new machine...Jewel.

Jewel, unlike Arnold, isn't absolutely antique. Where he was an elder statesman, she is merely a middle-aged matron. Her original home was at the Paris News, who converted to an ultra-modern computer system that matches the ones seen on TV.

So Jewel came to live at our office. Her introduction was somewhat shaky...literally. Tied in the back of a pickup and swathed in quilts, everytime a huge truck roared by she rocked back and forth alarmingly.

Finally, after creeping in from Paris at about 30 miles per hour, she was heaved onto the sidewalk and ushered into the front door. She sits beside Arnold now, a few inches shorter than he, and a nice, feminine blue-gray color combination.

She probably feels semi-retired herself, since she no longer has to work six days a week, but only three. Arnold so far has not evidenced signs of resentment against her. In fact, we swear he breathed a sigh of relief, or maybe joy at the sight of his new counterpart.

At first, of course, Jewel and the staff had some communication problems. Our signals didn't quite do what we intended them to. In the middle of a story, something we did would cause her to start printing in tiny, almost unreadable size type!

Or she might print bold instead of plain, or vice versa. But now we have her little quirks figured out. Jewel's most outstanding talent is speed. She does what Arnold used to do so much faster. And for the first time in many years, typists can see what they are typing instead of merely having a series of cryptic dots to go by.

But her most valuable attribute is that she is a second machine. That means that when there is a mechanical breakdown, automatic visions of working until two or three in the morning don't occur.

Instead, we merely poke old Arnold, say "hey, wake up and go to work" and the world keeps on turning.

So, hurrah for Jewel, and fond best wishes to old Arnold, in his semi-retired state!

Talco-Bogata Board Installs Officers

The first item on the agenda of the Talco-Bogata School Board was to give the oath of office to newly elected members John Ward, Johnny Hood and Jerry Russell. Following the swearing in of the new members, the Board was reorganized and new officers were elected. Jerry Russell was elected president, John Ward was elected vice-president and Lyndon Reed was elected secretary.

One of the major items of business was the employment of auxiliary employees for the 1983-84 school year. Auxiliary employees include secretaries, aides, cafeteria workers, bus drivers, and maintenance and custodial workers. A report was made to the Board by Scott Partnership, a firm that is making a study of school facilities in order to help give the Board and Administration some ideas to the feasibility and also cost estimates of the various options that can be considered in making improvements to school facilities. Superintendent

Talmadge Morgan said that the Board and administration has a responsibility to see that facilities are kept in good condition and repair and also to let parents and the general public know about condition of the facilities.

In final action, approval was given to make repairs to the roof of the Bogata

Junior High Building, the various financial reports were approved, and the meeting time of the Board was changed to 7:30 p.m.

during Daylight Savings Time. This was a regular meeting of the Board on April 12, with the next meeting scheduled for Tuesday, May 10 at 7:30 p.m. with the public cordially invited to attend.

Footprints From The Past

By John W. Hood

Growing up in the country had its disadvantages but it also had its advantages. When we were small, Dad would take us fishing at some small pool or tank as they are now called. We always called them pools, but whatever they are called, there was always a fish to be caught. I am no fisherman and never have been, but I always caught a big old catfish.

We would also go hunting, usually for cottontail rabbits. We knew all the hiding places for them and we would flush them out and then our dog would give chase. Sometimes we would catch the rabbit and sometimes we wouldn't, but it was always fun to see the dog chase the rabbit. We would get just as excited as if we were on some big game hunt in Africa.

It was also fun being a teenager in the part of the country that we lived in as there was always something to do and somewhere to go. We didn't have cars to travel in, so we would walk or get the loan of a team of mules and a wagon. Either way, we usually had some meeting place to all get together. The boys would usually meet at our house and the girls would meet at Ben Tidwell's house, as he had three girls and one boy and besides, Mr. Tidwell was the one who usually furnished the wagon and team.

For the Friday and Saturday night parties, we would usually walk, but on Sunday night we would all gather at Tidwell's and get in his wagon and go to Mt. Pleasant for singing. There was always a big crowd because that was where the girls were, and for the girls, that was where the boys were. The name of the game was to get where the opposite sex was. There was a lot of courting that went on at that church. Even now whenever my wife and I pass, we always remember something that happened or someone we have not seen or thought of for a long time.

I remember one time, one of my friends got a date with a very popular girl and he was really walking on air. He had been trying for a long time to get a date with this girl with no luck and when he finally did, he was on cloud nine. Well, he just had to go outside and brag a little, so he told his date he was going to smoke a cigarette. When he got all of his bragging done he went back inside and could not find his date because she had left with someone else. Of course he was hurt, but he never said a word to her. When the next Sunday night came around, he asked her for another date and she accepted. He never mentioned the previous week, and about half way through the singing he told her he was going to smoke a cigarette and went outside, got in his Model-T and went home and left her. They never did date each other again.

Times were hard, but it was great growing up in the little community of Lone Star, south of Deport. We had a lot of fun and made a lot of friends that we still cherish and a lot of times we wish we could all get together and talk over again.

Author, Artist To Present Creative Discussion

Creativity discussions by creators, author William A. Owens and artist Ansel Nunn, and a presentation on Dr. Owens' latest creation, "Tell Me a Story, Sing Me a Song," were included in three programs Monday, April 4 at Paris Junior College.

Born in Pin Hook, Lamar County, Owens returned to his home county and his first college to give programs on fiction writing and on his newest book, published this spring by the University of Texas Press. It is the third autobiographical work created by the Lamar County native and former PJC student; his first, "This Stubborn Soil," won him a second Texas Institute of Letters award.

In the morning presentation, Dr. Owens discussed the seven elements in the writin of fiction—its purposes, characterization, narration, where to find stories, form for the story, style and final responsibility of the writer.

Discussing art as creativity, artist Ansel Nunn of Palestine explained that creativity "takes chaos and puts order into it." It is "what the work says that counts," he noted, "the artist is the creator who has gone beyond painting;" true art "makes a statement."

Nunn, a native of Texas, has had work on exhibit in the LBJ Library, the Texas Institute of Cultures in San Antonio, Tyler, Amarillo and Wichita Falls art museums, is a regional painter who has been called an "illusionist" who paints scenes from rural yesterdays.

The programs by Owens and Nunn were sponsored by PJC's communications and continuing education divisions. Works by Dr. Owens were available in the College Store at PJC.

Minister Has Led Long And Varied Career

Over the past few weeks the First United Methodist Church of Bogata has been host to Rev. Charles Reynolds, who has conducted revival services at the Bogata church.

Rev. Reynolds' native home is Belfast, Northern Ireland, and he has led a varied life.

Throughout all his service, whether military or religious, he has acquired friends wherever he went, and viewed the world with a sense of humor as well as helpfulness.

His early education was received in Belfast schools. From 1941 to 1947 he served in the Royal Air Force. His tour of duty took him to the India-Burma theater, where he met and married an American Missionary, Maud M. Hibbard.

Following military service, they came to the United States where Reynolds graduated from Adrian College in Michigan with a B.A. degree. He completed his theological training at Drew University School of Theology and received the M. Div. degree with honors. He was awarded the Doctor of Divinity degree by Asbury College. He was ordained an elder in the Methodist Church in 1952 at the Metropolitan Methodist Church in Detroit.

Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds were appointed as district missionaries to the Sironcha District in Central India in 1954. This turned out to be a very isolated jungle district, covering about two thousand square miles of thick forest. They recently received electricity and running water. Mr. Reynolds also had responsibility for the boys' boarding school, farm and all building work in the district. He was appointed District Superintendent in 1955 and held that position until 1957 when they returned to the United States on furlough.

After serving pastorates in Connecticut and Massachusetts, Reynolds was called to be the Executive Secretary of the Ludhiana Christian Medical College Board in 1965.

Ludhiana is one of the major medical institutions of Asia. They train more than 300 doctors and 200 nurses annually. Their 700-bed hospital sports a staff of 1700 and treats approximately 350,000 patients each year. They take care of 700 to 800 out patients per day.

Reynolds is a representative of the Ludhiana Christian Medical College in Ludhiana, India. The college provides all housing for their staff and students. Their housing problems are larger than those of Bogata. There is also a College of Nursing there. The College of Nursing trains approximately 200 nurses annually.

Their hospital offers such modern specialties as thoracic, cardiac, plastic and neurosurgery, x-ray, isotope and cobalt radiation therapy. They maintain a modern blood bank for the city of half a million population. In addition to medical education and medical service, an expanding program of basic medical research is carried on in collaboration with medical centers in the U.S. and other countries.

Satellite hospitals are set up in the rural areas to provide community health care. They have about 30 beds each. They have resident staff members. The doctors and nurses take the health care literally door to door in the outlying villages. They cared for about 144,000 people last year.

When the missionaries first started their health care program, 20 percent of the infant deaths were due to tetanus. Now, due to better conditions and proper sterilization of equipment, that percentage has dropped to zero. They have also established an immunization program for the children. They have set up a school-house program where specialists and general practitioners examine the children and teach better health education to the faculty.

Eye problems are taken care of in temporary hospitals. They have treated about 28,000 patients in eye camps.

The children they are striving to educate will be the adults of tomorrow. What the children learn will in turn influence their parents.

About 80 percent of the people live in villages. They welcome the medical attention and are eager to learn. They want to provide a better environment for their people.

The missionary dollar goes a long way and then some. The budget for the Ludhiana hospital is $4 million a year. To provide the same services in the United States, it would cost $80 million.

Reynolds has visited India each year since 1965 and maintained a close relationship with government, church and business leaders there, and is thus able to interpret the current Indian scene. He annually takes a tour group to visit medical mission centers in India.

Charles Reynolds has done a tremendous job in his missionary work. He has revived the Methodists in our area and reaffirmed their faith and dedication. The people in Bogata and the surrounding communities have truly been blessed by his presence.

Rev. Charles Reynolds

Community Search Locates Elderly Man

Bogata again showed its community spirit early Tuesday, when the community turned out to search for a missing man.

Carl Smith, an elderly man who stays alone at night, was discovered missing, and after a family search, the fire siren was sounded to call out volunteer firemen, and men from the Texas-New Mexico Power Company, as well as citizens from the town in general turned out, too.

After an extensive search, the man was found in the old hotel building. He was taken to the doctor's office, and later transferred to Red River General Hospital for observation.

Harold Quillen Is New R.R. Co. Appraiser

Harold Quillen has been named Chief Appraiser for the Red River County Appraisal District.

Quillen replaces Gary Desniewski, who resigned recently to become an appraiser in Milam County.

Quillen has been in Mineral Wells prior to coming to Red River County. He served there as the Chief Appraiser for Palo Pinto County. He has also served as Tax-Assessor Collector for the Mineral Wells ISD, City of Mineral Wells and the Palo Pinto Water District No. 1. Quillen is a native of Colorado, and attended school and graduated in Wyoming. After a year at Denver University, he joined the army in 1949, and retired from the service 21 years later as a First Sergeant in Army Security.

He and his wife, Billie, have two children, Julie and Gregory, both grown.

Quillen is 53 years old and says they are happy to be in Red River County.

INSIGHT INTO EYESIGHT

Dr. Harry Evans OPTOMETRIST

Eyes in Error:

Astigmatism
If you have a vision problem, you have lots of company. An estimated one out of every two people in the U.S. also have eye problems. One of the more common is astigmatism.

This is caused by an imperfectly shaped cornea. This is the window of the eye through which light passes to the lens, where the image is focused. If the cornea is out of shape, the image will be blurred. Instead of rays of light coming together at one point, they come together at two points, creating two overlapping images instead of one.

The kind of astigmatism you have depends on where the points of focus are. It can be astigmatism combined with nearsightedness or farsightedness or it may exist by itself.

If you've noticed a blurring of vision when looking at objects close up or far away, you may have astigmatism. Corrective eyeglasses or contact lenses can take the blur away and make your vision clear again. All it takes is an examination by your optometrist to find out how.

Hybrid Impatiens Offer Variety of Colors

You can grow colorful flowers in that shady spot. Balsam is ideal for half-sunny spots. This summer-to-autumn bloomer does well on balconies and terraces as a potted plant. Flowers are red, pink or white, may be singles or doubles. Potting soil should be lime-free loam compost. Balsam is properly known as Impatiens balsamina. It's an annual, except in India, where it has long been grown as a perennial.

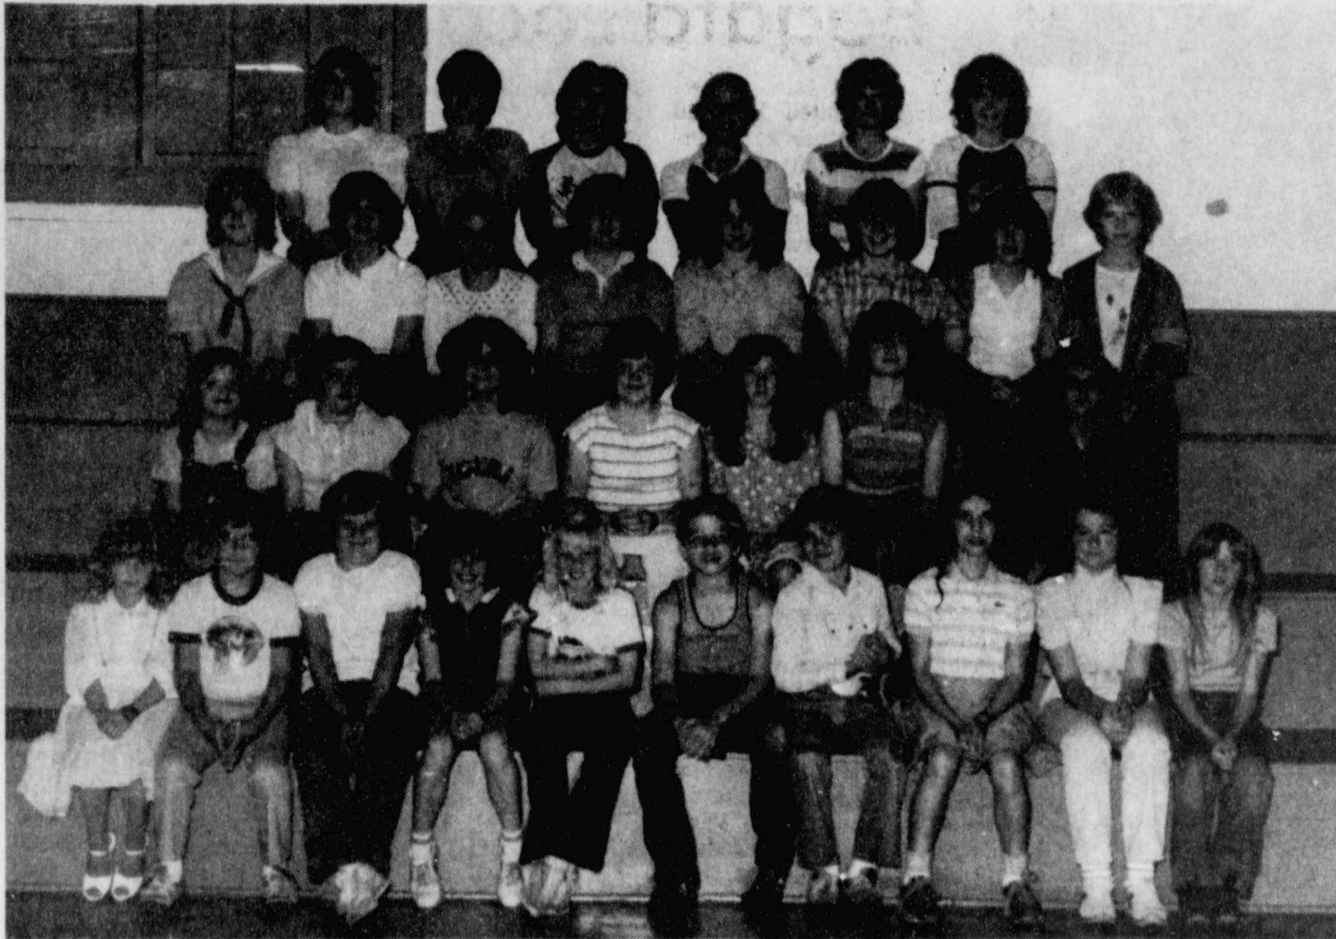

When most of us hear the word impatiens, we tend to think of more colors than the three listed above. Hybrid impatiens displayed in the pages of a seed catalog present a grand array of colors—fuchsia, salmon, scarlet, white, orange pink, coral, red, rose—and mixed.

Hybrid impatiens will indeed offer a variety of colors, whether planted in shady outdoor spots, borders, hanging pots or planter boxes. In northern areas, seeds are usually started indoors several weeks before the end of the frost season. In frost-free areas, they may be planted outdoors in fall or early spring. Soil should be fertile and well-drained. Hybrid impatiens grow best in shade; the sunnier the location, the more water is needed to keep the plant moist.

You can also sow impatiens in the summer to provide houseplants for next winter. Indoors they should be located in a well-lit area, but out of the sun, and should be watered sufficiently to keep the soil always moist.

LOAN TROUBLE
Cosigning a loan may seem like a nice thing to do for a friend—but you could wind up in big trouble if you do. A recent study by Purdue University indicates that almost half of the people who cosign loans are asked to pay them; they also may be asked to pay late charges or fees and court and attorney fees. Check all papers to be signed and make sure you understand them.

BUDDY'S WORKSHOP
Location of Windows
Affects Heating, Cooling

Is it true that the location of windows in the home can reduce or increase heating and cooling costs?

Definitely. Window location is important, not only in cold climates but in warm areas as well, and guidelines are different north to south. In extremely cold climates, the largest window area should face south. Winter solar heat gain is realized as heat from the sun passing through the glass is trapped. By the same token, the largest window area in warm climate homes is located on the north side of the home to reduce the summer solar heat gain.

There are several small scratches on my (almost) new hardwood floors. None of them are very long or deep but I would like to remove them. What should I do?

Spots that go no deeper than the finish are easily removed. Begin with medium-coarse steel wool saturated with a solvent cleaner. Rub carefully in the direction of the grain. Never rub across the grain or the fiber of the wood. When the scratch is no longer evident and the finish is off, smooth the surface of the area with fine steel wool.

Local Youngsters Win In R.R. Co. Junior Livestock Show

The Red River County Livestock Show took place Saturday, April 9, with a number of local youngsters winning awards.

Joe B. Grizzle, Detroit resident, supervised the sheep class, in which some 40 animals competed in classifications of rams, ewes and market animals. The Market Class was by far the largest with 30 youngsters vying for the Grand and Reserve Championship trophy.

Judging the sheep class was Dr. Jimmie Wolf, professor of agriculture at East Texas University who awarded both the Grand Championship and Reserve Championship to sheep which belonged to Stanley Jesse, a Rivercrest FFA member. Both of Jesse's sheep were sold in the auction and brought $2.20 for the reserve animal and $4.05 per lb. for the Grand Champion. Both animals were bought by the Red River National Bank in Clarksville.

In the beef cattle class, judged by Gary Allen, agriculture teacher from Allen, Tx., there were probably more animals than any other. Trophies were given for males, and females in each different breed represented which included: Red and Gray Brahman.

Local Grand and Reserve Champion trophy winners were: Brangus Grand Champion Bull-Stacy Wells, Quitman FFA; Reserve Champion Bull-Marc Anschutz, Rivercrest FFA. Reserve Champion Hereford

Bull-Stephanie Phillips, Titus County 4-H; Polled Hereford Grand Champion Bull-James VanDeaver, Prairiland FFA.

Simmental Grand Champion Bull-Harold Holt, Rivercrest FFA.

Midway 4-H included Misty Arrasmith and Amy Arrasmith.

Rivercrest FFA was Rusty Screws, Stanley Jesse and Shontyl Thompson.

A project show was also held in conjunction with the day's activities and ended with a total of 145 entries.

The students entered a variety of items from horseman handcrafts to forestry projects and sewing projects with a few baked and canned goods and various handcrafts and art works. Winning blue ribbons for projects entered were: Christy Baird, Lola Scott, Stephanie Bell, Angela Wilson, Jana Oldfield, Jo Marie Oldfield, Sherry Ross, Daphne Hansboro, Jackie Coleman, Heather Dennison, D.R. In the project show Saturday, there were ten projects that were judged good enough to advance to District 4-H Competition which will be held April 30 in Kilgore. Only projects entered by 4-H members were eligible.

Members of various Red River County 4-H Clubs who will advance to District Competition are Chad Ingram, Pinebranch 4-H who made a project in Horseman's Handcrafts; D.R. Collins, Ebony 4-H who had an original painting; Tommy Thompson, Hopewell 4-H in original fiber category and another exhibit in non-original clay and glass; Lisa Mann, Annona 4-H in original fiber category; Jo Marie Oldfield, Midway 4-H in non-original fiber category; Frances Allen, Hopewell 4-H in non-original clay and glass; and Sherry Ross, Hopewell 4-H and Jana Oldfield, Midway 4-H in clothing skills.
